THE uncertainty that prevails throughout the business world with regard to the outcome of present conditions serves to remind us of even more difficult problems that are to demand the attention of the nations in the not distant future. While we are not convinced that the authority of the antichrist will be exerted universally, even when his godless empire reaches the pinnacle of its power, we know that the conditions which are to prevail within the territories over which he is to rule will be reflected in all lands. Stringent commercial restrictions will be applied everywhere (Revelation 13:16, 17), and "the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn . . . for no man buyeth their merchandise any more."—Revelation 18:11.

The time that is coming is graphically described by Ezekiel in the seventh chapter of his prophecy; and while he asserts that Israel is the nation that will suffer the most in that day of distress, he insists its effects will be felt in all regions and by all races. "Thus saith the Lord God unto the land of Israel," declares the inspired penman, "An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land. . . . An evil, an only evil, behold, is come . . . The time is come, the day draweth near: let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn: for wrath is unto all the multitude thereof . . . Their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord: . . . because it is a stumblingblock of their iniquity."

Isaiah paints a picture equally somber of future commercial and financial conditions. He seems to see clearly present banking conditions when he says, as recorded in his twenty-fourth chapter beginning with the first verse: "Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty; and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down . . . And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with the master; . . . as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him. The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken the word."

In spite of the universal distress here depicted, the Scriptures provide a ray of hope for those who are living in these last days and who suffer so acutely from the overturning of the existing financial structure. And, strange as it may seem, that hope for a brief surcease from the burdens of anxiety which all now bear rests upon the predicted actions of the antichrist, the enemy of all that is good, and the violent opposer of "all that is called God, or that is worshipped"! For it is evident that before the antichrist can complete his nefarious preparations to conquer the world, the wealth of many nations (Daniel 11:43) must be poured into his coffers. Great riches cannot be gathered where none exist or where the inhabitants are ground down by poverty. So it will require a returning period of widespread and generous prosperity to make possible such a harvest of gold as the antichrist requires.

One of the most certain causes of material prosperity for the laboring man is a great war, particularly a war in which his own nation has but little part. And as much as Christian sympathy rebels against the thought, nevertheless we know that such a war is even now just in the offing. It cannot be avoided. A hundred different reasons might be adduced evincing the substantial foundation upon which this conclusion is based, but it is not necessary. The alarm of war and the threat of war are too prevalent to be disregarded by anyone. Five nations in South America are already engaged in open conflict, while the two great nations of Asia are at each other's throats, and all Europe is on the verge of war! May we escape that which is to follow!

From a human standpoint the prospect is alarming indeed. The best minds of the world are unable to foresee the outcome. But "there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets" and He has made known to us "what shall be in the latter days," that we may be forewarned and ready, that the day of wrath may not come upon us unawares. May we continue to watch and pray.

ONE NEW MAN

By Harry A. Sheets

God has promised Abram that he should have a son who would be heir to both his fortune and his promises. Ten years pass by without the son of promise being given. Abram seems to be just a little disheartened as he speaks to God: "Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, one born in mine house is mine heir. . . Eliezer of Damascus." God answers Abram with the assurance: "This shall not be thine heir."—Genesis 15:2-4.

In this one statement God seems to have rejected the Gentiles from being heirs to the promise made to Abram. This rejection was for all time, as will be seen later. True, Jesus did teach the return of the Gentiles to equal opportunity with the Jews in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. ("Lazarus" is the Greek form of the name "Eliezer.") This, however, is not contrary to our statement.

Because the Israelites could trace their lineage back to Abraham, they felt secure in the Abrahamic promises. They added their own teachings to the Scriptures, became indifferent to the commandments of God, and reveled in their unfounded feeling of security. John, in preparing the way for Christ, warned them by saying: "Think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—Matthew 3:9, 10. Israel failed to heed, and near the close of His ministry Jesus said to them: "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matthew 21:43. Israel was rejected as fully and as completely as the Gentiles had been rejected many years before.

In the first chapter of Romans Paul proves the wickedness of the Gentiles, and in the second chapter he points to the hypocrisy of the Jews. In the third chapter he indicts both Jews and Gentiles and gives a summary of their sins. "We have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin: as it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one. Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips: whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: their feet are swift to shed blood: destruction and misery are in their ways: and the way of peace they have not known: there is no fear of God before their eyes. . . There is no difference: for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."—Romans 3:9-18, 22, 23.

It is easy to understand why a holy God would reject both Jews and Gentiles. A righteous kingdom cannot be constructed from such unrighteous material. Who, then, can be saved? Paul has answered that question for us in what he termed the "mystery, which was kept secret since the world began," but which is now "made known to all nations for the obedience of faith."—Romans 16:25, 26. Paul explains this mystery still further in the first three chapters of Ephesians. He points out how God is willing to take both Jew and Gentile and make "himself of twain one new man, so making peace . . . that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross."

God cannot use the Gentiles who are dead in "trespasses and sins" and whose conversation is "in the lusts of the flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind," who are without "hope, and without God in the world."—Ephesians 2:1, 3, 12. Neither can God use the stubborn Jew who added to God's Word, persecuted the prophets and apostles, and murdered the Son of man. God can use the one new man. He is willing to make that new man from either Jew or Gentile material. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God has given equal opportunity to the Jew and the Gentile, but each must be born again. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God . . . Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3:3, 5. (over)

O Come, Emmanuel

O come, O come, Emmanuel,
And ransom captive Israel,
That mourns in lonely exile here,
Until the Son of God appear.

O come, Thou Rod of Jesse, free
Thine own from Satan's tyranny;
From depths of hell Thy people save,
And give them vict'ry o'er the grave.

O come, Thou Day Spring, come and cheer
Our spirits by Thine advent here;
And drive away the shades of night,
And pierce the clouds, and bring us light!

O come, Thou Keys of David, come,
And open wide our glorious home;
Make plain the way that leads to Thee,
And close the path to misery!

Rejoice! rejoice! Emmanuel Shall come to thee, O Israel!
—Latin Antiphone, XI Century.
(Slightly revised by G. E. M.)

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."—John 1:12.

Paul tells us the process followed by God in making the one new man. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life . . . knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin . . . Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Romans 6:3, 4, 6, 11. This is the water birth mentioned by Jesus as necessary to entrance into the kingdom.

When a person repents, he dies to the old Jew or Gentile nature. Dead people are buried. Baptism by single immersion is that burial, and the coming forth from the water corresponds to resurrected life. One is then said to be "a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."—2 Corinthians 5:17. "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God."—Romans 6:12, 13. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Galatians 3:26-29.

Let us not make the mistake that was made by the Jews. They trusted in their nationality (seed of Abraham) and lost because they neglected righteousness. We must not trust in our baptism to the extent of neglecting to "walk in newness of life." Jesus did say: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," but it is evident from other teaching of Jesus and of the apostles that baptism alone is not sufficient for salvation. Paul wrote: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a cast-away."—1 Corinthians 9:27. "For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee. Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off."—Romans 11:21, 32. Salvation will be ours only on condition we repent (die to the old), receive baptism (burial), and rise to walk in righteousness. If we continue as one new man unto the coming of Christ, we shall be born of the Spirit and enter the kingdom prepared for the saints.

FABLES

By Emma C. Railsback

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—Paul the Apostle.

THIS week we will consider the fable founded on the Savior's temptation in the wilderness. The fable states that after Jesus had been in the wilderness for forty days a supernatural being known as Satan came and ordered Him to make bread from stones to satisfy His hunger. Failing in that, he took Him on a journey to the city of Jerusalem and set Him on a pinnacle of the temple and ordered Him to jump down. In this also Jesus refused obedience to his Satanic Majesty and was immediately taken to an exceedingly high mountain and shown all the kingdoms of the world and their glory, which were offered to him in return for worship of this supernatural being.

In order to get the truth from the narrative given by Matthew, Mark, and Luke of the Savior's trials in the wilderness, it will be necessary to learn first whether the gospel writers are giving records of literal events or whether the narrative is to be taken figuratively. Unless all points can be taken literally, we must decide that it is to be taken figuratively.

Supposing that there is a personal Satan and Jesus knows him, his personal appearance before Jesus would have defeated his purpose. Then, in the second instance, could Satan have carried Jesus through the air to Jerusalem from the wilderness and set Him on a pinnacle of the temple? And if he had a personal appearance, he must have been visible to the Jews. Would Jesus accompany him on such a mission, knowing it to be wrong to court trial?

The third trial cannot be taken to be literal by any stretch of the imagination. There is no mountain in Palestine nor any surrounding territory from which one can see all the kingdoms of the world, much less their glory. The glory of any kingdom can be seen only close at hand. There are other points that might be shown to prove that the narrative cannot be given a literal interpretation, but in order to be brief we shall look immediately for the figurative meaning of the account.

Jesus had been anointed with the Holy Spirit; God had proclaimed Him as His Son. The prophet had foretold that He should preach good tidings to the meek, heal the broken-hearted, proclaim liberty to the captives. A great work lay before Him. The Spirit led Him into the wilderness to contemplate and meditate upon the various duties and difficulties of the plan of redemption for which He had been anointed. "He went before beginning to build that house which was to be the temple of the living God, to count the cost of the building." No doubt He foresaw all the scenes through which He must pass to the end, even to His death on the cross, all the struggle necessary in order to realize the law of love, to reconcile man to God.

The Apostle Paul has said that He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin (Hebrews 4:15); and the Apostle James goes a step further when he states that "every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."—James 1:14.

Jesus was tried by His desire, but He did not succumb. He used the sword of the Spirit to banish the thought. He was tried through the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life. His thoughts were very natural. They needed no personal devil. Each trial was a step in the progress of His mind. The third placed Him figuratively on a high mountain, and He scrutinized the world's kingdoms and the self-love principle that dominates them. Through it all He gained the victory. He did not yield to the desire for animal gratification, the desire for elevation, or the desire to rule before the Father's own appointed time.

To search out the truths taught in parables, figurative and symbolic language, requires careful examination and meditation; but only by so doing may we hope to find the harmony in the Scriptures.

CAN WE KNOW GOD?

By George B. Alldridge

---

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."
—John 17:3.

Lord Melchett was asked to write an article "about the contribution that Jewry has made to humanity." The opening paragraphs read: "The answer is simple. It is monosyllabic. In the true comprehension of it lies the solution of the eternal Jewish question, and of the great human question. What have the Jews given to the world? The answer is—GOD. There is nothing either blasphemous or irreverent in this statement. If it brings a shock to some people, it only shows how far they have departed from the straight and narrow path of truth and reality into the by-ways of pleasant fiction.

"The most devout, the most faithful, the most orthodox must agree that either God chose to manifest Himself through the Jewish people or it is the tragic fate of Israel to have had the power of interpreting God to the world.

"The skeptic and the atheist cannot fail to observe that the opening of two of the gospels is occupied by a careful record of the Jewish descent of the Savior and that He spoke principally as a Jew to Jews. . . . This fiery message of hate swept through the peoples at a time when the church was the most powerful institution in Western civilization and owned about one third of the land of Europe.

"Then it was considered righteous to slaughter Jews, to burn their communities wholesale in their synagogues.

"And when the persecutors were tired of slaying with steel, great armed masses drove their tiny, unarmed minorities into swamps and marshes, and watched them drown while the Hebrew voices cried out 'Hear, O Israel, there is but one God.' "

Dr. Downey, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Liverpool, tried to reply to Lord Melchett, but woefully failed, not acknowledging that it was a Jew, Jesus Christ, who brought light and truth into this world.

Among other things, he said: "Were it not for the advent of Christ and His church, the Gentiles would long have continued to sit in darkness and in the shadow of death.

"Greek and Roman writers all tell us of the appalling conditions of pagan society with a liberty and frankness of language which will not bear translation. The human race was for the most part enslaved. The state of women with the Greeks and the Romans was as degrading as in the philosophies of India, China, Persia, and Egypt.

"What did Jewry do to remedy this state of affairs? The Jews were monotheists, but they were also polygamists; and if they are not so today, it is chiefly because of the refining influence of the historic Church of Christ."

Paul, a Jew, uttered these memorable words upon Mars' Hill at Athens: "Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device. And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent: because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead."

Note it is a man Paul is talking about whom God "hath ordained" of the tribe of Judah, thus fulfilling Jacob's prophecy: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."—Genesis 49:10.

Balaam saw this and also left upon record these words: "I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. . . . Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city."—Numbers 24:17, 19.

Brethren, please be kind and courteous to the Jew: among the sons of men he holds the most royal and distinguished lineage of any race upon earth today, and from his nation sprang forth the man of whom it is said, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by him: and without him was not anything made that was made. . . . And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

How much we read and hear about the "incarnation." The generally accepted view is that in some way God delegated His power to the only being He directly created to make all things both in heaven and earth; and this, of course, includes the angels. So Jesus' statement in Matthew 28:18, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," is hardly tenable if from all eternity He possessed and exercised this power in creating the heavens and the earth.

Everywhere in nature God pronounces His fiat against hybrids. So if Jesus was a spiritual being before becoming a human being, then, speaking reverently, He must have been both a spiritual and a human being. Paul disallows this by declaring, "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterwards that which is spiritual."

I have recently read a book describing some of the beautiful cathedrals in England, many of which I have actually seen. Now all these buildings, including all works of art, existed in some cases in thought for many years before their incarnation or fabrication. Their actual existence did not occur until they were completed in material form. Everything created, even by man, is preceded by conception, by thought, by design; and then the thought is embodied and made a physical reality.

So I open my Bible, and these are the first words read: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Hence, then, everything had its origin in God's thought before being expressed as we see and try to understand it.

When scientists declare that we cannot blot out of existence matter, but only change its form, they utter what is true. This is easily demonstrated by changing solids into liquids and liquids into gaseous form. So Tennyson's Ulysses seems to give a hint:

"I am a part of all that I have met:

Yet all experience is an arch wherethrough
Gleams that untravell'd world, whose margin fades
For ever and for ever when I move."

Jesus declared that God is Spirit. Hence, only spirit-beings can see God. But God from all eternity intended that a revelation of Himself should be seen by beings who were physical.

So if we read Luke 1:26-35 thoughtfully, we discover how God executed this. Now as Jesus says, this glorious being, the Son of God, was with God from all eternity. St. Paul's Cathedral was with Christopher Wren probably during many years. But physical beings could not behold it until it was completed. Jesus Christ is a revelation of God. So He truly said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father: and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?" Read John 14:9-13.

The question may arise, Why did not God create Adam, then, possessing the same characteristics as those with which Jesus seemed to be endowed? Well, let me tell you something: If He had, you would never have been in a position to see God.

God told Moses, "Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me; and live."—Exodus 23:20. Again we read, "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen."—1 Timothy 6:16. Again, Hebrews 12:29: "For our God is a consuming fire."

One thing God did not create, and that is personality or character. He created the organism, man, and established conditions whereby man, by the exercise of his faculties, may develop a character or personality. See Rom. 12:1, 2.

Many are called, but few are chosen to attain this "high calling." Those who do God will clothe with a spiritual body like His own (1 John 3:1-3), and then Jesus' promise will be verified: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."—Matthew 5:8. "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known."

PREPARE WAR!

By Arlen Marsh

---

HIGH above the murmurings of earth's daily life runs a thread of sinister, half-heard, and incomprehensible sound. As the fearful howl of a dog marks the death of a loved master, so this indefinable alarm places the stamp of impending doom upon man-built governments and institutions. These are not times that try men's souls; men have been tried, and now, with the horrible fascination that held Belshazzar's eyes, Jehovah's hand writes on the wall of current history the same sentence that sent old Babylon to destruction.

Britain's premier rushes to Lausanne in a hopeless effort to stem the resistless tide that threatens the peace of Europe. If the arms conference should fail, he thinks, one of two things would happen at once: all the Continent would be at war, or the greatest race in the building of armaments that the world has ever seen would begin. In either event, the scheduled economic congress would not, could not possibly, be held.

Hitler, nominal chancellor and actual absolute dictator, inaugurates a system of the most venomous anti-Semitism in Germany and moves toward an alliance with Italy. Militarism, he announces, is his plan for the reinstatement of his nation as a power, militarism as intensive as the blood-and-iron policies of Bismarck. Germany shall be given her proper place if it is necessary to scrap all earthly treaties and to battle all human forces. Germany shall attain the peaks. Such is his fiat.

Mussolini, wielding a strength that he intends will rebuild the Roman Empire, lays down for the consideration of the French a clear, cold warning that if they persist in their objection to Italy's shipment of arms into Hungary he will make them rue it. All the might of his Fascisti leaps to his support.

The Japanese navy is ordered to be ready to defend its country against the world within a moment's notice. Jehol lies before the conquering tread of the imperial army, waiting to be added to the puppet-state of Manchukuo. Chosen (formerly Korea), Manchukuo (or Manchuria), Jehol (pronounced "Raho") are the martyrs of an autocratic desire for national aggrandizement that never will be satisfied.

Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations leaves exposed the fruitlessness of human attempts at international arbitration. Racial hatred, ages old; innate selfishness; suspicion; pride, have caused and will continue to cause the failure of every trial by man at securing an enduring peace.

Peru and Colombia, with a combined population approximating fourteen millions of people possessed of a common origin, religion, and historical background, battle desperately over Letitia, a tiny spot with some five hundred inhabitants. Bolivia and Paraguay informally engage in open war. And, declares an eminent South American statesman, unless these disputes are checked immediately, the entire continent will be in martial flames.

In the United States conditions less militaristic but equally dangerous prevail. A hidden current, indefinable but decidedly real, travels through the political and economic life of the nation. Hints of impending events of inconceivable importance permeate the financial pages of every newspaper and magazine. Cries for technocracy are ridiculed, but underneath its Utopian dreams are strong supporting pillars. Chemists suggest epistomocracy to fill its place, and leave the layman still in doubt as to the efficacy of theoretic science in government.

Five centuries before Caesar crossed the Rubicon Daniel saw in his visions by night "the four winds of heaven" striving "upon the great sea." This well-known figure, representing the politics of men, never has described so aptly human circumstances as it does describe those now existing. At few times in the chronology of the past have governmental, social, and financial conditions been so chaotic. Nearly all of the country's experienced, deep-thinking men confess that nothing save a quasi-dictatorship can save the tottering structure built by the Washingtons, Adamses, Jeffersons, Hamiltons, and Lincolns of earlier years.

War is inevitable. Purely from the political prophet's point of view, it cannot be avoided. Treaties have failed. Courts of arbitration have failed. Civilization itself leans like a Tower of Pisa over the chasm that engulfed Babylon, Medo-Persia, Macedon, and Rome. And of this men are not ignorant. They fear.

The arms conference at Lausanne of which the English premier is afraid doubtless will fail. No satisfactory agreement can be reached among countries which already are divided and which already stand in dread of a war soon to burst. A race in armament-building, if nothing worse, will be the immediate result of the meeting—that and, perhaps, the total disintegration of the impotent League of Nations.

In spite of all that men can do, regardless of all conferences proposed and unproposed, the Gentiles obey the call of God: "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong."—Joel 3:9, 10. They cannot escape it. They must go up to Armageddon, to the great battle in the valley of decision, to be judged, as nations, by Jehovah.

IN DANIEL'S DAY

THE political leaders in the days of Darius hated to have a despised Jew in a prominent place in the nation. Hatred of the Jew, so prevalent today, is no new thing. The politicians of Persia and Media planned for Daniel's destruction. But because of Daniel's excellent spirit no fault could be found in him except that he would not conform to the idolatry around him. He was a man of the secret closet.

When the command came which was contrary to the law of God, Daniel obeyed God rather than men and refused to desist from praying. With what glee did these politicians send the despised Jew to the lions' den. But they had not counted on the God of Daniel. That night a miracle was performed on the lions' mouths, and they were kept shut; and Darius had a convincing evidence that the God of Daniel is a living God. He brought Daniel forth, but he made quick riddance of the corrupt politicians by committing them to the lions.

Daniel's God still lives! There was peace and prosperity in the realm of Darius when once more he elevated the despised Jew, who was a prophet of God, to the principal place in his kingdom.

In the days of the Roman Empire there lived another despised Jew—Jesus of Nazareth. The rulers of earth hated Him. A den of lions would have been considered too good for him—they stripped Him of His clothing and nailed Him to a cross of wood. Into a tomb they laid His marred and mangled body and then kept a guard over that tomb. But the God of Daniel, who had declared that this One who was crucified was His Son, gave further evidence that He is the living God by raising the crucified One from the dead.

Divine judgment came to His persecutors. And this One whom man rejected, God has appointed to be Ruler of this earth. The inspired Apostle declared that God "now commandeth all men everywhere to repent; because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."—Selected.

THE USE OF THE TONGUE

We should hold our tongues—

1. To convey useful information to mankind.
2. To speak kindly of everyone.
3. To be truthful and simple in our statements.
4. To comfort and console the afflicted.
5. To cheer the timid and fearful.
6. To defend the innocent and the oppressed.
7. To reprove and admonish the wicked.
8. To congratulate the success of the virtuous.
9. To confess our faults one to another.
10. To pray and speak to the praise of God.—Selected.

GOD'S GOODNESS

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

"Bow down thine ear, O Lord, hear me; for I am poor and needy . . . For thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee."—Psalm 86:1, 5.

THIS was a prayer of David, that rich king who sat on the throne over God's people Israel. David had great wealth, for God blessed Israel and David had found favor in the sight of the Lord. David had all that wealth could provide. He had been wonderfully blessed; yet he called upon God and said, "Hear me; for I am poor and needy."

Even so, David was poor and needy, just as all men are; but all do not realize it and acknowledge it, as he did. He probably looked back upon the time when he was a child, how his mother had cared for him and protected him. He may have meditated on his helplessness had God not been with him to direct the little stone when he fought the Philistine giant. Possibly David looked forward to the time of his old age when his life would be spent and he would be lowered into the cold tomb. David knew and realized that he was poor and needy and that the Lord was his only refuge.

He asked the Lord to preserve his life, for his was one which the Lord had favored. "O thou my God, save thy servant that trusteth in thee." David did not trust in the riches which were about him, for he knew they could not save him. His trust was in the Lord; so he prayed that the Lord would have mercy on him, for it was the Lord whom he called upon all the day.

"For thou, Lord, art good." Was David right when he spoke those words? Yes! He was right, and Jesus confirmed it when He said, "There is none good but one, that is, God."—Matthew 19:17. Our Savior also asked what man would give his son a stone if he asked for bread, or would give him a snake if he asked for a fish. Then He said, "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?"—Matthew 7:11.

How much greater is God's kindness and favor than our so-called deeds of kindness! God's kind favor and providence are pictured in Psalm 103:13, 14: "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust."

A father looks down on his infant son knowing his weakness and his dependence on his parents, realizing the time and patience and care and sacrifice it will take to bring him up to manhood. God looks down on us as children and has pity for us, knowing our weaknesses and the care we must have. Truly God is good.

"For thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive." But sometimes it seems that God is not ready to forgive, and we feel sinful and helpless. We remember the story of the prodigal son, who after leaving home and wasting his money returned and was received with joy by his father. His father had not condemned him, but was forgiving and kind. The lesson is that we first must go to God before we can receive the blessings He is holding out to us. James said, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you."—James 4:8.

Again, we must also forgive or we will not be forgiven. Jesus taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father which art in heaven, . . . forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." God loves those who will forgive.

David also said that God was plenteous in mercy, and indeed He is more merciful than we realize. But we must not forget that God wants us, also, to show mercy.

Jesus likens the kingdom of heaven to a certain king who was taking account of his servants. He found a servant who owed him a vast sum of money; so he commanded that this servant, his family, and all of his goods be sold to pay the debt. The servant begged for mercy, so the king had mercy on him. But when the king heard that this same servant showed no mercy on his fellow servant, the king was very angry. Similarly God is not pleased with us when we do not show kindness and mercy to our fellow men.

Now, God shows His goodness, forgiveness, and mercy on all them that call upon Him. But who are they that call upon Him? Isaiah 55:6, 7: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."

God's grace is for all who desire it and turn toward Him. Paul said, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call upon him in whom they have not believed?"—Romans 10:13, 14. Those who believe on the Lord are the ones who call upon Him, and they are the ones to whom the Lord is "good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy."

We must remember these glorious virtues of our heavenly Father and think upon them while we pray, for they indeed strengthen us and give us courage toward God. We must of ourselves come to Him to receive forgiveness and make ourselves right before Him, or we cannot receive these things so freely held out toward us. We must remember always that God is good, and ready, right now to forgive, and plenteous in mercy, to all who will receive Him. God has done His part; He has made the way plain to us. Now it is our part to go to Him and accept His goodness, forgiveness, and mercy. Let us go to God, for we, too, are poor and greatly in need.

THEISM OR ATHEISM

they are now from everlasting. Thus Haeckel tells us that "terrestrial organisms did not exist from eternity, but, at a certain period, came into existence for the first time." What he says of "terrestrial organisms" is admitted equally of all organisms. Let us attribute what antiquity we please to the solar system, there was a time when it was not. Let geologists refer man or the lower animals back to what antiquity they may imagine, there yet was a time when they came into a state of existence from one of non-existence. From whence, then, are these wonderful organisms derived?

It is a mere truism to say that they must have had an adequate cause. Some such cause they must have had, capable of producing the results we perceive, not merely some, but all of them.

It is also of necessity that this adequate cause of result must itself be from eternity. Some first cause there must be, according to the universally-received maxim. "Ex nihilo nihil fit," "From nothing, nothing is produced." Here comes in the all-important question of, "Theism or atheism?"

The theistic point is that a personal God existed from all eternity, the great First Cause of all existences. Without Him it tells us that no organized substance, simple or complex, animal, vegetable, or mineral, would, or could, have existed. He produced them one and all, for reasons judged fit by Himself.

Here we would wish our readers to know that there is a matter frequently contested between theists and atheists which we do not consider necessary to discuss in our present inquiry. The eternity of matter is affirmed by all atheists. It is generally denied by theists. The determination of this matter, however important, does not concern us at present. We always wish to argue as much as possible on ground common to us and our opponents. We therefore lay no stress whatever upon the question whether inorganic matter is from eternity or not. We do not know that any authority except the Bible could settle this question, and its testimony has no weight with atheists.

We take up the argument, then, at this point. Without attempting to determine whence inorganic matter, possessed of certain forces, has proceeded, we allow the existence of such matter prior to the creation of organized substance, and inquire whether a personal God, acting on matter unconscious of its forces, but possessed of them, or such matter by itself, was the Creator of the existing universe? Who or what is the organizer of all organisms, past or present or to come?

We here come to a point in common with atheists and us. Here we can argue with them. If we were first to settle with them the question of the eternity of inorganic matter, we could never arrive at a conclusion. Setting out, then, on common ground, that there is at some period of what we call the past matter with its inherent capacities in existence, we inquire, Has the organized universe in whole or in part proceeded from this unorganized matter alone or from God, consciously acting on it or through it? The atheist affirms the former; the theist insists upon the latter.

Let us suppose for the while the atheistic theory that matter and its forces, existing from eternity and without the interposition of any designing mind, produced the universe. Let us inquire whether this cause is adequate to the effect. We see the effect. We inquire whether this effect is such as matter with its forces would, and must, effect, or whether it would, and must, produce effects in essential particulars unlike what is and what has been. We will call the atheist's matter "creative force," as opposed to the "Creator" of the theist. The former is a thing, the latter a Person.

The creative force would, as all must allow, create organisms without any intention of doing so and necessarily, as opposed to voluntarily. As it acts, it must act, and cannot act otherwise. When it acts, it must act, and cannot defer nor hasten its operation. There can be neither delay nor acceleration nor choice nor cessation in its work. It is a blind instrument, careless of its effect, only producing effect because it cannot help it.

Creative force, again, must produce organism in one of two ways. It must either produce it suddenly, or by a slow evolution, as Darwin supposed was the case.

Much of what we see would lead us to the supposition that the atheist's creative force would, at least, in a great variety of cases, produce its effects with great rapidity. Thus, what are called the varieties of nature are produced very suddenly. A calf with two heads or three is a marvelous change from the ordinary animal with but one. Yet it is produced in a single generation. The father and mother of the giant of Gath had the ordinary number of fingers and toes, but their gigantic son was born with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot. 1 Chronicles 20:6. These and hundreds of similar instances would point to the operations of creative force being performed very rapidly. Now let us see how existing effects agree with either the theory of rapid or of very gradual operation.

On the first theory we would certainly expect new and perfect creations, more or less resembling existing creations, to have taken place within what is called the historical period. Creative force must needs work; its old powers are still possessed by it; it cannot delay; it can make no choice of work or no work: most certainly, then, we should expect from such a force, working with rapidity, effects significant of their origin to have taken place within the historical period. None such have taken place. None such, we may add, are expected to take place. We may surely on even this brief examination of the results of time as known to us dismiss creative force acting with rapidity as inconsistent with the state of things as known to mankind.

And what should we expect from creative force acting by very slow degrees, engaged in bringing forth through the slow ages of the past its slow results, ever working on its unintended effects? We should most certainly expect various and numerous imperfect developments, coming forward here and there, some more and others less imperfect; some at their commencement; others half-way to completion; others nearly completed; many from a development still imperfect, more or less unfit for their present place in the creation. Such we should expect to find now in existence or in the fossil state as having existed in the eras of past time. Now we find nothing of this kind. We do not find the smallest approach to it. Everything is exactly suited to its place, as science itself admits. We can imagine no change advisable for a single living creature in the way of improving its place in nature. We can suggest no alteration which would not be an injury as far as regards its present position. All is perfect in its place.

Such a state of things is absolutely inconsistent with the theory of a creative force acting by slow degrees and incapable of staying its action. We should see on an infinitely greater scale what we see in a great manufactory, where various men are engaged in the production of various implements for a great variety of purposes and which are in various stages toward perfection. Here are some complete. There are others just commenced, the various constituent parts which are to form a perfect whole scattered here and there, no one but the worker knowing for what they are intended or how they are to be brought together. Elsewhere are others far from completion, yet still so far complete that other than their architects may form a true conception of what they are to become. So would it be in the great laboratory of nature on the theory of creative force acting necessarily and by slow degrees. There is nothing like it in actual nature; and, therefore, we reject this theory as one utterly inconsistent with actual facts.

Analogy may also lead us to see the falsehood of all theories which would attribute the creation of the universe to any creative force acting without design. There are in existence multitudes of objects which no one supposes to have originated from creative force. Why do they thus think of them? From the evident existence of design, as seen in these productions. Thus, take, for example, a chair, a rude iron spear, a railway engine. Men of science seeing any of these attribute them to man as a designer. They reject as absolutely inadmissible their having originated from creative force. Let us apply this to objects in nature the creation of which we have not seen, but which have just as evidently a design as chair or spear or engine. The sun is, to all appearance, intended to give light and heat for the inhabitants of the earth, as well as for other purposes. The fruits of the earth, as they are essential, would appear intended to serve the wants of mankind. Arguing from analogy, we conclude that the sun and the fruits of the earth were intended to serve the purposes which they actually do serve, and, hence, that no blind, unthinking, creative force made them, but that they come from the hands of a Creator.

SOME BIBLE RULES FOR GETTING ALONG WITH PEOPLE

By Norman John MacLeod

1. "A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger."—Proverbs 15:1. "By long forbearing is a prince persuaded, and a soft tongue breaketh the bone." This in modern psychological language would be stated: Human conduct is predictable. If you wish to stir up wrath, it can be done easily; if you wish to soothe the anger of anybody, it can also be done easily: words will do it.
2. "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."—Ephesians 4:26. If you carry old grudges around with you for more than twenty-four hours, you are preparing your entire nervous system for trouble. Many of us carry grudges for years, and keep them fresh by constantly reviewing them; life is too short for that sort of thing.
3. "For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith."—Romans 12:3. "Be not wise in your own conceits."—Romans 12:16. One of the best ways to get along with people is to form a just and fair estimate of your own abilities in comparison with those of your friends. Know your own limitations. Over-estimate purposely the value of the other person's point of view; then you will come nearer to appreciation of his true value and will not offend him with your exaggerated views.
4. "Be not righteous over much, neither make thyself over wise: why shouldest thou destroy thyself?"—Ecclesiastes 7:16. In other words: Be yourself; do not play a dramatic part; do not be a hypocrite.
5. Follow the example of Jesus in making yourself interested in other people. "You will make more friends in a week by getting yourself genuinely interested in other people than you can in a year by trying to get other people interested in you" (Wiggams, The Marks of an Educated Man).
6. Do not try to reprimand people who are not subject to your authority; Jesus did not reprimand the common run of folk for their sins, but rebuked the Pharisees in a most bitter manner for their unrighteousness, which was manifested in self-conceit.

BEREAN REPORTS

JANUARY

THE annual business meeting of the Rockford Berean Society was held January 13, and the following officers were elected: President, Mildred Somers; First Vice President, Harold Starbuck; Second Vice President, Lyle Thayer; Secretary-Treasurer, Marjorie Mogle. This society meets each Friday evening at 7:45 at 1904 N. Main St. The membership is nineteen; average attendance fourteen.

—Marjorie Mogle, Secretary.

The Dixon Berean Society held its annual election of officers January 11. The following were elected: President, Dale Reis; Vice President, Mary Jane Eckert; Secretary-Treasurer, Helen Roberts; Superintendent of Bereans, Mrs. Edith Miller; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. L. E. Conner. Membership and attendance are as follows: Adult class membership, 12; attendance, 6. Senior class membership, 12; attendance, 3. Junior class membership, 10; attendance, 8. Primary class, 7; attendance, 6. Interest is good in all these classes.

—Helen Roberts, Secretary.

The Oregon Berean Society meets each Sunday evening at 6:30 at the church. The membership is thirteen; the average weekly attendance sixteen. Arlen Marsh is the teacher. The lessons are on the coming kingdom.

—Rosalie Carpenter, Secretary.

The Ripley Bereans meet at the church at 6:15. The membership is twenty; average weekly attendance nine. The interest seems to be good. Many of our members live in the country, and it is impossible for them to attend regularly.

—Margaret Cooper, Secretary.

FEBRUARY

The Rockford Berean Society meets at 1904 N. Main St., each Friday evening. The interest is good. On February 17 we organized a junior Berean society with two classes of five members each. Membership is now twenty-nine. The average weekly attendance for February was nineteen.

—Marjorie Mogle, Secretary.

The Dixon Berean classes meet at the church each Wednesday evening at 7:30. The adult class membership is 12; the average weekly attendance, 6. The senior class membership is 12; average weekly attendance, 7. The junior class membership is 11; average weekly attendance, 9. The primary class membership is 9; average weekly attendance, 3.

AN APPLE THAT TOOK A JOURNEY

"HERE, John, catch it," called the grocery boy as he tossed a shiny red apple. "That's for helping me pick up the potatoes that day."

"Oh, thanks a lot, Bill," answered John, remembering the day they had missed meeting the boys who had gone on a hike and had spent the day happily nevertheless.

John was just about to take a big bite when he thought of his "other half" who had to stay after school. "I'll give it to him when he gets home," he thought to himself; "then he'll not feel so discouraged over his lessons." And John went on home whistling merrily.

Sure enough, when Jim got home a little later John gave him the shiny red apple.

"Say, but you're a good old pal," said Jim when he discovered that the grocery boy had given it to John.

"Well, didn't you help pick up the potatoes, too?" answered John.

Jim was just about to take a big bite when he thought of Fred, who had laughed at him for having to stay after school. He had called Fred, "Smarty," and felt real mean toward him.

But the twins did want to be friends with Fred because he was so good at all the kinds of games that they liked. And so Jim thought to himself, "I'll give it to Fred, and maybe he'll forget I called him a mean name."

As soon as Jimmie met Fred on the playground before the bell rang next morning he made his peace offering to him. "Aw, go on, Jim, I didn't mind a bit that you called me Smarty; guess I am that all right," said Fred, accepting the apple, a little ashamed.

And Fred was just about to take a big bite when he thought of the poor old bent street sweeper. Fred and a number of his pals had made life rather miserable by teasing the poor old fellow, and many a time Fred had been ashamed of it. So he thought to himself, "I'll give it to poor old Tom. Don't suppose he has many apples."

On his way home at noon Fred met Tom and held out the big red apple to him. Tom, expecting a joke of some kind, did not take it at first, but seeing Fred was in earnest, gratefully accepted the gift, thinking perhaps Fred wasn't so bad after all.

The little bent old man, never even thinking of taking a big bite, put the apple in his pocket. He thought of a certain little crippled boy whose pale face was pressed against the windowpane and whose thin little hand waved a greeting to the street cleaner every day as he passed by.

"I'll give it to him; perhaps it'll put a bit of red in his cheeks," thought Tom to himself.

And so at last the shiny red apple found a stopping-place and made a hungry little boy who couldn't run and play very happy.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

We have now reached the last lesson of the quarter. I hope my five girls and five boys have enjoyed working on their lessons as much as I have. We will continue with our scrapbooks for the next three months, and we hope many more will join the club.

For lesson thirteen find a picture of Jesus and paste it at the top of the page. Underneath draw a large clock and write over it, "I will serve Jesus all the time."

Now, instead of only two hands on the clock, draw a hand for each hour. The hours will represent the lessons we have studied, and we will choose a thought from each lesson.

Along the hand pointing to 1, write, "I will tell others about Jesus." Along the hand pointing to 2, write, "I will follow Him." On 3, write, "I will work for Him." On 4, "I will pray to Him each night." On 5, "I will go to Sunday school every Sunday." On 6, "I will choose friends that love Jesus." On 7, "I will study His Book." On 8, "I will grow more like Jesus each day." On 9, "I will believe what He says." On 10, "I will be glad because He lives." On 11, "I will serve Him by serving others." On 12, "I will keep myself pure."

Last, copy this poem:

GOD'S CARE

"How strong and sweet my Father's care
That round about me like the air
Is with me always, everywhere.
He cares for me.

"O keep me ever in Thy love,
Dear Father, watching from above;
And let me still Thy mercy prove,
And care for me."

LESSON 13. — March 26, 1933

REVIEW: JESUS OUR EXAMPLE IN SERVICE

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 42:1-7

GOLDEN TEXT

Jesus of Nazareth . . . went about doing good.—Acts 10:38.

Lesson I. Mark 1:1-11.

Topic: John Prepares the Way for Jesus.

Summary: The beginning of John's ministry and the baptism of Jesus. John prepared the way for the coming of Jesus by announcing His coming to the Jews and commanding them to repent of their sins and thus manifest their faith in His coming. Gentiles are required to do the same if they are to be accepted by Him when He comes again. Jesus was consecrated for His service to God by baptism, which He called an act of righteousness. Our consecration is sealed in the same way.

Lesson II. Mark 1:12-20.

Topic: Jesus Begins His Work.

Summary: Jesus is tempted, enters upon His public ministry, and chooses His first apostles. The temptation of Jesus placed Him upon a plane of sympathetic understanding with all men. He could thereafter approach them from their own human standpoint. His message was not His own, but God's. It was the same truth that John preached: "The kingdom of God is at hand." Those whom He selected to carry on His work were to continue to teach throughout the world the same things that Jesus taught while He was on earth. All disciples of Christ are "fishers of men."

Lesson III. Mark 1:21-35.

Topic: Jesus at Work.

Summary: Jesus' teaching in Capernaum and various miracles of healing elsewhere. The positiveness and assurance of Jesus' manner of teaching astonished His hearers, for they saw that He spoke with authority. Mark emphasizes the promptness of Jesus in responding to human needs. Although the Son of God, our Lord found it necessary to withdraw frequently to "a solitary place" to pray. In constant communion with God He found the strength of spirit and body to continue His work.

Lesson IV. Mark 2:1-12.

Topic: Jesus Forgiving Sin.

Summary: Jesus had returned to Capernaum, probably to the home of Peter and Andrew; and a vast crowd quickly gathered to see and hear Him. A paralytic was brought to Him for healing but owing to the number in and about the house could not reach Him. An opening was made in the roof and the sick man lowered into Jesus' presence. The Lord first said, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." Scribes questioned His power, and Jesus declared He had said this that they might know "that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins." The sick man was then commanded to rise up and walk.

Lesson V. Mark 2:13 to 3:6.

Topic: Jesus and the Sabbath.

Summary: As Jesus and His disciples passed through the corn fields on the Sabbath, the Pharisees observed that the disciples plucked and ate grain as they went. They criticised Him for permitting what they termed the breaking of the law. Jesus found a precedent for their action in the life of David and asserted that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. He soon after healed a man on the Sabbath and in reply to objections raised against doing any work on the Sabbath asked if it were lawful to do good or evil on that day.

Lesson VI. Mark 3:7-35.

Summary: Jesus had withdrawn from Capernaum to avoid the multitude that pressed about Him and hindered His work. But wherever He went, great crowds continued to follow, some of them coming from great distances in order to be benefited by His healing power. He finally selected twelve men as His immediate disciples or learners and led them apart from the others for special instruction. In this we have an illustration of the work of the church today. The gospel must be preached continually to all men, and special workers must be instructed to present it intelligently and effectively.

Lesson VII. Mark 4:1-20.

Topic: Jesus Teaching by Parables—Four Kinds of Hearers.

Summary: Jesus taught much by parables, the popular and familiar method of giving instruction at this time. Here He uses the work of a sower, the seed he sows, and the various kinds of soil on which it falls, together with the results that follow, to draw a prophetic picture of the conditions and accomplishments of the church in the spreading of the gospel throughout the world.

Lesson VIII. Mark 4:21-34.

Topic: Jesus Teaching by Parables—The Growth of the Kingdom.

Summary: In the parables of the lamp, the mystery of the growing seed, and the mustard seed, Jesus is showing the manner in which the planting of the gospel seed in the hearts of men today will bring forth a bountiful harvest in the kingdom in the future. They also indicate the gradual development of the kingdom when it is established.

Lesson IX. Mark 4:35 to 5:20.

Topic: Jesus Shows His Power.

Summary: To the consternation of His disciples Jesus stilled a raging tempest that arose as the ship in which they sailed was crossing the Sea of Galilee. Immediately on their arrival at the eastern shore the Lord was met by a demoniac of great strength and frenzy, whom He restored to sanity with a word. The man desired to remain with the One who had rescued him from what was worse than death, but was sent to Decapolis to act as a witness for Christ instead.

Lesson X. Mark 5:21-43.

Topic: Jesus Giving Life and Health.

Summary: Jesus, returning from the eastern side of the Lake of Galilee, was met by Jairus, a ruler of a synagogue in Capernaum, whose little daughter was very ill and who had faith that Jesus could come and restore her. As He was starting on the road to do so, a woman suffering from an "issue of blood" touched His garment and was healed. Jesus then went on to the home of Jairus. In the meantime the child had died, and hired mourners were loudly lamenting her passing. Jesus put them all out, and in the presence of her parents and three disciples restored her to life.

Lesson XI. Mark 6:1-56.

Topic: Jesus Ministering to the Multitude.

Summary: Following the first missionary journey of the apostles, Jesus led them into the desert for rest and further instruction. Multitudes followed them whose helpless, hopeless, leaderless condition moved Jesus to pity. He continued to teach them until night drew near and then commanded His apostles to arrange the people in groups on the grass and furnished five thousand men, besides women and children, with food provided from five loaves and two fishes. Twelve baskets of fragments remained at the close of the meal.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Review

1. Prepare, publish, and proclaim the second coming of Christ.
2. Triumph in the Lord's work over the path of loyalty and faithfulness.
3. The conditions of the present demand your ministry of Christian service.
4. Healing and forgiveness are co-equal: these must come from heaven.
5. Sunday is a day for worship and not for pleasure and servile work.
6. God can use your weakness to His glory.
7. We must do the sowing, God will give the increase.
8. Shed abroad the light and listen to nothing but truth.
9. Jesus has power to save and to keep. Let Him use it.
10. Life came from God and suffering through sin.
11. Jesus was a real Friend, compassionately sharing with others.
12. Alcohol and temperance cannot exist together.—C. E. R.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

History was made in Southern California Sunday afternoon, March 5, 1933, at the MacLeod home in Pomona, when the ministers and leaders of the Church of God met to form an association. Those present were Bros. J. E. Hatch, J. E. Adamson, Hammond, Lichty, Railsback, Smead, Reid, and MacLeod; and Srs. Hatch, Adamson, Dore, Hammond and daughter Ruth Smead, Railsback, and MacLeod. These meetings are planned not only for the purpose of promoting the church work in California, but also for fostering an atmosphere of cooperation among the various religious groups in the state by means of social activities.

The meeting was opened by a discussion of objectives and aims for such a group and the means and methods for carrying them into effect. A motion by Bro. Adamson prevailed that the group organize, after which it was decided that a committee be appointed by the chair for the purpose of formulating a permanent organization. The chair appointed Sr. Railsback and Bros. Lichty and Smead. By motion of Bro. Lichty, Bro. MacLeod was made Executive-Secretary pro tem. until the organization could be more definitely worked out. After a discussion on the question of an official name for the organization, the matter was left to the committee on organization to suggest names.

A tentative program for the coming Quarterly Prophetic Conference, April 2, was considered, after which the matter was referred by motion of Bro. Adamson to a committee consisting of Bros. Lichty and MacLeod. Possibilities of more organization in the Berean field were discussed with special reference to Riverside and Santa Ana. Other topics considered were: cooperation with the national ministerial association, pooling of library facilities of the various ministers, leadership training, and organization for the coming conference meetings. The meeting then adjourned to attend the supper and evening services at the Pomona church. The situation for work in Southern California seems more encouraging than it has for some time; those who attended the meeting were inspired by the splendid spirit of cooperation that pervaded the whole afternoon.

Bro. Lichty concluded his series of seven Sunday evening sermons by the best of the series: "A New Deal for the Church in the United States." He has certainly made a fine effort for the church in Pomona, and now plans a series which intrigues our attention on prophetic subjects. After the evening sermon Sr. Railsback presented Bro. Lichty an appropriate gift from the Los Angeles Dorcas Society, a "Young's Analytical Concordance." Words of commendation upon his splendid work and the desire to assist him by means of the proper tools accompanied the gift. Bro. Smead made a few remarks following the main sermon of the evening. During the evening the choir rendered Handel's Largo from the oratorio Xerxes.

We were much concerned to hear that Sr. L. E. Rich of Long Beach fell and fractured her hip this week and was in the hospital at the last information. We hope and pray that the injury will not be too serious and that she will soon be restored to health. Bro. Cline of Long Beach has been in bed for some time with the "flu," but is now on the mend.

BEAR, ARKANSAS

The following excerpt is taken from an interesting letter from Bro. and Sr. R. A. Humphreys. Writing to order extra copies of the Bible special, they say: "Our Herald of February 21 was delayed, but came later, timely, so to speak, of good things. We are thankful to God for your kindness to us poor travelers to Eternity, and we ask an interest in your prayers."

Bro. Humphreys' name is familiar to the older readers of The Herald, who will remember with pleasure the many instructive articles that have appeared in these columns from his pen. Many will join with us in asking the Father's blessing to rest upon His faithful servants.

CHURCH OF THE GOLDEN RULE Cleveland, Ohio

So successful and popular were the pre-Easter meetings we held last year that it has been decided to hold another series this year. It will open April 5 and continue each night except Saturday until Easter. Due to lack of money no outside speaker will be engaged. Good programs are being prepared, different every night. We shall need the fullest cooperation of everyone to make this effort a success. Plan to be present each evening.

A new class in the fundamental doctrines of the Bible, outlining the beliefs held by this church, was organized under the leadership of Miss Jennie Salisbury on March 3. It meets each Friday evening at 8:00 as a regular part of the Berean society.

Disaster strikes quickly. This time it has stricken our beloved brother, Don Swartz, who had the second and third fingers of his right hand amputated after having them crushed in a large press he was feeding. The accident happened March 1.

Mr. Herbert Stadden has been working day and night with scarcely time enough out for sleep for several weeks. The place where he works makes jig-saw puzzles.—Golden Rule News.

BULLETIN

The following telegram reached us at ten o'clock Monday morning. We thank God for His protecting care over His people.

March 12th

Just returned Long Beach by a Pacific electric. All our people escaped harm and suffered little financial loss. Sister Rich removed to home from wrecked hospital. Standing shock well. Church here may have to be razed. Sermon at 1020 Burlington. More soon as barricades removed and can drive to Long Beach.

Emma C. Railsback.

MANY THANKS

I have been celebrating two events, viz., my birthday anniversary, Feb. 9, and the anniversary of my first attempt at preaching, the first Sunday following Feb. 9; and in some way that information had gotten out, and birthday cards and letters began to arrive from several states and continued for more than two weeks, until scores of them have come in bearing messages of love and good will, and good counsel, containing beauty and sentiment which it would seem must have been heaven-born. These have lifted and lightened my heart, made rifts in the clouds of discouragement, brought tears of joy that for the moment would bedim my vision, only to clear away and reveal life in greater beauty and sweetness.

Time and conditions make it impossible for me to acknowledge these favors separately, much as I would love to do so, and I use this means of conveying my sincere gratitude to all for these many kind expressions of love and good will which mean so much to a busy man.

God has been wondrously good and kind to me; and life has been, as it still is, very sweet and enjoyable. The sorrows and troubles that have come to me have served only as stumbling blocks and momentary stoppages along the great highway of life's experiences over which I have traveled and are not worthy to be compared with the sweetness of life's experiences.

There is one text, 2 Timothy 3:12, which, if it be of universal application, gives me some concern, as I have not, in my experiences in life, suffered persecutions so far as I have been able to discern. If any have been aimed at me, they have missed the mark; or if they have hit the mark, I have not been tender enough to appreciate it. My brethren and the world have been very kind to me and have always helped me over the rough places as I have approached them; and life, as a whole, has indeed been sweet to me.

As far as I am able to determine, my health is well-nigh perfect, for which I thank my heavenly Father, my brethren, and friends, who have been so kind and generous in assisting me to bear life's burdens and in overlooking my many weaknesses and shortcomings.

The financial depression through which we are passing holds no terrifying discouragement for me. Discipline is severe sometimes; but it becomes necessary, it seems, to bring us back to a semblance of normalcy when we have lost our balance and have gone so far afield from the safe and sane road to economic and spiritual prosperity. The worst may be yet to come, but there are brighter days just ahead. I expect to grow old while enjoying the good things of life, hoping and looking for better, richer, and sweeter things to come. And these many beautiful, cheery cards and letters bearing messages of love and good fellowship have brightened the way for the remainder of the journey. For all of which I sincerely thank you.

L. E. Conner.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Sr. John Guthrie of Mullin, Texas, in renewing for The Herald says, "We do enjoy the many good articles it contains each week. May it continue to tell the glad tidings till the coming of the King."

Miss Jessie M. Wilson, who has been living at 1700 E. 20th St., Oakland, Calif., may now be addressed at 2625 Pleasant St., in the same city.

Sr. Anna Wertz of Lanark, Ill., who has been quite ill for some time, is now improving. Sr. Wertz has been closely associated with the work of the Church of God in northern Illinois for many years.

Mrs. Paul Magnus, Rensselaer, Ind., declares, "The paper has been a great consolation to me, and I would surely miss it if I could not have it." Both contributors and editors of The Herald are earnestly striving with God's help to make the paper spiritually upbuilding and scripturally instructive to all.

The splendid short articles now being published from the pen of Sr. Emma C. Railsback of Los Angeles are of particular value in these days, as they help materially in counteracting the effect of traditional teaching which all too frequently is based on such fables as those of which she writes.

Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., pastor of the Plum River (Ill.) church, has started weekly Bible classes in the vicinity of the church. We trust that these gatherings will result in much spiritual growth.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to the suffering thousands of Southern California, and especially to our own brethren who have been called upon to pass through this trial of faith and courage. May God sustain and keep them true to Him whatever happens. These events give us a preview of what the entire earth will one day experience when it is made to tremble in the grasp of an outraged God. Brethren, the Lord is coming!

We attempted to get into communication with Sr. Emma C. Railsback our official representative in California, to give our readers a brief report of the condition of our people on the coast, but to the hour of going to press have not received a response to our telegram. Communications have been sadly interrupted since the earthquake and now the wires are overburdened with messages, and people are obliged to take their turn in getting through. A message from Bro. and Sr. Glyn Starbuck of Rockford, Ill., who are in South Pasadena, informs their friends of their safety, and of the fact that they had left Long Beach but an hour before the first shock came. We await equally gratifying news from other brethren.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed at an out-of-town bank. Thank you!

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

THOUGHTS FOR THINKERS

HUMAN OPINION versus THE WORD OF GOD

"There is no such thing as sin."

"There is none righteous, no, not one. . . all have sinned."—Romans 3:10; 5:12.

"I don't need to belong to a church to be accepted with God."

"If righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."—Galatians 2:21.

"Why should it be necessary to believe in Christ, if a man is sincere in what he does believe?"

"There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

"God will not condemn me if I live a good moral life."

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:16.

"One church is as good as another. Creeds aren't important."

"If any man preach any other gospel unto you. . . let him be accursed."—Galatians 1:9.

"It doesn't make any difference what you believe, so long as you live a good life."

"This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent."—John 6:29.

IN TIME OF TROUBLE

First: He brought me here. It is by His will I am in this strait place; in that I will rest.

Second: He will keep me in His love and give me grace in this trial to behave as His child.

Third: He will make the trial a blessing, teaching me the lessons He wants me to learn and working in me the grace He intends for me.

Fourth: In His good time He can bring me out again; how and when, He knows.—Murray.

REDEEMING THE TIME

Redeem the time! God only knows
How soon our little life may close,
With all its pleasures and its woes.
Redeem the time!

Redeem the time! It goeth fast;
Then use it well, buy back the past,
And think each day may be our last.
Redeem the time!

Redeem the time, and that with might!
Far spent the day, quick falls the night;
Soon closed the race, and fought the fight.
Redeem the time!—Selected.

THE CRYING NEED OF THE WORLD

By D. G. Harvey

IF WE ask the average Bible reader, "Who was Jonah?" the answer is often, "The prophet that was swallowed by the whale." Ask the same question of the man of the world, and we hear, "Oh, the guy who told the big fish story." In either case the only thought retained in reading Jonah's little book is the story of the whale.

Many calling themselves ministers of God deny this story, calling it an allegory, overlooking the fact that Jesus compared His death, burial, and resurrection to Jonah's experience. Matthew 12:40. Jesus believed the story of Jonah; and the words, "so shall ye," force the minister who states the story of Jonah to be an allegory to admit that he doubts the story of Christ, for it, too, would be an allegory.

There are many types or pictures in this Book, as Paul informs us in Romans 15:4 and 1 Corinthians 10:11. The one Jesus referred to in Matthew 14:40 was fulfilled. Jonah also typified the nation of Israel, which was swallowed up among the nations of the world but not digested. No matter in what country found, the natural descendants of Jacob remain Jews.

But at this time we are more interested in Jonah as a type of the church of our day and in Nineveh as a type of the world.

Why does the world need a Jonah? Because these things are here: depression, crime, anarchy, atheism, false teaching, scoffers, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God.

The prophets of old speak of this condition to prevail: "For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out and came in, because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbour."—Zechariah 8:10. Read the whole of Zephaniah to get the picture. "Men's hearts failing them for fear."—Luke 21:26. "The mighty man shall cry there bitterly."—Zephaniah 1:14.

But what has caused this deplorable condition? The love of money and lack of knowledge and justice. Paul tells us, "The love of money is the root of all evil."—1 Timothy 6:10.

What has the love of money gained for any man? "We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out."—1 Timothy 6:7.

We as a race have labored to produce much, but what has become of the fruits of our labor? Haggai tells us, "He that earneth wages, earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes."—Haggai 1:6.

There is a great lack of love for our fellow men. Men do not follow the rule laid down by Paul: "Let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."—Galatians 6:10. "Bear ye one another's burdens."—Galatians 6:2. The great law of Christ is: "Love thy neighbour as thyself."—Matthew 22:39.

Today there is a great lack of trust, confidence, faith. Man has lost faith in his fellow man, in his God. We have few today with the faith described in Habakkuk 3:17, 18: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

The church today must have love for all, justice for all, knowledge of God's will. But you will say, "People today do not lack knowledge." "Knowledge shall be increased."—Daniel 12:4.

True, there has been a wonderful increase of knowledge in the past century, wonderful inventions, new discoveries. But does man know God? God is as unknown today as He was at Mars' Hill when Paul spoke of the unknown God. Acts 17:23.

Man must know something of God's plan, or he will be sure to go contrary to that plan. Let us read Hosea 4:6: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." How? In Daniel 2:44 God reveals that in the close of the Gentile age He plans to break in pieces the Gentile rule. But man's plan is and has been union. The cry has been, "Unite," in all lines of endeavor, in financial, social, and political.

Do the Scriptures speak of this condition? To be sure! Read Psalm 2:1-6: "Why do the heathen rage, and . . . imagine a vain thing?" "Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation not desired." Zephaniah 2:1 seems to picture a league of nations to the writer's mind.

But would such a union of nations solve our problem today? Let us turn to Isaiah 8:9, 10. Here we read the answer to our question: "Associate yourselves, O ye people, and ye shall be broken in pieces: and give ear, all ye of far countries: gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces. Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand: for God is with us."

Man has failed in all points. Most of us can remember that on December 23, 1913, Woodrow Wilson, then president of our country, signed the Federal Reserve Act that men proclaimed would prevent a financial panic; but we have lived to see the banks of forty-seven states unable to pay but five per cent on deposits, even unable to cash our own government checks. It is no wonder that men's hearts are failing them for fear.

There is but one hope for man. God's own Son must soon return. James 5:7: "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." That kingdom we have long prayed for: "Thy kingdom come." God will change the heart of man. Jeremiah 31:33; Ezekiel 11:19, 20. Listen: "They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wit's end. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses."—Psalm 107:27, 28.

Man has failed. God will not.

VOLUME 22

OREGON, ILLINOIS, MARCH 21, 1933

NUMBER 25

WAR SCARE

By Arlen Marsh

THROUGH THE RESTITUTION HERALD of February 14, the writer set forth in somewhat imaginative fashion the popular beliefs regarding the possibilities of the great war which is biblically indicated to center in and about Jerusalem. "Night of Terror," in common with the yellow journal of newspaper language, did contain a small kernel of truth; but that kernel, in the process of presenting the generally accepted thoughts concerning the horrors of the next war, was so assiduously cultivated in the article as to grow into a plant before its proper time. As a result, the delusions entertained by the public and sponsored by adjective loving individuals capitalizing on their reputations as experts were aided and abetted to the *n*th degree.

That article, together with many of its literary brothers, is guilty of attaining the heights on the Mountain of Exaggeration. Prophetically and polemically it stands condemned, not merely as interest-seeking sensationalism, but also as positive absurdity. "Night of Terror" will exist, that cannot be questioned; but its form will be of vastly different shape from that outlined in the exposition it entitles.

Before considering the genuine impossibility of any such decimation as that described in the author's previous work on the subject, the several texts bearing on the matter may well be studied. Zechariah provides a prediction that upon fulfillment will establish factually as well as logically the fallacy of the contention that Armageddon, that great decisive battle yet to come, will mark the total annihilation of civilization as civilization today is understood. Joel does likewise; Micah, Ezekiel, and Isaiah follow suit. Governments will exist, commerce will prosper, vocations will be pursued as before: this succeeding the judgment of nations about Zion and preceding the worldwide extent of God's kingdom.

"I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle," Jehovah announces in the last chapter of Zechariah, "and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle."

Previous, therefore, to the interruption of this war by God, there is to occur a battle, or series of battles, of considerable fierceness; but, contrary to the gruesome expectations of the mighty majority, the population of the cities will not entirely perish. Rather, one half of the capital of Palestine is to be left free, and of the rest the people are to be held as prisoners. Since the struggle is to take place primarily in Judea, it can be assumed that other cities than Jerusalem will not be any more afflicted.

Undoubtedly the demand of Joel to men to "beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears" is largely figurative and refers to all weapons of war; but, despite the lurid headlines of magazines and papers, the sword and the spear, modified to modern combat, will come into full play. Without the bayonet, saw-toothed or straight-edged, no infantryman feels well armed. Gas would not draw blood; yet the prophet graphically depicts embattled Jerusalem to be a scene of rivers of blood that flow to the horses' bridles, possibly one of those instances of the hyperbole so frequently used by God to impress the Oriental mind for which the Old Testament principally was intended. No such occurrence would be possible except with the use of the old-fashioned knife in a new guise and with the employment of shot and shell, singularly ineffective, since it required eighty thousand rounds of ammunition to kill a single man during the World War.

"Two thousand dead the first night," comments "Night of Terror." In a heavy rain such as that described, no gas would spread far enough to account for so many of the common citizenry, sleeping in no more close quarters than those used in the suburbs of any city. Beyond all this, assuming that weather conditions were perfect, it

The Editor's Prayer

O GOD, our Father, Thou who art the Creator and the Sustainer of the universe, we come before Thee in grateful acknowledgment of Thy protecting care, the care which thou hast exercised over Thy people, our brethren, in Southern California, during the recent earthquake. We are made to realize Thy presence with us in a thousand different ways, and all through the blessings which we are made to receive from Thy hand. Be Thou with us, we pray, and make us more worthy of Thy love, through these final trying days of Gentile times. In Jesus' name. Amen.

The Earth Reels

THE fateful words of Isaiah the son of Amoz are filled with meaning for us today: "Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth." Increasing dangers lurk on every side, and anxiety fills all hearts with dread of what the future holds. Financial depression and grinding poverty are sweeping the world like a scourge. War is ravaging nations on both hemispheres, and the powers not already engaged are menaced with momentary possibility of being drawn into the engulfing stream of disaster.

The international political situation is in a turmoil. Domestic conditions are but little better. Civilization seems trembling on the verge of collapse. Nothing remains stable, nothing is sure. The avalanche of sin which from time immemorial has been creeping down the mountainside of humanity with almost imperceptible motion is now crashing onward with vastly increased acceleration, claiming millions of hapless and unprepared Christians, together with no less careless worldlings, who are destined to be carried over the brink of the tribulation into the chasm of destruction that awaits the ungodly and unrepentant in the "time of the end."

As though these social and political dangers were not sufficient to impress upon an indifferent world the import of the times in which we live, the forces of nature are being unleashed to add to the fear and the horror which the iniquity of man has already brought about.

During the past year earthquakes, volcanoes, and storms of great violence have devastated many regions and resulted in the loss of thousands of lives and millions of dollars in property damage. The disaster in Southern California that occurred recently was of comparatively minor importance from the standpoint of the number of lives lost, but the property loss was enormous owing to the thickly settled region where the disaster happened.

The newspapers have provided us with a resume of the great earthquakes of history, and it but remains for us to recall those mentioned in the Bible together with the reasons given for their occurrence.

Practically every great manifestation of divine power, either the outpouring of wrath or the conferring of blessings, has been accompanied by seismic disturbances of greater or lesser intensity.

When "Moses brought forth the people . . . to meet with God," as they stood at the lower part of Mount Sinai watching the billows of smoke that wreathed its top, "the whole mount quaked greatly." When Korah and his companions were destroyed for their sin, "the ground clave asunder that was under them: and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses. . . And all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them."

Other earthquakes are recorded as having occurred in the days of Saul, Elijah, and Uzziah, each of which wrought havoc and aroused great fear in the hearts of those who witnessed them.

The earthquake, being one of the most terrible and impressive of natural manifestations, is frequently associated with calamitous events of the future. The coming of the Lord is to be marked by "earthquakes in divers places," and when His feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives great earthquakes will rend the holy mountain in twain and remove it toward the north and toward the south. The tribulation also will experience tremendous earth disturbances which will result in the loss of thousands of lives.

As the days go on, we may look for an increasing number of such awe-inspiring events to take place, especially in and around the so-called Bible lands, while on beyond, when the tribulation actually holds sway throughout the world, still more dreadful calamities of a like nature will devastate the earth, for there shall be "a great earthquake, such as was not since man was upon the earth," and the cities and the nations of men shall fall crashing in an awful period of destruction.

AFFLICTIONS

By Lyman Booth

“For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.”—2 Corinthians 4:17.

Not everyone can look upon afflictions with the same degree of complacency as did the Apostle Paul. He recounted his manifold trials as things that had done him good, wherein he gloried. He spoke of them as working out present Christian graces and future glories. He looked upon his sufferings, which were many, as momentary, and the future glory as eternal. Looking backward over the multitude of his afflictions, he said, “These light afflictions which are but for a moment!” Then, turning his eyes toward the eternal future, he caught a glimpse of “that far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory,” the glory that is real, enduring glory, signifying weight.

It is a far more excellent glory. It outweighs all labor and suffering, so they are not worth mentioning. If we could look upon afflictions as Paul did, we would consider them as working blessings for us, not only because there is laid up a reward for the afflicted according to the affliction, but because they serve to increase our desire for things, for the age to come when the present trials will sink out of sight beneath the “eternal weight of glory.”

Afflictions may serve to sweeten the bitterness of life. They may tame the wildness of nature and burn out the dross of selfishness and worldliness. They may humble our pride and reveal our weaknesses, our faults, and perils. They serve to deepen and enrich our experiences. They increase the warmth of our affections for others and gentle us toward all. Many a home has been saved from wreck by the visitation of sorrow that comes and draws together estranged hearts and heals the sores of bitterness and strife.

It seems to be the desire of men to shun the path of affliction. Were we to choose, we would never be found walking along its rugged path. The great aim seems to be to fortify against coming trials or to mitigate their severity. We overlook the fact that there is a discipline in the trying visitations of providence, which God sees to be necessary for us and which He in mercy sends, regardless of our opposition. It is for this reason, in part, that He is represented as choosing His people “out of the furnace of affliction,” where the dross and sin are consumed.

The most illustrious saints, those whose names we delight to honor, were those whom God had refined as silver by His own appointed means, which seemed too hard for flesh and blood to bear. Even Christ, “the captain of our salvation,” is declared to have been made perfect through suffering.

The road that leads to destruction is wide and strewn with flowers; but the path that leads to lasting pleasures at God’s right hand is one of tribulation, and, though wisely and mercifully appointed, may seem strangely mysterious. God’s ways in all this “are not as our ways,” nor His thoughts as our thoughts.

When shall we fully realize that Jehovah is wise, as He is supremely good? When shall we learn that it is His right to appoint the rules and discipline of life which are needful to prepare fit subjects for His kingdom? Why should we shrink from the appointments of a kind Father, who has promised to take us to Himself and is qualifying us for that rest which He holds in store for His children?

According to the Scriptures, the discipline of suffering is founded upon divine wisdom and love. There seems to be a divine reason for every feature of human suffering and disappointments. Everything that God orders is for man’s good. Men are being tested and educated for positions of honor and trust. This life is given to us to lead us to what we should be, and not to remain what we are. The host that marches to victory in any great warfare is trained and hardened by enduring hardness, so every Christian must be disciplined if he would win the victory and receive a crown of life in the age to come.

We are told in Revelation that John saw a great multitude in heaven which stood before the throne of God and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes and with palms in their (over)

I Am Waiting

I am waiting, ever waiting,
For the brighter, better day,
Just beyond the clouds and shadows,
That surround my way;
For a day of light and gladness,
Such as earth has never known,
When in equity and justice,
Christ shall reign on David’s throne.

All the prophets of past ages
Saw its brightness from afar,
And in words sublime have spoken
Of the peace and glory there.
They have slept in those green valleys,
Which in weariness they trod;
Soon they’ll come with songs of triumph,
To the holy mount of God.

Now the world is full of suffering,
Sounds of woe fall on my ears,
Sights of wretchedness and sorrow
Fill my eyes with pitying tears.
’Tis the earth’s dark night of weeping;
Wrong and evil triumph now;
I can wait, for just before me
Beams the morning’s roseate glow.

I am waiting, hoping, praying,
For Messiah’s glorious reign,
For I know He’ll rule in justice,
Right and truth will triumph then.
Worldly pleasures cannot win me,
While I wait for that bright day,
Worldly splendor cannot charm me,
While its light beams on my way.

—D. H. Roberts.

hands, and which cried with a loud voice, saying, "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." The question was asked, "What are these which are arrayed in white robes and whence came they?" The answer was, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." How superbly grand! "They have come up out of great tribulation," distressing trials which they endured with patience for Christ's sake, for His kingdom and glory, cleansed from sin and made righteous in the atoning blood of the Lamb, "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

IS JEALOUSY A SIN?

By D. G. Harvey

---

RECENTLY the question was asked of the writer, "Is jealousy a sin?" My answer aside from God's Word could be of no value. We read in Exodus 20:5, "I the Lord thy God am a jealous God," and in Proverbs 6:34, "For jealousy is the rage of a man."

That there are two degrees of jealousy there can be no doubt. Let us consult Webster. We learn that he gives us two definitions: anxiety or care which are godlike in character. For example (Joel 2:18), "Then will the Lord be jealous (anxious or care) for his land, and pity his people." Paul, the great teacher of the early church, was jealous of the Corinthian church with a "godly jealousy" (he cared for them). 2 Corinthians 11:2.

Webster's second definition can only refer to the jealousy of man: "suspicion, distrust," of which the wise man writes, "Jealousy is cruel as the grave."—Song of Solomon 8:6.

Man's jealousy is based upon selfishness. For example, because of King Saul's jealousy of his son Jonathan, and of David, in a fit of anger he attempted to kill his son. 1 Samuel 20:17-34. Jealousy has been the cause of wars, strife, hard words; and it always brings grief and sorrow.

God's jealousy is always just and righteous, for God cares for us. 1 Peter 5:7. He provides all our needs (Matt. 6:8; Phil. 4:19); He gives us every good and perfect gift (James 1:17) and everything for our good (Romans 8:28). God cared for Daniel in the lions' den, for the Hebrew children in the fiery furnace, for Israel at the Red Sea and in the wilderness. He cared for the disciples of His Son when they went forth without funds or extra clothing to carry the good news to others (Mark 6:7-10; Matt. 10:9, 10).

But the jealousy of men is unjust and unrighteous. It is caused by envy of others, perhaps by their better work or greater wealth or honors. Man's jealousy is based on selfish desires, self-glory, self-exaltation. We do not find the ever-faithful Paul had such desires. Hear him: "Did I make a gain of you?"—2 Corinthians 12:17. "Not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many."—1 Corinthians 1:33. "With brotherly love; in honour preferring one another."—Romans 12:10. "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."—Philippians 2:4.

Oh, if the brethren could learn this lesson of cooperation from Paul! We are all workers together. Why, then, the envy, the jealousy of others? Jealousy always suspects evil. Paul tells Timothy and us the reason why this is true in Titus 1:15.

Jealousy is based on self-worship instead of worship of the Creator (Romans 1:25) and results in hate, strife, murder, pride, ignorance, and the works of the flesh. Galatians 5:19-21; 2 Timothy 3:1-5. You say, perhaps, these are strong words. They are, to be sure; but please read 1 Timothy 6:1-5, and if you study the sixth verse you will find such things are ungodly.

Why do ministers often speak lightly of others? Why do church brethren seem to love to repeat scandals? For the same reason that children often come to blows in their games: jealousy.

But the Word gives the final results of such acts: "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."—Galatians 5:15. And again our Master tells us of a class who will say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and begin to smite its fellow laborers. When the Lord does come, such a one is cut asunder and given his portion with the hypocrites. Matthew 24:48-51.

It is no marvel if the world hates you, but it is a marvel if hate remains in the hearts of the brethren, whom John describes thus: "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death."—1 John 3:14. It is, indeed, one thing the world sees and marvels at.

MISCELLANY

A day's journey was about thirty-three and one-half miles.

A Sabbath day's journey was about an English mile.

A cubit was nearly twenty-two inches; it is said by some to have been eighteen inches.

A hand's breadth is equal to three and five-eighths inches.

A finger's breadth is one inch.

A shekel of silver was about fifty cents.

A shekel of gold was $8.09.

A talent of silver was $538.32.

A talent of gold was $13,000.00.

A piece of silver or a penny was thirteen cents.

A farthing was three cents.

A mite was less than a fourth of a cent.

A gerah was one cent.

An ephah, or bath, contains seven gallons and five pints.

A hin was one gallon and two pints.

A firkin was seven pints.

An omer was six pints.

A cab was three pints.—Lyman Booth.

THEISM OR ATHEISM?

PART 2

IN PURSUING our subject, it will be well to reflect that there is no difficulty or objection whatever in the creed of theism that is got rid of by substituting atheism for it.

The idea of an eternal personal God is, no doubt, an incomprehensible idea. Our finite minds sink and faint when we earnestly seek in any adequate measure to comprehend it. An eternal I Am, self-existing, underived, uncaused, is truly a thought which the more and the longer it is looked at overwhelms us in astonishment and awe. We cannot picture this aspect of Deity more strongly than it is brought before us in the Book of Job and in many parts of inspired Scripture. "Canst thou by searching," we are asked, "find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know? The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea."—Job 11:7-9.

But while this is so, we ask whether the idea of an eternal creative force, self-existing, underived, uncaused, is one whit more comprehensible? Matter, with its inherent forces from eternity, is fully as incomprehensible as an eternal God. Our minds sink and fail before the one fully as much as before the other.

We are often appalled at the sight of the evil and the misery that abound in the world and are tempted to ask how they could exist under such a God as the Bible speaks of, or even such a God as Cicero and Socrates believed in. But how would our aspect towards evil be improved by substituting atheism for theism? To our mind the whole question of evil would only be intensified and the future appear clothed in blacker colors than ever. If we think it unjust or unloving or a mark of weakness in God to permit evil, we could only rid ourselves of this through atheism by the awful idea of the necessity of evil. What creative force produced, it must needs produce. There is an abounding evil; therefore, creative force produced it; therefore, it could not help producing it, and is utterly without care in producing it. What a fearful thought this is, whether we regard the present or the future!

Evil is. Therefore evil must be. It is not going too far to say, therefore, evil will always be! It is thus that an atheist pictures the evil of the world. "In common life," says Haeckel in The History of Creation, "we shall rather find everywhere a pitiless, most embittered struggle of all against all . . . we find everywhere a struggle and a striving to annihilate neighbors and competitors. Passion and selfishness, conscious or unconscious, are everywhere the motive force of life." Such is the evil of the world, according to an atheist. According to his creed, this evil must be. What a fearful look-out, from which many would be tempted to rush away through suicide if, indeed, in suicide they might hope for an escape from overwhelming thought.

But what if it could not? We were not asked if we could have life. According to the atheist, it was forced upon us through necessity. The remonstrance of Byron against a personal God may be addressed with equal energy to creative force:

"Did I entreat Thee, Maker, from my clay
To make me man? Did I solicit Thee
From darkness to promote me? My will Concurred not with my being."

This opens, under the atheistic system, the possibility of existence being forced upon us in another life not less miserable than this, perhaps more so. This is, indeed, a most fearful thought. We shudder at the thought of the hell of Augustine, a scene of endless misery and despair! We reject it, not merely as contrary to what the Bible teaches us, but as contrary to all our notions of a good God.

But into the atheistic theory the ideas of mercy and goodness and justice cannot enter. They have no place there. Its one law is a relentless necessity, thoughtless and careless of suffering. A universal wail from all its creation might go up, but creative force has no ear to hear. In it man has no refuge from the most terrible of possibilities. A Creator may hear and have mercy and permit evil for the sake of good and one day put an end to it forever. But atheism has none and can have none of this. That creative force, whose workings are unchangeable by any sense of mercy and pity, may in its necessary working force upon unhappy man an eternal life of misery. If it be the originator of creation, it is a mighty originator. It is fully capable of—perhaps it could not avoid—forcing upon its creature man eternal woe. Atheism is a terrific idea. At best, it is hopeless for good. At worst, it is terrific for evil. It promises no blessing. It rids man of no terrible fear.

The history of humanity is unfavorable to atheism, so much so as to be in our judgment subversive of it. The system from whence atheism would derive us and our universe has been generally denied by its chief creation, man. There may be at times a more than usual tendency towards atheism or at least a more general expression of it in the mouths of men; but, as a general rule, atheism has, in various nations and generations of the world, been denied and rejected by man. In proof of this we will just cite two witnesses, whose competency to judge no one will be able to deny, the great Christian philosopher, Lord Bacon, and the acute and infidel historian, Hume.

"Against atheists," Lord Bacon says, "the very savages themselves take part with the very subtlest philosophers. The contemplative atheist is rare: a Diagoras, a Bion, a Lucian, perhaps; and yet they seem to be more than they are; for all that impugn a received religion, or superstition, are, by the adverse part, branded with the name of atheists."

David Hume, the historian, states the case as accurately as in our judgment it is capable of being stated. "The only point of theology," he says, "in which we will find a consent of mankind almost universal, is that there is invisible, intelligent power in the world; but whether this power be supreme or subordinate, whether confined to one Being, or distributed among several, what attributes, qualities, connections, or principles of action ought to be ascribed to these beings; concerning all these points, there is the widest difference in the popular systems of theology." (Bacon's Essays.)

As a rule, mankind has believed in a God or in gods, and has rejected as an incredible thing that the universal frame of nature is without a presiding and ruling mind.

The general consent of mankind is not an argument lightly to be set aside. Any idea generally entertained must be assumed as having a foundation in the reality of things. Atheism has been over and over presented to the human mind for its acceptance, but it has not accepted it. It has appeared to human judgment and human feeling as irrational, insufficient, and undesirable.

It is vain to say that interested parties have created by their teaching a general prejudice against a great truth. The real state of the matter is that theism is so accordant to the human mind that interested parties have been able to trade upon the idea in the most various and grossest manner. The original conception of one God has been degraded by polytheism. Objects of the meanest kind have been chosen as objects of worship. But still, the great human heart has, through all these perversions and corruptions, refused to admit the idea of atheism as unsuited to the universe. Surely creative force, however blind, could not have brought forth its highest creation, man, incapable of acknowledging the source from whence he sprang, able to acquiesce in any and every theistic system, but unable to accept that of atheism.—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis.

WHY SHOULD I HELP THE JEWS?

A CLERGYMAN was once walking along a back street in one of the poorer quarters of a provincial city. As he went on his way, his eye caught a notice displayed prominently in a shop window:

"No Jew Supplied Here."

Struck by the announcement, he determined to find out why such a notice had been displayed, and entering the shop he questioned a woman standing behind the counter on the subject.

"Supply a Jew! Why should I?" she exclaimed. "I hate the lot of them. They are a cunning, dirty set of thieving scoundrels. No! As long as I own this shop, no Jew shall be supplied by me."

"Pardon me," said the clergyman, speaking with quiet dignity, "but will you answer me one question? Will you tell me to what religion you belong?"

"I am a good Catholic," came back the reply, "and I don't want any of these Jews coming round me here."

The clergyman saw his opportunity and seized it immediately.

"You are a good Catholic," he said. "Well, suppose for a moment that the Blessed Virgin Mary were to come back to earth and walk along this street and find that she needed something out of your shop. Suppose she were to open the door and walk in and ask to be supplied. Would you supply her?"

"Supply the Blessed Virgin! Why, sir, it would be the greatest honor I could ever have in this world or the next. Of course I would, I would give her the very best of everything and not one penny would I take from her in return."

The clergyman paused before he drove his advantage home. Then he said gently, "But do you know to what nation the Virgin Mary belonged?"

As the woman remained silent, he supplied the answer. "Why, the Virgin Mary, whom you honor above all women to a greater extent, I believe, than she herself would have wished, was a Jewess, one of the race you despise so thoroughly and for whom you have not a good word to say. And furthermore, remember that, as Mary was a Jewess, her son the Lord Jesus Christ, your Savior and mine, was a Jew according to the flesh, and that it cannot be pleasing to Him that we should act unkindly towards even the humblest of those who can claim relationship with our Lord."

"Ah! sir," she replied, "I never looked on it in that way. And to tell you the truth, sir, I never knew that the Blessed Virgin was a Jewess."

Needless to say, the notice in the shop window which gave rise to this incident was taken down, and Jews were ever after given a welcome when they came to buy.

This true story compels us to think. The poor woman erred through ignorance, and having realized her error she immediately made amends. Are there not some of us who in this matter are guilty of sinning against the light? We have known from our childhood that Jesus came of the seed of Abraham and of the tribe of Judah, we have realized all He has done for us, and yet we have not one kind word to say on behalf of the Jew. When a conversation turns on Jewish matters, we shrug our shoulders and say, "Jews! Not for me! I will have nothing to do with Jews."

Do we realize that, in spite of the sin of which Jewry is guilty—that of crucifying Christ—and in spite of the hardness of heart amongst Jews today, God still loves Israel. Listen to the Word of God concerning the Jew, "Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine" (Isaiah 43:1), and again, "Fear not, O Jacob, my servant; and thou, Jesurun, whom I have chosen" (Isaiah 44:2), and again, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee" (Jeremiah 31:3).

Surely, if that be the mind of God Himself toward Israel, we cannot, we dare not, adopt an attitude of disdain toward that nation. No! a thousand times no! Realizing God's love for the Jews and all the spiritual blessings we owe to Him, we should look on the members of the Chosen Race, not as outcasts unworthy of consideration by respectable people, but as the chosen of God and kinsmen of the Lord Jesus Christ according to the flesh, and therefore entitled to the greatest sympathy and consideration at the hands of Christians.—The Bible Advocate.

WHAT A FRIEND WE HAVE IN JESUS

By Dr. J. B. Chapman

WE FREQUENTLY hear the expression, "Which is your favorite hymn?" But there "isn't any such animal." We have a hundred favorites, and it would be difficult—yes, very difficult—to reduce that list. Did you ever notice that as you go about your daily work you sing the hymns best suited to the mood in which you find yourself? Well, we personally have a hundred moods and require a large number of hymns to fit them. But in that list is, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." There has been some question as to the authorship of this hymn, some accrediting it to Horatius Bonar, but, Joseph Scriven claimed that "the Lord and I did it between us."

Ira D. Sankey, in his "Life Story," in speaking of this wrote: "We were in error in assigning the words to him (II. Bonar). Some years afterwards, Dr. Bonar informed us that he was not the author, and that he did not know who wrote it. It was not until six or eight years after that that we learned who the author really was."

Joseph Scriven was a very modest man, yet this hymn has a world-wide audience, second to none. In every land it may be heard, and millions have been thrilled and helped by its ministry. Mr. Scriven was born in Ireland in 1820, but came to Canada at the age of twenty-five. Though a graduate of Trinity College and a man of refinement, he chose humble duties and often could be seen walking down the streets of Port Hope, where he lived, dressed as a plain working-man and carrying a saw-horse and a saw, on a mission of sawing wood for some widow or sick person. It was only a short time before his death that it was discovered that he had a poetic gift. A neighbor, sitting up with him, in his illness, happened upon a manuscript copy of "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." He acknowledged that he had written it for his mother to comfort her in a time of special sorrow. He had not intended that anyone else should see it.

Mr. Scriven had trials of his own, for it is recorded that on the eve of his wedding day, the young lady to whom he was to be married was drowned. Read and sing the hymn with this thought in mind.

"What a Friend we have in Jesus
All our sins and griefs to bear!
What a privilege to carry
Everything to God in prayer!
O, what peace we often forfeit
O, what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer!"

The outstanding words of this hymn are two in number: "Friend," "prayer."

What a comfort and blessing a true friend is! One who will give sympathetic ear to our trials, and sorrows. Jesus is such a Friend. He will never betray our confidences nor belittle our confessions. He is ever ready to guide, to help, and to comfort in time of need.

"Have we trials and temptations?
Is there trouble anywhere?
We should never be discouraged;
Take it to the Lord in prayer.
Can we find a friend so faithful
Who will all our sorrows share?
Jesus knows our every weakness,
Take it to the Lord in prayer!"

Prayer is supplication unto a higher power for help. It is not necessarily voiced in words, but in the devotion and yearning of the whole being. It is far more than begging; it is adoration and love and faith combined. It tells of our need and the sufficiency of the higher power; of our weakness and his strength; of our helplessness and his might and power; of our sin and his righteousness and mercy.

Prayer helps and satisfies; it brings relief to heaven itself. It is the magic touch that turns troubled minds and forms the connecting link with night into day; shadows into sunshine, and care into joy and gladness.

"Are we weak and heavy laden,
Cumbered with a load of care?
Precious Saviour, still our refuge—
Take it to the Lord in prayer.
Do thy friends despise, forsake thee?
Take it to the Lord in prayer;
In His arms He'll take and shield thee,
Thou wilt find a solace there."

Pray on, dear heart: you may not always receive what you ask, but from those prayers you will rise regirded for the strife and conscious of new strength. Cast your burdens on Jesus in full trust and confidence, and His promise is, "I will never forsake you!"

"Can we find a friend so faithful
Who will all our sorrows share?
Jesus knows our every weakness,
Take it to the Lord in prayer."

IN ESTHER 3:9 we read that Haman offered to give ten thousand talents of silver to have all the Jews killed who were living in the one hundred twenty-seven provinces of the Persian Empire. Taking the value of a talent of silver as $538.32, we find the amount to be $5,383,200, a princely sum to give to satisfy his spirit of hatred for one man, Mordecai. He had a gallows fifty cubits high erected on which to hang Mordecai. Through the prayers and influence of one noble woman, Mordecai's life was preserved and Haman and his ten sons were hanged upon that gallows, a striking example of the manner in which intended injuries to others revert and fall upon the evil designers. Haman's wealth and political position did not save him from a swift and just retribution.—Lyman Booth.

FAILURE OF YOUTH

ECCLESIASTES 11:9, 10; 12:1-6

WE FIND that the youth of today are backward in active service for God. The reason is despondency. Yet we (the youths) have nothing to be despondent over, for we are depending on some one else for our schooling, our food, our clothing, and a place to sleep. The reason for this lack of interest is lack of spending money, lack of clothes, lack of comradeship, and lack of understanding.

But you say the younger generation has more than their parents have. Yes, that is true, but times have changed. These are only youthful lusts. Paul says, "Flee also youthful lusts; but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace." The longing of youth for clothing better than the other fellow's, and pleasures, are only "lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life."—1 John 2:16. A few of these youthful lusts are classified as follows: love of fine clothing, lust of the flesh; love of good looks, and desiring property of others are the "lust of the eyes"; having a fairly good education and, as modern slang puts it, "rubbing it in" on our less fortunate brother or sister are the "pride of life."

The older generation says that it does not know what this generation is coming to, because it is so high and mighty, not minding, but doing as it pleases. Timothy says that "in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." The youth of today are all of these and more. Yet are not the elderly people as a whole as greedy and grasping as young men or women are?

What is wrong? for this should not be. Is youth to blame for the condition they are in? Or are the elderly people, the parents, to blame? As a youth I would say that the parents are to blame. The parents say the children are to blame. A case that I know of is in my mind as an example of the reason for the wildness of youth.

A small child of a friend is always into some kind of meanness such as breaking windows, throwing rocks, or fighting. Yet whenever he does one of these, his parents only say, "Now don't do that again, or I will whip you!" But he never gets a spanking; as a result, in less than an hour he does the same thing over again. Who is to blame, the child or the parents?

I agree with that learned man Solomon when he says, "He that spareth the rod hateth his son"; in another place, "foolishness is bound in the heart of a child, but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him"; "withhold not correction from the child; for if thou beat him with the rod, he shall not die"; "thou shall beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell"; "the rod and reproof give wisdom, but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame"; "correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul." If these exhortations are followed rightly the child is greatly benefited by being punished.

Solomon states, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Do these scriptures prove anything to you? To me they mean this: the parents are to blame for the conduct of the youth by not correcting their children in their early years.

Paul gives us his blessing and asks the youth to obey and do all manner of good. Please read 1 Timothy 4:12 to 16, inclusive.

WHEN TIME SHALL BE NO MORE

THE words were uttered by an angel of thunderous voice under circumstances so strangely impressive that they command our immediate attention and deepest interest. "The angel . . . lifted up his hand to heaven, and swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, . . . that there should be time no longer."—Revelation 10:5, 6.

Marvelous, indeed, were the visions seen and the voices heard by John on the Isle of Patmos! In a grand phantasmagoria it was given him to see the rapidly changing scenes of the distant future. The approaching events of time came sweeping into the range of his vision, only to recede as quickly as they came, giving place to others even more astonishing and awe-inspiring in their nature.

First, this remarkable pronouncement indicated that when the scroll of history should unwind to this point thenceforth there should be no delay in carrying to completion the outpouring of divine judgments upon the world. Thereafter event would succeed event with most startling rapidity.

Beyond the primary significance of the prophecy there is found a suggestion of quite a different nature, but of equal interest, and it is to that that I will invite your thoughtful consideration. How difficult it is for mortals to grasp! That the day will come when time, as we understand and experience it now, shall be no more!

Time is the period between two points in the experience of men. It is an indicator of mortality. Time marks off the moments, hours, days, and years during which men labor and hope. How meaningless time would be were men not mortal! If we were to live on and on, just as we are today, what would we care for the passage of time? No matter how prolonged the task to which we set ourselves, we would be sure of an abundance of time to complete it. Time would scarcely enter into our plans at all.

Time, therefore, is the span of a man's present mortal existence. It marks the limits of our lives, the length of our days, the duration of our being. All the way along time is connected with mortality, a constant reminder and evidence of our mortality.

Moses defined the idea of time clearly: "We spend our years as a tale that is told. The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow: for it is soon cut off, and we fly away."

Every plan we make, every work we undertake, every purpose we formulate is dependent upon time for its success. We are compelled to take time into consideration, for time is the material of which life is made.

James asserts that life is "even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James 4:14) and that we cannot tell what a day will bring forth.

The Psalmist, admonishing us to place our faith in God rather than in men, cries: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:3, 4. Our dependence upon man must be limited by the brief span of his life. Everywhere we go, whatever we attempt to do, wherever we look we find ourselves held back behind the bars of the prison house of time.

Our text, however, suggests the possibility that some day we shall be freed from the restrictions and fetters of time and be made to forget the sorrows of frustrated hopes and the despair that follows our failures to accomplish all that we set out so joyfully to do. But before that wonderful day shall dawn, and Time give way to Eternity, "this mortal shall have put on immortality," and death shall have been swallowed up of life!—Editor.

CHRISTIAN DISCIPLINE

By George B. Alldridge

---

"As a good soldier of Christ Jesus accept your share of suffering."—2 Timothy 2:3, Weymouth.

A FEW weeks ago in the pictorial supplement of a Sunday newspaper appeared an article setting forth the account of the creation of the world and our first parents, Adam and Eve, from records made in Egypt, which the writer declares antedate the time of Moses.

God never ignores human knowledge and learning if the possessor devotes it to His service and glory.

Two characters stand out in the Bible as an example of this premise: Moses and Saul of Tarsus. Saul, or Paul, speaking of himself, says, "I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God."

Of Gamaliel it is said, "Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people."

Stephen says of Moses, "And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds."

If critics would only thoughtfully read the Scriptures before passing judgment upon matters they but dimly understand, I feel sure they would confess with Cowper:

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan His work in vain;
God is His own interpreter,
And He will make it plain."

Hence, then, if Moses' account agrees with the account recently discovered in Egypt, it is not difficult for my mind, at least, to see that God takes advantage of knowledge and learning acquired by men, even though it may be through human channels.

There is nothing impossible with God (except to lie or to deny Himself), but He in His wisdom sees the end from the beginning, as He told Jeremiah: "I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me."

The writer does not accept the teachings of Calvinism, although his early religious training was of that school. Tennyson expresses the thought I have in mind:

"Yet I doubt not through the ages
One increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened
With the process of the suns."

Revelation 4:11 expresses that purpose: "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created."

Where could God have found a man more suitable than Moses to deliver His people from Egypt? Possibly Moses was heir-apparent to the throne of Egypt, being the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter. Read Hebrews 11:23-26. Today the great British Empire is utilizing the prestige and experience of its heir-apparent in enhancing the good will and material blessing of the whole empire.

You see, God first trains and educates a man or woman before He uses him for His divine purpose. How is this education attained? Jesus attained His through suffering, Moses and Paul likewise. None of us can escape it. The record is: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him; if we deny him, he also will deny us."

It is not a question whether we will take part in the battle of life or not. We must do so. We cannot help ourselves if we would. The question is, upon whose side are we enlisted, God's or the world's? Famous men and women are dying every day. Rich or poor, they had to struggle. But for whom did they fight, God or Mammon? We cannot serve both.

If you are on Christ's side, then it means self-denial. If you reject Christ, you will have to fight anyway to live. But to win a victory that counts for eternity is possible only under the banner of Christ.

Not many miles from my boyhood home stands the beautiful ruins of Netley Abbey. It was hammered down and pillaged during the reign of that monster of infamy, King

Henry VIII. The Cistercian monks who owned and lived in it were noted for their lives of self-denial. It is said they slept on the planks of wooden boxes, and unless food were given them in alms they ate neither fish, flesh, fowl, eggs, butter, nor cheese, but only a spare porridge twice a day and in Lent once. They never spoke except sometimes in their parlor, and then only on religious topics; and on a journey they could only ask questions, which they must ask, if possible, by signs. They that transgressed the rules were whipped or stretched upon the stone floor during mass. For their greater humiliation the heads of the order were entirely shaven, and the monks went about bareheaded and clothed in white robes.

This is not the Bible teaching of suffering.

Shakespeare tells us how the world views failure:

“The painful warrior, famed for fight,
After a thousand victories, once foiled,
Is from the book of honor razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toiled.”

How does God deal with a warrior who fights on His side, though often foiled? Well, listen to the words of one of Job's friends: “When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save the humble person.”—Job 22:29.

Moses and Paul were both learned and well informed, yet God was continually lifting them up and whispering in their ears, “My grace is sufficient for thee.”

With all their remarkable intelligence they remained humble. Humility expressed by the spirit of obedience is hard to acquire. How God's great heart of love must rejoice as He beholds one of His children richly endowed mentally encountering some great affliction and conquering it, to see his valor in not sinking at the hardest distresses of life.

A trial occasionally when we are prosperous does not mean much; but when we are plied with one affliction at the heels of another, to have them come thronging in multitudes and of different kinds is often the portion of those who are the beloved of God. But Paul says, “Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life: that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.” Note that little word, “chosen.” God chose Moses and Paul; and, my dear brother, He has chosen you.

Upon March fourth a new president was inaugurated. Why was he appointed by his fellow citizens to fill this high office? Because they felt his remarkable intelligence and experience are the best to fill this office. Yet probably his presidency will last only for a period of four years. Paralysis seized him, and he became helpless. What brought him to the high pinnacle he occupies today? It was the force of his indomitable will overcoming all opposition and enabling him to reach the goal of his ambition, the presidency of the United States of America.

God is calling for men and women to be educated and trained through the force of disciplinary measures He uses to fit them to be the rulers of the coming age and for eternity. Oh, friends, what an opportunity and what an education to attain! It means perfection!

Is it worth the struggle? Let me quote: “Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward.” This was Moses' inspiration and secret in his struggles.

Now, Paul, what was yours? Ah, yes, I remember: “Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ.”

Brother and reader, what is your inspiration in overcoming suffering? Here is mine: “That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.” How true the words of Whittier are:

“Not to him who rashly dares,
But to him who nobly bears
Is the victor's garland sure.”

would require some two hundred fifty pounds of lewisite, one of the deadliest gases, (three hundred pounds of mustard) to cover an area of three hundred square feet. To do away with the two thousand reported as killed, the robot airplane shot down within the city would have to carry approximately four and one quarter tons of gas, an obvious impossibility. Indeed, it is not improbable that, as was true in the World War, more will be killed by disease than by gas. Thomas Phillips in The Saturday Evening Post remarks that mustard gas is the most valuable military gas known, and adds that even it no longer is classified as deadly.

Horrors of bombing are dreams. An Austrian skoda shell would smash a bomb-proof shelter like tin; the World War established that. The most powerful bombs possessed by the United States Navy have not sunk obsolete battleships in tests. Artillery fire is far more accurate and, consequently, more effective. And the kernel of truth in “Night of Terror” neutralizes any invasion by airplanes controlled by radio: automatically sighted anti-aircraft guns shoot higher than any 'plane can fly, with or without a man, and it is almost impossible for them to miss.

Any war is dreadful, but there is no necessity for painting the picture of Armageddon in too brilliant colors. It is the occasion of God's fighting “as when he fought in the day of battle” that will stamp the crisis to come with indescribable terror. When Jehovah's earthquakes make the destruction of San Francisco a petty matter, men will fear; and not until then will their fright exceed that engendered by any war. Such are the implications of Zechariah and of Joel in the concluding chapters of their books.

"YET A LITTLE WHILE, AND HE THAT SHALL COME WILL COME, AND WILL NOT TARRY."

SOLDIERS OF CHRIST

WHILE walking my post in a military camp, it occurred to me that I was there to learn to protect my home and government. Nothing must interfere with my duty. Then the thought came to me in this light: we Christians are also training for a conflict against evil.

The dead military heroes came into my mind. We honor them for their sacrifice to protect their ideals and country. The Christian martyrs died to spread the gospel. We are to protect and carry on what they could not finish in their time. Each of us has a higher authority to guide and direct us in training for our respective battles.

There is a similarity in the two forms of duty. The military sentinel has a set path that he must follow in patrol for a few hours, while the Christian must follow a set path through his entire life. The sentinel must obey his superiors' commands to the letter, while we must obey the Great Commander. The sentinel must walk in a manner becoming a soldier, and we must conduct ourselves in a way worthy of our calling. The soldier, after a few hours on duty, relaxes his watchfulness and falls asleep. We seem to copy his habits, for after walking the straight and narrow path, we fall asleep or think we can do as we like as long as we are not caught. But the Great Commander gets the report, and the just penalty is passed on us—death and loss of our hoped-for honor in the future life.

By this time, the thoughts of armor came to me. The ordinary soldier has not enough to protect him. He has a revolver or an automatic pistol, a gas mask, and his ability to run. But what has the Christian to protect himself? Nothing, so far as the eye can see; but guns are not necessary for a soldier of Christ.

This scripture makes the above point clear: "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh: for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." This reminded me of Jericho.

In place of guns or weapons of destruction—"For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intends of the heart."

To find the rest of the armor, read Ephesians 6:11-17 and 1 Thessalonians 5:8, 9. These words sum up the matter better than my own would:

"Just where you stand in the conflict

There is your place.

Just where you think you are useless

Hide not your face.

God placed you there for a purpose

Whate'er it be;

Think—He has chosen you for it!

Work loyally.

Gird on your armor! Be faithful

At toil or rest.

Whate'er it be, never doubting

God's way is best.

Out in the fight or the picket

Stand firm and true;

This is the work which your Master

Gives you to do."

Charles Martin, Kokomo, Indiana.

HOW CAN I KEEP FROM SINGING?

"I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being."

What tho' my joys and comforts die?

The Lord my Savior liveth.

What tho' the darkness gather round?

Songs in the night He giveth;

No storm can shake my inmost calm

While to that refuge clinging;

Since Christ is Lord of heaven and earth,

How can I keep from singing?

An authority on the Hebrew language recently stated that at present ninety-eight per cent of the Jewish population of Palestine speak Hebrew. This means 160,000 who are enthusiastic for the language as it brings a practical unity into the life of the land. The University of Jerusalem has made its courses on the Hebrew language available to Gentile and Jew.

JESUS HELPING

THE very first lesson of the new quarter shows us that Jesus loves not only the children of His own race but those of other races as well. You know Jesus said that because His Father loved the whole world so much, He gave His only Son to be our Savior. How many of you know where to find that verse?

Jesus never refused aid to anyone who came to Him in faith, and here was a woman who belonged to another race. She was a Grecian woman, and her little girl was ill with about the saddest kind of illness. Her mind was not right.

When the dear Savior saw how sure the little girl's mother was that He would heal her He told her to go back home and she would find the little girl well. How wonderful that Jesus didn't even need to go to the little girl's home!

Just as Jesus said, when the mother reached home she found her daughter well and happy, resting upon her little bed. And we know the dear mother at once told her all about her visit to the Savior and what He had done for them. This little girl did not belong to the Jewish race, but she was one of Jesus' little ones just the same.

Those of you who live in large cities see children of many races every day. Some of them are even in your room at school perhaps. Now if Jesus came to be their Savior as well as ours and was kind to them, we should be kind to them also.

In one of my books I found some verses telling about the different little babies of the world. They would be fine for an exercise on Children's Day in June. Here they are:

"In India, land of spreading palms,
The small brown babe is swung
In tiny hammock, made of cloth,
'Neath some rude shelter hung;
In jewels fine the babe is dressed,
She needs but scanty clothes,
But rings and bracelets load her arms,
And rings and bells her toes.

"The Chinese baby lies upon
A basket for a bed;
When very warm it shows they love
Celestials small, 'tis said;
'Oy! Oy! Oy! Oy! nue ya tin

Tehmeh taai!' the mother croons;
The almond eyes in slumber close
To such bewitching tunes.

"Japan is 'Children's Paradise,'
So baby takes his ease
Upon mamma's or sister's back
As happy as you please;
The little girls may run and jump,
He nods a sweet assent;
And if he ever cries, be sure
It is an accident!

"The baby boy in Africa—
That land so large and warm—
In a hammock on his mother's back
Sleeps well, secure from harm;
And when she's weary, in the sand
She tucks her little man,
For, though the sun upon him shines
She's not afraid he'll tan.

"Upon the plains so desolate
An Indian babe we see;
His mother binds him to a board
And swings him from a tree.
Poor little Indian papoose,
He cannot kick or crawl,
And only when the bough breaks can
The baby get a fall.

"So everywhere the babies find
Soft cradles where they grow;
And everywhere the mother-love
Some lullaby sings low;
And everywhere these little ones
Are lambs of God's own flock;
So by-lo-by; sweet baby mine,
God will your cradle rock."

Clip these verses and paste them in your scrapbook for lesson 1; also write across the top of the page the words of John 3:16. We have two new members to begin the new quarter—Phyllis Tekanic of Cleveland, Ohio, and Jack Parsley from far away Texas. The boys and girls are keeping even, and almost half of our club is from Golden Rule Sunday School. Remember, "there's a reason"!

JESUS MINISTERING TO JEWS AND GENTILES

Mark 7:1-37

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 11:1-10

GOLDEN TEXT

Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and they shall be one fold, and one shepherd.—

John 10:16.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Ministering to Jews and Gen-

Aim: To lead the pupil to understand that people of all races who believe and obey the gospel are acceptable with God.

Basic Truth: "God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."—Acts 10:34, 35.

1. The Inescapable Christ. (V. 24.) It was impossible for Jesus to hide Himself from the suffering multitude as it will be for Him to escape the attention of the world when He comes again. He is "the light of the world," and eventually that light must penetrate to every darkened corner and illuminate every race. When He comes as "the lightning that shineth from the east even unto the west," every eye shall see him; and then it will not be His purpose to escape from the multitude, but it will be the desire of "the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, . . . and the mighty men," to hide themselves from His wrath. (Rev. 6:15-17.) But they will be unable to do so.

II. The Christ of All Races. (V. 25-30.) Traced by human genealogy, Jesus, like all of the apostles and prophets who have spoken upon three fronts. (1) "The lust of the flesh," (2) "The lust of the eyes," (3) "The pride of life." Each front is continually sending forth new problems, and every one is weighted down with potential destruction. With Christ as our General we can meet and conquer every problem and turn it into a source of blessing. Regardless of the nature or extent of the problem confronting any individual, Christ is looked upon all races as equal and worthy of the offer of salvation.

III. The Vestal Christ. (V. 31-36.) The one great purpose of Jesus was to preach the gospel of the kingdom of God and thereby glorify His Father in heaven. He possessed a rare faculty of being able to express the truth in such varied ways that all could understand. Thus in our present lesson He teaches the truth concerning the source of His message and power to one who was deaf and dumb by signs that he could easily understand.

IV. The Competent Christ. (V. 37.) "He hath done all things well" is an indisputable testimony to the power, the wisdom, and the perfection of Christ's character.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Jesus the Answer: Jesus is the answer to all our problems. Our lesson today is another link in the chain of evidences that confirms the

When Jesus was eight days old, He was taken to the temple. While there, Simeon, his arms, and blessed God, and said, . . . Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which Special problem: Discuss with your teacher the difference in the lives of the children under idolatrous religions and Christianity.—M. G.

Jesus gave His life for others. Others—not a select few, but all regardless of their position in life, their circumstances, or their nationality. One of the first things for us to learn, then, as followers of His, is to display the same consideration to all with whom we come in contact.

The Jews had been God's own people chosen from among the many nations of earth, but because they sinned and wandered away from Him, He turned to other races—Gentiles, they are sometimes called. It was hard for the Jews of Jesus' time to understand that, and that is what Jesus meant in verse 27 of the lesson. But notice how wonderfully Jesus regarded for a share, "crumbs," she called it, begged for a share. As we come into contact with them, with boys and girls of other races or color, let us show them the same kindly courtesy we do our own and be glad of the opportunity to help them learn the gospel of Jesus Christ. For only under that gospel can they be truly happy. Learn the last part of I Sam. 16:7.

The Jews were looking for a Messiah to bless only them, but God decreed that He should be for all and to all. "And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldst be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel; I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth."—Gen. 12:3.

SERVICE AT FLAGG CENTER

Through the kindly cooperation of Bro. G. M. Birkey arrangements were made for a service at Flagg Center, Ill., in the Methodist church on March 14. Bro. G. E. Marsh delivered a prophetic lecture, the theme of which was, "The Times in Which We Live." The commodious building was packed, and the audience listened most attentively to the inspiring address by our pastor. Sr. Rogers and her choir accompanied him and assisted with the music, several other members of the Oregon and Rockford churches also attending. We pray God's blessing will attend the sowing of the seed at Flagg Center.—M. G.

FONTHILL AND NIAGARA FALLS

Word from Bro. Austin states that he can (D. V.) be with us for our Annual May Meeting, which will be held May 26-28. Now is the time to begin boosting and praying for its success.

The Fonthill choir is preparing its Easter music, and Sr. Sullivan is getting her program for the Falls church in shape.

The General Conference published a very hopeful report in the last Herald, in which they gave the joyful news of a balanced budget, even a gain of eight hundred dollars, for last year. The N. B. I. is not a defunct institution. It is deserving of full confidence.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

In addition to the regular weekly services which have made up our program in the past, a devotional and prayer meeting is now being conducted each Tuesday night. We feel the need of drawing closer to God that we may at all times be assured of His directing care.

Bro. Richard Skeels, our senior elder, celebrated on March 10 his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary. More than fifty of our church family went to his home that night to show him how much we love and appreciate him and his good wife. They have lived in wedlock more than fifty-two years.

On March 12 our Sunday school numbered 301. When the superintendent asked how many were present for the first time 16 hands went up.

Among others to be confined to their homes recently have been Sr. Hall, and Bro. Harold Simpson. The latter has a painful injury in his hip, and is being missed in his capacity as church treasurer.

Our weekly class on fundamentals is being held on Saturday nights until Easter. We expect much good to result from this.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

RELIGIOUS CHAUTAUQUA

Lakeville, Indiana

On Sunday, March 26, Arlen Marsh will speak in the Christian Church at Lakeville, Indiana, in honor of the boys in Bro. E. S. Logan's Sunday school class of that church who have attended the class every Sunday for one year. The service will open a two-week religious chautauqua, meetings under various speakers to be held each evening during that time. J. H. Anderson will give an address on Monday, March 27.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof."—Psalm 46:1-3.

The world was shocked to hear of the earth moving in the vicinity of Long Beach and surrounding towns in Southern California. Though some towns were almost completely leveled to the ground it was with a great deal of relief that we found that none of our people were among those killed or injured in the catastrophe. Though Sr. Railsback had a very trying trip and was forced to turn back on her usual Friday travels in the Long Beach neighborhood, and was required to take a tortuous way back through vacant lots, filling stations, and to be on the alert for fire fighting equipment, she arrived in Los Angeles unhurt, though naturally in a nervous condition.

When the earth begins to move under anyone, only the greatest of fortitude will prevent a panicky feeling. We can hardly understand the Psalm quoted to mean that one should not be afraid when the earth shakes as it does in these earthquake times. But if we look farther along in the Psalm we see that it refers to the other kind of earthquake that we find in the political and economic world. The Lord be praised that the disaster was no worse.

Plans for the Quarterly Prophetic Meeting to be held in Pomona on April second (all day) are going forward. Bro. Lichty will deliver the regular morning discourse on the field of prophecy dealing with the "Return of Israel." In the afternoon Bro. Smead will speak on the subject, "An Unrighteous Peace"; and in the evening Bro. MacLeod will deliver an illustrated sermon, "Japan: The New Scourge of God." At the table at noon there will be a series of short talks by various of the leading members of the church of Southern California, the theme being, "The Task Before Us." At the table in the evening the theme will be, "Consecration." There will be a special session for the young people conducted by Srs. J. E. Adamson, MacLeod, and Kauffman. It is expected that the usual services in Los Angeles will be dismissed for that day.

Norman John MacLeod.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed at an out-of-town bank. Thank you!

WHO ELSE?

We have a "sock doll" and directions for making it—just the thing for inexpensive gifts for small children. It came from the Cornhusker State. Would you like to see it? Visit the Exhibit Room at the next General Conference.

Who else will share your ideas for Ladies' Aid work? Thank you.

Exhibit Committee.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

In Pasadena there is a dear little sister who exhibits so much heroism and true Christian courage that she has become an inspiration to all who are brought into contact with her. Having lost her mother in childhood, she was reared by her "Auntie." Upon reaching maturity she taught in a high school for years. Failing in health she was compelled to give up her position and make her home in the desert. But while still far from recovered in strength she returned to care for the invalid aunt who is now eighty-three years of age, with the dread enemy, creeping paralysis, slowly overcoming her powers and leaving her helpless.

This dear sister uses every ounce of her strength to perform her daily tasks of service, and does it cheerfully. She spends her resting periods in the study and memorizing of the Scriptures, and in reading The Restitution Herald. She finds our church paper interesting and often remarks about the helpful contributions she reads.

No mother ever had a daughter who could give her more gentle and loving care than Sr. (Miss) Ola Hillis gives her aunt, Sr. Mary Kimball. Write Sr. Hillis a cheering letter, but do not expect a reply, for that would add to her tasks. Her address is, 693 Santa Barbara, Pasadena, California.

Emma C. Railsback.

Sr. Railsback adds to the above report some very interesting details in a personal letter to the editor that serves to bring out vividly the horror of the events that transpired in California a week ago.

The first quake caught her at the home of Sr. Calkins, in Lynwood, which is between Los Angeles and Long Beach. While the house in which they were at the time was badly wrenched, dishes thrown to the floor, and doors burst open, Sr. Railsback succeeded in escaping without injury; and Sr. Calkins, an elderly woman, was carried out safely by her son.

She reports that the little brick church where they have worshiped for years was so badly wrecked that it is unsafe to use, and that the congregation is meeting at 1020 S. Burlington Avenue for the present. All of our families living in Long Beach escaped serious harm.

HERALD RECEIPTS

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Last Sunday night the topic at the church at headquarters was, "When the Earth Reels in the Grasp of God." The pastor suggested that earthquakes would assist in preparing the way for the coming of restitution.

Writing from South Pasadena where they are spending the winter, Bro. and Sr. Glen Starbuck of Rockford, Ill., say, "We look eagerly for The Herald's coming, and believe it is better each week."

We are glad that so many of our ministers are presenting special prophetic studies in these days when the Word of God is being so rapidly fulfilled. Nothing so arouses the desires of men to be prepared for the Lord's coming as to know that it is just at hand.

The first response to our recent appeal by letter to the subscribers of The Herald came from Sr. Alletta J. Renner of Mt. Carroll, Ill. We deeply appreciate the effort the brethren are making, and successfully making, to carry the paper through the present period of distress.

Bro. Frederick Claussen of our printing force left Sunday morning for Chicago, where he is to take a week of intensive study in the mechanism of the linotype machine. He was accompanied by his wife, who will go on to Indiana for a short visit with friends and relatives at Culver in that state.

One of our most faithful supporters, both spiritually and materially, is a brother in Canada who is working day and night (literally) to support his family. He draws a regular salary of eleven dollars per week, to which he is able to add a little by sign painting in the evening. Yet out of his limited earning he always finds something to send to The Herald to help along the Lord's work. How we thank God for such self-sacrificing ones.

MOTHERS: Are you helping the little ones with the Scrapbook Club conducted by Sr. Gesin from her place on the Children's Page? If you just knew how much pleasure the boys and girls are getting out of the scrapbook work we're sure you would do all you could to help it along. And then it is helping to fix important truths in their minds in such a way that they will never forget them, and that surely is worth while.

VALUE OF THE GOSPEL OF MARK

We will continue the study of the Gospel of Mark throughout the new quarter. While it is the shortest of the four inspired biographies of Jesus, the record of Mark presents the facts concerning Him in such a clear and vivid manner that it is of much value.

The language of Mark is unusually simple and easy to understand. Reflecting as he does the mind of Peter the fisherman, Mark gives us a picture of the Master that is intimate and detailed. The strokes of his brush are sure, he knows his subject thoroughly.

So vivid are his descriptions that we can plainly visualize the scenes he paints. We catch a glimpse of the Man with upturned face looking into heaven as He thanks God for the loaves and fishes. We fairly hear His words as He commands the stormy sea to subside. The look of agony, relieved by ecstatic glory, that marked His features as He hung upon the cross is clearly apparent.

The article on the Berean page in the last Herald, entitled, "The Kingdom of God," by Ellen Prichard of Kokomo, Ind., was worthy of any of our older doctrinal writers. It was well-organized, the text chosen most applicable, and for so brief an outline of truth it was remarkably complete.

Bro. H. W. Patterson, El Cajon, Calif., celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary last Friday, the seventeenth. Although having exceeded the normal allotment of years by a full decade, Bro. Patterson is still actively engaged in the service of the Lord he loves. May he continue to thus serve until the Master comes.

Sr. Howard Moore of Redbluff, Calif., in renewing for The Herald, says, "We enjoy the paper immensely while we are isolated from our church." Many of our isolated brethren write to the same effect. The Restitution Herald should be in every Church of God home, especially in the homes of those who do not enjoy local church privileges.

Bro. Enos Elton, Tustin, Calif., writes of the effects of the earthquake out there, and sends us a local paper containing a most interesting report of the disaster. We are glad to state that our brethren in Tustin were uninjured. Let us pray that all may likewise escape the terrors of the earthquakes predicted in the sixteenth chapter of Revelation which are to be a part of the tribulation horrors.

Remember, the next number is the Kingdom Special. It will contain articles on this important theme from the pens of Jas. A. Patrick, E. O. Stewart, and other writers. Get your orders in immediately. It would be wise to do as several have already done, place a standing order for several extra copies of each special issue as they come out to hand to your friends.

Some of our contributors are asking what the "dead line" is for the Easter issue. That is, when articles must reach us in order that they may have a place in that issue. To be sure that is included in the Easter number, which will all be in the hands of the printer by April 6, it will be necessary to have your articles reach us (with the exception of news), by April 4 or 5, to give time for editorial review.

MARK THE MAN

The following well-prepared synopsis of the life of Mark is taken from the recently issued "New Standard Encyclopedia," published by Funk and Wagnalls Company.

"Mark, or John with the surname Mark, was the author of the second Gospel. The incidental notices in the New Testament give the following facts: Mark was the son of Mary, a householder of Jerusalem, at whose home the early Christians held meetings in the days of persecution. He was a cousin of Barnabas.

"Peter calls him his 'son,' which means probably that he was converted to Christianity under Peter's ministry in Jerusalem. He came to Antioch from Jerusalem with Barnabas and Paul, and accompanied them as an assistant on their first missionary journey. But he left them at Perga and returned to Jerusalem. His action cost him Paul's confidence, and when Barnabas proposed to take him on a second journey Paul refused. The result was a separation, and Barnabas took Mark and went to Cyprus about 50 A. D.

"We hear nothing more of him until Paul's . . . Roman captivity (60 A. D.), when we learn that he was then in Rome, reconciled to Paul and esteemed by him, and was about to visit Asia Minor.

"At Rome, according to early tradition he wrote his Gospel, not altogether as his own work, but as containing the substance of Peter's preaching. Another tradition makes him the organizer and first bishop of the Alexandrian Church."

DOCTRINAL TEACHING FOR CHILDREN

Is it possible or desirable to teach doctrine to children in the Sunday school? This is a question that is agitating the minds of religious educators everywhere. We believe that there can be but one proper answer, and that is based on the true meaning of the word "doctrine," which is "teaching." If we can teach boys and girls about the first coming of the Lord, why can we not teach them about His second coming? If we can teach them the meaning of birth, as in the case of the Savior, why can we not teach them the meaning of death when applied to Him and to all men? And if it is possible to teach them of these doctrinal matters, why not others also?

PASS ON THE TORCH

Pass on the torch, pass on the flame,
Remember whence the glory came;
And eyes are on you as you run,
Beyond the shining of the sun.

Lord Jesus, we take the torch from Thee,
We must be true, we must be free,
And clean of heart and strong of soul,
To bear the glory to its goal.

O Lord of life, to Thee we kneel;
Maker of men, our purpose seal!
We will, for honor of Thy name,
Pass on the torch, pass on the flame.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

FABLES

By Emma C. Railsback

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—2 Timothy 4:4.

IN ISAIAH 14:12, 13, we read of Lucifer, who is almost universally thought to be a fallen angel who rebelled at God's commandments and was cast out of heaven. We shall try to analyze this fable, also.

This prophecy, written something like a hundred and fifty years before King Nebuchadnezzar's rule, is simply history written in advance. Beginning at verse 4 of Isaiah 14, we find that the prophet is commanded to take up this taunting speech against the king of Babylon: "How hath the oppressor ceased! the golden city ceased! . . . He who smote the people in wrath with a continual stroke, he that ruled the nations in anger, is persecuted and none hindereth."

"A play upon words is often used in Scripture to excite attention," writes Robert Young. This is true in this as well as in many other prophetic utterances.

Verse 12: "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!" The word "Lucifer" means "a shining one," according to the concordance; and it is here applied to the king of Babylon in reference to his glory and pomp, and all the language that follows is a play upon words to describe the arrogance and fall of this wicked ruler. Verses 14 and 15: "I will ascend above the heights of the clouds: I will be like the Most High. Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit."

To get a better understanding of the cause and fulfillment of this prophecy we turn to Daniel 3 and 4. The third chapter records the history of the setting up by Nebuchadnezzar of the golden image and the commandment for all nations to fall down and worship it. The penalty for refusing to do so was destruction in the fiery furnace. Does this not sound much like trying to be like the Most High? Every Bible student is familiar with the attempt of this wicked king to destroy Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the fiery furnace for disobeying this commandment. Chapter 4 relates the dream of warning to this proud, wicked king; his refusal to heed; and the stroke of judgment that fell immediately upon his boastful assumption of power and majesty just twelve months after the warning.

Thus we see how that Nebuchadnezzar, the brightest political light of his day, took a sudden fall from the political heavens. His understanding was taken away from him; he ate the grass of the field; his hair was grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws. Is it any wonder that the prophet exclaimed, "They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, and consider thee, saying,

Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake the kingdoms?"—Isaiah 14:16.

Thus, comparisons of the prophetic language of Isaiah with the historical facts related by Daniel one hundred fifty years later clearly reveal who Lucifer, the shining one, was.

Another instance in which prophetic language concerning the judgments to follow upon the king of Tyre is found in Ezekiel 28:11-19, and there is no more reason for believing that the language applies to a supernatural being than there is that that of Isaiah 14 does. The misunderstanding comes from holding erroneous ideas and trying to fit them to the Scriptures.

COMING OF CHRIST

By C. E. Randall

"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1:11.

THE hope of the church and the world is dependent on the fulfillment of this angelic promise. So vitally important is Christ's second coming that every seventeenth verse in the New Testament directly or indirectly speaks of the event.

We not only have the promise of His return in the above verse, but the manner of His return is plainly set forth. It is this latter thought that we wish to examine. The angelic messengers said "this same Jesus" would come again. This is plain language, and we do not need a commentary or concordance to understand it. Our simple duty is to believe it. This "same Jesus" is the Jesus that God "raised up from the dead."

In tracing the record of "this same Jesus," we find the following: "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell (grave), neither his flesh did see corruption. This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses."—Acts 2:30-32.

Why did not Jesus' flesh see corruption? Because He was raised from the dead. It is this "same Jesus," whose flesh saw no corruption, that was exalted to the right hand of God. Acts 2:33. And it is "this same Jesus" that has been thus exalted and is at the Father's right hand that shall come again. Because "this same Jesus" that was crucified and whose flesh saw no corruption was raised up by the glory of the Father, He could show Himself alive by many infallible proofs and convince a doubting Thomas that He had "flesh and bones."—Church of God Messenger.

GOD'S GLORIOUS KINGDOM

NUMBER 26

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

By Lyman Booth

THIS is a subject of so much importance and interest as to require a large volume to give a comprehensive description of it and its kindred subjects. Therefore, I shall assume that my readers will admit that God once had a kingdom on earth, and that He was King over it. (1 Samuel 12:12).

The subjects of that kingdom were the children of Israel. It was located in Palestine. The laws were given by God through Moses, and were administered by judges. The subjects became dissatisfied and desired a king like those of other nations. God granted their request, and Saul was anointed king.

Many kings succeeded him. Some were good; others were not. Finally they, like some Gentile nations, became so corrupt that the kingdom was overthrown, and has been in ruins for two thousand, five hundred years or more, and will so remain until He comes whose right it is, and the throne will be given Him (Ezekiel 21:26, 27). The territory has lain in desolation many centuries, and the subjects scattered among all nations and subjected to every indignity and vile persecution that could be devised; still they remain a separate people without a country.

Nevertheless, despite this apparent destruction of God's kingdom, every element necessary for its restoration is in existence and is only waiting God's appointed time. King Jesus is at God's right hand. The land remains and is putting on a new dress. The subjects are numbered by the millions and are anxiously waiting and earnestly praying for their Messiah to appear. The laws and statutes are ready for use. The associate rulers are being selected from the nations by the preaching of the gospel. Although the material is at hand, will the kingdom be rebuilt, and for what purpose?

Moses and the prophets and Jesus have testified that it will be reestablished. The Prophet said, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."

What a splendid theme it is to which we dedicate our paper this week! From beginning to end it is sounding forth the Glad Tidings of the Kingdom of God—the wonderful message that Jesus loved and for which the apostles gave their lives—the great central truth of the Bible, GOD'S COMING KINGDOM AND GLORY UPON THE EARTH! Lyman Booth presents, as an introduction to the subject, an outline of the Kingdom of God in the past, and an alluring view of its future greatness and grandeur.

Daniel 7:14, 27 gives in few words the extent of God's dominion and the purpose for its establishment: "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. . . . And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Zechariah 14:9 reads, "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day there shall be one Lord, and his name one."

The above scriptures show that Jesus will be King and the saints will be associate rulers. "Nathanael said unto Jesus, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel." The angel said unto Mary, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever."

His laws will be absolute and divine. All nations will serve and obey Him, and peace and prosperity will characterize His glorious reign. For "he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war (Please turn to Page Ten)

"Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even for ever."

The Prayer of the Church

ONCE again, our Father, we would offer the prayer our Lord taught His disciples; that prayer that forms a part of every Jewish service before Thee; that agonized cry of distressed and disillusioned humanity that has lost its faith in men and is now driven to turn to Thee. Thy kingdom come, O Lord, we pray, that Thy will may be done on earth as it is in heaven. Our strength is weakness, our wisdom foolishness, and we cannot govern ourselves aright. Send quickly to our relief the One whom Thou hast ordained to be King of kings and Lord of lords over all the earth, that injustice may give place to equity, prosperity pour out its bounties upon us, and peace prevail. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Good Government

COMPULSORY education and universal culture of a high order have not produced the happy results for society that one might have expected from such an effort. We are still mired in a "Slough of Despond," politically speaking. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick said recently that "if a few more political leaders fail us, if a few more shocking revelations come of dishonesty and chicanery in high places of the economic world, the loss of public confidence may easily reach panic proportions." President Albert W. Beaven of the Federal Council of Churches declares that "the ills from which we are suffering are not merely economic but also profoundly moral."

Yet in spite of such continuous human failures in government men still turn, according to Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, to the Government as "an emergency Savior."

The Literary Digest, after reviewing the post-inaugural sermons of many well known ministers, says that they are warning their people "that the 'new deal' must be vastly more than a change of name and a shuffling of administrations."

Even then they fail to go far enough in their analysis of the situation. Only the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ and the establishment of His literal kingdom upon the earth will bring that lasting peace, that rich prosperity, and that limitless opportunity for human development which the thoughtful leadership of the world craves.

The Heart of the Gospel

AMONG the multiple truths of vast importance contained in the Bible the conditions of salvation are set forth the most simply and positively of all the others in the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. Evidence of divine love, as well as wisdom, is seen in this fact. The sacrifice offered by the Savior for the deliverance of men from sin and the effects of sin was too great for the Father to veil the requirements of redemption in vague terms that few could understand. He wants all men everywhere to hear, believe, repent, and obey the gospel; therefore, He has made its meaning very plain.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," was the command issued to the same apostles who had been sent forth with a limited commission some time before. "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, . . . but rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." This was the same message Jesus preached everywhere, "the gospel of the kingdom of God," and the only message He has ever commissioned anyone to carry to the world in His name.

Following His ascension the disciples were scattered throughout the world bearing the same "glad tidings of the kingdom." Both Jews and Gentiles listened to the same wonderful truth. Philip in the city of Samaria baptized all who confessed their understanding and faith in "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." Paul, who never shunned to declare the whole counsel of God, preached to Jews and Gentiles alike what he termed the "gospel of the grace of God" and in the next breath defined as that of "the kingdom of God." Paul recognized but one gospel by which men could be saved.

In His own preaching to the Jews Jesus never defined the gospel He presented. It was not necessary for Him to do so. All the Jews were looking and longing for the coming of the Messiah who should rebuild the fallen "tabernacle of David" and reestablish the kingdom of God upon the earth. And that was the glad news the Son of God proclaimed. That is the glad news which the Church of God must continue to carry to the world until the King shall come "with power and great glory."

THE NEW WORLD

By George B. Alldridge

"It is not to angels that God has assigned the sovereignty of that coming world, of which we speak."—Hebrews 2:5, Weymouth.

THERE is no question but what Jesus clearly comprehended why God sent Him into this world. Here is a statement made by Him that for conciseness and for depth of significance concerning His mission can only be duplicated by what He told Pilate when He stood before him charged with high treason.

The first is found in Luke 4:43: "And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent." The other is found in John 18:36, 37: "Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence. Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice."

By reading 2 Peter 3:5-14 I obtain some very valuable information that forever sets my mind at rest regarding the world over which Jesus will be King. I note Peter mentions three worlds and three heavens: "the world that then was," which was overflowed with water and perished; and "the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word (or authority which destroyed the first) are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." After describing the process by which God will accomplish this, Peter says, "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

I wish you to note how beautifully God's Word explains itself if we know how to rightly divide the Word of Truth. We know that it was not the astronomical heavens nor the terrestrial earth which perished. We understand "the world that then was" to mean just what the headlines in the daily press mean when they say, "The whole world is suffering the effects of the depression." Now you will readily discern what the editor means: society, or the order of things. So, when the Kaiser declared Germany was seeking a place in the sun, of course he meant to rule the world as the sun rules our solar system. Hence, then, "world" stands for society and "heavens" for the ruling powers.

In speaking of the present world and heavens Peter says they are to be destroyed by fire. I am not going to argue whether this is literal fire or not. Ask the poor sufferers in China what their experience with Japanese bombs falling in their midst is like? And this experience will soon become universal.

(I noted with admiration for President Roosevelt that prior to taking oath he repaired to church and offered prayer that God would give him wisdom to execute the duties of his high office. He probably realizes the strenuous times ahead of him during the next four years.)

Somewhere I have read that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." Well, this is the ideal; but it is only a theory, it has never in the history of human governments been realized. We have tried every form of government, but failure is emblazoned upon their ruins. Just now two forms of government seem to be coming into prominence: Socialism and Communism. These, if successful, will plunge the world into anarchy. Then what?

David's words now come with force into my mind: "Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: and thy glory above all the earth." When that occurs, and it will soon, Isaiah 2:19 will be fulfilled: "And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth." I wonder if the next verse is being fulfilled today as the banks are closing down: "In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one

Thy Kingdom Come

Behold, the morn is shining bright
Along the eastern sky;
Behold ye, from the mountain height,
Messiah's kingdom nigh.

Ye captive tribes, rise ye, arise!
Thy King is coming soon;
Jerusalem in robes of praise
Shall wear the golden crown.

Arise and shine! thy light is come,
Thy night shall flee away:
The time foretold by prophets old
No longer shall delay.

Ye graves, give up the holy dead;
Ye trees of life, re-bloom;
Ye saints, now join your living Head
Beyond the chilling tomb.

Thy kingdom come! Oh, mighty One!
Make war and crime to cease.
Reign Thou upon Thy royal throne,
Bring everlasting peace.

—H. V. Reed.

for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats."

There is no question but what Paul's words are being proved true today: "For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

But a change is imminent. Soon we will be commemorating the resurrection of Christ. Emphasis will be laid upon the fact of His resurrection from the dead. You cannot speak of this too often. But what I wish to lay emphasis on are the words of the angel to Mary before His birth: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

This is the solution to all the world's problems, and the miasma of universal depression will vanish like the morning mist before the rising sun.

I love to think of Jesus at the right hand of His Father during the past centuries, since He ascended to that exalted position, has been instructed by His Father regarding the kingdom He will reign over. So as I read the second Psalm, my heart leaps with joy because God has found a man to answer David's question: "Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" Won't you please read this Psalm before you retire tonight, and in your evening prayer thank God that He has anointed your eyes with eye-salve that you may see?

They say I imagine many things; but, nevertheless, I like to shut my eyes and see Jesus talking with His Father, and then I recall: "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith: who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." How sweet, then, this Psalm floats into my mind: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Yes, even to Tierra del Fuego.

Listen to this promise: "For the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody."—Isaiah 51:3. Does this not thrill you? It does me. "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God."—Isaiah 35:1, 2.

Now you can understand Hebrews 11:13-16, especially these words: "But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city." What comfort and consolation these words bring: "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

Do you go to the cinema shows? It is many years since

I entered one; they do not appeal to me. Why? "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

I have told you what God will give Jesus when He sets up His kingdom on the earth. What will God give us who are looking for Him? Well, here it is: "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Daniel 7:27.

Because of this, the promise is, "Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away . . . And I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens (new governments), and lay the foundations (His righteous laws) of the earth, and say unto Zion, Thou art my people."—Isaiah 51:11, 16.

This, my brethren, will constitute the new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. See Isaiah's words in 2:2-4.

MY PALESTINE

In his homeland, a young Chalutz plants a tree this Arbor Day

And breathes a prayer as he pushes it into the black earth. He can almost see, with shining eyes, his mighty cedar rising high,

Brushing the glamorous heavens—a thing of strength and beauty.

He sings merrily—he is gay—he thrills to life.

Spring's here—the trees are green—the skies are bright.

There's Joy in my Palestine.

In my heart, I plant a seed this Arbor Day

And breathe a prayer of thanks as I feel it grow—

A desire—a longing to be in my Eretz Yisrael

To build—to help create this land of lasting charm,

That will be yet young and fresh when I will have gone,

And the things I write will long have been forgotten.

But not so my Palestine.

The tree will grow tall and straight

Watered by soft rains and warmed by caressing winds.

For it, Life begins today beneath bright blue skies.

And my seed, it, too, will flourish green,

Watered by my tears, and warmed by the sweetness of my dreams,

Until Arbor Day comes to me, and I, like the tree, begin Life anew, Back home in my Palestine.—Esther Elman.

The What, When, and Where of the Kingdom of God

By James A. Patrick

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

THESE are three questions that should be answered in connection with this subject, and they are comprehended in three words: What? When? Where? We must know the answer to these three questions before we can intelligently seek the kingdom of God of which our Lord speaks in the above verse.

To illustrate: I was once discussing this question with a group of people in Springfield, Ohio. I was insisting that the kingdom was a literal thing, when one of them said to me, "Christ said, 'The kingdom of God is within you.'"

I answered by asking this question, "To whom was Christ speaking?" and he very promptly replied, "Well, He wasn't talking to the scribes and Pharisees, that's sure."

I asked him to turn and read the account, and after a minute or two he said rather dejectedly, "He was talking to the Pharisees."

I give this man's answer because he expressed the view of a majority of the professed Christian world. They never seem to stop to note that Christ was not talking to His disciples, but was speaking to the Pharisees, who were then, as always, trying to catch Him in His words that they might find occasion to kill Him. So it is evident that the kingdom or any element of it was not of this world (Greek kosmos, order or arrangement).

Is it possible for a person to intelligently seek the kingdom who is looking for it in the heart of a Pharisee? They profess to be looking for it in the heart of the Christian; but Christ did not say it was there, and there is no Bible authority for believing that it is in the heart of a Christian.

WHAT IS THE KINGDOM OF GOD?

God, through Daniel, gives us a concise history of the nations of the world beginning with Babylon and carrying the history to the end of time. In each case there were certain elements that went to make up each kingdom. Each had a king, subjects, territory, capital city, laws, rulers under the king, etc. Then, speaking of the divided state of the last of these kingdoms, God says through Daniel, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."—Daniel 2:44. Is there any doubt as to what kind of a kingdom is meant? Nothing but a material kingdom will fill the bill. This is confirmed in Revelation 11:15, where it is made clear that the kingdoms of this world will become Christ's and that He will reign forever over them.

To determine the nature, location, and time of establishment of the kingdom of God becomes very important when we endeavor to obey our Lord's command to seek "first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." These three questions are answered clearly in this article.

Let us note a little history of God's kingdom. In 1 Samuel 8:7 the Lord said to Samuel, "Hearken unto the voice of the people . . . for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not rule over them." Here God indicates that He is Israel's ruler. In 1 Chronicles 28:5 David said, "He (God) hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel." We have the sequel to this in 1 Chronicles 29:23: "Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David." Further confirmation of this thought is found in 2 Chronicles 9:8: "Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the Lord." Again in 2 Chronicles 13:8 Abijah said to Jeroboam, "And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the Lord in the hand of the sons of David."

By these and many other scriptures it is made very clear that the kingdom of Israel was God's kingdom and the throne on which David and the other kings sat was God's throne and the different kings ruled for the Lord, as the queen of Sheba said, "The Lord thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the Lord."

This throne was promised to David forever, IF: how many things this little word separates us from. Notice the words of David: "That the Lord may continue his word, which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man in the throne of Israel."—1 Kings 2:4. Read also chapter 8:25.

We have the sequel to this part of the story in Ezekiel 21:25-27. Here it is made very clear why the throne was not continued with a descendant of David upon it: "And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same . . . I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."

God allowed the kingdom of Israel to be overthrown, and for centuries no king has ruled upon David's throne; but God has promised, and His word has never failed, and "when he come whose right it is" God will give it to Him.

Who has the right to David's throne? "Therefore (David) being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne."—Acts 2:30. "And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS." No one questions the literality of the angel's statement up to this point; everyone realizes that everything transpired as the angel predicted. Why, then, should we question about the literal fulfillment of the remainder of the prediction: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."—Luke 1:30-33. Israel restored, with Christ as King and the saints as rulers under Him will be the nucleus of the kingdom, the stone that will smite the image on its feet. "Thou (Jacob) art my battle axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations; and with thee will I destroy kingdoms."—Jeremiah 51:20.

The foregoing surely answers the what of the matter. The when and the where are easily and quickly answered.

WHEN WILL THE KINGDOM OF GOD COME?

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."—Matthew 25:31. "Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Luke 22:28-30. "And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Matthew 19:28.

WHEN WILL THE KINGDOM OF GOD BE?

"And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Daniel 7:27. "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon the feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."—Daniel 2:34, 35. "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever."—Psalm 37:29.

IN PARADISE

By T. A. Drinkard

"And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."—Luke 23:42, 43.

DID you read the above request and the answer very carefully? If you did not, do so before considering my views upon them. As they are in the Bible, they are inspired of God for the express purpose of teaching us some great truth pertaining to the kingdom divine, divine because authorized and established by divine judgment in the earth at God's own appointed time.

There is a perfect unity between the question and answer. However, there has been much argument concerning it by those seeking to uphold the immortality of the soul, when in fact there is nothing mysterious about the matter if we allow God's Word to explain its meaning.

I am asked if I have permission to question the views of those who seek to wrest Scripture. In instructing the apostles Jesus referred to the way hypocrites do and pointed out what they should do.

There are some things which this scripture does not teach. It does not teach that Christ and His questioner went to paradise the day they died. It does not teach that Christ entered into His kingdom glory that day. It does not teach that death was a friend. Those who so affirm are using their time and talent unwisely.

This inquirer seems to see a wonderful future after the kingdom is established in the earth. He surely understood something about it and simply asked the Master to remember him when He came into His kingdom. Jesus simply answered him, "To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

I am asked if the verse is correctly punctuated. Why not? I am sure those grammarians knew more about punctuation than most, if not all, of us. Did you not say that the Bible was inspired? Will its being inspired allow for any mistakes? Very well!

Let us see if the removal of the comma would injure its teaching. Suppose you place it after "to day," what do you have? You have the verse out of joint. Try it and see. You would make the "to day" refer to a period of twenty-four hours, when the fact is that it refers to the time when the kingdom is to be established—not before.

Another fact proves that the comma belongs where it was put by those who translated the Scriptures. Some are very prejudiced against the translators because possibly some of them, and perhaps all of them, believed in the immortality of the soul. Yet with great show of pomp and pride we talk about our authorities, when I can read to you in their so-called books of authority where they teach the immortality of the soul! On this verse one authority says: "The suppliant receives more than he asks; this very day he shall have the society of Jesus in a realm of joy and peace."

Nothing could be farther from the truth than to say that Christ went to paradise during the following twenty-four hours.

By Matthew 12:40 you will note that following His death Christ would be in the heart of the earth. By Matthew 28:1 He had been in the "sepulchre." He arose therefrom (verse 6). By Acts 2:31 you will see that Christ's soul was not left in hell; Christ was resurrected therefrom. To say that Christ went to paradise the day He died would force us to say that hell was paradise.

Very briefly, Christ refers to the kingdom by using paradise; and by using such a word He hid some wonderful truth from the worldly-wise. May we accept as it stands the record that in a few words reveals much.

THE THRONE OF DAVID

By William Laing

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD," "the kingdom of heaven," "the kingdom of the Father," "of the Son," or "of Christ," as used in the Scriptures, mean the same thing. What Matthew terms "the kingdom of heaven," Mark and Luke in parallel passages call "the kingdom of God," while Matthew uses both phrases synonymously, thus: "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."—Matthew 19:23, 24. In like manner, "the kingdom of the Father," "of the Son," "of the Lord Jesus Christ," denote the same thing. Compare Matthew 13:41-43; Luke 19:11, 12; Daniel 7:13, 14; Revelation 11:15.

When we reflect on the fact that this kingdom is referred to no fewer than one hundred forty times in the New Testament; in the teaching of our Lord, one hundred seven times; and that there is scarcely a parable or discourse of His which does not in some way relate to it, and that the second petition in that remarkable prayer which He enjoined His disciples to use was, "Thy kingdom come," we cannot fail to see the importance of having a correct understanding of what this kingdom is.

It is because we have strong convictions of the importance of this subject that we bring it before you and entreat your patient attention to what we have to say regarding it.

Our appeal will be to the language of Scripture, understood in the ordinary acceptation of the terms employed, in accordance with their grammatical construction and obvious sense, viewed in the light of the context. Thus we adopt the canon of Hooker, that "when the literal sense will stand, the furthest from the literal is generally the worst," that "there is nothing more dangerous than this licentious and deluding art (spiritualizing of Scripture) which changes the meaning of words, making of anything what it pleases, and bringing in the end all things to nothing."

The first words to which we call your attention are those the angel of God addressed to Mary, the mother of our Lord (Luke 1:30-33), "Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

It is surely reasonable to believe that the words of this promise were intended to be understood by Mary according to their common usage among the Israelitish people! There is no explanation otherwise by the angel; no guard against understanding the language in its common sense. To Mary, and to every Hebrew living at the time, the terms "house of Jacob" and "throne of David" conveyed but one uniform idea. I need not tell you what that idea was. The hopes of the Israelitish people were fixed on the promised Messiah; they looked forward with longing expectancy to the advent of a son of David to sit on David's throne, rule over the house of David, and make it the head of the nations.

These hopes and expectations were founded on the words of the holy prophets of the God of Israel, who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Look at some of the prophetic words and see whether they warranted the expectation by the Hebrews of a re-occupation of David's throne and kingdom. Take first this familiar prediction, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever."—Isaiah 9:6, 7.

It is admitted by all who receive this prophecy as the word of the Most High that the illustrious person spoken of is indeed the Son of the Highest, our Lord and Savior. Why, then, should there be any doubt that "the throne of David" is to be occupied by Him as the King of Israel? What else could the people of Israel take the words to mean than that the promised One should reign visibly among them, henceforth and forever?

The phrase "throne of David" was current among the Hebrew people as equivalent to the throne of the King of Israel. More than four hundred years after David had fallen asleep and a long line of kings had succeeded him, the seat of royalty in Jerusalem was still called "the throne of David." In the book of Jeremiah you will find examples of this usage, as, "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, . . . with drunkenness."—Jeremiah 13:13. Again, "It shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the Lord, . . . then there shall enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David."—Jeremiah 17:24, 25. The same language is used regarding Coniah, the son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, "Thus saith the Lord, Write ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days: for no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah."—Jeremiah 22:30. Once more, "Thus saith the Lord of Jehoiakim king of Judah; He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost."—Jeremiah 36:30.

With such evidence before us fixing the meaning of the phrase the throne of David can we reasonably doubt that the angel of the Lord used the words in the same sense when he announced to the Hebrew maiden in Bethlehem, "Thou shalt bring forth a son; . . . and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever"?

That the throne of David promised to the Messiah is the seat of kingly rule which David held is strikingly confirmed by the prediction recorded in Ezekiel 21:25-27, "And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel," Zedekiah, the last king that reigned over the house of Jacob, "whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." Who is He of whom Jehovah speaks when He says, "I will give it him"? You are ready to respond, "Jesus the Christ!" Well, what was it that He referred to when He said, "I will give it him"? Surely that which was to be overturned—emphatically: the throne and kingdom of David!

The place of David's throne was Mount Zion in Jerusalem; and there the throne of the Messiah, the King of the Jews, is to be "established with judgment and justice . . . for ever." "Yea," saith Jehovah, "I have anointed my king on Zion, the hill of my holiness." "The Lord hath chosen Zion . . . There," said He, "will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a lamp for mine anointed. His enemies will I clothe with shame: but upon himself shall his crown flourish."—Psalm 132:13, 17, 18. "The Lord shall send the rod (or scepter) of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies."—Psalm 110:2. "The moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously."—Isaiah 24:23.

But while Zion will be the place of Messiah's throne and Jerusalem the metropolis of His kingdom, His dominion shall extend over all nations. "Thou art my Son . . . Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."—Psalm 2:7, 8. "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth."—Psalm 72:8. Daniel makes the extent of His empire of righteousness universal. "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Daniel 7:27.—The Word of the Kingdom.

Like as the flaming comet—doubles wide
Heaven's mighty cape; and then revisits earth,
From the long travel of a thousand years;
Thus at the destined period shall return
He, once on earth, who bids the comet blaze;
And with Him all our triumph o'er the tomb.

FABLES

No. 5

By Emma C. Railsback

---

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—2 Timothy 4:4.

MANY abstract and inanimate things are personified in the Scriptures. A very apparent and striking example is found in Proverbs 8, where it is said of wisdom, "Unto you, O men, I call . . . Hear; for I will speak of excellent things; and the opening of my lips shall be right things . . . I wisdom dwell with prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions." The heavens and earth are said to have ears. Isaiah 1:2: "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for the Lord hath spoken." Three trees are represented as walking and talking. Judges 9:8-15: "The trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them; and they said unto the olive tree, Reign thou over us." The sword, mountains, and hills, death, and many other abstract things are represented as having personality. Because of this scriptural rule many believe that the Holy Spirit is a Person.

In John 14:16, 17 Jesus, speaking to His disciples, said,

“And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.” In this instance the masculine gender is ascribed to the “power from on high” (Luke 28:49), yet the Emphatic Diaglott renders “him” and “he” in this text in the neuter gender.

However, it is not on any of the foregoing examples of personification that I wish to lay especial stress at this time, but rather to the personification of sin. We read that by one man sin entered the world; and that one man was Adam, and it was through him that sin became the great adversary (Hebrew “Satan”) of mankind. That the serpent is the type of sin is shown distinctly by the account found in Numbers 21:4-9, which records that the serpent of brass was lifted upon a pole so that Israel might look and be healed.

Our Savior corroborates the fact of this being a type of Himself by being made to be sin for us. John 3:14: “As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.” Then the Apostle Paul in 2 Corinthians 5:21 states that God “hath made him sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.”

The Israelites were bitten by serpents in the wilderness. Moses lifted up a serpent of brass to which they could look and be healed. All mankind has been bitten by sin. Christ was lifted up on the cross and made to be sin for us that we might look and be healed of the bite of sin. Sin is ruling this world, but the one who was made to be sin for us, who, even though He knew no sin, endured the contradictions of sinners against Him, took upon Himself the iniquity of us all, looked forward to the time when the adversary as lightning should fall from heaven (Luke 10:18), from the rulership of this world, when Christ shall put down all rule and all authority and power.

The time is very near when the rulers of the darkness of this world shall have to give place to the King of kings and Lord of lords. When the Lion of the tribe of Judah takes His power and authority and God takes away Israel's heart of stone and gives them a heart of flesh and puts His law in their inward parts and writes it in their hearts, they can no longer say, “The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge,” or “Adam sinned, and we find ourselves in the prison house of sin.” Ezekiel 36:26; Jeremiah 31:29, 33. Then this Satan will be bound.

The doctrine of a personal devil is in contradiction to all true notions of God. It dishonors God. The Apostle Paul enumerates the works of the flesh in Galatians 5:17-21, and there is no deviation from virtue which will not come under one of these heads. Why, then, should there be two causes for the same thing? When the Scriptures state that all sin comes from the natural agents, why look for a supernatural one? Let us, then, recognize the law of personification in the Scriptures of truth, and turn our ears from fables and be turned to the truth.

THE COMING WORLD KINGDOM

By E. O. Stewart

“And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day there shall be one Lord, and his name one.”—Zech-ariah 14:9.

THIS prophetic utterance points unmistakably to a world-wide kingdom that is to be established on this earth. But before the kingdom of Christ can attain world-wide dominion, it must first be established as a mustard seed in comparison with world kingdoms, and then, through its righteous rule of equity and justice (Jeremiah 23:5), cause all kings to fall down before Him and all nations to serve Him (Psalm 72:11).

The first visible manifestation of His kingly power will be the casting out of the children of the kingdom (Matthew 8:12). This undoubtedly refers to the territory of the kingdom, the land of Palestine, where the Jews, Abraham's natural descendants, who are now returning to Palestine, shall organize themselves into a counterfeit kingdom, headed by the false messiah who is destined to play a great part in the world's mighty drama of the end-time.

From the mighty consolidation fever that is now gripping schools, churches, corporations, and nations, one can see that the world is hastening on, impelled by irresistible forces to a one-man rule. The desire of all nations is a super-man, who can settle all commercial difficulties. The man who can accomplish this miraculous feat shall be hailed as the prince of lasting peace.

HE WILL BE A JEW

“He shall return into his land with great riches.”—Daniel 11:28.

We see the Jews returning to their own land today. The wealth of the world is practically in their hands, as every close observer knows. Their false messiah has not yet appeared on the scene, but he will very soon.

He is to come in peaceably and obtain the kingdom by flatteries (verse 21). “And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished.”—Verse 36. He shall “honour the god of forces: a god whom his fathers (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) knew not.”—Verse 38.

HE WILL BE A SUPER-MAN

“And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences (one who is able to solve all perplexing problems), shall stand up.” “And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power”: the dragon will give him his seat, power, and authority (see Revelation 13:2), “and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and holy people (those who will not worship the beast). And through his policy also he shall cause craft (trade) to prosper in his hand": his policy will be a decree that those who will trade and prosper must receive his mark. "He shall also stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hands."—Daniel 8:23-25.

This man and his followers are the literal descendants of Abraham. They claim the right to the kingdom because they are Abraham's seed. They will be in the territory of the kingdom when Christ returns, and He will cast them out. Thus the children of the kingdom will be cast out, so that the rightful heirs may come from the east and the west and sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom (Matthew 8:11, 12).

Then Satan, the strong man, will be bound, that his goods, the kingdoms of this world, may be spoiled, taken, and given to the rightful owners. "No man can enter into a strong man's house, and spoil (take) his goods, except he will first bind the strong man."—Mark 3:27. After Satan is bound, then the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord (Revelation 11:15).

"Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods."—Matthew 24:46, 47.

"And the great dragon was cast out, . . . and I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ."—Revelation 12:9, 10.

When Satan loses his power over the kingdoms of this world, they will become the kingdoms of our Lord. Then "the Lord shall be king over all the earth."—Zechariah 14:9. Then "all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him."—Psalm 72:11.

No wonder David closed his prayers, saying, "And let the whole earth be filled with his glory."—Psalm 72:19.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

any more."—Isaiah 2:4. Then men can sing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."—Luke 2:14. This shows briefly that the kingdom will be rebuilt, and the purpose is to bring permanent peace to a troubled world. It embraces, in effect, the promises of God made to Adam and the fathers (Genesis 3:15). They introduce the glad tidings that change men's minds and motives and instill that purity of life and personal holiness that will result in obedience to God's will.

They who would share in the honor and glory of such a kingdom must be adopted into the family of faithful Abraham by believing the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and be immersed (Mark 16:15, 16; Acts 8:12).

God's promises are sure; they cannot fail. They who trust Him faithfully will prevail. The years are rolling swiftly on, unfolding their sullen pages, steeped in misery, blood, and tears. There is sorrow, pain, and anguish, war's red carnage, torture and death, fire and famine, flood and earthquakes in all lands; but seasons come and go in regular order, springtime splendor and winter's snow, while the glory of the sun floods the scene with golden light and the moon with silver radiance keeps watch with the stars at night.

Life is filled with varied contradictions: joy and sorrow, smiles and tears, pain and pleasure, sickness and death, blight and bloom. While the years ring their sad and mournful refrain, there is a still, small note of cheer that never fails to swell the strain; and upon life's storm-tossed ocean, as upon Galilee's stormy billows, walks a Figure grand, sublime, before whom heaven and earth bow in reverence as He speaks peace and pardon to the sinner, showing love to man and love to God.

At His birth angels sang, "Peace on earth, good will to man." Grandly, sweetly round the earth their melody is still ringing. Though earth's night be dark and long, if amid the strife and anguish we pause and listen, we may hear the same sweet and tender notes.

When Jesus comes to claim His own, peace will spread her dove-like pinions over the nations. Then around His throne will gather the blood-bought millions He has redeemed. No more pain and anguish blight their joys, nor sorrow cause a tear, because there will be nothing to harm nor make afraid in God's eternal kingdom.

I have heard the glorious tidings of a kingdom yet to be;
Over all the earth extending, lasting as eternity,
Of a King whose reign of mercy will the suffering nations bless,
Who will rule in truth and justice, who will judge in righteousness.

I have heard of earth's redemption from the ruin sin has brought,
Of the times of restitution by the holy prophets taught;
And my heart exults in prospects of Messiah's glorious reign;
For we heard creation's moaning 'neath its heavy load of pain.

I have seen the deaf forbidden all earth's pleasant sounds to hear,
And the blind whose darkened pathway earth's beauty might not cheer;
But I know there'll be a morning, and I long to see its light,
When the deaf ears shall be opened, and the blind receive their sight.

I have seen the lame and helpless, aided by some friendly hand;
I have seen the dumb conversing by the signs they understand,
And I thought then of the promise, when our Lord salvation brings:
When the lame shall leap for gladness, and the loosened tongue shall sing.

I have heard the call to battle, seen the brave go forth to die,
Read of many a field of carnage, where in ghastly heaps they lie;
But when Christ shall reign in Zion, He will make all wars to cease;
Man no more shall hate his brother, but shall dwell in quiet peace.

I have stood beside the dying, watched the struggle with the foe;
I have seen death gain the vict'ry, and the wearied one laid low;
But a mighty voice shall call them, from beneath the cold damp sod;
And they'll wake and live forever, in the likeness of their God.

Hail, bright morn of restitution, all nations wait for thee;
Hail, Messiah, once rejected, rule the world in majesty;
Earth has never known such glory as shall rest upon her then;
When her King shall dwell in Zion, and throughout her borders reign.

FIRST DAY THOUGHTS

In calm and cool and silence, once again
I find my old accustomed place among
My brethren, where, perchance, no human tongue
Shall utter words; where never hymn is sung,
Nor deep-toned organ blown, nor censer swung,
Nor dim light falling through the pictured pane.
There, syllabled by silence, let me hear
The still small voice which reached the prophet's ear;
Read in my heart a still diviner law
Than Israel's leader on his tables saw!
There let me strive with each besetting sin,
Recall my wandering fancies, and restrain
The sore disquiet of a restless brain;
And, as the path of duty is made plain,
May grace be given that I may walk therein,
Not like the hireling, for his selfish gain,
With backward glances and reluctant tread,
Making a merit of his coward dread,
But cheerful, in the light around me thrown,
Walking as one to pleasant service led;
Doing God's will as if it were my own,
Yet trusting not in mine, but in His strength alone!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Were you on time at the last Berean service? And did you help the leader keep the attention of the class on the subject?

If you can answer each of these questions affirmatively, you are doing as much to make your society successful as are the leaders themselves. If you can think of no one to invite to your meetings or if you do not hold an official position, remember that being present, on time, and attentive is just as important as teaching.

FRIENDSHIP WITH JESUS

How many of you, little readers of this page, like pictures? All of you, I'm sure. And when you cannot find a picture of a certain person or event, you imagine one, don't you? And we have ever so many more “make-believe” pictures than we have real ones. In fact, we can have as many “make-believe” ones as we wish.

While we have been studying our Sunday school lessons and working our Bible scrapbooks since the first of the year, we have found several pictures illustrating the different lessons. When we haven't been able to find the picture we wanted, we drew one the best we knew how. Besides these we have many “make-believe” pictures in our minds of the life of Jesus and the things He did as He walked along the shores of Galilee and climbed the rugged hills of old Judea on errands of love.

All the events connected with Jesus have something of good, of kindness, of beauty, of gentleness, and of love in them. What beautiful scenes to hang in the picture gallery of our minds! You know we grow to be like the pictures which we look upon daily, whether they are real pictures or only “make-believe” ones.

Today we have a picture of Jesus that makes us glad and yet just a little sad. He and some of His disciples were walking along the road that led to the city of Caesarea Philippi. On three sides of the city were hills; beautiful Mount Hermon, seeming to offer its snowy summit to the Creator, rose just back of it. North of this lofty mountain a stream of water gurgled from beneath huge rocks and flowed on its way to form the river Jordan. Can you see the setting?

As Jesus walked along He grew quiet, and His face looked a little sad. He was thinking of the time when He would be surrounded by cruel men instead of friends, when He would have to endure terrible pain and sorrow. And He wondered if His disciples would stand by Him and if they realized that as the Savior of the world this was to happen to Him.

Because of the wonderful things He had done, the people far and wide had heard of Him. Turning to His disciples, He asked them, “Whom do men say that I am?”

One answered that some thought He was John the Baptist, others that He was one of the prophets of olden times. Then He asked them who He was in their minds.

“Thou art the Christ,” said Peter; “Christ” meaning the Anointed One, the One chosen by God to be the Messiah or King.

Peter had read in the Old Testament Scriptures that God would one day send His Son to be the Redeemer of Israel, and he recognized Jesus to be that very One. But he had not understood the verses that foretold of Jesus' sufferings and death. Peter didn't want that to happen to Jesus.

Then Jesus told them that if they wanted to follow Him truly, they must also suffer, and that if they gave up their lives for His sake, they would in return receive a life that was worth more than anything the world might offer.

And His promise to the disciples comes down even to us today. If we would be true followers of His there are many things we must deny ourselves, but the rewards are so bright that we count the suffering very small. It's worth everything to us to be a friend of Jesus.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOKS:

Lesson 2, Friendship With Jesus. Draw a scale with a cross bar and a plate suspended from each side, such as you sometimes see in the store. On one plate print, “Jesus”; on the other, “the world.” Now write these words below your picture, and under each put the things to be gained or lost; for example, under “the world,” write sinful pleasures, love of money, etc. Under “Jesus,” write eternal joy, crown of life, etc. See how long a list you can make.

Last copy this poem:

“We should choose this very day
That we will the Lord obey;
Choose to serve with loving heart,
And from sin and evil part.

“Those whose hearts are true and right
Will be great in Jesus' sight;
If their lives are true and pure,
Of bright reward they may be sure.”

While here on earth Jesus filled every need of life. He was the One who fed men when they were hungry, healed them when they were sick, opened the eyes that were blind, forgave their sins, and showed them the way to eternal life in that wonderful kingdom of which He spoke and over which He is to be King.

LESSON 2. — April 9, 1933

JESUS REQUIRES CONFESSION AND LOYALTY

Mark 8:1 to 9:1

Devotional Reading: Romans 8:31-39

GOLDEN TEXT

Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.—Mark 8:34.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Requires Confession and Loyalty.

Aim: To lead the pupil to believe in Jesus as the Messiah and Life-giver, and to serve Him faithfully.

Basic Truth: "Be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."—1 Corinthians 15:58.

I. Jesus, the Anointed of God. (Vv. 27-30.) Jesus placed the seal of approval upon Peter's confession, "Thou art the Christ," by assuring him that "flesh and blood," i. e., human wisdom or agency, "hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." He then proceeded to make this declaration the foundation of the spiritual house He was building by saying, "Upon this rock" (Peter's confession) "I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matthew 16:16-18. The Messiahship of Jesus is the first essential of saving faith.

II. Jesus, the Sacrifice for Sin. (Vv. 31-33.) Peter's answer to Jesus' question marked an important change in the character of the Lord's teaching. Up to this point He had been carrying forward the work so ably started by John the Baptist, His one theme being the coming of the kingdom of God and the necessity for making preparation for it by individual faith and repentance. But from henceforth the message was to be focused in Himself. He was the One so long promised to Israel. He was the Messiah, the King "whose right it is" to reign on David's throne. He was the One in whom men must have faith and whom they must serve if they were to experience salvation from sin and obtain an everlasting inheritance in the kingdom of God.

III. Jesus, the Savior. (Vv. 34-38.) So great are the blessings obtainable through the gospel that they counterbalance any sacrifice that may be placed upon the scales beside them. All the treasures of the world are not to be compared with the infinite riches of life through Jesus Christ. Therefore, the most willing and self-sacrificing service should be rendered in obedience to our beloved Master.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Confession: Confession of Christ is a constant challenge to live for Him. We must live for Him in public and in private. This avowal and espousal of Christ must be in act as well as word. Lip service alone is of little value. It must be a combination of mind and heart, thought and act, word and deed. There are many ways of confessing Christ; and whatever method is employed, if it is to be well-pleasing to the Father and to the Christ, must be founded in and upon truth. The first and fundamental acknowledgment should be this, "Thou art the Christ." Such a confession to be real and true requires that the life of the confessor be in harmony with the confession. Matt. 7:21-23; 10:32, 33. Every opportunity possible should be sought to present and confess Christ. It would be an interesting and noble adventure if every member of the class who professes to be a follower of Christ would promise during the coming week to seek as many opportunities as possible to confess Christ and report the results the next Sunday.

Sacrifice: Eternal life is worth sacrificing for. It is worth giving our "bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God."—Rom. 12:1, 3. We make great sacrifices for the life that "now is" and in preparing for the "rainy day." The efforts of these struggles are often wiped out in a few hours, and we are left stranded. Why not make a greater sacrifice for the "life to come" which is eternal and prepare for that future home which will span the ages? Very few ever make any sacrifice for the cause of Christ. Discuss the sacrifices Christ made; Paul; Peter. Can you name any sacrifices that you are making? Is any sacrifice too great for the cause of Christianity?—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."—Mark 8:34.

It is no easy task to be a true Christian, or follower of Christ. Many sacrifices must be made, and the cross must be borne. Jesus wants whole-hearted service. Instead of denying Christ, the true Christian must confess Him and deny self. The cross must be borne daily, not one day a week nor one day a month nor one day a year, but each day of each week of each month of each year in all the Christian life.

Following Jesus is worth while. It pays a hundredfold in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting. Is not that pay sufficient for all we may sacrifice or endure in this life in denying self to follow Him?

—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT What Jesus Expects of His Followers

Jesus came as the administrator of God's salvation, so we would expect Him to insist upon faith as an avenue of approach to God. "Without faith it is impossible to please him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—Heb. 11:6.

True, faith in God requires a change of heart, usually referred to as "repentance," which is "sorrow for sin." Peter told the Jews of their great sin in killing Jesus. When they were "pricked in their hearts," Peter directed: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."—Acts 2:38. The next requirement is: "We also should walk in newness of life."—Rom. 6:4. Repentance and baptism are but preliminary requirements of one who would be a follower. Baptism is one's sacred pledge of loyalty and devotion to the Father in heaven. Faith and the daily cross are the evidences that one is faithful to his pledge.

Such loyalty will not be in vain. Jesus told John: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations."—Rev. 2:10, 26.—H. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Loyalty to Christ

We all understand what loyalty is. There are several things to which we owe it. Our parents and our homes, our teachers and our schools are some of them. Whatever we appreciate, respect, and honor, to that we are loyal. Discuss in class the meaning of loyalty to your school—what serves to inspire your loyalty, how much it includes, what sort of students are loyal. All of these constitute very fine motives for loyalty, but there is even a higher one than these.

Jesus, while here on earth, filled every need of life. He was the One who fed men when they were hungry, healed them when they were sick, opened the eyes that were blind, forgave their sins, and showed them the way to eternal life. If merely human institutions deserve our loyalty because of the benefits we receive from them, how much more does He who is everything to us?

Did it cost Jesus anything for the service He so freely gave? Read Heb. 2:9, 10, 17, 18. If it cost Jesus so much to serve mankind, is it not only right that it should cost us something to be loyal to Him? Discuss Mark 8:35, 36. Does it require courage to be loyal to Him? does it require singleness of purpose? does it require sacrifice?

Special problem: What was Jesus' reward for loyalty to His Father? What will be our reward for loyalty to Jesus? Find texts.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

WE ARE GOING ON!

While the financial returns from our latest appeal to the brethren for aid in getting the National Bible Institution on a more secure business basis are not large, nevertheless under existing circumstances, with banks closed everywhere, they have been very encouraging, and we are faring better than many other enterprises of a similar nature. For example, one of the oldest Advent Christian papers in the country has reduced its size from sixteen (the size of The Herald) to eight pages. Others among our exchanges have come out with even smaller papers.

The Restitution Herald is one of a very few weekly religious papers that has gone thus far through the depression without missing a single issue and without reducing the size of the sheet published. For all of which we thank the Father for the cooperation of faithful brethren.

And we are going on! That is the best of the story. While our subscriptions have fallen off a great deal owing to the inability of our readers to renew as they would like to do, nevertheless The Restitution Herald's list of subscribers today is much larger in proportion to our denominational membership than that of any weekly religious paper of which we have recent figures.

A message from the Joint Committee of the Massachusetts and Greater Boston Church Federation, states that "not five per cent of our church families take any church paper." We are glad to say that at least one out of every three Church of God families are still on our subscription list, as nearly as we can estimate from the inadequate reports on file in our office and from United States census reports.

One of our greatest sources of rejoicing is the increased interest the brethren are manifesting in the paper. Many of them are subscribing for others whom they are anxious to have learn the truth as advocated in these pages. It is being used extensively as a missionary, going into homes where there would be little other opportunity for the gospel to enter. Our special numbers are growing even more popular for use in this way. To get such issues out requires extra thought, effort, and hours on the part of those who perform the task; but it is well worth all the prayer and sacrifice that can be put into it.

This is your paper, brethren; pray and work and sacrifice that the scope of its influence and blessing may be increased.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

A definite spiritual development is already evident in our church family here as a result of the Tuesday night devotional and prayer meetings; and a new note of confidence is present, as we believe thoroughly that God will direct us, provide for us, and lead us to the means of arranging more space. Three hundred worshippers in our little building make a terribly hard condition to handle; but if the work is the Lord's, the building will grow to take care of the needs.

The spirit of gladness in resurrection is in the air now as spring comes on, and we are glad to have several indicating a desire to become more closely associated with their Lord. Our weekly class on fundamentals is coming along well.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

ALBERT CITY, IOWA

Church service will be held at the Frank Boyanvsky home on Sunday, April 2. Let all those nearby make an effort to be present.

RENSSLAER, INDIANA

March 12, 1933, was another happy day for the Rensselaer Church. At the morning service Miss Lillian Parks requested baptism. In the afternoon we went to the water, and after her confession of her faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ she was buried with Christ in baptism. Sr. Parks has been a faithful worker in our Sunday school at Rensselaer for more than a year. She took time to learn the truth, and we rejoice with her in her stand for it. It brings happiness to all who learn and obey it. We understand that there are others at Rensselaer who expect to obey in the near future. The members of the Rensselaer Church are very faithful, never failing to meet the financial part of the work. So the Lord is blessing them.

J. H. Anderson.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Following the conference to be held in Pomona on April 2, Bro. Lichty expects to continue the evening meetings with a series of sermons on prophetic questions. In the meantime the Sunday evenings have been filled in with miscellaneous subjects. Bro. MacLeod spoke on the "Stumblingstone" on Sunday evening, March 19; this sermon was a repetition of one given some time ago in Los Angeles.

A group of devoted workers met at the home of Sr. Elsie Elliott in Santa Ana to start a Bible class for the people of that vicinity. Bro. Hammond and his family from Anaheim, Bro. and Sr. Railsback from Los Angeles, Bro. and Sr. Roy Juden from Long Beach, and several others attended to give the meetings a good start. Bro. MacLeod gave an informal sermon on Luke 21. These meetings will be held each Tuesday evening. Next Tuesday we expect to study the subject of the return of Israel.

The class at Long Beach has been interrupted for a short time due to the accident suffered by Sr. Rich, and the earthquake there. But the class expects to continue again shortly.

Due to the unsafe condition of the church building in Los Angeles, the church has been holding its meetings at the home of Bro. and Sr. Rahn, 1020 South Burlington Ave. It is not yet determined whether the building will be subject to repair or whether it will be condemned.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH AND N. B. I.

AMOS OSBORNE

Amos Osborne was born June 14, 1852, in Starke County, Ind., and died at his home in Culver, March 21, 1933, in his eighty-first year. With the exception of a few years spent in California and other parts of the West, he has been a resident of this community.

He was the second son of William and Louisa Osborne, pioneers of Starke County. On December 28, 1876, he was united in marriage to Alice Sickman; and to this union were born five sons, two of whom died in infancy. In 1890 he was baptized by Elder N. H. Geiselman, and became a charter member of the Church of God at Burr Oak, Ind.

He leaves to mourn his death his widow; three sons, Melvin J., Jesse L., and Everett, and their wives; seven grandchildren; three great-grandchildren; four brothers; and a sister, besides many other friends and relatives.

The funeral service was held in the Reformed Church in Culver, March 23, 1933, after which he was laid away in the Culver Cemetery to sleep until Jesus comes.

Sr. Osborne is getting along in years. Remember her in your prayers. We have known Bro. Osborne for the past ten years and know he was much interested in the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. More than a year ago he came down to the studio of WCMA and after the broadcast said to me, "I don't expect to live much longer, and I want you to preach my funeral, using Colossians 3:3, 4." About the third Sunday of last February I visited him, and in the talk he expressed the hope that the Burr Oak church might prosper. We shall miss him in the Lord's work.

J. H. Anderson.

PAULINE MEYERS

Pauline Wells was born Feb. 3, 1914, at Cooperstown, Illinois, where she lived the greater part of her life with her parents, Leslie and Bertha Wells. Her early life was one of happiness both at home and at school; and was marked with a lovable childish enthusiasm for the simple, enduring values which evolve a wholesome character, frank and entirely free from false modesty.

She completed all of her elementary school work in the Cooperstown school except part of her seventh year, which she took in the Mt. Sterling grade school. She received her eighth grade diploma in the spring of 1927 with the highest honors in the county. In the fall of 1927 she entered the Mt. Sterling high school, from which she was graduated the president of her class with honors in May, 1931. In her high school work whatever was asked of her, she did; whatever was done for her, she genuinely appreciated.

After being graduated, Pauline lived with her parents in Cooperstown for almost a year; and on March 3, 1932, she became the bride of Marion Meyers in a simple wedding ceremony conducted by Rev. Meyers, a relative of the groom, at Buda, Ill. Soon after her marriage, she confessed her faith in God at the Church of God at Ripley, Ill., under Bro. F. L. Austin, who baptized her on May 22, 1932.

On Jan. 30, 1933, she was blessed with the arrival of a child—a boy, Marion Douglas, for whom she was profoundly happy. A few weeks later she was confined to her bed while visiting her parents and on March 2 was removed to the Culbertson hospital in Rushville, where she died in the early morning of March 14. Throughout her life, including the period of illness, she was ever patient, appreciative, and cheerful—a cheerful heart being a divine gift above all others.

Pauline was the oldest of three children, only one of whom is now living—Maxine. The youngest, Helen Louise, died when only a small child. Besides her husband, child, parents, and sister, Pauline is survived by her grandparents—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Mallory.

We shall miss her and with deepest of regrets we lay her in the gentle embrace of Mother Earth to await the day when Jesus our Savior, even the Prince of Life, shall come and call her forth to life everlasting.

C. E. Lapp.

ALBERT G. ALSPACH

Albert G. Alspach, son of Gideon and Catherine Alspach, was born in Perry Township, Miami County, Indiana, July 20, 1868. He was united in marriage with Miss Julia Dawalt on Dec. 23, 1899. To this union two children, Catherine, now Mrs. Dewey Mowrer, and Lawson G., were born. He was baptized into Christ by Bro. D. E. Vanvactor on July 12, 1918. He died March 12, 1933, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, leaving surviving of his immediate family his wife and above named daughter and son, together with two brothers, Ambrose of Miami, a suburb of Cincinnati, Ohio; Abner of Roarm, Ind.; and one sister, Mrs. Laura Lukenbill of Columbia City, Ind.; his older sister, Mrs. Glendora Musselman, former matron of Golden Rule Home, having preceded him in death in 1927.

Bro. Albert and the writer were boys and schoolmates together, and grew to manhood in the same community, and many are the times we have played together in and about the old barn and premises and sat happily together at Aunt Kate's good table. Such a short while ago, it seems, but to be repeated and enjoyed no more in this life.

Albert was an exceptionally quiet and unassuming man, honest, truthful, upright, and dependable, and withal, kind and uncomplaining, although he suffered much with disease for some seven years. But happily he fell asleep calmly and in full assurance of the faith that had modified life's sorrows and turned the sting of death into welcomed rest. After appropriate services in the Baptist Church in Chili we said farewell for awhile.

L. E. Conner.

FRANK M. CAWBY

Frank M. Cawby was born in Leroy, Ill., Nov. 5, 1855, and died at his home in North Judson, Ind., March 19, 1933, in his seventy-eighth year. On May 18, 1875, he and Annetta O'Neal were united in marriage. Seven children were born to them. His wife died February 18, 1917. Later he and Harriet T. Hall were united in marriage. At the Indiana Bible School in 1929 Sr. Cawby was baptized into Christ by the writer. On September 14 of the same year Bro. Cawby came to Plymouth and was baptized. Bro. Cawby was highly esteemed by those that knew him. The funeral was held in the Methodist Church in North Judson, March 22, 1933, after which he was laid away to sleep until Jesus comes. Sr. Cawby is left alone. She is the only one of our faith in North Judson. Write her and encourage her to continue in the faith.

J. H. Anderson.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Helen Porter; Forest C. Stilson; Mrs. Eva C. Collins; Bernard Crofton; Mrs. Harvey Krogh; Mrs. Myrtle J. Norris; Mrs. Lottie Sealine; S. T. Shirley; John O. Conrad; Mrs. Minnie Rogers; W. D. Weingart; May Moore; Jessie W. Donaldson; Elnora Waldo (for self and others); Mrs. George Reighard; Dallas Lehman; Nora Mallory.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by National Bible Institution
Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Have you your plans all made to attend the next General Conference to be held in Oregon, Illinois, August 1 to 13 inclusive?

The German-Jewish situation seems to grow no better. The Jews apparently will be forced out of the countries of their wanderings, and with no other door open to receive them, they must flee to Palestine.

It would be helpful to minister, congregation, and The Restitution Herald if attention were sometimes drawn to the paper publicly by mentioning some profitable article that appeared in its columns.

A letter appreciative of the work being done by Bro. Sydney Magaw at Brush Creek, Ohio, reaches us. It also speaks of faithful friends who drive twenty miles in order to be present at the services. It is things like that that gladden the pastor's heart.

The difficulty in obtaining reliable information from Germany concerning the conditions of the Jews there is increasing. Reports continue to reach the outside world of the anti-Semitic activities of the new government and at the same time emphatic denials of such happenings are furnished apparently from Jewish sources. It is certain, however, that Jews are decidedly unwelcome in the new German empire.

The next special issue of The Restitution Herald will be the Easter Number. Last year we printed and sold more than eight hundred extra Easter papers. This year we are hoping to make The Herald even more valuable as a missionary than it was a year ago. It will be devoted to the various phases of the life and death question. A part of the articles are already at hand, and judging from their character our hopes regarding the quality of the Easter Herald are not to be disappointed. The sooner we receive your orders for extra numbers the easier it will be for us to supply you. An order blank for your convenience is enclosed with this paper.

Bro. Eugene Howard, formerly of Morrill, Kansas, but now located at 607 Milan Ave., South Pasadena, Calif., is recovering nicely from his fall of a few weeks ago, and is able to be up and about the house. Bro. and Sr. Howard are praying earnestly with us all that the Lord may come soon and relieve His people of their anxieties and sorrows.

Another Truth Seekers' Quarterly is ordered by the teacher of a class in a Methodist Sunday school. Many others could use them successfully if they knew of their value. Help us to make other denominations acquainted with the most comprehensive quarterly published.

With much regret we learn of the serious illness of Bro. Samuel E. Hancy, 2437 S. 17th St., Philadelphia, Pa. Bro. Hancy has been for years one of our most regular contributors, and the matter he has submitted for publication has been appreciated greatly by our readers. We pray for his speedy recovery.

The editor wishes to express his appreciation of the splendid articles our various writers have contributed to this issue. There is a wealth of material brought together here dealing with the great central theme of the Bible—the gospel of the kingdom of God—that is worthy of careful preservation. We only regret that we are unable to issue it in a more permanent form.

We would like to respond personally to each letter we receive in answer to our recent appeal, but to do so would require too large an expenditure for postage. We do, however, desire to thank all those who have sent us either words of encouragement or money to help us on. Some of the numerous letters of regret were pathetic in their expressions of the writers' sorrow at being unable at this time to contribute to our mutual effort. But after all, you are giving, brethren, giving of your prayers and faith and Godspeed, and we thank you!

THEISM OR ATHEISM?

PART 3

ATHEISM, in its aspect towards prayer, runs counter to humanity. Atheism proclaims that there is no use whatever in prayer, because there is no Being in existence who can hear or be affected by prayer. To pray to the elements or to creative force, he tells us truly, is an idle waste of breath. But these are, with him, the disposers and creators of all things. According to the atheist, there should be no voice of prayer ever ascending up from earth to heaven.

How is it that mankind presents such a different aspect? Everywhere prayer is offered up by man. Look to that marvelous scene in the history of the ancient people Israel when Solomon dedicated to Jehovah the temple built in His honor (1 Kings 8:30). A king assembled the elders of his people and the heads of their tribes and all the men of a great nation at their capital city to dedicate a glorious house, from whence prayer to their God should arise through all succeeding generations. In every varying circumstance of their national life prayer towards that sacred shrine was to be made by Israel, and it was expected that God would hearken unto the prayer of His servant and of His people Israel and would hear in heaven, His dwelling-place, and, when He heard, would forgive.

This aspect of a people praying to God under every circumstance was essentially presented by every nation. It was not because the inhabitants of Palestine were Israelites, but because they were men, that they prayed. Prayer was the custom of mankind. "It seems," says Archbishop Potter, "to have been the universal practice of all nations, whether civil or barbarous, to recommend themselves to their several deities every morning and evening. Whence we are informed by Plato that, at the rising both of sun and moon, one might everywhere behold the Greeks and barbarians, those in prosperity, as well as those under calamities and afflictions, prostrating themselves, and hear their supplications."

Whatever, therefore, was the variety or character of the objects of their prayer, mankind prayed. There was within the human bosom a feeling of the propriety and happiness and duty of elevating its thoughts to God, and supplicating from God what it stood in need of. Nothing could eradicate this want and craving. It is a part of human nature, as it is a part of that nature to require food and drink for the body. Atheism denounces prayer as a result of credulity or ignorance and is, therefore, not the producer of that creature, man, who, whatever be his circumstances, whether he is learned or ignorant, is as a general rule a being who prays. Atheism would pluck, if it could, this principle from man, but it cannot. Even at this skeptical age of the world, when faith is by many feebly held and by many fiercely assailed, the bells that call to worship throughout Christendom and the voice that from the mosque summons the Mohammedan world to prayer proclaim man to be one to whom prayer is a great natural want.

Again, atheism, in its interpretation of nature, runs counter to the feeling and judgment of humanity. "There was never a miracle," says Lord Bacon, "wrought by God to convert an atheist, because the light of nature might have led him to confess a God." We not infrequently hear of declarations of this power of nature operating upon minds of various powers and attainments. The great geologist Sir R. Murchinson gives this testimony: "I do not require a stimulus," he says, "to induce me to adopt natural religion, for I have it strongly implanted in me: and, if geology has done me no other good, it has, at all events, fortified me in this sense."

We read of sudden and permanent conversions from atheism to theism, wrought by the contemplation of some of the phenomena of nature. "Our view of the snow-capped mountains and ranges was sublime," says Mr. J. A. Lawson, "but a mass of dark-colored clouds hid the valleys below from sight. About four o'clock in the afternoon we observed the sun, reflecting on these clouds, lit them up with all the colors of the rainbow. The sight was marvelously wonderful and grand. I am not exaggerating it when I say that the effects of it on my mind were such as to inspire a gravity I had never experienced before. I was at that time a very young man, not gifted with much wisdom, and holding the doctrines of an atheist; but I came down from that mountain a firm believer in a Supreme Being, the majesty of whose wisdom was inexplicable and awful, and my conviction was permanent." The feeling and judgment of man, as a rule, in the contemplation of nature are opposed to the atheistic view.—Henry Constable.

THE COMING AGE OF GLORY

THE second advent of Christ could not have been distinctly predicted in the Old Testament as a second; that would have involved a premature revelation of Messiah's rejection by Israel, of His death and ascension into heaven, and of the present dispensation of grace to the Gentiles. Prophecies so clear as either to procure or to prevent their own fulfillment were never delivered by divine inspiration. The two comings of Christ, at that time both future and having one and the same object—to redeem and restore humanity and to destroy the works of sin—are seen as one in early prophetic vision.

A second coming of Christ is, however, extensively and clearly predicted in the Old Testament, of a character essentially different from His past coming, and which is to be accompanied by events of transcendent importance, none of which took place in connection with His first advent. It is therefore a future coming, and in relation to the first it is second. He did come in humiliation as a gracious Savior; He will come in glory as a righteous Judge and King. In other words, without the expression being used, the second coming of Christ is foretold and described in places too numerous to mention, in the Law, in the Prophets, and in the Psalms.—Selected.

MINOR CHORDS IN LIFE

By Charles W. Howe

THE thought of suffering is entirely out of harmony with fleshly inclination. No one wants to suffer, nor can one vision good arising out of the unenjoyable. This is the natural attitude of man. The fleshly viewpoint, however, is not the viewpoint of spiritual mindedness. The spiritual mind welcomes not only the joys of life, but the sorrows as well.

Solomon said, "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart. Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better."—Ecclesiastes 7:2, 3. The major chords of life bring pleasure, but the minor produce spirituality. And so we read, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."—2 Timothy 2:12.

The Revised Version renders the above scripture with the word "endure" in place of "suffer," but we are convinced by the Word that the true Christian must endure some very unpleasant things. We are told to "endure hardness" (2 Timothy 2:3), to "endure afflictions" (2 Timothy 4:5), and to endure "temptations" (James 1:12). Surely hardness, temptations, afflictions, and suffering go hand in hand.

Aside from the natural causes of ill health, there are two reasons why men suffer. They may suffer for sin, or they may suffer for righteousness. Of course, Paul did not mean suffering for sin when he said, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him." When a Christian suffers as an evil doer, he places a blot upon the name of Christ. That is why Peter wrote, "But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a busybody in other men's matters."—1 Peter 4:15.

The value of such suffering is hard to determine. Probably all the punishment of this life tends toward good, i. e., toward reform. Penal institutions today are run with that thought in mind. God punished Israel in the captivity and in the dispersion with such intentions.

But why should men lay themselves liable to such punishment when the benefits are so meager and hard to ascertain? Is there not a much better way of character development? Paul put the matter very concisely:

"Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid."—Romans 6:1, 2.

A course of sin is always to be regretted, even though God's abundant grace may be shown in full forgiveness. Even Paul reproached himself for his former course of unbelief and persecution, from which he was saved through direct revelation and suffering; God forgave him fully, and yet he must needs think of himself as "chief of sinners." It is well to remember, then, that sin leaves its scar even after the wound is healed, "for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

We referred to suffering for righteousness' sake. Is this necessary? Paul gives us the answer in 2 Timothy 3:12: "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Our Master was persecuted, the apostles were persecuted, the prophets were persecuted. Can we expect better treatment from the world than they received? And do not think that modern religious liberty does away with all persecution. The modern Christian has his trials, even though they are different in kind from that which befell the ancients. A lack of persecution would seemingly indicate a lack of consecration. Perhaps you will remember the words of Jesus, "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets."—Luke 6:26.

The sufferings in Christ are compared to a child receiving correction from his parent. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth (Please turn to Page Ten)

A Teacher's Psalm

FOR the joy of sharing what I know of Thee,
I give Thee thanks, O Lord.
For Thou hast placed before me Thy people
That I might instruct them.
And Thy little ones
That I might lead them.
Thou hast trusted me to lay my hands upon them,
And even as the skilled potter molds his clay into a lovely vessel,
To shape their lives and make them beautiful.
I thank, Thee, Lord, that Thou hast not left me unguided in my task,
That Thou hast given me for help a Great Example,
Even Thine own Son, Jesus, mankind's greatest Teacher,
Oh, make my hands all gentleness, like His;
Oh, make me full of sympathy and quick to understand;
Oh, make my heart all love for Thee, and for Thy children!
Father, as a teacher of those whom Thou dost love, make me like the Christ.

Beer and the Budget

“BEEER by Easter!” What a sacrilegious combination of ideas! And yet that has been the slogan of many of our leading newspapers for the past month or more. Although the Cleveland News calls the legalizing of beer “a social reform of the first magnitude,” the great majority of the editors are eloquently silent on the moral issue involved. They do not dare to arouse the momentarily slumbering better sentiment of the American people, and no doubt realize the truth of the exclamation made by Senator Sheppard of Texas from the floor of the Senate Chamber that the proposed legislation is “a desperate and tragic form of taxation!”

In urging the passage of the measure to place beer legally upon the market so that the millions of men who have been out of employment for months, and “every one that thirsteth,” may be able to come to the newly opened grogshops and buy beer “without money and without price” to pay for it, the President stated that the purpose of the modification of the Volstead Law was “to provide through such manufacture and sale, by substantial taxes, a proper and much-needed revenue for the Government.”

Just how “substantial taxes” can be collected from laboring men who have no jobs and whose families are being supported by the community is a little hard for one who is not a “statesman” to understand!

The National Government is not the only one that is loosening the strings of its flabby empty purse to receive the vast sums that are to come from the pockets of the unemployed millions in return for a foaming stein. The several states are passing emergency legislation in order that they, too, may have the legal right to reach their hands into those same bottomless sources of supply. And then comes the County with its outstretched hand, followed closely by the City with grasping fingers, all reaching for money that does not exist, but which is supposed to be hoarded away in pockets that have already been turned inside out and flapping in the winds of adversity for the past two years or more!

It really makes no difference in the long run whether it is the Government that reaps the profits from the sale of soul-destroying intoxicants, the lawful saloon keeper, or the bootlegging gangster; it is “the love of money” that prompts them all to engage in the traffic of the lives of men, women, and little children.

No constitutional amendment can ever take selfishness and the fruitage of selfishness from the human heart and life. Nothing but the power of God contained in the gospel of His Son can accomplish that miracle. And no government agency can do more than that which was suggested many years ago by Mr. Gladstone, when he said, “The proper function of a government is to make it easy for people to do right, and hard for them to do wrong.” That is all that law can do or hope to do. It cannot change the hearts of men, and that is what is needed the most.

Sin must be eradicated from the human heart, the motives of life must be changed, the selfish attitude that now governs must give way to ways that are divine and love-prompted. Praise God, such a change is coming! It is just over the horizon of tomorrow, when the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams!

“But crown Him King,
And Christ shall usher in a better day than e'er has been
For those who toil and those who spin,
And those the grain that garner in!”

Sum of the Ages

By Arlen Marsh

THROUGHOUT the unnumbered years that have passed since God pronounced the death sentence against Adam for the latter's violation of the divine law the history of men has been a record of crime and vilest blasphemy. For countless centuries a steady increase in sin has taken place, leaving in its wake a toll of agony and ruin. Gradually the spirit of evil has taken a more public hold upon the peoples of the earth, and this deep-rooted rebellion against Jehovah has culminated in the modern social and economic cataclysm. But the sum of the ages, the personification of all that is bad, is yet to come. The Antichrist, termed "the man of sin" by Paul in a letter to the Thessalonian church and popularly known by that title, is still to be revealed.

Any study of this individual "who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God" must be accompanied by a discarding of the time-worn prejudices now rampant regarding him. A clear, logical analysis of the texts relating to his character and accomplishments can attain nothing if confronted with the unreasoning obstinacy of one who is convinced of the truth of his beliefs merely because he has always believed them.

According to numerous texts too varied to be considered thoroughly in so limited a space, the Antichrist is to be revealed during the tribulation period as a ruler of considerable territory. It is a well established fact that biblical predictions point to a tremendous war which will be in progress about Jerusalem at the appearance of the Christ to judge the nations. Further, Ezekiel declares that Gog, Meshech, and Tubal, together with those nations "of the north quarters" (Ezekiel 38) will "go up to the land of unwalled villages," that is, Palestine, a British mandate, "to take a spoil, and to take a prey." But Tarshish, Sheba, and Dedan, or England and its allies, will rise to the defense of the Jews; and the outcome of the ensuing war will be merely that one half of Jerusalem will be taken and the remainder successfully protected (Zechariah 14:2).

Obviously the Antichrist cannot have any extended sway over the world if great powers exist to battle among themselves; nor will Jerusalem be the capital of his kingdom if Palestine is still under British protection. Beyond all this, there is positive scriptural indication of vast armies to battle with him, some of which he will conquer and some of which he will not. Certainly, no intelligent, miracle working world emperor would countenance military power sufficient to endanger him anywhere within his realms. And, since the battle of Armageddon comes last of all the events before the appearance of the Messiah, it is apparent that the Antichrist never will win control of the entire earth either by conquest or by diplomacy.

One of our young writers in this article suggests a possible limitation of the kingdom of the Antichrist, who is to be revealed in the closing days of Gentile times. It is a matter of interest rather than of vital importance, and yet to gain a correct perspective of the entire tribulation period is of great help in interpreting the prophecies relating to it, and in reaching right conclusions.

Much stress is laid on the statement of John in Revelation 13:7 and 8 that "a beast" will be worshiped by "all that dwell upon the earth" and that that beast will have power "over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." Reconciling these references with those previously discussed requires an interpretation in one of two ways: either "all" does not imply universal, but many, as is the case with several other texts; or (and this is the more reasonable view) the "beast" is no individual, but the figurative representation of man's government and sin, which all except the followers of the Christ do and will worship. Support is lent to this latter hypothesis by the fact that the second beast described in Revelation 13 apparently is a person, that he "exerciseth all the power of the first beast," and that he deceives "them that dwell on the earth," but not necessarily "all" them. A comparison between the first beast and the vision of Daniel 7:7 and 8, representing a combination of nations, reveals a striking similarity. There is, furthermore, no evidence given in Daniel's dream that the "little horn" (presumably the Antichrist, and commonly accepted as such) ever subdued more than the three horns, or governments, it uprooted during the vision described. Indeed, the next event recorded is the establishment of God's kingdom.

The word "all" in John's statement that "he," the Antichrist, "causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name," may well refer to classes, not numbers; that is, it may include every class of society, and not every individual. There is, moreover, no necessity for the vendor's or the buyer's having this seal: he may "have the name of the (first) beast"—he may simply have the everyday stamp of human government and customs; or he may have "the number of his name," defined as "the number of man," any man, man generically, man as a group. Further, the language of Revelation 13 would imply simply that the Antichrist causes this mark of the first, and probably impersonal, beast to be placed upon the subjects of the three kingdoms he succeeds in subduing.

It is certain that the Antichrist will be personified evil. It is certain that he will be a ruler. It is obviously impossible that he will control the whole earth, since no king would tolerate the possibility of well armed rebellion when he possessed ample power to eradicate it. Further, if everyone were to worship him personally and were subject to his will, there would be no incentive for rebellion. Finally, Zechariah establishes as fact that there will be independent nations and alliances at the time of the appearance of Jesus at Jerusalem. The Antichrist will not be master of the world, but rather the sum of the ages of men's sin.

Examine Yourself

By Lulu Johnson

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves."—2 Corinthians 13:5.

IF THERE ever was a time when it was necessary to heed Paul's admonition to examine ourselves, that time is now. Many changes have taken place, and human events are vastly different, since these words were spoken. But human nature has remained the same, and all down through the years Paul's advice has stood good for each and every responsible person.

But now, when all about us, even over our heads and under our feet, are the signs of the closing days of this age, and the nearness of Christ's coming, it behooves us more than ever to be on our guard. The reason is obvious. The world is so literally enveloped in sin that we have little else but the environments of sin on every hand.

A child may have the best and noblest parentage, yet to send that child without proper training into the world is like sending a lamb into a den of wolves. Heredity is soon devoured by evil environment. Wickedness is more subtle and difficult to discern in these days than in times past.

After self-preservation, I think, comes self-justification as one of the first laws of nature. Humanity is forever trying to justify its sinful desires, with our best educated minds thinking up cunning arguments that make black seem white, and wrong seem right, until the wise are deceived and even the very elect, if it were possible.

But there is one sure way to know without a doubt what is wrong and what is right. All the splendid arguments of the most learned minds fall flat if they cannot measure up to Paul's simple rule. If they can be listed under the head of any of the following then you can be sure they are the "works of the flesh." "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."—Galatians 5:19-21.

In these few words we have the head under which nearly every human shortcoming can be catalogued, and by making a careful study of them we can be our own judge, jury, prosecutor, and witness.

Glancing over the list we might say, "I am none of these." But look again. Do you know the full meaning of each one? Be your own judge. How do you stand? If your name does not appear under the head of at least one of those given, you are indeed fortunate, for many could find it under more than one.

Are you ready and willing to put away all carnal desires, all worldly pleasures, that come under the head of the "works of the flesh"? Are any of them worth losing an inheritance in the kingdom for?

The life of the real Christian is ever an uphill pull. Many obstacles beset his path, but the most difficult ones to overcome are within himself. The most dreaded foe is silent and unseen. The hardest battles ever fought are those within the soul. The greatest heroes are those who march without banners and are unsung, but who have faced their foe and are victors over self. These the world knows not, but God knows them, and that is enough.

"And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."—Galatians 5:24.

MYSELF AND ME

I have to live with myself, and so
 I want to be fit for myself to know;
 I want to be able, as days go by,
 Always to look myself straight in the eye.
 I don't want to stand, with the setting sun
 And hate myself for the things I've done.
 I want to go out with my head erect;
 I want to deserve all men's respect;
 But here in the struggle for fame and pelf
 I want to be able to like myself.
 I don't want to look at myself and know
 That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.
 I can't ever hide myself from me;
 I see what others may never see;
 I know what others may never know;
 I never can fool myself, and so
 Whatever happens I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free.

The Clouds of War

By George B. Alldridge

"But when all this is beginning to take place, grieve no longer. Lift up your heads, because your deliverance is drawing near."—Luke 21:28, Weymouth

A FEW days ago Sinclair Lewis (author of Main Street) returned from Europe. You recall he had been awarded the Nobel Prize, the first American to receive this distinguished honor for literature.

He said that in less than two years Europe would be plunged into war. Great Britain, Russia, and the United States would hold themselves aloof, taking no part in the hostilities raging among these Powers. After the struggle, he believes, the nations involved will become so exhausted that they will fall a prey to the propaganda of communism, circulated by agents, now being educated by Russia for that purpose.

Forty years ago I heard a sermon by the late A. B. Simpson upon the text cited above. The illustration he used deeply impressed itself upon my mind. He said that the thought Jesus had in mind was a little bird perched on the branch of a tree; a noise arrests its attention, so immediately it begins to poise its wings and gathers itself ready for flight. This beautiful illustration represents our attitude today, as we hear the rumbling of war sounding more loudly every day.

Last week I read this item in The Cleveland Press: "Paris, March 3 . . . European munition factories have been working overtime to fill secret shipments of war materials to centers of international disputes, it was revealed today. Railroad workers at Hortenburg, lower Austria, looked into a freight car shipment and discovered that materials labeled as 'Old Iron' actually consisted of 50,000 rifles and 200 machine guns, sent from Verona."

An amusing incident recently took place in the lower House of the British Parliament. A Labor representative called the attention of his fellow members to a fact which to his knowledge occurred in an anteroom adjacent to the office of one of England's largest munition factories. Two purchasing agents representing China and Japan met in the same room at the same time, awaiting an interview with the company's officials to negotiate the purchase of munitions for their respective Governments. They agreed that the company's prices were too high, so they further agreed that neither would purchase unless the prices were reduced. Result: the price was reduced forty per cent over the original quotation. In the meantime the British Government had placed an embargo on munitions shipped to China and Japan!

Many of my readers will recall England's attitude during our Civil War in the case the Alabama, built by Laird and Son at their dock at Birkenhead and permitted to sail over the protest of our Government, which called the incident breach of neutrality.

Big Business, God is watching you and your hypocritical business deals; and one of these days not far off you will wake up and realize that James meant you when he wrote his epistle. (See chapter 5:1-6.) Then, too late to mend your methods, the full significance of Psalm 49:17-20 will be visited upon you.

Some time ago I wrote an article quoting A. K. Chesterton, who said that war would break out between Germany and Poland. Through an error it read, "Russia and Poland."

I recall very vividly the war between Russia and Turkey in 1877-78. At that time I was a boy in the British Navy. The Russian Army at a fearful loss of life defeated Osman Pasha at Plerna. It seemed that Russia would soon enter Constantinople. The British fleet placed itself in a position to prevent this, and it looked then as if war would be declared against Russia. The jingos shouted for war; many patriotic songs were composed and sung. One I remember, and as a boy sang just as lustily as the rest. I will quote the refrain of one which, by changing a few countries, meets the condition in Europe today.

"The Turkey was put on the table;

And Russia, he held the fork;

Germany held the carving knife;

Austria did all the talk.

France stood by with a napkin,

While the rest of the folks were out.

Says Germany, 'We will now commence

To carve this bird about.'

Just then the door flew open,

Old England says, 'Good day.

Before your dinner commences

I have a word to say.

You didn't expect that I would call,

But now I am on the spot.

I won't stand by with a tear in my eye

And see you gobble the lot.' "

What has become of the convention at Geneva to consider world disarmament? I wish the chaplain before offering prayer at their sessions would open his Bible and read 1 Thessalonians 5:1-3. I am sure it would help these statesmen to do some clear thinking. I wonder if, instead of discussing disarmament, the delegates are not considering the turn of events in the United States, Europe, and the Far East?

What is to be the outcome of the tension existing among Germany, Italy, and the Central European Powers on the one hand, and France, Poland, and the Little Entente on the other? Here is a headline of the Current News: "French Plants Rush Munitions for Jap Army. Turn Out Bombing Planes, Other Supplies on Rush Orders." Even this morning I note that France is accusing Germany of permitting some of Hitler's followers to invade French territory!

I used to frown upon the teachings of the coming Antichrist, considering that prophecy had been fulfilled regarding him in the organization of one of our great religious bodies. Listen to what I read last evening: "In Germany, it is pointed out, a dangerous situation continues to develop. Predictions of which way it will turn when the crisis comes are sheer guess-work. The nation has turned Fascist, Chancellor Hitler is on the way to become dictator, and there are rumors even that he may try to make himself kaiser." Remember how this same Hitler hates the Jew; and the coming dictatorship the Scriptures point out is one of his strong desires.

Brethren, the fact is we of this generation must be alert, shake off our preconceived opinions, and with ears to the ground listen attentively to what the Lord is saying. France, armed to the teeth, is watching developments with grave anxiety.

Have you read the platform upon which Chancellor Hitler recently was elected? Here it is: revision of frontiers, the return of Germany's lost colonies, union with Austria, repudiation of reparations, and a war-machine equal to that of her strongest neighbor. There is a report that an alliance has been formed between Hitler and Mussolini or that it is impending, also alliances with Austria, Hungary, and Bulgaria.

Philip Simms says that on the eastern frontier lies Poland in nervous dread of an expected German coup to wipe out the Polish corridor and take the free city of Danzig. That would mean war. For, if Poland was ever determined over anything, she is determined to resist to the last drop of her blood any return of corridor territory, or of Danzig to Prussia. This situation in itself, it is said, is ample to prevent France or Poland or any other allies in Central or Southeastern Europe from disarming at this time, whatever they may do in the future.

In the Far East Japan is establishing a new empire on the Asiatic mainland. How much farther she will go, no one in the chancelleries of the Western World can more than guess. Russia is uneasy. A Japanese attempt to take Vladivostok and everything south and east of the Amur River, belonging to the Soviet Union, is openly feared. Russia, therefore, will not disarm soon. Thus, as disarmament admittedly must be on a world scale or not at all, hope that the Geneva Arms Conference will get very far at this time is exceedingly slim.

Meanwhile, the economic situation in the United States and Europe, it is observed, can hardly be allowed to drift. To do so, Europeans, at least, assert, would be fatal to America as well as to Europe.

Dear brethren, in the face of this how sweet these words are: "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."—Isaiah 2:4.

BIBLE FRUITS IN THE UNITED STATES

SOMEHOW Bible lands seem more real as we think of the likeness of some of them to parts of our own great country.

Of course Palestine is the Bible land of which we think first and most often. Two sections of the United States are similar in many ways to this country on the eastern shores of the Mediterranean. Their products include many things whose names we first learned from the pages of Scripture. Of these two favored regions, California is most like Palestine.

Palestine has a coastal plain, protected from the desert by mountains. Its valleys are fertile and delightful because of these rocky ranges, which temper alike the cold and fog of the sea and the hot desert winds. If we look at a relief map of the Pacific Coast region, we note the same physical features, which, of course, determine the similarity of climate.

The vegetables and fruits of Egypt for which the children of Israel longed on the march to Canaan, are all grown in California, as are also the cereals and grains, the herbs, many of the flowers, and much of the native shrubbery. Vineyards dotted the land of Palestine, and today they are represented in California by an investment of some $350,000,000. Trees, too, which flourished beside the Sea of Galilee, or near the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, are found on the shores of the Pacific. Cedars and mulberries, oaks and palms, olives and flowering trees like oleanders are everywhere. Walnuts grew first in Syria, we are told, and California and Oregon together produce practically all that are grown commercially in the United States. The almond tree, mentioned in Scripture, is thoroughly at home in California, too, this state growing at least one-third of the almonds consumed in this country.

Fruit trees from the Old World, after devious journeys, have likewise reached the Golden State. The carob tree, for instance, often called "St. John's Bread" and used in the Mediterranean countries for stock food, is an ornamental shade tree in California. Its thick, glossy leaves repel the sun's rays, and it thrives in a semi-dry soil. The pomegranate is another fruit mentioned frequently in the Bible. A native of Persia, it became a prime favorite in ancient Greece and Rome. Spain, the garden kingdom, sent cuttings to its province of Mexico, and the early Spanish missionaries brought them into California. The bushes are extremely beautiful, and the fruit yields a healthful drink. Some twenty-three hundred acres are planted in pomegranates, and the fruit is shipped to all the principal markets of the country.—The Gideon.

Examples of the Power of Prayer

By Lyman Booth

THE BIBLE account of the power and influence of prayer is the best we have or can have.

Abraham's servant prayed, and Rebecca appeared in answer to his prayer. Jacob prayed, and it was given him to overcome the angel; also, Esau's revenge was changed to fraternal love. Joseph prayed, and was delivered from an Egyptian prison and rose to eminence in the government. Moses prayed, and Amalek was discomfited and Israel prevailed.

Hannah prayed, and that good man, Samuel, the prophet, was born. She was a prophetess, as her hymn of thanksgiving shows at the birth of her son. Joshua prayed, and the sun stood still. He led Israel across the Jordan River, conquered most of the land, and gave inheritance to the tribes of Israel.

King David prayed. He was a man of prayer as well as a warrior. Ahithophel was privy counsellor to David, but joined Absalom and afterward hanged himself. Asa prayed, and Israel won a glorious victory. Jehoshaphat prayed, and received God's smiles instead of His threatened anger.

Elijah prayed; a little cloud appeared which spread over the land, and refreshing rain fell upon the earth, and the earth brought forth her fruit. In answer to prayer by Elisha the waters of the Jordan were divided; also, a child was restored to life. Hezekiah prayed, and his life was prolonged for fifteen years.

Mordecai prayed; Israel was saved from slaughter, but their enemy Haman was hanged on the gallows he intended for Mordecai. Nehemiah prayed; Cyrus' heart was softened, and he permitted Israel to return to Jerusalem to rebuild the temple. Ezra prayed, and the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid, and the walls of the temple were built, and all the people rejoiced.

Herod placed Peter in prison, bound with chains, under heavy guards. The church prayed for him. An angel released him from his chains and led him to freedom.

Paul and Silas prayed; the earth quaked, the prison trembled, the fetters fell off their hands, the doors opened, the keeper of the prison was converted, he and all his house.

Christ prayed; an angel strengthened Him. He prayed for His apostles, likewise for all who should believe on Him through their word. Their word has enjoined upon those believers the duty of confessing their faults one to another, and of praying one for another. James 5:15, 16 adds, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." He does not say how much. That may depend upon trial and experience. This much we may know as-surely: that the prayer of faith will not want for effect. As faith is so great among favors, so is prayer among Christian duties. It is wonderful to contemplate what the Scriptures attribute to faith and prayer. Prayer asks for blessings in the court of grace, and faith receives them. Prayer and the answer to it are simply the request on one side and the compliance with that request upon the other. Thus, man applies, and God complies; man asks a favor, and God bestows it.

The noblest saints who ever lived, whether under law or grace, are on a plane quite within our reach. If we had the same strength of faith, the same hope, the same fervency of love, which they exhibited, we could achieve marvels as great as those which they performed. I do not mean those which change the face of nature in its outward appearance, but those higher marvels which change the mind and passions, the heart and will, of men. It would enable God's servants to call down the gracious dews and the melting fires of God's love, as it was possible in Elijah's prayer to call down literal rain and fire, if we could only speak the words with the same assurance of faith with which he spoke.

Though this high degree of faith which they possessed may not be within our reach, we should not say, "God has put the greatest standards of holiness out of our reach." That is not true. That objection is met by examples of the occasional failures and feebleness of His most illustrious and faithful servants. They were "men of like passions with ourselves," though directly under the influence of those principles which brought God into immediate relation with them, and thereby lifted them above self and the world.

Brethren may err from the truth. There is no saint mentioned in the Bible whose failings and errors are not recorded. So in the visible church there may be some one who is sometimes led astray even into great errors. The words "convert him" are better understood by "restore him" from his errors. To restore him who has gone astray is one of the principal acts of Christian duty. To help others is to help ourselves. Every effort we make to bring another to Christ only binds us closer to Him. If we would learn, we should teach. It will help to clear our minds and may reveal unsuspected deficiencies in our own knowledge of the truths that come from the fountain of all truth; and we may feel more fully the force of Paul's injunction to Timothy, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

ANOTHER fatal objection to atheism and its system of creative force as the originator of all things, is that it runs counter to established facts. A single miracle, wrought in answer to human prayer, is altogether fatal to the idea of atheism. We do not wonder at the hostile attitude which atheism has assumed towards miracles such as are recorded in the Bible. It has assailed it with ridicule and with reasoning, because its advocates know full well that the established truth of the miracles of Scripture would scatter its theory to the winds. They may, however, argue against their possibility, or try to turn the laugh against them, but they are facts which no careful and unprejudiced judge of testimony can deny.

We have not the slightest hesitation in saying that the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead is the best established fact in history. That one fact overturns atheism. So does every one of the miracles wrought in answer to human prayer, or at the instance of man.

The miracle upon Mount Carmel, when Elijah appealed to Jehovah in the presence of Ahab and the priesthood of Baal and the multitudes of Israel, that fire should descend from heaven in attestation that He alone should be acknowledged as the true God, and the answer to the prayer in the descent of fire, and its consuming the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and its licking up the water that was in the trench, was just as much the overthrow of atheism as it was the overthrow of the claim of Baal to be the God of Israel (1 Kings 18:37, 38). It was wrought at the time fixed upon by Elijah, in answer to Elijah's prayer, and was, therefore, no wonder wrought by creative force, but by a personal Creator, who heard and answered prayer.

The miracle at Bethany, when Jesus stood over the tomb of Lazarus and lifted up His eyes to heaven and prayed for the resurrection of his friend and then cried in loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth," and when in answer to the prayer and to the command Lazarus came forth, was just as much proof of a personal God hearing prayer and having power over nature as it was proof that Jesus was a messenger from this living God (John 11:43). The atheist's creative force would and could have returned no answer to the prayer of Jesus. Let us suppose it endowed with what power we please, capable of works equal to or superior to the raising of a dead man to life, there is one power which no atheist dares to attribute to it, and that is the power to hear and answer human prayer. If this power were claimed for it the atheist must abandon his atheism, for a power which can hear the prayer of a man and reply to it is not a blind force but a personal God. If the atheist's creative force were the supreme power in the universe Jesus might have lifted up His eyes to heaven and prayed with all earnestness to One who, as He believed, ruled from thence, and commanded with a loud voice Lazarus to come forth, but there could have been no reply; the dead figure would not have risen up and come forth. The resurrection of Lazarus is the proof of a personal God.

So is every miracle wrought at the instance or at the prayer of man. Beyond the power of man, at whose prayer it is wrought, there must needs be a greater power than human to accomplish it. What is that power? is the only reasonable inquiry. Is it creative force or a Creator? Is it a person, or a power? We do not dispute the power of the force to work equal or greater miracles. Let this be fully conceded. But how account for the sea going back by the strong east wind just when Moses stretched out his hand? How account for the fire falling from heaven just when Elijah asked for it? How account for the figure, bound with graveclothes, coming forth from the tomb just when Jesus said, "Lazarus, come forth"?

These miracles are types and patterns of all the miracles of Scripture. They are not prodigies taking place without warning, and then laid hold of for their own purposes by designing men. They are works of a wonderful kind, beyond the power of any human agents connected with them, but still they have occurred at the instance, the command, the prayer of man. This fact in their history establishes the character of their worker. That worker was no blind, unhearing power of nature, but a Being, a Person, who had ears to hear, and who heard, who had power to work and who worked at the prayers of His creatures. The miracles of the Bible establish beyond any fair question the personality of the power that wrought them.

We repeat that we do not deny that creative force (if that were the origin of all things) could have wrought wonders as wonderful as any recorded miracles; for example, as wonderful as the passage of the Red Sea, the falling of Jericho's walls, the staying of the sun in the sky. Supposing, for the moment, that a blind creative force were the producer of all things, it does not concern us in the smallest measure to deny or to diminish its marvelous force. Wonders as wonderful as the miracles of the Bible have been, and are, daily wrought in nature. The first arrangement of the sun and the planetary system is as wonderful as the sun standing still upon Gibeon, and the moon in the valley of Ajalon. The overthrow of Lisbon is equal to, or greater, than the overthrow of Jericho. The mighty earthquake, which rolls the ocean over the dry land, is not very inferior to the effect of the strong wind that rolled back the waters of the Red Sea.

But when we associate miracles with prayer and human agency they are taken out of the category of the events produced by creative force, and put into the category of events produced by a personal God. Of such a kind are the miracles of Scripture. It was at the prayer of Moses, and the lifting up of his rod, that the miracles in Egypt and in the wilderness took place. It was at the shouting of the people and the sound of the trumpet as ordered by Joshua that the walls of the city of Jericho fell down flat. It was at the command of Joshua, in the sight of Israel, that the sun stood still, and the moon stayed. These were all great works, beyond human power to compass, but not greater than multitudes of other works which the atheist ascribes to a blind, unconscious creative force. But the peculiar marvel of these miracles of Scripture, not superior in themselves to the miracles of the atheist's nature, is that they were wrought at the command and the instance of man. That command we, just as much as the atheist, do not consider to have, in the smallest measure, wrought or helped on the work. Neither Moses with his rod nor Joshua with his trumpets of rams' horns exercised the smallest power in producing the works at which Israel gazed in astonishment. But their occurrence at the prayer and the command of men evidenced the presence at the scene of a great Being, who heard, as He suggested and inspired, human prayer. If He had not been there, the rod of Moses would have been raised, and the command of Joshua uttered, but no response would have been made.—Henry Constable.

AM I A CHRISTIAN?

By Mary A. Gesin

AS OUR pastor on Sunday morning, March 26, put this question to those assembled for worship and showed the way in which it may be answered conclusively, each one present thoughtfully pondered in his mind, Am I a Christian?

We cannot trust our hearts to answer the query, said Brother Marsh, for the Prophet Jeremiah tells us that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" And "out of the heart of men proceed evil thoughts," said Jesus. Though many sincere Christians think to answer this question by the testimony of their hearts, surely we should put no confidence in anything so deceptive.

Shall we ask the Lord for a definite sign giving us the answer to this question? the speaker continued. If we honestly weigh and consider some of the results among those who are today offering a "miracle" as testimony that they are Christians, we must reject that means also whereby we arrive at an answer. Almost daily we may read of some act of violence or confusion perpetrated by one under the influence of such delusions. Surely not to God, who is the Author of love and of order, can be attributed these things.

The only source on which we may place dependability to answer this most important question, then, is the Word of God. We are told in the Hebrew epistle that "without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

Suppose that Christ should come to you today, said Brother Marsh, and should say to you that if you would do a certain thing for Him He would, in turn, do something for you. Would you believe Him? Would you have that faith in Him that the Apostle tells us is necessary in order to please Him? Eagerly we would all answer this question in the affirmative. How simple and joyful would be the task to perform for Him, while how immeasurably valuable would be the gift He might give us in return!

Let us turn to His Word and discover, if we may, something He has asked us to do in return for which He will give us a gift of untold worth. Here it is, Mark 16:15, 16: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized," the Savior promised, "shall be saved."

Many texts from God's Word which gave us the answer to our question were brought to our attention by Brother Marsh. If you believe the gospel that Jesus preached while here on earth with a full understanding of all that includes in daily living, if you have performed that service for Him which He requires of you—baptism—you may answer the question positively for yourself; you are a Christian.

May each of us take to ourselves the kindly counsel given us by our pastor and exemplify in our lives that we truly belong to Christ and are following in His footsteps, bringing honor to the name Christian.

KITCHENER AND THE BIBLE

THE BIBLE has always held an appeal for great minds. England's military chief, Lord Kitchener, cherished many memories closely associated with its stories. This silent, undemonstrative man, who was generally supposed to be cold and unfeeling, had a fine reverence for sacred things.

Upon the completion of his military course, when he emerged a lieutenant of the engineers, he asked to be sent to Palestine to make a survey of that country, because it had become a fascinating land to him through the twilight times of his boyhood when he and his brothers listened to the stories their mother told them. He followed the course of the wandering Isaac, moved over the desert spaces in the footprints of Ishmael, and climbed to where the multitude stood during the sermon on the mount.

Time and again Lord Kitchener read the Bible during his two years in Palestine, linking its great narratives with the hills along which they dragged the surveyor's chain, finding in it a never-ending satisfaction. When one thinks of the reverence of this silent man for the Bible lands and its associations, he cannot help wondering what pictures must have come to him that night, when, embarking on the voyage from which he was not to return, he went down with the steamer Hampton and five hundred of his gallant seamen.—Selected.

BOOK OF DANIEL VERIFIED BY RECENT FINDS

SIR CHARLES MARSTON, writing of recent discoveries at Ur of the Chaldees, says: "Mr. Wooley (director of the joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania and the British Museum) has discovered the palace of Princess Bel Shalti Nanna . . . believed to have been the sister of King Belshazzar of Babylon, whose great feast was interrupted by the writing on the wall. Their grandfather, Nebuchadnezzar, the conqueror of Jerusalem, took the Jews back to Babylon. Archaeology has proved that this sack of the Holy City did take place, and it is quite feasible that the captive Daniel may have seen Belshazzar's palace. Many biblical archaeologists have doubted the authenticity of the book of Daniel, but this discovery does much to confirm the historical accuracy of the story of King Belshazzar. Cuneiform writings of the sixth century B. C., inscribed on clay tablets nearly twenty-five hundred years ago, have already been deciphered, giving clear-cut evidence of the reality of Belshazzar, and remarkable confirmation of the subject matter of the fifth chapter of the book of Daniel."

MINOR CHORDS IN LIFE

every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."—Hebrews 12:6-8. And so, if we are persecuted, let us rejoice, even though it come from those of whom we might expect better things. If all the world turn against us we may well rejoice, if we are indeed suffering for righteousness.

The poet expressed the need of the minor chord in life in the words:

"Shall I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
While others strive to win the prize,
And sail through bloody seas?"

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me."

Right here a note of warning is in order. We must be careful that we are not suffering as evil doers rather than as saints of God. People are prone to apply their sufferings wrongly. They often think that they are being persecuted on behalf of their stand for Christ, when they are in reality suffering the natural consequences of their own misdeeds.

The benefit of chastening is well set forth in Hebrews

12:11: "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." Such statements convince one that righteousness cannot be attained without some kind of suffering. The exhortation in 1 Peter 4:19 should, then, be in order: "Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator."

Even Jesus was perfected by suffering: "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings."—Hebrews 2:10. This refers, of course, to the persecutions which He endured, to the bitter disappointment He experienced when "his own received him not," to the agony of Gethsemane, and to the tortures of Calvary. We read concerning Him that He "for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."—Hebrews 12:2. The reference to our Lord as being perfected through suffering reaches back even to the time when He was led of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil. He was victorious over temptation; and so it yielded in Him the peaceable fruit of righteousness, as He was exercised thereby. He differed from us in that His victory was complete, while we fall far short of His divine example.

Surely temptation has its benefits for us also, if we yield not. James said, "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations. Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience."—James 1:2, 3. Temptation, if conquered, develops character. The poet puts it thus:

"Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin;
Each victory will help you, some other to win."

Therefore, we should rejoice in temptation, not for its possibility of sin, but for the assurance of benefit. And we need not yield to temptation, for God has promised victory to them who rely on His power. The promise is found in 1 Corinthians 10:13: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

A modern version of the Lord's Prayer substitutes the word "leave" in place of "lead," and "trial" in place of "temptation." The first change harmonizes very nicely with the scripture quoted above, while the second broadens the meaning to include all suffering for righteousness. The prayer, "Lead us not into temptation," is not so inclusive nor so full of meaning as when it is offered thus: "Leave us not in trial; but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen."

When the minor chords of persecution or temptation or trouble sound in our lives, let us not complain, but rather glorify God. Let us trust Him, and by His power endure unto the end. Let us keep the promise in mind: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."

"THAT I MAY KNOW HIM, AND THE POWER OF HIS RESURRECTION, AND THE FELLOWSHIP OF HIS SUFFERINGS, BEING MADE CONFORMABLE UNTO HIS DEATH; IF BY ANY MEANS I MIGHT ATTAIN UNTO THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD."—PHILIPPIANS 3:10, 11.

IF THERE BE NO RESURRECTION

RESURRECTION is the reverse of death. It is death's undoing. For resurrection, the very word itself, signifies a rising up; death, a falling down. That the dead should be raised is a standing indictment of the doctrine of human immortality; for if one goes once to heaven and bliss at death, it is nothing to him if the dead never be raised.

Our Lord by His own personal resurrection brought life and immortality to light. 2 Timothy 1:10. Our own hope of life is wrapped up in resurrection. Without it there is no future life at all. Study the argument of Paul in 1 Corinthians 15:12-22: "If the dead rise not . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." This is strong language. How could it be true if the dead were enjoying heaven?

Evidently the resurrection meant everything to Paul, if Acts 23:6 and Philippians 3:11 and 1 Corinthians 15:29-32 mean anything. And the ancient worthies, all of whom were made perfect through faith (Hebrews 11:1-34), suffered and died for their hope of a resurrection. Hebrews 11:35. None of them expected to go to heaven, and none of them have. Hebrews 11:39, 40. For we are not rewarded at death, but at the resurrection. Luke 14:14; Revelation 20:4, 5.

Salvation rests upon our believing that Jesus rose from the dead. Romans 10:9. If we deny that He died, we deny His resurrection. Natural immortality glorifies death, making resurrection meaningless. But the Bible sets forth resurrection as our only hope of life. John 11:23-25; 1 Thessalonians 4:14-18.—Life and Immortality, Senior Book II.

HUMILITY WITH RESPECT TO INTELLECTUAL ATTAINMENTS

EVERY man naturally desires to increase in knowledge; but what doth knowledge profit without fear of the Lord? Better is the humble clown that serveth God than the proud philosopher who, destitute of the knowledge of himself, can describe the course of the planets. He that truly knows himself becomes vile in his own eyes, and has no delight in the praise of man. If I knew all that the world contains, and had not charity, what would it avail me in the sight of God who will judge me according to my deeds?

Rest from an inordinate desire of knowledge, for it is subject to much perplexity and delusion, and it is surely a proof of folly to devote ourselves wholly to that with which our supreme good has no connection . . . A pure conscience is the foundation of a firm and immovable confidence in God. The more thou knowest, and the better thou understandest, the more severe will be thy condemnation, unless thy life be proportionately more holy. Be not, therefore, exalted for any uncommon skill in any art or science; but let the superior knowledge that is given thee make thee more fearful, and more watchful over thyself. If thou supposest that thou knowest many things, and hath perfect understanding of them, consider how many more things there are which thou knowest not at all, and, instead of being exalted with a high opinion of thy great knowledge, be rather abased by an humble sense of thy much greater ignorance. And why dost thou prefer thyself to another since thou mayest find many who are more learned than thou art, and better instructed in the will of God?

The highest and most profitable learning is the knowledge and contempt of ourselves; and to have no opinion of our own merit, and always to think well and highly of others, is an evidence of great wisdom and perfection. Therefore, though thou seest another openly offend, or even commit some enormous sin, yet thou must not from thence take occasion to value thyself for thy superior goodness; for thou canst not tell how long thou wilt be able to persevere in the narrow path of virtue. All men are frail, but thou shouldst reckon none so frail as thyself.

OUR EVER-LIVING LORD

IF WE thought for one moment that Jesus our Savior were still in the grave, our hearts would be very sad indeed, wouldn't they? We could not bear it. You remember last week we read that when Jesus told Peter that He must suffer and die Peter could not bear the thought, even though Jesus also told him He would rise from the dead after three days. Peter couldn't understand that; he couldn't see how his Master could endure such pain, suffer death, and arise to live once more.

Peter and James and John had followed Jesus throughout His public ministry. They had seen Him sacrifice all things for the sake of others. They had seen Him tired and heavy of heart. But now they were to see another side of the picture.

And the dear Savior, knowing how heavy the hearts of His disciples were going to be when all was finished and He was laid in the tomb, took Peter and James and John up to a high mountain one day and showed them a beautiful sight. This was probably on the lofty Mount Hermon that we spoke of last week, you recall. But they did not ascend to the summit, for it was very high and was covered with snow. They stopped on one of its lower peaks.

And as the four of them stood there, the appearance of Jesus began to change. His garments turned to dazzling white, and a glorious heavenly light shone round about Him. Beside Him stood Elijah and Moses, and the three of them were talking together.

Now, Peter and James and John were startled and trembled with fear, while hark! a voice came from heaven, saying, "This is my beloved Son: hear him." Then, even as their wondering eyes gazed upon the sight, suddenly Jesus stood there alone, looking just as He always had looked.

In the days that followed, the three to whom Jesus had shown the vision of Himself as He would appear after His resurrection, must often have talked it over among themselves, wondering as to the meaning of it all. And after they had seen Him in reality, filled with all the glory of that immortal life with which He arose from the dead, they began to understand a little of it.

The Savior had said to them one day, "Because I live, ye shall live also." And that is the most precious thought to us of all the Easter lesson; that is the reason Easter is such a glad day for us; that is the reason we have joy in our hearts, songs on our lips, and smiles on our faces.

When the dear Savior comes back again, He will open the graves of those who are sleeping in death; and He will give them life such as He now has, if they have been true to Him. And those who are still living when He returns will be changed from mortal to immortal, even as He was on the day that His Father reached down and unlocked the tomb for Him. For "when he shall appear, we shall be like him," filled with life that shall never end.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Write at the top of the page, "The First Easter." Then copy these words: "For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come." Next clip this poem and paste it on the page:

"CHRIST HATH ARISEN

"Christ hath arisen, alive evermore;
Lo, the white robed ones sit by the door;
Dawn, golden morning; scatter, dark night;
Haste, ye disciples, be first with the light.

"Break forth into singing, O world new-born!
Chant the glad Eastertide, Christ's holy morn.
Hail Him, ye sunbeams, dancing in mirth!
Hail, all ye winds of God, coursing the earth!

"Greet Him, ye laughing flowers, fresh from the sod;
Greet Him, wild leaping streams, praising your God!
Break from thy winter, sad heart, and sing!
Bud with thy blossoms fair, Christ is thy spring.

"Come where the Lord hath lain; past is the gloom;
See the bright eye of day smile through the tomb.
Hark! angel voices fall from the skies:
Christ hath arisen! Glad heart, arise!"

Last on the page write, "The Open Tomb." Then draw a tomb such as they used in Jesus' time. It was probably on the side of a hill; color that green. The grave looked like a cave. Draw the stone with which they closed the opening, lying down upon the ground. Color that brown. Or, if you like, paste the picture which your teacher gives you on Easter Sunday. Write below it, "Because I live, ye shall live also."

JESUS TRANSFIGURED

Mark 9:2-29

Devotional Reading: 1 Corinthians 15:51-58

GOLDEN TEXT

Because I live, ye shall live also. — John 14:19.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Transfigured.

Aim: To cause the pupil to understand that the transfiguration vision was intended to teach the resurrection and glorification of the saints of all ages at Jesus' coming.

Basic Truth: "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, . . . for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."—1 Cor. 15:51, 52.

I. The Glorified Savior. (Vv. 2, 3.) The vision of the transfiguration presents the Easter message in its most beautiful and comprehensive form. It shows our Savior not alone as He appeared after His resurrection, but also as He will appear when He comes again, clothed with the glorious majesty of the eternal Father, His features shining with the inward spiritual light that has its source in immortality, crowned at last as King of kings and Lord of lords, in the midst of the saints of all ages, with whom He is associating on terms of closest intimacy.

II. The Glorified Saints. (Vv. 4-8.) The value and richness of the resurrection of our Lord is largely lost unless its vital bearing upon our own resurrection is clearly established. That is what the transfiguration presents with such startling clarity—Jesus glorified in the midst of His glorified saints! The light of the divine nature glowed in the countenance of the Lord and no doubt was reflected in the faces of Moses and Elias as they stood conversing in close association with Him. Moses, of whose death and burial we have the definite assurances of none other than God Himself, pictured in the vision as alive again from the dead, provides a most impressive type of the saints of God who sleep in Christ who will be restored to life when He comes. Elias, or Elijah, whose death is not recorded, who for some great purpose the fullness of which we may not fathom was caught away, also by the direct power of God, alive, representing the living saints who are taken up in the clouds to meet their descending Lord in the air when He comes. Then follows the blessed fellowship they are to enjoy with Him through the ages, for "so shall we ever be with the Lord."—1 Thess. 4:17.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A Vision of Realities: The transfiguration scene was a vision of the coming kingdom of God. It had nothing to do with any present phase of the kingdom, for the kingdom was not in existence. It had to do with the time when the "kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ."—Rev. 11:15. It was a "vision" (Matt. 17:9) of the realities of the kingdom. In this vision Christ appeared in the following manner: (1) personally; (2) visibly; (3) cor-porally. Personally, because He talked with the disciples and was seen of them. Thus being seen of them, He was visible to them. He appeared bodily, for "his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light."—Matt. 17:2. This was a miniature picture of kingdom conditions. As He appeared then, so will He be in the kingdom. His second coming and reign are set forth harmoniously with the above appearance.

Personally: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1:11.

Visibly: "Behold, he comes with clouds; and every eye shall see him."—Rev. 1:7.

Corporally: "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced"; "and one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands?"—Zech. 12:10; 13:6.

The appearance of Moses and Elias in this "vision" as "men" (Luke 9:30) "talking" with Jesus is evidence corroborating other biblical testimony of the reality of the blessed meek when they inherit the earth. Matt. 5:5. Real people in a real kingdom ruled over by a real Christ is the vivid picture of the transfiguration scene. Realities are the basis of the "truth" that makes us free. John 8:32 is anchored. Do away with reality, and the base or foundation is gone.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Because I live, ye shall live also."—John 14:19.

What a wonderful statement! "Because I live, ye shall live also." But what does it mean to you and me? Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, "neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Were we sinners? Have we come to Christ that we may be saved? Had Christ not come into the world and given His life a ransom for many, you and I would have no part in His kingdom.

And had Christ not been raised from the dead, His life would have been in vain; but thanks be to the Father, who brought Him forth and made it possible that we may say, "Because He lives, ye may live also."—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Meaning of the Transfiguration

We learned in our last lesson that Jesus expects His followers to have faith in God and in Him. We learned further that God never allows a great test of faith to come to anyone without first building up his faith. In Matthew 16:21 Jesus revealed for the first time the great fact of His approaching suffering and death. The disciples could not understand such instruction. They did not know that Jesus, as "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1:29), must be put to death as fully and as completely as the sacrificial lamb. Their love for the Master caused them to reject any such idea regarding Him. Peter's rebuke, "Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee," seems to express the sentiment of all.

Jesus remained firm in His announcement. This probably created grave doubts in their minds. We can hear them ask: "How can He become King over Israel if He is to die?" "How can He raise the dead if He Himself is to die?" To strengthen weak faith Jesus took Peter, James, and John up to the mount and was transfigured before them. He permitted them to see Him (in vision) as He would appear in His kingdom. He was assuring them that He would reign in glory even though put to death in the flesh. Yes, they were to realize that He was to pass through death and come forth as a glorified Conqueror. Their faith was being prepared for the great test already so near.

Moses stood on one side of Christ as evidence that the dead would be raised, and Elijah stood as evidence that the living would be changed. See John 5:28, 29; 1 Cor. 15:51, 52. Did Jesus not strengthen your faith in His future kingdom and coming resurrection by being transfigured?—H. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

The Glory of Jesus

Peter and James and John had followed Jesus throughout His public ministry. They had seen Him sacrifice for the sake of others all that mortal men crave; they had often witnessed His weariness of body and heaviness of heart; they had seen Him rejected by the people of His own locality. But daunted by none of these things, He went courageously on to the end. These disciples were now to see the other side of the picture. They were to witness their humble Master glorified, radiant with light which came from heaven, crowned with honor bestowed by a greater than mortal man—bestowed by God Himself. It was a vision of their Master as He would appear after His resurrection.

Turn to 1 Cor. 15 and read Paul's wonderful contrast of the natural body and the spiritual body in verses 40-49. Prior to His transfiguration Jesus had shown His disciples the meaning of service. The transfiguration, then, gave them a very real lesson on the rewards for service, and it must have often encouraged them during the days that were to come. Now read Eph. 1:18-23, and discuss some of the honor which came to Jesus as a result of His obedience. When did He receive this honor? He will receive it in even fuller power and glory when He comes again and bestows like honor upon the faithful.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

PLUM RIVER, ILLINOIS

Since Bro. Krogh has been with us, we have studied the Scriptures as never before; and it seems that we find them almost thrillingly interesting. We are so thankful to have such a devoted, humble servant of God among us. We never saw a young man more earnestly absorbed in the work than he is.

I wish each brother and sister from now on would try doubly hard to learn more and more of the truth and that each one would try to help his neighbor or weaker brother to come to see the light and be ready. We will be amply repaid both now and in the future. "Each shall receive his own reward according to his own labour."

How happy we will be if we can help some one else and at the same time helping ourselves so that more will be spared that "hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth."—Rev. 3:10. If we do this, more will be found with oil in their lamps; and the door will be open for us as the door of the ark was.

We surely need to watch and pray as never before; for we can see so many Bible prophecies being fulfilled, and they will only be fulfilled once. We can "see in a mirror darkly." "Behold, I come quickly."

Mrs. Mildred Crofton.

BURR OAK, INDIANA

The Burr Oak church is making preparations for special pre-Easter services. Bro. J. H. Anderson will speak April 13, 14, and 15, and on Sunday night a special program, "The Christian Trail," will be given, followed by remarks by Bro. Anderson.

The church has been working hard during the absence of its pastor, Bro Cecil A. Smead, and we pray for his return soon.

Mary Hatten.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

A large number of the church people surprised our pastor, John Denchfield, with a party Saturday evening, March 18, in honor of his birthday. A jolly time was had by all, and a delicious lunch was served. Bro. Denchfield was presented with a lovely birthday cake and a purse of silver.

Sunday school and church attendance has been about as good as usual, with plans under way for an Easter program.

Bro. Denchfield is the proud possessor of a big pile of wood. The wood, sawing, and hauling were donated, but John's powerful right arm was needed to get the trees ready to be sawed into wood.

An epidemic of mumps has been going among the church members since Christmas. While almost everyone has had them, there are still several families where mumps is an unwelcome guest. One family is shut in for scarlet fever.

Two of our church families have been brightened by the arrival of babies since our last report. Deacon and Sister Floyd Mills have a baby girl, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Flesland are the proud parents of a little boy.

Mrs. Herman Ruhn, Church Clerk.

PUTERBAUGH-MACY

A quiet wedding was solemnized Saturday evening, March 18, at our home in Tippecanoe City, Ohio, when Miss Mildred Puterbaugh became the bride of Mr. Emory Macy. Both the bride and groom are members of the Brush Creek Church of God. They will soon begin housekeeping on a farm east of West Milton, where we pray a happy married life may long be theirs.

On Friday evening, March 24, a wedding party and shower was given the newly married at our home, where ninety of the Brush Creek congregation assembled to wish them a long and happy marriage. We have greatly enjoyed this wedding, as it had been our former privilege to baptize into Christ both the husband and the wife.

Many of our Herald readers will recall having met these newly-weds at the General Conference last summer at Oregon, Illinois.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

RELIEF WORK

Easter will soon be here, and perhaps some of you are planning on making an Easter offering to some good cause. If so, please help this relief work, as it is needed very much and I am sure it will be an offering pleasing to God.

I wonder how many read Sr. Lottie Young's article in The Restitution Herald of March 7, where she told about "True Service." I was very much interested in it; for many times I have known families among our church people in dire need of the necessary things of life, and some have thought these people could be fed, warmed, and clothed with tracts and sermons. This is a common way of stating it, but nevertheless I know it to be true. Would it not be better, as is said in Sr. Young's article, in times of want and distress, to have a practical demonstration of Christian love to the needy ones and let them read the Bible in us?

This was said of a relief worker a short time ago by a child who had been given some very much-needed clothing by the worker, the widowed mother having been helped financially: "You are the best Christian in the world." This child could go to Sunday school after receiving the clothing and hear something of the lesson, rather than having her thoughts on her poor clothing and wishing she could look like the children of more prosperous parents. And, too, she did not have to go to Sunday school needing nourishing food, as I have known many children to do, the Sunday school teacher having called previously at the home to urge the mother to send her children to Sunday school, not giving it a thought that they were in a destitute condition.

In our desire to help in God's work let us not forget nor neglect to help the needy.

Orpha A. Sanford, Chairman of National Berean Relief Committee of the Church of God, 1030 Warren Ave., Downers Grove, Illinois.

NATHAN ORR

Nathan Orr was born in Coshocton Co., Ohio, Jan. 29, 1838, and died near Seircleville, Ind., March 29, 1933, at the age 95 years and 2 months. When a boy he came with his parents to Indiana and settled near Seircleville, where he spent his long life. He and Sallie McClland were united in marriage Sept. 19, 1858. Seven children were born to this union. Two preceded him in death and five, Austin, Lorenzo, Clinton, Mrs. Etta Hatch and Mrs. Ella Skinner survive. He also leaves nine grandchildren and thirteen great grandchildren and a host of friends. Two years after their marriage he and his wife were baptized into Christ by Eld. Hugh Barnhill. When the Hillisburg Church of God was organized they became members and remained faithful until death. Thus he was a member of this church for seventy-three years. This must be a record.

After the death of his wife he lived with the children, being at the home of his son Lorenzo during his last sickness.

Funeral service was held in the St. Paul Methodist Church by the writer, assisted by Eld. O. J. Parker, March 31, 1933, after which he was laid away to sleep until Jesus comes.

J. H. Anderson.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

The catalogue of our publications which we have planned to issue has been delayed due to various causes, but will be brought out at the earliest moment possible.

Notice: Will the friends of the relief work everywhere please observe that the address of the chairman of the Relief Committee is now located at 1030 Warren Avenue, Downers Grove, Illinois? The work needs all the help you can render.

Sr. Levi Mick, the efficient matron of Golden Rule Home, has been laboring faithfully in spite of weakness due to a brief illness to keep the Home bright and cheerful and its people well cared for. How we wish you might all drop in for a call and experience for yourselves the homelike atmosphere of this pleasant abode of our older ones. And there is room for others!

The need of a well organized and attractively prepared series of books and tracts on first principles becomes ever more apparent. Requests are coming in all the time for literature outlining the faith of the Church of God in a comprehensive way, but which we are unable to fill adequately. Let us think of this need as we plan our next year's budget for the General Conference.

Copies of "The Minute Man," an interesting little weekly published by the Mount Vernon Junior High School of Los Angeles, has reached our office. In glancing over the paper we notice the editorial staff is headed by "Bradley Crundwell, Editor-in-Chief." Mr. Crundwell is a son of Bro. and Sr. Ernest Crundwell, and is a member of the Los Angeles church. We welcome Bradley to the editorial fraternity with pleasure. He will be a credit to the profession.

In sending in a new subscription to The Restitution Herald, Elder E. O. Stewart of Sweetwater, Texas, writes appreciatively as follows: "I surely enjoy reading The Herald. Every issue brings a message of renewing and inspiring hope. It lifts one from the busy cares of life, and makes his path brighter as he pursues his way to that rest that remains for the people of God." For many years Bro. Stewart has been one of our most successful evangelists in the South, and has served the northern churches equally acceptably although in a more limited way as to time. The Easter Herald will have an article from Bro. Stewart's pen on "Baptism: A Bible Picture of the Resurrection Life."

Through the generous provision made in her will by Sr. Harriet E. Russell formerly of Chico, Calif., to which attention has been previously called, during the past week the National Bible Institution has been able to pay off nearly two thousand dollars of indebtedness, for which we are exceedingly grateful to the Father. Similar memorial provisions by others would soon place the Institution on a firm financial basis where it could press forward in evangelistic work in new places through the employment of some of our most able ministers, and it could also issue a series of readable books and tracts for wide distribution. The national board knew nothing of Sr. Russell's bequest until notice was received from the administrators of the estate.

The Oregon church was glad to welcome Bro. and Sr. Glen Starbuck back to their usual place in the evening congregation last Sunday. They have spent the last few months in Southern California, and have but recently returned home to Rockford, Illinois.

"The joy of life is to serve and bear one another up in prayer to the God of all comfort," writes Bro. Geo. B. Alldridge of Cleveland, Ohio. No other joy is equal to that which comes from serving the Father.

The Oregon church has taken its midweek prayer service to Golden Rule Home this winter so that those who could not otherwise be present might take part in the services. This change has been heartily welcomed by the Home family.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed at an out-of-town bank. Thank you!

Again the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution desires to thank the brethren who have responded so splendidly to our last appeal. Returns are not all in yet, but thus far our people have sacrificed nobly, as they always do in the interest of the general work of the church.

At the joint board meeting of the Illinois State Conference and the General Conference, which was held recently, some very interesting plans were made for the forthcoming Bible School and Conference to be held in Oregon, Ill., next August. Watch for later developments.

Bro. Frederick Claussen of our printing plant force, who has been in Chicago for the past two weeks taking a short course in linotype operation and repairing, was again at work in the office Monday morning. Sr. Claussen accompanied her husband as far as Chicago, and then went on to Culver, Ind., for a short visit with relatives and friends at her girlhood home.

The National Berean Society regrets to announce that all books sold on and after April 1 to residents of Illinois will be subject to the additional cost of the 3% state sales tax. Books cannot legally be sold unless sufficient to cover the tax accompanies the remittance. Through an unfortunate oversight of the Sales Committee an error was made in the Truth Seekers' Quarterly advertisement of the Children's Bible Story and Study Book. The actual price scale is: single copy, 35¢; 5-24, 32¢ a copy; 25 or more, 30¢ a copy. All books sent prepaid.

Here is a suggestion from Sr. Ada C. Simpson of Grandville, Mich., that should be helpful to our regular contributors. After stating how much she enjoys The Herald, she says, "I like any articles that deal with the subjects of the Sunday school lessons, because they give additional topics to discuss in class." May not some of our writers look over the new quarterly in advance, and choose some phase of a future lesson for a special article to be published in time to be of benefit to the class?

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

"PRESENT CONDITIONS IN THE LIGHT OF PROPHECY"

Such is the title of a timely little work by Elder J. H. Anderson on the "Cause and the Remedy" of present world-wide distress and perplexity. It is a booklet of 24 pages, envelope size, that is priced at ten cents per copy, postpaid. It may be secured from the author, J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Indiana.

NOT IMPOSSIBLE

By D. G. Harvey

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"—Acts 26:8.

PAUL, the great Apostle, used the words of our text in his defense before King Agrippa. Speaking to men of culture, he asked the question, "Why does it seem impossible to you?"

The learned men of his day could not comprehend an act of resurrection on the part of God. They had no background to which to point to decide the question. So it is with the worldly-minded man today. He has no record from his studies of science on which to base his understanding. Profane history gives no record of such a resurrection. There is no wonder that the wise man, wise in the learning of the day, will ask, "How?"

While most church members will attend the Easter services and hear again the story of the first Easter morn, deep in the minds of many is the question, "How can this be?"

The fact that Jesus was not held by death, that He came forth from the tomb, has been proved by infallible evidence. Peter was a witness of that fact; the apostles all saw the risen Lord; five hundred were eye-witnesses; and last of all Paul received that proof by a vision (1 Corinthians 15:5-8).

Let us for a moment lay aside the fact of the divine inspiration of the apostles and consider their work merely as historians. What event in the history of the world can be said to have a greater wall of proof than the resurrection? The resurrection of Jesus the Christ is proved as soundly as any event which men accept as truth from past history.

Mankind has the natural desire for future life: for that reason even the heathen hope for life after death; being unable to comprehend life from the dead, they fall easy victims to that first lie as recorded in Genesis 3:4, "Ye shall not surely die." Satan has caused men to deny the truth of God's Word. "Thou shalt die, and not live."—2 Kings 20:1. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:4. "The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing."—Ecclesiastes 9:5.

Surely there is no need for man, in his desire for future life, to deny the reality of death. He need but accept the evidence of the resurrection. Read Jesus' words as recorded by John the beloved: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore."—Revelation 1:18.

We may not understand just how the power of God can bring the dead into existence again, neither can we understand how God could take nothing and make something in the beginning of creation. We must accept the created universe as proof of the Creator.

By the same faith we know our Lord Jesus lives and, oh, the comfort of His words: "Because I live, ye shall live also."—John 14:19. If we turn to 1 Corinthians 15, we read Paul's reasoning: "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen." And as we continue to read Paul's words we find that if Christ has not risen there is no hope, we are yet in sin, there is no Redeemer.

He is risen! He lives! "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."—John 11:25. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth."—John 5:28, 29. Impossible! No, for it is written that it will be.

WHO STANDS FOR YOU?

IN Dr. Bainbridge's Around the World Tour of Christian Missions, there is a curiously interesting and suggestive incident.

When in his journey he had reached Tokio, Japan, intending to remain there some little time, he was waited upon one morning by an official, with this singular inquiry: "Who stands for you?"

Supposing it to be a question of passports, he presented his, but that was not what was wanted. He then offered some letters of introduction. But they also were unsatisfactory, and the question was repeated, "Who stands for you?"

It was finally explained that there was an ordinance in the city to the effect that no foreigner could take up his residence there for any length of time unless he provided himself with a "substitute." And, as a matter of fact, there were natives who hired themselves out to foreigners for that very purpose. If the foreigner transgressed any law, the substitute suffered the penalty for it. Even though the penalty were death, the substitute paid it. Dr. Bainbridge secured a substitute and was thereafter permitted to remain in peace and security as long as he chose.

The analogy does not hold good in all points, of course; and like many another so-called illustration of divine truth, if pressed too far it may hinder as much as it helps. But in this it is true, that all men by nature are alien from God through sin; that their standing before Him is obtainable only through the work of His Son; that (and this by way of contrast with our illustration) the merits of His Son are obtainable by faith, and "without money, and without price"; and that finally, once obtained, they secure to the believer eternal acceptance, perfect peace, complete satisfaction, and glorious liberty.

Dr. Bainbridge could not satisfy the law of Tokio in his own person, and without a substitute he must have been banished from its privileges. No sinner, such as we all are, can satisfy the law of God in his own person; and without Christ he must "be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."—2 Thessalonians 1:9.—Selected from Salvation From Start to Finish by Dr. James M. Gray.

He Is Not Here!

By G. Eldred Marsh

Dead! Our Lord is dead!
He upon whose head
Rested the hope of all the world
Is dead!
From such high pinnacle is hurled
All for which we prayed, longed for, and desired—
All to which the human heart aspired—
All hope with Him is dead.

Hark! "He is not here!"
A voice strong and clear
Calls from the empty grave—
"Good cheer!
Fear not! for Christ but died to save,
And now He lives that men through Him may gain
Deliverance from sin and death and pain.
Praise God! He is not here!"

Reality of Death

THE resurrection of Jesus Christ, which is the first and most essential element of Christian faith, rests upon a recognition of the mortality of man and the reality of death. It is obvious that one cannot believe in the literal resurrection of Christ without first believing in the reality of His death. Until one comes to acknowledge that "Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures," he cannot believe in his heart that "God hath raised him from the dead" (Romans 10:9, 10), and such a confession of faith Paul declares to be the most vital condition of salvation.

If the real Christ survived the death of His body, that is, if the essential Christ did not die, if His "soul" lived on between His death and His resurrection, by no possibility can it be truthfully affirmed that "Christ died for our sins." Unless the identity of Christ is connected inseparably and altogether with the body which hung upon the cross, no acceptable offering has been made for our sins, and we, together with all the world, are still without hope.

It is only when we realize the truth of the words of Isaiah that "he hath poured out his soul unto death," and that His "soul" has been made "an offering for sin" (Isaiah 53:10, 12), that we can appreciate the true greatness of the sacrifice He made and the full glory and wonder of His resurrection, for the offering predicted here was to be complete, all was to be given.

The real Christ died; He gave up His life, all the life that He possessed, willingly on our behalf. The cup He drank for us was bitter indeed. The price He paid for our redemption was very great. And how marvelous was the love that prompted such a sacrifice for sinful men! But equally great and equally marvelous was the miracle wrought by God in restoring His Son to life again for our justification! To the Father and to the Son be praise and glory and honor for their splendid gifts to the children of men!

Reality of Life

OF ALL the rich promises of God contained in the Bible, none is so appealing and desirable in the estimation of a death-threatened race as the promise of life. All other gifts, however splendid they may be, become valueless in the absence of life, the most precious of all. Life is the great reality, eternal life the splendid prize and glorious hope set before the children of men in the gospel and made sure by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. "Hope in death," wrote Tulloch, "can only spring from the principle of immortality, and that principle has no root save in Christ." And this conclusion is strongly supported by John when he says, "He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life."—1 John 5:12.

That there should be no misconceptions concerning the way in which eternal life would eventually be obtained, Jesus forfeited His own life for a time; He was placed unresisting in the tomb, and there remained for three days and nights in silence and unconsciousness until the reviving power of God restored Him and He lived by a resurrection from the dead, to die no more.

Jesus never denied the reality of death, but emphasized it. His great task was to convince men of the truth of the words He addressed to Martha at the time of her brother's death: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."—John 11:25, 26.

The Easter message is the message of a living Savior, who once was dead, but is now alive again for evermore and has the "keys of the grave and of death." It sounds forth a note of comfort that thrills the sorrowing heart with joy. The way through the vale of shadows has been made clear and plain by Jesus Christ, and the Gates of Immortal Life swing wide on the other side that you and I may enter in!

For Me

Under an Easter sky
Amid a rabble's cry,
A man went forth to die,
For me.

Pierced were His hands and feet;
Three hours o'er Him beat
Fierce rays of noonday heat,
For me.

Thus wert Thou made all mine,
Lord, make me wholly Thine,
Grant grace and strength divine
To me.

In thought and word and deed,
Thy will to do. O lead
My soul, e'en though it bleed,
To Thee.

The Reasonableness of the Resurrection of the Body

By Elmer Ellsworth Helms

"How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?"—1 Corinthians 15:35.

THE doctrine of the resurrection of the body has provoked protracted discussion through the Christian ages. I say Christian ages, for belief in the resurrection of the body is distinctly a Christian doctrine. Yet how few Christians really believe it.

It is not uncommon—indeed, most common—to meet men, Christian men, who frankly say they do not believe in the resurrection of the body. And when they come to that phrase in the creed, "I believe in the resurrection of the body," they stand unbelieving, if not unspeaking.

Their difficulties are father to their doubts. They would remind you that one day a lion ate a man on the plains of Persia; digested him, assimilated him, and thereby man became lion. Later the lion died under the shadow of a Persian palm, and his body, disintegrating, became food for the palm's roots, and through natural process the lion's carcass became dates. And one day a company of Bedouins came that way and ate thereof, and also shipped dates to the uttermost parts of the earth; and European, American, Asiatican—men of many lands ate of these dates. The body of the man first went into the body of the lion; then through the body of the lion into dates; then through the dates into wandering tribes of Persia and far-off men of many countries. How can these far-scattered atoms be reassembled in the resurrected body of that lion-devoured man of the plains of Persia?

Or if your reminder ever chanced to be in Bombay, he is quite certain to tell you he there saw the Tower of Silence where the Parsees deposit their dead. And he would remind you how birds of prey swoop down upon the corpses and pick the bones clean; and then these birds of prey having manufactured these dead bodies into their own, flying far afield, are caught and killed, and thus they in turn become the bodies of other human beings; and reminder asks, "Whose body shall it be in the resurrection, and how?"

Or if he has been a traveler in Europe he will doubtless remind you that after every great war countless bones of dead soldiers have been gathered and ground into fertilizer, and these in turn have passed into grass and grain, which in turn have become milk and meat and bread, which again have become the brawn, the body, the brain of multitudes of men. He is not likely to let you forget that we are all unconscious cannibals. Men's bodies of today are built up out of the bodies of the past. So that it becomes a fact that "Imperial Caesar, dead and turned to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the cold away."

Regardless of the fact that he confesses his belief in the traditionary and to us unscriptural doctrine of the immortality of the soul, Dr. Helms, Pastor of the First Methodist Church of Los Angeles, meets in a most interesting and thought-provoking manner some of the questions which arise in the minds of men regarding the possibility and reasonableness of the resurrection.

On this and of this, Professor Huxley says: "Plants are devoured by animals; animals devour one another; man devours both plants and animals. Hence it is very possible that the atoms which formed an integral part of the busy brain of Caesar may now enter into the composition of Caesar the negro of Alabama or Caesar the house-dog." The question, "Whose atom shall it be in the resurrection?" far surpasses in interest and difficulty of answer the ancient Sadducee question, "Whose wife shall she be?" (Matthew 22:23-30.)

Imagine a thousand litigants contending the title in a court of law of the same square yard of land! That would be as nothing to the millions contending for the same atom in the resurrection. It is very evident the same atom cannot enter into the resurrected bodies of millions of different people, through different generations, who once had a life interest in that same atom. "Ye do err not knowing the scriptures," nor yet physiology and modern science.

That "the love of money is the root of all evil" becomes apparent in times of depression even more than in periods of prosperity. As the starving animal loses all sense of fear and becomes a very fury of energy when he sees his hoped-for prey escaping from his clutches, so the avaricious man, whether financier or politician, when his sources of revenue become limited and he finds that his ill-gotten gains are slipping through his fingers, ruthlessly endeavors to collect, not only the "pound of flesh" that was his due, perhaps, but the moral life-blood of the nation with it.

Let us to the problem and its solution. The scientist tells us the physical universe is composed, built up of some eighty different elements: oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, chlorine, carbon—eighty in all. If the physical world could be reduced to its original elements and be piled into vast pyramids, there would be one pyramid of hydrogen, one of nitrogen, and so eighty pyramids. All the atoms of hydrogen in that one pyramid would look the same, would be the same, whether they had come from the body of a tree, a dog, a man or a mountain. That is, every atom of hydrogen is the same as every other atom of hydrogen. Tree, dog, man, mountain are determined and distinguished not by any particular hydrogen and other atoms entering into their make-up, but by these elements entering in according to some particular design, plan, and pattern.

Take the marvelous Mosaic Panels, "The Enthronement of Christ," in this beautiful auditorium. Before they were constructed, Tiffany's Mosaic artist in New York made full-sized drawings, designs. Every color now in these matchless pieces of art was on the original canvas, in the original pattern. The glorious pink and purple and blue and gold and rose and red and green and white and black and yellow and silver and crimson were all in the original drawings and design. And then more than two million pieces of mosaic glass, iridescent favrile glass, were made and the work of building began, building according to pattern. Here was a great pile of purple glass bits, and here of gold, and here of crimson, and here of blue; and the artist picked them out and put them in according to the original plan and pattern. At any time any of these individual pieces might be removed and other like pieces be substituted and the panels would remain the same; for their identity and beauty depend not upon whether this particular piece or that be in them, of them, but upon whether all the pieces are in and arranged according to design. The same mosaics. The same body. Identity does not rest upon any individual atoms, but upon the design into which the artist has worked the atoms.

The identity of the body—in what does it consist? The atoms composing my body are in constant flow. They pass away in swarms with every breath I breathe. Every inhalation of oxygen burns them up. They become waste matter and are sloughed off, thrown off, and new particles take their places. In truth, as we all know, today I have in my body not one single atom I had a short seven years ago. In the span of seven years my body has completely changed. Yet I am I. But I have had, I have lived in not fewer than eight different bodies in my brief years. If identity consists in the possession of the same identical atoms, then the little girl was right who insisted her father should not punish her for the misdeed of yesterday because she wasn't the same person today that she was yesterday. By the same process the debtor might be freed from obligation, not being the same person who contracted the debt.

In Japan there is a temple that is entirely renewed every seven years. Not all at once; but the renewal is going on little by little, all the time. Every day workmen are at the task of renewal, so that at the end of each seven years the temple stands completely renewed. But it is the same identical temple. Not a tint, not a line, not a carving is changed. It has been renewed after the original plan and pattern. It is thus with the body, renewed according to design. Atoms are constantly moving through the body like a slow-flowing river and are no more necessary to its identity than are particular drops of water to the identity of a river.

We say "Mississippi River, Hudson River, Nile River." What makes the Mississippi the Mississippi? Not certain drops of water. I have crossed the Mississippi more than a dozen times. It was the same Mississippi that de Soto discovered in 1541 and Marquette and La Salle traversed in 1673 and 1682. But certainly not a drop of the same water flowed between its banks that was there when de Soto and Marquette and La Salle beheld it. No water that was in it when I crossed it the last time in 1925 was in it when I crossed it the first time in 1887.

What constitutes, preserves the identity of a river? Not particular water, but the mold in which the water is made to run, the banks, the bed, the form, the fashion of the river. If identity were determined by particular drops of water, then there would be no Los Angeles River much of the year. All the waters of the peerless Hudson and the matchless Mississippi might be exchanged bodily at one time. But that would not change their identity. The Hudson would still remain the Hudson and the Mississippi the Mississippi.

We speak of identity of handwriting. But identity of handwriting does not depend upon the color of the ink in which the writing is done. Here are four documents; one written in blue, one in black, one in red, one in green—but they are identical, the same handwriting. No one particular kind of ink is necessary to the identity of the document. No more than are certain leaves necessary to the identity of a tree or certain particles of air passing through the tubes of the organ necessary to the identity of the music. The Hallelujah Chorus is the same whether these particles of air are passing through the organ tubes at its rendition, or those. For that, I have heard "The Star Spangled Banner" rendered on harp, cornet, flute, violin, organ. But it was ever the same.

Thus have I used many figures of the same sort and substance, that we might one and all, and once for all, get it that the identity of the body depends not upon the possession of this particular atom or that, or of any particular atoms, but upon atoms being arranged according to a definite pattern.

As the original design of these mosaic panels is preserved in Tiffany's and at any time they could be renewed, resurrected after the original plan, so the Divine Artist has the plan and pattern of my body, and in that day when the trump shall sound and the dead shall rise, in the twinkle of an eye my body shall be renewed, resurrected after the design preserved by the Great Artist. The resurrection of the body is reasonable and simple when thus approached with a bit of common sense and common knowledge.

Of course, as every thinking person knows, we have not thus proved the resurrection. We have but dealt with one of the difficulties, assuming all the while the resurrection to be an established fact. Our belief in the resurrection is based rather on the fact that "now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept." Christ walked out of the grave and said, "Behold my hands." "My hands," not another's. "My body," not another's. He came forth from the grave with the same body, for the disciples recognized Him from His hands, His feet, His body, the same, yet different, for He

The Nature of Man

By T. A. Drinkard

"Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his maker?"—Job 4:17.

THIS subject is often presented for consideration to our many readers, and it appears that it has been so clearly and ably given that even the most simple mind could grasp it. The writer makes every effort possible to portray vividly his best thoughts upon the subject and yet fails to convince many, when the subject matter is so clearly taught in the Scriptures of divine truth.

There is always something to cause us to think a little deeper. I recall an hour during an Iowa Conference in which I labored to present faithfully a treatise on the coming of Christ and the work before Him.

At the close a sister asked, "Bro. Drinkard, why did you labor so hard to tell us something we already knew?"

My answer was, "To stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance."

Yes, we write volumes and talk much on this subject and wonder why more are not converted to our way of thinking.

Let us notice the way the subject is stated. What is meant by the word "nature"? by the word "man"? By "nature" I simply mean make-up or constitution. I could express it another way: Is man so constituted that at a certain time he dies—hence ceases to live (Isaiah 38:1)? By "man" I mean the man of Genesis 2:7, 15; the man to whom God gave His commandment of Genesis 2:16; the man who disobeyed the commandment of God; the man that was driven out of the Garden of Eden (Genesis 3:23, 24); therefore, the man of creation (Genesis 2:7), the man of knowledge and understanding (Genesis 2:16), the man of disobedience (Genesis 3:6). That man did not possess eternal life (Genesis 3:22).

Up to this point there is no evidence to show that man could possibly live beyond the boundary line of the day in which he sinned (Genesis 2:17). His time to live was limited. This fact conclusively proves that when he died he ceased to live (Isaiah 38:1). With all the abundant evidence in the Scriptures to prove the above fundamental truths is easy. There are those who will not have it so, but continue to teach that man has an immortal soul, an immortal spirit, that survives the body-man at death. The apparent puzzle to me is not why so many clergymen teach this false doctrine, but why so many seemingly sincere, honest people will be satisfied with such teachings when there is not one passage of Scripture in all the Bible that teaches such when read and viewed in the light of fundamental truth or principle.

It is absolutely impossible to believe in the immortality of the soul and in the resurrection. One is opposed to the other as light is to darkness. If you believe in the immortality of the soul, you will deny the necessity of a resurrection.

Try it! Suppose for a moment that man is composed of two men, the body-man and the spirit-man; that the spirit-man is the real, immortal man, the man that lives and never dies; that when the body-man dies, the spirit-man goes immediately to heaven and enters the house of 2 Corinthians 5:2. This is what most theology teaches. What about the resurrection? Such teaching denies the resurrection doctrine. The doctrine of resurrection proves within itself that man is mortal, that he dies, and that the only way possible to get out of death is by way of resurrection (John 5:28, 29).

We cannot say too much on the nature of man. Once you convince anyone that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is full of error, you have paved the way for the truth. True, there are some things in the Scriptures that are hard to understand. They should be read and compared with those scriptures which present fundamental truth in a plain and indisputable way.

All of our thought is the result of the proper functioning of our material being.

Examine Psalm 146:4. I like the threefold division of this verse, which clearly teaches the mortality of man by saying, (a) "His breath goeth forth; (b) "his thoughts perish"; (c) "he returneth to his earth," a confirmation of Genesis 3:19.

Elihu seemed to understand the question when he declared, "The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life."—Job 33:4. This shows the beautiful story of creation. This creation spirit, this life-giving breath, belongs to God, who owns and controls it.

It is clearly stated that, when the man of Genesis 3:19 returns to the dust from which he was taken and made, the breath will return to God who gave it (Ecclesiastes 12:7). The word "return" can only mean that it returns to the great reservoir of life.

May I call attention to a personal experience at this point? I was possessed with a keen desire to test a clergyman's view affirming the immortality of the soul. This certain gentleman was making his usual defense, basing his whole argument upon Ecclesiastes 12:7. I suggested that he had selected the wrong authority for his doctrine, and that he would repudiate him before he was through. And he did!

It is amazing how much error can be raised over this verse. I called his attention to Ecclesiastes 3:18-20. He said that Solomon did not understand his subject properly when he wrote the third chapter, strictly speaking, not until he had come to the twelfth chapter.

The Bible is able to prove this: that man is mortal, that he dies, and that after death comes the resurrection. Christ died for all under sin. Being under sin, man is subject to death. Being in this condition, he is mortal, and therefore unable to live eternally except through the touch of power divine.

The flowery words of the worldly-wise cannot frustrate the scriptural meaning of resurrection and the important place it occupies in God's mighty plan. Resurrection is only for that which dies. If the man of salvation is the spirit-man that is temporarily incased in the house of clay and which is immortal, then resurrection is excluded, because Jesus died to save those in death, not for that which lives and never dies. The fact that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul lends to destroy the necessity of resurrection is proof positive that it is false and dangerous.

The Glorious Resurrection

By R. H. Judd

---

"It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power."—1 Corinthians 15:41, 42.

WE LIVE in troublous times. Men's hearts are failing them for fear of the terrible things that are happening; and forebodings of still worse events are plainly seen on the horizon of the north, south, east, and west. War, famine, earthquake, and pestilence are abroad in the earth; and God's children stand alone in calm assurance of safety and peace, knowing that He ruleth over all.

The words of our text contain an Easter message of hope and joy, joy unbounded, peace unending. In the troubles that are coming upon the world it may be that some of God's children will suffer, too, for the tares and the wheat must grow together until the harvest. But, unlike the rest, amid the suffering they would know that their bread shall be given them and their water (even in lands where it must be bought) shall be sure. Again, like the rest, they, too, will go down in corruption; yet once more, unlike them, they will pass through the valley of the shadow of death with the blessed assurance that incorruption will yet be theirs in resurrection.

"Sown in weakness"? Yes. For who among us has not recognized during his lifetime the weakness that is common to man: the desire to do, but the inability to carry out; the spirit willing, but the flesh weak? That the beloved Paul knew much of weakness is beautifully and helpfully brought out in 2 Corinthians 12:10. Evidently suffering from some physical weakness ("a thorn in the flesh"), he besought the Lord thrice that it might be removed; and he received, not the removal of the weakness, but promise of help that has been of abiding comfort to countless thousands since. "My grace is sufficient for thee, and my strength is made perfect in weakness."

Just here we would draw attention to a most interesting comparison between 2 Corinthians 12:10 and 1 Corinthians 15:43. There is a change in the Revised Version of the former verse from the word "strength" to "power," which brings it into line with 1 Corinthians 15:43. That there is a definite difference between the meaning of these two words which perhaps even the dictionaries fail to define many do not at first grasp, else there could be no real purpose for the alteration made by the revisers. Strength carries with it the idea of ability that may or may not be equal to the task. It is both limited to the possessor and limited in him. Power conveys the idea of overflowing supply.

This thought is confirmed, yes, even enlarged upon, by reference to the marginal readings. The reading in the text of the Authorized Version is, "Most gladly therefore, will I rather glory in my infirmities that the power of Christ may rest upon me." The marginal readings are, "... that the power of Christ may cover me," or, "that the power of Christ may tabernacle over me."

Do not these two marginal readings at least suggest to our minds the passage, "The power of the Highest shall overshadow thee"? And why? "That the life also of Jesus may be manifest in our mortal flesh." His life manifested in us. If this be really fact, what wonderful evidential proof we have that Jesus lives. And, oh, how exact inspiration is in its use of even the names of Christ, for in the verse just quoted it is "Jesus," and not "Christ Jesus" or "Jesus Christ." It is "this same Jesus," the One who died, who now lives; and His life is manifested in us.

But Paul rises to a still higher note. He says, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."—Romans 8:18. "Waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body."—Romans 8:23. "Sown in weakness"? Yes; but "raised in power."

Well might Paul burst forth with that arresting word of the angels, "Behold, I shew you a mystery: we shall not all sleep; but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." So definite is this truth of being "changed" to him that he twice gives expression to it in the short space of a few words. Changed? Yes, friends, changed from corruption in all its varied phases to incorruption, from mortal to immortal, from weakness to power, from dishonor to glory. Then shall come to pass the saying, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk, and not faint."—Isaiah 40:31.

What we shall be, we do not know,
 "It doth not yet appear";
 But as we now are sons of God,
 Our faith hath banished fear.

But this we know, that when He comes,
 Like Him we all shall be;
 For each and all will surely "change"
 When His dear face we see.

Where now, we change from youth to age,
 From strength to weakness go;
 Oh, then we'll change "from strength to strength,"
 And in His service grow.

LIFE AND DEATH

THE true faith putteth (setteth forth) the resurrection, which we be warned to look for every hour. The heathen philosophers, denying that, did put (set forth) that the souls did ever live." "And ye, in putting them (the souls of the dead) in heaven and hell and purgatory, destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. . . . If their souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be; and then what cause is there of the resurrection?"—William Tyndale.

"The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the name, are alike unknown to the entire Bible."—Olshausen.

"My mind fails to conceive a grosser misrepresentation of language than when five or six of the strongest words which the Greek tongue possesses, signifying destroy or destruction, are explained to mean maintaining an everlasting but wretched existence. To translate black as white is as nothing to this."—Dr. Weymouth.

"The advocates of what they call 'Conditional immortality' have done good service by exposing the baselessness of the popular doctrine of the intrinsic and endless permanence of the human soul. They have also done good service by demanding a reconsideration of the whole matter, and by protesting against a theory long dominant in the Christian pulpit, which, as I believe, goes far beyond the teaching of Holy Scripture."—Professor J. Agar Beet.

REDEEMED THROUGH CHRIST

By Mary A. Gesin

IN THE words of the Apostle Peter, in his first epistle, chapter 2, verses 20-25, we find a resurrection thought of great value, though he speaks in detail of the death of Christ our Savior rather than of His living again. He tells us that the Christ, who "did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth, bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness."

The phrase "being dead to sins," found also in the Apostle Paul's writings, is applied to Christ as well as to His true followers. Our Savior may be said to be "dead to sins" in the sense that our sins (not His own, for He was sinless) caused Him to be crucified. He having paid the penalty, then, sin lost its power over Him; He was "dead to sin." Being raised to live again, He becomes our Mediator, our Life-Giver, our Redeemer.

The true follower of Christ becomes "dead to sin" through the figure of baptism, as we learn from the pen of the great Apostle in Romans 6. "Know ye not," he asks, "that so many of us as were baptized in Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" Our sinful nature is crucified with Him, "that the body of sin should be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin."

How glad we are that God does not leave us in this "dead to sin" state, a negative condition at best, but that, as Paul tells us further, "like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

Because He bore our sins in His own body on the cross and by His stripes we are healed, we find the forgiveness of our sins of which we all stand in such dire need. And all of this comes to us through no merit of our own, but because of His grace, as we read in Ephesians 1:7 and in many other texts.

How fitting, then, that in return for this unmerited favor we should live "unto righteousness." Being no longer dead in sins, but "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord," we will yield ourselves unto God, "as those that are alive from the dead."

We need not wait for our resurrection body, nor place all the blessings and promises of God in the future; "but now being made free from sin, and become servants to God," we have our "fruit unto holiness" today, and "in the end everlasting life." It is thus we recognize the force of Paul's words in Romans 8:1, where he tells us that there is "no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

If we "live unto righteousness" now, we have the assurance of the One who never fails of His promise that "he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (our) mortal bodies." It is then that we shall possess in reality a body of immortal glory like unto the one bestowed upon Christ at His resurrection. We will no longer stand in need of forgiveness, for we will be incapable of sin, incorruptible.

How much greater meaning we find in Paul's words in his great resurrection chapter, bringing us this incomparable contrast: "It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

"Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

WITH WHAT BODY DO THEY COME?

Without entering into the scientific aspects of the question, the resurrection of the dead brings the glorious assurance that those who die in Christ will actually live again, that the one who goes down stricken by the last enemy is the one that will arise at the appointed time clothed in immortality. In this article the author strongly emphasizes the fact that the identity of the individual is associated, not with an intangible "spirit," but with the physical body.

"But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool! that thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it has pleased him, and to every seed his own body."—1 Corinthians 15:35-38.

"THOU sowest not that body that shall be." Does Paul mean to tell us that if we sow wheat we will reap oats? or if we sow oats we will reap corn? Paul was too well acquainted with nature to do such a thing; for he says that God gives it a body, and to every seed his own body.

Let us carry Paul's illustration to its logical conclusions: "That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die." Yes, and the new grain comes from the old and contains all the elements of the old; the new grain has as much protein, as much chlorophyl, as much wood fiber, yes, as much of everything as the old one had. The new grain is not composed of entirely different materials, but is composed of the same kinds of materials as the old. The old grain was composed of protein, starch, chlorophyl, etc., and the new is composed of the same kind of material. What, then, is the difference? Why do you not sow the same body that you reap? Paul explains this a little further on in this chapter.

"So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption . . . It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." What is the antecedent of it? We must go back to the thirty-fifth verse. From there on to the forty-fourth verse Paul's subject is the "body." "It (the body) is sown a natural body; it (the body) is raised a spiritual body." The difference is that one is a natural, weak, corruptible body; the other is a spiritual body, but the same body.

This is made plain in Peter's language in the second chapter of Acts: "He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption. This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses." "This Jesus hath God raised up." What Jesus? The one whose flesh saw no corruption. This is made still plainer in verse 36: "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." It was the one they crucified that God raised up, and Christ gave an abundance of evidence to this fact by showing His wounded hands and feet and side.

Some time ago I was talking with one of our brethren about Christ appearing in the room where the disciples were when the doors were closed, and I said, "You don't believe that Christ went through the material of the door, do you? He had a material body didn't He?"

The reply was, "O yes, but gas is material."

Yes, but gas is not susceptible of organization; electricity is not susceptible of organization. Jesus had an organic body both before and after His resurrection. He walked before His resurrection, He walked afterward; He ate before, He ate afterward; He used His hands before, He used His hands afterward; and the nail prints showed that they were the same hands He had before His resurrection.

And we are to be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. Praise the Lord.

DEAD TO TIME AND SENSE

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

---

IT is stated in Ecclesiastes that the dead know not anything. Then they have no knowledge of the lapse of time. Six thousand years in the grave to a dead man is no more than the wink of an eye to the living. To them, consciousness, our only method for measuring time, is gone; and it will seem to them when they awake that absolutely no time has elapsed.

Herein lies a most comforting thought in the Bible doctrine of the sleep of the dead, that in death there is no consciousness of passing time. To those who sleep in Jesus, then, sleep, whether long or short, will be but as if the moment of sad parting were followed instantly by the glad reunion in the presence of Jesus at His glorious appearing and the resurrection of those we have loved and lost a little while.

What a comforting thought that the dead know not anything, that all sleep quietly in their graves, that all should wait till the resurrection for their future life and eternal reward (Hebrews 11:39, 40).

Man's Opinions versus God's Revelation

SOME time ago McCall's Magazine carried an interesting symposium of answers by thirty-three distinguished authors, scientists, university professors, jurists, and clergymen to the question, "Do you believe in immortality?" Some of these distinguished molders of modern thought deny that any evidence has ever been produced to prove that there is an immortal soul; while those who believe in immortality admit the impossibility of demonstrating scientifically the existence of an immortal soul.

Although twenty-two contributors to the symposium expressed belief in immortality, it is a conspicuous fact that only once was the Scripture quoted as proof, and in that lone instance a portion of the text is mutilated to maintain the point.

The reason for this omission is that there is not a single text in all the Bible that states that man possesses a never-dying spirit or an immortal soul, though the words translated "soul" and "spirit" occur some seventeen hundred times in Holy Writ. On the contrary, the Bible definitely affirms that man is mortal—subject to death. "Shall mortal man be more just than God?"—Job 4:17. It further teaches that God only is immortal. "Which in his times he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting."—1 Timothy 6:15, 16.

So far from our possessing immortality, it is plainly stated that it is the gift of God through Jesus Christ and that it is a thing to be sought after. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Romans 6:23. "Who will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life."—Romans 2:6, 7.

The question as to what becomes of man at death is one that has exercised the minds of men from the earliest times. The patriarch Job raised the question: "Man dieth, and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?"—Job 14:10. And the answer follows: "As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up: so man lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. O, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me!"—Job 14:11-13. "Yet shall he be brought to the grave, and shall remain in the tomb."—Job 21:32.

In the answer to Job's question just quoted it will be observed that death is referred to as a sleep. With this agree the words of Jesus referring to the death of Lazarus, "Lazarus sleepeth."—John 11:11, 14. The Psalmist informs us that that portion of man which does the thinking ceases to function at death. "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:3, 4. The inspired writer of Ecclesiastes is very specific: "For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun. . . . Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."—Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6, 10.

A DREAMLESS SLEEP

Here again the emotions and faculties attributed by popular theology to the soul—love, hatred, envy, knowledge, wisdom—all perish with man at death. Therefore, Job tells us: "His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them."—Job 14:21. And the Psalmist declared: "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. . . . For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?"—Psalm 115:17; 6:5.

We turn to another Bible question: "If a man die, shall he live again?"—Job 14:14. And the Bible answers this all-important question with the positive declaration: "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."—Job 14:14, 15. "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."—Isaiah 26:19.

Listen also to the words of Jesus: "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5:28, 29.

The gift of immortality will be bestowed upon His faithful people at the second coming of Jesus. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. . . . Behold, I shew you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."—1 Corinthians 15:22, 23, 51-53. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."—1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17.

The child of God sleeping that last sleep has no consciousness of the passing of time. One moment falling asleep in Jesus, the next moment of consciousness awakened by the voice of the Life-giver, the people of God come forth immortal to behold the Lord coming with all the angelic host to gather His people together in a glad reunion that will know no parting through a blessed eternity.

It was that blessed hope that buoyed up the heart of the patriarch Job, bereft in one day of his ten children, all his property, the savings of a lifetime swept away in old age, his friends turning against him, himself afflicted beyond endurance, when he said: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me."—Job 19:25-27.

It was that blessed hope that inspired the last words of Paul as he calmly laid his gray head on the executioner's block, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Timothy 4:6-8.

At the close of an address by a noted infidel lecturer that seemed to sweep the very foundations of the Christian's hope, as opportunity was given for questions, an old lady arose and said, "Sir, I have followed one by one my husband and my two sons—all I had in this world—to the grave. I have been sustained by the hope of meeting them on the morning of the resurrection. You have taken away my hope. What do you offer in its place?" The infidel had no answer.

Without that hope, as those who are dearest to us are snatched away by the icy hand of death, life would not be worth the living to many a lonely soul.—The Canadian Watchman.

"The immortality of the soul is neither argued nor affirmed in the Old Testament."—Bishop Perowne.

HAPPY is the man who has that in his soul which acts upon the dejected as April airs upon violet roots. Gifts from the hand are silver and gold, but the heart gives that which neither silver nor gold can buy. To be full of goodness, full of cheerfulness, full of sympathy, full of helpful hope, causes a man to carry blessings, of which he himself is as unconscious as a lamp is of its own shining. Such a one moves on human life as stars move over dark seas to bewildered mariners; as the sun wheels, bringing all the seasons with him from the south.—Henry Ward Beecher.

THE REASONABLENESS OF THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY

appeared "in their midst, the doors being shut." He appeared and disappeared at will. Because He arose from the dead, we have this assurance that we also shall arise. "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

How the bodies of our forefathers which have long lain in the grave and moldered into dust shall stand triumphant and shout, "O grave, where now is thy victory, O death, where now is thy sting?" is shrouded in mystery.

So, too, when my friend took me into his cellar one winter night and showed me some dried-up shriveled, brown, odorless, dead-looking bulbs, and he grew eloquent over the glory of the summer flowers that would bloom in June from these same unsightly, withered lumps (mystery!), I could not understand. But one soft summer day he led me forth into his tulip garden, a myriad-colored glory! And he told me these were the shriveled-up bulbs of the winter. Behold, a resurrection, the resurrection.

"It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." "We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens; for we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life."

"Where does your great river go?" would David Livingston frequently ask of the natives of interior Africa, pointing to the Congo. Their invariable answer: "It is lost in the sands." They had not eyes to see beyond the sands the measureless ocean into which the Congo at last flowed, not lost in the sands of the grave, not confined to the narrow tomb forever, but finding at last the mighty, mysterious ocean of immortal life.

The news of the battle of Waterloo was brought to the south coast of England and by signal flags wigwagged to London. When the message was being signaled from the top of London's great Cathedral, "W-e-l-l-i-n-g-t-o-n d-e-f-e-a-t-e-d," a dense fog settled down and over, and all London went mourning and in despair. But after a while the fog lifted, and through their tears the Londoners read the whole message, "Wellington defeated the enemy." And tears were turned into triumphs and heart sobs into hal-lujahs. Not to the grave; but through the grave to glory. Out of the night into the light. From clouds to crown.

"Some day the silver cord will break
And I no more as now shall sing;
But oh, the joy when I shall wake
Within the palace of the King."

MARY MAGDALENE

THE diluted paleness of dawn was just beginning to turn to rose over the roofs of Jerusalem when Mary of Cleophas came out of her house into the dirty little street. She was heavily veiled, and she carried a little alabaster bowl of spiced ointment—for the body of Jesus. She hurried through the streets until she came to a gate, where a little group of women stood silently. Mary was late, for her sister, Jesus' mother, and Joanna, the wife of Chuza, and three or four others were waiting for her. They saluted her in low tones.

"Now let us go," said Joanna. "We are all here, for Mary Magdalene went on alone, long since, while it was dark."

So this sad little company of women who had been Jesus' friends passed through the gates and started toward the garden of Joseph, which was not far from Golgotha.

Mary Magdalene had hastened out of the city very early indeed. She was anxious and impatient to reach the new tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. While she walked, sad thoughts came to her. The death of her Lord had hardly penetrated her consciousness fully. She could not quite realize that after this last duty she would go home and there would be no more of this gentle Man. Her plans went no further than His tomb; she could not imagine her life going on and on to her death without Jesus.

As she approached the tomb, nervous dread assailed her. If there were soldiers there who would not let her in; if she could not move the stone—but she stopped in horror and amazement. The stone was already rolled away! She looked incredulously into the tomb. There was nothing there. It was quite empty except for the white cloths that had bound Him. The Savior was gone.

Mary Magdalene put down the precious ointment and ran without stopping, barely noticing her surroundings, until she reached the city. She searched for some of the disciples without thinking what help they could offer. When she met John and Peter walking together in mournful silence, she poured out her story in such incoherent excitement that they thought her mad. When they finally understood, they ran immediately to the tomb. Mary followed them, because, although His body was stolen away, His tomb was the last place Mary had seen the Savior. Peter and John were swifter than she. They looked in the tomb. There was no doubt that it was empty. Peter and John went slowly away, too surprised to speak. Mary Magdalene sat down by the great stone and wept disconsolately. She had no longer even her Lord's body. The sun was just coming up, but its beauty and light held no promise for her.

Mary Magdalene did not even see the little band of women when they came. Jesus' mother and her sister and the others were too startled at the open door of the tomb to notice the weeping woman. They entered the tomb eagerly. Instead of their Lord, they saw a wonderful creature whose radiance brightened the semi-darkness of the tomb. They were afraid to speak, but the angel accosted them:

"Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you."

They ran from the tomb with much joy, to do the angel's bidding. On the road back to the city they met—Jesus! When He spoke to them, they knelt and worshiped Him eagerly. Their Lord sent them to tell the disciples to go to Galilee, where they should see Him.

But Mary Magdalene had heard nothing of the wonderful news. She arose to look once more into the place where the Lord had once lain. She saw the angel, but she thought he was a man. When he spoke to her gently, and asked her why she cried, she answered, "Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they laid Him."

She turned to go. There was another man just outside, but she was so absorbed in her grief that she scarcely noticed him. When he asked her why she was sad and whom she sought, it occurred to her that he must be the gardener, and he might know where Jesus' body was. She begged of him, "Sir, if thou hast borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away."

The man said only, "Mary."

With joyful recognition, she turned to Him and cried, "Master!" The man was Jesus Christ, her Lord.

FINDING HAPPINESS

EVERYBODY likes to be happy. Not one of us but enjoys life more when he is happy. More than that—we can't really enjoy anything unless we are happy. I wonder how we find happiness.

Among your acquaintances, my little friends, you all know of some one who has everything he wants. Perhaps it's a boy or perhaps a girl. But you think sometimes everything comes to that person—toys, clothes, books, candy, good times of every description.

Now, in most cases, is that person really happy? Answer the question truthfully. Isn't that one always wishing for more, tired of the fine playthings he has, selfish and disagreeable even? And you think if only you were in his shoes how happy you'd be. I wonder!

It seems to me there are three things which are necessary to happiness—three things which everyone must have and which everyone may have. They are these: someone to love, something to do, and something to hope for.

Take the first one. Love is the thing that makes life worth while. All of you have some one to love, yes, many to love—Father and Mother, perhaps sisters or brothers, and above all, Jesus.

Something to do. How we enjoy doing something for some one we love! In fact, we aren't happy unless we can do something for another. And Jesus says even so small a thing as giving a cup of cold water is noticed by Him.

Something to hope for. We all look forward to being a great person when we grow up. Let me whisper something in your ear: There is no better way of becoming great than by being humble now, being content to serve now. It's true because no less a person than Jesus said so, and He knows, for He tried it Himself.

Jesus was born to be a King; He was the Son of God. And surely, if anyone had the right to feel proud, it was He! But was He proud, and did He want others to serve Him? We find in Acts 10:38 that He went about doing good.

Jesus had many to love, and many to work for, even the whole world. And did He have something to hope for? Read Hebrews 12:2. Let's be like Jesus, and we will have a bright hope, too.

And now! Good news for the Scrapbook Club. Six new members this week! Two are from Nebraska, Ardys and Donna Johnson, from Freedom. Ardys is ten and Donna is eight. Four are from our Oregon (Ill.) Sunday school. They are Kenneth, Arlene, Leota, and Francis Gruber. All six of these are beginning with the lessons from January first so that their scrapbooks will be complete.

And better yet! More will probably be joining next week, because two of our Oregon Sunday school teachers, Mrs. Edna Gruber and Mrs. Maude Young, are forming a club to meet on week days and work on the lessons at Mrs. Gruber's home. Let's give three cheers for our six new members and more to follow.

We now have eighteen members from six different states—ten girls and eight boys, all working on the same Bible lessons and eagerly watching for the mailman to bring THE RESTITUTION HERALD to them each week. And now for our lesson for April 23.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Always put the date at the top of your page, then the title of the lesson, and the golden text you find at the top of this page each week. And if you think of something else to illustrate the lesson or if you have a picture of it, you may add to your page and make it more interesting.

First, write the words of Matthew 7:12. Then, these words: "Do unto others as though you were the others."

Now take the word "Joy." Find a verse in the Bible beginning with the letter J and copy it; next one beginning with O; and last one beginning with Y. Make the initial letters large and color them so they will stand out. Find verses that teach the truth of this lesson if you can. The younger ones may have help.

LIVING LIKE JESUS

"Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way
That even when I kneel to pray
My prayer shall be for others.

"Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for others.

"Others, Lord, yes others,
And none of self for me,
Help me to live for others
That I may live like Thee."

LESSON 4. — April 23, 1933

JESUS REBUKES SELF-SEEKING

Mark 9:30-50

Devotional Reading: 1 Corinthians 13:1-13

GOLDEN TEXT

Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.—Romans 13:10.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Rebukes Self-Seeking.

Aim: To lead the pupil to an appreciation of the value of humble service.

Basic Truth: "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much."—Luke 16:10.

I. Who Shall Be Greatest? (Vv. 33-37.)

The desire to make the most and best out of life is commendable, and the Lord has given us the highest standard to govern our conduct in that direction. "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." The perfection here required is that of character and of service. "Bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you: that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good."—Matt. 5:44-48. The disciples were shamed into silence when Jesus asked them the nature of the argument they had on the way. They realized they had been moved by self-seeking motives. When Peter at a later period questioned Jesus with regard to the reward they would receive for the sacrifice made, the Lord answered fully and without reproving him for making the inquiry, for it was a legitimate and justifiable question. Cf. Matt. 19:27-30.

II. The Servant of All. (Vv. 38-43.) Our Lord was the most humble of men. He took no personal credit for the words He uttered or the deeds He wrought. They were all of God, to whom the glory belonged. John 14:10. Paul manifested the same disposition to efface himself. 1 Cor. 15:10. While Jesus possessed a strong, manly character that enabled Him to reprove fearlessly the arrogant Pharisees, He did not hesitate to stoop to take a child in His arms and to commend all such little ones to the love and care of His followers. He who stilled the raging sea was great enough to appreciate the needs of childhood and to make Himself beloved to them. It is not the magnitude of the work one does that makes it great, but the spirit and motive that prompts the service that is rendered.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

1. Christ knew the apostles' thoughts. He knows ours. Thought is the basis of all action, good or bad. Thoughts can be governed. Man judges according to what is said and done. Christ goes to the cause of all action and "brings to light the hidden things of darkness" and "makes manifest the counsels of the hearts" and does not, therefore, need to judge after the "sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears."—1 Cor. 4:5; Isa. 11:3. "There is nothing covered" to the Lord. His eyes are "in every place, beholding the evil and the good." "The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man." Prov. 15:3; Psa. 94:11.

Thought precedes all action. It is difficult to control our actions if our thoughts are uncontrolled. "For out of the heart (mind) proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies."—Matt. 15:19. Our thoughts can be governed and controlled. Perhaps the task seems gigantic and in many instances hopeless, but we have the assurance that we "can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth" us.—Phil. 4:13. Through this unlimited power of Christ, which is at our disposal, we can bring "into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."—2 Cor. 10:5.

2. Self-Exaltation. Our lesson condemns this. The exalting must be left to Christ. Apparently there is only one rule governing this work, and that is our capacity to absorb, live, and teach His doctrines and life. Study the parable of the pounds in Luke 19:12-27.

3. Working in Christ's name. "Give in His name" is the principle that should regulate our giving if we are to receive a reward for the same. V. 41. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus."—Col. 3:17. This will prevent self-exaltation.—C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Sin of Selfishness

Most of the world's ills can be traced to this one human lust, selfishness. It caused death to come into the world, Joseph to be sold into bondage, Saul to seek David's life, Jesus to be betrayed. Millions of people have been killed that one church might have mastery over another. Selfishness caused thousands to lose their lives when Samson insisted on marrying contrary to God's commandment. The World War, caused by selfishness, killed about eight million people. Stock inflation, strikes, and many of the ills of the present commercial world are but evidences of selfishness.

Selfishness is proof of another sin, that of forsaking God. When the priests of Israel forsook God, it was written of them: "They are greedy dogs which can never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain from his quarter."—Isa. 56:11. Christians must suppress selfishness in themselves. "Do not they blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called? If ye fulfil the royal law, according to the scriptures, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."—James 2:7, 8.

Jesus was not selfish toward us. "For even Christ pleased not himself." Therefore, "Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification."—Rom. 15:2, 3.—H. A. S.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."—Romans 13:10.

The two great commandments as found in Matt. 22:36-40 are based on love. The first, "love to God"; and the second, "love thy neighbour as thyself." This second great commandment is one of the laws given during the time of the Levitical priesthood. It means the same now as it did then. The neighbor was not to be defrauded nor robbed, nor anything done against him; therefore, love worketh no ill to his neighbor, but good. See Lev. 19:13-18.

Christ loved and served mankind; we, by love, are to serve one another. "For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."—Gal. 5:14.—L. A. R.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Who Will Be First?

Jesus and His disciples were going from Galilee to Capernaum. On the way Jesus tried to tell them again about how He would be killed and that He would come to life again. But still it just seemed they could not understand.

But Jesus watched them closely, as they walked along. He saw they seemed to be talking, and not agreeing with each other.

When they came to Capernaum, they went into a house. He asked, "What were you talking about on the way over?"

No one answered. They did not want to tell Jesus that they had been quarreling about who would be the greatest in God's kingdom.

But Jesus knew just the same. So to teach them a lesson, He took a little child and stood him near the disciples. He said, "If you want to be great, you must do good to all men, even to little children like this. If you are good to all, then I know you love me; for this is the only way you can show your love for me. And, too, only in this way will you ever be great."

What a lesson. How can we become great, as Jesus said?—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

A HINT TO THE WISE

Perhaps some of you who are so generously subscribing for The Restitution Herald for others may know of some little folks in your Sunday school who would like to work on the Bible Scrapbooks as outlined from week to week on the Children's Page, but whose homes the Herald does not visit. Perhaps their parents are not acquainted with the paper. What better missionary work could you do for child and for parents—and for God? Remember, the price to new subscribers is $1.50 per year.

PEDDLER'S PACK"

The Dixon, Illinois, ladies use a clever "Peddler's Pack." It sounds interesting, doesn't it? Maybe they are willing to share their idea.

If you are willing, Dixon, who's going to write about it? Please decide, for we would like an account of it in the Exhibit Room at the General Conference this summer. Thank you.
Exhibit Committee.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

We are glad to be able to report steadily increasing interest and attendance. The Sunday school records showed 309 on the first Sunday in April. The auditorium was more than comfortably filled for the preaching services, both morning and evening. When the invitation was given at close of morning sermon, five more came forward to witness for their Lord and to prepare for baptism at the Easter time. Our Saturday night class on fundamentals is accomplishing a good work.

Our treasurer, Bro. Harold Simpson, is now able to be out of bed part of the time each day after a month of being confined. We are all praying he may soon be back at his post in church, home, and work. Sr. Doan is praying and trying to gain strength so that she can be at church on Easter, and the prayers of all of us join hers.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

There is still evidence that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation. Our hearts were all made to rejoice at our monthly meeting because of three young people that have just started to serve the Master. On Saturday evening Miss Elizabeth Martin came forward and took her stand for Christ, and on Sunday morning after services was buried in the name of our Savior. Sunday evening Miss Madaline Davenport, and Mr. Marshall Lloyd also came forward to accept Christ, and on Tuesday morning they also were buried by baptism into Christ.

At times we have become discouraged, but God has promised that His Word will not return unto Him void. We are so thankful for the noble stand these splendid young people have taken, and already we can see they are going to give us greater strength than we have thus far felt.

Our prayer meeting and Bible class on Tuesday night showed an interest and spiritual feeling of greater depth, for which we thank our heavenly Father. Brethren, pray for us.
C. E. Lapp, Pastor.

COMMENDING OUR AUTHORS

In their letters to the office our correspondents often comment on the satisfaction they experience in being able to give The Restitution Herald to their friends of any denomination or of no religious affiliation with the assurance that, while they will find in it much of spiritual uplift and comfort, much of vital truth pertaining to salvation only through Christ, and much important prophetic information for their instruction, they will not find a harsh word or a bitter denunciation directed against any professed follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, which might rankle in their bosoms like a festering arrow.

The management of The Herald greatly appreciates the efforts our contributors are making to approach their subjects from a positive standpoint. If we prove that a thing is white, it is not necessary for us to say that many deluded "friends" believe it to be black. They will draw their own conclusions far more accurately and acceptably to themselves than we could do it for them.

The great majority of strangers into whose hands the paper falls are unprepared to state clearly their own religious convictions, much less to defend them against a direct attack. They are willing to be taught, but will not be driven. Generally their faith is a precious heritage from their fathers, sacred and holy and true in their eyes, as indeed it ought to be. Consequently, they will resent bitterly any violent effort made to destroy it.

On the other hand, to present facts of inspiration in an appealing, an interesting, and a convincing manner will win the sympathetic attention of the reader and lead him, almost imperceptibly to himself, to accept the truth suggested and to discard such contrary ideas as he may have previously believed.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Unbounded enthusiasm marked all three sessions of the Southern California Prophetic Conference at Pomona on April 2. In the morning Bro. Lichty made a ringing appeal to the brethren in his subject "The Return of Israel." He spoke to an enthusiastic audience that reached well up over one hundred. People were present from many places in Southern California too numerous to mention. Pasadena, Long Beach, Santa Ana, and Riverside had large delegations for cities which have no regular church bodies. Bro. Adamson gave a short speech of welcome which was responded to by Bro. Railsback for Los Angeles; Bro. Will Reid for Riverside; Bro. C. E. Hatch for Santa Ana; and Bro. S. G. Elton for Pasadena. The choir rendered "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" by Ambrose.

At noon the group adjourned to the church patio, where a potluck dinner and informal chat were enjoyed. At two o'clock Sr. Jessie Kauffman conducted a service primarily for the young people (most of the membership considered themselves to be young); her theme dealt with sums in addition in "Righteous Arithmetic." During the same period the Ministerial Association assembled to adopt a constitution and elect officers. Bro. Norman MacLeod was elected President; Bro. S. G. Elton of Pasadena, Vice President; and Bro. Geo. P. Lichty, Secretary Treasurer. Matters of the next Conference were discussed, and Long Beach was considered to be the best place; and the next ministerial meeting was set for the Railsback home in Los Angeles on the afternoon of the first Sunday in May.

A large audience at 2:30 heard Sr. Railsback give an exceedingly forceful sermon on "The Gospel." Bro. Smead then gave an unusual discussion of "An Unrighteous Peace." Mrs. MacLeod and Rahn rendered a duet, "What A Friend We Have In Jesus." The next Quarterly Prophetic Conference was then set for July 2 at Long Beach. Following the afternoon services the group adjourned to the MacLeod home, where a reception was held and tea served to those assembled.

In the evening Bro. MacLeod gave an illustrated sermon to a very attentive audience: "Japan: the New Scourge of God." Many acquaintances were renewed, and many new acquaintanceships were formed. We are all looking forward to the next conference session.

We were much disturbed to learn that Sr. Lizzie Railsback fell and injured her hip and is now laid up in bed. We do not yet know how seriously she is injured. Sr. Rich, though not improving much, is no worse. We pray God's healing power be used on these two sisters.
Geo. P. Lichty, Secretary.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Owing to the fact that the Easter issue takes the place of our regular monthly special, our next special number will be published the latter part of May. Watch for announcement of its contents.

A letter from Sr. A. M. Stiple, Hammond, La., says, "My heart is with you in the work. There have been so many fine articles in The Herald lately which we appreciate so much. I pray for your success."

Our hearts go out in sympathy to all whose homes have recently been touched by death, but we rejoice to know that each passing day brings the Life-Giver one step nearer, and that resurrection and reunion will come soon.

A series of pre-Easter week-night services is in progress in the Church of the Golden Rule at Cleveland, Ohio, under the leadership of Pastor M. W. Lyon. We trust that much good will result from this effort.

Our city congregations are laboring valiantly and sacrificing generously to meet the suffering caused by the depression. There will be no depression and privation when Jesus comes!

An elderly brother in California, whom we esteem for his Christian faith and character, writes that he has suffered much in the past eighteen months, having in that time lost his beloved wife, and in addition been deprived of all income. Our heart goes out in fullest sympathy to him, and we pray again, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!" Nothing but the Lord's coming can meet all of our needs and wipe away all of our sorrows.

MRS. HARRIET A. GESIN

Harriet Alberta Koozitz was born on June 25, 1859, near Oregon, Ill., being the youngest child of Jacob and Dorcas Koozitz. She lived at the place of her birth until four years of age when with her parents she moved to a farm north of Adeline, Ill., where she grew united in marriage with Bro. Ernest F. Gesin, whose death occurred at their home in Freeport forty-five years later. Sr. Gesin was baptized by Elder August Smith when but a young girl, and was faithful to her church for more than sixty years.

The home of Bro. and Sr. Gesin, "The Pines," near Freeport, was always hospitably open to all, many of the ministers of the Church of God finding a welcome there during the years past. Their kind and charitable deeds to those who stood in need are remembered by many and their labor of love for the church is especially treasured by the Illinois State Conference.

Sr. Gesin fell asleep in Jesus on Apr. 5, at the home of her daughter, Sr. Walter L. Miller, near Freeport, Ill. Besides the only daughter, there is left to mourn the death of a beloved and godly mother, three sons, Sr. Lottie E. Young has sent a stirring appeal to the Church of God to press forward in spite of all opposition in its great task of evangelization as the coming of the Lord draws near. Watch for this article in a future issue. It will prove stimulating.

May God continue to lead those who have recently been baptized into the saving name of His Son into fuller understanding, deeper fellowship with Him, and complete consecration to His service, that they may be crowned with victory when Jesus comes.

As we go to press orders continue to pour in for this issue of The Herald. Eternal life is the desire of every heart, and it can be obtained only through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Bring this vital fact of revelation to the attention of your sorrowing and fearful friends.

Writing from her home in Arkansas City, Kan., Sr. A. J. Chaplin sends in a new subscription for The Herald, and asks for the prayers of the church on behalf of Sr. Wm. Hadicke, who has been unable to be present at divine service since last fall. Concerning The Restitution Herald Sr. Chaplin says, "We think it grows better all the time."

It requires constant vigilance on the part of the watchmen on the walls of Zion to keep abreast of prophetic accomplishments in these days. Events of vast importance are happening in all parts of the world, and they are all parts of the big-saw puzzle of time and mast each be placed in its proper setting to complete the picture and reveal the true meaning of these things. "And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."

Charles of Oregon, Earl, and Emil of Forreston, Ill. In addition there are twelve grandchildren and three great grandchildren also other more distant relatives and a host of friends. Funeral services were conducted on April 8, by Bro. Marsh, who spoke on the resurrection theme of I Cor. 15, and whose tribute to her memory was especially fitting because of his long personal acquaintance with her. Interment was made in Adeline cemetery.

Sr. Gesin sleeps in Jesus at the side of her husband, awaiting the call of the Master they loved and served so long and so faithfully.

JOHN FLOYD BALL

The Grand Rapids Church has been saddened by the death of Bro. John Ball, who for six months has been receiving care at the Sunshine Sanitarium. The dread disease of tuberculosis finally won the battle; and our brother fell asleep on March 28, 1933, being 36 years of age.

Having no near relatives, Bro. Ball had made his home with Bro. and Sr. Pixley for several years before entering the sanitarium, and for the last several months his church relationship has meant more to him than human relatives could. Very deeply did he appreciate the dozens of communications and calls that came from brothers and sisters both near and far.

Funeral services were conducted from the home church on March 31, the church being well filled with sorrowing friends; and John was then laid quietly away in Oak Hill Cemetery, where he awaits the Master's call.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, I Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

One of the latest and most interesting publications dealing with the outstanding truths of the Bible that has come from the press in recent months is the four-page paper issued by F. L. Austin, the "Back-to-the-Bible" Evangelist, of 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Ill. This unusual addition to religious literature is gotten up in the form of a modern newspaper, with arresting display "heads" that attract the attention of the reader to the instructive subject matter that follows.

The paper is undated, and so may be used at any time or place where religious advertising that both attracts attention and instructs the interested is required.

The price in quantities is sufficiently reasonable to make it available to any congregation for use in special evangelistic meetings. To those desiring this publication for general distribution it will be supplied at $2.50 per hundred. Address orders to F. L. Austin, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Illinois.

A Bible Picture of the Resurrection Life

By E. O. Stewart

“Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?”—1 Corinthians 15:29.

HERE is a vital point to consider concerning the necessity of our being baptized in order to make an outward, visible confession of our hope of future life through the resurrection from the dead. To confess with our mouths the Lord Jesus, believing in our hearts that God hath raised Him from the dead (Romans 10:89), should be followed by obeying from the heart that form of doctrine which has been delivered unto us (Romans 6:17).

Paul had delivered unto the Corinthians first of all that which he had also received: how that Christ died, was buried, and had risen from the dead (1 Corinthians 15:1). There were some among the members at Corinth who did not believe in the resurrection of the dead. These members had been baptized, but had failed to grasp the meaning of baptism. Baptism represented burial and resurrection, and resurrection was the very thing they denied. Paul appealed to them, asking them to be consistent.

If you do not believe that the dead shall be raised, he said, why were you baptized for the dead? Why are you so inconsistent in your belief as to deny the very thing you were supposed to believe when you passed through the figure which so fittingly represents it?

WHEN ARE WE MADE FREE FROM SIN?

“But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then (at the time you obeyed) made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.”—Romans 6:17, 18.

But says one, “If baptism is in order to obtain remission of past sins, why was Jesus, who knew no sin, baptized?”

This is a very important question. It furnishes an opportunity to bring to our minds the very purpose of baptism.

Christ possessed a mortal nature, just as you and I do. Sin represents mortality, for death came by sin (Romans 5:12). Christ was mortal, without sin; and we have both mortality and sin. Christ believed that God would raise Him from the dead, free from mortality; and He showed His faith in God’s desire to do this by passing through the figure which represents it.

“But,” some one asks, “I thought that Jesus shed His blood for the remission of our sins.”

He did. But let us remember that Christ shed His blood in His death. And if we come in contact with His blood which frees us from sin, we must go into His death to reach it, for there is where He shed it.

Paul makes this very clear, that all may understand it. “Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection.”—Romans 6:3-5. The words “like” and “likeness” which appear in these verses prove that it is all a picture, a figure, a foreshadowing of a glorious reality.

THE OLD MAN AND THE NEW MAN

The old man, like the new man, is composed of many members. The old man is a system whose life is sustained through the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. He spends his earnings to satisfy his own desires. He wants to see and be seen, and likes the praise of men. His head is Adam.

The new man is a system whose Christian life is sustained through mortifying the deeds of the body. He lives by feasting upon the promises of God, by laying up in store a good foundation against the time to come, that he may lay hold upon eternal life. Christ is the head.

TRANSITION

The transition from a state of condemnation to a state of justification is very important for us to understand.

When a sinner hears the Word of God and believes it, a godly sorrow for sin begins to trouble his mind. That godly sorrow then works repentance, which means to turn and start in the opposite direction. When he starts in the opposite direction with his face toward God, he kills himself to the old man. He is then dead to the old man. He is like a twig cut from the old stock. He is ready to be grafted on to the new stock.

Christ is the new stock. His blood is the sap which is to give new life to the broken-off twig. Christ shed His blood in His death. Therefore, in order to reach the blood, the penitent must go into His death.

“Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?”—Romans 6:3. “Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.”—Colossians 2:12.

A beautiful picture of resurrection life: “If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. . . . Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.”—Colossians 3:1-4.

"In the Secret of His Tabernacle"

By Norman John MacLeod

"For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."—Psalm 27:5.

A TIME of trouble such as has not been on this earth before is about to break upon the earth as indicated by Holy Writ. The trials through which other people went will seem as little things in comparison with the trials through which the world is expected to pass. All of us go through certain trials and tribulations as we go through life, but these are mere aggravations for the most part. When we read in Hebrews the eleventh chapter of the things endured by those great worthies, our testings are slight indeed. Most of us would not endure cruel mockings, to say nothing of scourgings and the other things there mentioned. But some of those people would not accept deliverance that they might obtain a better resurrection; they suffered death. Why does God allow His people to undergo such trials? In order to form character!

We are familiar with the fact that the individual who has been raised in the lap of luxury does not develop character. He does not learn by adversity, and fails in the time of difficulty. God knows best how to develop suitable characters. He allowed His chosen to undergo severe trials in order to perfect their characters. What can we expect, then, in the day of trouble that is to come on the earth? We will be like the martyrs of the early Christian era who died smiling rather than submit to things unlawful for Christians. We are told, and we must not overlook it, that our Savior Himself was perfected through suffering (Hebrews 2:10). In the same way we are perfected for the work of God through Christ.

Paul says, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter."—Romans 8:35, 36. None of those things should turn us away from the love of Christ, but lesser trials many times do. Are we, then, to go through great testings? or are we to be removed from them?

There are passages of Scripture that would seem to indicate that the elect of God would be removed from the greatest trials. And we can turn to the example of Elijah to see how he was protected from the terrible famine in the land of Israel by divine power. But the passages that teach the escape of the church are based upon doubtful interpretations. Jesus, it seems, purposely left that matter ambiguous. "I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left."—Luke 17:34-36. The apostles were anxious, even as we, to know more of the matter, and so questioned: "Where, Lord? And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together."—Luke 17:37. Certainly not a very definite answer! If Jesus had wished them to know just what would happen to living believers at His coming, He would have been more definite.

Isaiah (26:20, 21) explains some things which tell of God's methods in times past and probably in times to come: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Much could be said to indicate the instance when the words of Isaiah were applied, but the incident illustrates the methods of God. He uses natural means in order to care for His own.

Why should it be necessary for God to spirit His church away for any purpose? No matter what happens to the believer, God will take care of him! As is said in Romans, nothing can separate us from the love of Christ. And that thought is repeated in Psalm 139: "Whither shall I go

The Editor's Prayer

MOST gracious God our heavenly Father, we are indeed thankful that Thou hast permitted us to live in these remarkable days when the truth of Thy Word is being so fully supported and vindicated by events occurring around us. Yet while we realize and appreciate the opportunities afforded us to witness these things, we also know that with the approaching end of Gentile times we are being brought face to face with spiritual temptations of a most dangerous and insidious character. Appeals are being made to our religious natures, to our most holy aspirations, to our divinest yearnings, that may lead us away from truth and from Thee should we give place to them. Preserve us, we pray, from the alluring deceptions of false teachers, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Horrible Delusions

AMONG the multiplying signs of the last days through which we are now passing none appeals more strongly to certain minds, and none is more appalling in its final results, than the “gift of tongues” movement that is sweeping not only America, but various other countries of the world, at the present time. While by no means a new form of religious emotionalism, its manifestations in these days are taking on a more sinister aspect than ever in the past, leading its devotees at times to the commission of the most revolting and brutal crimes. The blasphemy and the horror of it lie in the fact that these acts are always performed in the name of Jesus Christ, and those who do them conscientiously feel that they are rendering a service to God.

That the movement is progressing along lines that are not only morally destructive, but distinctly anti-Christian, is clearly apparent. The trials last week of three members of a “gift of tongues” cult in Kentucky for the murder of an elderly woman, the mother of one of the “gifted” believers, brought out the fact that the murder was committed as a human sacrifice, made probably with the consent of the victim, whose own son officiated as the sacrificial priest. The mind revolts in horror at the very thought of such a deed being done in the name of Jesus Christ.

This particular Kentucky group was not composed of ignorant, illiterate people, although it was located in a small mountain community. It was revealed at the trial by the various experts employed by both the prosecution and defense counsels, that they were apparently normally devout and intelligent people, but that they had been carried away by a frenzy of emotion to the borders of insanity. They had lost their mental balance, their sense of proportion and judgment; and, like the followers of the so-called “Oxford Movement” of England, they had come to depend for guidance entirely upon impressions and “voices” from without themselves. Their attitude took on the semblance of demoniac possession, rather than that of a sane and quiet mind. With great intensity of feeling they desired a “sign” from heaven. They believed their prayers were answered in the bestowing of the “gift of tongues.” All could evidently speak the strange “language” which they thought was given by inspiration, and one or more could “interpret” its meaning. The result was that the son was led to believe that God commanded him to make a human sacrifice to God. In obedience to the supposed divine requirement, he prepared a makeshift altar in his home, placed his unresisting mother upon it, and there in the presence of his little circle of fellow “worshippers” choked her to death with his own hands!

This sad case is but one of several similar occurrences that have taken place in recent months. We may expect to hear of many more in the near future. The fruitage of error is sin, sometimes in its most repulsive forms. “Deceiving, and being deceived” was one of the conditions Paul declared would pertain to the declining religious standards of the last days. Following the leadership of their own terrible delusion concerning the authority and source of the “voices” that spoke to them, they were led to enact a true “sign” to which others would do well to take heed.

One of the gravest results of these latter day delusions is found in the fact that those who embrace them generally pass beyond the reach of reason. They can no longer be influenced by evidence, scriptural or otherwise. Their minds thereafter are “controlled,” like the minds of a spiritualist medium, by influences that have little or nothing to do with the ordinary processes of sane and logical thinking. May God help us to resist all such unscriptural and perverse teaching.

IN NOTHING BE ANXIOUS

TO HIS "brethren dearly beloved and longed for," Paul writes: "In nothing be anxious; but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus."—Philippians 4:1, 6, 7, Revised Version.

Present-day readers more easily grasp the writer's meaning as expressed in the words, "In nothing be anxious," than in the language of the common version, "Be careful for nothing." No encouragement is given to any habit of carelessness or indifference. But we should have such unwavering trust in the Lord that we are perfectly willing to leave all consequences in His hands, with complete confidence that all will be well. This attitude of mind will free us from worry or anxiety or despondency, so distressing to the mind (and even to the body) of man.

The Apostle is here offering instructions to be followed "in every thing"; that is, under all circumstances, and with reference to all our experiences in life; and in so doing he emphasizes the importance of "prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving."

Fundamentally, prayer is "the heart's sincere desire, unuttered or expressed." So if we would learn to pray acceptably, we must cultivate the proper desires, or wishes, at all times; and all righteous desires may be described in these words: "the will of the Lord be done" (Acts 21:14); "not my will, but thine, be done" (Luke 22:42). In so far as we acquire and maintain such holy desires it is possible for us to "pray without ceasing" (1 Thessalonians 5:17), and to do so with great fervency. And our burning desire to know what His will is—in order that we may not only pray "according to his will," but devote ourselves unre-servedly to the accomplishment of the same—will incline us to the earnest study of His Word. Then, delighting in the law of the Lord, we meditate thereon (Psalm 1). Thus, by reading, prayer, and meditation, we develop a state of mind and soul which invites the presence and rich blessings of God and which will make us fruitful trees of righteousness.

Periods of uninterrupted communion with God are essential to the progress we ought to make in the divine life. "The Man of Galilee" left us an example in this respect. One of the numerous recorded instances of His engaging in private prayer is found in Luke 6:12: "And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God." If there is ever a time when only the purest desires have a place in the heart, it is most likely to be when we are conscious of being alone with God, realizing that the deepest recesses of our being are open to His view, and when we pour forth before the "throne of grace" such a petition as,

"Examine me, O Lord, and prove me; try my reins and my heart."—Psalm 26:2.

Also, we have approved examples of Christians uniting in prayer to God. For instance, when Peter and John had been arrested and threatened for preaching Christ, they returned to their company; and when the report had been heard, "they lifted up their voice to God with one accord." A similar instance is mentioned in Acts 21:4, 5, where it is stated that when disciples in Tyre were bidding Paul and his companions farewell they "kneeled down on the shore, and prayed."

It is indeed refreshing when fervent souls send up their petitions as the prayer of one man! But doubtless those who contribute most to the effectiveness of such seasons of public and semi-public prayer are those who (in principle, at least) adopt David's plan: "Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud, and he shall hear my voice."—Psalm 55:17.

In the passage under consideration Paul makes mention of "supplication" in connection with prayer. To supplicate is to implore or beseech the Lord to hear our prayer, to take notice of our heart's desires.

Gratitude co-exists with prayerfulness in the heart of every true Christian. Surely, the one who realizes that "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights" (James 1:17) and therefore prays to this benevolent Father for needed blessings; the one who "counts his blessings" until he is overwhelmed with realization of their riches, knowing at the same time that not even the least of them could have been received by him as a reward of merit—I say, such an individual could hardly fail to be filled with thankfulness.

Vision

If we could see beyond a present sorrow,
Beyond a present grief, as God can see,
We would be braver, knowing some tomorrow
Will still hold happiness for you and me.

If our blurred eyes could see beyond their weeping
The sunlit hills that some day we shall climb,
We would be stronger, and we would be keeping
A tryst with Hope through every darkened time.

If we could see beyond a fresh disaster,
The road smoothed out again before our eyes,
We would be calmer, and we would learn faster
The lessons life unfolds to make us wise.

We are so blinded by a moment's grieving,
So hurt by any sorrow—any pain,
That we forget the joys beyond believing,
The peace, that some day will be ours again.

IN PARADISE

By Paul M. Hatch

THE malefactor had made a marvelous request from the dying Savior, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Jesus, in His dying agony, had made reply to that request, "Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

From the standpoint of faith, what a wonderful study it is. Here was the malefactor, evidently an evildoer of hardened character, that had never been faced with such a crisis as this, a forfeiture of his life for his evil deeds. Whether this man had ever before met Jesus, of course no one is able to say. Now he saw in Jesus such an outstanding quality of righteous character that a great request, begotten of faith, issued from his lips. Faith that not only was expressing itself in the firm conviction that this man would be the great King in a coming kingdom, but also that he would stoop to the sinner and remember him there.

Likewise the answer of Jesus was full of faith and gracious condescension to the sinner that was in greater imminent danger than He was. Jesus' answer was direct, unhesitant, and concise. He does not promise to remember the malefactor in His kingdom, but He does promise that they will be together in paradise.

It has long been supposed by all religious bodies that Jesus granted the request asked of Him, and such was the belief of the writer at one time. Now it seems that granting the request would be out of harmony with other Scripture. The malefactor had never complied with the teaching to believe, repent, and be baptized for the remission of sins; nor had he exercised himself in the works of faith that cause one to grow in grace and the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. But he was granted his order and rank of resurrection and a granting that his one request, begotten of faith, would usher him into a meeting in paradise.

As to the etymology of the term paradise, it is traced to the Orient and is carried into the Occidental languages bodily. Originally it meant a royal pleasure and hunting park, named thus by the Assyrians and Persians. We do not encounter the term in the Old Testament of English translation, but the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures in the third century B. C. known as the LXX or Septuagint names the Garden of Eden a paradise. The singular fact in this case is that it was a garden or park planted by God Himself, and there He associated with the man and woman that He had made until transgression marred that association.

The New Testament contains the term thrice. First: Christ and the malefactor in Luke 23:43. Second: Paul uses the term in 2 Corinthians 12:4. Third: John the Revelator in Revelation 2:7 to the "overcomer" of the church at Ephesus.

Disregarding the first occurrence, let us examine the second reference and then the third. In the second reference, 2 Corinthians 12:4, Paul is speaking of visions and revelations. He claims to have known a man that was caught up in a vision to the third heaven, and then continues that this man was caught up into paradise and heard unspeakable words which are not lawful for a man to utter. Here we have evidently two places or one. Either the third heaven and paradise are two distinct places or they are synonymous terms. As Paul is the only one to use the term third heaven, and this is the only place where he uses it, it will be necessary to go farther afield to find a clue to his language.

Peter in his second epistle and the third chapter uses the term heavens and earth, giving us the idea of a chronological procedure. This chapter describes three heavens and earths that occur in sequence. The first in order perished in a deluge; the present one is reserved for the fiery judgment of God. The future or third one, that shall be new, will be the habitation of righteousness. This, according to Peter, is the one long promised and for which we look.

God's promise of a new heavens and earth made to Isaiah shows its glories. There, there shall be no more sorrow or crying, but a continual joy (Isaiah 65:17-25).

Still we seemingly have no apparent clue that third heaven and paradise are two distinct places or are one. Let us now examine the third reference, Revelation 2:7: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

The tree of life is in the midst of the paradise of God, even as it was in the Garden of Eden. That is when God again dwells with man in the heavens and earth made new. Of this great and glorious culmination of the destiny of the earth, read the twenty-first and the twenty-second chapters of Revelation, especially the first five verses of each chapter.

This occurs after the thousand-year reign of Christ and the final judgment at its end. The resurrection occurring at the end of the millennium has to do with those dead that were not raised at its beginning. These are judged out of the things written in the books and the book of life. Those not found written there are to suffer destruction in the lake of fire and brimstone. The judgment is based upon works according to the text, Revelation 20:7-15. In the case of the malefactor, judgment will come then, and he will be granted an entrance into the paradise of God.

Coming to the conclusion of the matter, the third heaven, new heavens and earth, and paradise are one and the same condition. The tree of life, which is not mentioned as being apart from God Himself and His association with His creatures, is there. Truly the malefactor had a most wonderful promise.

Did Christ Die More Than Once?

By R. H. Judd

---

"Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God."—1 Pet. 3:18.

THERE are one or two alterations in the above scripture which to the casual reader would seem to be but of minor importance, but to the one "whose delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night" the changes are of deep and far-reaching significance.

The mere transposing of a single word in a sentence may and sometimes does bring out more clearly the true meaning of the one who utters it. The thought as expressed in the Authorized Version is not infrequently understood to mean that Christ "once suffered," having the sense of "once upon a time"; but as Paul intended it to be understood, the distinctive thought is that Christ "suffered once." It was a suffering that was definite, a single occurrence never before experienced, and never again to be repeated.

That such is the correct view of Paul's statement is fully confirmed by closer examination. First, it will be seen by reference to Young's Concordance that the meaning of the Greek is "once for all." Holding this thought in mind, let us notice another change (in the margin) from that of the King James Version, namely, Christ "died" instead of Christ "suffered."

The Scriptures testify that Christ suffered many times (see Mark 8:31; Hebrews 5:8), but search them as we may, we cannot find in them even a hint that Christ died more than once. In further confirmation of this thought it will be noticed that in Young's Concordance in this passage, and this alone, the word "suffered" is in brackets, indicating that it is of doubtful interpretation.

The reader will naturally ask, "Why place so much emphasis on the fact that Christ died once?" Because not only is it important to get as near as possible to the correct idea to be conveyed, but in this instance it has a most important bearing on various Bible topics of great moment, such as the nature of Christ and the purpose and nature of His mission to men.

The statement that Christ "died once" is a statement of fact, and just as an astronomer was able to predict by means of premises based on facts already known (so closely is fact related to fact, and truth to fact), the discovery of a planet long before its existence was actually proved, so from the statement of fact that "Christ died once" other facts may be scripturally and reasonably deduced from it.

Still another consideration: There are no passages in Scripture that cannot be brought into reasonable harmony with the view that Christ did not preexist His birth by Mary, while on the contrary there are statements like that of our text which completely shut out the possibility of His preexistence; for, (note this), if Christ preexisted in any sense, He could not have become Mary's son without first suffering the death of His previous personality. There is a conclusion from which there can be no escape, for His pre-existent state and that in which He was being "made of a woman" could not both exist at one and the same time.

Any theory that involves contradiction of the scriptural statement that Christ died once must of necessity be erroneous. Besides, if His death on the cross was for the purpose that He "might put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," what purpose could there be in a previous death? It could not be with respect to sin, for Paul says, "In that he died he died unto sin once," yet another scripture that confirms the statement of our text.

The fact that if Christ preexisted His birth by Mary He must have previously died was brought to my notice some thirty years ago, but never until quite recently when in correspondence with an esteemed friend did it come to me with all the force of indisputable fact. Now again I pass it on to the readers of THE RESTITUTION HERALD.

Many a time in his study of Scripture has the writer sought to lay hold of some one central fact in his solution of a problem, and in the assurance of its being fact has patiently waited, in some instances for years, for the harmony which he knows must come in due course. He has not been disappointed, and more than one prominent servant of God has thanked him for the help thus given. The writer believes that many a subject in the Word of God will find its answer (in brief) in this one passage of Scripture; and the answer to that ever-recurring question, "Jesus Christ: who is He?" will be found here, too, as well as the answer to the question regarding the nature of His mission to men.

INSPIRATION

By George B. Alldridge

"But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."—Job 32:8.

WEBSTER'S Dictionary defines inspiration as "the supernatural influence of the Holy Spirit on sacred writers and teachers."

In the Authorized Version there are only two references where inspiration is used: Job 32:8 and 2 Timothy 3:16. But the significance of its value is expressed throughout the whole Word of God. I will cite one especially significant instance, using my favorite translation by the late Ferrar Fenton. It is found in 2 Peter 1:21: "For the prophecy was never a result of human design; on the contrary, men spoke under the influence of a Holy Spirit sent from God." Once more I quote in harmony with this from Hebrews 1:1, 2: "God having of old spoken to our forefathers in many portions and many forms, by the prophets, at last in these times has spoken to us by a Son: whom He appointed Inheritor of all; and through whom He made the Ages."

Nowhere is there a record, either canonically or apocryphally, excepting John 8:6 and of that no record has been made, of Jesus ever writing anything. His matchless discourses and parables, in which He revealed the depth of His penetrating insight into the nature of man and God, were treasured in the memories of His loving and faithful disciples.

Not one of my readers, I hope, questions the fact that His disciples were inspired. But how were they inspired? is the point I wish to emphasize. (I will continue to quote from Ferrar Fenton's Translation.) Let us read John 14:26: "But the Helper, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send with My power, He will teach you everything, and remind you of all that I have myself told you." John 16:13 reads, "When, however, the Spirit of Truth himself comes, he will instruct you in the truth: for his utterances do not proceed from himself: but just what he learns he will declare, and the events that are coming he will announce to you."

It is granted, I presume, that all my readers concede that St. Paul was one of the Lord's apostles; and according to his own declaration he was the last chosen. (1 Cor. 1:1; 2 Cor. 12:12). Listen to what Paul said to the elders of the church at Ephesus: "I am consequently anxious this very day to prove to you that I am clear from the blood of all men: because I never hesitated in declaring to you the whole purpose of God."—Acts 20:26, 27.

I will quote from The Religions of the World by George A. Barton. On page 301 he says, "Not all schoolmen were as considerate of the Latin church. Abelard was led to hold many of the views of the Greek theology, and became a martyr for his independence. With the dawning of new intelligence several sects sprang into existence, the adherents of which sought greater satisfaction for the soul than the church afforded. The church took alarm and in 1229 closed the Bible to the laity, and in 1232 invented the inquisition to enforce the decision."

Dear brethren, the paragraph just quoted proves beyond all cavil the inspiration of the blessed Holy Bible. I cannot find in history where any edict ever was issued to suppress the Koran; the teachings of Zoroaster; the books of the religion of the Veda; Gautama, founder of Buddhism; Confucius; Shintoism; the Grecian philosophers; or the Roman orators, including Mars, the god of war. But the words of Him of whom it is said: "And they all commended Him, and wondered at the language of love which proceeded from His mouth."

The record of His words and acts must be suppressed at all hazard, even making a bonfire of it; and why? Let Paul answer: "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel; for it is Divine power to save every believer, Jew first, and then Greek, for a Divine Righteousness is displayed in it from a faith to a faith; as it is written, The Righteous shall live by faith."

Peter, do you agree with Paul? Indeed I do; write down my words, neither adding to nor taking from them: "Having purified your lives by your obedience to the truth, with sincere brotherly affection love one another earnestly from the heart; having been regenerated, not from a corruptible source, but from an incorruptible, by means of a message from a living and enduring God."—1 Peter 1:22, 23.

Brother, are you inspired? I thank God I am as long as I follow Paul's injunction and that is, "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body: and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him."

Do you remember Jesus' prayer? "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word."

What did Paul tell Timothy? To tell funny stories and make the people laugh and quote the sciences to prove how erudite he was? No, sir! He said, "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season: reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come (that is now) when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

Some of my dear brethren contend that certain portions of the Scriptures are not inspired. Well, what are the parts? They all look good to me.

Suppose I go to the architect who designed the Empire Building in New York City, and say, "That building, sir, is too top-heavy. You had better cut it down."

He may say to me, "I designed that building; and everything, including its height, depth, and weight, was all thought out, and it was fabricated to stay just as it is.

Your criticism, crude as it is, fails to note the beautiful harmony prevailing throughout the whole building and the purpose for which it was constructed."

God is the Architect of the Holy Bible, and He has inspired many men to write it. Each book has been so written that the whole sixty-six stories will stand because their foundation rests upon a rock foundation. It is dear to Him. As David says, "I will worship . . . and praise thy name for thy lovingkindness and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name."—Psa. 138:2.

I understand now what Paul had in mind when he wrote, "For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor? or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen."—Romans 11:34-36.

So, as I study the life of Jesus and assimilate His Word and keep His commandments, I realize that the spirit He manifested in His life was the spirit of the Word of God in Him made flesh; and as He was of God, so always He manifested the spirit of the truth. According to His promise, in the measure I receive His Word into my heart I, too, shall be led by the same spirit as expressed by God in His written Word. So I realize that God has expressed in His Word His wisdom and knowledge. If I obey His Word, then I am led by the spirit of the truth and will find myself daily walking in the wisdom and knowledge of God.

Paul, in speaking of those who walk otherwise, says, "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart."—Ephesians 4:18.

So, then, if I am continually led and thus inspired by the Word of God, I will realize that "every one born from God does not practise sin: because His principle of life continues in him; and he does not value sinning, because he has been born from God."—1 John 3:9, F. F. But if I forget God's Word and it ceases to influence my life and I begin to flirt with Delilah, then like Samson I will go out as at other times before and shake myself and wist not that the Lord has departed from me (Judges 14:20, 21).

A JEWISH FOLK TALE

ONE day a certain rich man of a miserly disposition visited a rabbi, who took the rich man by the hand and led him to a window.

"Look out there," he said.

The rich man looked into the street.

"What do you see?" asked the rabbi.

"I see men, and women, and little children," answered the rich man.

Again the rabbi took him by the hand, and this time led him to a mirror. "What do you see now?"

"Now I see myself," the rich man replied.

Then the rabbi said: "Behold, in the window there is glass, and in the mirror there is glass! But the glass of the mirror is covered with a little silver, and no sooner is the silver added than you cease to see others, but you see only yourself."

THE MANIFESTATION OF LIFE

IT is impossible to have consciousness without life, or to have life without an organism for its reception. Life never lives by itself. It is not a living being. It has no body, parts, or attributes. Life neither lives nor dies. As there can be no love without a lover, no thought without a thinker, no sin without a sinner, so there can be no life without a physical organism in which it is contained.

When God made man, he was complete in all his parts before he gave him life. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."—Genesis 2:7. The only difference between a living and a dead man is that one has life and the other has none. The Bible and science show most plainly that all that leaves men, animals, or vegetables, at death, is life. The life of man is not the man; the pain of a wound is not the wound; the memory of the dog is not the dog; the thoughts of a man are not the man.

The man is a real, tangible, personal being, most wonderfully organized; and only this organism can properly be called a man, as only a certain combination of various parts is properly called a watch. The time of a watch is no part of its mechanism. Time is not a material object that can be seen or handled; neither are life, love, peace, joy, and thought. They all come to an end when the organism is destroyed to which they belong. When the watch is destroyed it ceases to keep time; when man is destroyed he ceases to will, think, or act. Says Inspiration: "His breath (ruach) goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:4.

In the Philosophy of Health by L. B. Coles, it says: "The body is not the man . . . The eye is no part of the man; it is only the window of the house. . . . The ear is no part of the man. . . . Our identity . . . does not consist in the body." Another says: "The soul lives in the body just as a man lives in a house. . . . At death your soul must move away, . . . and leave the body," and live "somewhere else."

These are very plain statements that cannot be misunderstood. But are they true? Where, in the Bible, is it said that the soul of man leaves the body at death, and moves away to live "somewhere else"? Where is there such an intimation? We must admit that what is not taught in the Bible is not a Bible doctrine. The soul of man is said to be "immaterial," "uncompounded," "indivisible," "indissoluble," "indestructible," "intangible," having no "exterior" or "interior surface." All these terms would be proper in describing nothing. How could such a soul be identified that had no "exterior" or "interior surface," as declared by Mr. Drew? But, as he affirms, if the soul of man has an outside it must have an inside; and then it would be material.

It seems almost incredible that intelligent men can believe that "the real man" is not the one who is begotten, is born, lives, dies, and is buried, to be raised from the dead; but is one who has no body, neither breadth, length, nor thickness, outside or inside; and that such a one goes to heaven to praise the Lord while his organs of speech are dead in the grave; to see Christ and the holy angels while his eyes are closed in death; to hear the songs of heaven while his ears are decaying in the coffin; and to enjoy the raptures of the celestials while all his senses are rotting in the ground. Are we required to believe such monstrous absurdities in order to be considered orthodox? If so, is it not about time that orthodoxy was cleansed from such wild, pagan, and papal theories?—An excerpt selected by Rufus A. Curtis from the writings of Miles Grant in Positive Theology.

Has the Church Had Its Hair Cut?

By Gerald T. Cooper

---

THE above title was used as a basis for one of the most interesting sermons the Church of God at Ripley has heard for some time.

Generally, we think of Samson as being just the strong man of the Bible; but Brother Lapp, pastor of the Church of God at Ripley, Illinois, compared his life to the church of today.

Samson was consecrated to the service of God before his birth, his mother having received instructions from an angel of God to make him a Nazarite. The Nazarites were an especial group of God's children consecrated to His service alone. One of the rules of this group was that no razor or shears should touch the head of its members.

Of Samson's earlier life we have only these words: "And the child grew, and the Lord blessed him."—Judges 13:24. The next we hear of him was when, instead of picking one in the camp of Israel, he went down to Timnath and married a woman there. Here the thought was brought in that if young people would marry in their own faith much present day marital discord would be wiped out.

Samson's experiences with this woman are familiar to most of us, but permit me to relate them briefly. First, we have the story of the riddle (Judges 14:8-20) and of how Samson fulfilled his part of the bargain. After this he tried to claim his wife, but her father had given her to another. To wreak vengeance, Samson burned the corn and other crops of the Philistines. The Philistines then burned Samson's former wife and her father. Thus ended his experience with this woman.

When the Philistines went up to Judah to capture Samson, his strength again came to his rescue, and he escaped. At Lehi God's Spirit strove with him, and he slew one thousand men with the jawbone of an ass. Then, when he became thirsty, God caused water to flow from the bone to quench his thirst. The thought of the wonderful twenty-third Psalm stands forth here not only for Samson, but for us as well.

Again he escaped from the Philistines after being surrounded at Gaza, when he carried away the gates of the city.

But we find that his ultimate downfall was forthcoming. He fell in love with a woman named Delilah, and she conspired with the Philistines to find out the source of his great strength. Three times he deceived her, but the fourth time he disclosed the secret. It was not his own but God's strength, because he was a Nazarite. While Samson slept, his wife shaved his head; and when the Philistines came to capture him, his strength was gone. They took him, punched his eyes out, and cast him into prison. There his hair grew again; and when he was brought out to be made sport of, he leaned upon the pillars of the temple and with God's help brought down the great building, killing more people at his death than he did during his lifetime.

Now let us sum up our points. Samson's strength was in his hair because of a vow to God. The strength of the church is in close communion with God in prayer and service. Samson was led away by Delilah and lost his strength through the cutting of his hair. The church is also being led away. Is it being shorn of its power by modernism?

What is modernism? Belief that the Old Testament stories are fables is modernism. Take the story of Jonah for example. Many think it was impossible for a whale to have swallowed him, but Christ said that even as Jonah was three days and nights in the whale's belly even so would the Son of man be three days and nights in the heart of the earth (Matthew 12:40). Belief that we can save ourselves is modernism. Many people believe that they can save themselves, but in Acts 4:12 Peter tells that "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," referring, of course, to Jesus Christ. Another act of modernism is bringing worldly things into the church. The church is a good thing for the world, but the world is not good for the church. By "worldly things" I refer to too many social times, too much formality in worship, and trying to serve both God and the world by participating in motion pictures, card parties, and Sunday baseball games, and similar amusements.

Perhaps your church is not guilty of modernism. I pray not, but be careful and remember that Samson was finally enticed by Delilah. Also remember, should your church be guilty, that Samson returned to God and was still strong at his death, and that you, too, can return to God and be strong in the end.

THE JUDGMENT OF MAN IS NOTHING

By D. G. Harvey

"But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment; yea, I judge not mine own self."—1 Corinthians 4:3.

WHILE considering a recent article on the question of jealousy, one of the results of jealousy comes to mind. Should we judge one another? It is so easy to pass judgment and condemn others, but not ourselves.

Like all questions of this nature, we should turn to the Book of books for our answer. We find there is indeed danger to our future life in passing judgment today.

Our Lord warns in Matthew 7:1, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." Let us turn to Revelation 12:10: "For the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night." Compare with the ninth verse.

Is there a member of the church who has a desire to be in the class of Satan? Then there is the result that we so often see today, the cause of division in the church. Many Berean classes have failed to carry on for this reason. Let us read Galatians 5:15: "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."

There is one sentence of our text with which all seem to agree: "I judge not mine own self." But Paul goes on to say in 1 Corinthians 11:31, "For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged." How true is Paul's reasoning. What natural man will condemn himself? Let us borrow a thought from Brother Arlen Marsh's splendid article, "I Am a Pharisee," of the January 10 issue: "They are to be condemned. But I—I am a Pharisee." We are all too sure of ourselves. We do no sin.

But our Master gives one rule by which we are to judge others: "And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? . . . thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."—Matthew 7:3, 5.

But some will say, quoting 1 Corinthians 6:2, 3, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?"

Yes, brother, but not now. Turn to Paul again, 1 Corinthians 4:5: "Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God."

Let us, then, realize our judgment is nothing and not be hasty to condemn others. Surely we cannot judge by the standard of God, "for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."—1 Samuel 16:7.

Then what are we to do? "To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men." Why? "For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another. But after that the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared."—Titus 3:2-4.

What have we to glory in, to boast of? It is not our own works that save us, not our self-righteousness, not our goodness; but it is the mercy of God. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done," says Paul, "but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost."—Titus 3:5.

Let us turn to Romans 2:1-4: "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things. But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth, against them which commit such things. And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God? Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?"

We have, then, no right or power to judge or condemn our fellow laborers in the Lord. "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand."—Romans 14:4.

"So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God."—Romans 14:12. It is no marvel that the great Apostle to the Gentiles, seeing this great truth, his responsibility to God, could pen the words of our text: "But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment."

"Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way."—Romans 14:13. "And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Ephesians 4:30-32. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—John 13:35.

THOMAS A. Edison, the great inventor, has always been a very bitter enemy to the cigarette habit. He did not allow anyone to smoke in his presence, and, though many of his employees habitually used cigarettes, they kept them out of sight when Mr. Edison was around. On one occasion Mr. Edison found a package of cigarette papers outside the door of his office. He picked it up, and wrote the following sign:

"A degenerate, who is retrograding toward the lower animal life, has lost his packet. The same can be had by applying to the storekeeper."—P. B. Prior.

IN NOTHING BE ANXIOUS

lonians 5:17, "Pray without ceasing," Paul immediately adds in verse 18: "In every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

Thus far the Apostle has told how to make requests to God. Such requests are not to be made in anxiety and fear that perhaps He will fail us in our time of need, but in quiet trust and confidence that the needed assistance will be forthcoming. The request must be the outgrowth of the heart's sincere desire that the blessings of Jehovah be granted according to His will and wisdom. And this request may be accomplished by thanksgiving, not only for blessings already received, but also for the assurance that "no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Psalm 84:11).

Now, what will follow when we proceed consistently in the course indicated? Philippians 4:7 answers this question: "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus."

It may seem impossible to enjoy such peace while there is so much turmoil in the world. But there is a sense in which it is possible to us now and here. It is said there are depths of ocean where perfect calm prevails even while a storm is raging on the surface which may endanger the strongest ship. May we not enter deeply enough into the realm of spiritual things so the peace of God will be ours though the unbelieving world is torn by discord and strife? Certainly we may, but only by faithfulness to the Master and with His help!

According to another comparison, it must be by rising higher that we attain to that state of peaceful calm. Aviators sometimes encounter storms which threaten to wreck their craft, or at least to end their flight for the time being. But by flying at a greater altitude they are able to sail onward serenely toward the desired port while the tempest leaves ruin in its wake beneath them.

Let us not overlook the fact that the peace of God, when we have made it ours, is a safeguard: it keeps, or guards, our hearts and thoughts. When one is in a "stormy" state of mind, he cannot think clearly or reliably. If fear, wrath, greed—or any other destructive motion—be predominant in the heart, it creates a condition of confusion and unrest as distressing and distracting as a furious storm. At such times the portals of the heart and the current of thought passing through these portals are not well guarded. But "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and thoughts"—if it be allowed to do so.

When the heart is thus properly guarded, what kind of thoughts will be allowed to pass? Let the inspired penman answer: "Finally, brethren, . . . whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Philippians 4:8. Such thinking, if prevalent among men, would soon revolutionize this old world! It should at least be prevalent among those who wish to be known as disciples of Christ; and, even in this circle, a great reformation and restoration should be ushered in. And while following through on this course we can "rejoice in the Lord always," as Paul says we should.—William Albert Burcher in The Bible Advocate.

from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." But the much-loved twenty-third Psalm expresses the idea even in bolder terms: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Even though we go down into death, we need not fear if we are followers of Jesus! Not even death can separate us from the love of God! So we might say again that if Jesus had wished us to know what would happen to the believer when He comes He would have told us definitely. Jesus, who was to be our example, suffered unto death; yet it was said of Him: "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone."—Psalm 91:11, 12. The reason Elijah's life was miraculously preserved was that he might work for the Lord. The reason Jesus did not die earlier than He did was that the Lord had work for Him to do.

And it has ever been so with us: if we have come into covenant relationship with God through Christ, we cannot run away from our duty, even as Jonah could not escape his. If we escape the fiery trials of the judgments of God that are to come in the earth, it is because God will have some special work for us to do. The so-called "tribulation saint" would be of a much more perfect character than any of us who have seen less trials; and, instead of being of less degree as some think, he would be of much higher degree than the other saints. This idea is born out of Jesus' answer to the mother of James and John when she asked for a high position for her sons; could they drink the cup of suffering?

Will God take His church out of the "time of trouble" that is coming on the earth? or will He preserve it from that time as He did the cities of Judah at the time of the invasion of Alexander the Great? or will they be allowed to perfect their characters through suffering? The Scriptures do not say.

"THEREFORE ALL THINGS WHATSOEVER YE WOULD THAT MEN SHOULD DO TO YOU, DO YE EVEN SO TO THEM: FOR THIS IS THE LAW AND THE PROPHETS."—MATTHEW 7:12.

JESUS BEGINS HIS WORK

AFTER Jesus' baptism He was driven into the wilderness, and here He stayed for forty days and forty nights. Here He was tempted by Satan. He was with the wild beasts, and the angels ministered unto Him.

After that, John was put in prison for baptizing the people. Then Jesus came immediately preaching the Word of God. Jesus said, "Repent ye, and believe in the gospel."

As He walked by the sea, He saw two brothers putting their net into the sea. He said unto them, "Come with Me, and I will make you fishers of men." And immediately they left their net and followed Jesus. As they walked on, they saw the sons of Zebedee, who were in a ship fixing their nets. And He called them also, and they left their ship and followed.

They went to Capernaum, and on the Sabbath day Jesus preached to the people. They were astonished at the words that Jesus spoke, for He taught them as one of authority. In the church, there was a man with an unclean spirit, and he said to Jesus, "Let us alone; you have come to destroy us. I know who you are, the Son of God." Jesus said to him, "Hold thy peace, and let this spirit come out of thee." And the spirit did come out. The people were amazed, saying, "Why does this man obey Jesus? He would not obey us."

And immediately His preaching spread over all Galilee.

When Jesus and His disciples came out of the synagogue, they went into the house of Simon and Andrew with James and John. As they entered the house, they saw Simon's wife's mother sick with a fever, and they asked Jesus to talk to her. Jesus took her hand and immediately the fever was gone and she was well.

The people of the city gathered at the door where Jesus was, and even when the sun went down they brought people that were sick for Him to heal. And Jesus healed many people, and brought out unclean spirits. Jesus got up long before sunrise and went out and prayed. Simon and the others that were with Simon followed. When they found Jesus they said, "All men seek for Thee." Jesus said to the people, "We will go to the next town, and there I will preach the gospel to you." They all went to the church, and Jesus taught and cast out bad spirits.

There came a man to Jesus, saying, "Will Thou heal me of my disease?" Jesus knelt before him and healed him. Then Jesus sent him away. He said unto him, "See thou say nothing to any man. Go show thyself to a priest and offer the things which Moses commanded."

Instead, he went out and preached it to all the people, and they came to Jesus from all quarters.

JESUS FORGIVING SIN

You should never sin against anybody; but if you do, you should ask for forgiveness. If you do, as often as you ask God to forgive you, He will always do it, if you ask that forgiveness for Christ's sake.

Jesus forgave the sick man that sinned, and He healed him of the palsy. The men that brought him to Jesus had a lot of faith in Jesus. They carried him on his bed, which was made of dried grass, with a piece of carpet thrown over it. Jesus was in the house of Simon Peter. Simon Peter was a Pharisee. The house was packed so full of people that these men had to make a hole in the roof and let the sick man down. Jesus said, "Arise, take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house."

That shows us that Jesus can heal the sick, make the blind to see, raise the dead, and make the lame to walk. We cannot do all the things that God gave Jesus the power to do, but we can forgive those who do us a wrong.

—Leota Gruber, 9, Oregon, Illinois.

IN RESPONSE to numerous queries of the last few weeks, the National Berean Society announces that the publication date for Senior Book 3, God's Kingdom, cannot be set. Only about half the copy for the book is now available for the use of the printers. The national organization regrets this delay as much as the local societies desiring the book. All the books indicated in recent advertisements through this paper are in stock and will be mailed promptly upon receipt of an order, postpaid. Tracts on the regular list will be provided free, postpaid, in any quantities required.

PREPARED BY MARY A. GESIN

"Suffer little children to come unto me."

JESUS GIVES AN INVITATION

JESUS, you know, was the Son of God; He was born to be a King. And yet He had time to talk to little children! We think that He would have been too busy with great affairs of the nation to do that. And that is just what the disciples thought, too.

One day as Jesus and His helpers were walking along one of the roads of old Judea, east of the Jordan, they came to a quiet and shady spot and sat down to rest awhile. Jesus was never left alone very long, and about the only time He could get to talk to His Father in prayer was in the midnight hours. And to be sure, there was soon a crowd of people around Him.

On the edge of the crowd were some timid mothers, with their babies in their arms and their little ones clinging to their skirts. They had heard such wonderful stories of Jesus—how He had healed many a sick one and even brought one little girl back to life. They thought that if only Jesus could lay His hand on the heads of their little ones, great blessings would come to them.

And as they pressed closer to Him the disciples scolded them and said, "Do not trouble the Master with your little children. He is teaching us great truths which He wants us to know."

But when the Master heard what they said, He called the mothers near and took the little ones up in His arms. For He had a greater truth yet to teach His disciples. And this is what He said:

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

Then He explained to his disciples that all who want to enter His kingdom must trust Him just as a little child trusts his parents. They must have faith in every word He speaks and never doubt Him. And that is the greatest truth of all that He taught them that day.

How we wish we could have been among those whom Jesus called to Him in old Judea. But we need not feel sorry that we were not, because He sends us the same invitation today.

When we receive an invitation from one of our friends we gladly accept it, and at once we try to think of some nice gift to take with us, because of the love in our hearts for each other. And it is the same way with Jesus. He is our best Friend, and He loves us more than anyone else.

Because He has done so much for us, we want to do as much as we can for Him, and there are oh! so many little things we can do. For doing kind things for others is the way we do things for Him. And besides all the little deeds of love, we must not forget to give some of our pennies to help His work.

There is a dear little girl in our Oregon Sunday school, not quite three years old. Her name is Patricia Andrew. When some one asked her the other day what she did with her pennies she said, "I give them to the Lord."

Little Patsy, as we call her, is beginning early in life, and if she keeps on in the way she has started, she will be just like the nice, straight, beautiful tree you are going to draw in your Bible scrapbook.

Our new member this week is Florence Steffa, Oregon, Illinois.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

After copying the golden text and the title of the lesson, draw a picture of a bed and a child kneeling beside it, or cut out a figure of a child kneeling and paste it beside the bed. Underneath, copy the first part of the first verse of Ecclesiastes 12. Then draw two trees, one crooked and twisted, the other straight and beautiful. You know our lives are like trees. If we learn the right way to live and give our hearts and lives to Jesus while we are young, we will be like the straight tree; we will be good and kind and upright, growing all of the time in favor with God and man. But if we wait until bad habits get a hold on us and sin mars our features, we will be like the crooked tree. Under your trees write the words of Luke 2:52. Next copy the words of this poem or clip it out and paste it in your book:

"I think when I read that sweet story of old,
Of when Jesus was here among men,
How He called little children as lambs to His fold,
I should like to have been with them then.

"I wish that His hands had been placed on my head,
That His arms had been thrown around me,
And that I might have seen His kind look when He said,
'Let the little ones come unto Me.'"

LESSON 5. — April 30, 1933

JESUS SETS NEW STANDARDS OF LIVING

Mark 10:1-31

Devotional Reading: Philippians 2:1-11

GOLDEN TEXT

As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.—Luke 6:31.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Sets New Standards of Living.

Aim: To show that Jesus requires us to be willing to sacrifice anything for Him.

I. Jesus' Thought for Children. (Vv. 13-16.) It was a widespread practice among Jewish mothers to take their babies to the temple or synagogue to have them blessed by notable people. Luke calls those who were brought to Jesus for blessing, "infants." It is a sacred thought to meditate upon the fact that our busy Lord, with tremendous tasks awaiting Him, took time to take little children in His arms and call down upon them the benediction of God! He saw in these babes the innocence, faith, and dependence which God delights to see in His children of riper years, and used them as a text for a wonderful sermon on the conditions of salvation.

II. Jesus Grieves a Rich Man. (Vv. 17-22.) The contrast between the teaching of Jesus and that of the Jews at that time is nowhere more clearly set forth than in this lesson. Here was one who from his youth had observed the requirements of the law, yet he realized that there was still something which he lacked to bring him into complete harmony with God. He did not know what it was, so he appealed in humility to Jesus. Seeing in his heart the sin of greed, the Lord prescribed for his spiritual healing the giving up of the riches which were the cause of his separation from God. The young man was grieved. Whatever it may be that prevents our giving God first place in our lives must be removed if we would obtain eternal life and a place in His kingdom.

III. Jesus Teaches His Disciples. (Vv. 23-27.) The disciples did not realize how complete must be their consecration to the Master until it was made so clear to them on this occasion, and they were astonished. "Who then can be saved?" they cried. The answer in substance was this: Salvation in the final analysis depends upon the transforming power of Almighty God exerted through the gospel.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

1. God wants the children. Children are a blessing; train them for the kingdom; early training necessary. God loves the children. They are His future workers. They are a blessing from God to man. We are entrusted with these live blessings. In a large measure, we are stewards of their destinies. The majority of these "living blessings" are taught by their parents in an exemplary way to curse the Father and Source of the blessing. We turn them away from God, instead of leading them toward the Father. They are kingdom material, created for the kingdom and the glory of God and the blessing of mankind. When we fail in training them in the way of righteousness, we are robbing them of the chief glory and end of life.

Training children for the work of God and the kingdom of God should begin at birth. Under the Mosaic law it began when the child was eight days old. Luke 2:21. Early habits produce the character and life of the individual in nearly every case. Begin early in developing the habit of going to the house of God. Psa. 122:1. Teach them regularity, so they will not fail to assemble. Heb. 10:25. Train them to respect the house of God. Hab. 2:20. "Train up a child in the way he should go."—Prov. 22:6.

2. Prepare for eternal life. Observe God's teachings. Refuse to allow anything to hinder. He that prepares for eternal life must observe the teachings that point out and lead to such a life. "Ye shall know the truth."—John 8:32. "Study to shew thyself approved unto God."—2 Tim. 2:15. Acceptance of some and omission of other of the teachings will not suffice. One of the characters of our lesson did this very thing. We must not allow anything to hinder us or interfere without complete acceptance and observance of all of God's teachings that are applicable to our time and people.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Luke 6:31.

Christ in talking with His disciples gave them this rule. Christ taught only good things; so if this rule was good for His disciples when He was here, it is just as good for His followers today. Each one who lives up to this rule is certainly manifesting the spirit of that other rule, "Love thy neighbour (fellow citizen) as thyself."

If every citizen of our country, yea, even if every Christian in our land lived up to this rule, it would make this world a much better place in which to live. Christ's teachings were always for the best. It had been "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," but to treat others as we want them to treat us is an entirely different way of looking at things. Let us each one try to live up to this rule, thereby walking more nearly in the Master's footsteps.—L. A. B.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

All for Christ

Jesus once said, "If any man come to me, and hate not (care less for) his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple."—Luke 14:26. Jesus was not teaching hatred, but He was teaching that one could not have more regard for his relatives or his own life than for Jesus.

Man is blessed to the extent of his surrender to the will of God. In justice to man himself, God can bless him only as he turns to righteousness. Man, blinded by sin, does not realize this. God, who knows the only road to eternal happiness and joy, has given directions and instructions which if allowed will lead to man's greatest blessing and benefit. Man must learn to surrender to the Father in heaven. The divine Road-guide tells the road to follow. It states: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

God demands first place, but He has promised to pay well for this demand. "Every one that hath forsaken houses, or lands, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life."—Matt. 19:29.

Complete surrender to the Master took Peter from a fishing net to a throne (still in promise). We can receive a throne, too, if we are willing to surrender. See Rev. 5:9, 10.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Jesus Loves Little Children.

After studying all these lessons about the things Jesus did, don't you just wish Jesus were here right now? Wouldn't we like to hear and see Him do some of these things we have studied? I'm sure you will wish it much more after I tell you this story about Jesus.

Jesus had come to Judaea. Many, many people came to see and hear Jesus. Among this group of people were several mothers. Each one had her children with her. And what do you think they wanted? They wanted Jesus to see and touch their very own children. They just knew something wonderful would happen if Jesus did this.

But Jesus' disciples said to them, "Go away. Jesus has no time to be bothered with you." How disappointed they must have been.

Now Jesus happened to hear what His disciples had said and done, and He didn't like it at all. He said, "Let the little children come here to me." And then, best of all, Jesus took them up in His arms and loved them. Now don't you wish you had been one of those little children? But Jesus loves us, too, and while He is not here to put His arms around us, He watches over us and cares for us every day.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

EASTER SERVICES AT OREGON

The services of Resurrection Sunday were beautiful and interesting from beginning to end. During the Sunday school hour, Sr. Alice Carpenter's class gave a playlet depicting activities immediately following the Savior's resurrection. The scene for the play was drawn by Sr. Carpenter and pictured the three rugged crosses outlined against a beautiful sky. Our risen Lord seemed more a reality to us as we followed His disciples on that first Easter morning. By request of Bro. Marsh, Bro. Austin, our former pastor, conducted the communion service, and drew us closer to our Master, who said, "Do this in remembrance of me." During the evening hour Bro. Marsh gave a meditation, "With Christ by Galilee," impersonating the Apostle Peter as he conversed with others of his Lord's service among men. During Bro. Marsh's talk, a beautiful picture was thrown upon the wall, showing our risen Lord as He sat by the shores of the lake which was so often the scene of His labor. The music by the choir was especially appropriate both morning and evening, and was greatly appreciated.—M. G.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

As this is written, final plans are being made for Easter services. The day is to be started with a sunrise service at seven o'clock. Baptism is to be administered at the morning worship hour, eleven o'clock.

April 9 established another record in our Sunday school with an attendance of 323.

The men had their monthly meeting of the "Knights of Abraham" on Saturday night, April 8, with 26 men present; and the most encouraging feature was that there were more men at Sunday school the next morning than were at the meeting the night before.

In spite of cramped quarters, the church still continues to grow steadily; and we have faith to believe that when the walls can contain us no longer God will provide some means for a larger building.

The choir is taking on new life at this time with Mr. Barr directing, and a noticeable pick-up in the Berean society is also evident on Thursday nights. Devotional meetings are held every Tuesday.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

BRUSH CREEK ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Brush Creek (Ohio) Church of God will be held this year one week earlier than usual. The dates for the meeting this year are May 28 to June 4. This change has been made to permit the writer to assist with the Minnesota State Conference a few days later.

Bro. F. E. Siple, pastor of the Church of God at Grand Rapids, Mich., will assist us at the Brush Creek meeting. Bro. Siple is also one of the former pastors of Brush Creek, and the congregation will be glad to meet with him again and to hear him teach and preach.

Any from a distance who may be able to attend are cordially invited. Everything for your enjoyment of the meetings will be done. Get the dates fixed in your mind, May 28 to June 4, and then plan to attend. Idle time is wasted time; but if you will worship with us, your time will not be wasted. Our most precious hours are hours with God and the inspired Book.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

HOW ABOUT PROGRAMS?

Have you had a fine program during the year? What books did you use in preparing it? Where did you find the exercises? Who will cite some books and pages to help some one else? You will, won't you? Thanks.

Wouldn't you like such an exchange of ideas in the Exhibit Room of the General Conference this summer?

Exhibit Committee.

A SUGGESTION TO OTHERS

The ladies of the Dorcas circle of the Rockford, Ill., congregation have anticipated the need of sheets and aprons at the dormitory during the coming Illinois Bible School and General Conference. We are thankful for their thoughtfulness. Among other things which can be used to advantage at that time are potatoes, and canned goods such as meats, vegetables, and fruits. Paul C. Johnson.

OREGON

We extend our sincere sympathy to Srs. Lena Hataway, Lulu Treamine, and Lela Taylor, who recently lost their grandmother and an aunt through death. The double funeral was held in Corvallis.

Bro. P. G. Hathaway and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a daughter. She has been named Beverly.

Sr. Lela Taylor and Bro. Maurice Kerr have resumed their studies at Oregon State after the spring vacation.

Bro. E. C. Hathaway has been a patient at a Vancouver, Wash., hospital, as a result of a serious attack of influenza. We regret to report that Bro. Morton McIrvin is not enjoying the best of health. Bro. and Mrs. McIrvin are living in Portland so that he may have the care of a specialist.

Bro. and Sr. J. C. Wilson of Lebanon arrived Monday to visit Bro. Wilson's sister, Sr. W. I. Barber and family.

Sr. Wilson left Monday evening on a visit to her family in Lynwood, Calif. While several members of the family lived in the center of the earthquake area, none were injured. Sr. Wilson goes to care for her aged mother, Sr. Alice Chapman, and a sister-in-law who suffered a paralytic stroke during the first 'quake.

Dora Jean, small daughter of Bro. and Sr. Delbert Hathaway, has fully recovered from a long and severe seige of poison oak.

Bro. D. H. Hathaway and wife, accompanied by Bro. H. B. Hathaway, spent the week end at Felida, Wash., with Elmer Hathaway.

Bro. A. N. Harlan is able to be outside and is enjoying the beautiful spring weather. He was visiting the brethren about town last week.

Gladys Barber.

NORTHWESTERN CONFERENCE

The quarterly meeting of the Northwestern Conference was held March 2 to 5 at Felida, Wash. Bro. A. W. Darby conducted the meetings, devoting most of the time to study of present-day prophecy. The meetings were reported as being very interesting and were held in the Methodist church. The attendance was good, many of the residents of Felida attending. Another of the basket dinners for which the Felida sisters are famous, was given in the basement on Sunday.

Visitors from a distance were Sr. Knapp, Camas; Sr. Luella Caples, Bro. and Sr. Dan Pentzman and family, Vancouver, Wash.; Bro. A. W. Darby, Gresham; Bro. and Sr. Morton McIrvin, Portland; Srs. Minnie Kerr, Flora Hogue, Bro. H. B. Hathaway, and Bro. and Sr. D. H. Hathaway and family, all of Corvallis, Oregon.

The next meeting will be the annual Northwestern Conference to be held in June (exact date later) at Felida, Wash. We extend a most cordial invitation to those planning a western trip to attend these meetings and to visit among the brethren.

Of the Northwestern brethren we ask cooperation and hearty support of plans for a successful meeting. Any information will gladly be given by the secretary upon request.

Gladys Barber, Conference Secretary, 1553 Adams St., Corvallis, Oregon.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Bro. Geo. P. Lichty went to Los Angeles Sunday, April 9, to speak there; his theme was "The Resurrection of Lazarus," a very timely one for the Easter season. Bro. Lichty has a very forceful way of delivering his perorations. The occasion for his speaking was the illness of Bro. MacLeod, who was taken with an attack of appendicitis on Tuesday evening while on his way to teach the class at Santa Ana. Though too weak to deliver the usual discourse, Bro. MacLeod was present and opened the meeting.

Following the church services, Bro. Lichty went with the MacLeods to the Railsback home for dinner and then visited various of the brethren in Pasadena. Bro. Howard seemed better than the last time we had seen him; may he continue to improve. Sr. Hillis and Sr. Kimball expressed their interest in the conference meeting of last week even though they were unable to attend, and hoped to be able to attend the next one in Long Beach in July. While visiting Bro. and Sr. S. G. Elton, Bros. MacLeod, Elton, and Lichty, who form the executive board of the California Ministerial Association, appointed the standing committees of the Association for the coming year. An invitation was extended and accepted for Bro. Lichty to speak in Pasadena on Sunday morning, April 23.

Completion of repairs on the church on Forty-Second Street will enable the Los Angeles congregation to return there for its Easter services. Special Sunday school services for that day will be under direction of a committee appointed some time ago.

RECEIPTS FOR EASTER ISSUES

ARKANSAS CITY, KANSAS

It has been some time since we have sent any news of our church activities here. We are still conducting our Sunday school each Sunday morning at ten with good interest and attendance. Sunday, April 2, we had 25 adults in the Bible class, 7 in the junior class, and 9 in the primary class.

Sr. Harriet Reed, our oldest church member here, was in class again last Sunday for the first time in almost three months. She has had a serious sickness which kept her in bed most of the time for four weeks, flu and sinus trouble. She is happy to again be able to meet with those of like precious faith in the study of God's Word.

The widespread depression had stopped the work on our church, but it has again been resumed and our church people here are very anxious to get the church building up and enclosed. We are not expecting to finish it now, but we want to use up all our material on the ground, which consists of all the brick for the building and about all the dimension, by April 8. The excavation for the basement will be finished. Our church will be 30 x 50 feet, with a basement under the whole church to be used for class rooms and dining room at conference.

It has been a hard struggle to get this far, yet we feel that God has blessed our efforts in His name. There is only a small congregation here, and only a few that have a salary, and they have been cut. So we feel at the present time we shall try to finish the work as far as we can go, God willing. This church is not alone for the Arkansas City people, but for all our church people in the states of Kansas and Oklahoma, or wherever you may be if you are passing through Arkansas City. It is the object to have a place for our conference where we can meet together in our own church building.

It has been very unsatisfactory to have our conference meetings at the park, as I am sure our ministers would testify. The noise from the playground and bathing pool is annoying to both speaker and congregation and detracts from the interest in the sermons. Then the union service on Sunday evening calls for a move to some other place. I am sure all who come here would be glad if we had a church building so we would not be moved around from place to place.

And, dear ones, this is just why we here have been making as many sacrifices to have a place for you to come when you visit Arkansas City. A church home it will be for every child of God who can meet with us; and I wonder even now, amid these trying times, if any of you who love the truth could not make a little sacrifice to help get this beacon-light shining, God's light in Arkansas City. I am sure if you can only have a small part in it you will feel as if you had done something worth while for the Lord. And you will be blessed, abundantly blessed, for the little sacrifice. One dear old sister gave forty cents, but she gave it freely. It was all that she had. God loves a cheerful giver. When we give to the Lord, we never lose anything. Like the widow's meal, there will always be some and to spare. Also, if we give to God's work, be it ever so small an amount, like bread cast upon the water it will return to us even after many days. It is when we forget God and fail Him that He fails us. If anyone feels as if he wanted to donate something toward our work here, please write A. J. Chaplin, church treasurer, 702 North B St., Arkansas City, Kansas.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed at an out-of-town bank. Thank you!

MRS. CHARLES T. STORY

Emma Jane Harris was born at Limberton, Vermont, Sept. 20, 1854, and departed this life March 23, 1933. At the age of twenty-six she moved with her mother to Eldora, Iowa. She was united in marriage to Chas. T. Story at Gifford, Iowa, Sept. 1, 1880. In the year 1885 the family came to Furnas County and located on a farm south of Holbrook, Neb., where they lived until 1912, then moving to Holbrook where they have since resided. While still a young woman she united with the Church of God and remained a faithful member to the end.

The deceased was a woman of noble traits, a kind and gentle mother and a dutiful wife. She made friends with everyone with whom she came in contact. She will be sadly missed by those near and dear and by a host of friends. She leaves to mourn her death her husband, Chas. T. Story; two sons, Clyde of Bartley, and Guy of Holbrook; two daughters, Mrs. Cora Clay of Eldora, Iowa, and Mrs. Ada Cooper of Arapahoe, Neb.; also fourteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Two daughters preceded her in death, Mrs. Maude Cooper, and Grace, who died in infancy.

Funeral services were conducted from the Church of God on Saturday, March 25, by the writer. The church was filled to capacity with sorrowing relatives and friends. She was then laid to rest in the Holbrook cemetery to await the call of the Master to come with a shout and the voice of the archangel and the trump of God to raise the dead ones and change the living ones into His likeness.

Grover Gordon, Pastor.

MADGE LUCILLE SILBERG

Madge Lucille, daughter of Willis A. and Mary B. Roose, was born on a farm near Nappanee, Ind., Feb. 9, 1897, and fell asleep April 1, 1933. After a twelve-hour illness she submitted to a major operation from which she never recovered. Everything that loving hands could do was of no avail, so we humbly submit to His will.

She lived her entire life in this vicinity, and after finishing the grade school graduated from the Nappanee High School in 1914. During the Bible School at North Salem, Ind., in 1918 she accepted Jesus as her Savior and was baptized by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. On Jan. 15, 1923, she was united in marriage to Donald W. Silberg, who, with her parents; one brother, Lowell; and her twin sisters, Doris Naylor and Dorothy Uline, all of Nappanee, still survives. One sister, Audrey Ione, preceded her in death on Aug. 21, 1903, at the tender age of 1 year, 10 months, and 5 days.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday from the home of her parents in Nappanee, where Elder W. H. Brown of the Church of God at Plymouth, Ind., spoke words of comfort. She was tenderly laid beside her little sister in the Bremen cemetery to await the call of the Master.

She was always of a sunny disposition and made many friends, as was evidenced by the many beautiful flowers and messages of sympathy received by the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis A. Roose.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Bro. and Sr. F. L. Austin, accompanied by Sr. M. A. Woodward, were in Oregon for Easter Sunday. Sr. Woodward did not return to Chicago with them but will remain at Golden Rule Home for a time.

The brethren in Southern California are diligently endeavoring to spread the truths we hold so dear among their friends and neighbors. May God's blessing rest upon them in their effort.

Our next issue will contain an interesting and instructive article by Norman John MacLeod on "Japan: The New Scourge of God."

The editor expects to be absent from his pulpit in Oregon next Sunday for the first time in more than a year and a half. He will spend a day or more doing special research work in the Chicago library. Bro. Paul C. Johnson will fill the Oregon pulpit in the morning, and Bro. Arlen Marsh in the evening.

Bro. and Sr. T. J. Ellis of Waterloo, Iowa, accompanied by their son Eldridge and daughter Margaret, together with a friend, attended Easter services at Oregon, driving home in the evening.

An elder brother of Washington sends us fifty cents, stating, "I received a gift from the Lord of five dollars and I send you the tithe—small, but maybe it will do somebody a little good, as God's blessing goes with it." What a Christ-like spirit! If we all might manifest the same generosity God's work would prosper everywhere.

Many are writing us concerning various state conferences. They wish to know the time when such gatherings are to be held well in advance of the date set, and some from a distance are asking what speakers and teachers will be present. It would be well for the various boards to get this information to us as early as possible so that those contemplating attending these meetings can make their plans more definitely.

"GO FORWARD"

By Lottie E. Young

EVEN though many grown up people ignore the divine hand as seen all through God's Book, often calling the Bible "just a book of history, more or less bloody, with some fairy tales thrown in," there few real children but who delight to hear about the heroes of the Old Testament and what they accomplished. I was taken to "meeting" when such a small child my feet were a long way from the floor, and was expected to sit still while elderly men for hours at a time discussed subjects far too deep for my little brain to comprehend. How different things are now for little folks when kind Sunday school teachers adapt themselves to the pupils, and everything is done to interest them in the lesson. I always loved to read; and as "fidgeting" was not permitted in the church gathering, I early sought refuge in the books of Genesis and Exodus with the doings of the patriarchs, which led me into another world than the one in which I was living. Some of this was pretty solid "meat" for a child, but I gained a knowledge of life as it then existed which has been a help to me in later years when, as a teacher, I have had to answer questions.

Every man and woman in the Bible had as distinct an individuality as those with whom we now come in contact; each had virtues and vices, and the recounting of the latter shows what a true book the Bible is in telling about them, as story book heroes are always nearly perfect. If Joseph had not had the severe trials which came to him, he might have been that type; and no evil is recorded of Daniel; but as the Captain of our Salvation was made perfect through suffering, so these Old Testament men shine brightly because of the hard places through which they triumphantly passed.

The man, though, who has been the idol of the Jewish people and one of the ten greatest names in the world's history is Moses, born of slave parentage, then the adopted son of an Egyptian princess, having to flee for wrongdoing in that country, but returning to carry out God's plans for the Israelites in their misery and to be their leader through all their long years of wandering in the wilderness. A magnificent personality, and perhaps at no place finer than when at the very edge of the Red Sea with millions of fugitive slaves to be looked after and no visible way of doing it. Can you wonder at the murmuring of the Israelites when the wide waters of the sea stretched before them, the mountains hemmed them in, and hundreds of thousands of Pharaoh's horsemen and footmen pursued? It was very natural that they reproached Moses and asked, "Wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to bring us forth out of Egypt? . . . it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness."

How does Moses answer this tirade? Hear him: "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of Jehovah, which he will work for you to day," doubtless lifting up his voice to God in earnest entreaty for wisdom and guidance. In Exodus 14:15 we hear God's voice saying, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward"; while the next verse shows the way, so that six or eight miles of surging water becomes dry land and the Israelites pass over in safety, while a glad song is made to the only One who could have accomplished this miracle. Suppose they had stood trembling on the brink of the sea; what would have happened when Pharaoh's soldiers came up?

There is another "Go Forward" from God when Joshua is commanded to take the Israelites over the Jordan River, the only proviso being, "Be strong and of good courage; be not affrighted, neither be thou dismayed." Their further history shows marvelous deeds of valor were performed when God was their Leader and they obeyed His commands.

Jesus Christ gives a similar order, as among His last recorded words are these: "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." How could those poor, untrained men go forward without money, powerful friends, or anything else which the world thinks necessary for success, and convince others that their Master was the Son of the only God and would be the future King when all other monarchies had crumbled into dust? History tells us what was accomplished so that in thirty years from the death of their Leader, just by word of mouth, the "Jesus doctrine" had been preached in all the then-known world. How was it done? Through faith in the One whose promises never fail and who had promised to guide them. The Israelites in the day of Moses walked by sight, but the disciples of Jesus walked by faith.

Are not only the Church of God, but all other professing Christians, at the Red Sea today? Where is the old-time fervor manifested which made men cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" and brought hundreds to the cross? All denominations report indifference, lowering membership, lessening finances, "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God," in their ranks; doubt and uncertainty before them, enemies both within and without. Shall the church of Jesus Christ stand still in this emergency, or will each faithful member pledge earnest prayer to the One who gives wisdom and do his best to stand behind it? "Man's extremity is God's opportunity," and it may be we are in this position to show what "good soldiers" of Jesus Christ can accomplish. Nothing can stand still and live. Fear is in the hearts of many; but may we live the word faith, sounding the slogan, "If God be for us, who can be against us!"

Where Cross the Ways

Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear Thy voice, O Son of Man!

In haunts of wretchedness and need,
On shadowed thresholds dark with fears,
From paths where hide the lures of greed,
We catch the vision of Thy tears.

O Master, from the mountain side,
Make haste to heal these hearts of pain,
Among these restless throngs abide,
O tread the city's streets again.

Till sons of men shall learn Thy love,
And follow where Thy feet have trod:
Till glorious from the heaven above
Shall come the city of our God.

Invocation

LORD, for tomorrow and its needs
 I do not pray;
 Keep me, my God, from stain of sin,
 Just for today.
 Help me to labor earnestly
 And duly pray;
 Let me be kind in word and deed,
 Father, today.

War of the Races

THAT a menace of unparalleled magnitude to western civilization and to the dominance of the white race everywhere is rapidly approaching becomes ever more apparent. Attention was drawn to this matter in these columns on February 7 of the present year under the editorial caption, "When East Meets West." The situation has by no means improved since that time, but on the reverse has grown decidedly more threatening.

A writer in the Saturday Evening Post quotes Lord Lytton, who, it will be remembered, headed the League of Nations Commission appointed to investigate conditions in Manchuria, as asserting that the threat of Japanese aggression which was first observed in 1931 has now grown to alarming proportions, exceeding in its portentousness the dangers arising from all other international problems.

To further substantiate the conclusion of this experienced English observer, we quote the following from the report of a traveler who has recently returned from the Far East. "The political domination of the white race in the Far East is doomed. The mastery of the white man in Asia is breaking. Its end, a considerable way off yet, but short as time counts in the Orient, is in sight. With it, by progressive stages, the very supremacy of the Western races in the world may be drawn into question unless these races succeed in finding a common basis of solidarity for their mutual interests and Western culture. It is difficult to escape this conviction after traveling, as I have recently, from Morocco to Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Turkey, from Moscow to Manchuria and Harbin, Mukden, Peking to Shanghai, studying conditions, talking with representatives of every race and color, hearing what they have to say, what they think today of the white man, and what their aspirations are."

Now that Japan has withdrawn from the League there remains no power to restrain the ambitious designs of the little eastern giant, except the ineffective moral sentiment of the world and the diplomatic objections of the other nations. That the Powers having extensive commercial and territorial interests in the eastern hemisphere are exceedingly suspicious of Japan's policy is shown in many ways. For instance, the papers report under date of April 16 that Great Britain has increased the effectiveness of the hitherto inadequate Australian navy by adding to its line of vessels four modern cruisers and one flotilla leader. According to the Chicago Tribune, "Australia may receive the five vessels as a virtual gift from England, although technically they will be a loan."

The movement to increase the strength of the Commonwealth on the sea is in line with "Australia's policy under Britain's direction to concentrate more adequately on fortification of northern Australia. Within the last few months Australia's department of defense has been strengthening fortifications at Darwin and elsewhere along the northern coastline," the Tribune asserts.

The reason given for this activity is said to be the fear that has been aroused in the minds of British and Australian statesmen by many suspicious reports that have reached them of mysterious Japanese airplanes and submarines being frequently seen in the vicinity of the more outlying districts of Australia. Last February an Australian customs vessel captured the Japanese "exploration" ship Daikoku Maru, near Thursday Island, which, the authorities contend, partially confirmed the reports of secret surveillance of Australia on the part of Japan.

There can be no question but that the international situation is growing worse instead of better. At the same time we do not anticipate an immediate outbreak of another world war. The Jews, although pressed severely, have not yet reached the point where they have been forced back to the homeland in sufficient numbers to incite the envy of the northern Power. These stirring events we are witnessing today are but "the beginning of sorrows." When the time is ripe, the tempest of the tribulation will sweep forward with resistless fury and none will be able to stay its progress.

Japan: The New Scourge of God

By Norman John MacLeod

THE original home of the human race around the Caspian Sea is one that is full of vital interest. There men travel for miles over difficult mountains in order to feed their flocks on the grass that grows now on one side and then on the other side of the mountains. But such movements are disturbed occasionally. When the variability of the seasons makes the grass fail at times in these pasture lands, the herdsmen turn west where the grass grows better to feed flocks and families; toward lands occupied by more highly civilized races: our more immediate ancestors. These movements have made up the history of man's life on this globe.

When history dawned in Egypt, people were there that had migrated from the region of the Caspian Sea; the same in Mesopotamia and in Palestine; and from the Plateau of Iran the Persians swept into the lands of Babylonia. Then later into Europe came that same invasion of the older regions by people from the grasslands of western Russia; always from the same region around the Caspian Sea, the home of the human race. Then the movements ceased for a time under the great organizing power of Rome, until the dawn of the Middle Ages.

With the Middle Ages began a new series of invasions from Western Asia headed by some of the greatest warriors of all times: the Huns, who drove the Germans into the Roman Empire and caused its disruption. These were followed quickly by a horde of Asiatic invaders: the Saracens of Nearer Asia; then the Turks; and finally, in one last great enveloping wave, the Tartar-Mongols. The French called these invaders, "The Scourge of God." They thought of the disasters to their people as the just wrath of God descending upon them. What a thought! Attila the Hun; Suleiman the Magnificent of Turkey; and Timur the Lame of Mongolia, these came to punish the decadent Roman civilization for its sins. The Scourge of God!

For centuries the Far East lay quiescent after those great invasions. Those nations became hermits, shutting themselves off from the world. Only one of that group of nations, and it only a hybrid Oriental, Russia, kept some of its western animation. It was pressing in all directions from the hot plains of India to the frozen north; from the shores of the Baltic and Black Seas which overlook Europe and the Near East to the far off shores of the Pacific Coast of Asia it stretched out its bulky empire. So down to modern times, and the revolt of Asia.

Let us see in the Word of God if we can find that that tells of the stirring events of the latter days. Without proving our points in detail let us turn to the text in Revelation. The beast here referred to, let us say, is the papacy, the Roman Church which carries on the Roman spirit. The false prophet, it is agreed, is Mohammedanism, whether in its Saracenic or Turkish forms. The dragon, otherwise known as the serpent, is paganism or atheism, centered formerly at Rome, but now in the Far East. From the mouths of these institutions, John, in vision, saw an unclean thing emerge. And together they went forth to bring the nations together to the "great day of God."

"And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." — Revelation 16:13 and 14.

If we return to the Middle Ages, it is seen that the papacy and the Turks dominated the politics of the day. Whenever the Holy Roman emperor wished to fight his enemies, he called to the pope for aid. The enemies of the emperor, chiefly France, allied themselves with the unspeakable Turk. From time to time these alliances shifted until in modern times these three institutions, the medieval papacy, and the medieval Turkish Empire lost their influence in European politics. In 1872 after the close of the Franco-Prussian-Italian dispute the three institutions (papacy, Holy Roman Empire, and Turkish Empire) in the medieval form disappeared completely. Since that time none of them has had much part in bringing on wars. The pope may issue bulls, but in vain; Western Europe pays little attention. The Sultan tried vainly to arouse the Mohammedans during the World War to fight his enemies as a religious group. But now another influence brings the nations to war, and arranges them into opposing alliances for that last great struggle in the land of Palestine.

In the Land of the Rising Sun, nationalism at last is bringing those people to a self-consciousness previously unknown. China, India, Korea, and Japan feel the impulse to come forth into nationality. With many lands the process is long and wearisome, but in Japan it is swift. Beginning with her opening to commerce she underwent changes the like of which has seldom been seen, until in 1894 she proved herself to be the most important nation in Asia. She began a program of expansion, first at the expense of China, then in 1904 of Russia; and in 1914 was able to add to her conquests until her island empire is flung from the Arctic Circle on the north, where she holds islands that come near our own Alaska, to the equator, where she owns the Marshall Islands that have been in dispute since Japan withdrew from the League of Nations. She holds the whole Pacific coast line of Asia in a continual blockade. China is in her hold; and Russia must make each move with care, for her entire coast line is subject to the Japanese.

Consider for a moment the significance of these movements. Lest I be accused of being a "jingo" trying to scare up a war, notice in detail some of the things that make Japan the "New Scourge of God" that is about to overrun the civilizations of Asia and Europe. I feel that the United States has no direct part in the movements except in so far as she is interested in the preservation of the civilization that she has inherited from Europe. Japan's career will be toward the west, not the east; for the United States watches every move. A conflict will come soon, for there are many things that compel us to war with Japan. If the United States and Japan were alone concerned in Asia the question would be fairly simple, but there are Russia, France, England, and Italy. But the great atheistic powers of Japan, China, Russia, and India dominate the whole sphere of international politics and will continue to do so.

At the close of the War of 1914 Japan found herself in possession of numerous islands acquired during the Chinese War of 1894 and the Russian War of 1904; she had obtained Corea and a permanent lease on the Liaotung Peninsula (on which Port Arthur is located); and at Versailles she won the Shantung Peninsula. The map will reveal how that would put China completely at the mercy of Japan, for in the region around these three peninsulas lies the very heart and center of Chinese life. The Washington Conference of 1921 forced Japan to return the Shantung Peninsula to China, but that same conference allowed her other concessions which were far more encouraging to her appetite for conquest. In a secret conference Japan was allowed a free hand for colonization in Manchuria.

Then came Japan's defiance of the rest of the world in her dealings with Manchuria and Jehol. Anyone who studies the history of that affair will see surely that Russia must have been pacified in some way in order to allow the Japanese to go through with a program of the entire subjection of Manchuria without any Russian interference. Politics makes strange bedfellows, and there is no people on the face of the earth that can outdo the wily Oriental in his handling of the tangled meshes of foreign diplomacy.

Japan has made war her great all-absorbing function for hundreds of years: when her country was opened to intercourse with foreign nations, her first interest was modern militarism; her religion is such as to steady the nerves of the warrior so as to make him calm in the face of the greatest dangers and to make it possible for him to die with a smile; her art and "refined follies" are for the same purpose of making the devotee unflinching in the hour of trial; and her education has been that of the battlefield and the athletic military camp, rather than that of the arts of peace.

The London treaty of 1929 expires in 1935: Japan has announced already that she will not renew it, but will demand a higher ratio. Not long ago Japan announced her "Monroe Doctrine of the Far East": Asia for the Asiatics.

That is merely saying that the rest of the world is supposed to get out and leave Asia free for the exploitation of Japan.

A "New Scourge of God" is about to break into the land of Palestine, where it will meet supporters of the people who live in "unwalled villages" (according to the Word of God) in the Valley of Jehoshaphat where will be fought the last great struggle that will end with the coming of our Lord and Savior from heaven. For "then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle." And after that "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established," and "all people shall flow unto it."

These are stirring times in which we live! We should thank our Lord and Savior that we are privileged to live in this period of stress and trouble, and that we may be able to lift our heads above the storms that gather and rejoice, "for our redemption draweth nigh."

THE APOSTLE'S PART IN FORMING THE CHURCH

By J. G. Haupt

---

JESUS had led His disciples aside from the ordinary places of travel or of gathering. He asked what the people round about were saying concerning Him. "Who do they say I am?" Many answers resulted. The common talk was that He was John the Baptist returned to life; there were reasons for thousands to have formed this opinion. Others said Isaiah or some other of the prophets.

The vital question followed, "Who do you say that I am?" Peter was quick to reply, "Thou art the Messiah, the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Jesus expressed the fitness of the reply. "Your name is Petrus, a stone. You have announced the most important petra, the foundation stone. I am the Messiah, the Christ. Upon the petra that you have announced I will build My church. That church will live forever. Hades, the grave, destruction, will not prevail against it." Hades in Greek is the same as sheol in Hebrew. Both terms express the tomb, the grave, the place of disposition of the dead.

The reader should note that the expression of Jesus left the church to the future. "Upon this foundation will I build My church." The church did not exist at the time of the cross. Peter denied Jesus on that occasion. Immediately after the resurrection the disciples on the way to Emmaus did not know of the truth of the gospel. It was on the day of Pentecost that divine knowledge was given to all the believers and many wonderful signs were given to assure them of the great truth. Then the church which was called God's church, or the church of God originated. This church was the church of Christ, the church of all Christians, and has continued until this day. Peter's name as Petrus and his statement as the petra, the foundation, remain to this day.

GOD IS LOVE

By George B. Alldridge

"He who does not love doth not know God, for God is love."—1 John 4:8, Moffatt.

THE readers of THE HERALD may accurately be divided into two classes. Hebrews 5:14, "But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil," describes one class; and 1 Peter 2:2 describes the other class: "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby."

It is a remarkable coincidence that the pages of THE HERALD are so arranged to meet both those requirements. For the matured mind we seek the Editorial Page; especially those do so whose spiritual digestion is unimpaired. And for those in the Sunday school, especially the kindergarten and primary grades, we have the Children's Page.

(Do you know, I think if Jesus were among us again, the first page He would read would be this. The editor, God bless her, has caught the Master's spirit. If you desire to read about the gospel as Jesus taught it in language simple and clear with each line glowing with glorious enthusiasm that will warm your heart towards God, then by all means always read this page. You will catch the spirit of my youngest grandchildren, who each week after the paper arrives request their mother to read Sister Gesin's page for they all know her.)

Until about three years ago I had been active in Sunday school for many years. One of the most beautiful impressions and the most lasting made upon my mind is the repeating of a text from the Scriptures by each member of the kindergarten after his name was called. I have noticed one text, or rather part of a verse, more often quoted than any other; and that is, "God is love."

Some may say this text was selected because of its brevity. No, I think not; for John 11:35 is much shorter, and I never heard one of them quote it. Well, why select, "God is love"? Ah, there is a secret behind this. The children learn the Scriptures at their mother's knees and often in her arms. Read 2 Timothy 3:15 and 2 Timothy 1:5.

Now what text would the mother teach her child? Why, the one nearest to her heart, of course; and that is, "God is love."

I have often wondered at God's condescension in using illustrations so simple and beautiful that they appeal to us even before we know how to walk. In whom does a child place its love and confidence in the main? You answer, "Its mother, of course." You said this because from infancy it has been engraved upon your heart, and you therefore cannot give any other answer.

Now God knows this trait of our hearts, love for our mothers; so in the verse I am about to quote He is touching you right in that spot and saying, "My son, as you give your heart to your mother in love, give it so to Me": "Can a woman forget her suckling child, that she should not have compassion on the sons of her womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee." Can you find anything more exquisitely beautiful than this? "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem."—Isaiah 66:13.

"The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee."—Jeremiah 31:3.

After H. L. Davis of Ohio left the office of governor, he gave several talks on his reminiscences during the time he occupied the position. The thing which stood out the most prominently in his mind, he said, was the interview with the mother of a boy who in a few hours would be electrocuted for murder. She sought him to commute the penalty to life imprisonment. She pled and prostrated herself before him. The tears rolled down the governor's face as he related it.

Owing to the atrociousness of the crime, the Board of Pardons refused to recommend that he commute the death penalty. The governor refused the prayer of the mother. She was almost carried out of the executive office; and the governor said of all men he was the most wretched, and hated the very office he held.

He walked up and down his office, his mind agitated and in a turmoil. Stopping at the window, he glanced out, and right under his window looking up at him was the mother still there. Her very life's blood would

Live for Others

"He saved others."—Mark 15:31.

Live for others! There is need
That you crystallize your creed,
Put in practice what you pray—
What you often sing and say.
Live for others here below
If the fullest joy you'd know.

Live for others! Live to give,
Only giving do you live.
Give a smile to spirits gay,
Give a tear where sorrows prey.
Live for others! Give your best,
If you'd find the truest rest.

Live for others! all the way—
Every moment of the day:
Freed from selfish aims and pride,
Let your love flow far and wide;
Live for others, if you'd earn
Grateful blessing in return.

—Needham Phillips.

have been given for her erring boy. Governor Davis said that look upon the mother's face, a commingling of love, agony, and pleading is so engraved upon his mind that only death itself will efface it. Ah yes, but a mother's love is but a reflection of God's love.

Of only one being throughout the universe can it be said, "He is love." Does it occur to my readers that love as applied to God is the principle of His nature itself? I cannot say of any other being, "He is love." He may be lovely and kind; but love as the principle of his nature is not in him. This can be said of God and Him only: God is love.

Love; who can define it? I cannot; neither can I find any definition that will explain it as used in this connection, "God is love." The best thing I can find is 1 Corinthians 13:1-13, but that falls short. The last verse helps me some: "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

God does not need faith; God is omnipotent. "For he spake, and it was done: he commanded, and it stood fast. . . . By the word of the Lord was the heaven made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth." God does not need hope; God is omniscient. "Lift up your eyes on high; and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number: he calleth them all by name by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth."

"Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the Lord of Jacob. Let them bring them forth, and shew us what shall happen: let them shew the former things, what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come. Shew the things that are to come hereafter; that we may know that ye are gods: yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together."

How about love? Ah, that is different! Love is God Himself. I read: "But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him." Why? Because love, since it is God's very nature, is also from everlasting to everlasting. Love, like God, is eternal and can never vanish away.

Faith can only be exercised toward something upon which confidence is placed; hope only is the foundation of that upon which faith is based.

So the Bible says, "God is love," "God is light." Hence, then, every good and perfect gift comes down from Him. So I know positively two things about God; and these are, God is light and God is love, and both are like Him—eternal.

Now when the Bible says that no man can see or has seen God I believe it, since the light He dwells in must be so powerful as to excel in refulgence any other thing, whether it be sun, moon, or stars. And since God loves all things which He has created with an everlasting love; and since Jesus said, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me: and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. . . . And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day," I believe it.

DIVINE ARITHMETIC

DIVINE arithmetic is fundamentally different from human arithmetic. It is different, not in degree, but in kind—so different that all human ideas and laws fail when we attempt to reckon its possibilities. It is important to remember, as we think of this, that "my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord."

God is not limited, for example, by the multiplication table. The best that man can do with two and two is to conclude that they make four. But when two and two are placed in God's hands the result may be so much better than four that only a miracle could account for it.

The Bible and human experience are filled with demonstrations of divine arithmetic. An American business man who died some years ago gave a striking testimony to the divine principle of tithing. After he had become a Christian, he came to believe that he ought to give a tenth of what he received to the Lord. But at that time he happened to be a hundred thousand dollars in debt, and it seemed to him that it would be dishonest to give God a tenth of his income while he owed such a vast amount to his creditors. Then it flashed into his mind that God was his first or preferred creditor. So he decided to begin paying God back first; and all the other creditors were eventually paid, and in full.

Those who have conscientiously followed the practice of giving the Lord one tenth of their money and one seventh of their time have had plentiful evidence that, somehow, they can do more with the remaining nine tenths of their money and six sevenths of their time than they had ever been able to do when all their money and all their time was used for themselves. The divine arithmetic comes in here. It means that, when we really trust the Lord, a supernatural factor enters into our lives and experiences. Two and two without God can only make four. Two and two with God can make—whatever His infinite love and wisdom and power determine.

There was an unprecedented depression in Israel. For year after year there had been no rain. A poverty-stricken widow with one child had only a handful of meal left and a little oil in a cruse; and one day she left her house to go out and gather a couple of sticks of wood, that she might go back and prepare one last meal for herself and her son, and then they would lie down and die.

She left her house on this errand and, as she was gathering sticks, a man of God called to her, "Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink."

She turned to do as he asked, and he called after her, "Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand."

Then the woman opened her heart to him and told him her pitiful story. The prophet answered with an amazing word: "Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee, and for thy son." By human arithmetic he was taking from her the last hope of her life she had; but he went on with an amazing promise: "For thus saith

“And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.”

THE industrial progress in Palestine is enormous. Factories are springing up everywhere. Before the war very little was done industrially, but now Palestine is rapidly becoming a world's center of business activity. At Haifa Britain is to spend a million pounds on the harbor, making it the principal harbor of Palestine. It will become the great exporting port of mineral deposits from the Dead Sea and the outlet for oil through pipe lines from the Mosul oil fields. At Haifa there are railway workshops, sugar refineries, a match factory, a cement factory, a Shemen oil factory, and a flour mill. At Jaffa an electric power station is established for electrical supply for Palestine and for irrigation purposes. It is a huge scheme; the water power of the Jordan is being utilized. At Nablus and Jaffa are soap factories (olive oil soap). At Tel-Aviv—a wonderful town which has sprung up that was previously only a suburb of Jaffa—are brick works turning out fifteen million bricks a year. At Bethlehem are sweet factories, furniture and textile factories, and knitting works. At Nazareth are engineering shops, printing works, ice and mineral water works. Near Jerusalem is the red marble industry. In the whole of Palestine there are 265 flour mills alone. Many other industries could be mentioned. Exports to the U. S. A. alone are fifty times greater than they were in 1921.

The mineral resources of the Dead Sea are enormous, containing common salt, chloride of magnesium, and salts of potash and bromide. It is known that 100,000 tons of potash alone could be obtained from the Dead Sea per annum, besides other by-products. Besides this, there are in this region bitumen, sulphur, copper, coal, and oil. The mineral wealth of other parts of Palestine has not yet been carefully investigated.

The harnessing of the Jordan is only a part of the great Ruthenberg scheme which the Palestinian Government has well in hand; but the plan of a Norwegian engineer, if carried out, will be wonderful. He has planned a tunnel forty miles long to carry the waters of the Mediterranean to the Dead Sea, which is nearly 1400 feet below sea level. If it is constructed, it will enable vast electrical power to be generated to work a pumping plant, which will make irrigation possible over several hundred acres of sterile land. The cost is estimated at twelve million pounds. The tunnel would pass under Jerusalem. How wonderfully is this scheme partially going to fulfill the prophecy in Ezekiel 47. God here gave the prophet a vision of Israel's future. We will examine some of the details of this prophecy.

In verse 1 we read that waters are under Jerusalem, and in verse 8 these waters go east toward the Dead Sea and heal its waters, which are at present so impregnated that no fish can live in them. Verses 9 and 10 state clearly that there are multitudes of fish in the Dead Sea like the fish of the Great Sea (Mediterranean) because of the waters that shall come. This infers that the water which comes into the Dead Sea is from the Mediterranean.

In connection with this prophecy it says that the marshes shall be given to salt (verse 11). These marshes are on the southern portion of this sea. How can this also be fulfilled? It can now be quite easily understood, for this engineer (M. Hiorten) proposes large salt works near the southern shores of the Dead Sea as part of his scheme. As it is prophesied in Ezekiel 17:11, the marshy places shall be given over to salt (i. e., salt works).

We have another prophecy in Zechariah 14:8, 9. In chapter 8:7, 8, it has been stated that the people are already brought back from East and from West. In chapter 14 it tells us that Armageddon takes place (verse 3); but in verses 8 and 9 we read that “in that day” (revelation of the Lord) “living waters shall go out from Jerusalem, half of them toward the eastern sea, and half toward the western sea. In summer and in winter shall it be. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth.” (Millennium commences.)

In reading these two prophecies in reference to the waters issuing from Jerusalem, we see that complete fulfillment could not be possible merely by the great engineering scheme mentioned, as that only happens when the Lord comes; but if this scheme is carried out, it will be very suggestive in the light of Ezekiel 47:9. There is no doubt whatever that the complete fulfillment of prophecy in Ezekiel 47 is when the Lord stands on the Mount of Olives.

The Armageddon battle is at its fiercest stage when the Lord comes and stands on the Mount of Olives. The mountain cleaves in the midst towards the east and towards the west. Half the mountain moves towards the north and half towards the south (Zechariah 14). This is the Lord's way of providing an escape for the Jews. Though the Lord does it, the verse suggests an earthquake. Also Isaiah 29:6 says an earthquake comes when the Gentiles fight against Jerusalem at Armageddon (Mt. Megiddo). The third earthquake took place in 1927; the fourth is yet to come.

It is remarkable that scientists have discovered weak strata right across Olivet, east to west, and great sources of water under Jerusalem. It is easy, then, to see how an earthquake—a miraculous act of God—would cause a valley to appear running east and west, opening great springs of water which are now under Jerusalem, thereby completely fulfilling the prophecies of Ezekiel 47:1 and Zechariah 14.—L. S. Harrison in The Bible Advocate.

The Young Regeneration

By Arlen Marsh

APPROXIMATELY nineteen hundred years have come and gone since Paul set down that immortal statement that "without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." These nineteen centuries have been a period of growth that overcame all obstacles, of stagnation, and of positive retrogression. The last of the three steps has led backward toward a status of political, economic, and moral uncertainty unparalleled in the history of men.

There is no doubt but that these years have witnessed a decided change in the interpretation placed upon the words quoted from the Epistle to the Hebrews. Ignoring the definition laid down by the Apostle himself ("faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen"), ignoring the definitions propounded by modern lexicographers, the generality of Christendom has come to accept with a calm complacency whatever its religious leaders see fit to teach, regardless of the truth (or, indeed, the possibility) of the facts so advanced.

Literally faith includes much more than is commonly credited to it. It implies, as is stated by the margin of the King James Version, a "ground" or "confidence" for hope; and by no means does it imply an unquestioning acceptance of the declaration that God is and that His Bible is both inspired and correct. On the contrary, it demands a careful analysis of every theory advanced by the theologian, with a view to establishing a logical, concrete foundation for the belief and work which are held and done in the name of Jesus Christ and of His Father.

Recognizing these facts, various religious leaders have entered upon what may well be termed a regeneration in their teaching, a re-creation of their ancient methods, a re-birth of the old ways. This change is still in its infancy and has not yet been generally adopted; it has, consequently, earned the title attached to this article: "The Young Regeneration."

Application to the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, the organization of young people for setting forth the tenets of the disbeliever, or to any one of its satellites, for information regarding the reasons for its ideas leads to an instant, enthusiastic response. The average agnostic, however young or old he may be, has at his tongue's end the answers to any queries that can be asked him concerning his theories and beliefs.

Unfortunately, Christianity is not so well equipped. Blindly the majority have bowed to the dictates of their leaders, giving no thought to the necessity for preparing themselves to face the arguments of the ones who disbelieve in God and in the Bible. They have attended church as it pleased them, have raised their children as it pleased them, and have sent those children into the world with neither facts nor reason to support the nebulous "faith" instilled in them by their Sunday school and church teachers.

This neglect of the true meaning of faith has led to the results now evident throughout the nation: the steady rapid growth in doubt and downright atheism among the younger people, and the marked decrease in church membership and attendance. Having no factual basis upon which to build their religious house, the children of those who have taught unproved ideas fall easy prey to the onslaughts of the educated exponent of the Anti-God Society.

In colleges and high schools a definite curriculum teaches with a logical consistency the hypothesis of organic evolution, the suggestion that there exists no form of Deity, and the various other philosophies that accompany such instruction. Apparent inconsistencies in the Word of God are pointed out; the obvious fallacy of a unified triune Godhead is attacked; and the very real and incontestable evidence lying in the earth and rocks is advanced in a frequently successful effort to establish the conviction that there is no God.

Herein lies the necessity for the regeneration that at present is barely begun. To contradict effectually the logic of the atheist, a concrete knowledge of the facts upon which Christianity is based must be held by everyone. Without exaggeration it may be said that every advocate of the precepts of the Christ should in one sense be a confirmed skeptic; he should question each religious thought presented him before accepting it as critically as the editor examines a manuscript submitted to him for publication in his magazine. Otherwise, he has no faith; his religion is but a house of cards, to be broken by the lightest breeze that sweeps from the mouths of the godless.

There exists no pronounced difficulty in proving either the existence of God or the inspiration of the Bible. In point of fact, the knowledge which men now possess may more easily be corollated with a divine Being than with a general rejection of everything suggesting such a One. Science, as a whole, has come to accept this view, preferring usually to ascribe to some great, indefinable force the powers normally granted to Deity.

Einstein, having spent the best years of his life in intense study of the several universes which make up the greater cosmos, evolved two mathematical equations of such detailed intricacy as to make them incomprehensible to any save a well-defined group. In the course of his researches he settled upon the conclusion that somewhere there exists some great power of illimitable strength, possibly possessed of reason. He still, however, remains unwilling to confess the anthropomorphic personality attributed to Jehovah by His worshippers.

This eminent scientist does not stand alone in the conclusions he has reached. Millikan, Poiccard, and others of like ilk believe firmly in a controlling force, Poiccard designating that force as the cosmic rays and others cataloguing it according to various theories. But whatever their hypotheses may be, whether of mathematical origin or of other genesis, science as represented by its greatest leaders has come to favor the idea that an overruling providence of some kind exists.

Burbank, some years before his death, commented to a questioner that he was not developing the plants with which he worked, but he was taking them back to the high standard at which they once stood. He did not believe in God. According to the theory of organic evolution, his statement was erroneous; for all things, in the light of Darwin's hypothesis, develop toward better and better standards. On the contrary, Burbank held that vegetable life—and presumably animal life—had retrograded, had gone backwards down the scale. This, it is seen, is the idea taught by the third chapter of Genesis, in which is recorded the curse pronounced by Jehovah upon the earth and the growths it bore.

It may be said, then, that the existence of some creative power outside of natural phenomena is established from the standpoint of science as well as of religious belief. Applying the somewhat weak argument of the empiricist—that whatsoever lies outside of human experience should not be accepted—to these facts results in the conclusion that this force is not necessarily a personality, but that it is possessed of reasoning powers.

Argument from authority, however, cannot be considered of any great value. The actual evidence presented by the rocks and the stars, the plants and the animals must be taken into account before the being of God may be taken as proved. Here we are presented with the problem of settling upon theory of purest ray serene, for no man has existed for a sufficient length of time to determine precisely how long or what manner certain geological formations required to be created.

In general—not in exactitude—the account given by Genesis of the creation of the world agrees with the idea advanced by Laplace in his Nebular Hypothesis and with the other theories suggested by science. The seven days related by Moses correspond roughly to the various periods of geological history: the Archeozoic, or formative, Age; the Paleozoic Age; the Mesozoic Period; and the present Cenozoic Period. It cannot truthfully be said that the geologist and the theologian parallel each other in their teachings; but nevertheless, the similarity between their beliefs is too marked to be ignored.

The young people who are attending college and high school must be presented with factual evidence or incontrovertible logic if they are to believe in Jehovah. Comparison of the periods of geology, the known facts of astronomy, etymology, entymology, anthropology, conchology, and a host of other branches of science with the precepts laid down by the Bible lays bare a decided likeness among them. The regeneration now beginning, which combines the Word of God with the teachings of the sciences, is the only method by which these young people can be saved for the church. Having arrived at the conclusion that there exists some governing influence, it requires no leaping of a wide gulf in the plain of reason to arrive at the thought that that influence must possess both brain and personality. True, this is a mere assumption; but the orderliness of the universe denies the possibility of there being anything but a thinking force in control of it. These things young people who have been taught to question, to examine, and to doubt can and do appreciate.

The time for an unquestioning belief in the being of an anthropomorphic Deity, eternal and omnipotent, has passed. The time has come for giving a decided impetus to the regeneration in religious methods that demands logical arguments and solid facts to meet the superficially reasonable theories of the atheist. In brief, a reversion to the apostolic definition of faith must be made before any successful attack can be made on the advance of atheism by the religious world.

PUNISHMENT OF THE WICKED

THE divine verdict of God upon the sinner is, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—Ezek. 18:20. It does not say that the soul that sins shall have no resurrection, but "it shall die." This is a penal death due for one's personal sins. In this case it does not mean the natural death that all undergo because of Adam's transgression. True, Adam brought death into the world through disobedience, and all are subject to death in this life, both saint and sinner (Romans 5:12-14; 1 Corinthians 15:21, 22), but penal death for one's own sins is different.

The death that people undergo in this present life is because of Adam's transgression, and is not wholly a penalty for one's own sins. The penalty for an individual's own sins is the second death. Rev. 2:11; 20:13-15. To undergo the second death necessitates a resurrection from the dead. And this resurrection of the wicked from the dead occurs at the end of the millennium. Rev. 20:5. When God said, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," He also meant that those who do not sin—whose sins are atoned for—shall not die; that is, they shall not die the second death. John 11:25, 26; 3:16, 36; Ezekiel 18:21.

From the 18th chapter of Ezekiel we learn definitely that there is a death pronounced upon individuals for unrepented sins which the repentant sinner will not have to die. Since everybody has to die the natural death of the present because of Adam's transgression, then, if a sinner must also die for his own sins, it absolutely necessitates a resurrection of the wicked from the dead, followed with a second death as decreed in Revelation 20:13-15.

IS THE BIBLE UNBELIEVABLE?

WHAT a question to ask of people living in civilized nations! Have changed conditions in our land justified a change in our faith in the Bible?

Have the brains of our great scholars become so brilliantly bright that they shed new light on the Bible?

Has the incomparable history of the church of God been brought through belief in myths and fables?

Must we burn the books of our fathers of the faith, those men who walked by faith and toiled through tedious years to help fix our feet upon a firm foundation?

Are we to surrender our souls to the soothsayings of silly, superficial scholars who sit in judgment upon the Scriptures and sentence them to the scrap heap?

Are we to permit our children to be chained and left in the darkness of the dungeon of unbelief and skepticism?

Are the true men and women of the church to lie supinely upon their backs while Satan's servants bind them hand and foot?

Is there not a call from the crucified, glorified Christ to His chosen ones to unsheathe the sword of the Word, stand like stalwart soldiers, and smite the traitors to the truth?

Is there no appeal to the honest-hearted, faithful followers of our Lord from the hungry-hearted, sin-sick, perishing people who, without God and without hope, are heading toward punishment as fast as feet can carry them?

Who among us will rally to the standard, stand the test, raise their voices in testimony, and by lip and life challenge the charlatans who are toying and trifling with the most sacred things in human life and seeking to destroy the foundations of our faith and the very fabric of our beloved country?—Selected by R. A. Curtis from The King's Business.

Whensoever thou art bidden, O Abidah, to serve the Lord thy God in the Synagogue of thy people, thou shalt not begin at once to make excuse, neither shalt thou say unto him that asketh thee, “Let Maaseiah do it, for, lo, I am bidden to a feast at the time appointed, and I must not disappoint my fellows.” Which is the worse, my son, to disappoint thy fellows or to disappoint thy God?

DIVINE ARITHMETIC

the Lord God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the Lord sendeth rain upon the earth.”

Somehow the woman dared to believe the man Elijah. The prophet's God honored the faith of the prophet, and made his divinely-given promise true: “And she, and he, and her house, did eat many days. And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by Elijah.”

Our human multiplication table is set aside when God decides to work a miracle. And He is working miracles in these dark hours of the depression just as surely as in the days of Israel's drought and famine. Many an unknown Christian is thanking God today for the testing time, because it has given Him an opportunity to show His love and power in ways that were not known in the midst of prosperity.

God's arithmetic is better than ours. We are safer when we trust to His arithmetic and not to our own. For one of the divine laws by which He works was stated by His Son: “With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.”

We think of human strength as a very important asset if we would render valuable service. God, whose thoughts are not our thoughts, and whose ways are not our ways, says something very different. The Apostle Paul, who was rendering valiant service for the Lord, was greatly afflicted by some human weakness, “a thorn in the flesh.” Being a man of prayer and of unlimited faith in the Lord, he pleaded earnestly that this thorn in the flesh might be removed. There came a surprising answer from his Lord. “And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness.” Paul took the Lord at His word, trusted Him, and gave us by inspiration the word that has come ringing down through the centuries: “Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me . . . for when I am weak, then am I strong.”

If only we will surrender our weaknesses wholly to the Lord, and trust Him and His divine arithmetic, we shall know a strength and a joy that are beyond all human reckoning.—Selected by R. H. Judd from The Mail and Empire.

And not until then: When skepticism has found on this planet a place ten miles square where a decent man can live in decency, comfort, and security, a place where age is revered, infancy respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard—when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square on this globe, where the gospel of Christ has not first gone and cleared the way and laid foundations and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither and ventilate their view.—John Russell Lowell.

MARCH REPORT OF INDIANA BEREANS

BURR OAK

THE adult class meets each Sunday evening. The average attendance is 15, the largest class 22, smallest 8. The junior class meets each Sunday with an average of 4. Mary Hatten is the teacher.

The primary class meets each Sunday. The average attendance is 5. Lessons are Bible stories and sand table lessons, and Elizabeth Zechiel is the teacher.

The young people's class meets Friday evening. The average attendance is 12. Different members teach. Mable Overmyer is the sponsor. —Marguerite Zechiel, Secretary.

BREMEN

The adult class meets each Wednesday evening in the different homes. The membership is 32; average attendance is 25. Martha Senff is the teacher.

The junior class has a membership of 10 and an average attendance of 5. Alice Senff is the teacher.

—Mrs. Sarah Lloyd, Secretary.

SOUTH BEND

The young people's class meets in the homes each Sunday at 7:30 p. m. The lessons are those of 1921-23. The different members teach. The membership is 12, average attendance 15.

—Mrs. Lynn Leighty, Secretary.

The senior class meets each Friday evening in the homes. The lessons are from the Book of Exodus, from chapter 12. The membership is 9, average attendance 6.

—Frances Pierce, Secretary.

KOKOMO

The adult class meets each Sunday at 6:30 p. m. at the church and on Wednesday evening at the home of Edith Bengé. The lessons are the 1921-23 series and subjects of special interest. There is a teaching staff of 5. The membership is 20, and the average attendance is 15.

—Mrs. Vada Harvey, Secretary.

The senior class (young people) meets at the church each Sunday at 6:30 p. m. The lessons are the 1925-27 series. There is a teaching staff of 12. D. G. Harvey is the class adviser.

—Ellen Prichard, Secretary.

Will all secretaries of Berean classes in Indiana please report to the state Berean secretary in time for the report of June?

DO WE NEED CHRIST

Let us go back to the start of the human race, and we will find that God pronounced everything "good and very good." Then man had a pure, well-balanced mind which was without evil thoughts.

The time of disobedience was a turning point in man's entire career. His mental power was changed to include evil, and perfect love was replaced by selfishness. Now it is a common event to read of some murder to satisfy this selfishness of man.

Transgression continued until it is impossible for man to keep entirely free from evil in thoughts and actions. Therefore, man has become a slave of passion and a captive.

Christ's own words in speaking to a class of people claiming to be His followers or of His Father's house, were these: "Ye are of your father, the devil."

We were without hope and had no reason for obeying God until we had a ransom. When Christ died on the tree, He was that Ransom. As the Scriptures state, "He gave himself a ransom for all."

After sinning, Adam and Eve hid themselves and had no pleasure in God's presence. That is still true with man. An unrepenting heart finds no joy, peace, or harmony in God's presence.

We find that the love of the kingdom is an unselfish love, each heart responding to the infinite love.

Job speaks of the evilness of the heart. Paul, also, in the Roman letter says it is evil and not changed. All the modern education, culture, will-power, and human effort are of no avail. They cause outward changes, but not inward ones. A new birth is therefore necessary, a birth from above. "Marvel not that I say unto you, Ye must be born again."

Paul recognized the fact that the kingdom is founded on unselfish love. He longed for purity and righteousness, and said: "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"—Romans 7:24.

There is only one way. "John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

A WALK WITH OUR BEST FRIEND

How we all like to go walking, especially with some one we love very dearly! Often we are so busy talking about something or other that we do not see any of the beautiful things about us. Let us go today for a walk with our best Friend.

Let's pretend we are among the twelve disciples, who were with Jesus this day. One of you may be Peter, one may be Matthew; one, James; another, John. Jesus is walking ahead.

It is nearly time for the celebration of the Passover, and that is the reason Jesus is anxious to be in Jerusalem soon. Along the rough mountain road we journey, down toward the beautiful, fertile Jordan Valley. In this valley we find growing delicious figs, olives, grapes and nuts. You know, the climate of Jesus' homeland is much like our Southern California.

We wonder what we are going to find at Jerusalem. Our Master, we know, was born to be King. Will the rulers be friendly to Him so that He can set up His kingdom when He reaches there? Oh, we hope so, for we want to be His helpers!

James and John cannot wait to find out, and so they hurry to catch up to Him and ask Him for the places of highest honor beside His throne. The rest of us stand back, for we are ashamed of James and John, even though perhaps in our hearts we had been wishing for the same thing.

Our beloved, understanding Friend then seats Himself on a little grassy knoll beside the road and talks to us all. He had told us before of the terrible things He must suffer, and now He asks us if we can bear what He must bear. All unthinking, we say we can.

Jesus shakes His head sadly and tells us that if we continue faithful we will suffer many hardships and much pain. He cannot give us the places of honor beside Him, for they are not His to give, but God's.

Jesus tries to tell us, then, that if we desire to have high honor in His kingdom, we must be satisfied to be servants now. Only in that way can we ever become truly great. For even He Himself served others, giving His whole life to make others happier and better.

We understand Him just a little. Then He arises, and we all take up our journey again. Soon we come to the city of Jericho.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Turn in your Bibles to Mark 10:46, and read to the end of the chapter. Then write in your own words the story that you find there. It is a story you will like very much. Those who cannot write may tell Mother the story after she reads it to you and then she may write it in your book.

Move your chairs over, boys and girls, and make room for two more members, Mildred and Oran Hiscox, of Oregon, Illinois. Now the older members may draw a map of the country through which Jesus traveled in this lesson. Draw the Jordan River; then locate Jericho and Jerusalem, and as many other places as you like. The younger ones may cut out of brown paper several little pieces to represent the tops of buildings; paste them along a horizon, and draw a hilly path leading up to them. Write under it, "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem."

Now draw another picture; this one showing a cross upon a rocky hill. Write underneath, "Suffering and death awaited Jesus at Jerusalem."

Since you have just celebrated May Day, some of you carrying May baskets to your dearest friends, here is a May Day poem that tells you what will come to you if you count Jesus as your best Friend. Copy it into your Scrapbook, or clip it out and paste it on your page.

MAY DAY

Open your eyes, dear children,
There's beauty everywhere;
The earth is green and golden
And fragrance fills the air.

Open your hearts, dear children,
Let love and joy and praise
Fill all your lives with gladness;
In songs your voices raise.

Open your hands, dear children,
Drop blessings everywhere.
With words and deeds of kindness
Your mercies freely share.

Open your lives, dear children,
Make Jesus welcome there;
He'll bring you peace and sunshine
And May Day all the year.

JESUS FACES THE CROSS

Mark 10:32-52

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 53:7-12

GOLDEN TEXT

And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem.—Luke 9:51.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Greatness Through Service.

Aim: To show that true greatness is based on willingness and ability to be useful to others.

Basic Truth: "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward: . . . for ye serve the Lord Christ."—Colossians 3:23, 24.

I. Jesus Foretells His Death. (Vv. 32-34.) In the clearest manner Jesus set before His disciples the order of events that would culminate in His death upon the cross and be crowned by His glorious resurrection three days thereafter. The orderly progression of happenings stands out like an etching: betrayal to the priests and scribes; condemned to death by them, and delivered to the Romans for execution; mocked, scourged, spit upon, and at last killed; and then restored to life on the third day. It is not strange that the disciples could not fully grasp such a rapid succession of awful events.

II. A Worldly Conception. (Vv. 35-40.) James and John, not able to grasp fully the spiritual meaning of Jesus' teaching, looked forward to the coming of the kingdom as an opportunity for personal aggrandizement. It was true that the kingdom was to be established on the earth and that it would exhibit all of the elements found in other kingdoms. But beyond this it would differ widely from human governments in that it would be ruled by spiritual authority and by wholly unselfish governors. The very thought of personal preferment as it is understood and sought for in the world is contrary to the divine nature of the kingdom over which Jesus and His associates will rule.

III. A Divine Conception. (Vv. 41-45.) The Lord placed before the disciples in sharp contrast the divine and the human basis of greatness. The human conception is position, power, honors of men. The divine conception is humility, usefulness, and faithfulness to duty. The human idea of greatness is to receive from others. The divine idea is to give to others. Jesus made Himself an example, as He gave "his life a ransom for many."

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Following Jesus: (a) disciples followed; (b) were afraid; (c) safe leadership. The disciples were followers of Jesus. He was their leader. At His command they forsook all and followed Him. True followers must be willing to subordinate everything to the Lord Jesus. He must have first place in our lives. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."—Matt. 16:24. To be worthy of Him we must be willing, and actually do this very thing. Matt. 10:37, 38.

In following Jesus on the occasion of our lesson we are told the disciples "were afraid." They had not reached that point of faith where they could say, "I will not be afraid what man can do unto me." Their later ministry indicates they unflinchingly did their duty regardless of impending dangers. True faith removes fear and says, "If God be for us, who can be against us?"—Rom. 8:31.

The leadership of Jesus is dependable. He will lead us nowhere that our feet are not strong enough to take us or our strength to carry us. We are never asked to go where He has not gone or will go. His leadership is real and true, for He leads the way. His way is the right way: follow Him.

Obedient to duty. (a) Christ was faithful; (b) duty ahead of self; (c) danger did not stop Him; (d) victory greater than humiliation. Christ knew what awaited Him at Jerusalem. He likewise knew His duty. The easier way for the immediate future would have been to call for twelve legions of angels. Matt. 26:53. He placed duty ahead of self, the interests of mankind above suffering. His way was the way of the cross and the valley of humiliation. The besetting dangers could not stop Him. He was looking ahead "for the joy that was set before him."—Heb. 12:1, 2. The course was set for Him; He surveyed its cost, and then patiently ran the race; and when the end had been reached, He said, "It is finished," knowing that shortly He would reap the fruitage of His sowing.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem."—Luke 9:51.

The incident in the golden text seems to have occurred some time before the incident in the lesson text. It may have been several weeks or months, as Christ did so many things between the two events; but for all that He knew then that the time was nearing when He would be changed. Though His disciples did not know why, Christ no doubt had some special reason for going to Jerusalem at this time; and no one could hinder Him.

This incident is just one of the many things that occurred to teach the followers of Christ that He knew all things and that He was able to control things that hindered in His work. This should make us realize that our Christ is able and willing to do for us all that has been promised that He would.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

Greatness in the sight of man is different from greatness in the sight of God. Jesus expressed the idea of the world when He said: "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them." We do attach "greatness" to our rulers, but Jesus gave a different standard for His followers to observe. "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."—Matt. 20:25-27.

To impress this great truth upon His followers Jesus took a towel and a basin of water and washed the feet of each disciple. Jesus, the Son of God, performed the menial task of washing feet. Oh, the humility of earth's future King! What a vivid lesson for the twelve, and for us!

Jesus, the Shepherd of the sheep, led the way. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."—Matt. 20:28. He "pleased not himself" (Rom. 15:3), but gave up a quiet life to cure and teach. Last of all He gave His own life that our "sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."—Acts 3:19.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Another Lesson on How to Be Great.

You remember in our last lesson how Jesus tried to teach the disciples how they might become great in God's kingdom. Tell us about it.

Well, this time we find Jesus and His disciples on their way to Jerusalem. And what do you think Jesus is telling them. He is trying once more to explain to them how He will be taken, killed, and come to life again.

But, as before, it doesn't seem that the disciples understand what He is telling. But James and John remember what they had seen on the mountain. What was it? So they have just a little idea about what Jesus would be like after He arose.

What do you suppose they did? Here it is. They went up to Jesus and said, "Will you do something for us?"

Jesus said, "What is it?"

They answered, "When you get to be King, may one of us sit on one side of you, and one on the other?"

And then Jesus tried to explain to them more clearly just what He would have to go through, His death, etc. He told them of some of the hard things they would have to do, too. But He could not promise them what they wanted Him to do.—V. C. T.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Easter was a very inspiring day to all of us. The sunrise service at 7 o'clock was attended by almost the whole church body and furnished spiritual strength for beginning the day.

At Sunday school 339 checked in, and for the forenoon service every available nook and corner was crowded to capacity. Again in the evening chairs in the aisle and benches in front were filled.

Eleven were baptized and received into fellowship on Easter, and we take pleasure in presenting to the household of faith the following: Mrs. Jerry Keyes, 112 Allen Rd., S. E.; Joyce Lowden, 219 Burt St., S. E.; Mrs. Dorothy, Miss Mary, and Leo Newell, 303 Abbie St., S. E.; Miss Helen Smith, 356 Walter, S. E.; Miss Irene Sleeper, 244 Walter, S. E.; Miss Darlene Scott, 127 Liberty, S. E.; Miss Johanna Rinard, 3861 Florence, S. E.; Miss Helen and Miss Edith Horton, 3750 Wright, S. E.

The first lady named is of advanced years, and Mrs. Newell is in middle life; but the others are all young people; the direct result of the church activity in the community. When Sunday schools and Berean societies function as ours have, beneficial results are bound to accrue to the church. We humbly thank God for the earnest and sacrificing efforts that have been put into the work, and we thank Him for the increase that continues so steadily to flow into the church.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

Easter Sunday at Dixon church was one of inspiration and enjoyment. The usual Sunday school services were held, followed by preaching services. The senior choir gave a special program of Easter music, which was surely enjoyed and appreciated by all, followed by an excellent sermon by Bro. Conner on "The Resurrection, and What It Means to the Church." Despite the heavy rainfall a good audience was present for the evening service, and was more than repaid for coming out in the inclement weather.

A splendid program of music and pantomime given by members of the Sunday school was well rendered and was a beautiful addition to the evening's service. Bro. Conner's sermon, on "The Resurrection, What It Means to the World," was full of splendid thoughts and Bible truths, making it a feast of the good things in God's Word. Many strangers were present, to whom a cordial invitation is always extended.

EDEN VALLEY MINNESOTA

Our Easter Sunday services were well attended and well appreciated. There must have been about 300 people in all who attended these services. In the morning our regular Sunday school service was followed by a program consisting of special singing by the choir, recitations by the Primary and Live Wire Classes, and a sermonette by our pastor. Sunday evening the young people's class and choir gave a musical pageant, "The Risen Christ," which was well presented. The old story was brought freshly to our minds: the despair of the disciples and then the joy of His resurrection. We were glad that Bro. Richard LeCrone could attend the Sunday evening service and visit among us for a few days.

Plans are being made for our Annual Conference, which is to be held here from June 8 to 12. We are to have Bro. Sydney Magaw of Tippecanoe City, Ohio, with us during these meetings and for a two weeks' series of meetings following the conference. During the conference we expect to have a number of other able speakers. We take this opportunity to extend an invitation to all who can to attend. You will be made very welcome.

Mrs. Herman Ruhn, Church Clerk.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ: In the budding of the trees we have a hope supreme, for we know that summer is nigh; likewise are we blessed with that hope through Christ, knowing that all signs point to His coming to claim His own. We are endeavoring to make ready for the bridegroom and that great feast with our Lord Jesus Christ.

These few words find us busy with things eternal. Services are well attended. The young people's Berean society is standing by its motto.

Services Resurrection Day gave us courage with one confession, and twenty or more came forward to rededicate their lives into service for the Master. The Holy Spirit prevailed, and all were happily blessed.

We are very thankful for those that sacrifice so much for the Lord and His work in this city.

Pray for us that we will be faithful in our endeavors to help humanity to find Christ.
A. E. Hoskins, Pastor.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

A most inspiring and successful series of meetings has been concluded with the Easter services at the Church of the Golden Rule. The first night, April 5, brought out about 150 people, almost filling the church. There was good attendance throughout, and very consistent attendance on the part of a number of families. This is the second series of meetings our church has promoted, and we feel this year greatly surpasses last year's effort. Everyone is enthusiastic with the results. We feel that we have been definitely blessed and that the Lord is leading forward to greater things.

The whole congregation cooperated to make the effort a success. A program committee provided the musical end for each evening, and one result of this experiment was the formation of a junior choir, made up of boys and girls from the Sunday school, which performed creditably on two occasions. The advertising committee did some good work in providing plenty of publicity. Then there was a large invitation committee who divided the territory up into sections and called personally on all the people likely to be interested in the meetings. To the work of this committee is unquestionably due much of the credit for the splendid attendance. The membership responded nobly by attending faithfully themselves throughout.

The Easter Day services were well attended both morning and night, with the senior choir on the job for both with good inspiring anthems. Six confessions resulted from the meetings, and there were three baptisms Good Friday evening and one Easter morning. The two others will be arranged as soon as possible. The new members are Mrs. Marcella Richter, 14307 Darley Ave.; Mrs. Emma Kelly, 14221 Darley Ave.; Mrs. Eliza Bullas, 17814 Ingleside Ave.; all of Cleveland, and Mrs. Tressa Shrimplin, 102 Oakwood St., Barberton, Ohio. Sr. Kelly and Sr. Richter have both been active in Berean work for a year or so, and both have children in the Sunday school. Sr. Bullas is the mother of Sr. Ethel Hicks, one of our most active and loyal workers for many years, and many eyes were wet with tears of joy as she came forward to make the good confession. Sr. Shrimplin is new to Cleveland members, having lived for several years in the home of Sr. Juergensen, at Barberton. All of these we gladly welcome to the household of faith, and rejoice that they have taken the stand for the Master. May they ever be true to His name and cause and at last be found worthy at His appearing.

The additions just mentioned do not represent the full fruitage of our meetings, for there are a number of others whose interest has developed to the stage that we feel they will follow before long.

M. W. Lyon, Pastor.

BENGE-SHAW

On April 16, 1933, the writer was called to Kokomo, Ind., to unite in marriage Mr. Alton Shaw and Sr. Bernice Benge of the Kokomo Church of God. Sr. Shaw is well known to many of our people. She has been a faithful worker in the Kokomo church for several years. They will make their home in Kokomo, where Mr. Shaw is employed. We wish them the best of life.

J. H. Anderson.

JULIA A. UPDIKE

Julia A. Updike was born near Browntown, Virginia, March 15, 1861, and died at her home in Browntown Tuesday, April 18, 1933. Her entire life was spent in and near Browntown. In May, 1880, she was married to Mr. George Thomas Updike, who died March 7, 1924.

In 1899 the members of the Church of God built the church located three miles from Browntown. It was at this time that Mrs. Updike was baptized by Bro. Ben Boyer, thus she became one of the charter members of the church. During the thirty-four intervening years Sr. Updike was loyal to the Church of God and devoted to her God, faithfully serving Him in her quiet way. Her home was usually considered headquarters for the visiting ministers and her loving hospitality will long be remembered.

During the eight years the writer has known Sr. Updike there have been very few times when she was not in her accustomed place in church. She usually had to walk about three miles, but it seemed to us that the weather was never too bad nor the roads too muddy to keep her at home. We shall always remember the oft repeated scene of Sr. Updike carefully picking her way over the rocks to the little mountain church so dear to her heart.

She is survived by one brother, three sisters, one son, three daughters, nineteen grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren and many friends. Her brother and sisters are J. R. Updike, Browntown; Mrs. Mary F. Cook, Bentonville; Mrs. Alice Updike and Mrs. Canzada Dunlap, both of Winchester. Her children are Mrs. Jesse Updike, Mrs. Ed. Rudacille, Mrs. Doc Partlow, and Mr. Worley Updike, all of Browntown.

Sr. Updike died in full hope of the resurrection and now lies sleeping in the little vine-covered cemetery overlooking the scenes of her life. Just about a week before she died she said: "I am ready to go." She felt her work was ended and with Paul could say: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." She worked hard and is now taking her rest and we know that some day King Jesus will awaken her and she, revived and refreshed, will come forth ready again to serve her God and her Savior. Harry A. Sheets.

JOHN J. WILLIAMS

John J. Williams was born Aug. 27, 1847, a son of Amos and Caroline Williams. He was united in marriage with Sally Spillman in 1871. She died in 1884. Then in 1886 he married Mrs. Martha Spurgeon; to this union one daughter, Mrs. Charles Huffer, was born. It was with her that he had made his home since the death of Mrs. Williams in 1920. Mr. Williams united with the Church of God in 1874. He departed this life April 4, 1933. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Huffer; six grandchildren; four step-grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; one step-son; a brother; and two half-sisters. Funeral service was held in the Church of God, Hillisburg, Ind., April 6, 1933, after which he was laid away to sleep until Jesus comes. J. H. Anderson.

HESTER DUNN BURGET

Mrs. Hester Dunn Burget, widow of the late William Burget, fell asleep in Christ at her home in Kempton, Ind., April 11, 1933, in her seventy-ninth year.

Several years ago she was baptized into Christ and became a member of the Hillisburg Church of God. Her husband fell asleep in Christ in 1929. The funeral was held in the Christian Church in Kempton April 13, after which she was laid beside her husband to sleep until Jesus comes. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer. J. H. Anderson.

COMMUNICATIONS

Bear, Arkansas

Dear Editor and Friends of our Weekly Messenger:

As "a wise reprovor upon an obedient ear" came the issue of March 14, and we feel unworthy of such honorable mention of us as is made on page 14. See Matt. 8:8-10.

Our Savior marveled at the centurion's faith in Him, saying, "Indeed, I say to you, I have not found so great faith among any in Israel." "O, woman, great is thy faith," said Jesus.—Matt. 15:22-28, Diag.

We had another good meeting at Bear, beginning Friday night before the fourth Sunday in March. Elder L. H. Shelton's son, Winford, with another young brother, Carl Parker, brought Bro. Shelton down here, and our son Jesse, went with them to Hot Springs. We had fine services this time, the second and fourth being conducted in our home. We pray some one will bring Bro. Shelton again the fourth Sunday in April.

Our daughter Esther H. Sprinkle, of Cheyenne, Wyo., is expecting to spend a month with us. Read James 2:5; Heb. 19:16-25.

Yours in hope of Israel's King,
Kittie C. and R. A. Humphreys.

Seminole, Texas.

Dear Brethren and Sisters, Greetings:

I wish to report the baptism of George Baker eleven year old son of Bro. and Sr. C. S. Baker, into the glorious body of Christ Jesus. It is a great inspiration to the writer to see one as young as he is, so devoted to the teachings of the Master and with such a breadth of understanding of first principles of the gospel.

I wish to further report that on March 19, after spending several months in study and undergoing various trials, I have definitely taken steps to dispose of all my worldly possessions that I may devote my full time to the preaching of the gospel. I am now here at Bro. Baker's in a series of meetings, and the Lord has blessed my humble efforts. I beg the prayers of all the brethren that I may be steadfast in my labors, and that the Lord will bless me with the opportunity of leading many souls to Him.

I plan on evangelizing throughout the State of Texas until August when, if it is the Lord's will, I expect to attend General Conference for the first time. That has been my desire since I first heard of it nine years ago. I hope to visit the Home, the Herald office and the editors. Most of all I will delight in meeting many new brethren, together with all my old friends. God alone knows the pleasure I derived from our state conference, and, I hope that we may soon be able to resume the work in this state.

Your brother and servant in the Master's work,

Erby O. McCullough.

ENCOURAGING WORDS

Sr. Anna B. Eychaner, writing from Tampa, Fla., where they have been spending the winter, says, "We are planning to start for our home in Cedar Falls, Iowa, soon." Commenting on her desire to have The Herald changed to the new address, Sr. Eychaner continues: "We do not want to miss any of the papers. We think it is better than it ever was, and we have taken it (and its predecessors) for more than sixty years." She also mentions her approval to the Truth Seekers' Quarterly. "We heartily commend those who prepared the temperance lesson for March 19. It was the best ever. . . . I would like to personally thank Bro. Randall and Sr. Gesin for their timely instructions and information concerning alcoholics. . . . There is no safe way except total abstinence."

MAMIE EDITH BELL

Mamie Edith Bell was born in Attica, Ind., September 10, 1897, and fell asleep in the same city April 14, 1933, at the age of 37 years, 7 months, and 4 days. When a small child Sr. Bell was left an orphan. She was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Jot Davis. Several years ago she and her husband, Bro. Cecil Bell, were baptized into Christ by the writer and became members of the Pleasant View Church of God. Bro. Bell fell asleep in Christ some time ago. Then she was left with six small children to care for. Later she contracted tuberculosis and had to be taken to the hospital. The fight against the enemy was a losing one.

She must sleep until Jesus comes. She leaves her adopted mother, Mrs. Emma Davis, in whose home she fell asleep; six children, Charles Vernon, Verna Elizabeth, Marjory Lucile, Dorothy Louise, Wilma Marie, and Emma Alice. The writer spoke words of comfort to the sorrowing ones April 16; then she was laid away to sleep until called by Jesus. J. H. Anderson.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

In the absence of our editor at this time our "Between You and Me" column seems to suffer. However, we are sure that he will profit by his short vacation and that he will be able to give us much of benefit upon his return.

We wish to call attention to the Conference Calendar on the opposite page. Do your best to arrange your affairs so that it will be your privilege to attend one or more of these gatherings.

Bro. J. A. Squires of Compton, Calif., requests that his address be changed to Bucklin, Kansas, where he expects to spend the summer. He also says that Sr. Mary Calkins of Lynwood, Calif., has been ill.

The article on page 8 of this issue is a summary of the sermon which Bro. Arlen Marsh gave on last Sunday evening at the Oregon church. A good sized audience listened attentively to the discourse.

Bro. Allen Weaver, Casey, Ill., who was seriously injured recently while driving a tractor, is slowly improving.

Sr. J. H. Williams of Rochelle, Ill., was sufficiently recovered from an illness of the preceding week to be in her usual place at the church services at Oregon on Sunday.

Word from Marshall, Ill., tells of the severe siege of scarlet fever through which Bro. Harry Goekler, pastor of the church at that place, is passing. We pray that his recovery has begun by now.

Lack of space necessitates omitting part of the report sent us by Bro. McCullough, which we regret very much. Bro McCullough is putting forth splendid efforts for the Master in his home state. We rejoice with all who witness the sowing of the seed bearing fruit, and pray God's further blessing on their efforts.

The War of the Ages

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."—Ephesians 6:12.

WHEN we hear of war we immediately become interested; and though we abhor it we want to learn more of it, for it may concern us. We have been watching with intense interest the events in different parts of the world which point to an impending war. These things are all very interesting, but we wish to speak of a war of another type.

Nearly six thousand years ago our heavenly Father announced a conflict in the Garden of Eden when He said: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."—Genesis 3:15. Since that time there has been bitter strife between good and evil, between light and darkness, between righteousness and sin. This war has been raging since that day; and because it vitally concerns us, we must learn more of it.

Jesus Christ, the seed of the woman, is the Captain of our salvation and is the Leader of the winning side. "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil."—1 John 3:8. The work of our Lord was to do away with sin; and He has asked us, Christians, to take part in that great work.

To carry on successful warfare we must know the nature of the conflict and the things with which to fight. First the Apostle Paul says we wrestle not against flesh and blood. The world fights in that manner and gains nothing, but goes down to the grave a loser. At the grave the things for which the world has striven count for nothing, and all is vanity. "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh: (for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds;) casting down imaginations." The margin gives "reasoning," and truly our warfare is against reasonings, the reasonings of the worldly wise, the vain imaginations that say there is no God and "where is the promise of his coming?" We have these things to fight against "and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God," and have to bring "into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."—2 Corinthians 10:3-5.

A young man once said, "My thoughts are my worst enemies." And how true these words are and also the words of Jesus: "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies."—Matthew 15:19. If we bring our thoughts to the obedience of Christ, our actions will prove we are working for Him.

Now, because we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against imaginations, reasonings, worldly wisdom, and our own carnal thoughts, we need implements of defence that will best fit us for the battle. In Ephesians 6:13-18 we find our instructions. We must have the whole armor of God, not just part of it. We need the truth and the breastplate of righteousness, that shining breastplate which will blind the enemy by its brightness. In order to go forward we need our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. We need the gospel that says, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."—Romans 5:1.

Above all things we need the water of faith that will quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. Did those evil little thoughts ever rise up within you and say: "Don't pray now; wait till some other time," or, "It's too hard to be a Christian; what's the use?" All these are the fiery darts that our shield of faith will stop. A real shield of faith is a wonderful thing because genuine faith WORKS, and it will do very good work to the putting down of evil thoughts.

One more part of armor is the helmet, the hope of salvation. If we have that hope of being saved, we know we are on the winning side. We need not fight despairingly but we can fight with the spirit of victory already in us; and what a difference it makes to know you will win.

Let us not forget the weapon with which we fight, the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. You know that Jesus always answered the adversary with the words, "It is written." Those words were God's words, and we still have them. They are exceedingly powerful for good if we will only take them and use them as good soldiers.

Let us not forget that Paul added that we should pray always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watch thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints. Prayer gives us the morale that we need from our loving Master Jesus. Let us fight the good fight of faith and account with Paul that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

Out of Past Ages Comes Proof

By Arlen Marsh

OUT of the ages of the past come the voices of forgotten civilizations, civilizations that rose from a meager beginning to a riotous heyday and that thereafter fell before the dry rot of insurrection, immorality, and war. These voices speak with clarion tones of the truth of God's Word, leaving an undeniable evidence of the correctness of Paul's assertion that "all scripture is given by inspiration of God" and of Peter's well known declaration that "the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

Lying in the dust of the centuries was the buried proof of the being of the Hittites, whose empire extended from approximately 1450 to 1200 B. C. Although mentioned several times in the Bible, this race was believed until comparatively recent years to be mythical; and the higher critics seized upon that theory as an evidence that Peter was guilty of setting down misinformation. Discoveries in Asia Minor, however, indicate that the Hittites actually did exist; that their nation was one of military power and of only slightly lesser advancement than the countries of Mesopotamia and the Nile Valley; and that they served as the earliest distributors of iron and as a means of communicating the earliest stages of arts, sciences, and literature from the district of the Tigris and Euphrates to Macedon and Greece.

A somewhat similar controversy arose over the biblical ascribing to Belshazzar the rulership of Babylon at the time of its downfall before the onslaught of Cyrus. No evidence that such a man had ever ruled over Chaldea could be found outside of the Old Testament. However, in 1854 Rawlinson discovered a Babylonian monument bearing the inscription of Nabonidus, the father of Belshazzar, referring to his son. Following that date, various texts written by Cyrus concerning Belshazzar were uncovered which not only confirmed the historical personality of Belshazzar, but which further confirmed the truth of Daniel's descriptions of the capture of Babylon. It is certain that Belshazzar actually was the last ruling regent of Babylon, and that the story related by Daniel is correct.

For a considerable time the tale of the tower of Babel, built according to Ussher's chronology (which can be accepted as being only approximately correct) about 2218 B. C., was considered as a mere fable, to be placed in the same category as the adventures of Ulysses and his henchmen. Excavations on the site of the ancient metropolitan kingdom founded by Nimrod finally dissipated this opinion by denuding the ruins of what doubtless was the very tower described by the eleventh chapter of Genesis. Today archaeological expeditions camp near the tumbled heap of stones that once formed a structure some four hundred fifty feet high and which stands even now to a height of nearly one hundred fifty feet. That the scriptural account of the building of this tower is correct is no longer seriously questioned.

The principal proof of the inspiration of the Bible, however, lies not in the obvious veracity of its historical records, but rather in the fulfillment of various predictions made by it centuries before the events predicted occurred. Jules Verne was capable of foretelling in fiction many of the inventions which today are taken as common; political and economic prophets among men are occasionally correct in their beliefs; and students of meteorology and astronomy have become able to predict general weather conditions two years or more in advance. No one, in spite of this, has yet been able to foretell successfully specific events; nor has any man except those who laid claim to inspiration by God accurately announced a thousand years before its existence the coming of some nation or coalition of nations. Herein lies the main argument—indeed, infallible evidence—in favor of the divine origin of the sixty-six books which make up the Canon.

The second chapter of Daniel provides an excellent example of fulfilled prophecy. Four hundred years before Rome came into prominence as a world power Daniel described to Nebuchadnezzar the rise and fall of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Macedon, and Rome. Neither Macedon nor Rome was, at the time the prophet spoke regarding it, a dangerous country. Yet in every detail, as was true in the case of Daniel's later (Please turn to Page Ten)

A Prayer for Times Like These

Help me in times like these
To braver be,
Trusting each trying day
For strength from Thee!

Help me to keep my faith
When funds are low!
Guide me to wisely plan
The way to go!

Help me to learn to smile
Beneath the load,
And lift some struggling one
Along the road!

Help me to walk by faith,
And not by sight,
Knowing in God's good time
All will come right!

Appealing to the Modern World

IN SENDING forth His apostles Jesus gave them a most comprehensive commission: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Geographically it encompassed the earth, and individually it included every intelligent being of all races and nations of men. "Go! tell the glad tidings everywhere, that all may know and be given an opportunity to accept the gracious invitation."

Paul follows his broad assertion—"Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved"—with the logical query, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?"—Romans 10:13, 14. Paul reasons again: "By grace are ye saved through faith" (Ephesians 2:8), but we are at once driven to ask with him, How can one come to have faith in the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," unless some one clearly reveals that wonderful message to him?

Preaching and teaching, therefore, are found to be essential and divinely appointed methods of making the grace of God through Jesus Christ accessible to all men. It cannot reach them except through the instrumentality of a "preacher."

This being true, the importance of sending forth messengers who are able to present the gospel correctly, appealingly, and positively, is made apparent. It must be taught to "every creature" in such a way that he can clearly understand it or the teaching is vain. To preach to Americans of today in the original Hebrew, Aramaic, or Greek dialects with which the prophets and apostles were accustomed to express their inspired thoughts would be a foolish waste of energy. Paul's statement regarding the matter of speaking in "tongues" is applicable here: "In the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue."—1 Corinthians 14:19. There is no value in preaching unless the subject discussed is made understandable to the hearer.

We are not living in the world of Paul and of Peter. People do not talk the language of the apostles. We are not living in the time when the King James Version of the Bible was translated by uninspired men. English people of the sixteenth or seventeenth centuries would find great difficulty in making themselves understood by us, and we would be equally puzzled to express our thoughts to them in such a way that they could grasp them. The meaning of words changes with the passage of the years, and it becomes necessary to have the language of one period "translated" for the people of succeeding periods.

To reach the attention of the world today the gospel must be presented in the language of today. That is, our appeal must be made along lines in which the people are already interested. Do not expect them to listen attentively to long and difficult expositions of the Scriptures when they know nothing about the Bible. We must first furnish the loaves and the fishes, and then, when we have gained their attention gradually and patiently, lead them into the deeper and more vital truths of God.

It is not always wise to approach them as though you knew they were deeply religious, for they are not. They have little or no concern with religion. Study the events that are occurring around them. Point out the dangers that threaten from a political, moral, and social standpoint. And then, having thus won their interest, show clearly and briefly the wonderful manner in which the Bible has predicted the coming of all these things, and finally direct their close attention to the way the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ will meet every demand of the modern world, social, political, and moral.

The Absent Nobleman

THE parable of the nobleman traveling into a far country was delivered in the hearing of certain persons who taught that "the kingdom of God should immediately appear." It is impressively suggestive and reveals a state of things exceedingly unlike that which is expected by those who look for the gradual dawn of the millennium and its continuance to the close of the promised Sabbath, whilst the Lord of the Sabbath is still absent in a far country.

Now, it is obvious to remark that upon the popular hypothesis—that the coming of the Lord is to be post-millennial—the repeated note of warning against slumber, which He gives in view of our ignorance of the period of the advent, would, as far as I can see, be superfluous; for if He is not to come until the close of the millennium, the period would be very accurately known. Those who shall be alive at its close will know that the thousand years are expired, and they will look for their Lord's return; whilst we, who have not yet seen their commencement, certainly know that more than a thousand years have to roll by before "his feet shall stand . . . upon the mount of Olives." In our case, therefore, to watch for His coming is to look in vain.

But it is impossible to reconcile this idea with His solemn and repeated command, "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." An antecedent happy millennium is inconsistent with a multitude of New Testament precepts, enjoining the state of mind which Christians should cultivate in reference to the "glorious appearing of the great God and Saviour Jesus Christ"; for all these precepts suppose those to whom they are given to be amidst circumstances of trial and sorrow, the groaning inhabitants of a world yet under the influence of the prince of darkness; but the opponents of what I cannot but believe to be the mind of God on this point represent the millennium, to which they look forward, as one of universal peace and righteousness when persecution shall be unknown, wars abolished, idolatry destroyed, and the knowledge of the Lord universal; a millennium, in fact, every way equal to that which is anticipated by the advocates of the pre-millennial advent, always excepting the blessed presence of the great and glorious King. The precepts to which I refer are such as inculcate watchfulness, prayer, sobriety, moderation, and patience, in the midst of persecution, in view of the coming of the Lord. To that their hope is called; on that the eye of their faith is steadily fixed; in that their amplest desires will be gratified; it is the consummation, the glorious goal, the full redemption, the entire deliverance from evil, the possession of the inheritance, "the glory to be revealed."

Now, as the parables of our Lord were undoubtedly designed to exhibit the state of matters during the whole period that should elapse between the day of His humiliation as the "man of sorrows," and that of His universal and triumphant recognition as "king over all the earth," the fact that to this very hour, notwithstanding the preaching of the gospel for many centuries in many lands, the state of things is precisely what these parables represent, is proof conclusive of their divine truthfulness. Had there been a period when there were no tares among the wheat, no indolent servant hiding his lord's money, no wicked servant rioting in debauchery and persecuting his fellows, and no slumbering virgins who forgot that they had gone out professedly to meet the bridegroom, the view I have taken of them as descriptive prophecies would be untenable. But ecclesiastical history records no such period, even for a single day. Nor can such a state of things be predicated even of the most select and unworldly sections of the church at any period in their history. Even the most minute sects that have escaped into a corner, like a stray leaf detached from the tree, have had symptoms of the blight incident to a diseased atmosphere. The minimum of numbers has been no guarantee against the intrusion of false brethren. And the effort to avoid what is considered the evil of sectarianism, by seceding from all existing sects, has, of course, only increased the evil deplored.

"The faithful and true witness" has not deceived us; and the Book which contains His parables is demonstrably inspired; but we shall most lamentably deceive ourselves if we imagine that the powerful and million-armed enemies of Christianity are to be overcome without the descent of the great Lord Himself; and if we teach the doctrine either in our pulpits, our books, or on our missionary platforms, we shall rob the Bible of that which constitutes its terror and glory and expose ourselves and our cause to the contempt of an exulting and blaspheming atheism. Evil is

He Is Coming Again

O lift up your heads, ye pilgrims aweary,
The day is approaching, now crimson the sky;
Night shadows are fleeing, and your beloved,
Awaited with longing, at last draweth nigh.

O dark was the night when sin warred against us;
And heavy the burden of sorrow we bore;
But now in the East are signs of His coming;
Our hearts burn within us, joy's cup runneth o'er!

O blessed the hope! O blissful the promise!
Now filling our hearts with a rapture divine;
O glorious day! We hail thy appearing!
Thy transcendent splendor forever shall shine.

Behold, the King comes! Our precious Lord Jesus;
Creation awaits His redemption to see;
Caught up in the clouds, we soon shall behold Him;
And with Him in glory forever shall be!

—Mabel Johnson Camp (adapted).

everywhere rising around us with renewed vigor and extraordinary energy, as the Word of God has long assured us it would do in these latter days.

The last sands are dropping out of the glass upon which is inscribed, "The times of the Gentiles." The image, whose ideal was formed in the mind of the old serpent, has had the number of its "weeks" nearly completed. The world's aristocracy—the sons of a repeated covenant—who were "broken off because of unbelief," have nearly performed their terribly protracted wanderings across the surface of the earth. The dispensation of mingled light and darkness is about to close. The period during which the gospel should be preached in all the world for a witness will suddenly terminate forever. ## Mohammedan Errors Concerning Christ

THESE words appear in the Koran (Mohammedan scriptures) in chapter 3: "O Lord, we believe in that which thou hast sent down, and we have followed thy apostle; write us down therefore with those who bear witness of him (Jesus). And the Jews devised a stratagem against him (Jesus), but God devised a stratagem against them; and God is the best deviser of stratagems."

And in chapter 4: "And for that they (Jews) have not believed on Jesus and have spoken against Mary a grievous calumny, and have said, Verily, we have slain Christ Jesus the son of Mary, and apostle of God: yet they slew him not, neither crucified him, but he was represented by one in his likeness . . . they did not really kill him; but God took him up unto himself."

I could mention many other like passages from the Koran, but this will suffice to point out one of the greatest obstacles that confronts missionaries among Mohammedans and prevents them from confessing Jesus Christ.

The stratagem, they claim, that God devised against the Jews was the taking of Jesus up into heaven, and stamping His likeness on another person, who was taken and crucified in His stead. It is a doctrine of the Mohammedans that it was not Jesus who underwent ignominious death, but some one else in His shape and likeness. Some believe that the one crucified was a spy, sent to entrap Him; others, that it was one Titian, who by the direction of Judas entered in at a window of the house where Jesus lodged to kill Him; and still others, that it was Judas himself, who agreed with the rulers of the Jews to betray Him for thirty pieces of silver, and who led the others who were sent to take Him.

The Mohammedans add further that Jesus, after His crucifixion in effigy, was sent down again to the earth to comfort His mother and His disciples, and to acquaint them with the fact that the Jews were deceived through the stratagem that God devised against them, and that He was then taken up a second time into heaven.

It is also accepted as a fact among the Mohammedans that there is a gospel of one, Barnabas, in which is foretold the coming of Mohammed. From what I have been able to gather, it also contains the record of some peculiar incidents believed to have occurred in the life of Jesus. One is that the moment the Jews were about to apprehend Jesus in the garden, God by the ministry of four angels, snatched Him up into the third heaven. Another statement is that Jesus will return to help Mohammed to judge the world. Again, that He will marry, have offspring, and finally, at the end of the world, die a natural death. Yet again, that it was Judas, the traitor, whom God permitted to appear so like Jesus in the eyes of the Jews that they took him and delivered him to Pilate, and that he was crucified in Jesus' stead. It is believed that so great was this resemblance that even the Virgin Mary and the disciples were deceived; but that Jesus Christ obtained permission from God to go and comfort them. It is further said that when Jesus returned, Barnabas asked Him why God for a moment permitted Mary and the disciples to believe that He had died so ignominious a death, and that Jesus replied: "O Barnabas, believe me that every sin, no matter how small, is punished by God with great torment, because God is offended with sin. My mother therefore and faithful disciples, having loved me with a mixture of earthly love, the just God has been pleased to punish this love with their present grief, that they might not be punished for it hereafter in the flames of hell. And as for me, though I have myself been blameless in the world, yet other men having called me God, and the son of God, therefore God, that I might not be mocked by the devils at the judgment day, has been pleased that in this world I should be mocked by men with the death of Judas, making everybody believe that I died upon the cross. And hence it is that the mocking will continue till the coming of Mohammed, the messenger of God, who, coming into the world will undeceive every one who shall believe in the law of God from this mistake."

This interesting account of Mohammedan teaching concerning the death and resurrection of Christ is by Rev. Michael Kurlak. It first appeared in The Alliance Weekly under the title, "A Great Obstacle in Winning Mohammedans." Mohammedanism is growing rapidly in various parts of the world, and its devotees will play a large and important part in prophetic events.

Let us as the church of Christ beseech God for the Mohammedan world, that Jesus Christ, the Light of the world, may become the Hope of the Mohammedans as well as our Hope.

The Dying Thief

By George B. Alldridge

"Jesus, remember me when you come in your kingdom. In solemn truth, I tell you, said Jesus, that this day you shall be with me in Paradise."—Luke 23:42, 43, C. Trans.

PERMIT me to apologize to my readers for writing upon this subject. So many able writers both pro and con have thoroughly covered every feature of it.

However, we have had a series of protracted meetings. Apparently, judging by the good attendance, they were successful. Always a healthy sign at these meetings is that interested inquiries are made by those seeking to know the truth.

I was asked, "Was the dying thief baptized?"

I answered in the negative and said that there was not when he made his request any saving name into which he could be baptized. In Mark 1:4 I read, "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Back under the law I read that upon the day of atonement, after the high priest came out of the holy of holies to bless the people, their sins were remitted for one year. Again, I read, "When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."—Mark 2:5. Note there is no mention of baptism in this connection, but only faith. In Ephesians 4:5 it reads, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism."

Since the Scriptures teach two baptisms, the baptism of John and the baptism of Christ, which of these two constitutes the "one baptism"? And the Scriptures point out that only one of these can save us, and here it is: "The like figure whereunto, even baptism, doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 3:21.

Philippians 2:9-11 says, "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth: and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Were any baptized into this name before the resurrection of Christ? You say no because they could not be before God had bestowed this name upon Him. Hence, then, John's baptism could not save men; it was the initiatory process of introducing men to Jesus; or, as John said, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

I have often wondered over this text: "When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples)."—John 4:1, 2.

Why did Jesus not baptize? How could He; into whose name could He baptize, into His own? Certainly not. God had not yet bestowed that saving name upon Him. He must first taste death for every man; He must first become the Captain of our salvation. First He Himself, then all who obey Him are covered with His name.

Let us see if the Scriptures support this view. We read in Acts 19:3, 4: "And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus." Now note what follows: "When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus."

So it is not essential whether or not the thief was baptized. Even though John may have baptized him, that would not have saved him. It is the baptism into the name of the Lord Jesus which saves, and none other.

Let us go back to the thief again. Over and over again Jesus forgave people their sins because of their faith and not John's baptism.

Two things we must believe, namely, the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. The thief believed in the kingdom of God, and we are exhorted to seek this first. He knew also that Jesus was a king. So note his request: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

I know a lot is said about faulty punctuation, but let the comma alone just where it is. If you change it, it looks as if you are begging the argument and running away. There is nothing to be afraid of in the text. It is all right just as it is.

What did Jesus say? "Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

Every intelligent Jew knew exactly what paradise meant, and so do you, dear reader, if you are honest with yourself. There has only been one paradise so far, and that was a miniature. For three and a half years Jesus had been explaining this to the people. All knew what He meant by saying the kingdom of God included the dying thief, but all did not have faith to accept it. But the thief had, and that is why Jesus will remember him.

Again, there are millions of subjects in the British Empire. But how many are there who are members of the royal family? There is a difference between being in a country and kingdom and being one of the rulers of that kingdom. Millions, including the thief, Jesus will remember in His kingdom; but only a few will occupy a place upon His throne.

One other question: "Must we be regenerated before being baptized?" Again I answered no. Regeneration, like education, is a process. After baptism into Christ we become a new creature. Old things are passed away. Now God begins to shape and fashion us into His divine image.

Let me quote 2 Corinthians 3:18: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." Nothing can be done before you are baptized. Then God, by the spirit of the truth, takes hold of your mind and begins your life work of preparing yourself to be in the coming age one of the rulers.

You must lay hold of God by faith. This will then lead you to become obedient.

Both thieves were bad; and, as one said, they received justly for their sins. This is confession. Secondly, he became repentant. Thirdly, he saw his need of Christ and threw himself upon His love and mercy. His request, because of His faith, will in the coming age save him.

JEWISH NOTES

IN SPITE of the afflictions that have befallen the Jews all over the world, the Zionists are still full of pride and boastfulness. On August 11, when the Jews with mourning commemorated the day of destruction of the second temple by Titus nineteen hundred years ago, Dr. Norman Salit, one of the Zionist leaders, made the following statement:

"It was nineteen hundred years ago that Rome burned the temple, razed Jerusalem and ended the political existence of the Jewish people. Just nineteen hundred years later, with Rome but a memory and the Caesars covered with the same dust of oblivion that shrouds the Pharaohs of Egypt and the Satraps of Persia, the Jewish people makes more commanding than ever the expression of its will to live.

"The unbelievable growth of industry, the wide extension of agricultural activities, the unparalleled economic stability and absence of depression, all make Palestine, as we are privileged to view it now, a source of pride to the Jew of today and of hope for the Jew of tomorrow."

God warned Israel long ago through Moses not to attribute success to her own power, saying, "And thou say in thine heart, My power, and the might of mine hand, hath gotten me this wealth."—Deuteronomy 8:17. May not such boasting be the harbinger of the destruction foretold in Ezekiel 38?

Spain has declared publicly that its new Republic is sincere in its desire to have her ancient Sephardic Jews return to her borders. In doing so they endeavor to redeem that country from the intolerance which prevailed when her Jews were exiled in the fifteenth century. Consequently a leading Spaniard was commissioned by the new Republic to visit the Balkans with the sole purpose of inviting the descendants of the former Sephardic Jews to return to Spain. He reported that in Roumania there are 20,000; in Bulgaria, 14,000; in Salonica, 65,000; in Yugo-Slavia, 26,000. It is evident that the Spaniards have realized that the decline of Spanish prestige and prosperity since the expulsion of the Jews has come upon them directly on that account. So the new Republic desires to expiate that historic crime of her rulers in the days of Columbus.

Some time ago the Jews of New York began putting forth efforts to regain the Marranos to Judaism. The Marrano is in Spanish, "accursed," "banned." This epithet was applied to the Jews in Spain who through compulsion became converted to Christianity in consequence of the cruel persecution of 1391. They numbered more than 100,000. They engaged extensively in commerce, industries, and agriculture. They had been wealthy before their acceptance of Spanish Christianity, and on that account they refused to be expelled, choosing rather to stay there and not lose their riches. They intermarried with families of the old nobility. Impoverished counts and marquises readily wedded wealthy Jewesses, even nobles of royal blood intermarried with those Jewish Christians. Thus they became very influential through their wealth and intelligence.

A delegation of Jews was sent from New York a number of years ago to ferret out these Marranos' descendants and persuade them to return to Judaism. Quite a large number of them soon confused their Jewish descendants, and became ready to act upon that confession. The first step was to build a synagogue in Oporto, Portugal, where there are numerous Marranos. Recently, however, news has come that they have stopped the building of the synagogue, as they refuse to give up faith in Christ. They like Judaism, they said, but the Lord Jesus is superior in their regard and respect. They have concluded, therefore, to organize a new sect of Jewish Christians.

A Jew by the name of Newman who lives in Jerusalem blew the ram's horn at the Wailing Wall upon the closing of the Day of Atonement. This is customary among the Jews on the Day of Atonement in every synagogue. The Jews at the Wailing Wall had been following this custom until three years ago, when they underwent a terrible attack by the Arabs. To please the Arabs who objected to such customs of the Jews, the British Government ordered that no more shall the ram's horn be heard at the Wailing Wall. So this Mr. Newman, having violated the Government order, was hailed to court and sentenced to three weeks in prison. He pleaded in court that his religious convictions are superior to the law of the court.

Has God Forsaken the World?

WE ARE living in a day of social chaos, political upheaval, and human misery. Ideals have been shattered; hopes have been blasted; to many, faith becomes a mockery; aspirations have been smothered by a heaviness of heart which makes life itself a burden. Darkness seems to brood over the face of the earth.

Many people are questioning the existence of God. Others, baffled by the mystery of existence, are asking, "How can a good God permit the world to become morally and spiritually bankrupt?" If God is love, why so much hatred? If God provides for all of His children, why is there so much hunger and suffering?

Soul-searching moments create faith in some, and break faith in others. Jesus, for example, at one of the most crucial moments of His life, cried aloud, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

These are times that test men's souls! They reveal us to ourselves. How completely selfish we are! For fifteen years the people in various countries of Europe have suffered just such misery—and worse—as has now come upon us.

We read about it; we heard about it; many of us visited Europe and witnessed it at first hand, yet strangely enough we did not lose our faith in a good God. Now that it has come to us, even though in mitigated form, some are beginning to lose faith. The fact that we did not lose faith before misery, hunger, and unemployment visited our own homes and began to lose faith only after such visitation, ought to make us doubt whether we ever had any real faith at all, whether it wasn't a mere lip service, repeating by rote our faith in the brotherhood of man, when in reality we thought of ourselves first, last, and always.

The question, "Has God Forsaken the World?" is not difficult to answer if we keep before us a few simple truths. The first of these is that both good and evil exist in the world. If there were no evil, there would be no good. If there were no good, there would be no evil. Everything that exists in the world exists only because its opposite also exists.

The second of these axioms—even though some would make it a subject of controversy—is that man can choose; that he does choose; and that the character of his choice establishes his morality. If man had no choice, he would not be responsible for his actions. If he were not responsible, he would not be accountable. If he would not be accountable, there would be neither praise nor blame.

If there were no praise or blame, there would be neither good nor evil; if this were true, then, the most and the least that one could say about anything would be that it is. The third thought that ought to underlie a discussion of this kind is that conditions in this world are the results of our own choosing—if not of our individual, then of our social choosing. The individual is responsible for the group and the group is responsible for the individual.

We must also remember that society is organic, that we are our brother's keepers whether we will or not, and that there are natural laws in the spiritual world and that there are spiritual laws in the natural world.

Because human speech is inadequate and the mind of man so limited, because our knowledge is but a drop in the ocean of our ignorance, because finite man cannot comprehend the infinite, we speak of God as Father. Let us press this poetic figure of speech beyond its homiletic license.

Suppose a father would warn his child not to play with fire and the child exercised its free will and burned itself. Would you say that the parent had forsaken the child? Or suppose that a physician diagnosed a case correctly and prescribed properly and the patient paid no heed and the inevitable happened. Would you say that the physician had forsaken the patient, or that the patient had forsaken the physician?

Our present social crisis contains many contributing causes, none as great as the World War. As a matter of fact, this one cause is greater than all of the others combined. For centuries have we taught "that the work of righteousness is peace, and the effect thereof quietness and security." For two thousand years we have known that "they that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

According to the poetic fancy of a Jewish sage the book and the sword came into the world at the same time, bearing an inscription, "By choosing the one you reject the other."

Three months before the World War, David Lloyd George said to the people of England: "Give me $200,000,000 and I will obliterate the slums of England, alleviate the disease, cast out the social maladjustment, dispel the ignorance, and abolish the poverty of England."

The next morning nearly every newspaper in Great Britain and most of them in America contained cartoons of David Lloyd George, with his finger pointing to his forehead. They called him a dreamer, an utopian, an idealist. Some were meaner than that, and said that he talked like a preacher and that he would bankrupt the British Empire.

Then three short months passed by. The World War came and Great Britain spent $200,000,000, not once and for all, not to abolish poverty, not to alleviate disease, not to obliterate social maladjustment, not to dispel ignorance, but to maim, to kill, to mutilate, and to manufacture widows and orphans.

As long as we are willing to spend a thousand times as much to bring hell on earth as we are willing to spend to bring heaven on earth, it is not God who has abandoned us but it is we who have abandoned God. God has not forsaken men but men have forsaken the godlike within them, the passion for peace which comes from men of good will.

The paradox of plenty! We are starving not because there is not enough food, but because there is too much food. Children are going barefooted not because we have been unable to manufacture enough shoes, but because we have manufactured too many shoes. Never was Utopia so near at hand.

Had we solved the problem of distribution as we have mastered the problem of production, Plato's Republic, St. Augustine's City of God, Campanella's City of the Sun, More's Utopia, Bacon's New Atlantis, Bellamy's Looking Backward, and other classic utopias would have been completely surpassed in our day and our generation.

God's power has not waxed short; man's greed has waxed great. God never intended all the steel to belong to one small group, all of the oil to another; and the fact that a majority of our people—fifty-five per cent to be exact—did not make a living wage, even in the era of greatest prosperity in the most prosperous country of the world, is significant.

The fact that labor—seventy-five per cent of our people—did not earn enough to buy back what it produced speaks for itself. Without buying power, there can be no selling power. When men worship gold they abandon God! The day of judgment has come. The greed of man caused him to forsake his God. To imagine for one moment that God has forsaken man is not only childlike but childish.

We face the persistent problem, "Why do the righteous suffer?" That problem is as old as the Book of Job. The righteous suffer because "rain falleth alike on the evil and the good." If the righteous did not suffer, there would be no righteousness, because righteousness would then be the premium on an anti-suffering insurance policy. It would vindicate the contention of Satan in the drama of Job, "It pays to be good."

Righteousness and material prosperity have no connection whatsoever. One belongs to the realm of the spirit and the other to the realm of material things. If people were good only because it "paid to be good," because it would insure prosperity, ethically speaking, they would not be good at all, because if it "paid to be bad" they would be bad, since reward was the basis of their motivation. The people who are righteous in this world solely in order to be rewarded in heaven are not ethical or religious, because they are simply postponing the day of their reward, and most of them expect compound interest on it in the meanwhile.

If righteousness could be "bought and paid for" in terms of prosperity or lack of suffering, it would become a contradiction in terms. The Book of Job presents the greatest and most powerful protest to this type of ethics in the world's literature.

It spells disinterested service that cannot be bought or sold, threatened or bribed, cajoled or coerced; it teaches right for right's sake, whether it lead to the funeral pyre or to the rack, amid cheers or jeers, without hope of reward, without fear of punishment, to do the right just because it is the right—that and that only spells ethical conduct.

The righteous, whom one with a sense of poetic justice might wish to exempt from suffering, brings home to us all the more strongly the sense of social inevitableness.

"There is a destiny that makes us brothers,

No one goes by his way alone;

All that we pour into the lives of others

Comes back to our very own."

From the days of Hosea, almost twenty-seven hundred years ago, have we been taught that God is love. Yet men have by their actions denied and by their works belied their faith in a God of love. Suspicion, hatred, jealousy, prejudice, malice, and ill-will are to be found abundantly. The man who hates his fellow man has lost God. The people that are given over to national animosity have lost love.

When so-called "Christian" nations are cutting each other's throats, either economically or militaristically, they have declared a moratorium on the law of love as well as an abrogation of morality and a desecration of the divine name. We have not outgrown the idea of imitatio Dei—in fact, we have not yet become intelligently and spiritually mature enough to comprehend it.

We have it in our power to pension the aged. Old age security has been championed by social workers and others who love their fellow man, who hearken seriously to the words of the aged in Scripture, "Cast me not aside in my old age." During the last seventy-five years science has been able to prolong human life nineteen years. Men are able to live a longer time and to make a living a shorter time. At present the honest toiler is thrown on the human scrap heap—there to die in ignominy. If we pension the soldier who kills, we dare not abandon the toiler who builds.

In every city there are slums that create crime, disease, degeneracy, and delinquency. By a process of legal condemnation these could easily be removed and playgrounds put into their places. This would not only save the community large sums in dollars and cents but would save that—far more precious than money—human life. Some of these poor souls, victims of circumstances, feel that God abandoned them. The truth is, they have been betrayed by their fellow men.

Has God forsaken man because there is poverty in the world? Poverty, amid plenty, was caused by greed. God did not forsake man, but man forsook God for gold.

Has God forsaken the world because of political upheaval? Let us recall the words of the Scripture: "Choose ye, men of ability, men of truth, God revering and graft-hating men." Unless and until we choose the wisest and best to govern for the good of all—we abandon God. Such was the ancient concept of Jewish theocracy out of which our democracy came. In our choice of representatives, we have forsaken God. Has God forsaken the world because of international economic distress? "Let nations remember they are but men."

The answer to our question, "Has God forsaken the world?" may be found in the words of Deuteronomy, as true now as when first they were written, "Behold, I set before you this day life and death, a blessing and a curse—but choose ye life." As long as we choose to forsake God and all that is godly, we may continue to delude ourselves and say that God has forsaken us.—Dr. Louis L. Mann, Rabbi, Sinai Congregation, in Sunday Times.

The Kingdom at Hand

By Charles W. Howe

THE kingdom of God, or the kingdom of heaven, as it is otherwise called, is frequently mentioned in the Bible. It refers to God's work of righteousness among men. When John started preaching in the wilderness of Judea, his message was, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matthew 3:1, 2. Later, Jesus sent the disciples forth with the same message for the instruction of the lost sheep of the house of Israel (Matthew 10:7). Jesus was the great King. John was the messenger sent before His face. The disciples were also messengers doing His will. The gist of their message was contained in the words, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

Are we not also messengers for Christ in these days? Should not our message be the same as theirs? Do not the words have even greater fulfillment now than when they were first spoken? Should not our message contain, among other things, the imminence of the kingdom of God and the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? The signs all tell us that the time is short and that our Savior will soon return. Prophecies are being rapidly fulfilled. It behooves us, therefore, to acquire all the knowledge possible concerning Jesus and His coming kingdom.

There was a sense in which the kingdom was at hand in John's day, for the great King was about to appear. The message of the disciples was likewise concerning Him and His work. The prophets of old had told of the kingdom work, which was to be fulfilled in Him. He was anointed to preach the gospel to the poor, to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set the bruised at liberty, and to preach the acceptable year of the Lord (Luke 4:18-21). That He did just such work is evident. We read, "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people."—Matthew 4:23. That He will do this more fully in the future is also evident, for "the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity."—Isaiah 33:24.

The kingdom was at hand in Jesus' day in that it was offered to the Jews. The lusts of their flesh prevented them from accepting it, however. Their attitude proved that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." And so while the flesh phase of the kingdom was set aside, the spiritual kingdom had its beginnings in the salvation work through Spirit-filled workers, as God was "taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name." The kingdom was taken away from fleshly Israel and given to a people bringing forth the fruits thereof, or in other words, to the church with its fruits of the Spirit (Galatians 5:22, 23). The ones so called and so taken out are to be kings and priests, and shall reign on the earth (Revelation 5:10). This will have its fulfillment when Jesus comes back to earth again.

The kingdom of God is at hand now in a greater sense than ever before, for Christ is about to appear in His glory. Many signs of the times show this event to be imminent. Israel's return is one of the great signs.

There is no depression in Palestine. I wonder why. With the gold money standard in the earth, a lack of gold brings depression and its presence tends to bring prosperity. If this reasoning is true, then Judah must have gold. He is eating of the riches of the Gentiles (Isaiah 61:5, 6). His hand is in the neck of his enemies (Genesis 49:8). Judah is getting the gold of the world; the world is reaping depression. But conditions must change for Israel ere long. James said, referring to the rich man of Israel, "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." He says that their gold and silver which they have saved up for the last days is rusted (from lack of use no doubt) and so shall be a witness against them. We read in Ezekiel 7:19, "They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be removed: their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord." As the nations are forced off the gold standard, will this not react on the people of Judah and cause their gold to be useless as the Scriptures foretell? Surely, then, this present financial crisis is a sign of the times indicating the near end of the age.

The times of the Gentiles seem about to end. The seven times of punishment for Israel's sins are about up (Leviticus 26). Seven times of year-days from the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar figures up as follows: 586 B. C. plus (360 times 7) equals 2520 minus 586 equals 1934 A. D. That date should conclude Israel's punishment, and consequently indicate the close of Gentile times. Two other indications are found in the gradual removal of the Gentile foot from Jerusalem and the present tendency of many Jewish leaders to say that Jesus really lived and was wrongly condemned. The Scriptures in this regard follow. Luke 21:24: "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Romans 11:25: "Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." The treading down and the blindness are ending. Therefore, the kingdom conditions should soon appear on earth.

Since the glorious kingdom of God is so near at hand, we might well ask the question, "How will Jesus manifest Himself?" Two distinct views are held by believers in the second coming of Christ. I believe that the most general view is that Jesus will come visibly and literally back to earth. "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." We have been looking for Him to catch us away immediately at His coming, and so escape the time of trouble, after which we will return to rule with Him. This thought is indicated in Isaiah 26:20: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, . . . hide thyself as it were for a moment, until the indignation be overpast."

Some people believe that Christ will appear visibly to the church only, and quote as proof Hebrews 9:28: "And unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." A few seem to feel that the world will never see Jesus visibly, and so will not see the kingdom as a visible reign of Christ, but as a new order to come out of the present chaos. John 14:19 is quoted in this regard: "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more, but ye see me." It is well that we know the different views, whether we accept them or not.

It is well not to be too dogmatic as to how Christ will appear. We may be sure that He will manifest Himself to His true followers in due time. Let us get all the knowledge we can concerning His coming, and then follow His admonition, "I say unto you, Watch."

But to watch is not enough; we must work as we watch. We must occupy till He comes. John's message was, "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand." Our message is, "Repent, for Jesus will soon be revealed from heaven. God will soon 'give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall rule over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.'"

THE ABSENT NOBLEMAN

The idea of the regeneration of humanity, through existing agency, can no longer be entertained by any man who compares history with existing phenomena, and both with the Word of God. The testimony of that Word has been verified to the letter, both as it respects the world and the church, up to a certain point; and that point will not be forgotten. Men, bad and good; church, false and true; angels, fallen and faithful, have been traveling unrestingly towards it. War and peace; pestilence and health; famine and plenty; have, with prophetic finger, steadily pointed there. And creation, groaning in pain, has given forth many an earthquake-cry to be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, which will be realized and manifested when that point shall have been reached.

That point is, "The coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory." Then shall the troubled saints, who "long for his appearing," have rest, "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." That point is the realization of the infinitely grand vision presented to the ancient seer: "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." And that point is the fulfillment of Jehovah's ancient purpose and the accomplishment of His design: "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."—Selected by R. A. Curtis.

OUT OF PAST AGES COMES PROOF

vision of the ram and the he-goat, these predictions came to pass.

Similarly the prophecies of Ezekiel, Jonah, Micah, Jeremiah, Moses, Elijah, and David were fulfilled to the most minute point. Jesus Christ was pictured in prophecy as riding into Jerusalem on the foal of an ass; the exact manner of His execution was described; the conditions surrounding His birth were mentioned; His almost fruitless attempts to make the Jewish people accept Him were depicted. And all of this was inscribed on the scrolls of the Hebrew Old Testament centuries before the actual occurrence of any of the events named.

The gradual development of modern civilization to the condition described by the New Testament prophets—Paul, John, Jesus Himself—furnishes one more evidence of the inspiration of God's eternal Word. Men, ignoring the history of their past eras, have spoken of building a new Utopian world, a world in which crime is unknown, a world in which perfection lies. But history does repeat itself, and the profound statesmen and philosophers of today admit that present civilization is on the road to retrogression and ultimate failure that the empires whose voices speak out of past ages took. Exactly does this thought harmonize with the epistles to Timothy and various sermons of the Messiah.

It is, therefore, not hard to establish the fact that the Bible is true. Recorded secular history proves that. Nor is it difficult to carry the evidence further in an effort to determine whether or not the Bible is of divinely inspired origin. Fulfilled prophecy, past and present, proves that it is. Men have never succeeded, try as they will, to predict accurately and in detail happenings to occur among the nations two thousand, five hundred years in the future; yet the prophets of the Old Testament have done that very thing. It follows from this that the Bible is not of human authorship; some higher, more omniscient power lies behind it; and, having established the being of God from a logical standpoint, it is almost necessary to concede that the prophecy did not come in old time by the will of men, but by the inspiration of an all-wise Jehovah.

RIP VAN WINKLE OF THE CHURCH

WE ALL know the story of the man that fell asleep and slept on a mountain side for a score of years, but we fail to see that many are in the same condition as this man.

We go back to the time that Christ was here, and we find that the disciples went with Him to the mountain to pray. Christ went alone to a place apart from His followers. After He had prayed, He returned to His disciples. He awoke them from their slumber and asked them, "Why sleep ye?"

Here is a warning if we will only stop and look. Shortly after Jesus had found His followers asleep and had awakened them, He was taken from them. Then they regretted failing Him.

If we study the present, we will find it is a parallel case. Many years ago the people all over the nation were religious and attended church. Then for some reason mankind fell asleep and did not see the signs spoken of in Luke 22:45, 46. Now this sleep is so profound that it is almost impossible to awaken people to the fact that they are drawing away from God. So they will continue in this sleep until it is too late. When they awake, their cry will be, "Lord, open to us!" His reply will be, "I never knew you."

All of us have seen our friends and acquaintances in this sad condition. Now is the time to do our part to awaken them. The time draws near when "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth."

If we want to be in this great awakening, we must carry on Christ's work. We may say, "I can't talk, I can't sing, I can't teach"; but we all have some talent, and it was meant to be used.

In Mark 13:33 we are told to "take heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, lest coming suddenly he find you asleep."

What makes us modern Rip Van Winkles in the church? We are baptized into Christ and our names are added to some church book. We feel then that we have done all that is needed, so we sit down to watch some one else work. Then we are as the disciples were, asleep. We may think we shall awake in time, but we shall not. We must stay awake from the start.

—Charles Martin, Kokomo, Indiana.

Hope in our hearts doth only stay
Like a traveler at an inn,
Who riseth up at the break of day
His journey to begin.

Faith, when her soul has known the blight
Of noisy doubts and fears,
Goes thenceforth clad in the light
Of the still eternal years.

Truth is truth: no more in the prayers
Of the righteous Pharisee;
No less in the humblest sinner that wears
This poor mortality.

But Love is greatest of all: no loss
Can shadow its face with gloom—
As glorious hanging on the cross
As breaking out of the tomb.

—Alice Cary

IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF OUR KING

WE HAD just left the city of Jericho last week on our journey to Jerusalem with Jesus, our beloved Master. Outside this place something happened which you wrote about in your scrapbooks and which showed us more clearly than ever the love and sympathy the dear Savior has for everyone.

Did you notice the words that were spoken to that pleading blind man? "Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee." They must have fallen on the ears of that suffering man as the most beautiful music he had ever heard.

How we wish the Savior were here today to call everyone who needs Him—all the little sick children, the girls and boys who cannot run and play, the men and women whose hearts are hardened by sin—and hear Him say, "Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole." Perhaps we won't need to wait so very much longer for Him. Let's watch and be ready.

Today let's imagine we are among those who are following Jesus, and remember, we are Jewish boys and girls. As far back as we can recall our parents have been looking for the Messiah to come and free us from the cruel Romans and take the throne of David which has been vacant so many centuries.

As we draw nearer to Jerusalem the road becomes hilly, for, you know, that city was situated on a lofty plateau and from it could be seen a wonderful view of the whole Jordan Valley. Just outside the two villages, Bethany and Bethphage, near the Mount of Olives, a strange thing happened.

Read verses two to six of Mark 11. How did Jesus know a colt would be tied there just at that time, and how did the colt come to be there just when Jesus needed it? This is more interesting than any "fairy" story you ever read, and the best part of it is that it is true!

Now our Master is riding into the capital city, and how happy we are. We run ahead, and some of us take off our capes and cast them down to make a beautiful, colored carpet for Him. Others of us, seeing the stately palm trees by the roadside, break off the largest branches we can find and place them in His pathway.

Then we join all the other boys and girls in singing that wonderful song that we have heard our parents sing, only our voices are young and full of joy, for our King is really here and entering Jerusalem. These are the words of the song:

"Hosanna;

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord:

Hosanna in the highest."

The Bible Scrapbook Club grows each week. We have two more members—Dorothy Siple of Grand Rapids, whose sister, Jeannette, is a member, and Verna Friebe, of Oregon, Illinois. The girls are now in the lead in numbers.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Turn to Mark 11:15-18, and find out what happened the first thing after Jesus entered Jerusalem. The boys especially will like this story. Jesus acted just as a king would have the right to act, didn't He? Why were the people buying and selling birds and animals just at this time?

Now the older ones may draw pictures to illustrate this story, or if you would rather, write the story in your own words. But always copy exactly the words of Jesus.

All of you find pictures of a palm branch and then draw one. Under it write the words of the song they sang that day. Then paste on your page the picture your teacher gives you on May 14.

Those of you who drew a map last week, locate Bethany and Bethphage on it. Read in Truth Seekers' Quarterly the interesting facts Bro. Marsh gives us about these two names in the first paragraph in "A Study of the Text." Now with a red crayon draw the route Jesus traveled along the Jordan River, through Jericho, Bethphage, and Bethany, to Jerusalem.

And this is Mother's Sunday, isn't it? You know, our love for Jesus is something like our love for Mother, only we love Jesus in a greater way. Why, Mother loves Jesus even more than she loves you; so she will want you to love Him more than you do her. Surprise her and make a bookmark for her Bible. Get a pretty piece of colored cardboard, cut out a picture of a little child and a mother, if you can find one. Paste it at the top. Ask one of your aunts or big sister to help. Then print on it these words:

"There's a loving thought in my heart today,

And its gladness thrills me through;

For I'm blessed beyond all others

In having a mother like you."

JESUS ASSERTS HIS KINGSHIP

Mark 11:1-33

Devotional Reading: Revelation 5:9-13

GOLDEN TEXT

Behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation.—
Zechariah 9:9.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Asserts His Kingship.

Aim: To influence the pupil to obey Jesus as his Lord today, and to look joyfully forward to His future reign on the earth.

Basic Truth: He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. . . Yea, all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him."—Psalm 72:8, 11.

I. The King Approaches. (Vv. 1-6.) Jesus was about to enter Jerusalem to be accepted by the common people as their King. The entrance must be carried out exactly as the prophets predicted would be the case so that the Jews would have no excuse for not believing in Him. Jesus performed His part in the preparations for the event with complete success. Every detail was carried out. Yet in doing all this the Lord was not intentionally fulfilling prophecy, nor was God compelling Him to act as He did. He was simply doing those things which God had foreseen He would do at that time. So it is with all prophecy. God does not cause things to come to pass because He has predicted them, but He predicted them because He foresaw what would happen in the future.

II. The King Acclaimed. (Vv. 7-10.) The placing of their garments upon the colt, the cutting of the branches, and the cries of, "Hosanna," all indicated the joyful manner in which the people welcomed Jesus as their King. They firmly believed He was about to reestablish the kingdom of David and to assume the throne. Cf. Luke 19:11.

III. The Coronation Delayed. (Vv. 15-18.) The first act of the Messiah as predicted by Malachi (3:1-3) was to consist in purifying "the sons of Levi," or the priesthood. Jesus started this work in the temple; but upon His rejection by the rulers, it was discontinued and His coronation also postponed until the rulers, as well as the common people, should be ready to say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Matt. 23:39.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Power of Jesus: (a) He knew the future; (b) He manifested His power; (c) He was the King powerful. Jesus' power was a marvel to all. He always exercised this power in a way most helpful. We first notice His power over events. He knew the present and foreknew equally well the future. His command to the two disciples to go and bring the colt was based entirely upon the future, unseen and unknown as far as man was concerned. He gave them all the details. We can well call Him the all-knowing One. As individuals we are not outside the pale of His thoughts. We can well afford to let Him do some of our thinking.

He manifested His power over the brute creation. The colt was one "whereon never man sat." Under the influence and touch of the all-powerful One he was a gentle and obedient beast. He can also subdue the "wildness" of the wildest man. If we submit to this powerful One, His power will be our power.

People acclaimed Him as King. He did not remonstrate with them. Truth was on their lips. On one occasion when asked, "Art thou a king?" He replied: "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world."—John 18:37. The end of His birth and the cause for which He came into the world have not been frustrated. They soon will be realized. Are you ready for the day?

Authority of Jesus. He exercised His authority: (1) cast out defilers; (2) restrained further pollution; (3) taught needed truth. Jesus exercised His authority by entering the temple and casting out the defilers. When He had finished cleansing the temple, He "would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple." It was just as needful to keep the temple clean as it was first to cleanse it. The same was true of individual lives. The people needed to be taught the truth concerning the proper and true purpose of the temple. This Jesus did. While they were "astonished at his doctrine," they sought how they might destroy Him. Contrast with conditions and circumstances surrounding the advocates of truth in this generation.—C. E. R.

The Lordship of Jesus

God in prophecy spoke to His Son, Jesus, saying: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."—Psa. 2:8. Jesus knew what God had promised. He also knew that God's promises could be realized only after one had given proof of his right to them. Jesus did not ask for that possession until after He had proved His right.

Jesus did many things to prove His Lordship. He spoke as man had never spoken before. See John 7:46. He cured all manner of diseases; assumed full authority over demons so that all obeyed Him; raised the dead; stilled the storm; multiplied bread and fish; read men's thoughts; foretold the future with unerring accuracy; mastered the waves and walked upon them; loved poor people and preached the gospel to them; ate with publicans and sinners, yet remained pure; conquered His tongue and controlled His temper when He was spit upon, falsely accused, and derided; suffered unjust ignominy and shame without cursing the guilty; cried, "Father, forgive them"; died as the "Lamb that taketh away the sin of the world"; and triumphed over death.

Jesus proved His Lordship, asked for the promises, and will receive them when He comes again. See Matt. 25:31, 32.—H. A. S.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation."—Zech. 9:9.

This prophecy was spoken about five hundred years before the birth of Christ and was literally fulfilled in today's lesson, as the rest of the verse from which our text is taken says, "Lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." Also read Matt. 21:1-9.

Our King, Jesus, of whom this prophecy was made, is truly just, always having the wisdom to do the right thing at the right time; and He has salvation, for, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12. Let us put our trust in Him that we may obtain this salvation.—L. A. R.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Jesus Rides Into Jerusalem.

In all our other lessons about Jesus, we have found Him working, working, working, making this child well, curing this man of his deafness, and many, many other things. Can you tell me some others?

Today, we see Jesus in a very different picture. He is standing on the Mount of Olives. His disciples are there, too. Jesus says to two of them, "Go over to that little town. Bring me the colt you will find there. If any man asks you why you want that colt, tell him that I want it."

The disciples do just what Jesus has said. I imagine they are wondering and wondering what Jesus wants with the colt.

When they bring the animal, they put their coats on his back. Jesus gets on. No one has ever ridden the colt, but it doesn't seem to care.

A very exciting time follows. Jesus starts towards Jerusalem. Great crowds of people gather to see Him. They spread their coats in the road. They put branches from the trees in the road. And oh! How they sing! They do these things just as if Jesus is a very great king.

Jesus is a great king. He was then, but most of the people did not want Jesus for a king then. Can you tell me when Jesus will be King here?—V. C. T.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

A brief visit to San Diego permitted a call on some of the brethren who are living there for the winter. Bro. and Sr. Conway of Seattle are spending the winter near their daughter and her husband, Bro. and Sr. Kellogg. All are enjoying good health. Bro. Conway is in his ninety-fourth year. He has been a member of the Church of God and a staunch defender of the truths it advocates from early boyhood days. They still take an active interest in The Restitution Herald and the progress of the church in general. May their days be lengthened until the Lord comes.

Sr. Elizabeth Morton has been spending the last two years on the coast. She is recovering from an attack of the flu at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Hutchins. She is planning to return to her old home in La Porte, Ind., in the near future.

We also had the pleasure of visiting with Bros. W. R. Young, H. W. Patterson, Earl Corbaley; and Srs. E. C. Lakin, A. E. Benney, and J. D. Murry. All of these are watchers for the Lord's return.

Sr. A. R. Dresser of Santa Ana received such a severe shock from the earthquake of March 10 that she has not yet recovered from its effects.

Sr. L. E. Rich of Long Beach shows decided improvement in her condition. We are hoping to see her sitting up in the near future.

Sr. Elizabeth Railsback, of 1020 S. Burlington Ave., had the misfortune to fall and fracture her hip the last of March. She is being cared for by Sr. Verna Rahn and is recovering nicely.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

On April 21 it was the privilege of the pastor and wife to visit the old Coates Grove community and see Bro. Eddie Coates, one of the pioneers of the faith, as well as several others who are interested in the cause of truth. Bro. Coates is in failing health, but is patiently and tenderly cared for by his son and daughter-in-law, Bro. and Sr. Geo. Coates. He remembers many of our ministers of decades ago, and loves to talk of our hope.

A Sunday school has recently been started at the old Dutton church. On April 27 a group met to clean the church, clean up the yard, and plant some trees. We had a pot-luck supper, and the writer spoke in the evening. We shall be glad if the truth can once more be taught in this place which used to be the Michigan headquarters.

Our local church continues to work with zeal and faith, praying for our coming Lord.
 F. E. Siple, Pastor.

COMMUNICATION

On Sunday, March 26, our community, "The Scotts Mill Neighborhood," met at the Liberty School and organized a Sunday school. It is the first Sunday school in this community for nearly twenty years. Our neighbor said he would donate the money for the lesson material for this quarter if we would order your literature, which pleased us very much, being already acquainted with the "Truth Seekers' Quarterly."

We welcome The Restitution Herald each week and extend many thanks to Bro. Clarence Lapp for it. It surely brings happiness to our home.

Yours in His service,

Mrs. C. W. Barclift.

SYSTEMATIZING THE BIBLE SCHOOL

The annual Bible school idea, introduced to the consideration of the Church of God by Bro. S. J. Lindsay nearly thirty years ago, has come to be recognized as one of the most valuable features of our state and national conferences. When Bro. Lindsay suggested the idea of conducting such a school in connection with the annual conference, he met with strong opposition from many of the leaders and like every other reformer was obliged to carry on for some time by his own efforts, unsupported and largely unencouraged by the church at large.

It was not long, however, before the importance of the Bible school was made manifest to the state conference officers everywhere and generally adopted to the great profit of all concerned.

From the beginning the work was a success in Illinois owing to the teaching ability and experience of its founder, as well as to the enthusiasm he was able to develop in others by his own deep interest in the work. That it did not always prove so successful or so interesting elsewhere was probably due to the absence of instructors who were properly qualified for such a task. No effort can succeed without the leadership of men and women who are specially fitted by educational preparation and experience to carry it on.

During the more than quarter century the summer Bible school has been operating in the Church of God many changes have been made in educational methods in the public school system. Some of these newer methods have already proved their worth, while others, perhaps, might as well be discarded without further trial. But on the whole the educational methods that have been introduced into our public schools during the past thirty years show a marked improvement over the older methods. This being true, would it not be advantageous for the church to carefully study these more recent advances in the field of education and adapt to the needs of the Bible school such teaching principles as may tend to improve the effectiveness of our work along this line?

A definite educational program might be worked out by a committee of our own ex-

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

The Oregon church was gratified to see again in the Sunday evening congregation a group of business men from Dixon who are not members of the church and who drove sixteen miles to hear the pastor's sermon on "Has God Forsaken the World?" Other companies were present from Mt. Morris, Rochelle, Chana, and Rockford.

Sr. Mary E. Carter, writing from her home in Mt. Vernon, Mo., renews her subscription to The Herald, and says, "I do not want to miss a paper. It is all so good I do not really know what part interests me the most. Usually I look first for the news from the churches. It is so good to hear from those of like precious faith, as I never hear a sermon."

On May 7, at 11:00 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., sermons will be delivered at the residence of Sr. Anna Boyanovsky near Albert City, Iowa. Bro. A. M. Jones of Eagle Grove and Bro. J. Arthur Johnson of Sac City will speak.

Few people appreciate the labor that goes into the preparation of the articles submitted by Bro. J. G. Haupt, our blind contributor from Natchitoches, La. Owing to his inability to see Bro. Haupt dictates his material to a stenographer. Few office stenographers possess the necessary literary experience and biblical knowledge to prepare religious material for publication. Bro. Haupt's wife and daughters, however, go over his manuscript carefully and edit it before it is sent to our office.

perienced educators and recommended to the consideration of both the state and national conferences for adoption should they so see fit.

In line with this the Illinois state board is breaking away from the haphazard methods of the past and is announcing a definite curriculum for its forthcoming Bible school. It will include classes for all ages, adapted to the peculiar needs of each group. In this it will differ in no wise from the past. But in addition to these younger classes, primary, junior, intermediate, and junior young people, there will be selective classes in fulfilled prophecy, prophecy being fulfilled today, and prophecy to be fulfilled after the Lord comes. Another group of classes will be given over to methods and materials for Sunday school teachers. This latter course will be combined in one session each day with the class dealing with fulfilled prophecy, or the history of God's dealing with men in the past. Work will be given in Bible geography and Bible principles and interpretation. This course will include the study of the conditions of salvation as taught by the Church of God.

Altogether the Illinois plan appears attractive. It has a definite goal, a progressive course of study outlined and advertised in advance, covering a wide variety of religious educational subjects of a timely nature, and should appeal to the rapidly growing group of educated people in our church communities.

Prosperity in Palestine

PALESTINE—sacred soil of the Old and New Testaments—Holy Land for the Christian, the Jew, and the Moslem—has a new title to fame—it is the one country in the world which is not suffering from economic depression. It has no unemployment problems, no dole, no income tax, no deficit in its budget.

These things were proudly asserted recently at a Zionist banquet in London, which was attended by many non-Jewish cabinet ministers, government officials, and members of Parliament.

An examination of recent statistics and reports seems to bear this out to the letter. Not only do things seem to be as stated above, but, whereas most of the big nations of the world are struggling with budget deficits, Palestine actually has a surplus of nearly $4,500,000 in its treasury. Its income comes mainly from land taxation, taxes on tobacco and liquor, and from a protective tariff on imports. The officials appointed to rule the interests of Palestine as a British mandated territory are investigating the subject of instituting an income tax, but this is bitterly opposed by Arab and Jewish interests, who claim that the present situation is satisfactory.

It has often been claimed by British opponents of the establishment of a home for Jews in Palestine that it is costing the British taxpayers a lot of money. The Zionist leaders point out that Palestine is self-supporting. The counter-claim is that it costs England a lot to have troops there to stop fighting between the Arabs and the Jews.

The reply is that if those British regiments were not stationed there, they would be in barracks in some other place; that they are in Palestine, not only to maintain order in the country, but to guard the Suez Canal in case of need; and, lastly, that the difference of the cost of keeping the troops there, as against stationing them in England, is borne by the Palestine treasury.

According to all available figures Palestine is about the only country in the world that is enjoying something like business prosperity. This is partially due to the immigration of Jews backed by their own Zionist money, which in the past ten years has brought more than $200,000,000 of fresh money into the little country. Jewish farmers have planted big acreages of orange groves. Their Arab neighbors have vied with them. They have gone in for planting grapefruit and vines, and here again the Arabs have followed. They have introduced modern methods of irrigation, swamp drainage, soil fertilization, and farm implements.

The following interesting account of conditions prevailing in the Holy Land is of particular interest to the student of prophecy in that it indicates the possibilities of that long neglected land. When the King who is to sit on David's throne will come and usher in the "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord" and the Age of Restitution shall dawn upon the world, what wonderful accomplishments and developments may be looked for! This is a selection by George B. Alldridge from an unnamed publication.

The population of the country is now 1,000,000, an increase of thirty per cent in ten years. Seventeen per cent of the people are Jewish. Not only have new farms been established, but the urban population has greatly increased. Jerusalem is a city of nearly a hundred thousand, of whom sixty per cent are Jewish. On the outskirts of the old Holy City there are now new suburban districts with wide streets and modern buildings. In ten years Tel-Aviv, which started as a Jewish suburb of Jaffa, has come to be the only all-Jewish city in the world, with 46,000 people, complete with shops, theatres, film houses, growing industries, and a thorough school system. Even the bus drivers and the traffic cops are Hebrews.

Almost every country in the world shows a decrease in exports and imports. Palestine's exports have doubled in value in the past two years, and the imports show an increase of thirteen per cent. A considerable part of the increase in exports is due to the orange orchards. These oranges find a ready market in England, despite the tariff placed against them.

The new industries in Tel-Aviv, Jaffa, and Haifa have made Palestine self-sustaining as to soap, wines, salt, olive oil, tobacco, cigarettes, matches, chocolate and other candies, and cement. It is also increasingly self-sustaining in its requirements for flour, crackers, leather and shoes, furniture, lime, brick, tile, hosiery, underwear, iron and brass work. Electricity, both for lighting and for power, has been produced cheaply and delivered extensively by harnessing the water power of the Jordan River. In all, the newly established industries number over twenty-five hundred, with a capital of $25,000,000, and employ twenty thousand workmen.—Milton Bronner.

IN THE BEGINNING GOD

By J. G. Haupt

"Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the Lord he is God; there is none else beside him."

THE first great law God issued to man was, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." It was God only—the unit God—throughout the Old Testament. The prophets always speak of the one God. The Messiah is not referred to until after Adam and Eve had sinned. Then it was said that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. The prophets had so much to say about the Messiah that was to come that the Jewish people were in full expectancy of His coming. The Pharisees, the high priests, and scribes earnestly taught that the All-Father must ever be held above the Messiah.

The New Testament begins at the same point as the Old. In the beginning was the Logos. This is a Greek word that should be understood by all Bible students. In the form of logy it is a suffix to not a few good English words. In psychology we have the logos of the psyche, or in the more familiar form of a prefix, psycho. Psychology is the science or philosophy of the mind, the plan upon which the human mind is constructed, and by which it functions. In theology we have the logos of the theos or God, which includes the being and nature of God, but more specifically the plans upon which God works. "In the beginning" were these plans, these established purposes of God (John 1:1). It was sheer folly on the part of the King James translators of 1611 to call logos "the Word." The plans of God were uppermost in the mind of John. They were all but God Himself. Of course, God was greater than all His plans, greater than all His purposes. The plans and purposes of God surely did not constitute the person of God.

In the announcement to Mary concerning the birth of her Son, that she should be the mother of the Messiah, it is plainly stated that God would be the Father and Jesus His only begotten Son—begotten by His Holy Pneuma (Spirit), His Holy Breath. (Breath is the literal meaning of the Greek word pneuma.) In plain English God breathed upon Mary His Holy Breath, and she became the mother of God's divine Child.

The Messiah of the Hebrew is the Christ of the Greek. All believers in the Messiah are thus believers in the Christ. All New Testament writers were devoted Jews. Paul was a Pharisee of Tarsus. He had been bitterly opposed to the disciples of Christ; but when fully convinced of the Messiahship of Jesus, he became a devoted follower. Peter and John, both Jews, had been earnest defenders of the truth. Luke was a Jewish physician and an able writer both of the Gospel that bears his name and of the Acts of the Apostles. These all, being Jews, held the common Jewish view of God, that there is but one God, and none else beside Him.

SCIENCE NOT WORTHY OF CREDENCE

IN VIEW of the publicity given through the press of the utterances of speakers and writers who would bring true religion under a shadow, may I be permitted to bring to the attention of your readers the following facts which have not had the attention they deserve:

That many centuries before its fulfillment became dimly visible, God placed in the hands of men a gradually unfolding program of His plan of saving men from sin which, when compared with subsequent history, was found to coincide at every point. As foreknowledge is an attribute of God alone, the Christian revelation bears the stamp of genuineness.

That cultured ignorance is being exposed in failure to comprehend the limitations of human reason to solve mysteries above and beyond it. Life in one kingdom cannot in the nature of things comprehend life in the kingdom above it. For human reason to attempt to apply itself to the solution of the realities of the kingdom of God is as absurd as that a monkey in the animal kingdom should attempt the solution of mathematical problems or the practice of ethical culture.

That modern science is not so worthy of credence as some would have us believe, inasmuch as "the assured results" of scientific investigation are discarded as archaic, with every decade and its literature tabooed as a back number.

Deny it who will, but modern science is a history of discarded theories, and unproved theories are not science. As to permanence, the modern scientific theory must bow its head to creative fact. Men will go slow to endorse a statement given wide publicity that "the thing that has done most to liberate the world is science." Has science sent forth tens of thousands ready to live and work and die for the emancipation of captives to every form of evil at home and abroad? Has science established institutions for the amelioration of every conceivable woe of man? Has it held out a sympathetic hand to its votaries as they have "crossed the bar"?—B. Wright Harris in The Mail and Empire.

"OCCUPY TILL I COME"

THE hosts of darkness are rushing upon us, but is this any reason for despair? Is it not rather the challenge to buckle on our armor and to move forward speedily and with all our forces to declare a world-wide gospel, knowing that the time is short? Our Lord challenges us with these commanding words: "Occupy till I come." Occupy till when? "Occupy till I come." Seeing the onrushing conflict, shall we not as a mighty host move forward into all fields, gathering in the elect before the hour of midnight strikes and He come to receive His own?—Ralph C. Norton.

A Significant Prophetic Development

“BEHOLD, . . . I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you.”

If these words spoken through the lips of the prophet Habakkuk were ever appropriate for any day and generation, that time is the present. We might reconstruct the verse to read this way, “The nations are fulfilling prophecy at lightning speed, but they do not know it.” Back of all the turmoil through which the world is passing, a plan of symmetric beauty is being worked out. It provides optimism in the midst of all this suffering and world chaos to be able to discern the prophetic trend and thereby be able to interpret current events in the light of “the signs of the times.” Indeed, it must be very dark and discouraging for those who lack this knowledge. To understand prophetic developments is to have chart and compass during these trying days.

Students of Bible prophecy know that Daniel’s interpretation of the great image which Nebuchadnezzar saw in his vision makes it clear that there were to be five great specific empires on the earth between the date that the prophecy was uttered and the time of the return of Jesus Christ. If we will sketch briefly the outline of subsequent history, we shall again be reminded that “prophecy is history written in advance.” The vision described the image as having: head of gold; breast of silver; thighs of brass; legs of iron; ten toes of iron and clay.

BABYLON

THE first kingdom was Babylon. It was symbolized by the head of gold. Daniel was compelled to break the sad news to the king that his nation would be destroyed. Babylon towered to a height never reached by any of its successors. The city was in a perfect square measuring sixty miles around the top of the wall. The wall was three hundred and fifty feet high and eighty-seven feet thick. The Euphrates River flowed under the walls and through the center of the city between banks of marble. This city with its impregnable walls and moat; its one hundred and fifty huge gates of solid brass; its hanging gardens, rising terrace above terrace, which we still look back upon as one of the seven wonders of the ancient world; its two royal palaces, one three and a half and the other eight miles in circumference; its subterranean tunnel under the Euphrates connecting the two palaces; its supply of food sufficient to last for twenty-five years in the event of an attack from the outside—this was the golden head built by Nebuchadnezzar which Daniel prophesied would be overthrown. The people were wholly given over to pleasure, unbridled dissipation, and drunkenness. Virtue had given place to vice. After Belshazzar came to the throne, Daniel’s prophecy was fulfilled on the tragic night of the great feast when the Medes and Persians suddenly turned the Euphrates out of its banks into a lake, dried up the river bed and marched under the city walls.

MEDES AND PERSIANS

THE Medo-Persian Kingdom became second in the politico-prophetic series. It was symbolized by the breast of silver. Under Cyrus its borders were pushed far beyond those of Babylon; but it was inferior in wealth, beauty, luxury, and magnificence. Under Babylon the children of Israel were brought into captivity, but under the Medes and Persians they were restored to their own land. The silver kingdom was supreme over the earth for a few hundred years until the time that Darius Codomannus came into power. He was the last of the line of old Persian kings. Ill-fortune smote him. He was hardly on the throne before Alexander the Great, head of the Greek armies, was trying to destroy him. Although the Persian soldiers outnumbered the Greeks twenty to one, Darius went down. And Daniel’s prophecy was fulfilled, that a “third kingdom of brass shall rule over all the earth.”

GREECE

IN THE ever-changing political kaleidoscope, Grecia became the third in the series of kingdoms. It was symbolized by the thighs of brass. (Please turn to Page Nine)

"To you who are troubled, rest with us; when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The Editor's Prayer

MOST GRACIOUS LORD, we would thank Thee for the comforting assurances of Thy Word; for the opportunity afforded us in the gospel to escape the sorrows that are to beset the sinful world in the last days; for the glorious hope that is set before us in the Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son. Help us, we pray, that we may prove faithful unto Thee throughout this trying period. Protect us from the allurements of the World. Forgive our sins for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Who is Responsible?

THIS old world of ours is certainly in a most turbulent state! From widely separated regions the smoke-clouds of battle obscure the sunbeams of peace. From the Far East and from the Far West comes the crash of bursting shells and the deadly clangor of warfare, while in Geneva, where the League of Nations listens dreamily to the reports of commissions and committees and parties and cliques, echoes the sound of ineffectual debate passing round the council table about which are gathered the representatives of fifty-seven world powers.

And while this futile talk drags sleepily on, millions of human beings go hungry and naked and cold. Not that the League of Nations is to be blamed for this condition—far from it. The League could by no means prevent it. No human agency could do so. No government of the world is responsible for it. Humanity, the entire race of men, is responsible for the distress that everywhere prevails. For "sin lieth at the door." Rebellion against God has brought about this deplorable state of affairs, and it will continue with greater or less intensity until the last enemy of Jehovah is put under the feet of Jesus Christ when He comes. That final overthrow of sin will be accomplished by force, by divine power, exercised by the King of kings and Lord of lords. None will be able to resist His will at that time.

How much better, however, it is for us to submit to the Son of God today, to give our lives and destinies wholly into His keeping now, rather than to wait until we are compelled to bow before Him following the outpouring of divine wrath upon the rebellious and disobedient nations of the world!

First the Tares

MORE than fifty years ago Matthew Arnold declared that the church was fast losing its influence over the minds of the people, and we may trace the beginnings of the present widespread indifference to religion in all its forms and phases to a date even earlier than that. H. G. Wells wrote recently concerning the religious status of the world that "great multitudes of us are living in a state of faded religiosity. The formal religious organizations of the Atlantic world are little more than the spiritualized husks and trappings of long-abandoned efforts to begin a new way of life for mankind."

It cannot be convincingly asserted that this well-known "unbeliever" is altogether wrong in his analysis; for as we scan the religious battlefield, we are forced to acknowledge that on many fronts the nominal church is in full and ignominious retreat, fleeing, reluctantly, it is true, from the steadily advancing army of materialists and skeptics.

At least one encouraging feature appears in the otherwise depressing situation, however, although it is apparent only to the more careful students of the Word. Indifferentism is leading to a separation of the tares from the wheat. The unbelieving church member is leaving the church entirely, openly acknowledging his skepticism, and thus ceasing to dishonor with his presence in the body of Christ the sacred name it bears.

At the same time the faithful followers of the Lord Jesus are being drawn more closely to Him and to each other as the days go by. The honest seeker after truth is turning more earnestly to the inspired pages of the Book. Further, he is approaching his study with a mind more open and ready to receive its teaching than hitherto. The consequence is, the believer in the Bible and in God is coming to realize the importance of prophetic truth. He is coming to see in all that transpires around him the fulfillment of the predictions of God. He is finding his chief joy in watching and praying for the return of His Lord from heaven, and his great aim and desire is that he may be found ready when He comes.

Before the ripened grain can be gathered in the harvest at the end of the age, the tares must be bound in bundles to be burned. That gathering and binding of tares is now taking place in the nominal church. The burning process seems also in process of accomplishment.

WITCHCRAFT AND SORCERY

By George B. Alldridge

“There must be none among you who burns his son or his daughter alive, or who practices divination or soothsaying, no augur, no sorcerer, no one who weaves spells, no medium, or magician, no necromancer. Any one given to these practices is abominable to the Eternal; indeed, it is on account of such practices that the Eternal dispossesses these nations before you.”—Deuteronomy 18:10.

WHEN we read medieval history, and in fact modern history, also, we pause and wonder what possessed men and women to torture and burn innocent women at the stake. The tribunals before which they appeared for trial condemned them because the scripture, “Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live” (Exodus 22:18), gave them the authority to do so.

Since that day we have in some ways improved. Nevertheless, a worse condition exists today than existed then; for now there are far more sorcerers, both male and female, or witches, if you please, than ever before.

A few months ago a Spiritualist medium was tried for practicing necromancy in an English court. The judge, Sir Henry McCardie, in summing up in his charge to the jury, uttered these significant words: “I hope I have not upset the feelings of anyone unnecessarily, but as a judge I care not for all the incarnate or discarnate spirits in the world, and as long as I remain on the bench I shall resolutely seek to reach the truth and shall advise the jury to do the same, though there may be ten thousand million discarnate spirits around us.” It seems to me that Judge McCardie reads his Bible, and is familiar with Isaiah 8:19, 20.

When people tell you to consult mediums and ghosts that cheep and gibber in low murmurs, ask them if a nation should not rather consult its God. Say, “Why consult the dead on behalf of the living? Consult the message and the counsel of God.”

Let me quote from Moffatt: “Then shall the Lawless One be revealed, whom the Lord Jesus will destroy with the breath of his lips and quell by his appearing and arrival—that One whose arrival is due to Satan’s activity, with the full power, the miracles and portents, of falsehood, and with the full deceitfulness of evil for those who are doomed to perish, since they refuse to love the Truth that would save them. Therefore God resists them with an active delusion, till they put faith in falsehood, so that all may be doomed who refuse faith in the Truth but delight in evil.” Such are the words of the Apostle Paul in 2 Thessalonians 2:8-12.

If we could but appreciate God’s wonderful gift to the children of men—the power of reason—we would listen to God’s thought revealed to us in His blessed Word. Science admits that in the study of the human brain, it has so far only explored the fringe, and that a vast territory lies unknown and unexplored before it.

Take the power of imagination: You read Dickens and Sir Walter Scott and other masters of romance and adventure, and how real the story seems to be; yet it is all fiction.

Or take the science of telepathy: We know through radio and television that thoughts and pictures are communicated to us by the medium of sound and light waves. Who knows but that the power of thought acts in like manner between minds? Indeed, let me quote: “What is man, that thou should’st think of him? What is mortal man that thou should’st heed him? Yet thou hast made him little less than divine, thou hast crowned him with majesty and honor, giving him sway o’er all thy hands have made, with all things underneath his feet.”—Psalm 8:4-6, Moffatt.

Listen to Paul: “I will destroy the wisdom of the sages, I will confound the insight of the wise. Sage, scribe, critic of this world, where are they all? Has not God stultified the wisdom of the world? For when the world with all its wisdom failed to know God in His wisdom, God resolved to save believers by the ‘sheer folly’ of the Christian message.”—1 Corinthians 1:19-21, Moffatt.

Who are some of these wise men who believe that when you die you but commence to live? We are invited to read in answer to our question Professors Richet and Sudre and the great criminologist, Caesara Lombroso; also Sir William Crookes, the discoverer of the electron and the first chemist of his day. Then we are recommended to read the work of the great astronomer Camille Flammarion. I did as a young man and learned

This Same Jesus

“This same Jesus!” O how sweetly

Fall those words upon the ear,
Like the smell of far off music,
In a nightwatch still and clear.

He who heals the helpless leper,
He who dried the widow’s tear,
He who changed to health and gladness
Helpless, suffering, trembling fear.

He, Himself, and “not another.”

He for whom our hearts have yearned
Through long years of twilight waiting,
To His ransomed ones returned;

For this word, O Lord, we bless Thee,
Bless our Master’s changeless name;
Yesterday, today, forever,

Jesus Christ is still the same.

—Frances Ridley Havergal.

that the purpose of comets is to act as excursion trains and gather souls to inhabit other worlds and planets. And then there is the present-day illustrious astronomer, Eddington, who teaches the existence of the spirit world.

Sir Oliver Lodge I have read, and am surprised to learn from him that we carry into the spirit world the same gross appetites of our flesh: a love of whiskey and tobacco, with us beyond the veil!

Then consider the late Sir A. Conan Doyle. Yes, I confess I read as a young man his adventures with Sherlock Holmes. But his keen mind seems to have forsaken him when he tried to investigate the claims of Spiritualism. And then the great historian, the late W. J. Locke, was a devotee of this cult.

Yet, paradoxically, in the light of the scriptures I have quoted all these great and brilliant minds lived lives that were unimpeachable and beyond moral criticism.

Recently I read Mary Robert Rhinehart's, My Story. She says that in all her professional association as a nurse with doctors and surgeons she found very few, if any, believed in the natural immortality of the soul! When a patient died, as far as they could see he had passed away into oblivion.

The philosopher teaches that because a man thinks and feels that he is immortal, of course he is. Plato taught this, and so did the Egyptians, but, like the tales of romance, it is all vain imagination.

When I consider the view of those who believe in spirit communication, the thing which amazes me is that sometimes it is an Indian guide and sometimes a child who converses through the medium; and although they have been dead for years, they still use the same dialect and infantile means of expressing themselves as they did when living in the flesh.

As human beings we are progressing every day. Science is endeavoring to illuminate the world both mentally and materially; but it is said that the moment one enters the spirit world he can only communicate with others in the dark, and yet the spirit world is a world of light and knowledge.

Oh, that they would read the question asked in the Word of Truth! "Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? . . . Thy loving kindness in the grave? Thy faithfulness in destruction? Thy wonders in the dark? Thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?"—Psalm 88:10-12, Moffatt. Or if they would but believe that "in death there is no remembrance of (God): in the grave who shall give (him) thanks?"—Psalm 6:5. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:4. God help us to trust Him and to believe His precious Word.

There Is None Other God but One

By D. G. Harvey

---

"Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord."

JEHOVAH GOD gave to Israel by the hand of Moses this first law. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me."—Exodus 20:3. Our Lord spoke of this first and great commandment in Matthew 22:37, thus: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

But just as Israel departed from the worship of God, the one true God, to the worship of Baal, so has Christendom departed from God and today worships the Trinity, declaring three co-equal Persons in one Godhead (Father, Son, and Holy Ghost). Each of the three is thought to be God in person.

Picture in your mind such a pagan three-headed monster and try to harmonize such a monster with God's statement as found in Genesis 1:26: "Let us make man in our image." Reason should show that if man was made in the image of God and God had been such a deformed monster with three heads man, too, must have had three heads.

This pagan doctrine was first brought into the church about 325 A. D. at the Council of Nice, when all who failed to bow to the new Baal were branded as heretics.

Such a teaching should be easily recognized as a serious error, for it denies the Word of God. "The Lord he is God; there is none else beside him."—Deuteronomy 4:35. "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord."—Deuteronomy 6:4.

There are many other such statements, but we will use only the words of our great Teacher: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."—John 17:3. Notice, please, the word and between God and Jesus in the above citation. Would such a word indicate the fact that the Father and the Son were the same person? Jesus further shows such not to be the case in John 5:30: "I can of mine own self do nothing."

In John 1:18 we read: "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him." That is, Jesus the Son has shown us the Father. Why? Because God, being invisible (1 Timothy 1:17), could not be seen by men. God, being immortal, could not die. Yet the Son, the Mediator, could (1 Timothy 2:5, 6), thus showing to the world God's divine attributes: justice, wisdom, love, and power.

The great truth that Jesus was the Son of God was the very foundation of the early church. When Jesus questioned the disciples, "Whom do ye say that I am?" it was Peter's answer, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," which caused the Master to state, "Upon this rock I will build my church."—Matthew 16:15-18.

But let us see if others learned this truth. When Philip had preached Jesus to the eunuch and that earnest seeker for truth requested baptism, the eunuch stated, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."—Acts 8:37. There is no thought of Trinity there. The apostles were taught to pray in Christ's name (John 16:23, 24), baptize in His name (Acts 2:38), do all things in His name (Colossians 3:17). If those teachings were essential, they are just as essential today. "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: (but) he that acknowledgeth the Son, hath the Father also."—1 John 2:23. "And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment."—1 John 3:23. "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God."—1 John 4:15.

Why was the New Testament written? Let John answer: "But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that, believing, ye might have life through his name."—John 20:31. Then, my friends, if the sole purpose of the New Testament is to prove that Jesus is the Son of God, is it in reason to affirm that He is God?

Let us consider the so-called third Person of the Trinity, the Holy Ghost. In Romans 8:14 we read, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." This would indicate the power or influence of God. Jesus, in promising a comforter to come to His followers, calls it the "Spirit of truth" (John 15:26). By this Spirit (power) God created the world (Genesis 1:2). Prophecy was written by it (2 Peter 1:21; 1 Peter 1:11). It was poured out and filled houses and people (Acts 2:2, 4, 17). It was shed on believers (Titus 3:5, 6), was drunk (1 Corinthians 12:13), and breathed out (John 22:22). Men were baptized in it (Acts 1:5). Surely such statements of the manifestation would show non-personality.

Let us consider a few of the strong proof texts often used to teach the doctrine of the Trinity. The one most often presented is found in 1 John 5:7: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one." The Diaglott renders this verse thus: "For there are three which testify," omitting the remainder; and in explanation a footnote is given stating, "This text concerning the heavenly witness is not contained in any Greek manuscript which was written earlier than the fifth century."

There can be no need of such witness in heaven it is true; but let us consider it as recorded in the King James Version in connection with John 10:30, "I and my Father are one," and other citations. Does Jesus mean that He and Jehovah His Father are one person? Surely not; for that would be out of harmony with His statement, "My Father is greater than I."—John 14:28.

Surely our Lord did not pray as recorded in John 17 for the church to be one, "even as we are one" (verse 22), with the desire that His followers of the different ages and from all parts of the earth be molded into one person. Rather, His meaning was harmony, oneness in purpose, as the husband and wife are one (Ephesians 5:31), as co-laborers such as the early apostles are one (1 Corinthians 3:8).

Let us see if there is harmony in this thought of oneness in purpose. Jesus was always in harmony with the Father: "Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."—John 14:10. "I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. . . . I do always those things that please him."—John 8:28, 29.

Let us consider for a moment the "triple-name baptism." "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."—Matthew 28:19. Let us first notice the command is, "baptizing them in the name," not in three names. There is no evidence that the Father and the Son are the same person. The Father is declared by the Son to be the only true God (John 17:3), but the name is common to both Father and Son.

If we may find the same name applied to both the Father and the Son, we, like the apostles, could understand this command of the Master.

Let us turn to Matthew 1:21: "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins." Here we have the meaning of the name "Jesus"—"shall save his people." Note the margin, "Saviour."

But was the name "Saviour" ever applied to the Father? Listen: "Tell ye, and bring them near; yea, let them take counsel together: who hath declared this from ancient time? who hath told it from that time? have not I the Lord? and there is no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; there is none beside me."—Isaiah 45:21. God is speaking of Himself as a Savior. "I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob."—Isaiah 49:26. "They forgat God their saviour, which had done great things in Egypt."—Psalm 106:21. Again, "To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."—Jude 25. Yes, God has been known as the Savior. There are few who do not apply the same name to the Son. John 4:42; 1 Timothy 4:10; 1 John 4:14; Luke 2:11.

The disciples understood this often-quoted text of Matthew 28:19. They knew the one name and baptized in that one name. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ (Saviour, Anointed)," says Peter in Acts 2:38. "They were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus."—Acts 8:16. "So many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ."—Romans 6:3.

But there is no record that the apostles used the three names at any time. Father and Son: think how often these terms of relationship are used in the Word. The Father cannot be His own Son, and the Son cannot be His own Father. The words themselves deny the oneness of person.

Let us return to the Word of God. "For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him."—1 Corinthians 8:5, 6.

Jerusalem, the City of Tragedy

JERUSALEM has been called, "The City of Joy," "The Joy of All the Earth," "The City of Peace," and, "The Desire of the Nations." It is called by the Moslems of today El Kuds, "The Sanctuary," and by the rest of the world, "The Holy City." But during its long history it has been more or less a city of tragedy.

Nearly all the great nations of antiquity have attacked it. It fell into the hands of ancient Babylon on two occasions. It was destroyed by the Romans, who crucified thousands of its Jewish defenders and ran their plows over the ruins, building an entirely new city on the dust and ashes of the old. It was conquered again by the Arabs and was for a time under the sway of the Crusaders, who began their crusades in Europe with a massacre of Jews. When the city was captured, they hounded the Jews into a synagogue and burned them alive.

During the World War the Jews of Jerusalem and Palestine suffered untold miseries. They took an active part in assisting the British in freeing the city from Turkish domination.

Later came the bloody massacre of Jews in Jaffa and Jerusalem by the Arabs. And now once again Arab riots have added to the ghastly record. At the present time not only the Jews of Jerusalem, but the Jews in the whole of Palestine, are in a precarious position.

A fragment of the ancient temple of Israel, Kauthal Mavarbe, the West Wall, also called, "The Wailing Wall," has been the immediate, though by no means the chief, cause of the trouble today. It is one of the most ancient and authentic sites in the whole of Jerusalem. It is reached by going through the Jaffa Gate and following the main street leading to the so-called Mosque of Omar, the proper name of which is the Dome of the Rock, which is built on the site of Solomon's Temple. By a couple of narrow turns to the left we soon come upon the scene of the old wall situated in the miserable quarters of the Mughrebins, Moslems from Northwest Africa.

The "Wailing Wall" is fifty-two yards in length, fifty-nine feet in height, and some fifty feet below the surface of the present paving. The nine lowest courses of stone consist of huge blocks; among them is one sixteen and a half feet long and thirteen feet in width.

As far back as Roman days the Jews were allowed to venture here and engage in religious devotions. At this place Constantine the Emperor allowed the Jews to come once a year for special prayer. Jerome makes a touching allusion to the remnant of mourners who in his day bribed the Roman soldiers that they might go and weep over the ruins of the Holy City.

During the Middle Ages under Moslem and Christian regimes Jews were in the habit of repairing hither to bewail the downfall of Jerusalem. The Caliph Omar, who in the seventh century built the Dome of the Rock over the old stone of sacrifice, allowed the Jews to worship at the Wailing Wall which adjoined the mosque he built.

About ninety years ago, through the instrumentality of the late Sir Moses Montifiore, the Sultan of Turkey gave the Jews of Jerusalem the sole right to occupy the space before the Wall for religious services; and they have maintained this right unhindered until recent months.

The Wailing Wall presents one of the most touching sights in Jerusalem of today. Here all types of Orthodox Jews from all parts of the world can be seen. At any time of any day Jewish figures can be seen leaning against the weatherbeaten Wall, kissing the stones and weeping. The men often sit here for hours at a time reading their well-worn and much-used Hebrew prayer-books. A special service is held every Friday evening at sunset. At this time a special litany is chanted. The leader prays for the temple that is destroyed, for the walls that are overthrown, for the departed majesty, for the precious stones that are buried, for the erring priests and kings who sinned. After each petition the people respond, "We sit in solitude and mourn." Another litany used deals with the hope of restoration. The leader continues, "Haste, haste, Redeemer of Zion, we pray Thee have mercy on Zion," the people responding, "Gather the people of Jerusalem, speak to the heart of Jerusalem, comfort those who mourn over Jerusalem."

The Balfour Declaration made during the closing days of the World War has been responsible for a good deal of unrest in Palestine. Its ambiguous terms have been re-interpreted over a dozen times by the British Government and neither one nor other of these interpretations has entirely satisfied the Zionists or the Arab population.

Unlike the French in Syria, Great Britain withdrew almost every soldier she had in Palestine and replaced them by a local constabulary largely consisting of native Arabs and a sprinkling of Jews, with a handful of British in the ranks. The leading public offices are manned by men from Great Britain and most of these petty officials have very little sympathy with the aspirations of Zionism.

The Zionist Challutzim ("pioneers") who came from the great centers of Europe are a very fine type, cultured and refined, talented and vigorous, determined and skillful, graduates from leading universities in Europe and America, men and women of high ideals, inspired with one burning hope of being allowed to do their bit in the rebuilding of the Jewish national home.

As a missionary laboring in Palestine and Syria for the last five years I had an unusual opportunity of seeing some of the accomplishments of Zionism. Forty thousand halutzim are at work in the plains of Jezreel, laboring with every fiber of their being, reclaiming the land which for centuries was only an Arab dunghill and a desert. "Thy land shall no more be termed desolate," "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose," are poetic descriptions of Israel's longing in the past and may also be regarded as a portrayal of what has been transpiring in connection with the rebuilding of the Jewish national home.

Swamps are being removed; malaria is being eliminated and physical health restored; beautiful gardens have been laid out; large fields of corn are gently waving in the breeze; orchards yield the finest fruit; fat cattle furnish pure milk; and olives and vines clothe the hillsides. Thus a wonderful chapter is being written in the land of Palestine.—Elias Newman.

A Great Thing for Jerusalem

AT NOON on April 18 the great English general of the East dedicated the Young Men's Christian Association temple in Jerusalem. It is intended to be used by all religious organizations for all time. This will include all sects of Christendom, the Jews, the Mohammedans, and the Bahaiists. The radio carried the exercises splendidly to all parts of the world. They were perfectly clear in Nat-chitoches.

Among the preliminary addresses I would call attention to an especially worthy one delivered by an Irish churchman. He pointed with regret to the sad state in several countries, for example, in Cuba and in Germany, where unwise bands had been permitted to do gross injustice to parties that seemed to stand in their way. In Germany the spleen was exercised against the Jews; in Cuba, against the very best class of Cuban men and women purely for political reasons. Murder and rapine existed on both occasions. The learned man from Ireland declared that the world is ripe for a higher civilization.

The German Jews in several respects undoubtedly stand on a higher plane for truth and good character than do many of their enemies. In Cuba the victims were all of a high character. The Jew has stood preeminently for unusual tenacity of purpose. Since the opening of Bible history he has held firmly to the belief in one God and one God only. From early years he has looked forward to a promised Messiah. The prophet of highest merit in the Jewish record of able men was Isaiah. This prophet says, regarding the Messiah, that like a sheep He was led to the slaughter; and as a lamb before its shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth.

A great prince of Ethiopia, or Abyssinia, shortly after the great Day of Pentecost, had been reading the Jewish scriptures on his journey from his homeland to Jerusalem and was continuing this reading on his return trip, when he stumbled upon the words of Isaiah.

Just then the evangelist, Philip, crossed the prince's path and interestedly said, "What readest thou? Understandest thou what thou readest?"

The prompt answer signified that he did not understand. How could a man understand unless some knowing one should lead him? Philip, beginning at the same scripture, preached to him the Messiah, His conception, His birth, His early life and baptism, and all important things connected with His life and death. The prince's language on crossing a stream proves a part of the message taught by Philip.

"See," he said, "here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?"

Philip's reply was, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest."

Many Jews have already realized the truths about the Messiah; many more are ready to believe and will surely have faith when Armageddon will be to them as was the experience of Saul on the way to Damascus to him. We ought to give more credit to the faith of the Jew than many of us do.

Ireland's messenger of good will to man will bear fruit. The monument in Jerusalem to greater religious fervor and purity will remain as a high tribute to the noble American who paid the cost of its erection.

As Statesmen See It

THE writer went into the office of an Ohio congressman and found lying on his desk a book entitled, Money, an Illusion. Reference to this book turned the discussion to the emphasis being given to the development of material means as a cure for the present national conditions. This at once prompted the suggestion that America is something more than a huge collection of natural resources, great factories, fertile farms, and complex financial institutions, and that it would be illuminating to secure the deliberate and experienced judgment of outstanding members of Congress as to their opinion on present conditions.

CONGRESSMAN KELLY INTERVIEWED

Two members were chosen immediately by the writer as legislators of high standing and long experience who might give light regarding the present conditions. The office of Congressman Clyde Kelly, of the Thirty-third District of Pennsylvania, was the first visited. The congressman was busy with the day's mail, but he entered enthusiastically into a discussion of the present situation, to which he had given much thought as a former newspaper man and lecturer.

After a review of the day at the Capitol, we said, "Congressman Kelly, you have been a member of the House of Representatives for the past twenty years. You must have given a great deal of thought in recent days to the causes which have led to the present economic depression. What is your deliberate opinion as to the chief cause?"

Without hesitation, Congressman Kelly replied, "Spiritual bankruptcy. We have been worshipping the golden calf. The results are seen all around us."

The interview continued in this vein, as follows:

Question: Then you believe a spiritual change is necessary to recovery?

Mr. Kelly: Certainly I do, and the church must lead in bringing about a very decided resurrection of the fundamental ideals of virtue and righteousness. There is need for an awakened sense of civic righteousness throughout this whole nation.

Question: How would you suggest that the church go about the inaugurating of this revival of righteousness?

Mr. Kelly: I believe it should go out to recruit men and women for a study of the Bible as the textbook of both national righteousness and individual morality. We must know the truth if the truth is to make us free. Let each church put on an aggressive program of organized Bible classes.

Question: How would you recruit the people for these classes?

Mr. Kelly: Men and women are eager to know the truth if it is presented to them in a practical way. Make the classes so appealing and so satisfying to the hunger of men and women to know how to meet their problems in the everyday struggle of business and life that they will fill your classes. Every principle needed to solve our national and economic problems is found in the Bible. Let the pastors and church members go out into the community and, by going from house to house, invite the people to come in for a study of the methods and principles which will renew our national life.

Question: You seem to be rather keen on the matter of Bible study. Are there many in the House of Representatives who are like you in this respect?

Mr. Kelly: I am keen on this subject. I teach a large men's Bible class in a Presbyterian church every Sunday I am in Washington. We face the problems of the day on the principles given to us in the Bible. With regard to the interests of other members of Congress, there is a great number of men in this body who feel that the church and the Bible are the most fundamental factors in our national life. For instance, here is an illustration: Last year a publishing house approached me with regard to my writing the notes for the Sunday school lessons they were compiling. The publisher's representative told me that each of fifty-two members of Congress had agreed to write the notes for the lesson for one week of the coming year. Every man who had thus agreed to write was a Bible teacher or an active member in a Bible study organization.

Question: Then you evidently think the church has a responsibility in the recovery of the nation?

Mr. Kelly: Absolutely! The church is the one organization that can undergird the nation. Without its effective work we are helpless.

A QUAKER STATESMAN SPEAKS

OVER in the Senate Office Building we found Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, who is the publisher of a number of daily and weekly papers. After serving two terms as governor of Kansas, he was sent to the United States Senate in 1918. He has a record unexcelled for support of progressive legislation, including introduction of the Nineteenth Amendment, which gave women the ballot.

"Senator Capper, you have given years of thought to national affairs. What is your opinion concerning present conditions as they affect the United States?"

The Senator replied, "I wish to state at the outset that I believe in our form of government. It is not perfect—it is not a sacred or finished product—but I am strong in the faith that it is the best form of government on God's beautiful earth today. But, admirable as it is, ultimate triumph of the American ideal must spring from something more sacred even than our love for the flag that symbolizes our national honor. It can come only from a deep and inherent love of righteousness—the broad, all-comprehending righteousness embodied in the gospel of Christ.

"No nation can be great, no people can survive, without holding true to the fundamental concept that certain great spiritual forces will finally dominate its destiny. Had there been the universal acceptance of the principles of Christian justice and charity, there would be today neither economic nor spiritual depression. The world forgot Christ in the rush for money. The only god that many of us knew seemed to be the Almighty Dollar."

Question: How do you account for this state of affairs?

Mr. Capper: There are too many dust-covered Bibles, prayerless homes, deserted churches without even the semblance of a prayer meeting. There is widespread spiritual ignorance and desecration of the Sabbath Day. These form part of the religious background of the past decade.

As a business man and as one whose privilege it is to have a part in shaping the policies of our government, I say to you that the greatest need in the world today is a wider acceptance of and a greater devotion to the fundamentals of Christianity.

The world has gone astray. It needs right now the infusion of high moral and spiritual qualities into all its relationships—personal, social, industrial, political, national, and international.

Question: I take it, then, that you think the church has a responsibility in solving the present difficulty?

Mr. Capper: This hour is a challenge to the church, a call to organized religion to take notice that great classes and bodies of people are adrift, their hold upon the great beliefs loosened, their faiths in the teachings of the past enfeebled. I say the challenge is so imperative that the church must respond now with a revitalized energy or it will be false to its mission and its faith.

Question: Do you not realize the church has felt the pinch of the depression?

Mr. Capper: Yes, but the spiritual value of the church is not dependent on church buildings and equipment or financial resources, though these may be necessary. The church is the character builder of the nation; its influence spreads into every walk of life. It is the foundation of American integrity. We need in America as never before an awakening of the spiritual sense and a strengthening of the moral fiber of our citizens.

Question: I note that you lay special stress upon the spiritual responsibility of the church?

Mr. Capper: I certainly do. We need more religion—not of hairsplitting theology with its creeds and dogmas—but the religion of simple faith in God. If we could bring into the relationships of humanity, among ourselves and among the nations of the earth, the brotherhood that was taught by the Christ, we would soon see a restored world and a new hope for humanity throughout the globe.

We are a careless people, but we must realize that our culture, our civilization, our very existence as a nation rest upon the church of the living God. America without the church is inconceivable! It is indifference, not antagonism, to the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ which has brought us to our present state. Therefore, I say this hour calls for renewed and increasing effort on the part of all those who say in faith, "Thy kingdom come."

THE senator was warming to his theme and commenced to walk back and forth across the office earnestly continuing to express his mind and heart upon the nation and the church.

WORLD PEACE AND THE CHURCH

"I cannot believe any sane man living in America in this twentieth century can fail to recognize the value of the Christian church to the community, to the state, and to the nation. Even putting aside the salvation of human souls and ignoring the spiritual welfare of the human race, the church still stands as the great bulwark of our civilization, as, indeed, the most vital thing in our national life.

"Let me say this, if the church does its duty, from this day forth, war not only will be avoidable, it will be impossible."

A CALL TO PRAYER

THIS Quaker senator was growing more earnest, and it was good to hear such words in the great marble structures of the world's mightiest republic.

"We Americans should not forget that in every crisis in the history of our nation it has been necessary for the people to rediscover the value of prayer—and how necessary at this moment! Prayer and daily reading of the Bible in every home in this land would mean a revived and a dynamic America fit for her place of service in the world."

Here in these two interviews were found no notes of wavering faith, but a staunch belief that in the church of Jesus Christ lies the hope of the United States and that the emergency of this hour is a clear, earnest call for the ministry and laity to lead on in a campaign for the spiritual redemption of the nation.—Harry Earl Woolever, Editor, National Methodist Press, in The Christian Advocate.

A SIGNIFICANT PROPHETIC DEVELOPMENT

After the fall of Darius, Alexander knew that his last formidable foe was gone. So he gave himself up to wild enjoyment and a life of restless pleasure. With great arrogance he proclaimed himself a deity. He often murdered his closest friends in drunken orgies. He finally drank himself to death. The fall of Greece under the iron hand of Rome is a matter of history.

ROME

AND Rome became the fourth kingdom. It was symbolized by the two legs of iron. Gibbon the great historian says, "The arms of the Republic, sometimes vanquished in battle, always victorious in war, advanced with rapid steps to the Euphrates, the Danube, the Rhine, and the ocean; and the images of gold, or silver, or brass that might serve to represent the nations or their kings, were successively broken by the iron monarchy of Rome." Gibbon uses the word iron in describing Rome, and so does Daniel, "And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron." School children read of the "iron legions of Rome."

When Christ was born under the shining stars and angel song, it was at a time when the Roman Empire was supreme and included what is now the southern part of Europe, all of France and England, the greater part of the Netherlands, Switzerland, also Hungary, Turkey, Greece, and a small part of Asia and northern Africa. No wonder Gibbon said, "The empire of the Romans filled the world. And when that empire fell into the hands of a single person, the world became a safe and dreary prison for his enemies. To resist was fatal; and it was impossible to fly."

The two legs of the image represent the two divisions of the Empire. A thousand years after Daniel's prophecy Rome was separated into two great halves, the western capital in Rome and the eastern capital in Constantinople. The western division continued some four hundred years after Christ and the eastern lasted until 1453, when it was taken by the Turks. If Daniel were a historian today, looking back, he could not write more accurately than he wrote as a prophet looking down the sweep of the centuries.

ROME REVIVED

THE fifth and final empire is prophesied to be a division of old Rome into sections symbolized by the ten toes on the feet of the image. The Roman Empire has existed through the centuries, though sometimes sleeping like a mighty Vesuvius as if waiting to belch forth at an unexpected moment.

On Christmas Day, in the year 800, Saint Peter's in the City of Rome was filled with a worshipping throng. Pope Leo Third came down from his pontifical chair to the high altar where Charlemagne was kneeling, and, placing on his head a golden crown, saluted and proclaimed him emperor of Rome. Thus, life was again breathed into the western division and it became known thereafter as the "Holy Roman Empire."

The imperial form of the Roman government has ceased to exist; but the fragments of the Empire have continued, and its future revival is certain. John, in the Patmos vision, describes the imperial head of the Empire as a beast whose "deadly wound was healed," meaning that it will be restored. In other words, another emperor is coming who will sit in Caesar's seat to realize Napoleon's ambition of becoming the sole ruler and dictator of the territory which formerly comprised the Roman Empire.

It is worthy to note that Mussolini's ambitions lead in exactly the same direction, Caesar being his consuming ideal. That such a dictator is coming who will do what Mussolini yearns to do, namely, revive old Rome, every informed student of Bible prophecy very well knows. The territory will eventually be divided into ten nations over which a superman will preside. There will be nine figure-head subdictators under him, thus making up the ten toes of Daniel's image. Current history is moving in that direction.

Since the World War there have been many developments in Europe which have tended toward the creation of the predicted ten-toed federation of nations. There has been a great deal of talk among statesmen about establishing a "United States of Europe." The League of Nations is, of course, a definite step toward the fulfillment of Daniel's prophecy. Eventually all of the nations which now belong to the League and are outside of the territory over which old Rome ruled, will forsake the League for one cause or another. In this connection it is important to notice that Japan has already withdrawn.

A PROPHETIC DEVELOPMENT

THE map of Europe is being gradually revised, and the nations are being brought to conform to Daniel's declaration of ten kingdoms. There was a significant development in this direction last month when the Little Entente formulated a policy of virtual amalgamation which simply means that three of the nations of old Rome's territory, Rumania, Jugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia, are on the verge of shrinking into one. Angry German newspaper editors who do not approve of the arrangement have dubbed the new kingdom which has seemingly risen over night as, "Rumanojugosvokia."

The merger was engineered by Czechoslovakia's Dr. Edward Benes, who is called "Europe's smartest little statesman"; Rumania's foreign minister, Nicolas Titulescu; and Jugoslavia's foreign minister, Boske Yevtitch. The daily press says that it means "the abrupt and solid interlocking of three small European states into what may soon be considered a Great Power." The treaty involves a joining of military, political, and economic interests, an alliance not to be limited by any certain number of years. After the signing of the treaties was finished at Geneva, Benes cried, "It is eternal! It provides our countries at last with a stable, organic base." The official statement issued by the three statesmen says, "In order to mark sharply the transformation of the Entente into an international community having a distinct personality, the three foreign ministers have decided that every political treaty of each State of the Entente, every unilateral act changing the existing political situation of one of the Entente States toward an outside State, as well as every economic agreement involving important political consequences require henceforth the unanimous consent of the Council of the Entente."

Developments of this kind prove unmistakably that world affairs are heading up, on prophetic lines, toward the creation of a world Tower of Babel which will topple over in the convulsion of "great tribulation," to be followed by the establishment of Christ's personal kingdom which will have no end. As Daniel looked at the feet of the image, he saw the ten toes suddenly smashed and destroyed by the falling of a stone "cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and broke them in pieces. And the stone became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth." The descending stone is the second coming of Christ and at that time His government will replace the governments of men.—Gerald B. Windor in Defender.

"MY FATHER IS GREATER THAN I"

WE may summarize the arguments against the Trinity as follows:

1. God is not a man (Numbers 23:19), but Jesus was (Acts 2:22; 1 Timothy 2:5; Hebrews 2:17). Him Jesus acknowledged as the only God (John 17:3). He called Him, "My Father," "My God" (John 20:17; Revelation 3:12). And to Him He prayed (Matthew 26:36, 39, 42-44; Luke 6:12; John 17).

2. God is Creator (Genesis 1:1; Isaiah 40:28); but Jesus is a creature, having Himself been created by God (Revelation 3:14; Galatians 4:4).

3. God is immortal (1 Timothy 1:17), but Jesus died (1 Corinthians 15:3).

4. God is almighty (Genesis 17:1; Luke 1:37). Jesus was wholly dependent on God (John 5:19, 30; 8:28; 5:31, 32).

5. God is all-wise (1 John 3:20; Psalm 39:1-12). Jesus was limited in knowledge (Luke 2:52; Mark 13:32).

6. God is invisible (1 Timothy 1:17; 6:16; John 1:18), but Jesus has been seen (1 John 1:1).

7. God is immune to human passions (James 1:13), but Jesus was tempted in all points as we are (Hebrews 4:15). He was made man for the express reason that God cannot suffer the temptations of humanity (Hebrews 2:9, 10, 17, and 18).

8. God is the Father and Jesus the Son (Hebrews 1:5). Consider how often these terms are used. How could anyone be his own father or his own son? The very words deny oneness of person.

9. God is above all (Ephesians 4:6). He is greater than Jesus (John 14:28; 1 Corinthians 3:23; 11:3). He is the Highest (Luke 1:32, 76; 6:35). Jesus is now and always will be subject to God (1 Corinthians 15:27, 28).

"Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself"

THE SECRET

DONNA and Doris, ten year old cousins, were walking home together from school on Friday afternoon. "I just know we're going to have a lovely time tomorrow, because it's Eleanor's party," exclaimed Doris.

"Yes, whatever she plans is always just the nicest ever," Donna agreed.

"Don't forget that each one is to bring some pretty colored silk pieces, and if any girl has a doll she thinks she can spare she is to bring that, too," Doris reminded her cousin as they parted.

The plans for the party at Lillian's house were explained to eleven mothers that very afternoon, and scrap boxes were searched for treasures.

"Mother," said Doris, while they were talking it all over, "why is it that Lillian's big sister, Eleanor, has so many friends. Everybody just loves her!"

"Well," reflected Mother, "suppose you try to find out tomorrow during the party."

Saturday afternoon found twelve little girls gathered in Eleanor's large sunny room, and to Eleanor's surprise there were eight dolls besides many colored silk pieces.

"First," explained Eleanor, "we're going to make a cushion for Mrs. Gray." And she proceeded to cut the pieces and give them to the girls to put together. She told them meanwhile that this was to be a Mother's Day gift for Mrs. Gray, who had no children of her own and might be forgotten.

How happy Eleanor was over the eight dolls, when what she hoped for was one little doll for a lonely little neighbor who was shut in for so many weeks with the measles.

"We'll keep the other seven, girls, and whenever we hear of a little girl who needs cheering up we'll meet again and dress a dolly for her," declared Eleanor, to which they all heartily agreed.

Doris had not forgotten what Mother had told her to try and discover, and while needles flew in and out and smiles passed from one bright face to another, she watched Lillian's big sister and looked carefully around her pretty room.

"It isn't that Eleanor is so beautiful," thought the little girl, "though she has the sweetest face; nor that the family is rich, for anyone can see they are not. I wonder what it can be."

The afternoon passed so quickly that before they realized it the cushion was finished, the little doll dressed, and twelve happy girls were romping on the lawn waiting for the refreshments which were to be served in a sheltered spot.

When Mother asked Doris that night if she had learned why every one loved Eleanor, she replied, "I looked and looked, and watched and watched, Mother, and the only thing I saw that was different was a little card in the corner of Eleanor's mirror."

"What sort of a card, dear?" asked Mother.

"Just a plain card with these words on it, 'I Am Third.' What do you suppose they mean, Mother?"

And then Mother explained to her that in Eleanor's life God was first, other next, and herself last; that all her life Eleanor had been putting the wishes and needs of others before her own; and that there is no surer way to grow up to be loved, to possess the charm that all desire than in that way.

"So that's the secret," mused Doris, as she knelt to ask God to teach her to put herself third in all things.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Girls, clip out this story and paste it in your book. Boys, write in your own words the story found in Mark 12:14-17. You may have help if you need it at any time with the writing or drawing you are to do, but always tell the story in your own words for Mother to write it in your book. Copy Jesus' words from your Bibles. Next, draw a large scroll such as you have seen in pictures, representing the Old Testament. On it copy the words of Deuteronomy 6:5. Under this copy the words of Mark 12:31. Then draw a square and in it print, "I Am Third." Also, each of you print these words on a card and tack it up where you will see it each morning and night. Let that be your motto, and then see how happy you will be, as well as everyone else around you. Last copy these verses:

"Jesus, may we learn of Thee,
Gentle, humble, each to be;
For our Father loves to see
Hearts from pride and envy free.

"Love the Lord with heart and soul;
Let Him all our lives control;
Loving God our Father best,
We shall truly love the rest."

LESSON 8. — May 21, 1933

JESUS ANSWERS HIS ADVERSARIES

Mark 12:1-44

Devotional Reading: Psalm 27:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT

Never man spake like this man.—John 7:46.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Answers His Adversaries.

Aim: To lead the pupil to see why love for God is of first importance in his life, and love for man second only to love for God.

Basic Truth: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and . . . thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

I. Jesus' Standard for Life. (Vv. 28-34.) Our Lord introduced no new truth into the world when He defined the love of God as being of first importance. That is a fact that was announced by Inspiration and proven true by experience from the beginning of time. It would be impossible for one to observe the spirit of the first commandment mentioned by Jesus and not place the second in its rightful position. Where the love of God "is the commanding principle in the life, there is a disposition to perform every other duty. . . . Where (this principle is absent) nothing good is done, or done right, or done long." A recognition of God's goodness to us prompts us to love Him and to desire to please Him, and in our effort to do this we are led to serve our fellow men even to the extent of personal sacrifice. As we come into contact with them in such service, we learn to love them.

II. Jesus Warns Against Pride. (Vv. 35-40.) Jesus not only taught and exemplified humility, but He enjoined it upon His disciples as He warned them against the danger of pride. Possessed of every divine and human reason for personal exaltation, He "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant . . . he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."—Phil. 2:7, 8. He was, through His miraculous origin, the "only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth" (John 1:14), to whom it was said by the spirit of prophecy by Jehovah, "Sit thou on my right hand." David, foreseeing His glory, was moved to call Him "Lord." Yet in spite of all this, He has left us an example of humble, self-sacrificing service unequalled in the history of the world.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

1. The Word of God: (a) is powerful; (b) confounds the critics; (c) leads to the kingdom. Jesus confounded the great and mighty of His day and time by quoting the Word. When in the mount of temptation, He overcame the tempter by saying: "It is written." "For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword."—Heb. 4:12. When one has on the armor of God and stays behind the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, he is amply fortified against all the wiles of the enemy. Nothing will put to rout the enemy like the Word of God. Critics stand dazed before its rays. Paul well knew the power and influence of the Word when he enjoined Timothy to "preach the word . . . in season, out of season . . . with all longsuffering and doctrine." The Word leads to the kingdom of God. Truth makes us free. His words are life. God's will is revealed to us through the Word. Therefore, we are enjoined to "study to shew thyself approved."—2 Timothy 2:15.

2. Beware of false teachers. (a) Jesus warns His listeners; (b) judge according to the Word; (c) outward appearance. "Beware of the scribes," was the warning given by Christ. Their appearance was deceiving, their prayers misleading. We must try the prophets, for many false teachers are to appear in the latter days. 1 John 4:1; 1 Thess. 5:21. The conditions confronting the followers of Christ in Christ's time have been multiplied many times in these latter days. The Word is our only safe guide. We must adhere closely to its teachings. And by sound doctrine we can convince the gainsayers.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Never man spake like this man."—John 7:46.

The people of Christ's day had a number of different opinions concerning Him. Many of them could not make out just who He was or what was His mission; so different sects of Jews tried to throw Him off His guard as it were by putting what they thought were puzzling questions to Him. Every time they tried this, He was more than their equal and answered in such a way that they were convinced that He had more than mere human knowledge; and that was why they said, "Never man spake as this man."

It was said of Him on another occasion that He taught as one having authority. He did, and that was why He could always answer His adversaries in a way that put them to silence and made them realize why He could speak as never man spake before.—L. A. R.

How to Deal With Objectors

Every Christian meets objectors, disbelievers, or the contentious. How to deal with them is a problem which is not always easy to solve. No rule seems to be universal. A disbeliever once remarked: "A doctor lives off the afflicted, a lawyer off the contentious, and a preacher off the feeble-minded."

This man was a fine carpenter. One day a neighbor approached him, and after praising his ability as a carpenter said: "I have a difficult carpenter job I want done, and I consider you can do it if any man can. Some day when you have time I wish you would take a piece of wood and make me a grain of wheat. I not only want it to look like wheat but I want it so made that I can plant it and have it grow." The carpenter admitted he could not do the work. The neighbor asked: "Who, then, do you suppose, did do it?" The carpenter walked away, still unwilling to admit there was a God. However, before his death he wrote a letter for publication in which he admitted there was a God. He begged forgiveness for the harm he had done.

"The heavens relate the glory of God; and the expanse telleth of the works of His hands. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech, there are no words, their voice is not heard. But their melody extendeth through all the earth, and to the ends of the world their words."—Psa. 19:1-5, Leeser.

If you would know how Jesus answered His critics, study Matthew 22:15 to end.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

The Way to Meet Opposition

Opposition strengthens or weakens whatever comes into contact with it. Anyone interested in athletics knows that to be true. During your training, if you did not exercise, your muscles would not develop, and exercise is a form of opposition. Competition in your classes is another form of opposition and a means by which you develop mentally. Ideals that are at variance with each other, if met successfully, constitute one of the methods of developing socially and spiritually. In every phase of the fourfold life, physical, mental, social, and spiritual, opposition plays an important part. But the test comes in the way we meet it. Discuss with your teacher different ways of meeting opposition, on the athletic field, in the schoolroom, in society, and in church work, keeping in mind the rule of life Jesus laid down for us.

Now let's study the manner in which Jesus met opposition. Read Mark 12:24. This tells us that we must know the facts before we can answer intelligently those who differ with us. Because Jesus realized this, He was able to speak with authority. See Matt. 7:29; Mark 1:22. By kindly presenting the truth Jesus silenced His opposers (Mark 12:14, 17, 34), and when confronted with sin He never compromised (Matt. 23:27).

Special problem: Make a list on your classroom blackboard of some of the things which you meet daily that tend to hinder your growth in Christian character. Determine to meet these as Jesus would.—M. G.

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

- Fonthill May Meeting at Fonthill, Ontario, May 26 to 28
- Brush Creek Annual Meeting at Brush Creek Church near Tippecanoe City, Ohio, May 28 to June 4
- Minnesota Conference at St. Cloud, June 8 to 12
- Southern California Quarterly Prophetic Conference at Long Beach, July 2
- Northwestern Conference, Oregon and Washington, at Felida, Wash., June 15 to 18
- General and Illinois Conference and Bible School at Oregon, August 1 to 13
- Arkansas-Oklahoma at McGintytown, Arkansas August 3
- Iowa Conference at Waterloo August 22 to 27

MINNESOTA CONFERENCE

The annual Minnesota Conference will be held at Eden Valley, beginning June 8 and holding over the following Sunday, June 11. Bro. S. E. Magaw will be with us. Following the Conference he will hold a series of meetings for the Minnesota churches.

Mrs. Thos. M. Savage, Sr., Secretary.

ARKANSAS-OKLAHOMA CONFERENCE

The Arkansas-Oklahoma Conference of the Church of God will convene at McGintytown, in Falkner County, Arkansas, 21 miles north of Conway, August 3, 1933. We are hoping for another good meeting this year. All of the faith are cordially invited to attend. Should any come by rail they should get off at Conway. Write F. J. Snow or Peter McGinty, Greenbryer, Ark., Rt. 1. Bible lessons will be conducted between Conference hours. Love to each and every one.

R. M. Shewmake, Conference President.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Sickness has been making itself felt among our people. Bro. Harold Simpson, who was confined at the home of his parents by an injury for nearly two months, was just able to get back to his own home and family when one of the children broke out with scarlet fever; so he is quarantined out, and the wife and children are lonesome again. Bro. Craig has been in very poor health for several weeks. Sr. Ackerman's father died May 2, and a brother of Sr. Niles lies very low with pneumonia now. How much we realize the need of the Great Physician!

Sunday school starts at 9:45 henceforth. The teachers and officers who are taking turns to visit and study other Sunday schools are getting some valuable ideas. But it does us good to hear them say that the more they see of other Sunday schools the happier they are to get back to our own. Our attendance is running as high as that of a church in the city which has a building with equipment costing $110,000, and we have a much more enthusiastic corps of officers and teachers.

God has been very good to us, and we are looking for still greater blessings ahead.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

"The Great Sabbath, or What Will Jesus Do When He Comes and Restitution Begins," a tract of 28 pages, 15 cents a copy. Address orders to J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Ind.

WORLD PEACE NUMBER

The Restitution Herald of May 30, Memorial Day, will be a special world peace number. The leading or keynote article will be from the pen of our former editor, F. L. Austin of Chicago.

The issue will be given up to the Bible answer to the question, "How and when can world peace be secured?" We are planning to make this number especially attractive and instructive to such as are not fully acquainted with the divine provision made to bring about universal and permanent prosperity and peace to the nations of the world. You will want to place copies in the hands of your friends we are sure. Send us your list, accompanied with a remittance of five cents for each copy desired, and we will be glad to send them directly to those whom you wish to receive them.

INCLUDE THIS IN YOUR WILL

"I give and bequeath to the National Bible Institution, incorporated under the Laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ..... Dollars, to be applied for the uses and purposes of said Institution." (Or, if real estate, give the legal description of the property you desire to leave to the work of this Institution, and add, "in fee simple forever.")

Such a gift would provide you with a monument that would never be forgotten and the benefit of which would reach on through eternity itself. After the Lord comes, you would still be able to see the blessings that grew out of your investment.

MAURICE H. LUTHY

Maurice H. Luthy, son of W. R. and Mary Luthy, was born Oct. 31, 1859, and departed this life May 3, 1933. He was united in marriage to Mrs. Maggie Fuqua Aug. 20, 1918. He is survived by his wife, three sisters, and one brother. Three sisters and one brother have preceded him in death.

Mr. Luthy has held several positions of trust, the duties of which he always discharged satisfactorily to society and with honor to himself.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home where he has lived all but nine years of his life. The many present at the service was proof of the man's standing in his community. May God bless those who are left behind, is our prayer.

Gerald L. Cooper.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Our next issue will (D. V.) contain a most interesting business announcement from our president and manager, L. E. Conner. This is something for which you have been waiting a long time. Watch for it.

It was a stormy day last Sunday at Oregon, but 136 were present in Sunday school, which was 43 more than were in attendance a year ago on the same date. There were seventy-nine who did not miss a Sunday in April.

Plans are maturing for the General Conference and the Illinois Conference and Bible School. Classes treating on "Present Tense Prophecy," that is, prophecy being fulfilled today, and prophecy which is of future fulfillment have already been arranged for.

The state conference notices are now coming in. All who can possibly do so should plan at once to attend one or more of these meetings. They are of great spiritual blessing.

Do not forget the special World Peace number to be issued on Memorial Day. Get your order in early for extra copies for your friends.

The World's Fair, "A Century of Progress," which is to open in Chicago late in this present month, will no doubt draw many of our readers to that city. Why not plan to drop off in Oregon on a Sunday and inspect the property of the Institution, the printing plant and Golden Rule Home? Or, better still, plan to attend the fair the latter part of July and then come to the General Conference early in August at little added expense?

“Watchman, What of the Night?”

THERE is no doubt that many among us hold the view that the Lord will not return in a time of trouble, but in a time of prosperity. Luke 21:34 is used to prove this, as also the reference to the days of Noah and Sodom and Gomorrah. Let us examine the Scriptures and see if there is just ground for looking for the “sign of the Son of man” in these days. What was the “sin of Sodom”?

Let us turn to Isaiah 3. While we have here a picture of the conditions prevailing in Judah and Jerusalem, which brought about the judgment from the Almighty against them, what a picture we have of present-day conditions! A picture of the oppressor, the proud and haughty over against the poor and oppressed (verses 15 and 16). In verse 9 we read: “They declare their sin as Sodom.” In Isaiah 5:11, 13 we have a picture of drunkenness, and verse 19 says that there shall be woe unto them “that say, Let him make speed, and hasten his work, that we may see it; and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it.”

Again we ask, What was this “sin of Sodom”? “Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness, was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.” What have we in the world today but plenty on the one hand and oppression and privation on the other?

As one listened over the radio to the splendors of the recent inaugural ball, one was forced to wonder anew at the patience of the millions of needy people in America today. The flaunting of luxury in the eyes of the hungry is an everyday occurrence. Hard times or not, are they not “eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage”?

But if we have reason to believe the coming is near, even at the doors, ought the trumpet to give forth an uncertain sound? No doubt the next six months will bring to pass many great and notable things, but are we not in some danger of saying, “My Lord delayeth his coming”? Ought we not rather to be ready and expecting instant translation, than looking for and expecting another six months of grace? Ought not the watchman on the walls to be sending forth a certain sound? “For, if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?” “Watchman, what of the night?” “The morning cometh, and also the night.”

Ten or fifteen years ago Adventist preachers preached in such a manner that many of us expected to see Him coming in the clouds of heaven at any moment. But as the signs thicken and multiply on every hand, when there can be no longer a doubt that we are living in the very fringe-edge of the “toe-nails” of the image of Daniel 2, . . . one listens in vain for the “certain sound” that will open the heavens to us, and reveal the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. One gathers from the best attempts that it is at least six months away. To me, this is the tragedy of the “waiting church,” the “bride of Christ.” When Christ comes, ought He not find a church waiting in daily, hourly expectation? We give assent to this in our minds, but do we feel it? Are we living it?

For months past I have grieved over my own inability to recapture the blessed feeling that the Lord may come tomorrow! He might come tonight! But while reason told me this was so, yet I felt He is coming this year, perhaps, but probably not sooner than six months from now.

The question of great importance now is not whether or not Christ preexisted, whether or not the Holy Spirit is a person, whether or not it is proper to say “we are born again” at conversion; but, rather, Are we ready for instant translation? We should be looking for the sign of the Son of man in the heavens. That such supernatural manifestations are to be expected is clear from all past judgments of God upon an unrepentant nation or world. There was the literal, visible awfulness at Sinai. There was the angel of the Lord with drawn sword standing over Jerusalem in the days of David the king (1 Chronicles 21:16). There was the visible handwriting on the wall at the feast of Belshazzar, “and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote.” Who can read Josephus’ account of the destruction of Jerusalem without a thrill at the visible signs in the heavens at that time? There was the star in the form of a sword that stood over the city; the comet that appeared over the city for a whole year, and before the war the great light that shone round the altar and the holy house, “which lasted for half an hour.” (We are reminded of the remarkable occurrence in Arizona a short time ago, when the bright light from a bursting meteor was said to have lasted for half an hour after the disappearance of the meteor.) And then there was the massive temple door that swung open of itself; and, finally, the greatest manifestation of all, “for just before sunset, chariots and troops of soldiers were seen running about among the clouds, and surrounding of cities.”—Josephus, Wars of the Jews, Book VI, Chapter 5.

“Now if anyone considers these things he will find that God takes care of mankind, and by all ways possible fore-shows to our race what is for their preservation, but that men perish by those miseries which they madly and voluntarily bring upon themselves.”—Josephus.

What shall we say then? If the watchmen fail to sound the warning, will God make known His intentions by mighty signs and wonders in the heavenlies? I have yet to find, or hear of, any time for preparation after the sign of the Son of man appears, whether it appears fifty days previous to the actual coming, or just immediately before the heavens open. Those who hope to gain an entrance into the kingdom must be ready before the sign appears. May God grant to us an abundant entrance.—Mrs. Leona Bates in Messiah’s Advocate.

A PANORAMIC SKETCH OF JESUS CHRIST

By R. H. Judd

HERE are many things that impress us as we read the life history of the Savior, but perhaps none stands out more clearly than the certainty of His knowledge concerning Himself. He had no shadow of doubt as to who He was. The question, "Jesus Christ, who is He?" has been asked times without number, and the answers given are almost parallel in their variety. Strange to say, the writer has not yet seen any study of the subject viewed from the standpoint of how Jesus Christ Himself gives answer to the question. There is here ample opportunity for one of the most interesting Bible studies yet to come, and surely it is the most convincing answer to the enquiry of the ages, "What shall I do with Jesus, who is called the Christ?"

That He was the Christ, and that not in name only, was the pith of His testimony throughout the whole of His public ministry. That He was the "seed" promised to faithful Abraham, the friend of God, and the One through whom all the families of the earth should be blessed He did not question. That He was in the line of Isaac and of Jacob, of whom Jehovah was not ashamed to be called their God, He knew for a certainty. That He was the Prophet whom even Moses declared it would be perilous to disobey He was fully convinced.

He knew also that the sacrifices and offerings and even the tabernacle itself, together with its several appointments including the ark of the covenant, were but forerunners of Himself. The blue, the purple, and the gold, the rams' skins dyed red, and the gorgeous coverings of the veil of the tabernacle were all known to Him as typical of His wonderful personality. That He was the Priest of whom Melchisedek and Aaron were mere reflectors He was fully aware. That He was the Lamb of God, typified in the offering of Isaac on Mount Moriah and in the passover lamb on the memorable night the Israelites escaped from the bondage of Egypt He knew quite well. He knew, too, that He was the son of David, the Lion of the tribe of Judah.

These are but glimpses of the thrilling story as He Himself gleaned them from Moses, the Psalms, and the Prophets. Surely, indeed, His was a unique experience among the sons of men. Is it any wonder that He spoke with authority, and that He "spake as never man spake"? With the realization that He knew all this, so that He could with calm assurance again and again reiterate the fact that "I am he"—the one of whom all Scripture speaks—the story of His trial and crucifixion as related in Psalm 22 and Matthew 27 (for they are marvelously parallel) comes to us with overwhelming force. The wonderful dignity of His calm admission as to His identity and claim even to being the Son of God and the still more wonderful silence ("when he was reviled, reviled not again") are heightened as we realize the knowledge that He must have had from the Scriptures as to who He really was.

It is in the light of the fact that He knew these things that our realization of what it must have cost Him to humble Himself even unto death—the death of the cross—must be measured, if measured it can be. "Who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame." And why? "That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

A LITTLE WHILE

John 16:16; Hebrews 10:37

O cheer thee, Christian, just a little while,
And sorrow, pain, and trials will be o'er.
Look not behind to weary mile on mile.
Despair not at the thought of miles before.
Though dark the vales, though full of thorns the way,
Though steep the hills, hear Jesus softly say:
"A little while."

O cheer thee, Christian, just a little while,
Unspotted from the world, the cross endure.
Let not the tempter thee with arts beguile.
God's grace can keep the heart and conscience pure.
Saved, reconciled, washed white in Calv'ry's flood,
Continue thou in paths the saints have trod,
A little while.

O cheer thee, Christian, just a little while.
His grace sufficient covers all thy need.
Though godless foes His Word and name revile,
To jeering scorn and mockings pay no heed.
They taunted Him, and they will taunt thee, too.
Be brave! Be strong! Fear not what men may do
A little while.

O cheer thee, Christian, just a little while,
Armed with God's Word, still fight the fight of faith.
What though the world on thee contempt should pile
Be faithful still, yea, faithful unto death!
A crown awaits the soldiers of the cross.
What though thy bark in stormy seas must toss
A little while.

O cheer thee, Christian, just a little while,
And endless glory will thy portion be.
Soon will thy weary feet have climbed the stile,
Soon will thine eyes the Father's mansions see!
Kept by His Spirit in His love's embrace,
In strength divine thy pilgrim pathway trace
A little while.

O cheer thee, Christian, just a little while,
And thy ascended Lord will come again.
Just to behold His love-filled, radiant smile,
Will be a rich reward for all thy pain.
And should He tarry till the hour is late,
Then place faith's hand in His, and learn to wait
A little while.—Anna Hoppe.

KEEPIN' COMPANY!

"Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her."—Genesis 29:20.

IT is only a quaint old homely phrase, and when we hear it we sometimes smile, but we seldom frown. Keepin' company! There is a beauty and a fragrance about it that touches the older ones among us like the softly spoken words of a benediction, and our hearts beat a little faster, and our eyes take on a wistful look, and the scroll of Time rolls back and we glimpse a picture that had almost faded from the canvas of the mind—we smile reminiscently again.

Keepin' company! There is nothing but tenderness in those words, nothing but kindness, nothing but joy, nothing but what one takes delight in recalling. The words fall upon our ears.

"Like the rhythm of a half-forgotten song" that once was familiar and very dear. And somehow a little of the sordidness of life ebbs away, a few of our cares take wing, and a few of the heartaches are lessened as we recall a day of youth and joy that now is gone forever.

It is good for us older ones to think of youth and of youth's glad time, and to tune the antennae of our hearts to its glad music—a refrain that radiates from the very source of life and love! To do this brings back a thousand pleasant memories. I wish we might speak more often of "love's young dream"; it would do this sad old world a vast amount of good to be reminded that there is much in life to cherish besides the material things we see and seek—that there are "fruits of the Spirit" and "flowers of the soul" that are richer far than all the golden treasures of the earth!

One of the greatest blessings, and one of the greatest mysteries, that humanity encounters is that suggested to our minds in the beautiful story of Jacob and Rachel. We cannot understand its secret, we cannot fathom its mystery; and yet we know that the thing it describes in such beautiful language is true. It is true today, it has always been true, and it will remain true forever; for it is as much a part of human nature as is the heart that beats in our bosoms.

We will refresh our minds a little concerning this sweet old love story that comes to us out of the distant past.

Jacob's mother was deeply concerned over the future happiness of her son. She realized, as any thoughtful mother would, that his happiness would depend very largely upon the kind of a wife he secured. The country in which they lived was inhabited by an idolatrous race of whom Rebekah's devout heart could not approve. They were not of the same character or religion as that of Isaac and Rebekah. Their family background was altogether different and foreign to that of Jacob's people. Knowing all this, Rebekah feared for the future of her son should he marry into this godless race.

That she thought very deeply on the matter is apparent from the manner in which she approached her husband with regard to it. (O, that more fathers and mothers might freely and prayerfully discuss the marriage problems of their children together!)

"I am weary of my life," said Rebekah to Isaac, "because of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?"

Rebekah foresaw that if Jacob's life were ruined by an unfortunate marriage hers, also, would end in sorrow; for a mother's life is bound up in that of her children, and she rejoices or she suffers with them.

Rebekah's pleading and arguments proved effective with Isaac, the husband who loved her so devotedly, and he commanded Jacob that he should not marry a daughter of Heth. But Isaac's interest did not end with a command, for "Isaac called Jacob and blessed him!" That is, the father called down the blessing of God upon his son, he prayed for him! And under the spirit of that prayer he sent Jacob forth to seek a God-fearing help-mate for life.

How splendidly Jacob succeeded in his quest is familiar to us all. He found a wife for whose sake he was willing to labor, not for seven years only, nor for fourteen years even, but for a lifetime, that he might be blessed with her love, sympathy, and companionship forever!

The success of a young man in securing a wife depends very largely upon the way (Please turn to Page Ten)

The Editor's Prayer

MOST GRACIOUS FATHER, we thank Thee that in a time of spiritual darkness, of moral retrogression, of religious decline, Thou hast not left us without a bright star of eternal hope and promise. May our minds be centered upon our Savior and our hearts set upon His return. Keep us pure and holy in our lives and faithful in our service before Thee, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

The Revolt Against God

UNDER this arresting caption Stanley High, at one time assistant secretary of the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions and then editor of the Christian Herald, brings a scathing indictment against the modern church with regard to its attitude and action toward the social problems of the world in the May number of Harper's Magazine.

In our estimation Mr. High accomplishes at least three important objects in his article that make it of particular interest to our readers. In the first place he presents in unmistakable terms what is generally considered to be the fundamental function of religion in these days. Over against this declaration of purpose he introduces a convincing array of facts to prove that the church has utterly failed to accomplish, or in reality, even to attempt to accomplish its purpose.

This clear analysis of the religious situation would be sufficient in itself to make the article of value to the Christian student, but in addition to this the author has drawn a sharp and somewhat disparaging contrast between the old and new concept of the aim of religious effort. The older view he terms that of "other-worldness," that places its main emphasis upon future reward for present sacrifice and suffering, while the newer form of religious activity finds an outlet in moral, political, and social reform movements of various kinds.

We must admit that if the work of the church is to reform the world it has most sadly failed in the accomplishment of its objective. In every great convention of religious people solemn declarations are made against war, against intemperance, against crime, against crooked politics, against a hundred and one manifestations of evil; and the church pledges itself to enter upon a relentless campaign to eradicate all of these blots from our Christian escutcheon.

And then—then the world moves on as before! The church has spoken, it has denounced and protested, it has resolved and petitioned, it has appointed committees and commissions, it has shown a vast amount of activity—and then it has gone promptly back to sleep! It is not surprising that the world has little else than ridicule for its efforts. The mountain has travailed agonizingly and brought forth a mouse!

Mr. High contends that the church should not revise this modern idea of its duty, but should strive to make its effort more effective. He seems to feel quite sure that the only hope for the world is to be found in an aggressive religious campaign directed against the political rulers of our times. He is strongly opposed to the church returning to its previous "other-worldness" attitude, feeling that it should concern itself with the righting of present-day conditions. The hope of the world to come is apparently dim and unattractive to his practical and evidently materialistic mind. He resents the singing of such hymns as that which follows, a verse of which he quotes in his article:

"The world is very evil,
The times are waxing late,
Be sober and keep vigil,
The judge is at the gate."

Commenting on the remark of a Southern Methodist bishop—"A church is more powerful on its knees than passing resolutions"—Mr. High says, "Certainly there is nothing very powerful about many of the church's current resolutions save, now and then, their terminology." He affirms further that no revival of religion that involves nothing more practical "than a revival of pietism and a resurrection of an escape theology" can possibly "save the day for civilization."

How can thoughtful men who claim to believe in God fail to realize that "our civilization" is altogether rotten and destined to destruction? Why should they wish to perpetuate it, when the Lord is coming to introduce a civilization that is not "ours" but God's? Why must they put their trust in men and in political programs of reform, when all such efforts have failed in the past? Why not devote their attention to the one Christ-sanctioned work of the church, the taking out of a people for God's name?

Death and the Afterwards

IN THESE days many are being greatly disturbed by the thought of death and the condition of those who have passed into the unseen. Many are the books written with the object of helping such, and too often the writers succeed in confusing and misleading their readers. Comparatively few are in a position to see through the fallacies and unscientific positions assumed by writers who accept the traditional creed. If we can in any wise help anyone to a truer conception of the truth as given to us by God in His Word, we shall be amply repaid for our trouble. We warn not to take anything for granted that we say, but to bring every word to the test of Scripture with all prayer for divine light and leading.

We believe, and therefore assert, that God in the Bible most definitely teaches that man is not a spirit-being inhabiting a body temporarily for disciplinary purposes, but a body made alive by the spirit of life. The body is, therefore, an essential element in man's constitution, without which he cannot have any conscious existence either before or after death. It follows from this that the resurrection, a doctrine of the utmost importance in the Scriptures, is an absolute necessity for any existence after death, or, in the case of those who, living when Christ comes, are caught up without dying, for their continuance in life in the ages to come.

Death, not misery, is the threatened punishment of sin. It is this death that our Lord suffered to the full as the Head of mankind. It means the very opposite of all that constitutes life. It is the deprivation of life, not its continuance under any circumstances whatever. The death of Christ has not stopped the death of man, but has altered its outlook for all who are believers in Him. It is not true to say now, as many under the influence of Platonism do, that "there is no death," "I shall not die," and so on. All must die the "first" death save those who are alive at Christ's coming, but as the Lord Jesus told Martha at the grave of Lazarus, "Though he (the believer) die (as he will, the first death), yet shall he live (through resurrection), and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall not die eternally."

The gift of life to man is entirely conditional on obedience and union with the source of life, the "tree of life," the Lord Himself. Eternal life means eternal conscious existence and all that such existence makes possible for redeemed man. None can have eternal existence but those to whom God chooses to give it. Those whom sin brings under punishment will continue just as long as God shall see fit and no longer. Justice and mercy are perfect in Him.

But no sin that is not blotted out of the book of God's remembrance in the blood of the Lamb will escape an appropriate penalty. Let no sinner dream that death will end all and that he will escape divine justice. "The rest of the dead," that is, those not sleeping in Jesus, will be raised for judgment at the end of the millennial reign, judgment that will be sure and unescapable. The Bible is definite enough on this and that the end of the finally impenitent and intractable is that "they shall be destroyed for ever," "burnt up" like chaff, "cease to be," as entirely worthless rubbish. "If the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is therefore good for nothing, but to be cast out, and trodden under foot."

Death itself is to be destroyed, to cease to be (Revelation 21:4). Death is to be cast into the "lake of fire" (Revelation 20:14) for utter destruction, and this is true whatever view of death we take; that is, if death means "eternal misery," then eternal misery is to come to its end in the lake of fire. Is there any escape from this conclusion? But if this be so, then those suffering "eternal misery," if such there be, must either cease to be or be restored. We believe the former to be the truth.

The resurrection to a body spiritualized, but with the same personality, implies that we shall know each other in the after-life. The conditions of that life will no doubt be vastly different from those of our present state, and our knowledge and powers of apprehension will be greatly extended. But we need not fear that the joys of relationship and fellowship that have been enjoyed on earth will be stopped if we are "in Christ." There will be fuller life, not less. Our present life is but an introduction to the higher, and our present relationships will be found to be a preparation for those to which we shall be introduced. At the same time carnality will be entirely excluded.

The question of time need present no difficulty when we consider that time is one of the elements of this world of three dimensions and is not necessarily carried over into

Resurrection

The seed, the insentient seed,
Buried beneath the earth,
Starts from its dusty bed,
Responsive to the voice of spring,
And covers mead and mountain,
Fields and forests, with its life.
Myriads of creatures, too, that lay
As dead as dust in every inch of ground,
Touched by the vernal ray,
Spring from their graves and sport
On beauteous wings in fields of sunnied air.
Shall this be so? Shall plants and worms
Come forth to life again? And O! shall man
Descend into the grave to rise no more?
Shall he,—the master of the world,
Image and offspring of the fountal life,—
Through endless ages sleep in dust?

—Thomas.

higher worlds. Eternity is not merely extended time. That with God "a thousand years are as one day, and one day as a thousand years" can only mean, surely, that He does not reckon as we do. Past, present, and future with us are determined by the revolution of the earth in relation to the sun. Away from the solar system these cannot apply. Even now in this world we know states in which, as in sleep, time is eliminated and inappreciable.

Archbishop Whately has truly said in his Scripture Revelations of a Future State: "The long and dreary interval between death and the Day of Judgment (supposing the intermediate state to be one of profound sleep) does not exist at all save in the imagination. To the party concerned there is no interval whatever, but to each person the moment of closing the eyes in death will be instantly succeeded by the sound of the last trumpet, which shall summon the dead though ages shall have intervened."

Thus there is removed the awfully terrible thought that our departed friends are somewhere in a state of unsatisfied incompleteness, conscious alike of the passing of the years and of the sins, sorrows, and sufferings of those still alive on the earth. The possibility of the imputation of injustice to God for punishing men without trial, that is, sentencing them to "hell" before the judgment day, which is an unavoidable inference on the orthodox view, is also forever put away.—Selected by R. A. Curtis from Resurrection and Other Essays on Man and His Eternal Destiny, by H. Temple Wills.

"Seek, and Ye Shall Find"

By Brayton E. Crandall

---

IT GIVES me pleasure to recall to mind a picture so vivid, so clear and full of hope. I feel that it should be worthy to have a place in the heart and mind of every individual. This picture is taken from Matthew 14:25-31. It is so beautifully planned and so practical in our everyday life that it becomes almost a necessity.

In all of Jesus' teachings He desired to leave an impression upon the minds of His disciples and those He taught, a thought or vision that would be well remembered and passed on from generation to generation, for even our present day use.

On this occasion He desired to come to His disciples walking on the water. It is evident that He wished to show them something of the working power of God. Perhaps He wished to test their faith to find if they had come to realize that He was ever present with them in spirit if not in person.

We find that they were not a people unlike ourselves: they became fearful and cried out in anxiety, saying, "It is a spirit."

Jesus, hearing their cries, spoke to them: "It is I, your Lord. Be of good cheer; be not afraid."

Then Peter, feeling a desire to meet his Lord walking on the water as He did, but not making any allowance for any difficulties that might arise, answered, saying, "If it be thou, Lord, bid me come unto thee walking on the water."

Immediately Jesus said, "Come."

Straightway Peter came down from the ship and walked on the water to go to Jesus; but when the wind became boisterous, he became afraid, and, beginning to sink, he cried, "Lord, save me!"

Immediately Jesus stretched forth His hand and caught him, saying, "Oh ye of little faith, why didst thou doubt?"

Why did Peter fail to reach the end he desired? If Peter had gained the faith and realized the power that was before him, any difficulty that might have arisen should have been overcome. Peter's idea was wonderful, but his lack of faith allowed the material things of this world to overcome him.

Had Peter accomplished his desire, yet being weak in the faith, then the beauty of this picture would have faded. It would have made a way in which every individual, regardless of his aim in life, could bear his cross with ease. It would have destroyed the whole plan of God's salvation. It would have opened up the Scripture like a story in a magazine to be admired for the time being and soon forgotten, thus bringing about the destruction of all mankind. We thank God that it was not so.

We find that the worth while works of this life are not accomplished with little effort. Tribulations arise to mar our pathway; we are tested and tried to find whether we are of the faith. If so be we are not, then we can expect the same disappointment Peter received.

To live is to desire; and what could we desire more than to seek God and His kingdom? We read in John 14:6 Jesus' statement: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Again we read in the fourteenth verse: "If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it."

Let us, then, put on the full armor of Christ, serving Him with every effort within us, that we faint not as Peter did. Let us not take for granted that because the Lord saved Peter on this one occasion He is going to save us because we get part way there and fail.

We read in Galatians 6:7: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." What shall we say then; shall we stand before the Lord on the day of judgment, bowing our heads to bitter remorse and defeat, a day when there shall be "weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth"?

The Spirits In Prison

By George B. Alldridge

"By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison."—1 Peter 3:19.

WHAT a debt of gratitude we owe to the thinkers of the past centuries. One I have in mind: Galileo. Galileo was born in 1564. He was said to be the founder of the science of dynamics. In his day he met with a great deal of opposition from the fathers of the church. They taught that of two weights of unequal weight falling from a height the heavier would travel the faster. Galileo denied this, and to prove the truth of his theory from an upper gallery of the Leaning Tower of Pisa he dropped two unequal weights, which, as all physicists know, struck the ground at the same time. The church dignitaries who were present to observe the experiment felt so chagrined and humiliated that they forbade any publicity being made, thus exposing their gross ignorance.

All my readers recall Galileo's experience before the Board of Cardinals when he was called upon to repeat his recantation of his belief in the teachings of Copernicus respecting the movements of the heavenly bodies. It is said that as he rose from his knees, he muttered, "Eppur si muove"—"It moves, nevertheless."

It may surprise my readers to know that the text quoted (1 Peter 3:19) is responsible, according to the teachings of the religious authorities who persecuted Galileo, for the belief in the natural immortality of the soul more than any other text in the Bible, except that in Luke 23:43.

Before me I have a splendid copy of the Douay Version containing annotations, references, and a historical and chronological index, published with the approbation of His Eminence James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, Maryland. In quoting this text and annotations upon the text I am, therefore, stating the source for their belief.

In 1 Thessalonians 2:15 I read, "Who killed the Lord Jesus, and the prophets." So Jesus died like the prophets. In 1 Corinthians 15:4: "And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the scriptures." Acts 2:31, 32: "Foreseeing this, he spoke of the resurrection of Christ. For neither was he left in hell, neither did his flesh see corruption. This Jesus hath God raised again, whereof all we are witnesses." We find, then, that Jesus was killed, buried, and raised again from the dead.

We shall now consider their view. Luke 23:43: "And

The following exposition of this somewhat difficult passage, while presented in a more controversial manner than usually appears in our paper, is so thought-provoking and unusual that we publish it without alteration, suggesting that the reader will consider it carefully and then draw his own conclusions concerning the correctness of the view taken by the author.

Jesus said unto him: Amen I say to thee, this day thou shalt be with me in paradise." At the foot of the page this note is appended: "Chap. 23. Ver. 43. In paradise. That is, in the happy state of rest, joy, and peace everlasting. Christ was pleased, by a special privilege, to reward the faith and confession of the penitent thief, with a full discharge of all his sins, both as to the guilt and punishment; and to introduce him immediately after death into the happy society of the saints, whose limbo, that is, the place of their confinement, was now made a paradise of our Lord's going thither."

We will now quote 1 Peter 3:19 and the comment on this verse: "In which also coming he preached to those spirits that were in prison." "Chap. 3. Ver. 19. Spirits that were in prison. See here a proof of a third place, or middle state of souls; for these spirits in prison, to whom Christ went to preach, after his death, were not in heaven; nor yet in the hell of the damned; because heaven is no prison; and Christ did not go to preach to the damned."

So we find according to this testimony that during a period of three days Christ was killed, buried, in hell, in paradise happy and diffusing joy among the saints, and in prison preaching to departed souls. And then the climax upon the third day: God raised Him from the dead!

Acts 2:24 reads: "Whom God raised up, having loosed the sorrows of hell, as it was impossible that he should be holden of it." The comment on this verse reads: "Verse 24. Having loosed the sorrows, etc. Having overcome the grievous pains of death and all the powers of hell."

Jesus said, "And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

Brethren, always in your daily prayer incorporate thanksgiving for the knowledge of the truth.

The religious world should be thankful to James Moffatt for his translation of the Holy Bible. I read 1 Peter 3:19, and it all becomes clear: "It was in the Spirit that Enoch also went and preached to the imprisoned spirits who had disobeyed at the time when God's patience held out during the days of Noah." A footnote explains why "Enoch" was omitted in the text of the Authorized Version which has caused so much confusion among theologians.

So we read verse 18 and see how clear it all is. "Christ himself died for sins, once for all, a just man for unjust men, that he might bring us near to God; in the flesh he was put to death but he came to life in the Spirit. It was in the Spirit that Enoch . . . . ."

We go back to Genesis 6:3, for this is what Peter is writing about: "And the Lord said, My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh; yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." How did God strive with man? By His Spirit through the preaching of Enoch, of course.

"Enoch walked with God." In Amos 3:3 we read, "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" Hence, then, Enoch must have agreed with God, or he could not have walked with Him. The prisoners to whom Noah and Enoch preached are now in the same condition as those described in Isaiah 42:5-16, especially verse seven: "To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house."

Paul in speaking of the operation of God's Spirit says in 1 Corinthians 12:4-6: "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all."

So the Spirit in Jesus preached the kingdom of God; and in that same, or by the same, Spirit He came to life from the dead. The same Spirit in Enoch and Noah warned of God's coming judgment by a flood.

Do my readers realize what extraordinary faith was manifested upon the part of Enoch and Noah? Genesis 2:6 reads, "But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground."

To these antediluvians it must have seemed absurd to preach that God would destroy the world by a flood. It had never rained, at least no one had ever seen it; and the idea of building a ship was preposterous. Besides, who knew anything about the science of displacement, whether this thing would float or no. No one had ever seen a ship or even a boat. Probably Noah had his labor troubles, too, to contend with, only he and his three sons doing the work of constructing the ark, which took one hundred twenty years to build.

We are preaching of the coming judgment and warning men that Peter wrote, "The ark by which only a few souls, eight in all, were brought safely through the water. Baptism, the counterpart of that, saves you today (not the mere washing of dirt from the flesh but the prayer for a clean conscience before God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ who is at God's right hand—for he went to heaven after angels, authorities, and powers celestial had been made subject to him."

Some characters in Scripture are used as types. Enoch is one of them; so we read, "And Enoch walked with God; and he was not, for God took him."—Genesis 5:22. Enoch died like all other members of the human family. In Hebrews 11:5 it says, "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God."

Jesus gives us the key to unlock this mystery in John 8:51. We read, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." Enoch was translated (that is, set over) that he should not see death. What death? The death, of course, which for one hundred twenty years he had been preaching, was to come upon the world of unrighteousness. It could not mean natural death, for "and he was not" is also involved in Psalm 32:31. Jeremiah 31:15; Matthew 12:18; and John 3:13 shut out the thought that he was taken to heaven. Hebrews 11:13 includes Enoch with the others mentioned.

But when we consider Enoch as a type of the saints who are living just previous to the time which is about to be revealed (Daniel 12:1), then it is all clear. Enoch kept the sayings of God, or walked with Him; hence, he did not see death in like manner as Jesus says that those who are living today, if they keep His sayings, "shall never see death" nor be carried over into the world to come (Hebrews 2:5). All must die as the Scriptures say. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the firstfruits: afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming."

THREE DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS

---

THAT the death and burial of Christ did not occur on Friday as is generally supposed is now claimed by many. Dr. R. A. Torrey, in Hard Problems of the Bible, says, "The Lord Jesus, then, died on Wednesday. Just as the next day was to begin at sunset (the Jewish days begin at sunset), Jesus was buried. He was in the sepulchre Wednesday night and Thursday (one day and one night), Thursday night and Friday (a second day and second night), Friday night and Saturday (a third day and third night). Just as the first day of the week drew on at sunset Christ arose, having been in the sepulchre seventy-two hours, exactly three days of twenty-four hours. The next morning the grave was found empty.

"The incidental proofs that it was Wednesday and not Friday that Christ died are so numerous that it would take a volume to expound them properly. . . . ."

"It is remarkable how many prophetic and typical passages of the Old Testament are fulfilled, and how many seeming discrepancies in the Gospel narratives are straightened out when once we understand that the Lord Jesus died on Wednesday and not on Friday. The writer has held this view for years, but a book recently published (Three Prophetic Days, Wm. Frederick), maintains the same view with such force of argument that many reviewers who have held to the traditional view have been forced to admit that the argument was unanswerable."—Selected.

GEHENNA

By Harry A. Sheets

"Fear Him who can destroy both soul and body in Gehenna."—Matthew 10:28, Moffatt.

TO THE south and west of Jerusalem lies the "valley of the son of Hinnom." The Hebrews called the valley "Ghi-Hinnom," and at a later date the Greeks called it "Gehenna." This valley is important to us only as its history helps us to understand Israel and the New Testament. In this last capacity it is very important. We cannot fully understand the teachings of Christ without knowing something about the history of this valley.

When Israel came to Palestine, it found the Canaanites using this valley for their worship of Baal—we should say Moloch. It was here that fires were kept burning night and day. The worshipers forced their children to pass through these fires, and we learn that the Hebrews did the same thing with their children when they accepted the worship of Moloch. Manassah, king of Israel, "caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom." Israel continued this abomination until King Josiah stopped such worship and then desecrated the valley by burning dead bodies in the fires. Pollution by dead bodies was the worst pollution known to the Hebrews so that it was not strange that Josiah took this means of breaking up the worship of Moloch. Israel then started using the valley for a garbage dump.

Fires were kept burning night and day to destroy the offal. The fire would smolder deep down just as it does in the city dumps today. This fire was not put out by rain and in time became known as unquenchable fire. Portions of refuse not reached by the fire was destroyed by worms. Thus all refuse was eventually destroyed by the unquenchable fire and the ever-present (sometimes called undying) worm, and so Gehenna became associated in the Hebrew mind as the symbol of complete destruction, especially if fire were the agency used.

Under the old Jewish law many crimes were punishable by death. As time went on, it became a rather common practice to burn the bodies of executed criminals in the Gehenna fire. This was considered a greater disgrace than the death itself.

Jerusalem was still using the valley of Hinnom as a garbage dump in the days of Jesus, and there is little doubt but that Jesus saw the smoke of the Gehenna fires many times as He labored about Jerusalem. It is not surprising that Jesus made reference to Gehenna in His teachings. The Bible records eleven times in which our Master used the word Gehenna. In every instance it has been translated "hell," and it was used as a warning of the fate of the ungodly and unrighteous. We will consider the texts in which Christ used Gehenna.

In contrasting the teaching of the old law with the new

Jesus said: "But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of the judgment (lowest court): and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council (Sanhedrin, national supreme court): but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of Gehenna fire."—Matthew 5:22. Later He taught His disciples to "fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna."—Matthew 10:28. (See also Luke 12:5.) It will be noticed from this text that Gehenna is a place of destruction for both soul and body.

Jesus pronounced eight woes upon the scribes and Pharisees and in each case gave His reason for so doing. His reason for the third woe was: "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of Gehenna than yourselves." Then He adds: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers! how can ye escape the damnation (judgment, or condemnation) of Gehenna?"—Matthew 23:15, 33.

On another occasion Jesus taught: "If thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than, having two hands, to go into Gehenna, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than, having two feet, to be cast into Gehenna, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than, having two eyes, to be cast into Gehenna fire: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched."—Mark 9:43-48. (See also Matthew 5:29, 30; 18:9.)

Jesus taught that the wicked would be completely destroyed and not preserved in agony or torture in hell (Gehenna). This makes the teachings of Jesus harmonize with those of the prophets and apostles. David taught that "the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."—Psalm 37:20. Malachi adds: "For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts."—Malachi 4:1-3.

Paul wrote to the Thessalonians and told them that Jesus was coming again "in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power."—2 Thessalonians 1:8, 9.

John, on the Isle of Patmos, in a vision saw the final judgment scene and has left us a record of what happened.

He said: "The fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death."—Revelation 21:8. In other words John saw the final Gehenna and from his description we can see how accurately Jesus taught the Jews when He referred to the Gehenna fires burning in the valley of the son of Hinnom. We are sure the Jews could understand that destruction was the end of all who would live ungodly.—Gospel Searchlight.

Isaiah's Prophecy Fulfilled

MORE than two thousand years ago Isaiah prophesied that there would be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria and predicted an era of prosperity which would some day come to these lands. It is interesting, indeed, to note how this prophecy is being fulfilled. The prophecy: "In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria; and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria; and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land; whom the Lord of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance."—Isaiah 19:23-25.

Today the highway from Egypt to Assyria, predicted by Isaiah, is an actuality, although it is only within the past year that the final link in the transportation system from Cairo to Bagdad has been completed. Truly, the foregoing of this chain of transportation has been one of romance, prophecy, and history.

Prior to the World War the only link in the chain was the short-line railroad from Cairo to the Suez Canal. The Turkish attacks on the canal and the succeeding campaigns of the English Armies from Suez up through Palestine made the building of a railroad from El Quantara to Haifa one of major importance. Its rate of construction, of course, depended upon the progress made by the English troops, and most of the time the rail head was only a few miles behind the advancing army. Many difficulties were encountered, including the terrible sandstorms, the guerrilla warfare carried on by local sheiks, and the scarcity of water. However, the railroad was completed as far as Gaza for the Palestine campaigns of 1916-1917 in which the Turks were driven back into their own territory, thus ending their long reign of terror in the Near East.

After the war much reconstruction work necessarily had to be done and many separate states were set up, all of which, with the exception of Syria, were under British control. With the railroad completed from Cairo to Haifa, it remained for the motor truck, one of transportation's newest tools, to finally fulfill the prophecy of Isaiah by connecting the two sections, Egypt and Palestine (Israel), with Iraq, which state contains the major portion of ancient Assyria. In fact, the ancient city of Assur, capital and birthplace of the Assyrian race, is only about sixty miles west of modern Kirkuk, on the road to Haditha; and now, where Sargon and Sennacherib once led their fierce Assyrian warriors in the conquest of the West, a new type of history is being made, one of industry rather than of war.

Since last July a Wisconsin boy, driving a big FWD truck, has been traveling across this cradle of civilization, helping to build the forty million dollar pipe line of the Iraq Petroleum Company. This modern ship of the desert, with its four-wheel trailer, is hauling from twenty to thirty tons of steel plates and equipment per trip. It makes the 675 mile run from Haifa to Bagdad in from two to three days, depending on the number of cargo changes to be made, and each trip across the desert helps to make the road more permanent. It is assured that with improved economic conditions there will be a high type road paralleling the pipe line from Kirkuk to the sea at Haifa.

Inasmuch as each of these ancient kingdoms is now a well established nation, though under a different name, all are under mandate to England and freedom of worship is permitted to all creeds and races. Prosperity is also returning to these lands of ruins, and the oil deposits from which Noah secured the pitch used in building the ark are now being pumped from the earth's crust and refined for use throughout the world. These lands, with their increased wealth, are now supporting from two to three times the population of fifty years ago, Egypt alone having more than trebled her population in the past fifty years. So it has come to pass that there is a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, that Israel (now Palestine) is a separate kingdom on a par with its neighbors, and that a new prosperity has come to these lands, making them "a blessing in the midst of the earth."—The Defender.

Prayer: Believing and Receiving

By Charles W. Howe

PRAYER is a very potent factor in the success of individuals according to Bible teachings. The promise is definite and emphatic. Matthew 21:22: "And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Many people do not realize the truth of this statement; they do not receive. This does not affect the truthfulness of the promise, for many people ask without believing.

We read in 1 John 5:14, "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us." And we may know some of the things that are according to His will. Jesus taught His disciples to pray for the kingdom of God, for daily bread, for deliverance and forgiveness (Matthew 6:9-13). We are told to ask for wisdom (James 1:5) and for health (James 5:15). We need not doubt, therefore, concerning God's willingness. He has told us things that we may ask for and has instructed us to "ask, and ye shall receive."

Our attitude toward others is an important factor in prayer life, however, for selfish asking brings no response. We read in James 4:3, "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." The word lust means desire; and so, if we ask that we may consume it upon our lusts, we are thinking of our own desires only. In other words, "Ye ask and receive not because you ask selfishly." The real blessing of prayer comes when we ask with the thought that we may be more helpful to humanity. Unselfishness is an essential factor for answered prayer.

Faith, or belief, is essential also. We may indeed believe and doubt not; for we read in 1 John 5:15, "And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." This means assurance of present fulfillment, not something to happen sometime in the future. It means that if we fully believe God is answering even as we ask.

Do our prayers really ring true? Do we plead with God to give us what He has promised? Pleading involves doubt, and doubt dissolves faith. Can we not pray a present tense prayer of assurance? Can we not say to God, "I know that Thou art doing it now, for Thou hast promised that in asking, we do receive; that we have the petitions which we desire of Thee"? Such a prayer impresses the subconscious mind that the desired thing is even now being received. And so affirmative prayer has a psychological effect on the one praying which is necessary in bringing results.

Jesus prayed the affirmative prayer: "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And I knew that thou hear-est me always."—John 11:41, 42. David prayed such a prayer in Psalm 41:12: "Thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and settest me before thy face for ever." The twenty-third Psalm is really a prayer in the form of a direct affirmation. "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever."

With full assurance that we receive with the asking, the Lord's Prayer might well be uttered thus: "Our Father, which fill the heavens, and so art operating even in me, Thy name is holy. Not only will Thy kingdom come so that Thy will may be fully done in earth as it is done in heaven, but Thou art even now working out a portion of this in me. Thou art even now providing for my temporal needs, and art doing it abundantly. Thou art forgiving me even as I am forgiving my fellows. Thou art not leaving me in difficulty, but art delivering me from evil. I am sure of this, for the kingdom and the power and the glory are Thine forever. Amen."

The question has often been asked, "Won't God give to us just the same if we do not pray? Does prayer change God?" Of course not, to both questions. God is always willing to give if we ask Him. He has told us to "ask, and it shall be given unto you." Prayer changes us, and not God. It puts us in a receptive mood. It puts us in such a mental condition that we can receive. If we never pray, our faith is not developed, and prayer is essential to faith development. Definite affirmative prayer stimulates one's faith. You will remember how Jesus said, "According to your faith, be it said unto you."

We need not question God's power, for we read in Ephesians 3:20 that He "is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us." Did you notice the import of that statement? There is a power working in us through which God answers prayer. "God, I recognize Thy power working in me, producing in and through me the proper proportion of health and success necessary to the work Thou hast for me. Thou art doing this in me because I unselfishly desire to benefit the world." The power is in us. We can see, then, the basis of the power in that the subconscious mind can be touched with prayer, thereby producing faith and accomplishing definite results.

I like the affirmative prayer, for it is both scientific and reverential. It recognizes not only the method of producing faith, but the divine mind working within us as well. It is the divine mind working within us which accomplishes the good, after all. The affirmation of belief is simply a means to an end. The means and the divine power within us must be recognized to accomplish the greatest good. The divine mind knows no limit, being hindered only by our attitude toward it. Let us remember, then, that "all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."

NAPOLEON'S TESTIMONY

BEAUTERNE, a Roman Catholic, published in 1843 some table talk of Napoleon I, as reported by Count Monteholon, his confidant. One extract has often been misquoted. It should read thus:

One evening, at St. Helena, the conversation was animated. The subject treated was an exalted one: the divinity of Jesus Christ. Napoleon defended the truth of this doctrine with the arguments and eloquence of a man of genius, with something also of the native faith of the Corsican and the Italian. To the objections of one of the speakers, who seemed to see in the Savior only a sage, an illustrious philosopher, a great man, the emperor replied:

"I know men, and I tell you that Jesus Christ is not a man. Superficial minds may see some resemblance between Christ and the founders of empires, the conquerors, and the gods of other religions. That resemblance does not exist. Anyone who has a true knowledge of things and experience of men, will cut short the question as I do. Which of us, contemplating in the spirit of criticism the different religions of the nations cannot look their authors in the face and say, 'No, you are neither gods nor the agents of the Deity. You have no mission from heaven; you are rather the missionary of lies. Assuredly you have been kneaded out of the same clay as other mortals?'"

I see in Lycurgus, Numa, Confucius, and Mohammed, merely legislators; but nothing that reveals Deity. On the contrary, I see many relations between them and myself. I make out resemblances, weaknesses, and common errors which assimilate them to myself and humanity. Their faculties are those which I possess; but it is different with Christ. Everything about Him astonishes me; His spirit surprises me; and His will confounds me. Between Him and anything of this world, there is no possible term of comparison; He is really a being apart. His ideas and emotions, the truth with which He announces, His methods of producing conviction, can be explained neither by the organization of man, nor by the nature of things."—H. W. Jackson in Messiah's Advocate.

KEEPIN' COMPANY!

he goes about it. If he is looking for beauty of face and figure, he can find it easily, for there are many beautiful girls in the world. The only wonder is that all girls are not beautiful in these days, when it is so easy to buy "that school-girl complexion" in a bar of scented soap; those ruby lips in a three-inch stick of crayon; and those lovely curving eyelashes in a pencil at a ten-cent store! Yes, the young man of today can find many a beautiful painted picture of a girl walking down the street of any city who will be glad to smoke his cigarettes and allow him to take her to a dance or theater!

But, somehow, we do not think of that kind of a girl when we speak of keepin' company! That sweet old phrase goes deeper than paints and lotions can reach. It passes down into the heart and is entangled with the strong and lasting cords of purest affection, cords that vibrate to the appeal of manliness and truth, cords that time and circumstance cannot break because they are divine!

Those who would really keep company for life must have something within themselves that is worth keeping! They must possess a treasure that never grows dim with the passage of the years, but which continues to brighten under the rough friction of life.

That Jacob possessed such a treasure is evident from the fact that God met him on the way as he went to find a wife! It was while he was on that wonderful journey that Jehovah called to Jacob as he slept with his head upon a stone, and said, "Behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, . . . for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of."

Surely any young woman could trust her future to a man who walked as close to God as that! And any young man would be safe in choosing as his companion a girl like Rachel, who sought first for manliness and love in the heart of the one whom she would make her mate for life!

The whole story of Jacob and Rachel, the secret of their life-long happiness, is summed up in this: "Jacob loved Rachel!" There, I say, is the secret of happy married life—mutual love, sympathy, and devotion! How quickly the years fly when love rules, when understanding governs in the home! Keepin' company through life! Ten years pass over their heads—they mount to twenty—thirty—and even half a century comes and goes and "these twain" are still bound together in unbroken unity and in deathless love!

Such is the ideal God has set before every young man and every young woman who goes forth to seek a mate! Ponder it well, young people! Think of it seriously! Pray over it devotedly! Ask God to lead you to her, young man; pray that God may lead him to you, young woman, that you may go on through the years joyfully keepin' company until the Master comes.—Editor.

WHAT DO NUMBERS INDICATE?

NUMBERS have such an important place in the understanding of types, symbols, and prophecy that their possible significance may be of some interest to Berean classes. The following thoughts were gleaned from Frank E. Gaebelein's work, Exploring the Bible.

Number one is a prime number, naturally signifying the beginning, sovereignty, creation, the first person.

Number two is twofold good and evil. The good implies covenant, help, salvation; the evil implies division, strife, separation, as two is a divisible number.

Number three is a number of manifestation; or of three dimensions, height, depth, and breadth; three forms, solid, liquid, and gaseous. It reveals the world about us and the threefold plane of man, body, mind, and spirit.

Number four is a number of further divisibility. It stands for the weakness of man and indicates trial, testing, and experience, derived from the fact that the earth is the scene of testing.

Number five—4 plus 1, or earthly (man's weakness—4) plus 1 (divine power)—stands for responsibility, showing the world of man under God's government. Man's five senses and the five projections on his hand show his responsibility.

Number six is generally of evil significance, shown by addition, thus: 4 (man's weakness) plus 2 (division, strife) equals 6 (manifestation of evil). Or multiply: 3 (manifestations) times 2 (division and strife) equals 6, a manifestation of sin and evil. For example, note Revelation 13:18 and Daniel 3:1.

Number seven indicates fullness, perfection, completion: 4 (weakness of man) plus 3 (divine manifestation) equals 7. Seven is the keynote of the Book of Revelation.

Number eight. As seven is the end of a series, number eight is a beginning. The eighth day indicates the first day of the new week. The eighth note in music is the first note of a higher octave.

Ten means responsibility intensified: the ten commandments to Israel, the ten virgins of the Lord's parable, and the tithe of one tenth. Five (responsibility) times 2 (covenant, help) equals 10.

Number twelve indicates God's divine accomplishment:

4 (man's weakness) times 3 (divine manifestation) equals 12. The new Jerusalem is described as having twelve gates, twelve foundations, and twelve furlongs on each side. Then there are the twelve tribes of Israel and the twelve apostles.

Number forty shows full judgment and testing. Thus: 4 (man's weakness) plus 1 (divine power) equals 5 (responsibility). Five (responsibility) times 2 (covenant help) equals 10 (responsibility) times 4 (man's weakness) equals 40. For example, the 40 days of deluge, 40 years of Israel in the wilderness, the three divisions of 40 years each in the life of Moses, and the 40 days of Jesus' temptation.

—D. G. Harvey, Kokomo, Indiana.

A person who remained outside the church, who was engrossed in material affairs to the exclusion of religion, was originally said to be "pro fanum," before the temple. Hence our word "profane."

THE SONG OF DAVID

He sang of God, the mighty source
Of all things, the stupendous force
On which all strength depends:
From whose right arm, beneath whose eyes
All period, power, and enterprise
Commences, reigns, and ends.

The world, the clustering spheres He made,
The glorious light, the soothing shade,
Dale, champaign, grove, and hill;
The multitudinous abyss,
Where secrecy remains in bliss,
And wisdom hides her skill.

Tell them, I AM, Jehovah said
To Moses: while Earth heard in dread,
And smitten to the heart
At once, above, beneath, around,
All Nature, without voice or sound,
Replied, "O Lord, THOU ART."

"Give Me Thine Heart"

A GIFT FOR JESUS

ALL of my little friends of this page have many other friends. Some of your friends are your own age, and some are grown-up friends. Some are closer friends than others.

Isn't a real friend just about the dearest possession we have! If we are looking forward to an especially happy event the very first thing we want to do is to share our pleasure with our friend. And if we have had a real disappointment, telling our friend all about it helps a lot, doesn't it?

Besides giving us so much joy, friendship teaches us many things. It shows us how to be kind and loving and helpful. For there is no greater joy than doing something for our friends.

Away up in Michigan I have some little friends whom I love very dearly, and I know that they love me. And the reason I know it is because there is nothing they love more to do than to give me a little gift or do something nice for me.

The way we learn to have Jesus for our Friend is by having a real, true friend among the people we know. As you grow older you will find yourself wanting to do things for Jesus just as you do for your earthly friends, only even more so.

In our lesson for today we have a beautiful story of one of Jesus' friends and what she did for Him. Each one of you turn to the book of John, chapter twelve, and read the first three verses.

Can you see in your mind the picture of Jesus among these friends? One of those at the table was Lazarus, the brother of Mary and Martha. Only a short time before, this dearly loved brother of theirs had been still and cold in death. He could not speak to his sisters, nor do any of the many helpful things he used to do for them. And then, what wonderful thing did Jesus do for them?

Now do you see why they all loved Jesus so dearly and why the thoughtful Mary wanted to show her love for Him in some special way? No doubt Mary had denied herself many things in order to buy this costly perfume, just as you do when you give a gift to your dearest friend.

It must have warmed the heart of Jesus and made Him very, very happy to know He had such a friend. And especially so because He knew that soon He must endure such cruel suffering and die.

And now, you ask, what can we do to show Jesus that we are His friends? Turn over a few pages in your Bibles and read verses twelve, thirteen, and fourteen, of the fifteenth chapter of John. See how many of you can find these references without any help.

Jesus' words are very clear, aren't they? He says that if we do what He commands, we are His friends. And He commands us to love one another. It seems simple enough, doesn't it?

The reason His commands are so simple is because loving others makes all the difference in the world in our lives. It takes out all those things that are wrong and puts in their place everything that is good. Let's each one try it and see for ourselves.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Boys, write a story from Mark 13:33-37, telling about a wealthy man going away and leaving his estate with his servants. Show how each servant should be busy, not knowing the exact day of his master's return. Then compare this master to our Master, Jesus, who is away and has promised to return, but has not told us the day we may expect Him. Your story will be a parable. See how good a parable you can write.

Girls, write the story found in Mark 14:1-9. Do not forget to tell about the reward Jesus promised Mary for her loving deed. All of you, boys and girls, draw pictures to illustrate your stories. Then copy these verses:

"Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee;
Take my hands, and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.

"Take my feet, and let them be Swift and beautiful for Thee;
Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only for my King.

"Take my lips, and let them be Filled with messages for Thee;
Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withhold.

"Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow with ceaseless praise;
Take my intellect, and use
Every power as Thou shalt choose."

JESUS AND HIS FRIENDS

Mark 13:1 to 14:9

Devotional Reading: John 15:9-17

GOLDEN TEXT

Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15:14.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus and His Friends.

Aim: To impress upon the pupil the need for watchfulness and prayer with reference to the Lord's coming, and to be willing to do all we can for Him.

Basic Truth: "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy."—Luke 21:36.

I. Jesus Admonishes to Watchfulness and Prayer. (Mark 13:33-37.) Watchfulness for the coming of the Lord and prayer for guidance and for deliverance from sin are inseparable. The dangers that face the faithful disciple as the time for Jesus' return draws near are ever growing greater. Prophecy is being fulfilled more rapidly than ever before, and many of these assuring "signs" will be missed unless one is constantly on the alert for them.

II. Jesus' Enemies Fear the People. (Mark 14:1, 2.) Sin is always cowardly. Those who plan unrighteous deeds attempt them in the darkness to avoid detection. "Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." When Jesus, "the light of the world," makes His glorious appearance, "then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn," for they will realize that with His coming He "will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the heart."—1 Corinthians 4:5. Truth and righteousness have nothing to fear from the light. The enemies of Jesus realized that they had no real accusation to bring against Him and were afraid to arrest Him in the presence of the multitude who had witnessed His good works.

III. Jesus Commends the Giving of One's Best. (Mark 14:3-9.) Under the old dispensation God did not require an offering of the same commercial value from each individual. But in every case such offerings had to be of the best quality; the finest the worshiper possessed was alone acceptable to the Lord. A mother discouraged her son from entering the ministry of the Church of God because "it would be such a waste of his splendid talents." She knew the world would offer more in the open market for her son's ability; and so urged him to sell his life to the highest bidder that offered material reward. One never loses by devoting his most precious possession—life—to the service of the Lord.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

1. Watchfulness: (a) watch for the Lord's return; (b) render faithful stewardship; (c) time of coming unknown. Undoubtedly Jesus could not have manifested His friendship toward His friends in a finer way than to point out to them the need of being watchful and ready for His second coming "without sin unto salvation." The hope of the church and the world centers around and in this event. His return means the inauguration of a government of righteousness and justice throughout which peace will flow as waters from a fount. Deliverance from sin and its attendant evils will result. His admonition to watchfulness was intended for all. "And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."

During this period of "prayer and watch" our stewardship must be unquestionable. We have a work to do. The time to do this work is during the day of work, for "the night cometh, when no man can work." Man has been endowed with certain gifts and talents to be used for the Son of God and His glory, and in rendering faithful stewardship these powers must be in constant service with an eye single to God's glory. The day when we must render account is near at hand. It is but to deceive ourselves to think that we can in any way escape giving account of our services. The parable of Luke 19:12-26 emphasizes this truth. Day by day we are writing the verdict that will be read to us in the day of reckoning.

2. Doing good: (a) that which is spent on Christ is not wasted; (b) do not interfere with a good work; (c) faithful service will be remembered. The anointing of Christ with the ointment was not a waste, it was a humble service never to be forgotten and which will be rewarded. Giving to Christ and His work is not a waste; it is laying up treasures for the kingdom of God. Every good work done in the name of the Lord will be remembered. Are we doing this good work?—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

One's friends are those whom he loves. If Christ's disciples did the things that He asked of them, naturally it would draw them near to Him, and He would love them; therefore, they would be His friends. Christ's friends meant so much to Him that He laid down His life for them; for He said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Do you want to be a friend of Jesus? Do you want to be one for whom He gave His life? If so, simply do the things that He requires of us. They are on record; hunt them up and find out just what is required of one to be a friend of Jesus and come under the blood shed on Calvary.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

Every Christian wants to be a friend to Jesus, and he wants Jesus to be a friend to him. Jesus told how to accomplish both. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." What was the commandment given by Jesus? "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you,"

In the judgment scene pictured in Matthew 25:31-46, blessing or punishment is meted on the basis of treatment bestowed upon Christ's brethren. "Then the king will say to those at his right, 'Come, my Father's blessed ones, inherit the kingdom prepared for you . . . for I was hungry, and you gave me food; I was thirsty, and you gave me drink; I was a stranger, and you gave me welcome; I was ill-clad, and you clothed me; I was ill, and you visited me; I was in prison, and you came to see me.'"—Weymouth. In astonishment the righteous ones asked when they had done these things. The King replied: "In truth I tell you that in so far as you rendered such service to one of the humblest of these brethren, you rendered them to myself."—Weymouth.

When the King announced the punishment and the reason for it to the "goat" class, they asked: "Lord, when did we see thee hungry, or thirsty, or a stranger, or ill, or in prison, and did not come to serve thee? Then He will reply, 'In truth I tell you that in so far as you withheld such service from one of the humblest of these, you withheld them from me!'"—Weymouth.—H. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

History tells us that after a great earthquake in Athens a raging fire swept all that region. When the fire had died down workmen began to clear away the ashes, and underneath they found valuable remains of silver, all unsuspected and undiscovered before the fire. Thus it is often with people whom we may know perhaps for a long time. Hidden away in their characters may be something that is very fine of which we are not aware. So it was with the woman in our lesson story. In her Simon saw only a great sinner; but Jesus, looking beneath the surface, saw a repentant heart, eager to show her love for Him and to serve Him.

Association with the highest and noblest brings out the best that is in us. We grow to be like those with whom we mingle most. Discuss in class the results of friendship, contrasting friendship with the world and friendship with Jesus and true followers of His. By what standards does the world test friendship? What is Jesus' test? (See golden text.) What does James say about the one who would be a friend of the world? James 4:4. Now read John 15:15. The privilege of being friends of Jesus consists in knowing the things that Jesus has learned from His Father, revealed to us in His Book. If we would be a close friend of His, then, we will study that Book and follow its teachings.

Special problem: Enumerate some of the things a friend of Jesus will do as found in the sermon on the mount. Choose one of these for yourself for the coming week.—M. G.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

Pastor C. E. Lapp writes most encouragingly of the work at Eldorado, Ill. He feels that it is going forward along all lines, both spiritual and material. His letter is in part as follows:

"Since I was there a month ago, the Sunday school has grown to such an extent that it became necessary to organize another class. The attendance has reached as high as fifty, which we consider very good for this community. The interest of people on the outside is increasing. The congregation is planning to redecorate the church building and to improve the grounds."

Bro. Lapp then submits the following more formal report:

"The monthly visits of the pastor to the church at Eldorado usually result in a surprise for him in one way or another. This time a number of agreeable surprises awaited his arrival. Every one seems to have taken a new hold on the work, and it is going forward. Since the last visit the Ladies' Aid has had a choir loft erected, and has purchased an attractive pulpit chair. On May 7 the attendance at Sunday school reached 63. A steady growth is what we want, and we feel much encouraged."

"We are planning a 'work day' for the latter part of May, at which time we will clean and redecorate the interior of the church and fence in a place to park cars near the church building. Attractive churches as well as attractive homes make one feel welcome in them, and create a spiritual atmosphere that would otherwise be absent. Remember us in your prayers."

TO OUR BROTHERHOOD

We have disposed of Golden Rule Greenhouse. Raymond Wallace, the young man who has been with us for some three years and who has had it in charge during the last eighteen months, is taking it over; and I trust that our people will continue to support it in his possession as loyally as they have in the past.

Raymond is as square and dependable as any young man it has ever been my good fortune to know, and he has been as loyal and true to the interests of the N. B. I. while in our service as it would be possible for one to be. I sincerely hope that our people will be as loyal to him in the future as he has been to us in the past. He is honest, industrious, and courteous and knows his business. We have never had better or finer varieties of flowers than he has grown since he has had charge of the work, nor have we had any cause for complaint in any way of his work or conduct during his years of association with us. I have never been associated in a business way with one in whose integrity I have more implicit confidence than I have in Ray Wallace, and I am sure I know him well. This same degree of esteem and confidence in him seems to be shared by all who have had business or social relations with him as far as I have been able to learn.

It is, therefore, a great pleasure to me to commend him to all our brotherhood and friends as being worthy of your full confidence and entitled to your patronage and support as far as it may be convenient for you to render; and our prayers and hopes are for his fullest possible measure of success, of which he is most worthy.

FINANCES IN ILLINOIS

Sr. Anna E. Drew, treasurer of the Illinois State Conference, is much concerned over the condition of our finances. She requests that those who have made pledges will remit as soon as possible so that current expenses may be kept paid. If you have made no pledge your share in the state work will be gladly and thankfully received. Our treasurer's address is 629 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Illinois. Paul C. Johnson, President.

THE OREGON ROOF FUND

Those who were present at the Oregon Sunday school on the first Sunday of General Conference and Illinois Bible School last August may be interested in a brief report of the Roof Fund on which the collection for that Sunday was applied. First Sunday collections, birthday collections, and contributions from our Home Department have been put into the fund. The first collection taken was on the first Sunday of May, 1932. To date $175.83 have been received. The total cost of materials (there was no cost for labor) was $180.90, which leaves $5.07 still due. The roof was put on last fall.—P. C. J.

MCGINTYTOWN, ARKANSAS

Perhaps the readers of The Restitution Herald would be interested in learning about what we are doing at this place. First, I will report in regard to our Sunday school. We have been meeting for two months and have a good interest. The work is progressing the best I ever saw. We have four classes: Bible, intermediate, junior, primary; and have singing each Saturday night and Sunday evening after Sunday school is over.

I preached Easter afternoon on the resurrection of Christ. I spoke from Leviticus 23, saying that April (or Nisan) 16 was the true Easter and that Christ arose from the dead on Easter morning, the first day of the week, and became "the firstfruits of them that slept." I also showed that Easter means passover. Before noon I held services for a little child. I talked from Mark 10, making the statement that little children are in the atonement as well as the older ones.

Thirty-four years ago on April 16 my wife and I were married. At 7:00 p. m. this Easter the string band of Mcgintytown came and played music to a large crowd in our home.

Friday, May 4, we put a new roof on our church building which was built by Bro. Mcginty and Bro. Snow some few years ago.

Here is where the conference of the Church of God in Christ of Oklahoma and Arkansas will meet, commencing August 3, and we invite all to come and see what we are doing. We want you to be with us. We are preparing to take care of you all. We want to see your faces and shake hands with you. Mcgintytown is twenty miles northeast of Conway, Ark., and six miles east of Greenbrier. For information write to Bro. F. J. Snow, Rt. 1, Greenbrier, Ark., or write to me at Greenbrier, Rt. 1.

C. E. Weaver.

THE TEACHER AND HIS BIBLE

The teacher must know his Bible. One may as well expect a physician to treat successfully some obscure and dangerous disease when he knows no more about it than may be learned by reading a brief pamphlet on the subject as to expect a Sunday school teacher who depends entirely upon his quarterly for his knowledge of the lesson to impart the truth it contains to his class in an interesting and profitable manner.

The Bible is the one real text book of the Sunday school, and to fulfill his obligation to his pupils the teacher must be thoroughly familiar with its contents and spirit. The quarterly is intended as an aid in the interpretation of the Bible, but never as a substitute for it.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Encouraging reports seem to be coming from every direction in these days. We rejoice with the Eldorado church in its unity and growth.

When did you last pray for your pastor, your Sunday school superintendent, and your Berean leaders?

Brethren everywhere: Begin to pray now for the success of the Fonthill, Ont., May Meeting, which will assemble, God willing, over the last Sunday in this month.

Bro. Arthur McClellan of the Fonthill, Ont., congregation is reported as seriously ill with pneumonia. We pray for his recovery.

Do not forget the General Conference—plan to be there—to bless and be blessed by it—August 1 to 13. You need the conference, and the conference needs you!

We are pleased to welcome to our columns this week a new writer, Brayton E. Crandall of Bartley, Nebraska. Bro. Crandall presents his subject in a most interesting manner, and we hope to have more from him in the near future.

We praise the Lord for the splendid results that followed the pre-Easter services held by Bro. M. W. Lyon in the Church of the Golden Rule, Cleveland, Ohio. May God bless and keep those who have dedicated their lives to Him until the Master comes.

The Brush Creek (Ohio) church has a most interesting meeting in prospect to begin the last Sunday in May and continue over June 4. The church is located near Tippecanoe City. Bros. F. E. Siple and S. E. Magaw will be the speakers, assuring those who attend an interesting and profitable experience.

Do not forget to order a supply of the World Peace Special which will be issued (D. V.) May 30, and be prepared to give them to your friends. Again we have been obliged to notify inquirers that our supply of certain numbers of the paper were exhausted before their orders arrived.

Bro. Glen M. Birkey of Rochelle, Illinois, dropped in at the office the other day for six extra copies of the last issue. Fortunately we were able to supply them. Bro. Birkey was anxious to have his friends read a certain article in that number. Look over your last week's copy and see if you can guess what it was.

The prayers of the brotherhood are desired for the father of Bro. Glen M. Birkey of Flagg Center, Illinois. The elderly gentleman is suffering greatly from a disease that affects his feet. We are sure that all will be glad to join with us in prayer on his behalf.

Bro. and Sr. Wm. Platts of Fonthill, Ont., recently visited the home of Bro. and Sr. James A. Patrick in Ashland, Ohio. They found Bro. Patrick suffering painfully from an attack of the gout. Bro. Patrick has spent the major part of his life in advocating and defending the principles of the Church of God, and we pray that he may be sufficiently recovered to assume his usual active part throughout the coming conference season.

Bro. C. E. Randall, pastor of the Fonthill, Ont., Church of God, writes encouragingly of the prospect for their annual May Meeting, which is announced for the last Sunday of the month. He says, "Prospects are bright for a blessed May Meeting. We are expecting a large attendance."

Our next issue will contain a thoughtfully prepared article on "The Gift of the Holy Spirit," by C. E. Randall. Bro. Randall is a clear and logical writer, and his analysis of this important theme is exceptionally interesting and valuable at this time.

Bro. and Sr. F. L. Austin were welcome visitors at Oregon on Mother's Day. Sr. Woodward, although not at all well, accompanied them back to Chicago. Bro. Austin was induced to take charge of his old class in the Sunday school for the day, and presented the lesson with his usual impressiveness and interest.

The various members of the Golden Rule Home family have been passing through another period of general sickness recently, but are now recovering nicely. Sr. Mick, our beloved matron, is still in bed but improving. Let us often carry the members of this family of older ones to God in prayer.

The report from Bro. C. E. Weaver of the work at Megintytown, Ark., gives the entire brotherhood cause for rejoicing. All who can do so should make an effort to attend the Arkansas-Oklahoma Conference which is to be held in Megintytown on August 3, and see for themselves the success that is being attained there.

While we greatly prefer to publish the works of our own able writers, we find it advisable to review carefully many other publications, both religious and secular, that our readers may have the best and latest expositions, particularly of the prophecies, that we can provide. Many of our selected articles have proven of interest and value.

Our brethren who are familiar with the problem that has faced the National Bible Institution for several years with regard to the greenhouse, will be glad to know that we have disposed of the business to an energetic young man who is thoroughly acquainted with it in every way, and that we can now devote our attention exclusively to the spiritual side of our effort.

A novelist of note said recently, concerning the time and effort he put into his literary endeavors, that he frequently rewrote his stories ten times before he submitted them for publication. Some, he declared, he had rewritten so many times that he had practically committed them to memory. If writing fiction to amuse the world is worthy of such painstaking efforts, the writing of splendid truths pertaining to eternal salvation is worthy of much greater labor and sacrifice! The author of a novel will often go to great trouble to verify some small historical or scientific point before permitting it to appear over his signature. How much more important it is that we who write of divine things should prayerfully verify from the Scriptures every assertion we make!

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by National Bible Institution
Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

GIVE TO THE CHILDREN THE BIBLE

Give to the children the Bible,
Give them the message of old;
Give them the full revelation,
All that God's servants have told.

Teach them the story of Eden;
With the Creator begin;
Tell of the garden of beauty
Marred by the entrance of sin.

Lead them past ages of dimness
On to the clear, shining light;
Tell how God constantly kindled
Light in the darkness of night

Farther and farther, then, bring them,
Till, at the day spring of love,
Angels and shepherds are hailing
God's wondrous Gift from above.

Tell how His people have used it,
Spreading its message abroad,
Teaching each new generation,
Leading the children to God.

BACK TO BIBLE

One of the latest and most interesting publications dealing with the outstanding truths of the Bible that has come from the press in recent months is the four-page paper issued by F. L. Austin, the "Back-to-the-Bible" Evangelist, of 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

This unusual addition to religious literature is gotten up in the form of a modern newspaper, with arresting display "heads" that attract the attention of the reader to the instructive subject matter that follows.

The paper is undated, and so may be used at any time or place where religious advertising that both attracts attention and instructs the interested is required.

The price in quantities is sufficiently reasonable to make it available to any congregation for use in special evangelistic meetings. To those desiring this publication for general distribution it will be supplied at $2.50 per hundred. Address orders to F. L. Austin, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Illinois.

IN LINE OF DUTY

By Arlen Marsh

“COOPERATION,” said Mr. Edwards to his wife, “is the keynote of success in business or in the church. If our minister is to succeed in his work, we must cooperate with him. If the church itself is going to succeed, we’ve got to do our best to help in every way we can.”

“Yes, indeedy, we’ve got to cooperate to succeed. Brother Langland can’t get anywhere unless we do our best for him. When the Sunday school asks us to teach, we’ll teach; we’ll go to church and Bible classes; we’ll sing in the choir when they want us to; and if they want us to do anything else, we’ll do that, too. Yes sir.”

His wife glanced across the table.

“I wonder,” she replied ruminatively, “if we really will?”

“Certainly we will,” he snapped. “There’s no reason why we shouldn’t. He has more to do than we have. And, besides —”

Raucously the doorbell cut short the sentence. He rose and went to the door.

“Why, good evening, Flo,” he enthused heartily. “Come right in.”

“I’m sorry, but I can’t. Have to hurry home. Just stopped to tell you that Father has to go to a funeral and won’t be here next Sunday. Mr. Myers, the regular substitute, you know, is sick; so Father wondered if you’d act as usher in his place.”

“Gladly, Flo. Anything to help. Who is it that died?”

“Oh, Aunt Irene. Mr. Langland’s going to preach the sermon. He won’t be here, either, for Sunday. Rodney Conroy from Frederick is taking his place.”

“What’s that? Brother Langland won’t be here?”

“No.”

“Hmmm. Well, good night, Flo.”

“Good night, and thank you.”

Sunday dawned gloomily. Rain obviously was in the offing. Mr. Edwards and his family rose at eight and prepared to go to Sunday school.

At nine the storm struck. Wind and thunder blended in a mighty roar of sound. Lightning intermittently flashed in brilliant streaks through the low-hanging clouds. Water ran in torrents down the walks and streets and hammered grass seed into the muddy ground.

“Hmph. What do you think, Pearl?” Mr. Edwards appealed to his wife at the end of a half hour spent at the window. “Think we ought to go?”

“You’re an usher, you know. We really should.”

“Yes, but this storm’s pretty bad.”

“Yes, but —”

“Didn’t you say something this week about cooperation?” she inquired.

“Yes, but I said we’d have to cooperate with Brother Langland, the minister, didn’t I?”

“Um-hum. You did.”

“Well, we do cooperate with him! We go to church when he’s here and teach in Sunday school when we’re needed and even sing sometimes when the choir’s short.”

“Yes.”

“We do cooperate, I tell you! Brother Langland isn’t here today. And this young Conroy—well, you know he isn’t much good. Just a beginner.”

“Still, he’s conducting the services.”

“What of it? He won’t have much of a crowd. The weather’s bad, and anyway nobody’ll want to hear him. They won’t need me as an usher. Richard Dirk can do it very well alone.”

“I wonder,” his wife remarked irrelevantly, “whom we worship?”

“God, of course!” In exasperated tones. “And I don’t have to be there. They won’t need me.”

“We were studying in Bible class the other night that ‘every word of God is pure.’ Agur didn’t say that the word had to be spoken by Brother Langland, did he?”

“No! What do you mean?”

“And what was it Paul said about its being wrong to say, ‘I am of Apollos,’ and so on?”

“Well, what does that have to do with our going to church now?”

“Really, James, aren’t you just the least bit like the Corinthians, that Paul said were carnal? You think more of Brother Langland than you do of the church, now don’t you?”

“I don’t see how!”

“Well, you do. There’s no getting around it. If he were here, you’d go to church surely, and act as usher or do anything else he wanted you to do. Yet because it’s Rodney Conroy who’s going to preach, you don’t want to go. After all, he needs more encouragement than Brother Langland does; and besides, you wouldn’t be working for either of them—either Brother Langland or Rodney—would you? It is the church, you know, no matter who preaches.”

“Hmph!”

“And it isn’t Brother Langland that needs the cooperation. It’s the church. . . . Look, it’s raining again!”

The clock struck once.

“Quarter to ten.” He glanced out of the window at the downpour. “Hmph! Well, get your coat if you’re going with me. I’ve got to be at the church to usher.”

The Times in Which We Live

THE hope and faith, the desires and prayers, of two hundred Christian decades are focused on the times in which we live! Thousands have suffered martyrdom that they might see the consummation of the times in which we live! Men of courage born of faith have crossed the burning deserts, braved uncharted seas, and faced the savage wilderness to carry the gospel to the darkest regions of the earth that they might be accounted worthy to have a part in the glorious events that are to mark the end of the times in which we live!

From the day in which the voice of God spoke to the serpent in the solemn quietness of Eden and said, concerning the Seed of the woman, "It shall bruise his heel," to the final "Amen" of Revelation, the attention of the prophets of Jehovah has been directed with unerring precision to the times in which we live and to the remarkable events with which they are to be brought to a close.

Speaking of a period in many ways parallel with that through which we are passing, our Savior said, "Many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them."—Matthew 13:17. These words might well have been spoken of devout followers of the Lord Jesus for the past two hundred decades with reference to the times in which we live! To us it is given to see happenings for which the church has been waiting and praying since the Lord's ascension.

In spite of the distress on every side, in spite of the depression and fear that prevails everywhere, in spite of all that tries our faith and fortitude in these days, it is glorious to be alive in the times in which we live! for God is now visibly, powerfully, working among the nations as He has apparently not labored for many generations. His voice is heard reverberating from every hill and mountain side. The earth reels and trembles under the tread of His advancing cohorts of judgment. All nations are shrinking before Him in fear, for He is calling, commanding, coerc-

In this, the first of a series of articles which will have to do with the startling and significant events now occurring throughout the world and the bearing which these things have upon the purposes of God as they are revealed in the Scriptures, the editor of this journal suggests that the actual sufferings of the Jewish people at this time provide an assurance of hope for the future, not only for the Jews, but for all races.

ing them, that He may bring them eventually into the presence of Him who is to "judge the world in righteousness" and "punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity"!

It is not, however, the terrors of outpoured judgment that we wish to consider here. There would be no comfort in that alone. It is the meaning of the entire course of events, not to the world only, but to the Christian as well, that prompts us to give these things our thoughtful attention. We remember hopefully the words of Christ concerning all this. "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."—Luke 21:28.

Trouble of unprecedented severity is undoubtedly in store for humanity in the closing days of the times in which we live! for these days mark the beginning of the period of which Daniel speaks, when "there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time."—Daniel 12:1. Our Lord, commenting upon the same era, declares, "Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened."—Matthew 24:21 and 22.

The "elect" to which Jesus refers is not the church, but the Jewish people. For their sake "those days shall be shortened." When those final hours of awful terror come, the church will have been caught away to meet the returning Lord; but the sons of Jacob must remain to suffer the weight of divine judgment with the other sinful nations of the world. In fact, the Jews will be affected more seriously than all other races in the "time that tries men's souls." One of the several names applied to the period indicates the intensity of their suffering.

Jeremiah, the Prophet of Sorrow, describes most vividly the last scenes of the times in which we live! in the thirtieth chapter of his book. In order (Please turn to Page Ten)

The Editor's Prayer

OUR FATHER, we thank Thee for the glory of the new day; for the sunshine and the showers, for the strength Thou hast provided, and for the opportunity to labor which Thou hast afforded us. Help us, we pray, to use these glorious hours in Thy service. We thank Thee for the brightness of the noonday; for the warm rays that beat down upon us, every ray of which tells of Thy love. We thank Thee for the quiet evening time, for the soft songs of the birds, the whispering of the leaves, the distant lowing of the cattle; for these, too, speak of Thy care for us Thy people. We thank Thee, Lord, for the stillness and the darkness of the night, that we may rest from our labors to rise again refreshed for Thy service.

Am I a Christian?

NO QUESTION that we might ask could be of greater importance than this one; for it has to do with salvation, and salvation has to do with life, and life is unquestionably the most important thing in the world.

Our question assumes even greater proportions when we realize that the life that is at stake is not mortal, but eternal, in its nature, and can be obtained only by one who is a Christian; for "the gift of God is eternal life through (or, in) Jesus Christ our Lord."

That eternal life is obtainable only in Christ is again clearly stated by John: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life."—1 John 5:11, 12.

To be a Christian is to be in Christ, and to be in Christ is to be in possession of eternal life by faith. Our query then resolves itself into a matter of actual life and death: life in Christ, or death if we remain out of Him.

Seeing that so much hinges upon the correct answer, we should approach the question with the utmost care and thoughtfulness. Am I a Christian? How can I find an answer? It is useless to seek for it in my own consciousness, for "the heart is deceitful above all things."—Jeremiah 17:9. I do not dare to trust my heart for the answer. It is not dependable. It may justify my actions, or it may condemn them; but I am never sure that the testimony it bears is true.

John in his first Epistle brings me comforting assurance in the third chapter and twentieth verse, where he says, "If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things." Here the beloved disciple tells me that I can safely trust to God for an answer to this most vital question.

And what is the answer He brings? It is evident that He does not speak to me individually as He did to Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, nor does He address me in the words of the prophets concerning this matter; for a change has taken place since the sacrifice was made by Jesus Christ, and "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things."—Hebrews 1:1, 2.

So it is to Christ that I must go, to Him who said, "The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."—John 14:10. The response of Peter was well made when Jesus asked him, "Will ye also go away?" The answer was, "To whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life."—John 6:67, 68. I will pray Jesus to answer my question—Am I a Christian?

Our blessed Lord makes His answer very plain. Whether it brings to each one the assurance he craves depends entirely upon himself, upon his individual faith in the truth of Jesus.

Here is Jesus' answer: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved."—Mark 16:15, 16. It is just as simple as that! Believe the gospel—the gospel of the kingdom of God as preached by Jesus (Mark 1:14) and by His apostles and disciples in the early days of the church (Mark 16:20; Acts 8:12; 28:30, 31)—and be baptized for the remission of sins as required by Peter (Acts 2:37, 38). If I do this, I have the assurance of Jesus Christ that I shall be saved! He has made the conditions, I have met them, and that completes the transaction. I am sure that He will do His part and call me forth to eternal life when He comes; for He has said, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."—John 11:25, 26. I believe it and am satisfied.

No Biblical Categories of Evolution

THAT man evolved from a primordial germ; after millions of years and many transformations the vertebrate appeared; out of the innumerable forms or branches, through nature's process of selection and rejection, emerged the type with the great brain-pan, homo sapiens, perhaps not yet the highest flower of evolution; that this genus, by reason of long concatenation of emotional experiences merging into moral values and then spiritual ideals has come into the possession of a God-consciousness; that the varying values of this idealism are due to environment and circumstances of development, and that animism and superstition will slough off by "sharing" what is best in every form of religious attainment,

"For man must rise by stepping stones
Of his dead self to higher things"; that the future man will achieve the potentialities wrapped up in that primordial germ; and that in evolution there is made visible the best method of creation possible to a Great First Cause: these are the categories of evolution.

CORROBORATION

THAT this is not a bald and over-emphasized catalogue, but an under-statement, can be verified by referring to the writings of any outstanding evolutionist. But I will simply quote from a recent protagonist, whose article, "The Destiny of the Universe," appeared in this January issue of The Hibbert Journal, perhaps the most authoritative modernistic journal published. "Third fact, that each of us repeats in himself the process of the formation and development from a single germ cell which the evolution of this world has gone through, I would take as indicative both of the manner in which the primordial germ of life on this earth was first formed and then developed, and also of how we can gain our best conception of the nature of the universe as a whole."

DEDUCTIONS

RELIGIOUS evolutionists hold that men in all ages and amongst all peoples have caught glimpses of the beauty, wisdom, and holiness of the Unseen, and have "shared" with their fellows their noblest thoughts; preeminent amongst these stands the Prophet of Nazareth. Insidiously they inculcate that no one of these has found all the truth, but that all have had some of the truth; consequently, there must be formulated an eclectic religion before men can attain to the highest form of religion.

To these, the way out is now being happily demonstrated in "Re-thinking Missions." At the World's Fair at Chicago an attempt to formulate such a religion was made; but its sponsors, as likewise later in the Interchurch Movement, soon realized that they were acting prematurely, that there must be staged another Ephesian demonstration of, "Great is Evolution, great is Evolution," until all the world should mistake clamour for reason. Persistent and prolonged has been the boring from within, during which that generation of evangelical opponents passed, and evangelicalism has become permeated by this pseudo-philosophy called evolution. The leaders, who now have control of the educational, theological, journalistic, and philanthropical institutions, deem the time opportune to establish the categories of evolution as the religion of the future.

A chief spokesman, John Haynes Holmes, a Unitarian, once a student for the Baptist ministry and the product of a modernistic theological seminary, has recently trumpeted forth this blast, "that we are coming to a time when there will be no Jehovah, no Sundays, no churches, and no Bibles. Jehovah ideals will give place to one omnipresent eternal energy." Sunday will give place to "the communal consecration." Churches will give place to the "community with its sacred places of the common life," such as the Lincoln Memorial in Washington and the civic auditorium in Cleveland. The Bible will be replaced by "the assembled literature of all ages and peoples." (Watchman Examiner, March 1, 1933.)

To achieve this end is issued the report of the Laymen's Foreign Missionary Enquiry. Space will permit only abbreviated quotations, but sufficient to display the animus: "The report is composed of three general sections. The first deals with the fundamental basis of missions, and declares that this must be changed, that Christianity should cease its efforts to destroy or displace the non-Christian religions and should cooperate with them, letting any change come as it may, as the result of a common sharing and quest."

"Whatever its present conception of future life, there is little disposition to believe that sincere and aspiring seekers after God in other religions are to be damned: it has become less concerned in any land to save men from eternal punishment than from the danger of losing the supreme good."

"If through growing appreciation and borrowing the vitality of genuine religion is anywhere increased the Christian may well rejoice in that fact. He will look forward, not to the destruction of these religions, but to their continued co-existence with Christianity, each stimulating the other in growth toward the ultimate goal, unity in the completest religious truth."

"The crucial question is this: Whether the motives that animated the inauguration of the Protestant missions a century or so ago remain in full force, in view of the changes that have taken place since their inception . . . if the conception of hell changes, if attention is drawn away from the fear of God's punitive justice to happier conceptions of destiny, if there is a shift of concern from other-world issues to the problems of sin and suffering in the present life, these changes will immediately alter the view of the perils of the soul which gave to the original motive of Protestant missions much of its poignant urgency."

And now another World's Fair in Chicago draws near.

OUR NEXT TASK

AS IN the Bureau of Standards in Washington are kept the precise instruments for measurement and weight, so in God's Word are preserved the precise standards of truth. False standards fall when tested by the precise. The precise are age-long, the false are ephemeral. The Bible is weightier than any system of philosophy yet promulgated and broader than any system of human thought. Therefore, it is the standard by which we test the categories of evolution. The demonstrated facts of science are in accord with God's Word, though not always in accord with the theological systems which men have erected upon that Word. Is this true of the categories?

FIAT CREATION

IS THERE any hint here of atomic disintegration or of the passing over from one genus to another? It declares not only impassable barriers between genera, but also between families. Did one ever know of mating naturally between a spider and an eagle or a sparrow and a robin? No, Genesis says, "Each after its kind." Science here is in accord. Mendel's law demonstrates. Eminent biologists declare that no form of life can transmit characteristics which it did not itself receive in generation. Geology shows no change in the most ancient fossils and their present living forms. The categories of evolution are not built upon the hard foundation facts of science (scio, to know). Their roots are in the nebulous clouds of conjecture, where no barriers of knowledge exist, and primordial germs are generated.

GODLIKENESS

THE Bible implicitly teaches that man is a special creation; that to him, the crown of animal structure, has been added the image and likeness of God. Who questions that he differentiates from all other forms of life; that he has dominion over them all; that he alone of all life on this earth grows in knowledge and wisdom; that he alone has ability to unravel the secrets of nature and to understand the laws of the Creative Mind? Why is this uniqueness possible in a world where all other forms of life are barred to advancement? Why is the gap between man and the next highest order of life greater than that that exists between the conscious and the non-conscious? Because of his original constitution when he had Godlikeness and fellowship with God. Man ever attests to the pitiable evidence of a descent; at the best he is but a prodigal returning to his Father, never a warrior mounting fresh heights of ascent. This the standard reveals, and in its light all sight of categories is lost.

LOSS OF GODLIKENESS

THE evolutionist says that in the upward trend man is finding God. This the Bible denies and shows that through disobedience he lost his first estate and made his fateful plunge, "By man sin entered the world, and death by sin." So cataclysmic the result that man was convinced that he had forfeited his life. Henceforth the offended Deity must be appeased by the offering of a Substituted Life. In place of fellowship came approach and worship by sacrifice. At first the prerogative was vested in the head of the family, later assumed by a priestly class.

Evolutionists would "change the truth of God into a lie," by holding that God's wrath is all a delusion (see "Re-thinking Missions"), and that there must be a syncretism between the revelation of God and the teachings of men who have become "vain in their own imaginations." Though the earlier priestly domination evolved into heathenism and the latter into the Levitical hierarchy, yet always were there attempts at rapprochement. Hence, the necessity for a prophetic office in Israel, if her allegiance to God was to be maintained. The time came when Israel did some "Re-thinking," and the priestly class was sure that Jerusalem could not be destroyed because the holy house of God was there, and the prophets proclaimed its destruction because their hearts were not with God. Those were the days when all that was best in heathen worship was assimilated by the Jewish priesthood and syncretism of religions was triumphant when Ahab embellished the temple with Syrian altars; after Baal, phallic adoration and Ashtaroth and the mystery cults of that day were accepted.

In Ezekiel 8 are depicted three scenes: "What the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery . . . Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward the north; and behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz. . . . At the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east." Was this "growing appreciation and borrowing" pleasing to God, or did prophets hesitate to declare the "fear of God's punitive justice"?

Was Jeremiah carried away with the "shift of concern from other-world issues to the problems of . . . suffering in the present life" when he recorded in chapter 44:15-17 this scene? "Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying, . . . We will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil." And God did not lead them as though they were blind seekers after light, as the "re-thinkers" would have us suppose, but he destroyed them all. The evolutionists' way to God is not the way depicted in the Word.

THE RESTORATION OF GODLIKENESS

IT IS not in man to regain the Edenic conditions; the categories will not achieve it. Only by a race of twice-born men with renewed spiritual nature can it be accomplished. To this end Jesus was born, not as the consummate flower of humanity, but as God in man who was to become the "propitiation for sin" and so break "down the middle wall of partition" so that this race of spiritual beings shall "put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." With godlikeness restored, righteousness will fill the earth and the ills from which it now suffers will be no more.

No future eclectic religion patterned after "Re-thinking Missions" can be more successful than the syncretism of the past. Its future can be set forth in a parable: A turbaned Mohammedan was walking the streets of an Indian city bearing on his back a decapitated goat offered as a Hindoo sacrifice with the blood dripping down his back, and holding in his hand and reading Fosdick's The Modern Use of the Bible. As the sun declined in the west, he facéd toward Mecca; and at the muezzin's cry for prayer, sacrifice and book both were forgotten as he fell upon his face in prayer. But if the Laymen's Foreign Mission Enquiry has solved the problem, he, accepting the categories of evolution, would have bowed retaining both sacrifice and book.

Despite all categories and Enquiries the ancient truth, verified by the myriads of myriads of redeemed and changed lives, holds, "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we MUST be saved." It would be strange that the categories of evolution rehabilitated by the phraseology of the Report of the Laymen's Foreign Mission Enquiry should be accepted in so many quarters, if it were not for the fact that men are loath to confess themselves as being sinners, being deluded by the manifold endeavors to deify man.—W. B. Crowell in the Defender.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

By George B. Aldridge

---

"Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day."—Psalm 25:5.

ANY student of the Bible must be impressed with the many questions propounded throughout its sacred pages and how few can be answered intelligently, that is, from God's viewpoint.

Read carefully and thoughtfully Job 38, 39, and 40. How many of these questions God asked Job can you answer? In Job 14:14 a question is asked, "If a man die, shall he live again?" There is only one reliable authority wherein the truthful answer to this question can be found, and that is the Bible.

You remember the dialogue between Pilate and Jesus. I will quote from the Centenary Translation: "'You are a king, then? You!' said Pilate. 'You say truly that I am a king,' answered Jesus, 'for this purpose was I born, and to this end came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth. Every man who is of the truth listens to my voice.' Pilate said to him, 'What is truth?'"

Standing before him was the person of whom it was said, "And the Word became flesh and tented with us. And we gazed on his glory—glory as of the Father's only Son—full of grace and truth."—John 1:14, Cen. Trans.

He confirmed this of Himself in His reply to Thomas in John 14:6, 7: "Jesus answered him: I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life. No man ever comes to the Father but by me. If you had known me, you would have known my Father too: from now on you know him and have seen him."—Cen. Trans.

O Pilate, the answer to Job's question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" stood before you.

His faithfulness in proclaiming the fact that He is the way, the truth, and the life brought upon Him the opposition of the howling mob that sought His death, the ignominious death by crucifixion. How this illuminates Zechariah 12:10: "And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn."

Never in the history of histrionic annals has the world ever witnessed such a tableau vivant as this.

Pilate again came forth and said to the people, "See, I am going to bring Him out to you, that you may clearly know that I find no crime in Him." Then, as Jesus came out, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe, Pilate said to them, "Behold, the man!"

So when the chief priests and the police saw Him, they shouted: "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!"

"Take Him yourselves and crucify Him," said Pilate, "for I find no crime in Him."

The Jews answered him, "We have a law, and by that law He ought to die, because He made Himself out to be God's Son."
(over)

They could quote the law; also, they probably recalled Isaiah 53:1-9, especially, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted."

As in a vision I see the whole scene before Pilate. How forcibly Paul's words in Ephesians 4:21 ring clear in my mind: "If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus." This is the only truth I wish to know: "As the truth is in Jesus."

How can I express to you what I mean? My learned and faithful brethren often speak of "saving and justifying faith." To me this means two things: a hearty assent of my understanding to all that Jesus Christ and His apostles delivered to mankind as the will of God; and a hearty consent of my will, following thereupon, to be governed by those laws and rules that are prescribed for the whole church of the living God.

Jesus said that He was a King. It was for this purpose God sent Him into the world. Hence, then, to have a saving faith in Jesus Christ I must own and accept Him in all the offices He claims are His, namely, Prophet, Priest, and King.

To accept Him as God's great Prophet I receive Him into my heart as He who came to declare the will of God to mankind and, also, to believe in and practice whatsoever He taught (John 6:14).

As the great High Priest He came to make atonement for the sins of the whole world (1 John 2:1, 2; Hebrews 8:1) and I am to depend upon the merits of His sacrifice and intercession for the remission of my sins, through belief and obedience of the gospel (Romans 1:16).

And, lastly, I must receive Him as the great King that God has exalted. Peter, speaking of David, will explain this to me. I read Acts 2:30, 31: "Therefore (David) being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him (see 2 Samuel 7:12, 13; Psalm 132:11), that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit in his throne. He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption."

As Jesus stood before Pilate and was asked, "What is truth?" how could He have said any more than He already had said, "You say truly that I am a King"? In the mind of Jesus there was nothing plainer than the testimony of His Father's Word that He was God's anointed Son, to be King of Israel, to sit upon His father David's throne; that this would mean He would be King over the whole earth. This cannot mean a mystical, ethereal throne, but actually as real a throne as was the throne of David. If not, then what is the meaning of Ezekiel 21:25-27? God overturned the kingdom of Zedekiah (2 Chronicles 36:11-21; Jeremiah 25:9), "and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." History confirms all this.

I cannot read anywhere in the Scriptures of any other kingdom that has been overthrown that God has promised to restore and set up again in Jerusalem.

Did Jesus mean what He said as recorded in Matthew 19:28: "'In solemn truth I tell you,' Jesus answered,

'that in the New Creation, when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, you also who have followed me shall sit on twelve thrones to govern the twelve tribes of Israel.'"—Cent. Trans.

Again, in Matthew 25:34: "Then he, the King, will say to those on his right hand: 'Come, my Father's blessed ones, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.'" This cannot be in heaven; for there is only one throne there, and that is God's.

In Psalm 110:1 I read, "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool." In Hebrews 1:13 this is quoted. It means Jesus, for the question is asked, "To which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand . . . ?" So the kingdom must be here upon this earth, for nowhere else do Jesus' enemies exist.

Let us see if the Scriptures support this view. "Thus saith the Lord, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool."—Isaiah 66:1. David points out where this is in Psalm 132:7: "We will go into his tabernacles; we will worship at his footstool." One more quotation, and I am sure every fair-minded reader will acknowledge that God's footstool is here upon earth: "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious."

Let me quote Revelation 5:10: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

Again, I notice that when God establishes this kingdom it must be upon this earth; for it says, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed."—Daniel 2:44. Hence, then, the old kingdoms must first be eliminated before the new kingdom, that is, the kingdom of God, can be set up or established.

Daniel says, "The kingdom shall not be left to other people," but the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess it forever.

Who are these saints? They are a very peculiar people. Paul says, "To them who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life."—Romans 2:7. Peter describes them: "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people: that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light."

"The Chicago Department of Health has recently issued figures showing a decrease in the death rate since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. The highest death rate from the use of liquor occurred in 1917 just before war time prohibition, when Chicago with a population of 2,650,000 had 271 alcoholic deaths, or a death rate of 10.8 in 100,000. In 1930 with a population of 3,375,000, Chicago had but 92 such deaths, or 2.7 in 100,000. This is a decrease of seventy-five per cent in the death rate."

Gift of the Holy Spirit

By C. E. Randall

IN DISCUSSING the Holy Spirit in this article it is our purpose to deal with its operation, that is, what its work is and the ways in and through which it operates.

In the first place it will help to get an understanding of our terms, such as "Holy Spirit," "Holy Ghost," and "Spirit of God." These terms or expressions all mean the same thing. Holy means "separate, or set apart." Ghost and Spirit in the references used in this article are translated from the same original word, and the word is pneuma. Thus the expressions "Holy Spirit," "Holy Ghost," "Spirit of God," "God's Spirit" all mean the same Spirit. There is only "one Spirit." "There is one body, and one Spirit."—Ephesians 4:4. Again we read: "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body."—1 Corinthians 12:13. This Spirit is called an "eternal Spirit" (Hebrews 9:14). While God has only one Spirit, it operates in various ways as circumstances demand and as the purpose of His plan requires. "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit."—1 Corinthians 12:4. This last point will be treated more fully in a following paragraph.

SPIRIT PROMISED

THE "Holy Spirit," "Holy Ghost," "Spirit of God," whichever term you prefer, is promised to the children of God. "Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2:38. When? When you have repented and been baptized for the remission of sins. There are no "ifs" or "ands" about it other than meeting the requirements as specified. In Luke 11:13 we read: "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?"

To possess this Spirit is one of the fundamental requirements of every child of God. Without this Spirit we are none of His. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."—Rom. 8:14, 9.

SPIRIT IN BOTH TESTAMENTS

IT SEEMS to appear to many that the Holy Spirit or Holy Ghost is a New Testament Spirit and that its activities have been confined to this age of grace. This, however, is not the case. The Holy Ghost has always operated, for it is God's eternal Spirit. The prophecies and writings of the Old Testament came through the operation of this Spirit on holy men of God. "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."—2 Peter 1:21. It was by the Holy Ghost that Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and other Old Testament writers thought and spoke. It was this same Holy Ghost operating in Old Testament times that the children of Israel resisted and rebelled against.

"Ye stiffnecked, and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye."—Acts 7:51.

OPERATIONS OF THE SPIRIT

THE Holy Spirit has operated in many miraculous ways. Scripture has been cited to show that this same Spirit has always existed, but some of the special ways in which it has operated on individuals of the New Testament are given. Before calling attention to these instances, we wish to insert this statement, and this fact will become more evident as the instances are related: While God has promised us this Spirit and its possession is absolutely essential, yet we have no right to expect or ground to lay claim that it will work in such special ways in our lives.

The first instance of its operation is in the case of Mary, mother of Jesus. "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."—Luke 1:35. Even though this same Spirit is promised to and possessed by people today, we cannot expect that it will again operate in this miraculous way.

We read of another case as follows: "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied."—Luke 1:67. The Holy Spirit in this instance operated on Zacharias, causing him to prophesy. The Spirit thus operating was not a precedent, and we have no promise that when we are likewise filled we will prophesy.

Special operation number three is noted in connection with Simeon. He was "devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him. And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ."—Luke 2:25, 26. The Holy Ghost revealed the time of death in this case. Certainly when we are filled with the Holy Ghost, it will not thus operate and reveal the time of our decease.

Special operation number four is in connection with the baptism of Christ. While He was still in the baptismal waters, the Spirit of God came upon Him like a dove. What right have we to expect that the Spirit will come to and operate on us in this peculiar way and with such mighty power?

Special operation number five, in point of time not as it occurs in Scripture but as we are listing it, took place on Pentecost. On this occasion it came in an entirely different way and performed an altogether different mission. It came "as of a rushing mighty wind" and there "appeared unto them cloven tongues like as fire, and it sat upon each of them." As a result of this special performance of the Spirit they spake with "other tongues." This work is no more miraculous, peculiar, or outstanding than the other cases cited or those hereafter mentioned. Neither are we justified in saying that this is the work of the Holy Ghost.

Special operation number six had to do with Stephen at the time of his stoning and was a most remarkable demonstration of the special work of the Holy Spirit. Stephen, "being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God."—Acts 7:55. This experience is not promised to every individual who possesses the Holy Spirit. This was a special operation of the one eternal Spirit.

Special operation number seven took place when Philip was Spirit-directed to join himself to the chariot of the eunuch; and when this mission was fulfilled, this same "Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip." Another distinct and special operation of the one and selfsame Spirit.

Special operation number eight and the last one which we will note came to the disciples of Jesus on this wise: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14:26. It was through this special work of the Holy Ghost that the apostles were able to remember all things that Jesus had said and done and write them down for the blessing and edification of those that should afterward live. While we have this same Comforter, it does not reveal to us, as it did to the writers of the Gospels, the sayings and works of our Lord.

All these are special acts of the Holy Spirit, but none of these demonstrations of the Spirit are promised to us; nor should we expect their daily, weekly, monthly, or yearly reenactment. The regular work of the Holy Spirit is in part set forth in John 16:7-13. Further, God has promised this Spirit to all His children, and the indwelling or working of this Spirit will produce certain fruits (Galatians 5:22-25). It is by these fruits that we are known. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."—Matthew 7:20. These fruits will be a light that shines before men and causes them to glorify God (Matthew 5:16).

But to expect because we have the Spirit that it will appear to us as doves or cloven tongues of fire and operate upon us in special ways such as conceiving a child; revealing time of death; causing us to prophesy, to speak with other tongues, to see heaven open and Christ on the Father's throne, or to be bodily transported from place to place is going beyond the promises of God's Word. None of these special acts of the Holy Spirit have any biblical preference over each other, but each one meets a special need at a special time in the development of God's eternal purpose. It is the selfsame Spirit working as God wills.

Your attention is invited to the following comparison. Observe that we are not setting opinion against opinion, but are rather calling to your attention Bible facts, which you may turn to your Bible at once and verify.

HUMAN OPINION SAYS:

1. "Christians believe in immortality as natural to the soul."—Tarbells Guide, 1933, p. 160.
2. "Only the body goes to the grave, not the soul."
3. "The righteous go to heaven, and the wicked go to hell."
4. "I cannot believe that I am to die just like the animals, for beasts have no souls."
5. "'Dust thou art, to dust returnest'
Was not spoken of the soul."—Longfellow.
6. "After a man is dead, he knows more than when he was alive."
7. "Death is a friend in disguise, not an enemy we should fear."

THE WORD OF GOD SAYS:

1. God "only hath immortality." "This mortal must put on immortality."—1 Timothy 6:16; 1 Corinthians 15:53.
2. "What man is he that . . . shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave."
—Psalm 89:48.
3. "All go unto one place."—Ecclesiastes 3:20.
4. "That which befalleth . . . men befalleth beasts; . . . as the one dieth, so dieth the other." "Man is like the beasts that perish."
—Ecclesiastes 3:19; Psalm 49:12, 20.
5. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."
—Ezekiel 18:4, 20.
6. "The dead know not any thing."
Ecclesiastes 9:5.
7. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

THE NEW CREATION

By D. G. Harvey

"How long wilt thou go about, O thou backsliding daughter? for the Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man."—Jeremiah 31:22.

THESE is no doubt in our minds, God foreknew the conditions when the woman would be so prominent in the affairs of the world today. We see the woman in politics, in industry, in business; but the fact is hardly of such importance that God would cause His prophet to utter the words of our text, "The Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man."

To the mortal mind the creation of a "new thing" would be strange, for God had said that all things were "good and very good" in the beginning (Genesis 1:31). "God hath made men upright; but they have sought out many inventions," says the Preacher (Ecclesiastes 7:29). If you read the third chapter of Genesis, you have the account of Adam's disobedience and the sentence of death (verse 19). The result of that sin of our first parents is related by Paul in Romans 5:12: "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." The result of Adam's sin was death to the whole human family, inherited death.

Man was then in a helpless condition, for we read, "None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him."—Psalm 49:7. "Why?" some may ask. Let Job answer for us by his question, "But how should man be just with God?"—Job 9:2. Or as David cries, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?"—Psalm 8:4. Man in his fallen condition was helpless.

God's wonderful foreknowledge foresaw that His created son Adam would fall and foretold all this. "In Genesis 3:15?" you ask. Yes, and before that. God foresaw the need of a new creation as pictured by the creation of Eve (Genesis 2:28). Note the beauty of the type. Eve was taken out of Adam, a type of the church being called out of the world.

"A woman shall compass a man." Webster defines the word compass as "encircle, surround." Protection seems to be the thought, enclosed on all sides. Woman in the symbols refers to the church, the new creation which shall encircle, surround, protect mankind.

The promise to Abraham as recorded in Genesis 22:18 is shown by Paul to include the church (Galatians 3:8, 16, 29). The call to the church (new creation) has been going out during the gospel age. "Called to be saints" (Romans 1:7); a "high calling" (Philippians 3:13, 14); "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord" (1 Corinthians 1:9). Have you ever asked why the church was called out? Jesus gives us the answer in John 17:21-23: to be perfect in one (harmony), and that the world may know Christ.

Notice the special promises to the church alone: glorified with Christ (Romans 8:16, 17); divine nature (2 Timothy 1:3, 4); like Christ (1 John 3:2); reign with Christ (2 Timothy 2:12); given a kingdom (Luke 12:32); to inherit all things (Romans 8:17); same power as Christ, judge, priest, and king. Power to judge, rule, raise the dead, heal, teach, and forgive sin is one of the kingdom conditions taught by our Lord's ministry. The new creation (church) is to be heir of the world (Romans 4:13). No one but Christ and His church can inherit this blessing power (Revelation 5:5; James 1:18). This called-out class must be faithful "unto death" (Revelation 3:21).

Often we hear the question expressed, "Why was man created?" We find the answer in Isaiah 43:7: "I have created him for my glory, I have formed him: yea, I have made him."

If Satan can control all but a few, a mere handful, as the popular teaching would have us believe, where is God glorified? Statistics show there are 682,400,000 Christians (church members) in the world. "A vast number," you say. But remember the "tares" must come out of this number and there are 1,167,100,000 non-Christians in the world.

God is just. Only those fitted to be judges and rulers are being chosen for this office. "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God."—2 Samuel 23:3. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."—2 Timothy 2:12.

What wonderful promises, glad tidings to men! "I will restore thy judges as at the first."—Isaiah 1:26. Judges? Yes, we are to judge (if we are to be saints) the world and angels (1 Corinthians 6:2, 3). We shall be heirs according to the promise (Galatians 3:29).

"For he cometh to judge the earth; with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity."—Psalm 98:9. Notice that it is not my righteousness or yours that is to be judged. But He comes to judge with righteousness (just judgment). "For when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness."—Isaiah 26:9.

We remember the often-used text of Isaiah 2:2, 3, speaking of the day when God's kingdom will be established. "And all nations shall flow unto it." "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain (kingdom) of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob: and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths." This refers to the church, the new creation, you say. No, no; the church has walked His paths all through the gospel age. When this people comes up to be taught, the church will be the teacher. She will then be co-ruler with the King. Her lessons will be over.

What a wonderful Father, knowing that Adam, His created son, would fail, bring sin and death to his helpless descendants.

God provides a law, so that one, even His Son Jesus, could by His complete obedience to the Father's will ransom the whole human family. All who believe and serve Him during this gospel age will be co-rulers in His kingdom. Then this little band of faithful ones, taught in love, justice, and mercy, will be prepared to and will teach the world. Our Lord said (John 6:45), "It is written . . . They shall all be taught of God."

It is my earnest prayer that we may have a part in that blessing of the world promised to the seed of Abraham. As was said: "In thee shall all nations be blessed."—Galatians 3:8.

But if God in His wisdom deems otherwise, yet will I know that just and right are all His judgments. "O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. And say ye, Save us, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and glory in thy praise."—1 Chronicles 16:34, 35.

WHAT IS EXPECTED OF ME AS A CHRISTIAN?

By G. A. S.

THE question takes for granted the fact that the first steps have been taken, namely: belief in Christ as the Son of God, confessing Him before man, and baptism for the remission of sin.

The most necessary thing for me, and, I think, for any Christian, is to "search the Scriptures daily" that I may grow in the grace and knowledge of the Lord.

Realizing that "faith without works is dead," I believe I should tell others of the gospel and bring them to this saving knowledge if I can.

I believe I should take part in all the activities of the church, for the church exists to increase Christ's influence and is, or should be, of far-reaching benefit to mankind. I should be reverent and attentive while there and help any stranger to feel welcome in God's house.

In my home as well as abroad I should try to be patient, loving, courteous, and loyal. I should visit the sick or shut-ins and pray for an understanding heart that I may truly help them bear their burdens.

I should curb any tendency to envy, jealousy, or gossip, trying in all things to be honest and helpful, looking for the best in everyone, remembering 1 Corinthians 10:31: "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

I should do all this in the hope of eternal life, which is promised to those who will be patient in well-doing.

THE TIMES IN WHICH WE LIVE

to appreciate the force of his language we must read the entire context. "Lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the Lord; and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it."

Yes! the Jews are going home! Already the flag of David with its six-pointed star in the center waves over the historic "City of the Great King"! For two thousand, five hundred years or more they have been fulfilling the predictions of the eternal God concerning the results of their disobedience. At the beginning of their history He had warned them: "If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD; . . . the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other."—Deuteronomy 28:58, 64.

This has been literally accomplished. The Jewish people have become a race of wanderers. They are scattered throughout the world.

"From Greenland's icy mountains, there is no spot that has not felt the pressure of the foot of the "Wandering Jew"! Such was to be, and such has been, the punishment they have suffered for their sin. But now they are going home! Home from the snow-lad steppes of Russia, that have been so often reddened with their blood! Home from the once inhospitable, but now welcoming, shores of Spain! Home from Germany, the land which their business ability and their scientific achievements have made renowned! Home from the islands of the distant seas! Yes! the Jews are going home; but their going home means increased distress for all the world!
To India's coral strand"

Jeremiah resumes his address to Israel and Judah concerning the approaching time of trouble, and he gives it the name I mentioned before. "Alas!" he cries, "for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it."—Jeremiah 30:7. Here again is the note of hope, the same hope that Jesus mentioned, based upon God's love for His people the Jews: "But he (Israel and Judah) shall be saved out of it!"

As we study the prophecies relating to the various nations, we are constantly reminded that their prosperity and peace are inseparably connected with the prosperity and peace of the Jews, the covenant people of Jehovah.

In succeeding articles, the Lord willing, we will endeavor to trace the probable activities of the Gentile nations as they are revealed in the Scriptures, throughout the remarkable and significant times in which we live.

WHAT CHRIST'S SECOND COMING MEANS

"And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious."—Isaiah 11:10.

THE literal coming of Jesus Christ is a near and vastly important event. The New Testament attests to its importance by emphasizing it more than any other single fact. Paul kept this vital hope before him and his friends always. He ends every chapter of 1 Thessalonians with a reference to Christ's coming. Peter shows how important he held this event to be in Acts 3:19-21: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." "Since the world began"—how far-reaching and infinite is the importance of Christ's coming and kingdom in God's plans! Jesus Himself spoke many times of His return to earth, charging us to watch and be ready.

Jesus' second coming will be a literal one, accompanied by great glory and splendor, the absence of which in His first coming caused His people to reject Him. After Jesus' resurrection He had a literal, visible body (John 20:27, 28; Acts 1:3). And He is coming back as He went away, literally. The two in white said, "... Shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go."—Acts 1:11. Revelation 1:7 says that every eye shall see Him.

Most of us agree that the "perilous times" mentioned in 2 Timothy 3:1-5 are already beginning. This means that there are possibly people living now who will never die, because the Lord's coming is so near. 1 Timothy 4:1-3 and 1 Thessalonians 5:1-6 also give graphic descriptions of the conditions in the world which will herald the coming of One who will end all sin. Jesus tells us in Luke 21:27, 28, "And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."

Let us all be ready.

TO ALL BEREANS

IN ORDER that a goodly number of Bereans may have a voice in planning the program for Berean Day during the General Conference, we are requesting as many as care to do so to send their suggestions for the program immediately to the chairman of the committee in charge, Arlen Marsh, Oregon, Illinois. Any criticisms of past Berean Day programs will also be appreciated.

Our Lord is coming, and Bereans everywhere have much searching of the Scriptures yet to do. The National Berean Society wants to help everyone do that very thing. Let us make the Berean Day this summer the finest ever.

Cecil A. Smead, President.

GOD'S BENEFICENCE

The Peace of God is present in the light
That sheds its rays o'er widespread earth and sea;
The Peace of God is in the sombre night,
And comes alike in joy or gloom to me.

The Joy of Life reflects itself in all
And speaks to me in everything that lives;
The Joy of Life is in the sternest call,
And seen in that which nature takes or gives.

The Strength of Faith can never dim nor sway
In any seeming discords that appear,
For Faith in truth is but another way
To find new joy in what we see and hear.

The Hope of Love, the greatest gift e'er given,
That burns the dross from every mortal life;
The Hope of Love, the very breath of heaven,
That banishes all earthly woe and strife.

—O. Chester Brodhay.

PLEASE send all Berean dues and general donations to the treasurer, Virgil Claypool, 506 East Chestnut Street, Robinson, Illinois, and not to any other officer. Checks, drafts, and money orders should be payable to the National Berean Society, not to an individual.

A FAREWELL SUPPER

How many of you have had some dear friend move to another city or another farm far away from you? Before he left perhaps you went to a spot in God's beautiful out-of-doors and had supper together. As you sat around the table you talked of many things—happy times and sad ones you had shared together, times to come when you would be far apart.

Perhaps the friend who is going away tells you that you will soon forget all about him, but you are sure you will not. Then he says, "Whenever you come here for supper, think of us and the good times we have had together. And when I come back, we'll come out here again."

Something like this happened to Jesus and His disciples a little while before He went away. It was the day for keeping the feast of the Passover, which was held in memory of the time when the children of Israel were in Egypt.

You remember the ten plagues that God brought upon the Egyptians because of their cruelty to the Israelites. The tenth, and most terrible of all, was the death of the oldest child in each home where the blood of the lamb was not sprinkled on the doorpost. But where God's commands were obeyed, that home was "passed over"; the oldest child was not found dead.

And so, this feast was very dear to every Jewish heart and was kept very carefully. Read verses 13 to 15 of Mark 14, and learn how the disciples found a room in which to keep the feast. Do you remember what they ate at this feast?

When they had finished the Passover, Jesus took some bread, thanked God, broke the bread, and passed it to the disciples, telling them it represented His body. Then He passed the wine to them and told them it represented His blood, which would be shed for the sins of the world.

Then Jesus told them that whenever they partook of the bread and the wine, they should remember Him, for He was going away and would not return until He came as King. Then He would again eat this supper with His true followers.

They were all very sad as they went out, for Jesus had said one of them was going to betray Him and another deny Him. Surely, none of them would do that!

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Through Golden Rule News I learned only last week that one of our Scrapbook Club members had just finished a long quarantine because of scarlet fever in his home, Richard Lindstrom, of Cleveland, one of our first members. If we had known this sooner the club members would have enjoyed writing to you, Richard, and helping you pass some of your lonely moments more pleasantly. When any one of our members is sick or must stay in for any reason we hope some one will tell us about it, because we really are one family, although we are scattered over six states, from Michigan to Texas, and from Virginia to Nebraska. Aren't we a large family—twenty-three children? But we're not like the old woman in the shoe, who had so many children she didn't know what to do! No, indeed, we want more members, the more, the merrier. And now, for this week's work.

At the top of your page always write the date, the subject of the lesson, and the golden text. Add whatever you think is suitable and will make your lessons more attractive and interesting to what is given on this page each week. The more you try the drawing and the writing, the better you will be able to do them. Who knows, one of you may be a wonderful artist or a famous author some day! I'm looking forward to seeing your scrapbooks soon.

Write the answers to these questions:

In memory of what event was the Passover held?

How did the disciples find a room in Jerusalem in which to keep this feast?

What did Jesus say to them when they were eating?

What did He say the bread and the wine represented?

When will He eat this supper with His disciples again?

Now draw a table in the form of three sides of a hollow square; behind the table draw the backs of thirteen chairs, Jesus' chair being the middle one. Below this paste a picture of Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives.

Last, copy this prayer:

"O Captain of my soul, lead on;
I follow Thee, come dark or dawn,
Only vouchsafe three things I crave:
Where terror stalks, help me be brave!
Where righteous ones can scarce endure
The siren call, help me be pure!
Where vows grow dim, and men dare do
What once they scorned, help me be true!"

LESSON 10. — June 4, 1933

JESUS FACES BETRAYAL AND DENIAL

Mark 14:10-72

Devotional Reading: Psalm 42:6-11

GOLDEN TEXT

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—Isaiah 53:3.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Faces Betrayal and Denial.

Aim: To impress the meaning of the Lord's Supper on the mind of the pupil and to warn him against the danger of denying the Lord.

Basic Truth: "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."—1 Corinthians 11:26. "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak."—Matthew 26:41.

I. Jesus Predicts His Betrayal. (Vv. 17-21.) The greatest trial Jesus was called upon to bear was not that of false accusation at the hands of His enemies, nor even His crucifixion that followed, but sorrow He felt as a result of His betrayal by one of His immediate followers, and the failure of all the others to remain true to Him in His hour of greatest need. The greatest danger the church faces today comes not from the open enemies of Christ, but from those who profess to be His followers and do not stand firmly for Him in teaching and practice.

II. The Memorial Service Instituted. (Vv. 22-25.) The Lord's Supper is the only feast enjoined on the church by Christ. It represents or typifies the basic truth of the gospel—the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ on behalf of mankind. It further acts as a constant reminder of the Lord's future coming, and is thus expressive of the two great facts that constitute the good news of the gospel, viz., the resurrection of the dead, and the coming of Christ to establish the kingdom of God on earth.

III. Jesus Foresees the Desertion of His Disciples. (Vv. 27-31.) As the final act in the tragedy of Christ's sufferings drew near the details of the various events became ever more clear to His mind. Much had apparently been withheld from His knowledge in the earlier part of His ministry, but was now being revealed to Him, and He in turn passed the information on to His disciples. The experience of Peter (Matt. 26:75) indicates how this method served to impress the truth on the minds of the apostles when the fulfillment of the predictions came to pass.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

1. Betraying the Master: (a) woe to the betrayer; (b) friends forsook when needed; (c) do we betray Him? Our lesson depicts the scene on the night of the betrayal. The Master was betrayed without cause. Innocent blood was spilled for the lust of money. Judas lived in the immediate present only. He was typical of humanity. People are living in the present, unmindful of the great future that is soon to break. Surely if they were aware that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God," they would not call a woe down upon their heads as Judas did.

It was His friends who forsook Him, if they can be called friends. His disciples forsook Him when He needed them most. In a sense, at least, they were not "friends indeed." Can we really be classed as His true friends, friends in whom He can always rely? Do we betray Him as His first friends did? It requires more than lip service to be a real, true, and trusted friend. They all said they would not deny Christ. But they did. Oh, for friends that are true, dependable, and always the same!

2. The supper: (a) Jesus will eat and drink anew in the kingdom; (b) promise of the kingdom; (c) make sure your entrance. When Jesus instituted the last supper, commonly called the "Lord's Supper," He made the promise that He would eat and drink with His people in the kingdom. This promise is a kingdom promise, for it must of necessity include a kingdom. It sets forth the reality of both kingdom and people. What a day it will be when Jesus eats and drinks anew in the kingdom with His redeemed people! A kingdom composed of the last supper of this world. Rev. 11:15. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom."—Matt. 7:21. Give diligence to make your entrance sure. 2 Peter 2:10, 11.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

This prophecy, though written in the present tense, was uttered some seven hundred years before the birth of Christ and was just as literally fulfilled as had it been history written after His crucifixion. Christ was despised because He taught a new doctrine and pointed out the sins of the people. He was rejected for fear the rulers of the time would lose their positions. Just jealousy caused it.

"A man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." How could it have been otherwise, when He knew practically all His lifetime what He must endure and the kind of death He must die? He not only had His own worries, but in addition to them He carried the sorrows and bore the griefs of others. When we realize this, what manner of persons ought we to be in appreciation for what He has done for us?—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Fellowship of His Sufferings

"The carnal mind is enmity against God."—Rom. 8:7. This makes all carnal people enemies of Christians; and because they are enemies, and carnal, a Christian must expect persecution from them. Jesus warned to this effect. "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own . . . but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." "They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service."—John 15:19; 16:2.

Jesus warned His followers of the cross that would be theirs: "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves . . . beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues; and ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles. . . And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved. . . Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. . . And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." Matt. 10:16-18, 22, 34, 36.

God has promised that we can become "joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."—Rom. 8:17. We must suffer, but let us say with Paul: "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory which shall be revealed in us."—H. A. S.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: The Lord's Supper.

Many times Jesus had told His disciples that He was going to be put to death. In our lesson today He tells them more about it.

One evening Jesus and His disciples were gathered together. They were sitting at a long table eating.

While they were eating, Jesus said, "Some day soon, one of you disciples is going to betray Me." By this He meant that one would not stay true to Jesus, but would tell some cruel men who wanted to kill Jesus just who and where Jesus was.

You can imagine how excited they became. Each one began to ask, "Is it I?" Jesus finally told them which one it would be.

And then Jesus did something very important to us. He took some bread, gave thanks, and gave some to each of His disciples. Then He took some wine, gave thanks, and gave some of the wine to each one. After this they sang a song and went out to the Mount of Olives.

We still do this same thing in our churches. We call it "The Lord's Supper." Do you know why? Jesus asked us to do this to remember Him, until He comes again.—V. C. T.

"A PROPHETIC DEVELOPMENT"

Bro. Vivian Magaw of Lester Prairie, Minnesota, makes an interesting comment based on an article that appeared recently in these columns. He says: "When I read 'A Prophetic Development' on page 10 of the May 9 issue of The Restitution Herald I was reminded of Daniel's prophecy of a king who shall be diverse from the other kings and shall subdue three kings (chapter 7, verse 24).

"It seems to me that the ruler of Italy will find it easy to subdue the three small nations of Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Jugoslavia. However, according to Revelation 17:12, it seems that all ten of these nations and their rulers will retain their identities; but subservient to the beast. It will be interesting to note the next dictator of Italy."

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL

One of the new features to be added to Illinois Bible School this year is the opportunity for selective courses for all those above high school age. Bros. G. E. Marsh and F. L. Austin, our foremost leaders, will teach classes on current and future events, respectively, interpreted in the light of God's prophetic Word. Bro. M. W. Lyon, one of our ablest teachers for several years past, will conduct a class on Bible principles for which the church, as a body, stands. There will also be a selective course for Sunday school workers, of which Sr. Grace Marsh is chairman. The leaders in this department will be announced later.

The curriculum for Illinois Bible School for 1933 is both interesting and instructive. We hope you will find something you need, whether you are a leader in your home church or a layman. Plan now to be here for August 1; make your spiritual contribution to this school and receive your portion of benefit and blessing.—M. G.

FINANCES IN ILLINOIS

All of you who have made pledges to Illinois State Conference funds won't you please send in at least part of your pledge at once and the remainder as soon as possible? Many of our members have not made any pledge, and these we would be glad to hear from also, even though the amount they send may be small. One dollar from each of one hundred friends means more to the Master's cause than one hundred dollars from three or four. Our treasurer, Anna E. Drew, 629 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Illinois, is waiting to hear from you, and the letter you will receive in response will be a real treat. In apportioning your tithe don't forget Sr. Drew.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

The Restitution Herald extends its felicitations to the pastor and congregation of the Church of God at Fonthill, Ontario, as it meets for its Twenty-ninth Annual May Meeting. Since the establishment of the organization by Bro. Peter Bouk, of revered memory, the Fonthill church has continued to forge ahead in the Master's service.

With each recurring May Meeting some growth has been indicated, some advancement made. Under the able leadership of Bro. C. E. Randall, its present pastor, the church continues to grow in influence in the community it serves, and provides congregations in less favorable localities with encouragement to press forward in the Lord's work.

A splendid program has been arranged for this great gathering. Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago, who for many years was pastor of the church, will again be the principal speaker and Bible teacher. This alone insures a successful and profitable meeting. The entire program as given in the announcement which is mentioned elsewhere in this paper, is as follows:

Friday, May 26

7:45 p. m.—Song Service.
 8:00 p. m.—Sermon by F. L. Austin.

Saturday, May 27

10:30 a. m.—Bible Study.
 2:30 p. m.—Bible Study.
 7:45 p. m.—Song Service.

Sunday, May 28

8:00 p. m.—Sermon by F. L. Austin.
 10:00 a. m.—Sunday School.
 Mrs. Lillian Railton, Supt.
 11:00 a. m.—Sermon by F. L. Austin.
 12:00 m.—Communion.
 2:30 p. m.—Devotional Service.
 3:00 p. m.—Sermon by C. E. Randall.
 7:00 p. m.—Song Service.
 7:30 p. m.—Sermon by F. L. Austin.

We know from past experience that Sunday will be a most glorious day filled to overflowing with spiritual uplift and Christian fellowship. We pray for God's blessing to attend every service.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Have you asked your friends to subscribe to The Restitution Herald? It would give you a splendid new point of contact with them in your effort to interest them in the truths of God.

Mrs. Mary A. Calkins, a beloved elderly sister of Lynwood, Calif., writes that she is just recovering from a serious illness. Sr. Calkins remains as vitally interested in the work of spreading the gospel as she was many years ago. We thank the Father that she is better in health, and trust that her life will be spared until the Lord comes.

One of the most attractive special meeting announcements we have ever received reached us from Fonthill, Ont., as we go to press. It shows a picture of the church building on the front page; Bro. C. E. Randall's cheerful countenance greets us as we turn the leaf; on the following page are the photographs of Bro. F. L. Austin, the principal speaker of the coming meeting; and that of Bro. T. A. Weldon, the beloved elder of the church. On the last page appears the picture of Bro. Arthur Gilbey, former active member of the congregation, but now a resident of Rochester, New York, who expresses his expectation of being present at the gathering, and anticipates a splendid meeting.

If the attendance at the Grand Rapids Sunday school continues to grow as it has ever since the establishment of the church they will have to push the walls out in every direction to accommodate their classes. What a splendid opportunity for service! And how the church in Grand Rapids rises to embrace that opportunity! And how wonderfully the Lord is rewarding their efforts to carry on His work faithfully!

Our next issue, World Peace Number, will contain a thought-provoking article from the hand of James A. Patrick, formerly editor of "Day Dawn," which was consolidated some years ago with this paper. Bro. Patrick's study is entitled, "Things That Can Be Shaken."

"G. A. S." in submitting the interesting short article entitled, "What Is Expected of Me as a Christian?" says, "I have thought much about the bewildered state of mind of many of the truly humble ones, who are newly converted, feel themselves to be in. I have tried in a simple way to answer the question they are asking."

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Mother's Day was a very pleasant occasion in the church here. An all-time record of 344 was set at Sunday school, with a ladies' class of about 50 mothers the crowning class of the day. Three of the girls' classes had purchased carnations for all mothers present, which were presented in connection with a short, appropriate program at the close of Sunday school.

The house was crowded for the preaching service which followed. A beautiful rendering of "Rock of Ages" was given by the choir, and the sermon was designed to show how motherhood has the wonderful opportunity of acting as the "Rock of Ages" by leading her family to Christ, who in turn leads to God.

Bouquets were presented to the oldest and youngest mothers present, the oldest going to Sr. Richardson, 76, and the youngest to Mrs. Krundle, 19, who was there with her two-week's old baby.

Evening service also drew a full house.

Next Sunday, and the following, the pastor expects to be with the Brush Creek church near Dayton, Ohio.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

The Gospel of the Kingdom

By Lottie E. Young

SO-CALLED Christianity defines the gospel as belief in the name of Jesus Christ, but says nothing about the literal kingdom on earth which is also embraced in this good news; and people generally seem to believe as the old minister did who, when some one quoted, "The meek shall inherit the earth, replied, "No, no, brother, not earth, heaven." And yet the great Teacher emphasizes this phase of the gospel continually; and not only He, but His disciples of old, repeatedly affirm throughout the Bible this truth which we believe. Let us see what some of them have to say on the subject.

Jeremiah says it is to be a literal kingdom, established on the earth, for 3:17 says, "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord: and all the nations shall be gathered unto it."

Ezekiel tells us that the kingdom will consist of the twelve tribes of Israel, who will be gathered from all nations, and, after the rebels have been purged out, will be planted in the land of Palestine. Ezekiel 20:38: "And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel."

Daniel says that the dominion pertaining to this kingdom will embrace all Gentile nations on earth. Chapter 7:27: "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom."

Both Old and New Testaments tell us that Jerusalem will be rebuilt in splendor and will be the city of the great King, the capital of the world. Isaiah 62:6, 7: "I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence, and give him no rest, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." Matthew 5:35 says: "Swear not . . . by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King."

The nations then in existence will consist of mortal men and women as at present. They will go up representatively from year to year to worship the Lord, the King, at Jerusalem. And Isaiah tells how they will build houses and plant vineyards and enjoy themselves, "for as the days of a tree are the days of my people; and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people."

The Apostle John in his vision on the Isle of Patmos saw what the Prophet Micah had foretold hundreds of years before and which has not yet been fulfilled, that when the kingdom has been established the nations will learn war no more, but will live in peace a thousand years.

Every kingdom must have its rulers, and the first and last books of the New Testament tell us that these governors will be immortal and will consist of Jesus and His brethren. These kings will be those who have been redeemed by the blood of Jesus out of every nation. John, listening to the song of the twenty-four elders heard: "For thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, and we shall reign on the earth." Jesus promised the twelve that they should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

But before this can take place, Jesus must return to Jerusalem to sit on David's throne. David sang in the seventy-second Psalm of the glories of that reign; Paul testified of it; and the angel announced to Mary that her Son would be that desire of all nations.

When Jesus and His brethren have reigned a thousand years over mortal nations, all sinners shall be rooted out of the earth; and from that period it will be inhabited by a race of immortal beings, of whom we are told: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

This is the tangible hope of the church: not a disembodied spirit floating about or playing on a harp, which seems to be the only occupation the angels have according to everyday theology, but a working for Jesus now and a sure place in His kingdom in the hereafter.—The Gospel Trumpet.

Preparation for the Coming Storm

God's storm signals are out all over the world. The most significant and startling thing about present conditions is that the black hand of depression, crime, and confusion has settled upon every land.

As one secular writer has illustrated the matter: "In the old days there were two men in a boat and when one fell into the water, the other pulled him out but now, they are both in the water and the boat is on the way to the bottom."

If this writer speaks the truth, as seems likely from present indications, then it is time for every believer to make sure that he is in the life-boat. The writer does not pretend to know when the final storm will burst upon an unbelieving world. No one knows the year of doom for this sin-wracked globe; but of this we are sure, that conditions now obtaining are in absolute harmony with Bible prophecy of last-day conditions.

These are things that, for many years, we have been saying must come before the return of our Lord. Can anyone doubt that the temper of the world mind is explosive today? The national nerves are on edge, and the international fears and hatreds are greater than ever in the past.

Capitalism seems to be approaching its end. Already the weeping and howling of the rich as portrayed in James 5 is to be seen and heard, and the end is not yet. It has been stated by an acknowledged authority that "all the economists in the country agree that we are at the end of an economic era," but the serious thing about the matter is that they do not know what will come next.

In Mr. Hoover's message, just a little before the close of his term of office, he made the following alarming statements: Within two years there have been revolutions, or acute social disorders, in nineteen countries. Ten countries have been unable to meet their financial obligations. In fourteen countries embracing a quarter of the entire human race, former monetary standards have been abandoned and in a number of countries there have been acute financial panics.

Since this message was given, no improvement has been realized. The much dreaded word, war, has been spoken in every country of Europe. It has been generally conceded that Europe's powder magazine has been seriously menaced by Hitlerism in Germany, by the straining of Franco-Italian relations, and by Polish-German clashes; while the whole post-war peace machinery (the League of Nations and the Kellogg Pact) is threatened with utter collapse by the unchecked Japanese occupation of Manchuria and Jehol and the wars in South America.

To add to these dangers of the world's peace, we have Bolshevism. R. H. B. Lockhart, of the British Secret Service, writes: "The Bolsheviks have established a rule of force and oppression unequalled in the history of autocracy." The avowed ambition of Lenin is to create civil warfare throughout Europe. Another writer of the British Secret Service says: "Bolshevism in Russia, offers to our civilization no less a menace than did Prussianism and until it is as ruthlessly destroyed, we may expect trouble."

Turning from the menace of war to another peril, we quote the recent utterances of Herbert Parker, former Attorney-General of Massachusetts: "A crime epidemic is starting, which, if it gets free will overwhelm the entire republic." One editor in commenting on his words says: "It seems to be getting free rather than becoming more confined."

Our city officials are either in collusion with criminals and racketeers or are proving themselves utterly incompetent to check their nefarious business. The burden of taxation is becoming heavier in our cities, while the dangers attendant upon living in them are becoming daily more alarming. All the world seems to be in a turmoil, and about everything we do to extricate ourselves seems but to drive us more deeply into the mire. We are living in the most perplexed and fearful world since the dawn of history.

A few weeks ago the Archbishop of Canterbury, speaking before a distinguished audience of government leaders in London, stated that "world safety is now in the balance," and speaks of the present course of things, as "a certain prelude to another war."

The world today is spending ten million dollars a day in preparation for another war. With economic ruin staring us in the face, with millions of men out of work, with nearly every country in the world deeply in debt and unable to balance their budgets, we still, at tremendous cost, prepare for another slaughter.

Do not these conditions, with other phases of evil just as serious in their import for which we have no time in this article, indicate that the last great storm may be upon us? If so, should we not look carefully to our sources of protection and shelter? Much is being said by religious men about the need of getting back to God. This is a right suggestion, but it is too general. The one way to get back to God is to get back into harmony with every teaching of the Bible.

In the last analysis the evils of the world today are the result of getting away from God's Word. This does not mean simply to come back to the doctrinal teaching. We are indeed instructed to "take heed unto the doctrine," but we are also told that "without the Spirit of Christ we are none of his." Let us make sure, first of all, that we are new creatures in Christ Jesus. Then let us find out if we are filled with the Spirit and sanctified wholly to the service of Christ.

The one great Bible test of the life that is ready for the coming of Christ is the daily bearing of the fruits of the Spirit (Galatians 5:22, 23). Are we bearing them all each day? Let us be sure, for soon it will be too late to "buy oil."—I. F. B. in The World's Crisis.

World Peace

After the storm, a calm;
After the bruise, a balm;
For the pain-wracked earth to joy gives birth,
And the sigh becomes a psalm.

Soon will the warfare cease;
Soon will there come release;
For the sorrowing earth will be filled with mirth,
At the dawn of eternal peace!

"Now the God of peace . . . make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."—Hebrews 13:20, 21.

A Prayer for World Peace

THOU eternal God of peace, unto Thee do we come in every time of perplexity and fear, knowing that Thou art ready always to listen to our pleas and able to grant the desires of our hearts. Therefore, our Father, we come unto Thee voicing the cry of all peoples of the earth—a prayer for peace! We realize that peace can never spread its white wings of blessing over the nations of men until Jesus comes to take His throne, and so we plead for His coming, the gracious, the powerful, the loving King, who eventually shall reign from pole to pole, and all mankind shall call Him blessed; for in His days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

World Peace

THE cry of the distracted world is "Peace! Peace!" The conference for the limitation of armaments now in session in Geneva is but an echo of the swelling voice of all mankind demanding peace. From north and south, from east and west, comes that insistent pleading prayer of war-threatened nations—Give us peace!

Our hearts go out in profoundest sympathy to those whose fears have driven them to the verge of frenzy; and we long to comfort them, to bring them the hope and the assurance that faith in God and in the promises recorded in His Word alone can give. But they are wholly indifferent to our message, unconscious of our appeals! They neither heed our warning nor believe the glorious tidings we proclaim!

Yet men must realize that all other plans have failed to provide the assurance of lasting peace they crave. The final human hope rested in the League of Nations; and, according to a recent writer, when "once the Japanese had launched their Manchurian operation, the League of Nations was reduced to the status of a mill-wheel suspended over a water-course which had gone dry. The machine, itself, continued intact, available, adequate; but the collective will of mankind, which was to supply the power, was lacking."

So it has been throughout the history of the world peace movement. With every new suggestion that seemed to hold out the possibility of peace the entire world has rejoiced; and when the plan failed, and they have all failed, the entire world has been distressed.

But peace is coming—glorious, age-lasting, universal peace! A peace that will be so profound and deep, so satisfying to the torn and bleeding hearts of men, that war-torn nations will vie with each other in seeking to be the first to submit themselves to Him who by His justice, His righteousness, His power, and His love succeeds in bringing it about.

Speaking of that same mighty Potentate, the apostle declares that "he is our peace!" And the words are not only true of Him in a spiritual sense, and with reference to the church, but they are also true in a temporal sense, and pertaining to the entire world. In Him is centered the only hope of the world for peace. What He has been able to accomplish so wonderfully in a spiritual way for the individual who believes in Him He will also be able to perform for the nation that humbly submits to His gracious control in the age that is to come.

Well may the prophet say of Him that His name shall be "Wonderful counsellor, Godlike hero, Father forever, Prince of peace!" (Isaiah 9:6, American Translation.) Peace will be the crowning accomplishment of His reign. So potent will it be that "all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths."

When the nations thus humbly submit themselves to Him they will find (to paraphrase the words of Solomon) that His "ways are ways of pleasantness, and all (His) paths are peace." As they listen to His voice of power, each will respond with the Psalmist, "I will hear what God will speak (through him): for he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints."

As this wondrous kingdom reaches out into the darkness of the world, as men experience something of the graciousness of its Ruler, they will see in this mighty kingdom of small beginning, that "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other."

Having reached at last in the great University of God a true conception of the value of peace, "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

The Prince of Peace

By F. L. Austin

GOVERNMENT is essential. The stars with tremendous velocity speed crisscross through the heavens without jar or accident, being governed by most accurate traffic laws. The stand-still violets and daisies at our feet grow and bloom under laws of government just as necessary and just as precise. Mankind is no exception. Without myriad governing laws man could not come into existence, nor continue; could not perfect family relationships, nor community strength; could not build nations. Without such governing laws the human race can never affiliate as members of one common family with equal rights to the ample resources provided by the Creator's generous hand.

True and proper government leads to unbounded prosperity and peace; the lack of it to every Neronian debacle, to every satanic misery. Pure government is fundamental to eternal life and righteousness.

EVIL CONFEDERACY FALLS

Government is composed of ruler and ruled.

Again and again the omniscient and omnipotent God offered to rule His own chosen people, Israel. Every such offer of God had been rejected, dashed to the ground. Always the government of some weak, short-sighted, self-seeking human was preferably accepted.

It is seven hundred forty-two years before the birth of Him who is to become "the Prince of Peace." Ahaz is king in Jerusalem. A confederacy of God-rejecting kings, Rezin and Pekah, come from the north to overthrow Jerusalem, the city of God's abode. Faithless Ahaz turns from God to lean upon Tiglath-pileser (Isaiah 7 and 2 Kings 16). Then the Lord speaks through Isaiah, uttering a series of prophecies relating to Jerusalem unto all future time (Isaiah 7:1 to 12:6). These prophecies whisper the great truth that Jerusalem should yet be the eternal city of God, the capital of the world, the city which shall be glorified to provide abode to the coming "Prince of Peace."

Listen! Jehovah is speaking! Before the Virgin's Son "shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land (Judea) which thou (Ahaz) abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings" (Rezin and Pekah). This was to be a sign that God was with them. Therefore, the name of the child was to be "Immanuel," that is, "God with us." Judah was unable to stay the invaders; faithless Ahaz was powerless; but Judah was to know that God could give them peace and rest from the cruel, ruthless confederates.

It was done. While the child was yet an infant, both those kings came to be among the dead. Truly God was "Immanuel" at Jerusalem. He was God of peace to them.

With much stronger testimony Jerusalem witnessed a second Immanuel. He was the Son of Mary. "They shall call his name Emmanuel; which being interpreted is, God with us."—Matthew 1:23. It was Jesus whose after-words were the words given by God; whose works were not His own, but the works of God; whose life was to do, not His own will, but the will of God. How truly did Jerusalem have the testimony that in and through Jesus God was again with them—Emmanuel.

Truly God was again with His people and His city. Wondrous sign and evidence of God's constancy to the people of His choice, to the city of His abode! Why would they not hark, and see, and heed? Ah! that people's hearts had waxed gross against God, and their ears were dull of hearing.

However, one thing was evident, namely, peace permeated the lives of those who perceived that God was the moving force behind Christ, that through Him God was with them.

But yet again will God be with Israel—Emmanuel. He of whom it was said, "A child is born," will return to Zion clothed with all power and splendor from God, "and the government shall be upon his shoulder."

Government! A government that will govern, a Leader that will lead, for God Himself shall sustain Him who shall be Ruler.

THE CHILDREN

But before we follow Him in the fulfillment of His God-appointed task, let us go back to another of God's prophecies through Isaiah. It is in chapter 8, verses 11 to 22,

When Jesus Comes for Me

When I have grief that seems too hard to bear,
When I am almost overcome with care,
This is the hope, which, shining bright and fair,
Makes every shadow flee;
My eyes will never, never weep again,
My heart will never feel the ache of pain,
And every mystery will be made plain
When Jesus comes for me.

O, greatest comfort to this heart of mine!
Content to watch, and wait, and work, and pray,
It cannot fail! the word, O Lord, is Thine:
Glorious certainty!
Then, to this future, let me look away,
And borrow courage for my task today,
O, blessed promise! covenant divine!
Leaving the time with Thee.

—Robert Crumly; selected by Alice B. Curtis.

Verse 18 reads, "Behold, I, and the children whom the Lord hath given me, are for signs and for wonders in Israel from the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth in mount Zion." "Children"? Hebrews 2:13 by divine inspiration interprets these children as being the same as the "many sons" of verse 10, the same as Christ's "brethren" of verse 11. By the same analysis, the "I" of Isaiah 8:18 can be interpreted as none other than Christ. "I, and the children whom the Lord hath given me, are for signs and wonders in Israel from the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth in mount Zion."

"Signs and wonders"!

Those "children," or "brethren," whom the Lord will have sanctified and glorified with Christ, will with Him be evident signs of the unlimited power and wisdom and certainty of God. They, "sanctified" and glorified with their "Captain" and "Head" whom Jerusalem crucified, will be an outstanding marvel, "wonder," of the greatness of Jehovah and of His purposes for Israel, yes, and for man. And when this condition will have been perfected upon the streets of the city of God, Israel will have poor cause to be again deflected from the word of Jehovah unto the prating lispings of mere mortal man.

THE GOVERNMENT OF PEACE

Till then the Child that was born stands in waiting readiness at the door, having been clothed in all the garments of holy royalty, awaiting the Father's word to descend to Jerusalem, the city of God, to take "the throne of his father David."

What quickly ushered changes will amaze the world! Then will enter the first of all governments of earth that can really govern; one that will plant "on earth peace, good will toward men."

Peace: what detains it?

The heart of the world is today searching and praying for peace as possibly in no former time. Families have previously sought peace; nations have yearned for it; continents have sought it: but today the whole world, with few exceptions, seeks it. The United States President, the British Premier, the Italian Dictator, and others, have been imploring each other, and all, for peace. But there seems to be a prevailing world condition something like the condition of Jerusalem in the days of Josiah, king of Judah. Read Jeremiah 6:1-15. "The word of the Lord" was "unto them a reproach," and yet they cried to Him, "Peace, peace; when" there was "no peace." God told them why, but they believed Him not: "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider."—Isaiah 1:3. Their trouble was a lack of knowledge of God.

Every reverse of Israel and Judah is ascribed to a lack of knowledge of God. Not that they were altogether ignorant of His laws and statutes; rather by rejecting them they were unpracticed in obedience thereof. They had "forsaken the Lord" in their dealings and doings. Therefore, one catastrophe followed another upon them. Jesus in His day "wept over" Jerusalem, "saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes . . . thine enemies shall . . . lay thee with the ground . . . because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." See their resultant age-long depression.

God is "the God of peace" (Romans 15:33; 16:20); He "is not the author of confusion, but of peace" (1 Corinthians 14:33). Nor is there peace in any other.

He has made all provision to coronate His Son to be "the Prince of Peace." By and through Him who faithfully knew His Father in the doing of His Father's will, God has ordained that peace shall eventually be brought to the whole world. By having active knowledge of His Father's will, Christ has entered the peace of God. Next, His "children," or "brethren," by coming to know the experience of doing His will, taste of "the peace of God" "which passeth all understanding." Next in order, Jerusalem and her people are to enter upon a like grand experience. Envision the picture of real and literal peace when the "rod out of the stem of Jesse" will rule: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

Why no hurting? Because "the knowledge of the Lord" will fill all (Isaiah 11:1 to 12:6). The wolf, the lamb, the leopard—mutual enemies—will be led by the child. Miraculous? No; simply a result proceeding from the active knowledge of God's fundamental laws of governing His creation. The venomous asp will harmlessly welcome the child's hand. Impossible! No; a fact of peace, a result permeating every phase of life in the established kingdom of the Prince of Peace.

How possible? Upon this "rod out of the stem of Jesse . . . the Spirit of the Lord shall rest . . . the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear (reverence) of the Lord."

Thus the Prince of proven loyalty will be vested with every qualification for perfect rulership. Therefore, "of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever."

But where? "Upon my holy mountain"; "upon the throne of David"; "at that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord."—Jeremiah 3:17.

And first it will be set up "upon (David's) kingdom," Israel (Isaiah 9:7); "over the house of Jacob," Israel (Luke 1:33). Why there first? When the new covenant is established, "they shall all know me."—Jeremiah 31:31-34. "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children."—Isaiah 54:13. "Gentiles shall come to thy light" (Isaiah 60:3); "Gentiles shall seek" the root of Jesse (Isaiah 11:10); "many people shall . . . go up to the mountain of the Lord . . . and he will teach us of his ways . . . and (they shall) learn war no more" (Isaiah 2:2-5). "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."—Habakkuk 2:14.

Wondrous day when the Prince of Peace will reign in the fullness of His glorious power and when the peace of God will adorn the earth as in the pre-sin days of Eden.

May writer and reader each increase daily in that living knowledge which prepares for best service to Him upon whose shoulder this greatest of governments is to rest.

Your Redemption Draweth Nigh

By Mary A. Gesin

---

ON THE editorial page of a prominent Christian publication we find one of the planks in its permanent platform to be this: "To support World Peace: that it may be world-wide and lasting; to champion those forces, wherever they appear, that bid fair to aid in the effort to make a Christ-like world."

To be truly Christlike the world, we all realize, must be enfolded in a spirit of peace, for Christ Himself was the manifestation of God's greatest blessings for men. "Peace on earth" was the theme of the song sung by angels on the night of the birth of the Prince of Peace.

A careful reading of the pages of the above-mentioned high-class magazine from month to month justifies the thoughtful reader in his opinion that this same world-wide and lasting peace will eventually be ushered in by the efforts of the scientist, the sociologist, the statesman, and the politician. "We will outlaw war" are the words that have often flamed from the headlines of the printed page.

Let us turn to the pages of God's Word to discover whether His proclamation, issued through the lips of His messengers more than nineteen hundred years ago, will become a reality in the manner generally accepted. And by a careful survey of conditions prevalent in this year of our Lord 1933 we may be able to measure the progress man has made in that direction.

"When they shall say, Peace and safety," warns the apostle in his first epistle to the Thessalonians, "then sudden destruction cometh." And the truth of Paul's words is most apparent to this generation. The unexpected swooping of war down upon defenseless men and women and children has left its tremors in our hearts even today. All this just when noted thinkers had declared there would never be another such terrifying conflict.

The words of the Prince of Peace Himself can leave no doubt in our minds as we study them particularly in Matthew 24 and Luke 21 that futile indeed would be the hope that world peace and world brotherhood will ever be ushered in by man.

Unrest and turmoil are prevalent among all nations; the greed and avarice of wicked men continue; failure of many institutions upon which man has placed his dependence has affected the entire world. All of this reveals to the sane mind that, rather than progress toward the vision of a world without war, we have retrograded in the direction of greater confusion and conflict since the eighteenth day of May, thirty-four years ago, when the first peace conference was held at The Hague.

"Men's hearts failing them for fear" (Luke 21:26) is more descriptive of today's condition than any words of statesman or scientist could ever be. "But when ye hear of wars and commotions," the Master continues for our comfort, "be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass."

Then comes the blessed assurance, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh," for, "then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory" (Verses 28 and 27 in the same powerful sermon from the lips of the One by whom world-wide peace will be established).

"In the last days it shall come to pass," Micah prophesies, chapter four, "that . . . many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord . . . and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths," which will truly be the ways and paths of permanent peace. For then "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks," converting a world of wickedness into a Christlike world and even the implements of war into those of peace, not by any of the forces that appear today except as they are exemplified in the lives of His true followers.

How much more meaning we may read between the lines of the following taken from the publication referred to:

"Dear Lord, the world has known so many wars,
It bears such bitter, deep, and lasting scars,
Reach out Thy hand, O Maker of us all;
Bend down Thy listening ear and hear our call
In this, and every other threatening hour.
Only Thy might, dear Lord, only Thy power
Can change the hearts of men—can bid them cease
Their avarice and greed—and bring us peace.

"Lord of the nations, let no nation reign
To crush another. Free us from the stain
Of blood and slaughter—let us not forget
The loving, kind example Thou hast set.
God help us lift the Golden Rule so high
That its bright words will flame against the sky:
Do Unto Others As Ye Would That They
Do Unto You; and then will come the day—
The crushed will rise, the bound will find release,
And we shall know the blessedness of peace."

Things Shaken and Unshaken

By James A. Patrick

"Whose (God's) voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain."—Hebrews 12:26 and 27.

PEOPLE are in the habit of pinning their faith to things that can be seen and felt; the unseen, they seem to think, is too uncertain. Yet Paul says, "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."—2 Corinthians 4:18.

God, foreseeing that people would forget the unseen and lay hold of the seen and temporal things, has warned that the things seen should be shaken until they are removed, so that there will be nothing material left to lay hold of and that the things which cannot be shaken may remain.

There is much said in the Bible about shaking the heavens and the earth. In Isaiah 2:19 we are told what will happen when the Lord "ariseth to shake terribly the earth." Again in Isaiah 13:13 we read, "Therefore I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger." In Isaiah 24:17-20 we read, "Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth. And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again." It is because the transgression is heavy upon it that it is so terribly shaken.

In Hebrews 12:26 where Paul said, "Whose voice then shook the earth," he was referring to the literal shaking of the earth at the time of the giving of the law on Mount Sinai. So the shaking that is soon coming will literally shake not only the earth (Greek, ge), but will shake the cosmos, or political and social arrangement. That this is true is shown by Haggai 2:6, 7, 21, 22: "For thus saith the Lord of hosts, Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; and I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts. . . . Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the heavens and the earth: and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen: and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother." We have seen how thrones and kingdoms of the Old World have been overthrown in the shaking thus far, and yet it will undoubtedly be much worse in the near future.

The question, Why does God allow it to be so? might arise. This is "man's day." The Lord is allowing man to have his way. God has tried to deal with man in various ways down through the ages, and man has always wanted his own way. God is allowing him to have it, and we can see what a mess he is making of it. Mankind seems to feel no need of God at all. It has placed its affections altogether on things material. Man must have his farms, his bank accounts, his life insurance policies, and every possible device to insure him against the "rainy day." I am not condemning frugality; but with too many these material things have led them to forget God; they give Him nothing of all that He has given them; they relegate Him into the background. Now God is allowing their houses of cards to fall about their ears to show them that all their material things are nothing.

Considering things from the standpoint of human power, is there anything that is absolutely stable? Our wisest statesmen and diplomats tell us that we are on the brink of a precipice and that our civilization is about to topple over into chaos. It seems to me there is not one plank in the platform of human endeavor that is absolutely stable. The very things that people have always looked to as being constant, abiding, are becoming very unstable.

I was much interested in reading in a recent issue of THE HERALD what some of our senators and representatives think is the cause of the present conditions. They seem to be very firm in the opinion that unrighteousness is the underlying cause of all our trouble. I think they are right. Selfishness is the cause of the world-trouble. Every man is grabbing for all he can get regardless of what happens to others. "Every man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost." There seems but little inclination on the part of the people of the world to act in any other way than that they are acting.

Looking into the future through the telescope of Revelation, we find that this condition is to continue to the very end. We find when things are at their worst and a third of the men have been killed by the great army of horsemen, "the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues, yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk."—Revelation 9:20.

Since human endeavor has failed to give us stable government, and the governments of the world seem ready to topple and fall into the lap of gangdom and anarchy, what are we to do about it? Nothing. There is nothing we can do. I mean so far as this world is concerned. We can do nothing to stabilize this old world. Then where are we to look for stability?

"Lord, thou hast been our dwellingplace in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God."—Psalm 90:1, 2. "I am the Lord, I change not."—Malachi 3:6. Here we find something that is enduring and changes not.

"For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven."—

Psalm 119:89. "Concerning thy testimonies, I have known of old that thou hast founded them for ever."—Psalm 119:152. Somewhere in the world there is a painting of a great anvil, without nick or dent. Underneath it lie several broken hammers, and underneath all is this inscription: "Hammer away, ye hostile bands; your hammers break, God's anvil stands." We have found something else that is stable.

"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever."—Hebrews 13:8. Here is something else that is going to endure.

When everything of the world seems to be toppling about our ears, let us lay hold of those things which are to endure forever.

Our Part in World Peace

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

"And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever."

IF THE work of the nations were righteousness, they would soon forget their wars; but only a few have entertained the thought of good works and peace. In contrast to the right, some have worked iniquity, which brings strife and combat; they have practiced unrighteousness, the effect of which is not quietness and assurance forever, but turmoil, tumult, unrest, and uncertainty forever, or for as long as such practice is continued. Nations are reaping what they have sowed, and the harvest is not yet all gathered.

Can we blame the nations altogether for their action, or must we lay it to the political factions that are in power at the present time? Should we take the liberty to charge the parties with all the blame when they are made up of mere individuals? We therefore conclude that the sins of a nation must be traced to the individual man. So man, who is sinful at heart, is at the bottom of it all.

In this dispensation God is dealing with persons singularly. He is not making covenants with the nations as He did with the nation of Israel. It is by God's working in and through the man Jesus Christ and through the members of His body that He is going to bring about permanent world peace. For this reason we must speak of God's principles of peace and righteousness in regard to the individual. It is you and I that must strive for peace before we can expect to teach others not to quarrel. Can the church have strife in its own house and hope to be called peacemaker even though it tries to teach others? We must practice that which we preach. We must learn of peace before we can successfully teach others about it.

Here is our secret of peace in the affirmative prayer to Jehovah: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee."—Isaiah 26:3. If our minds are stayed on the Lord, we shall be kept in perfect peace. We would quarrel with neither our friends nor our enemies; we would not fret nor worry nor be uneasy about anything, because we would know that the Lord is caring for us, protecting us, and sustaining us.

If we as individuals learn of peace today and practice it, then we shall be qualified to teach it now and even more in the coming age. After the great tribulation the nations will be tired of war; they will be utterly worn out with strife and unrest. They will know that the God of heaven has set up His kingdom on earth in that Holy City Jerusalem, and they will seek peace. Then will be fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah: "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob: and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths."—Isaiah 2:3. How will He teach those who come seeking to learn of His ways? Will not God send forth His faithful servants to teach the ways of righteousness which result in peace, quietness, and assurance forever?

In that day we shall be ambassadors of world peace if our thoughts are now stayed on the Lord and if we now learn to live peaceably. Our position will be more blessed than that of the rulers of the nations today, though some are striving earnestly for peace. Our work will be under the direction of the mighty Son of God in that day of perfect peace. We will have the glorious work of teaching the nations the ways of the God of Jacob, the ways that bring quietness and peace forever.

Let us "live peaceably with all men" and do the works of righteousness. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."

The Unseen Hand

By Norman John MacLeod

(A CONSIDERATION OF "THE PROTOCOLS OF THE LEARNED ELDERS OF ZION")

SUSPICION seems to be a fundamental attribute of the human mind. It is so easy to suspect the motives of others. At any sort of a social gathering people group themselves according to their particular likes or conversational interests. The natural thing then is for each group to suspect that the others are talking about them. From that, the feeling increases to one of suspicion that the others are trying to undo them, are trying to counteract their influence with their fellows. Particularly is this true with the person who is tired or ill. Either fatigue or illness is a factor which induces a frame of mind that makes suggestions play a strong part. Any slight insinuation will become absolute proof of the sinister motives of anybody. To the politician this sort of thing has developed to such an extent that he suspects everybody. One thing that makes suspicion develop to its greatest degree is persecution.

The early Christian church was persecuted and prosecuted very bitterly, due to the influence of the Jews on the Roman Government. Left alone, Rome was very tolerant of all religions; but when political fear was played upon by religious bias, bitter persecutions were the result. Naturally, then, the Christian became very suspicious of the conduct of all Jews. Later the tables were turned: the Christians came to power, and in turn the Jews suffered persecution. Ever since that day the warfare of suspicion and persecution has been going on between the Christian and the Jew.

Recently in conversation a man who had no particular religious pretensions remarked that he thought that Hitler was the wisest man he knew of at the present time in his attitude toward the Jews. Why? Because the Jews were at the bottom of all of our present ills. They had taken all the money out of the treasuries of the various countries and were deliberately tying up credit and commerce in order to weaken the Gentile nations.

There is some ground for this suspicion, for in Europe and Asia the words "communist" and "Jew" are synonymous. Karl Marx, a German Jew, invented modern communism; a system which tells of the conflict between the rich and the poor until the poor would overthrow the rich and set up a dictatorship. That has happened in Russia. But that is contradicting the very premise which has been stated. If the Jews are of this poor class, how are they so wealthy?

"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust. . . . Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him."—Psalm 72:8-11. "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. . . . Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."—Psalm 2:6-8.

A list of the greatest fortunes of the world will reveal that they are not in the hands of Jews. Henry Ford has the largest cash reserve of any individual in the world—certainly he is not a Jew. Rockefeller is the richest man in the world from the point of view of securities—he is not a Jew. Morgan, though in company with the English Jewish family of Rothschilds, is not a Jew himself. Du Ponts are not Jews, though they may have some Jewish blood. The Mellon brothers and the King of Belgium (they are among the ten wealthiest men in the world) are none of them Jews. Only one great industry of the United States is completely dominated by Jews, and that is the moving picture industry.

The gold reserve of the nations has not disappeared, furthermore. In fact, the treasuries of the United States, Great Britain, and France have a larger gold supply now than ever before in history. It is not the disappearance of gold that is causing the present depression, it is the lack of confidence and credit. But many people believe that the Jews are responsible for all the ills of life. In Germany they are even accused of all the immoral conduct of the youth of the country. And now from another source comes an attack of suspicion against the Jews.

Through England has come a group of pamphlets and books laying the ills of the world at the door of the Jews. An escaped Russian who was held prisoner by the communists for many years sets forth what are purported to be translations of documents known as "The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion." These documents show that there has been on foot for many centuries a conspiracy organized by the Jews to overthrow all Gentile governments and set up a world dictatorship. To make the thing more plausible passages are quoted from the Bible to show the attitude of these Jews. Passages such as those that head this article are used to show the designs of the Jews. The worst part of that propaganda is that the accusations are not without grounds.

God has designed that He will set up a righteous dictatorship some day under the leadership of Jesus, the Jewish King. The prophecies of the Bible point to it; the writings of the Bible are permeated with it. It is the blessed hope of the Christian. But the Jew and the Gentile who do not understand those passages are prone to misapply them.

We recall the attitude of Rebecca, who could not wait to let the Lord give the blessing to Jacob, but had to help God out. Many of the Jews have that attitude today. They are not willing to wait until God sets His King upon "the holy hill of Zion"—they must take matters into their own hands. They are trying by force, without any question, to form an international government that will dominate all other governments. That was the purpose of Karl Marx in forming what is known as the "Communist Internationale." All the present governments of the world were to be overthrown by the communist Jews, atheistic and communistic. Such, at least, is supposed to be their purpose.

The attitude of the average skeptical Gentile is also erroneous. He looks upon the inspired Scriptures as mere concoctions of Jewish propagandists. When the Psalms and other prophecies speak of the future kingdom of Christ on the earth which shall rule all other kingdoms "with a rod of iron," he looks upon that as the wicked machinations of communistic Jews. No wonder that one such as Hitler, who does not understand the Scriptures of God, thinks that it is his chief duty in life to limit the power and influence of the Jews.

But in spite of the ambitions of the Jews and the defiance of the Gentile, God is going to set up a dictatorship on the earth that will include all nations. It will be far other than that dreamed of by the communistic Jew and will be a thing that will bring astonishment to the Gentile. The attitude of the Gentile toward the Jew and of the Jew toward the Gentile will be changed in that day from one of suspicion to one of mutual admiration and appreciation. "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold, out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you."—Zechariah 8:23.

Abundance of Peace

By George B. Alldridge

---

"Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth."—Jeremiah 33:6.

WHILE reading the good Word of God has your mind been impressed with this thought: that whenever God is inspiring His prophets to write of blessings soon to be bestowed upon the world His thoughts are always expressed in superlatives?

This is also characteristic of Jesus. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John 10:10. Once more: "For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what He hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."—Isaiah 64:4.

While our statesmen and the world's greatest thinkers can all tell us what the world needs, yet, strange to say, not one can tell us how it can be attained. In the morning paper under the caption, "Holds Army Need Is Greatest Ever," Major-General Mosley tells reserve officers of threats of peace. The first sentence reads, "I wish I could give you a message of peace, but I can't. In the words of the Bible, peace, peace—there is no peace."

Probably the general had in mind Jeremiah 8:11: "For they have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace." Isaiah says, "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked."—Isaiah 48:22; 57:21.

Thinking over Jeremiah 8:11, I thought that is just what the League of Nations has done: it has healed slightly

"the daughter of my people" by giving Great Britain a mandate over Palestine and thus opening up that glorious land for the return of Israel.

But in the same paper under another column Rabbi A. H. Silver, who has just returned from a tour through Germany, reports, "Nazi atrocities are deadlier than those of the Czarist regime. Jews of Germany are being sacrificed to a racial Moloch, the like of which the world has never seen, and Nordic megalomania has now been embodied in a political state, the only one of its kind in the world. In such a state the Jews are doomed to be helots or aliens unless they demand and obtain the legal status of a minority nationality within the state."

Like a flash after reading these items Hosea 4:1 and 2 came to my mind: "Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel: for the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God, in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood."

Memorial Day: why was it instituted? Primarily to remember those who fell in battle. In my morning readings my mind has often been made sad as I read in Samuel and Kings the awful number of lives lost in war.

A scripture I do not hear often quoted, but which to me is full of significance, is Ecclesiastes 11:3: "If the tree fall toward the south or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be."

Standing in the cemetery, its flowers, trees, shrubs, and a carpet of brilliant green, roads and paths well kept, hedges neatly trimmed, I thought what a peaceful, quiet, and restful scene prevailed. How different, I mused, from the scenes of carnage, the shout of battle, the groans of the wounded and dying. How different will be the scene which will greet them when, if God in His mercy raise them from the dead, they again stand in their lot upon the earth.

Can there be any doubt about this? Ah, I thought, God always seems to be the most loving and kind following a scene when sin seems to be triumphant.

I remembered how Israel murmured, "And the Lord said unto Moses, How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them? I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they."

Now read Moses' prayer and also read the prayer of his great antitype, Jesus: "Father, forgive them: for they know not what they do."

Listen to what God said to Moses: "And the Lord said, I have pardoned, according to thy word." Now what follows? "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord."

Is there hope of life again for these billions sleeping in death? Sometimes I try to listen to brethren who are discussing the question. As I hear them quote (and I am guilty, also) scriptures that seem to prove that there is no hope of a resurrection for any out of Christ, there seems to be a jubilant tone in their voice, as though they seemed glad if it were so. But the more I catch Jesus' spirit, the more I feel that if God in His wisdom will extend His mercy to millions who are going down into death without God and without hope I shall rejoice exceedingly. Dante's well-known words, "Abandon all hope who enter here," for me have no appeal.

Has the similarity of the benedictions of Moses and Jesus ever occurred to you? "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto Aaron and his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them, The Lord bless thee, and keep thee; the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. And they shall put my name upon the children of Israel; and I will bless them."

But now in the end of the world another people God seeks to cover with a name, which will bring to them, also, peace and blessing, with this difference: through them it will be universal. Here are the conditions (2 Timothy 2:19): "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity."

We should sympathize with the world in its efforts to obtain peace. Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." To those who had come to Him He could say, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—John 14:27.

To obtain this peace what are the conditions? God's requirement for us to receive His peace is very simple; it is just to depart from iniquity. I like the way Micah 6:8 expresses it: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

These are wonderful words, a compendium of all God requires of any man. "To walk humbly with God" means what? Isaiah 26:3 will answer us. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee."

Suppose the conference now sitting in Geneva would agree to let the spirit of Micah 6:8 rule in its deliberations. How quickly and amicably everything would be settled satisfactorily for all who are concerned—and that is the whole world. Well, gentlemen, you may laugh at my suggestion; but let me tell you upon the authority of God's Word that sooner or later you will have to meet these terms before peace and happiness will prevail.

The late President Harding took the oath as president with his hand upon this text in Micah. In many ways he was a fine man; he meant well, but he lacked the character of Joseph and many other noble men God delighted to honor. He soon found that "to walk humbly with God" meant to depart from all iniquity, and the pressure of the coterie of friends advising him conflicted with the golden text he selected as his guiding star of destiny.

The plans of men are always susceptible to change; but when the word has gone forth from God, it never changes; it cannot, for it is God Himself. "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever."—Isaiah 40:8.

I have absolute confidence that God's Word will bring peace and blessing to the world and that they can come only through this source. Noble men have tried to secure them through human organizations, civil and religious, but have all failed.

Take Savonarola, for example, in that pleasure-loving city of Florence in the last decade of the fifteenth century. Under the inspiration of his preaching the people cast their material vanities upon a great bonfire; but soon the reaction set in, and wickedness again prevailed. It makes you feel sick as you read of the tortures he endured, and he was finally hanged from a gibbet and his body cast into the fire.

Savonarola, like many other reformers, has failed; and other noble men like him will fail, also. It will not be in the hearts of men to bring peace or to govern themselves until He come whose right it is; and then Isaiah 2:4 will be fulfilled, bringing with it an abundance of peace and truth. "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

God invites Jacob first, and then the nations. "O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord."

IOWA BEREANS

The Bereans of Waterloo and Cedar Falls send greetings to all Bereans wherever they may be. We are meeting for study each Sunday evening with an average attendance of ten to fifteen. We have two classes. Sister Blanche Harland has charge of the juniors, a class of boys from seven to fifteen years of age. This class is drawing visitors from the outside from time to time, and we hope to see it grow permanently and steadily.

Various ones take turns leading the adult class. The studies are from old Berean books, chapter studies, or subjects which the leaders select; but whatever the subject, we endeavor to see its relationship to Jesus and the grace of God in Him. In Him, our living Savior, we rest our varying opinions and understandings, knowing that as we seek growth in the knowledge of Him and His grace, He is knitting the truths that come through each into one whole that nourishes and edifies the whole body. Thus does each member contribute the nourishment that the Head designs to administer through him.

—Alta King.

IN ILLINOIS

Sunday evening, May 7, the Restitution Church (Eldorado) young people organized a Berean society, choosing as president Elizabeth Martin; vice president, Earl Davis; and as secretary-treasurer, Grace Wiggins, all of Eldorado. Nine in all were present, and we feel that with nine good workers this young people's Berean society will soon exert a force that will be felt not only in the church work, but also in the community. —C. E. Lapp.

MOOREFIELD, NEBRASKA

We organized a Berean society Sunday, May 21, with ten charter members, all young people; and a junior class will be organized soon. Wilsie McKnight was made president; Donald Stedman, vice president; and Shurley White, secretary-treasurer. Some of the members are not in the faith yet, but they will have a wonderful opportunity to learn the truth. We are expecting great things from the Bereans. —E. E. Giesler, Pastor.

RAISING CHURCH FUNDS

All kinds of schemes have been resorted to in the endeavor to raise the needed funds for church work. Everything that human ingenuity could invent or discover has been tried to bring forth the wherewithal to pay church bills. Downright gambling, condemned by law, has been resorted to in some cases, on the sly, and many of the faithful have been "skinned for a good cause!"

Here is one of the very latest ways, not so bad, though perhaps novel: "Seeks Discarded Jewelry for Church Collection. Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 4 (A.P.)—Wooden nickles will still be taboo, but most everything else, so long as it has a bit of gold, will be acceptable when the collection plates are passed in the fashionable Broad Street Church next Sunday. . . . The gifts will be sent to a refiner, and the money realized will be placed in a 'minister's permanent emergency fund.'"

Well, in some circles it has been "like pulling teeth" to secure the needed funds to run the church—with much grunting and "suffering"! Wonder how it would seem if all the interested parties could, or would, try the old-time tithing method! There would be no need then of discarding dental work or pulling teeth to secure the Lord's share of our earthly possessions for the purpose of advancing and financing His cause on the earth. Let's try it.—World's Crisis.

NOT MY WILL, BUT THINE

LAST week we said good-bye to Jesus and His disciples just as they were leaving the upper room where they had eaten the passover and the last supper together. They entered the Garden of Gethsemane, where Jesus had often rested, thinking of His Father and the work He must do for Him and kneeling in prayer to ask for strength and wisdom to do that work.

And now, just ahead of Him lies the hardest part of that work, the part that meant the greatest suffering for Jesus, the part that called for all the strength He might receive from God to carry on. Choosing the three who seemed to be closest to Him, Peter, James, and John, He walked through the garden a little way, and falling down on His face He called to His Father for help.

You see, Jesus knew what suffering was before Him, but if He was to finish the work His Father gave Him to do in becoming the Savior of the world, He must not try to escape that suffering. Many times we are promised something we desire very much, but to receive it we must work very hard, give up some pleasure, or sacrifice something else. But if we keep on, the reward comes to us after a while.

The Apostle Paul tells us, in Hebrews 12:2, that for the joy that was set before Jesus, He "endured the cross, despising the shame." And the "joy" was the approval of His Father and the salvation of all who will believe in Him.

Read Mark 14:37-41, and find out what Peter, James, and John did while Jesus was praying. Then soon, Judas, another of Jesus' disciples, did a very wicked thing. You all know what that was. Then poor Peter, who was so sure he would stay by his Master to the end, suddenly became frightened, and you will find out what he told the maid in verses 66-72.

And now Jesus stands alone before cruel Pilate, the Roman ruler over Judea, who falsely condemned Him to death. His words while suffering the first cruel agony showed His wonderful love. What were they?

For three hours, from noon until three o'clock, darkness was over the land, showing that God knew that wicked men were crucifying His Son, and a very heavy curtain in the temple, so heavy that it took three hundred priests to hang it, was torn in two from top to bottom by unseen hands.

Even the Roman soldier, standing on guard at the foot of the cross, realized this was no ordinary person being put to death, for he cried out, "Truly this man was the Son of God."

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Doesn't it make us all happy to know that almost every week there are more joining our Bible Scrapbook Club? Move over, boys and girls, and make room for four more this week. They are James Edward Barclift, his brother, Charles Wesley, and sisters, Joyce Temple, and Harriet Louise, of Mt. Sterling, Illinois. They are beginning with the lesson of December 20, 1932, and working up to date. Let's sing a greeting song to them:

We welcome you, dear girls and boys,
We're glad to see you here.
Upon this bright and pleasant page
We meet from far and near.

A hearty welcome, little friends,
Who come to us today;
May pleasant be the hours you spend
While here with us you stay.

And now for our lesson this week. Look up in an encyclopedia and find out all you can about olive trees; then draw one. You know they grew in the Garden of Gethsemane. Write underneath the most interesting things you can learn about the olive tree, its length of life, its size, usefulness, etc. Next draw three crosses, Jesus' cross in the center a little larger than the others. Over His cross write the title placed there by the soldiers. Under it write the words of John 12:32. Then draw a scroll and on it write the words of John 3:16. Always copy your references exactly, punctuation and all. Last copy this poem:

"Savior, teach me day by day,
Love's best lessons to obey;
Sweeter lesson cannot be,
Loving Him who first loved me.

"Love in loving finds employ,
In obedience all her joy;
Ever new that joy will be,
Loving Him who first loved me.

"Thus may I rejoice to show
That I feel the love I owe;
Singing, till Thy face I see,
Of His love who first loved me."

LESSON 11. — June 11, 1933

JESUS ON THE CROSS

Mark 15:1-47

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 53:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT

God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.—Romans 5:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus on the Cross.

Aim: To show that Jesus was the Messiah, and that He willingly gave His life for our sins.

I. Roman Accusation. (Vv. 22-28.) The accusation written by Pilate (John 19:19) and placed over the head of Jesus upon the cross, indicated the reason for His execution from the standpoint of the Roman Empire. He claimed to be a king, and Pilate, accepting the testimony of His accusers at its face value, ordered Him to be crucified for that reason. That there might be no mistake in the minds of the people regarding the nature of His offence it was written in the three languages generally understood by the masses, Greek, Latin, and Hebrew. The temporal power of that day saw in Jesus a menace to its continued authority.

II. Jewish Mockery. (Vv. 29-32.) The serious accusation of the Romans was but a mocking accusation of the Jews. Their leaders feared His influence over the people. They could not destroy Him themselves, and so after vainly attempting to influence Pilate against Him on religious grounds, they at last resorted to the truth, and, probably to their own surprise, found the Roman more easily moved by truth than by falsehood.

III. Divine Recognition. (Vv. 33-39.) The Romans moved by fear, the Jews by the mockery and jealousy, declared Jesus to be "The King of the Jews." The eternal God attested the truth of their declarations by rending the veil of the temple from top to bottom, and by convulsions of nature. The rending of the veil indicated the ending of the Mosaic dispensation. Henceforth Jesus was to be the one great High Priest for all men; that all who would accept Him in that capacity might with "boldness enter into the holiest . . . by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh."—Hebrews 10:19-21.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Christ blessed those with whom He came in contact. Many of them cursed Him in return. They reviled Him; He "reviled not again." They threatened Him; "he threatened not." Are there not many doing the same today? Today, as of yore, every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights. Jas. 1:17. The majority of mankind do not appreciate these blessings. Instead of praising Him, they curse and take His name in vain.

Christ's suffering was extreme. It was not the suffering caused by physical pain alone, but the greater suffering incurred because of the sin of the world that was placed upon Him. None came forward to succor or encourage. He suffered and died alone. They antagonized Him and added insult to injury. We cannot in any way soothe the pains of Calvary, but we can keep from crucifying to ourselves the Son of God afresh.—Heb. 6:6.

Christ died for His enemies. People often dare to die for good people, but not for their enemies. The longsuffering and mercy of Christ will eventually conquer. When His enemies look on Him whom they pierced, they will mourn for Him as one mourneth for his only son. Zech. 12:10. His life and work transcend the usual and were alone in the unusual.

Jesus claimed to be a king. He was born and came into the world for this very purpose. John 18:37. His claims were denied by the rulers. Pilate admitted them, though he yielded to the cries of the mob and rejected the purpose of God. Man cannot frustrate the purpose. It will be carried out, and He that was born to be King of the Jews will come into His realm and will also be King of the world.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

God's love for the world was manifested in sending the Son to die that whosoever believed in Him might not perish, but that he might have life. He died for us while we were sinners; and his death gives sinners the opportunity of coming to Him, confessing their sins, and living no longer in them.

Those of you who have not accepted the Christ who died for you as your Savior, will you not do so at your earliest convenience, that your sins may be blotted out and your calling and election be made sure? Now is the day of salvation. Do not delay; for delays are dangerous, and tomorrow may be too late. It is only through Christ's death that anyone may have life.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Meaning of the Cross

The cross of Jesus has been a great stumblingblock for nineteen hundred years. It seems absurd to the non-believing and is often greatly misunderstood by the professing Christian. Some wonder why so much faith and hope should be attached to the death of Jesus and none to the death of Stephen. Both were martyrs to the same cause; yet no one teaches forgiveness of sins because of the death of Stephen. The cross was not understood in Paul's day, as is evident from 1 Cor. 1:23. "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness." Paul stated further that God chose "the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise."—1 Cor. 1:27.

We Christians know that it was necessary for Christ to "pour out his soul unto death" as an "offering for sin." There is meaning in the cross of Christ to us because we reason not with worldly wisdom; because we have accepted the atonement made for sin and are not among those who are perishing. We know that "without shedding of blood is no remission" of sins. Jesus came "to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment; so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them who look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation."—Heb. 9:22, 26-28.

While the cross is evidence of Christ's great atonement for sin to those who will accept, it also stands as condemnation of both Jew and Gentile for the great crime of crucifixion. The Jews demanded the death of Jesus and persuaded Pilate to issue the decree, so guilt rests upon both Jew and Gentile. If both will accept the responsibility for the crime, then both may profit by that great prayer: "Father, forgive them: for they know not what they do." The cross is the symbol of both condemnation and purchased possession.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY CLASS

Have some one tell you all that happened to Jesus from the time He ate with His disciples until our lesson today.

The time had come when Jesus was to die. The soldiers took Him out to a hill called Golgotha. They had brought a cross along to put Him on. They had put a crown of thorns on His head.

In those days, they put people to death by nailing them to a cross. So they decided to do that with Jesus.

He was nailed to the cross. The cross was stood up. Jesus was left there to die.

Over the top of the cross was a sign which read, "THE KING OF THE JEWS."

At the same time, two thieves were killed by nailing them to crosses. There was one on each side of Jesus.

Jesus died hanging there on the cross. His friends begged Pilate, the ruler, to let them have His body. Pilate let them take it, and they took it down very carefully, and placed it in a new tomb (grave). A great stone was rolled against the door by the soldiers so that no one could take the body away.

How sad Jesus' friends must have been.—V. C. T.

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

Minnesota Conference at Eden Valley,	June 8 to 12
Southern California Conference at Long Beach	June 30 to July 2
Indiana Bible School and Conference at North Salem, near Plymouth,	July 5 to 16
Northwestern Conference, Oregon and Washington, at Felida, Wash.,	June 15 to 18
General and Illinois Conference and Bible School at Oregon,	August 1 to 13
Arkansas-Oklahoma at Mcgintytown, Arkansas	August 3
Iowa Conference at Waterloo	August 22 to 27

MINNESOTA—SPECIAL NOTICE

The Minnesota Annual Conference will be held June 8 to 12, 1933, at Eden Valley, instead of at St. Cloud, as heretofore announced in these columns. We regret the mistake and trust that this announcement will prevent any inconvenience arising from it.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME —

In order that more space may be given to special articles dealing with the subject of this number, we are omitting our usual "Between You and Me" department, and also carrying over to next week some other news items that are not of a pressing nature.

VARINA, IOWA

We will have two sermons at the Harold Smith home, near Varina, on June 4. All are invited to meet with us at that time.

(Mrs) Anna Boyanosky.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

May 21 was a full, busy day for our group. The climax was the baccalaureate service in the evening. Due to the limited size of our church auditorium this was held in the school gymnasium, which was very appropriately arranged for the occasion. The forty-seven seniors in their caps and gowns presented an impressive spectacle as they marched in to take the seats reserved for them. Among the graduates are five of our Sunday school young people. Three of them are members of our church, namely, Leo Newell, Marjorie Siple, and Doris Conrad. Our church orchestra, choir, and male quartet furnished the evening's music, which was much appreciated by the large audience.

When these lines appear in print, the pastor and family expect to be in Ohio. Bro. Arlen Marsh is expected to fill the pulpit here the first Sunday, and Bro. Austin the second. This combination should prove very interesting and instructive, since the one is a beginner and the other a man of many years' experience—while the regular pastor is about half way between.

The church is humbly thanking God that the quarantine is at last lifted from the Simpson home and the family reunited after some three months of separation.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

MOOREFIELD, NEBRASKA

Our church work is going on, slow but sure. We will move into our own building this week. Our first service in the new building (old one made new) will be Sunday morning the 28th. We have papered and painted, and it looks fine. All we need now is new church pews; we have good comfortable seats, but they are not regular church pews; still, they will do until the time when we can get better ones. We improve here as we have the cash. We are out of debt and hope to stay out. Brethren, pray for us.

E. E. Giesler, Pastor.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Plans for the Southern California Conference of the Church of God now include a three-day session of Bible classes and sermons to cover morning and afternoon sessions on June 30 and July 1 and 2. The conference will not be limited in any sense as heretofore to prophetic topics. A business session will be held either Friday or Saturday, a baptismal service on Saturday afternoon, and communion on Sunday morning; and the meeting will close with a series of short talks by the various leading members of the conference. Carpenters' Union Hall, on Olive Street near Anaheim Street in Long Beach, has been secured for the meetings. All the faithful throughout California should plan their vacations as far as possible so as to be able to spend a few days at Long Beach.

Our class at Santa Ana has been organized now for over a month and has been studying a series of lessons which began with prophecy and has gone through the gamut of lessons on the covenants and their relation to prophecy. Much interest has been manifested. The class at Long Beach under the able guidance of Sr. Railsback has prospered beyond hopes and is producing much new talent in Bible study.

At the May meeting of the Ministerial Association plans for the conference were discussed at length and the affairs of the program placed under the direction of Bro. Railsback. Recently a plan was set before the Los Angeles Church of lessons to be given on the historical framework of the Bible, to be given by a member of the school headed by Dr. Futterer; some of the people thought that they would like to take such a course, but felt that they could profit more by a course of our own. Consequently it was decided that each member of the association should prepare a chart on some Bible subject to be presented at the June meeting. It is felt that such methods are especially good for getting truth graphically before the student.

If there are any who would like to go from California to General Conference this summer, Bro. and Sr. Norman John MacLeod, 1105 Val Vista St., Pomona, would be glad to get in touch with them; they will have room for two passengers who would be willing to share expenses. They will be leaving for the East about the middle of July and will return following the General Conference.

Sr. Railsback and Sr. Jessie Scroggs left Sunday morning, May 21, for northern California, where Sr. Railsback will visit her daughter, Sr. Moore. Sr. Scroggs will go on to Oregon to be with her husband and his folks for a vacation.

BURR OAK, INDIANA

The Burr Oak, Ind., church is making plans for a big day on June 11. The program is as follows: Sunday school at 10:00 a. m.; sermon at 11:00 by Bro. F. L. Austin; picnic dinner at noon; sermon at 2:00 p. m. by Bro. Austin, Children's Day program at 7:30. Come and enjoy a day of spiritual food with us.

Mrs. Mary Hatten.

RIPLEY AND ELDORADO

The Ripley congregation has asked Bro. S. J. Lindsay to be with them for a meeting to be held in June. God willing, the meetings will start on Saturday evening, June 10, and will continue over two full weeks, closing on Sunday night, June 25.

Bro. Lindsay and the pastor will leave Monday morning, June 26, for Eldorado, where a short series of meetings will be held. They will start the evening of June 26 and continue to near July 5.

We are praying that God will bless us in these gatherings and bring many souls into the fold of the Master. All who are within driving distance are urged to come.

C. E. Lapp, Pastor.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Helen Porter; Mrs. A. T. Spindler; Glen Birkey; Abbie H. Fiske; H. W. Patterson (for another); Marian R. Richards; Mrs. Hedrie Jackson; James Kessler; John M. Dorn; L. G. Jaeger; F. Carpenter; F. C. Beck; Jessie M. B. Kauffman; B. N. Berry; Eva L. Stearns.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

W. A. Reid; Marian R. Richards; Hilda Fetters; South Lawn Park Sunday School, Grand Rapids; Lois Hunt; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Starbuck.

RITTENHOUSE - REYNOLDS

A most interesting and impressive marriage ceremony was celebrated in the Oregon, (Ill.) Church of God on Saturday, May 13, 1933, when Miss Lucille Reynolds, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Reynolds, was made the wife of Mr. Leland Rittenhouse. The ceremony was solemnized by Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago, assisted by Bro. G. E. Marsh, pastor of the church. Only the immediate members of the two families and a few close friends witnessed the event. The bridal couple was attended by Miss Mary Reynolds, sister of the bride, and Mr. Nelson Rittenhouse, brother of the groom. The wedding march was played by Sr. G. E. Marsh. Following a short wedding journey to Wisconsin, the young people returned to Mt. Morris, Ill., where they will make their home. The bride has been a faithful and active member of the Oregon congregation for several years. We pray for the Father's blessing to attend them.

Prelude to War

By Arlen Marsh

DURING no period of world history has there been such a persistent plea for peace as that which now exists. What with the pressure of the daily press and the lobbying tactics of the various peace societies, politicians are being coerced into making more or less firm abnegations of war as an instrument of national policy. Pacts and treaties and agreements jam files and pigeonholes of desks in the offices of foreign relations departments the whole earth over. Conferences of vague origin and still more vague results occupy the time and thought of all the diplomaticos, those who guide in a manner presumably intelligent the international correspondence of their respective countries. With a sort of morose optimism writers for periodicals and speakers for women's clubs set forth at length the benefits to be derived from peace.

Despite this happy cry for the reign of dove and olive branch, however, there lies a still, but deepset, current of fear. Now and again some one, more honest (perhaps of better vision) than his fellows, drops a bit of emery in the oil that films the cogs of the pacifists' machine and so, by making necessary sundry changes in the mechanism, lays bare the faults and weaknesses that normally have been concealed. Such an individual is von Ludendorff, unhappy German general; such an one, too, is the scholarly Delisle Burns, professor at Glasgow University. No man who thinks can do aught but confess the stark reality of the dangers which threaten to fracture all the carefully—and selfishly—made treaties in the world.

War, far from being a bugbear to be used to frighten children, is here. Peace is impossible. In the words of Thomas Hobbes, "War consisteth not in battle only, or the act of fighting; but in a tract of time wherein the will to contend by battle is sufficiently known. . . . The nature of war consisteth not in actual fighting, but in the known disposition thereto, during all the time there is no assurance to the contrary. All other time is peace." Beyond even this predilection to battle, this atmosphere of strife, which Hobbes calls war, exist three military struggles that are by no means insignificant: the Sino-Japanese adventure and the deadly conflicts between Colombia and Peru and between Bolivia and Paraguay.

Racial hatreds are unconquerable. Not even the advent of Christianity in the present human mind can eradicate a certain feeling of race superiority on the part of the Caucasians—whites—and a sense of race inferiority on the part of the blacks; and, with good reason, the Mongolian, whose race was civilized when the Anglo-Saxon fought with teeth and clubs and stones, considers himself the owner of a culture and intelligence supreme. National lines, save in a few rare instances, have become equally well fixed: until the whole system of things be changed, France will distrust Germany and England, France. It is custom; it is human; it is fact.

Responding to an invitation issued by Tsar Nicholas, even then tottering on his Russian throne, the representatives of twenty-six governments met in the House of the Woods at The Hague on May 18, 1899, "to consider means of insuring the peace of the world and of putting a limit to the progressive increase of armaments which weigh upon all nations." Having assembled, they established an International Court of Arbitration (which in the Russo-Japanese and World Wars signally failed to arbitrate) and an International Committee of Inquiry (which inquired into nothing). The meeting then adjourned, reassembled in 1907 with some additions to the roll of those countries represented, and again adjourned. In the direction of limiting armaments or of insuring the peace of the world nothing was accomplished.

Then, in 1914, Germany hurled its armies against the "impregnable" forts of Liege; and Great Britain, ostensibly to act upon its treaty to protect the neutrality of Belgium, but actually to prevent Germany from becoming a terrible danger to England, declared war. No greater force for international amity

Our Only Hope for Peace

Excerpts from Isaiah

So in time to come will he bring glory upon the land along the Sea Road, beyond Jordan—the Circle of the Nations.

Now in the end of the days
The mountain of the Lord's house will be Established on the top of the mountains
And lifted above the hills.

And nations will stream to it,
Many peoples will go and say:
"Come! let us go up to the mountain of the Lord,
To the house of the God of Jacob;
That he may instruct us in his ways,
And that we may walk in his paths."

Then will he judge between the nations,
And will arbitrate for many peoples;
And they will beat their swords into plowshares,
And their spears into pruninghooks:
Nation will not lift up sword against nation,
And they will learn no more the art of war.

—An American Translation.

and union, according to the average schoolbook and the baseless optimism of the pacifists, ever existed than the World War, since it bared the futility of militarism and caused governments to seek the conferences which followed the signing of the Armistice.

Immediately after the memorable day of November 11, 1918, the French laid their plans for an extension of the Rhineland. A century before they had wrested Alsace-Lorraine from Germany, and now they demanded that it be returned to them (Bismarck had recaptured it in the 1870's for his own empire) on the ground that it was theirs! Deliberately they set a vast army in the Ruhr to encompass the economic disintegration of the new Teutonic republic. Stubbornly they refused to consider the abolition of submarines and embarked upon a policy of unprecedented militarism. Racial antagonisms were kept at fever heat; and Great Britain, Italy, Japan, and the United States came both to fear and to abhor the martial French.

The Washington Conference for the limitation of armaments resulted in two things: it caused the building of four new battleships, two each by England and the United States; and it aroused the enmity of Japan, which had been given no opportunity to state its complete case during the assembly (France also was aroused, and for the same reason). This conference that "ends—absolutely ends—the race in competition of naval armament" according to the bright assertion of Secretary of State Hughes led to nothing but a terrific contest among the nations to see which could build the most warships in the next few years. Similarly the conference at Locarno in 1925 experienced marked failure in accomplishing its purpose. A treaty indeed was evolved, but it represented little more than did the Kellogg-Briand Pact of 1928; it was a jumble of diplomatic and militaristic phrases possessed of neither meaning nor efficacy. The day the Locarno Conference ended, President Coolidge, with characteristic succinctness, announced that he was glad that it was over, since the nations might now be able to do some disarming.

The London Naval Conference came hard on the heels of the panic of October, 1929. With the international money market in a turmoil, the great Powers as represented in the United States, Great Britain, and France reached the safe and sane conclusion that agreement as to naval armament was impossible and that, if worst came to worst, war was to be preferred to a yielding peace. The Washington Treaty, brought up for consideration, was emasculated beyond all semblance of its former state; even the weak-kneed article drafted by Elihu Root for the Treaty and never accepted by France was discarded—submarine captains who sank merchant vessels were no longer to be hanged as pirates. What little power the 1921 agreement had possessed was effectually suppressed.

In this country alone there are nine associations, eight committees, seven unions, five leagues, four societies, four councils, three institutes, and an assortment of other movements, alliances, and federations inspired with a single exalted aim: to force the government to disarm or to make treaties or to educate its young—anything to secure peace.

Nevertheless, so deeply ingrained is the militant reaction to competition in the human mind, this group of men and women who seek for peace find constantly matters for war among themselves; not once in recent years have they come to any serious agreement. Divided they stand, and their effective opposition to the machinations of the militarists is consequently at an exceedingly low ebb.

More arrant nonsense has been written about the probabilities of securing lasting peace through human efforts than about any other single subject with the possible exception of religion. MacDonald of England, in common with many another European diplomat, has declared that the failure of the Geneva conference would mean that evasion of war would be positively impossible. Mr. Davis, envoy of the United States, told the conference on May 22 that "either something must be accomplished in disarmament or the nations must become reconciled to reverting to a race in arms"; and he added, "If the latter course is taken, the consequences are inevitable. Sooner or later there will be the breakdown of the peace machinery which has been so laboriously built up since 1918 and the world will be swept into another war." Yet in the face of declarations of this nature and the recorded facts of history, well-meaning, if somewhat thoughtless, pacifists blithely hold before the public the hope of eternal peace.

Mr. Davis' own words establish the fallacy of the making of treaties: "We feel," he said to the Geneva delegates, "that the ultimate objective should be to reduce armaments approximately to the level established by the peace treaties." Those pacts supposedly resulted in the approach to peace demanded by the majority; but Mr. Davis here suggests that "the ultimate objective" is to reduce armaments "approximately to the level established by the peace treaties." Regardless of the willingness of the United States to aid in policing the seas to see that each nation fills only its allotted naval quota, these agreements that have failed in the past indubitably will fail in the future. Treaties are excellent food for a gullible and unthinking public, but they become mere "scraps of paper" when the delicate national honor is threatened.

Whether or not the powers reach a point of comparative agreement during the present conference in Switzerland, the basic facts will remain the same: each nation will adhere to that agreement only as long as it does that nation good; any disadvantage suffered as a result of observing the rules laid down will immediately be seized upon as an excuse for abrogating the contract and again engaging in a glorious march toward greater armament. As Italy refused to side with Germany during the World War because England controlled her coasts with its navy, so Japan, France, Italy, England, or the United States will without hesitancy refuse to perform its just share of the duties imposed upon it by the treaty now being negotiated. No golden rule holds crown and scepter in the kingdom of international relations. War, on that account, cannot be avoided. Regardless of whatever man may do, the world remains a vast powder magazine, to be touched off by the smallest spark.

As a Thief in the Night

By Genniel Carpenter

THE quietude of winter night sparkled in the dim light of two street lamps. The snow on the sidewalk past the block of five prosperous-looking houses was pounded smooth. It was seven-thirty on a Sunday evening.

Around the southeast corner of the solitary block came a man. He walked slowly, evidently thinking of something other than the process of his walking and his surroundings. And indeed he was. He had just come from his sister's home, and he was already late for a party—a solely masculine poker party. But the man's mind was not on that. He was strangely troubled, even slightly terror-stricken. His serene bachelor life had just been jarred. He felt rather numb; his legs carried him toward Joe's house and the party automatically. Part of his mind mechanically anticipated the convivial passage of the evening.

His sister had (so he termed it) a "religion complex." Usually he scoffed at her tracts and parsons and invitations to church, but this winter afternoon her radio had held his reluctant interest. An adventist evangelist had shouted and painted dramatic horror and denounced him into fascinated, open-mouthed attention. His non-church-going soul had cringed under the lash of the speaker's eloquence.

He had asked his sister, "Do you actually expect to be caught away from the earth—you yourself?" Then, with a feeble attempt at jocund mockery, "Religion is as bad as women's clothes—last I heard it was fashionable for your soul to be wafted to heaven."

So he walked pensively around the corner and past the red brick house. His feet kept time to a text of the evangelist: "As a thief in the night! As a thief in the night!" His mind toyed with the hypothesis that the thing was so. He quaked at the mystery, the supernaturalness of the idea.

"As a thief in the night. . . ."

In the kitchen of the red brick house on the corner Josie

Story telling has been one of the most effective methods of teaching known to man and has been employed for that purpose from the earliest times. In this article the talented editor of the Berean page contributes in story form a most impressive picture of our Lord's return.

Reindert rinsed the dishwater from her big strong hands. The frosted window let in the frigid moonlight. She dried her hands, turned out the light, and stood in the doorway of the warm little living room where old Mr. Anders read to his wife. The words were from Isaiah, that silver-tongued poet.

"He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs in his arms."

"Did you want something, Josie?" queried Mrs. Anders kindly, as her husband's sonorous voice ceased.

"N-no," stammered Josie, "only, could I come in and sew here for a while?"

"Of course!" was the answer.

Josie hemmed her pillowslip silently and listened to Mr. Anders. She wondered why he read almost always the Bible, no magazines, no novels. Then she remembered to be thankful that he did read the Bible, for the pastor of a little country church had secured for her the well-paid work of keeping house for Mr. and Mrs. Anders. Mrs. Anders was helpless. But now Mr. Anders was reading:

"Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come."

Mrs. Anders asked Josie to go upstairs for a piece of cloth. Josie obeyed silently. She was almost afraid to ascend the dark, still stairs. The simple words of Christ had raised a nameless dread in her. She tried to understand their meaning. What had they to do with the heaven and hell of her childhood Sunday school class? It must mean the end of the world! She would ask Mr. Anders.

She found the cloth. She went downstairs. She entered the living room. She had not been gone three minutes. No one was there! She raced, frantically unbelieving, through the bedroom, the kitchen, the whole house. No one! She came back, sobbing frenziedly, to the brightly-lighted living room. It looked

The Penitent's Prayer

Restore to us, oh Lord, our once fond hope and almost forgotten dreams.

Replant in our repentant hearts that sure faith of a bygone day.
Make us to see the unworthiness of all earthly schemes,
That we may tread life's pathway in Thine own appointed way.
And hold Thou the torch that we may travel safely by its shining light.

So shall we see that our present life is but a transient thing.
Make us brave and steadfast in all our battles for the right;
For the doors of Time but on the hinges of Eternity swing.

Cleanse Thou our hearts of all hypocrisy and vile deceit;
And if with unbending spirit we dare to pray on bended knee,
Direct with Thy strong hand the proper course for our straying feet,
So that with truly contrite hearts we may offer prayers to Thee.
For it were better far that we live and die with unrepentant heart
Than to proclaim from every housetop we walk in peace with God,
To pose as sincere, devout Christians, yet living not the part!
For neither God, nor yet our fellow man, can tolerate a pious fraud.

The New Presbyterianism

CHANGES that are almost revolutionary in character are taking place in many religious bodies in these days. These changes are termed "progressive" or "retrogressive," "orthodox" or "heterodox" according to whether one views them from the inside or from the outside, sympathetically or antagonistically. That they reveal a changing attitude of many people toward the older teachings of the churches is apparent above all else. And that this change of mind affects some of the most cherished doctrines that have been held by these various denominations is equally evident.

Addressing the 145th general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in session recently in Columbus, Ohio, Dr. Hugh T. Kerr of Pittsburgh, former moderator of the general assembly, according to the Chicago Tribune, pointed to the new hymnal as one of the chief evidences of change now taking place not only in the Presbyterian Church, but also throughout Protestantism generally.

"If you want to know the trends of religion, listen to the way religion sings," said Dr. Kerr. "About 400 old hymns were dropped. The doctrinal note in hymns is almost missing. In place of doctrine, brotherhood, international fellowship, and sound service are stressed. In addition to this change the new hymns, instead of stressing outward ecclesiastical conformity, sound the mystical note."

To show how quickly the sentiment of the Presbyterian Church was changing, Dr. Kerr continued: "Since the general assembly last met in Columbus eight years ago great changes have taken place in the Presbyterian Church. Then we faced the crisis in the fundamentalist drive on the church. The thing was fought out on this same platform from which the announcement of Dr. McDowell's (progressive) election as moderator yesterday meant the death of fundamentalism as a party in the church."

According to the Tribune, Mr. Mechen (leader of the fundamentalist group) asserted that the fight is not over. He said the real friends of the Bible would not rally against its traducers. The vote for Dr. McDowell, he added, was fully expected. "Bible believing Christians," continued Mr. Mechen, "who are truly devoted to the deep things of the Christian faith are really aware of the present deplorable situation, are in the minority in the Presbyterian Church."

Dr. Kerr's remark apropos of the absence of the doctrinal note in the revised hymnal of his church is significant of the entire trend of religious thought. "In place of doctrine, brotherhood, international fellowship, and sound service are stressed." Scarcely a hint, he confesses with obvious satisfaction, of doctrine remains to mar the modernistic harmony of the new hymnal; little is suggested that would point one hopefully to the future; all has to do with the present, with the life that now is. Hardly a trace of the old theology is left to remind this generation of the biblical basis upon which the Presbyterian Church was founded in 1560. A clergyman of that church said recently to the writer that he doubted if there was more than one or two tenets of the old creed which he now believed, and he seemed to question the importance of these.

As Dr. Kerr said, this is a condition that exists not only in the Presbyterian Church, but is gaining headway rapidly throughout the leading Protestant denominations. It would be well for the Church of God to take this growing tendency to discard and disparage doctrine into serious and prayerful consideration as one of the most alarming and dangerous developments of the last days.

WINNING SOULS

By George B. Alldridge

"The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that winneth souls is wise."—Proverbs 11:30, A. V.

"The fruit of the good is a living tree, and the wise doth gather lives."—Ferrar Fenton

SOME one may suggest that this would be a splendid article for the Salvation Army's publication, The War Cry, but hardly a theme for the columns of THE RESTITUTION HERALD, since none of its writers write along this line. Well, I note its editor is always laying emphasis upon the necessity of teaching people the truth. By doing this you are winning souls.

With the Apostle Paul this was the very center and secret of his remarkable active life. Listen to his words in 1 Corinthians 9:22, 23: "To the weak became I weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you."

Sometimes when I muse upon this theme this sobering thought flashes in upon my mind: God Himself is depending upon His children to win souls for His great name, and all who are remiss in this He will hold responsible. How significant are these words in Mark 13:34: "For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch."

What glorious deeds of valor were perpetrated on the Western Front during the Great War! Everybody knows about the exploit of Sergeant York and the bravery of the Lost Battalion. Why did they do all this? You say for love of country. If a force within these men (expressed by the word patriotism) could move them to perform such acts of bravery, they considering it only as doing their duty, then as soldiers of Jesus Christ what feats ought we to accomplish along the lines outlined by Paul in 2 Corinthians 10:4, 5: "(For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds;) casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

How can I win men for Christ? is the question. Well, my answer is study the lives of Jesus and Paul; how did they win them?

I read Isaiah 42:2: "He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street."

Now I intend no criticism as to the way others try to reach men; the point is, Jesus did not go out into the public streets or market places indulging in noisy harangue. The most beautiful things He ever said were spoken to small companies, sometimes only one (John 4:7-26 and 1:47-51).

He was often found in the fields and places not frequented by the masses. It is true they followed Him into such places, but He seemed to delight to visit in their homes. He seemed to be always seeking the "listening ear," and how wisely He always presented the truth. (Note the case of Nicodemus and the woman of Samaria.) He did not condemn them (I am speaking of those seeking the truth), but met them upon mutual ground.

I never tell a Protestant or a Roman Catholic that he is wrong in his belief. First I try to find out just what his hope is and upon what his faith rests. I always start upon the nature of man. To me this is all-important.

After I win his confidence, I always remember Jesus' words, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." The margin says "simple" for "harmless." This is the secret of winning men: be simple.

I always encourage people to ask questions. Many people I find accuse us of teaching that God condemned man because of Adam's sin.

I quietly say, "The Bible does not teach this."

They reply, "The preachers say so, and everybody says so, too."

Now be sure you have your Bible with you; and do not begin to fumble with the concordance, but turn right to the chapter and the (Please turn to Page Nine)

Measurement

By Arthur Wallace Peach

Who measures man beside a hill
Will find that he is humble still.

Tall pines against a northern sky
Have wisdom I could profit by.

The grave sweet songs the hill brooks sing
Have themes they learned from every spring.

And there is reason why the thrush
Prefers for song the twilight's hush.

Let me be humble, then, before
The hills' truth, the hill brooks' lore;

And at the twilight's ending pray
With thrushes for the vanished day.

Let me remember seed and sod
Reveal the prophecies of God!

Up From Dust and Ashes

CRUSHED in the dust of ages by the resistless wheels of Time, for eons the ashes and the monumental fragments of the mighty empires of antiquity lay broken and scattered where they had fallen so long ago. Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome, before whose conquering legions all nations of the ancient world had trembled, after withstanding the attacks of powerful rivals for many centuries, fell at last before the inescapable Juggernaut of progress. But now, like the fabled Phenix, they have arisen again from the ashes where they lay and live to vindicate God's Word! How faith-strengthening, how hope-inspiring, are these clear and positive assurances of the Father's faithfulness and of the Bible truth! These four historic peoples, revived by the voice of Jehovah from their slumber of millenniums, are living once more, confined within their original territorial limits on the map of the world. The mighty God has called them into being for a purpose; of that there can be no doubt. Just what that purpose is may be revealed as we proceed with our study.

As we meditate on these strange developments among the nations, the words of Ezekiel come to us with arresting force. It is true, they were spoken concerning the future restoration of Israel, yet they are applicable in principle to the Gentile races of whom we treat.

"The hand of the Lord was upon me," asserted the prophet, "and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones. . . . And, lo, they were very dry. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest." Then follows Ezekiel's description of the strange climax of his marvelous experience. In his very presence those dry and lifeless bones resolved themselves into "the whole house of Israel," and "they lived and stood upon their feet, an exceeding great company."—Ezekiel 37:1-11.

If God can perform such a miracle of restoration for Israel, nationally dead and returned to the dust as she was, surely He can do as much for other races also! And that is exactly what has now taken place with certain powers whose former territories are known to us as "the Bible lands." Of all the nations into whose hands Jehovah committed authority over Israel after that nation had been reduced to bondage because of sin, not one is absent from the circle of living nations! Babylon, Persia, Egypt, Greece, Rome—all are here today, their lives as independent states restored, their racial virility renewed; and their ambitious designs for imperial development are matters to be reckoned with by the statesmen of the world.

This is the second of a series of articles by the editor dealing with what he terms "Present Tense Prophecy," that is, prophecy that is now in process of fulfillment. The writer in his opening paragraph declares that these evidences of the faithfulness of God and of the truth of His Word are not only intensely interesting, but also "faith-strengthening and hope-inspiring."

Before entering into the question of the prophetic significance of this strange new thing that has occurred, it will be well for us to observe the exactitude with which the ancient lines of race and nation have been recently re-drawn upon the map of the world.

When the final shell was hurled from the mouth of an American gun and the reverberating echoes had died away over the hills of France, the nations that had been so long engaged in the deadly struggle began at once to take stock of the results. What had been lost and what gained? Who were the real victors in the conflict? These were questions it was exceedingly difficult to answer satisfactorily to the world. Even the cause of the great effort was very much in doubt. For four years the nations had been sending their terrible implements of destruction back and forth across the disputed territory, millions of lives had been lost and vast treasure expended, and for what? Who could tell? No one seemed to be able to answer. Had it all been for naught?

As we view the World War, together with its apparent causes and results, in the light of the years that have passed since it ended, we observe two distinct accomplishments that can be credited (humanly speaking) directly to it, and but one of which could have been foreseen at its beginning. And both of these accomplishments are of very great importance from the standpoint of prophecy and its fulfillment.

The first, of course, was the freeing of Palestine from Turkish power, permitting its gates to be thrown wide to welcome the returning Jews.

The second accomplishment, which was also of interest and importance to the student of the Scriptures, consisted in the remapping of the "Bible lands," the final lines of which were drawn no earlier than October 3, 1932. This rearrangement of national boundaries brought back to life the last of the four great kingdoms which had so much to do with the development of Bible history and also prophecy. In consequence of these changes and racial revivals, Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Rome are all numbered among living nations today and are occupying the very territories where they came into being millenniums ago. A brief statement of the time and manner of their restoration will be of interest.

Owing to the fact that Persia, with the exception of comparatively brief intervals when she was under foreign domination, has maintained at least a semblance of independence throughout her history, we will consider that nation first of all. While the actual beginning of the Persian monarchy is lost in a dateless antiquity, reasonably accurate records take us back to Kai Kubad, the founder of the Kaianian line of kings, in B. C. 708. We are aware that as a powerful world empire Persia was brought to a sudden and dramatic end when the avenging hand of the Almighty descended upon her in about B. C. 330 and that since then she has remained in a somewhat weak and ineffective state. But Persia is rising at last to a more impressive place in the family of nations. In the year 1920 she became a member of the League of Nations and the following year saw the rise to power of Riza Khan Pahlevi, who in 1925 deposed the king of the Kajar dynasty and became hereditary Shah. According to good authority "the government has adopted a westernizing policy" and is showing a "strong nationalistic tendency" which, no doubt, will continue to develop.

Greece, made prominent in world affairs through the conquests of Alexander, was overthrown by the Romans and remained for many generations a more or less subject nation, dominated by different imperialist peoples, and its submergence concluded with the conquest by the Turks in A. D. 1453. Greece continued under Turkish control until the latter were driven from the country in 1828, since which time she has continued to advance, having gained considerable territory through her participation in the World War. The monarchy was changed to a republic in 1924. The country is a member of the League of Nations.

Traditionary history suggests the year 753 B. C. as the date of the founding of the City of Rome which eventually came to dominate the entire civilized world. All are familiar with both the development and decline of the Roman power, so it is unnecessary for us to do more than mention that, with the murder of Valentinian, "the last representative of the house of Theodosius in the west," the history of Rome merged in that of Italy. Rome the Empire was dead, but her traditions and spirit still lived in the hearts of the Italian people, awaiting a favorable moment for them to blossom into new glory and power. Resembling somewhat the history of Persia, Rome has maintained its position in the national life of Italy, and following the overthrow of the French domination the nation has gradually advanced decade after decade. Since the World War, under the dictatorship of Mussolini, she has gone forward more rapidly, until at the present Italy is counted once more as one of the leading powers of the world. In Italy under that Fascist regime the spirit of conquering, dominating Rome has been revived.

Perhaps the most interesting of all the "resurrected" nations with which prophecy has to do is Babylon. This ancient city which gave its name to the empire of which it was the capital from 2124 B. C. to 539 B. C. existed long before the empire came into being. The earliest capital of the kingdom, however, was not the City of Babylon, but Ur, the birthplace of Abraham. The empire fell into the hands of the Medes and Persians, B. C. 536, and "soon began to decline, though it remained in a decaying condition for nearly a thousand years afterward." But now Babylon the nation lives again, recognized by the League of Nations, October 3, 1932, under the name of Iraq.

Not one of the four historic nations is now missing; all have been revived and are increasing constantly in power and influence in the world, preparing to take their places in the final act of prophetic fulfillment. Terrible, indeed, are the events before them, but God's righteousness must be vindicated and His promises fulfilled.

A Modernist Admits It

---

I HAVE been accused of undue pessimism and of misrepresenting the teachings of a certain class of popular preachers. But I have an admission from a few years back in an article by "Rev." Dr. A. Wakefield, in Collier's Weekly. A "Reverend," mind you, a man of four universities; so he ought to know what he is saying. Yes, a modernist preacher in New York, in a professedly Christian pulpit.

He lets the cat out of the bag. He does it by telling in that article in Collier's what "our grandchildren will believe." Any "liberal" preacher close-questioned enough will admit the same things, unless he happens not yet to have "progressed" so far in the way of thinking.

The following paragraphs quoted are the doctor's own words as I found them in an exchange:

"The deities will have vanished from human thought, and our grandchildren will have ceased to pray to them. They will have ceased to teach their children dark prayers. . . .

"Specifically, they will believe in a self-existing and a self-created universe. The light of science will flood even the dark recesses of human personality. Understanding nature and human nature more perfectly, our grandchildren will enjoy a simplification of life . . ."

Those are not new theories. The same ideas were taught many centuries ago, only they did not then have so much science to brag of. Self-confessed atheists are teaching them now, as they have always done.

The atheists publish the Truth Seeker, a magazine which lives to kill God and all religions. I have read several numbers of it. Some of their writers express disgust with modernist preachers and advise them to "come right out and be honest with it," as Dr. Slaten has done.

The doctor's grandchildren will further "believe that Jesus was born as other men, and that we possess few, if any, uncolored facts concerning Him. His greatness may be enormously overestimated." The doctor says such things, and yet he preaches in a Christian pulpit. (over)

If being candid and honest about a theory will save a man, then Dr. Slaten's salvation seems sure. But he further says, "This life is the only opportunity we shall have for service and enjoyment, for death is natural and marks the end of personal, conscious existence."

Then, if death ends all and there is no personal God, a man is a fool to pray, though he may do so to satisfy some of his hearers. They will think he is a Christian if he prays. That is the doctrine toward which young people are being led when they are taught that the Bible is an unreliable book.

When such men speak of God, some of them only personify "good" as a principle, but no personality. Some others mean only force, or energy which keeps things moving.

The government of Russia is modernism gone to seed, honestly atheistic. All forms of religion are sorely persecuted. The schools there teach that science is god enough, as some teach here.

Why should you and I care what the preachers teach? Simply because we do not wish to see the eternal hopes of so many people ruined. It is a Christian's duty to "contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." —R. A. Dunlap in World's Crisis.

The Reign of Sin Is Near Its End

---

EVIL is not eternal. Sin will not exist forever. Iniquity will not be immortalized. Crime will not send its stream of corruption through eternity. Satan must die. Sin will be dethroned. The scepter will fall from the hand of iniquity. The crown will be torn from the brow of falsehood. Error will perish at the hand of truth. Injustice will disappear from the face of the universe. Lies will vanish away. Wrong will flee like mist before the sun. Oppression will not set foot on the shores of eternity. Selfishness will find no habitation in the universe of God. Fraud will not cross the threshold of the eternal age. Evil will strike its flag at the appearance of Christ. Infidelity will stop its mouth and atheism stand aghast when the parted skies reveal the Captain of our salvation. The day of God puts an end to the day of sin. Righteousness will sway a universal scepter over a redeemed people.

David prayed: "Let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end," and his prayer will be answered. It must come to an end in two ways: by some forsaking their sins and by some being destroyed by them. Peter inquires, "What shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?" and Paul replies, "Whose end is destruction."—1 Peter 4: 17; Philippians 3:19.

But an endless thing could never come to an end; hence, if the wicked come to an end, they are not endowed with an endless existence. If "the wages of sin is death," it is not eternal torment (Romans 6:23). If the wicked perish, they are not preserved (Psalm 37). If God destroys the wicked, then they are not immutable beings (Psalm 145:20). If God is a "consuming fire," He does more than merely scorch the wicked (Hebrews 12:29). If they are "burnt up," then they do not survive the fire. If David told the truth when he said, "Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be" (Psalm 37:10), then the endless hell of popular theology is but a theological fable not found in the Bible.

The coming of Christ means the abolition of evil. The divine power will sweep away as chaff all human governments. Mortality will be swallowed up of life. Death will be abolished and hades obliterated. The devil will be shorn of his strength and fall beneath the sword of the divine Conqueror. Christ will put down his castles, demolish his works, strip the mask from his falsehoods, and overthrow his dominion. The throne of justice will be established in peace.

There will be no bloated opulence and gaunt poverty there. No longer will the sordid-hearted millionaire heap up his plethoric fortune by means of oppression and fraud for the sake of pampering his lust and pride. No longer will the worthy poor, the oppressed, the weak ones of earth, the friendless, and the downtrodden and suffering ones plead in vain for justice. The mask of piety will fall from the face of hypocrisy. Deceit will no longer find a hiding place. Fraud will be out of employment.

Politics will no more pollute the earth. Insane ambition will never more wade through blood to a throne. The depraved courts, cabinets, congresses, and legislatures which have blotted the pages of history and ruined nations will never pollute the kingdom of God. The golden calf—the god of mammon worshipers—will be dethroned; and the unjust business customs, the greed of corporations, the mercantile frauds, the manufacturing shams, and the false weights and balances will never cross the bounds of the eternal age.

Heresy will no longer speak from the pulpit, nor vice find encouragement from the pew. The press will cease to issue its vile stream of mental filth, and corrupt literature lose all its admirers. The scenery of the new earth will not be defaced by playhouses, rum shops, gambling hells, dens of social vice, and haunts of sin. Eternal justice will root out all the nests of iniquity, destroy the nurseries of vice, abolish the swamps of pollution, and annihilate the bogs of crime. Political rings, social cliques, capitalistic combinations, military organizations, revolutionary combines, secret society bands, and all unholy alliances will be broken to atoms at the coming of the just Judge.—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the writings of H. W. Bowman.

Was Jesus' Crucifixion a Crime?

A CRIME is an act that subjects the doer to legal punishment; a grave offense against morality or social order. The question then arises, Was the killing of Jesus such an act?

It is said that the nation of Israel had "killed" Him (Acts 3:15; 1 Thessalonians 2:15). They had taken Him and by wicked hands had crucified and slain Him (Acts 2:23; 5:30; 10:39; 13:28, 29). They had put Him to death (1 Peter 3:18). We have the divine appraisal of this act in the inspired words of the witness Stephen before the Jewish Sanhedrin: "Ye stiffnecked, and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers: who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it."—Acts 7:51-53.

That Stephen spoke by inspiration admits of no doubt, for it is said, "But he, being full of the Holy Ghost . . . said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God."—vv. 55, 56. What Stephen saw was a vision given to him by the Lord Jesus Christ, and what he said was the direct result of inspiration. He was moved by the Holy Spirit to pronounce the killing of the Lord Jesus by the nation of Israel a murder. Murder is the intentional killing of one human being by another, either without moral right or without legal authority. That the killing of Jesus was intentional on the part of Israel is patent to all who follow the record of His death. That they had no moral right to take His life is equally clear when we consider the fact that He "knew no sin" (2 Corinthians 5:21), that He "did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth" (1 Peter 1:22). He was most fitly compared to "a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:19). Hence when He was slain by crucifixion, this was done "by wicked hands" (Acts 2:23), and such slaying was nothing short of murder, a crime against the law of God. In scriptural concept and language it was a "sin" of a very grievous nature. During the trial of Jesus (upon false charges) Pilate said to Jesus, "Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?" Jesus said, "Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin."—John 19:10, 11. Who had delivered Jesus to Pilate? It was Judas, as the testimony shows. When Judas kissed Jesus the Lord said to him, "Judas, betrayest (Greek, paradidomi, to give over, deliver) thou the Son of man with a kiss?"—Luke 22:48. The word "deliver" in John 19:11 is from paradidomi, and means to deliver or give over. Thus Judas was the one of whom Jesus said that he had "the greater sin." The priests and elders who delivered Jesus to Pilate (Matthew 27:1, 2) had their guilty part in this sin, which led up to the murder charged against the nation of Israel (Acts 7:52).

Had Jesus violated the divine law in a manner to forfeit His life, or His right to live, He would have deserved to be "put to death," "killed," "slain" for His misdeeds as a menace to society. In this case His execution would have been no murder but a punishment not only justified but required by the law of God. Thus the same act carried out under different conditions would have been a vindication instead of a violation of the divine law.

The divine testimony shows that when Jesus suffered, including His crucifixion, He suffered wrongfully. Thus we read: "For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed. For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls."—1 Peter 2:19-25.

Here the brethren were admonished to "take it patiently" when they were "suffering wrongfully." They had been thereunto "called," and Christ was held up as an "example" of suffering wrongfully, "that we should follow his steps." He "did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." When He "bare . . . sins on the tree," these were not His sins, but "our sins"; and since the "stripes" with which He was beaten were inflicted upon His body, it was fitly said that He "bare our sins in his own body." Elsewhere it is said: "Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ. For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit."—1 Peter 3:16-18.

Here again was suffering wrongfully imposed, first upon Christ as "the just," who suffered for the sins of the "unjust," and second upon His followers, who were suffering "as evil doers" "for well doing." "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins" without guilt upon His part, just as they were suffering wrongfully.

Why must He submit to the indignity of suffering without a cause upon His part? He "endured such contradiction of sinners against himself" (Hebrews 12:3). They called Him "Beelzebub" (Matthew 10:25) and "a Samaritan" and said He had a "devil" (John 8:48). His message they rejected; His love they spurned; His spotless life they smirched; His motives they misconstrued; His name they mocked; His person they mistreated; His life they devoured. Why must He bear all this indignity, this unmerited contemptuous treatment? Does the loving Father, who begat, anointed, sent, and approved of Him, permit all this? Unquestionably He does. But why?

The answer is, as a test of His loyalty and a trial of His confidence and trust in God. Jesus knew the destiny for which He had been divinely set apart, the station He was to fill in God's great plan, the duties that would devolve upon Him, the functions He was to perform, and the honors that should accrue to Him if He faithfully and patiently endured unto the end. In the divine mind and plan the glory was to follow the sufferings. "The sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow," is the way the Apostle Peter interpreted the deliverances of the prophets referring to Christ (1 Peter 1:10, 11). In the divine appraisal of the fitness of things the very Son of God may not be exalted to the position of the world's Redeemer, Prince, and Savior without undergoing the most severe trials, enduring the most painful sufferings, not for wrongs He has done, guilt He has contracted, nor divine anger He has incurred, but sufferings wrongfully imposed and disgrace wickedly heaped upon Him; after a life of consecrated and intensive labor, incessant benefaction, true devotion, faithful preaching of the divine message, He is killed, slain, put to death, murdered by His own people!

Again: why? God in heaven permitted the indignities, the insults heaped upon Him, the wrongs done, the sufferings cruelly imposed by those who claimed to be pre-eminently God's people. Not that those sufferings were to be construed as marks of divine wrath, or even disfavor, but they must be meekly and submissively borne as antecedents to the exaltation that has been decreed upon the fulfillment of the necessary conditions.

Jesus is true to God in every trial, loyal to principle amid suffering wrongfully imposed and innocently borne, and obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. The virtue of this suffering and endurance lies in the fact that He was not subject to these adversities on account of wrong done upon His part or even the slightest remissness in the performance of His duty, but all these evils were unjustly imposed upon Him. When He in the last moments of His life among men uttered the plaintive cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Matthew 27:46), there was a pertinency in those words that cannot be adequately explained upon any other hypothesis than that of suffering wrongfully or of being cruelly, ruthlessly, wickedly murdered by those who should have been willing to sacrifice their own lives for Him who had rendered such inestimable services to them; and above all that God, whom He had loved so intensely and served so admirably and well, would permit a wrong so manifest and flagrant.

But He maintained His confidence to the last. The historian records as His last words, "Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit; and having said thus, he gave up the ghost."—Luke 23:46. Some of the bystanders at His crucifixion, scribes and elders, tauntingly said, "He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him."—Matthew 27:43. He had trusted in God. He trusted in Him still, and died in hope and trust that His soul would not be left in hades, nor His flesh see corruption (Acts 2:27-31), and His confidence was not misplaced. The testimony of the witnesses chosen of God was, "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses."—Acts 2:32. He has since been exalted to God's right hand, and has been given the administration of the Spirit (verse 33). Angels, authorities, and powers have been made subject to Him (1 Peter 3:22). He is the Head over all things to the church. His name stands high "above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come."—Ephesians 1:21, 22. "And the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand."—Isaiah 53:10.—A. H. Zilmer in The Faith.

A little talk with a colored woman: "You people don't let the depression depress your spirits." She said, "Why should we: there are only a few things that poor people can have in this world, and happiness is one of them; if we are well, we are happy, even if we are hungry."

AS A THIEF IN THE NIGHT

perfectly natural, except for its sinister emptiness. Josie forced herself to touch the table, the Bible, to prove they were real. A sentence in the open Book caught her eye: "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

She looked up and noticed for the first time Mrs. Ander's wheel-chair. Then it was so! There was no possibility of another explanation. Josie thought she screamed, "Oh, God!" but her lips only formed the words. . . .

In the second house Mrs. Blakely stopped her husband in the hall between the kitchen and dining room.

"Listen, dear, don't forget to have Betty's young man say grace tonight. I suppose since he's training to be a minister he'd think us odd if we didn't."

Her husband acquiesced, thinking of the time in his youth when he had thought that he wanted to be a minister. He also thought guiltily of how long it had been since he had gone to church. He contemplated asking Betty and her "young man" to take him and his wife, if she would go, with them to church. But remembering the work he had brought home and the new serial in The Saturday Evening Post, he decided against it.

Mrs. Blakely raised her eyebrows at Mr. Blakely. He said, "Mr. Waite, will you give thanks?"

Mr. Waite complied: "Our Father in heaven, bless us and —"

Suddenly he ceased. After a moment eyes were raised surreptitiously. Betty and her parents and her two older brothers stared at each other with surprised eyes and blanched faces. Young Mr. Waite was gone! . . . . .

In the third house (a lovely house, with Grecian pillars supporting the porch roof) old Jefferson Greenworth expounded his philosophy to his bored sister-in-law.

"Now as a reasoning animal, I must grant the existence of some sort of motivating energy behind this universe. It would be too much to expect the world to create itself. But I object to specifying this—this God, if you will, as a personality. . . . No one can convince me that I would be a better man if I went to church and listened to some one else's ideas of deity. If a man is morally sound, what need has he of the ten commandments? Religion should go no further than the recognition of some indefinite power. Anything further is superstition."

"Um-huh," uttered his sister-in-law, without looking up from the page that was telling her who found the body and where. . . . .

"Gra'mama, how do I look? Isn't this dress sweet? Oh, mother's here, too. Gee, I thought you were downstairs. Won't I knock Freddie's eyes out?"

The gay creature danced into her grandmother's room, her eighteen-year-old eyes sparkling with youth and joie de vivre. Indeed, she was sweet; her fairness and slimness in the blue satin she wore were delectable.

"Yes, dear, you do look nice—but I wish you wouldn't go to that party tonight," her grandmother answered.

"Oh, Gra'mama, don't preach! It's only a very small party. And really, I won't be late! And if I went to church—oh, Mr. Newton is so deep, I never understand a word he says!"

Her "gra-mama" sighed, and her mother said, "Well, Mama, I suppose we should be glad she doesn't go with Jane Hall and that cigarette-smoking crowd. Annette, you've never smoked, have you?" Here already-believing mother's soul sought reassurance.

"No," lied Annette. To change the subject, she jumped up and ran to the window. "I believe Freddie's there! I'll go see."

She ran downstairs, followed by her mother; but it was not Freddie. Her mother asked, "Annette, won't you take this milk to your grandmother? I'm so tired."

Annette soon ran downstairs again, however.

"Mother," she called, "Mother, I can't find Gra'mama! She's not anywhere upstairs! It's funny; I don't see where she can be. Mother! MOTHER!" . . . . .

The man turned in at the last house. He hurried now, for it was cold. Already he had almost forgotten the evangelist's talk of a few minutes ago by thinking, "It isn't true!" He saw Joe standing by the window. Good old Joe! Yes, he had forgotten the frightening episode, except to laugh at his foolishness for thinking for a moment of it seriously. But his feet still marked time to the unconscious reiteration of his brain: "As a thief in the night!"

WINNING SOULS

verse. If it should happen that they wish to quote or turn to a scripture, quietly do so, at the same time handing them the Bible. It will not be long before it will be again in your hands.

Open to Romans 5:12: "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Before explaining this, read verse nineteen: "For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous."

Now you see death is caused by sin, and it entered into the world because man was disobedient. When an animal is dead, do you think that it is still alive? No. But do you know that, like yourself, that animal when it died became a dead soul?

We open to Genesis 1:30 and read, "And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life." Now look in the margin; see what it says for "life": "a living soul." Let us read Genesis 2:7. You see, like the animals, man became a living soul.

Let us read what Job says about a soul. We shall turn to Job 33:4: "The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life."

Now, my friend, when you die, there is something that goes back to God. Now note, I say, "Goes back," so it must have been there at one time before it came into you. What is it? Ecclesiastes 12:7 reads, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."

Do you remember that we found in Genesis 2:7 that God made man out of the dust of the ground? Yes, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life? Where did that breath come from? From God. Then before it came into your nostrils, it must have been with God. So when you die, and it leaves your nostrils, where does it return? To God, of course. We shall read Psalm 104:29, 30: "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust. Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created; and thou renewest the face of the earth."

We do not die because Adam's sin is visited upon us as his penalty for disobeying God. No. We die because God commanded that he should remain as he created him, a mortal soul. Since God's fiat is, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," every man dies.

Now would you like to learn how to come out from under this and become a being that will never die? It is very simple. God invites you to abandon the family in which you were born, that is, Adam's. Jesus said, "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." (over)

You see, God is seeking a family to be gathered out of the mortal race of human beings. They must sever all mortal ties; they must have a new father who is immortal, new brothers and sisters who are also immortal or will be some day. God's purpose is to recover all that was lost by our father Adam's disobedience, which ended in his death, and also that of his children; and through the righteousness of His Son and the obedience of all His children God will bestow immortality and eternal life.

SPEAKING OF THE CHICAGO FAIR—

IN VIEW of the millions of unemployed in our own land, as well as in other lands—many already driven to their wit's end, to make even a decent living—one cannot help wondering how it will be possible for this Fair to be a success in a financial sense, or in point of attendance. But, we may be too pessimistic, perhaps. Time will tell, without a doubt. No doubt there will be endless things of interest to see and enjoy—more than the mind can retain. There will be exhibited much that will tend to exalt and glorify man, without a doubt. How much God will be glorified remains to be seen. God can, and will, be glorified at last, in the perfect world, when Christ shall return and sin shall have an end. In that great Exhibition we plan to have a part. We cannot afford to miss it. "I want to be there, don't you?"—World's Crisis.

CHRIST'S COMMISSION TO HIS DISCIPLES

THERE are some things in the Bible which, to our partially enlightened minds, are difficult to understand; but, thank God, the gospel is not one of them. It is not a complex subject made up of abstruse parts which only men of learning can understand; on the contrary, it is a very simple proposition, an offer of terms of reconciliation from a loving Father to disobedient, offending children. It is called gospel, that is, good news, glad tidings or message.

Paul tells us he is not ashamed of this message, and gives the reason why: "Because it is the power of God unto salvation." Is it the power of God unto salvation to all men? Oh, no! The number who are benefited by it are limited. How is this? Was the offer not meant for all men? O, yes, as we have seen, Christ's command to His apostles was, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature"; but He adds, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Paul's language is in harmony with this. "It is," he says, "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." It is man, not God, who limits the operation of the good message by his unbelief. Man by his hard and impenitent heart, heaps up wrath against the day of wrath. Rejection of God's offer of forgiveness through Christ Jesus excludes and unfits the rejector of it from participating in its benefits. This is according to the divine arrangement.

God does not, by act of His sovereign will, compel anyone to accept salvation. That would make man a machine and would not answer God's purpose. He treats man as a free agent and appeals to his reason, his intelligence, and his conscience. He entreats him and expostulates with him, saying, "Turn ye, turn ye; why will ye die?" By the prophet of old He said, "Let the wicked forsake his ways, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, for he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." In like manner Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, says, "As if God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."

These are sufficient to show that the advances are from God toward men. He is ever merciful and waiting to be gracious.

"Come unto me," says Christ, "all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Sin-burdened soul, are you weary of serving the carnal desires of your unrenewed heart? If so, the invitation to you today is, "Come, come, for all things are now ready." "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

Peter, in his second epistle, says, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to usward, not willing that any should perish; but that all should come to repentance."

It is unnecessary to heap up further testimony to show God's desire for the sinner's reformation. His readiness and willingness to forgive and blot out his transgressions if the terms of pardon and reconciliation are complied with are obvious. What are the terms? They are briefly: faith, repentance, and obedience. Repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The sinner must see that he is all wrong and God is all right; and then with a penitent heart he will exclaim, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

The testimony of Peter on the day of Pentecost, as recorded in the second chapter of Acts, is in point here. When the Jews cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Peter said to them, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."

This is the divine arrangement for reconciliation and pardon; and an enlightened and loving compliance with the terms constitutes the subject a consecrated, separated one and a candidate for honor, glory, and immortality in the kingdom of God, soon to be established under the whole heavens; when war will cease to the ends of the earth and righteousness and peace will have universal sway.

With such an offer as this presented to the human mind, what inconceivable folly and infatuation must it be to neglect so great salvation! Can we entreat any to listen to the warning voice and flee from the impending storm to the hope set before them in the gospel? To all such we would say the door of mercy stands wide open; how long it will remain so, no mortal can say. "To day, if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."—Robert McLaughlan in Addresses on Bible Themes.

GOD'S CARE FOR THE INDIVIDUAL

WHEN a man, making earnest with prayer, sets himself to practice communion with God, he is likely to awaken with a start some day to a disturbing reflection. "This thing that I am doing," he may well say, "presupposes that the Almighty takes a personal interest in me. I am taking for granted when I pray that the Eternal is specially solicitous on my behalf. Praying may seem a simple matter, but on what an enormous assumption does it rest!"

Now, this reflection accords entirely with the facts. Prayer does involve confidence that God takes interest in the individual who prays. The fact, for example, that the Bible is preeminently a book of prayer, involves of necessity the companion fact that the God of the Bible cares for individuals. He knows all the stars by name (Psalm 147:4); He numbers the hairs of our heads (Matthew 10:30); of all the sparrows "not one of them is forgotten before God" (Luke 12:6). John is expressing his thoughts of God as well as his interpretation of Christ when he says, "He calleth his own sheep by name."—John 10:3. God is like a shepherd who misses even one lost from his flock, a housewife who seeks for a single coin, a father who grieves for one boy gone wrong (Luke 15). Of all the children in the world, says Jesus, "It is not the will of your Father . . . that one of these little ones should perish."—Matthew 18:14.

Throughout the Bible, and especially in the New Testament, God is not a king dealing with men in masses. He is no Napoleon, who, warned by Metternich that a campaign would cost a million men, said, "What are a million men to me?" God is a Father, and the essence of fatherhood is individual care for the children. For all that there are so many of us as St. Augustine said, "He loves us every one as though there were but one of us to love." That is the message of the Book, and it underlies the possibility of vital prayer.

This truth that God cares for every one of us is easy to speak about, beautiful to contemplate, but hard to believe. How can God care for each of us? We know the heart of Jesus well enough to understand that He loved everyone He met. But God? How can we make it real to ourselves that He who sustains the milky way, who holds Orion and the Pleiades in His leash, knows us by name?

For one thing, we seem too small and insignificant for Him to know. If God cares for each of us, that presupposes in us a degree of value and importance surpassing imagination; and as one considers the vastness of the physical universe, it seems almost unbelievable that individual men can be worth so much. Even the Psalmist felt the wonder of man's worth in such a world when he cried: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers; the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"—Psalm 8:3, 4. The Psalmist, however, never saw more than six thousand stars on the clearest night when he looked at the sky from the heights of Zion. We today can see one hundred million of them through our telescopes; and when we put a photographic plate, instead of our eyes, at the orifice of the instrument, we obtain indications of multitudes more. When, therefore, a modern psalmist like Tennyson thinks of man's possible value in so great a universe, he feels the terrific urge of doubt; he gathers all the activities of mankind, our wars, politics, arts, and sciences, and cries, "What is it all but a trouble of ants in the gleam of a million million of suns?" How in the face of this new knowledge of the universe can we pray in the confidence that God knows and cares for each one of us?

Many a man's faith is undone and his prayers stopped by this appalling contrast between the size of the world and his own smallness. The microscope, however, should counteract a little the disheartening influence of the telescope. It is evident that the Power which cares for the stars cares for all things with utter disregard of size. Inside any common pin as marvelous activity is going on as ever was present among the stars. Here are electrons so many and so small that the race in a million years could not count them, and yet not one electron touches another. In comparison with their size, they are as far apart as the planets of a solar system. Endlessly they revolve about each other, and no one ever slips by an infinitesimal degree from the control of law. Not strong reason, but weak imagination, leads us to be terrified by the mere size of the universe into the thought that God cannot care for us. As far as physical nature has any testimony to bear on the matter at all, it says, "There is nothing too great for the Creator to accomplish and nothing too small for Him to attend to. The microscopic world is His as well as the stars."—Harry Emerson Fosdick in The Meaning of Prayer.

THE FIRST EASTER MORNING

JUST as the first dim light of dawn began to steal over the hills of old Judea, a little group of women, their faces lined with grief and their eyes shadowed with tears, silently slipped out of one of the gates of Jerusalem, probably toward the north, to a little garden not far from Calvary. Here, in the new tomb of Joseph, the wealthy senator who secretly believed in Jesus and who had begged Pilate for His body, lay the form of the One they loved dearest of all.

Carefully carrying packages of precious spices with which to embalm the body of their Lord, we see these faithful women, each one treasuring a special reason for love and gratitude to the Master. They had grieved deeply the past three days, thinking they would never look upon His dear face in life again.

Unable to solve the problem of the lifting of the heavy stone that had been placed over the opening of the tomb, they reached the garden just as the first rosy streaks of day began to light up their pathway. "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?" they asked each other, so certain were they their Savior lay silently and cold within.

Could it be possible? Were their eyes deceiving them? No, the stone was moved from its place, and one clothed in white sat nearby! Fear clutched at their hearts, for surely some one had come in the night and stolen away the beloved body.

"Be not affrighted," the young man told them. "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here." Then the angel, for it could be no other, bade them hasten with the joyful news to the disciples that they were to meet Him in Galilee.

Risen from the dead! What could it mean? they asked each other, as stumbling back on the path they had just left they hastened to do the angel's bidding. Fear and yet a great joy filled their hearts as they pondered the message entrusted to them.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Now that school is out, you will have more time for your Bible Scrapbook work. On rainy days, through the middle of the day when it is too hot to help Mother in the garden, on Sunday afternoons, a certain hour set apart each day, all these are good times to work in your scrapbook. If you have just lately joined the Bible Scrapbook Club and want to do all the lessons from January 1, or if you are behind with any of your work, you will have to put in extra time.

We want all the scrapbooks on display at the Exhibit at Oregon, Illinois, during the National Conference, August 1 to 12. There, now the secret's out, isn't it? That's what we've been working for—to get our scrapbooks finished for conference.

At this Exhibit, you know, we see what different Sunday schools do. And we want our scrapbooks to be there, too, to show what our large family has done. Every day the folks at conference visit the Exhibit room and look at the display over and over again.

After conference your scrapbooks will be returned to you, and later we will use them again if they are not filled. For the third quarter, July to September, while the scrapbooks are traveling from you to me, and from me back to you again, we will have some other work to do.

Now for today's lesson. At the top of your page always write the date, the subject of the lesson, and the golden text. Then write in your own words the story of the first Easter morning. Below it paste the picture your teacher gives you on Sunday, June 18.

Then draw a cocoon. You have all seen one many times. Next draw a butterfly. Doesn't that make you think of death and resurrection? How much more beautiful the butterfly is than the cocoon! Just so shall we be after resurrection, for all sin, sickness, and sorrow will be erased from our faces, and all pain and suffering taken out of our bodies. What wonderful life we will have then, just as Jesus had after His resurrection!

Last, copy or clip out these verses and paste them on your page:

"In the garden they laid Him, where the olive trees grew;
There the song birds made music, and the flowers drank the dew.

But their eyes saw no blossoms, and their ears heard no song,
For in sorrow they waited through the night drear and long.

"In the garden they found Him at the morn's early light,
And the day beamed with glory after gloom of the night.
For an angel descended, and the stone rolled away,
Then to them there was beauty in the garden that day."

LESSON 12. — June 18, 1933

JESUS RISES FROM THE DEAD

Mark 16:1-20

Devotional Reading: Psalm 16

GOLDEN TEXT

He is risen.—Mark 16:6.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jesus Rises From the Dead.

Aim: To prove the reality of the resurrection of Jesus, and to show how it provides a basis for hope for life after death.

Basic Truth: "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept."—1 Corinthians 15:20.

I. Hopelessness. (Vv. 1-3.) The absolute hopelessness displayed by the immediate followers of the Lord after His crucifixion is a most difficult fact for believers today to comprehend. How could those who listened personally to His teaching fail to grasp the fact that, though He must die for the sins of the world, He would rise again the third day? The preparations the women made to embalm His body show only too plainly that they had no thought that He was to be immediately restored to life. That they sought His dead body on the very day He had set for His resurrection but places the greater emphasis upon their absolute hopelessness.

II. Amazement. (Vv. 4-8.) The women were not concerned about the work they were planning to do. No doubt they had performed many similar tasks before. They were troubled only as to who would remove the heavy stone that prevented access to the body that lay within the tomb. They were not even talking about Jesus, but of the stone, as they approached the sepulchre. Then came the astonishing appearance of the young man in white with the announcement that Jesus was risen from the dead! Their reaction to His statement was not that they were reminded of Jesus' promise that He would live again, but resulted only in their profound and awful amazement.

III. Unbelief. (Vv. 9-11.) The apostles, who had been carefully taught in the deeper truths of the gospel, were no less incredulous than the women. They, too, "believed not." Yet this very unbelief on the part of the disciples gives tremendous weight to the evidence that they later bear to His resurrection. It requires far stronger evidence to convince a decided skeptic than it does to change the thought of one who is already half persuaded.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Jesus resurrected (a) early the first day of the week; (b) angel appears; (c) tells of Jesus' resurrection; (d) shows where He lay.

The resurrection of Jesus gives His followers a new hope. 1 Pet. 1:3. Without His resurrection there would have been no hope. "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins."—1 Cor. 15:17. This great event happened "early the first day of the week." In v. 2 Mark explains what he understands by the expression, "early the first day of the week," by saying, "at the rising of the sun." As the sun broke through ushering in a new day, so the Son of God broke through death by God's power to begin a new day.

The angel appeared to the two women. They were affrighted, as might be expected. Their fears were soon allayed as he broke the news of Jesus' resurrection. He said, "Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified, . . . is risen." Who was risen? The Jesus that was crucified. To convince them of His resurrection the angel said: "Behold the place where they laid him . . . He is alive and has gone before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him." What did they see? They saw the One that was dead, but now alive for evermore.

Jesus appears (a) to Mary Magdalene; (b) she tells others; (c) they believe not. Jesus appeared to Mary following His resurrection. She became a herald of good news. Her joy must be shared with others, it could not be self-contained. At first those she told did not believe; but when He appeared to them that same night and showed them His hands and side, "then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord."—John 20:19, 20. Many today are skeptical of the resurrection of the real Jesus. The records are tampered with to suit individual whims.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"He is risen."—Mark 16:6.

Glorious news; for if Christ be not risen, then our faith is vain, and we are yet in our sins! But Christ is risen and is become the firstfruits of them that slept; and because He lives, we shall live also. Our future life depends on the resurrection; and if there be no resurrection, then there is no future life.

Do you believe this? Do you belong to Christ? If so, then you will be brought forth from the dead at His coming, or be changed if you should be living at that time; but if you do not belong to Christ, it will be different; for He will not call you at that time. If you are not a Christian now, why not accept Christ today and live for Him and learn to be of service that you may be His at His coming and be brought forth when He comes to claim His own?—L. A. R.

The Power of the Resurrection

The Sadducees, who were the scientists of the Jews, rejected the resurrection because they could not understand how the dead could be raised or how life could be adjusted after people were raised. "In the resurrection, whose wife shall she be?" was the question they asked Jesus after they had cited a case where seven brothers had married one woman. They might have asked: "Will God permit polyandry or polygyny after the resurrection when He will not permit it now?" Jesus settled the whole matter when He answered, "For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage."—Matt. 22:30.

Today many do not believe in the resurrection because they cannot understand everything connected with it. Mortal man cannot comprehend. Resurrection is a matter of faith. God, His Son, the prophets, and the apostles all testified as to the fact.

In speaking of the death of our bodies, Paul says: "It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body . . . The dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (the living ones when Christ comes) shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"—1 Cor. 15:42-44, 52-55.

"We look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."—Phil. 3:21.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Jesus Rises From the Dead.

The very next Sunday morning after the death of Jesus, three women were going to the tomb where Jesus had been buried. They were Mary Mag-da-len-e, and Mary, and Sa-lo-me. It was very, very early in the morning, for the sun was just rising. They wanted to put some oil and spices on the body of Jesus.

As they were walking along, they were saying: "How can we get in? How can we roll that large stone away? I wonder whom we could get to roll it away for us."

But oh! what a surprise they had when they looked up! The stone was already rolled away. And more than that, there was a person all dressed in white sitting in the tomb. The body of Jesus was not there, either. They were frightened when the man spoke to them. He said, "Jesus is not here. He is risen. Go tell His disciples and Peter that He has gone to Galilee."

Were they long getting out of the tomb? Oh, no; they ran away very fast. How happy they all were to know Jesus was alive again. And I know you are all happy, too.

When Jesus comes back to earth, He is going to make our friends and loved ones come back to life, too.—V. C. T.

EN ROUTE

This is written in the midst of the annual meeting at the Brush Creek (Ohio) church. These splendid people are again putting their best into this yearly work of advancing the gospel.

Our home church at Grand Rapids was looking forward to having Bro. Arlen Marsh fill the pulpit the first Sunday of our absence and Bro. Austin the second. Reports of these Sundays will be sent in by one of the home church members.

Ohio is dressed in its most beautiful garments at this season, and we are happy to have part of our family along to become acquainted with the state and with so many of its loyal brothers and sisters.

The Brush Creek church shows distinct evidence of the faithful work of its pastor, Bro. Magaw, and we trust they are headed toward still better things together.

F. E. Siple.

A GREAT MEETING

The Annual May Meeting came to a glorious close on Sunday night, May 28. All services were largely attended with the church filled to capacity on Sunday. The final service required every foot of seating space on the platform and in the aisles and hall. It was the largest attendance of recent years and one of the largest of all time. There were twenty-five cities and towns represented, two states, and one province.

The interest throughout the series was very good and the sermons masterly presented. Bro. Austin's long service in the community won for him the esteem and warm-hearted praise of the people, and the meetings were regular home-coming events.

The letter addressed to the church by the conference secretary on behalf of the board and conference was deeply appreciated and unanimously received by vote.

Two responded to the gospel call, Sr. Margaret Pascoe, Hampton, Ont., and Charlie Jones, Fenwick, Ont. Sr. Pascoe was baptized on Sunday afternoon following the afternoon service. Bro. Jones will follow in like obedience in the very near future. We are praying for others, also, to obey their Master in this all-important action.

It is to be hoped that the large attendance at our Annual May Meeting, which is the first of the summer gatherings, will be a "good omen" and all will be featured by unusually large audiences.

C. E. Randall.

EASTERN NEBRASKA CONFERENCE

The Nebraska State Conference will be held at Florence, Nebraska, starting August 6 and ending August 13. Bro. S. J. Lindsay will be the guest speaker. Mrs. A. Harper, Cor. Sec.

OREGON BIBLE SCHOOL

The committee in charge of the program and curriculum of the Illinois Bible School this year considers itself fortunate in being able to provide a complete course of prophetic study under three divisions: past, present, and future.

The first division will be under the leadership of Bro. Norman John MacLeod, pastor of the Los Angeles Church of God. Bro. MacLeod is peculiarly fitted for the work he has consented to take up, as he has been a successful teacher of history in high schools for several years and his university training was especially directed along that line. He will give his subject in both lecture and question form so that it will prove of unusual interest to all, even though some may not feel inclined to undertake the personal study that a single form of teaching might require.

The second division will be conducted by Bro. Marsh and will have to do with "Present Tense Prophecy," or prophecy that is now in process of fulfillment. This class will also be conducted in lecture form as well as by question-and-answer method. Bro. Marsh is now delivering before his congregation a series of sermons treating current events from a prophetic standpoint. It is hoped to have each student of the class provided with an outline of the lessons in this division.

The third phase of prophecy to be considered will be directed by Bro. Austin, whose many years of study and teaching along the line of prophecy to be fulfilled after the Lord's coming has provided him with a splendid basis upon which to build the lessons he now has in preparation. All who have attended Bro. Austin's classes on Revelation in the past will be eager to follow him again at Bible school this summer.

A further inducement to those who are specially interested in the prophetic Word in these days (and who is not?) to attend this series of studies is the fact that the three classes in prophecy will not conflict with each other. The same individual will be able to take all of the classes in prophecy, as they have been arranged in such a way that they do not conflict in time.

In addition to the classes in prophecy, classes in Sunday school teacher training and in Bible principles are included in the curriculum this year, together with the usual classes for juniors and children.

During the first week of the conference the sessions at 3:15 in the afternoon will be occupied by sermons to be given by ministers from various parts of the country. Altogether the forthcoming conference and Bible school in Oregon, Ill., promises to be a most helpful and interesting one. Come, and enjoy it with us!

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Bro. F. E. Siple has asked me to report the happenings in Grand Rapids congregation during his absence in Ohio. We miss our pastor a great deal, but are glad to have the opportunity to hear those who are filling his pulpit for the two Sundays he is away.

Last Sunday Bro. Arlen Marsh of Oregon gave us two wonderful sermons. We were very glad to have him with us. Next Sunday Bro. F. L. Austin will be our speaker, and we are anticipating with much pleasure his coming.

Our Sunday school passed the 300 mark much to our surprise, because the attendance usually drops over a holiday.

Mrs. F. E. Hall.

THE FONTHILL MEETINGS

By R. H. Judd

It was good to meet so many friends
 At our loved Fonthill church once more,
 For all were happy in the joyful hope
 Of home on Eternity's shore.

Some came from the east, some came from the west,
 From the north and the south they came;
 Twenty-five towns represented there,
 All to worship in Jesus' name.

Brother Randall told by the spoken word
 That the promise of God is sure;
 And strong were the facts that he brought forth
 In proof that it does endure.

Brother Austin spoke of Jerusalem
 That city of ancient renown;
 That center of worship, that home of God's choice,
 For prophet, for priest, and for crown.

Then all learned of the time when sin shall cease,
 And when sorrow shall be no more;
 When "change" shall come to this mortal frame,
 Like the Lord who has gone before.

It was a feast indeed to young and old,
 A feast to each person who came;
 'Twas a feast to those who needed rest,
 The weary, the deaf, and the lame.

We missed some friends, who in years gone by
 It had been a pleasure to greet.
 The warmth of their hands and their kindly smiles,
 Was worth all the journey to meet.

Some of these are resting beneath the sod,
 And some others have left the fold;
 But our hearts go out in the hope that all
 Will meet in that City of Gold.

WATERLOO, IOWA

The Waterloo and Cedar Falls believers are meeting regularly for church and Sunday school. Since we have no finances for a hired pastor, the sermons we receive are gifts from various ones. Whenever Bro. Hunt can spare himself from farm duties in Clarksville, he comes to us with messages of God's love and grace and exhortations to realize our high calling in Christ Jesus. His sermon recently on "Second Death" is not to be lightly set aside by Bible students. His talks always give an atmosphere of quietness and strength.

Occasionally Bro. O. J. Allard consents to speak for us, and through him grace speaks with the fire and vim that are his by nature and have become the weapons of a deep conviction of the unworthiness of the natural man as he stands in contrast to Christ Jesus our Savior.

Recently Bro. J. W. Williams gave us two of his sermons, and through him grace speaks through clean-cut thinking concerning man and his relationship to God. It is through his sermons and lessons that we find surest foundation of faith. Personal convictions that are the outgrowth of personal experience have a part of untold value to play in begetting faith in the hearts of others, but they furnish faith primarily to the one who has them. But thinking purified from all contradictions until the whole fabric of facts concerning God and man hang together in one beautiful whole is the one medium through which faith that is eternal and universal will develop among men. Bro. Williams' teachings are always an aid toward this purification, and we pray that both he and all of us may grow in the spirit of wisdom and revelation to the acknowledgment of Jesus our Savior, the eyes of our understanding being opened that we may know what is the hope of His calling and the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us who believe.

Bro. Howe, who is with us every Sunday, is our stand-by preacher; and he gives freely of his time both in preaching and teaching and, with Bro. Hunt's help, in arranging for services and speakers. His talks and lessons speak an earnest desire to serve our Master and to make the church an influence in the community that will draw people to Jesus. Space does not permit us to speak of all the helpers in class work and Sunday school. Each finds his part to do.

Waterloo is a rich field for service, though there are many obstacles, one of the biggest of which is the prejudice against us because of our "profound ignorance" of the Bible manifested in our "soul-sleeping" belief and in our failure to believe in a burning hell of eternal conscious torment. This ignorance has been announced over the radio and in a local non-denominational Bible class. But this makes our field all the richer for service. As we keep working together seeking always that oneness that can come only through gracious and kind consideration of one another because of God's own gracious consideration of each of us, we shall enter this rich field of service; and the very teachings that are now considered the outcome of dense ignorance will become mediums through which God's grace in us will shine free from the pagan mysticism and superstition which cause people to fear through ignorance rather than through the light that has been shed on us. No other service may be offered the Savior who saves by grace.

BEAR, ARKANSAS

Dear Friends and Readers of The Restitution Herald, our weekly messenger, and those of "like precious faith," happy greeting:

We wish to tell you of another good meeting at Bear which began Friday evening, May 26, and closed the following Sunday night. Bro. L. H. Shelton was the speaker.

After the sermon on Sunday morning Mrs. Mary Lynch came forward for baptism. Her husband, Mr. Tom Lynch, is a policeman in Hot Springs, Ark. He, with a goodly number of people, witnessed the baptism of his wife on Sunday evening. Baptism is an ordinance in "the church of God" (Matt. 3:13-17); also the Lord's Supper (Matt. 22:35-40). On these two commandments depend all the law and the prophets. Paul says in 1 Corinthians 11:1-3 to keep the ordinances as he delivered them. Our Savior condensed Moses' commandments into two and left them to be observed until He comes "the second time without sin unto salvation." See Heb. 9:27, 28; Luke 22:15-20. So our meeting closed Sunday night, after observing the memorial supper. See Mark 14:8, 9.

Bro. Shelton has promised to come here to hold a ten days' meeting for us, beginning Friday night before the fourth Sunday in July. Amen.

Yours in hope of life when Jesus comes,
Kittie C. and R. A. Humphreys.

Watch for Bro. Conner's detailed report of the sale of the greenhouse to appear next week.

Speaking of Bro. Conner, we might mention that the pastor of the Dixon, Ill., church had a very full day last Sunday, speaking morning and evening in his own church, at two in the afternoon at a jail service, and at three-fifteen at the Illinois State Institution.

A terrific storm of wind and rain struck Oregon a little after seven o'clock on Sunday evening, breaking down trees and poles and leaving the church without lights. Candles were secured and the pastor went on with the service. The usual number were present from Rockford, including Bro. Thayer the pastor. We were glad to welcome Bro. and Sr. McGraw of Macomb, Ill., in our congregation again. They have been making a visit in Rockford.

The deeply impressive prayer-poem to which we gladly give space on our editorial page in this issue, aside from its devotional quality, which is of the highest order, is a literary gem of rare excellence. Its author, Peter Bylsma of New Orleans, sent it to his daughter, Sr. Margaret E. Bylsma of Hammond, La., to whom we are indebted for permission to publish it in The Herald.

The article entitled, "Christ's Commission to His Disciples," was delivered by the author as an address in Cleveland, Ohio, more than thirty years ago. When committed to the printed page a good sermon blesses generations. Will some of our able ministers bear this thought in mind, and prepare their discourses for publication in The Herald?

Again let us remind those who contemplate attending the General Conference and Illinois Bible School this summer that railroad and bus line rates will be very reasonable into Chicago from all directions owing to the "Century of Progress." Chicago is but ninety-nine miles from Oregon. This unusually favorable condition provides an added inducement for those who live at a distance to come.

The interesting and encouraging report from Bear, Ark., should act as a stimulant to other communities to press forward in the Lord's service. There are many localities where a good meeting might be held at this time with equally pleasing results.

Sr. Elmer Winfrey and her son, Ferd, of Bosworth, Mo., paid a short visit to Oregon last Friday and Saturday. Sr. Azalia Winfrey who is a teacher in the Oregon high school accompanied her mother and brother on their return home. Sr. Winfrey will be greatly missed in the Oregon choir, of which she is the director.

Miss Irene Taft was the only member of the Oregon Sunday school in the high school graduating class this year, but the Sunday school feels that it is well represented, as Miss Taft took the highest honors in her class of twenty-four, receiving both the silver award cup given by the American Legion Auxiliary for highest average scholarship in the last year, and the Board of Education scholastic medal for highest standing for four years.

One by one the annual state conference notices are coming in, the latest to reach us being that of the Eastern Nebraska Conference to be held in Florence, a suburb of Omaha, beginning Sunday, Aug. 6, and continuing over Sunday, August 13. The fact that Bro. S. J. Lindsay is to be "guest speaker" will add much to the interest of the gathering. Our only regret is that the dates set cover the period of the General Conference, and some who might otherwise attend the meeting at Florence will not be able to do so.

The suggestion recently made by Bro. Norman John MacLeod of California concerning the sharing of expenses in the trip to conference this summer might well be adopted by many others. Why not make up a couple of auto loads in your church and come together for this great annual meeting of God's people? How about it, Niagara Falls and Font-hill? Hammond and other southern points, come and visit this northern country in its most beautiful season and take in the meeting.

THE RESURRECTION VICTORY

"Death is swallowed up in victory."—1 Corinthians 15:54.

SOMEWHERE I have read an Indian legend of a tribe which lived in a great forest at the foot of a lofty mountain peak. One day the old chief summoned the lads of the tribe to his side. He called upon them to clamber to the top of that lofty summit and win the renown of its conquest. It would test their mettle and prove their worth to the tribe, for it had been many a day since a young brave had mastered that sky-piercing pinnacle. The lads started out to obey. Hours went by and they began slowly to return. One of them brought a tuft of moss which he had torn from the mountain side, as a token of the height to which he had climbed. Presently came another with the broken twig of a tree which stood still higher up the mountain, but yet not upon its summit. By and by came another grasping a beautiful flower which grew well up toward the summit of the peak, but still not upon its top. After a while all the lads were back save one. For hours he came not. Then as the gloom of the night began to fall, they heard his voice calling in the distant forest. Nearer and nearer he came until he stepped into the fire-lit circle of the waiting camp. He had no token in his hand, but when they saw his face they did not need to ask him if he had conquered the towering peak; for it was lighted with the glory of vision, and he cried aloud, "I have seen the crystal sea."

Next to our Lord Jesus Christ probably no man who walked this earth knew the secret of victory better than the Apostle Paul. He knew the way of death through union with his Lord Jesus Christ. He knew the way of life, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus thrilled and pulsed through his whole being, physical, mental, and spiritual. He knew, too, the way of consecration, for he was Jesus Christ's bondsman in an utter abandonment of devotion and obedience. He knew, too, the way of practical cleansing from the daily practice of sin, for the vision of the risen Christ in all His holiness was like a consuming fire in the purging of sin from his walk and life. But as he reaches this mountain peak of the resurrection victory, he is like a man who has scaled the loftiest summit of vision, who has seen the splendor of the crystal sea; and whose face is radiant with the fore-gleams of coming glory. For with all his wondrous experience of victory the sentence upon his mortal body is "the body is dead because of sin." But now he sees the crystal sea of coming triumph over the death itself which is stamped upon these mortal bodies. It is the resurrection vision which now entralls him. It is the resurrection shout of victory which breaks from his jubilant lips as he cries out, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

THE STORY OF THE RESURRECTION

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."—1 Thessalonians 4:16-18. "Behold, I shew you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."—1 Corinthians 15:51-54.—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the writings of J. N. McConkey.

THE WANDERING JEW

BECAUSE of economic conditions many Polish Jews have been emigrating to Cuba, where many have been securing a meager living by selling beads on the streets. But it is becoming more and more difficult to make a living there, so many are returning to Poland. Says the editor of the B'nai Brith magazine, "The tired wanderer's footsteps turn away from the Cuban shore. And whither to go? In whichever direction he turns the doors are closed. Only one place on earth is left to offer him a grudging welcome. He returns to Poland from whose poverty he fled. In Poland, at least, still stands Jewish life and the sustenance of the Torah; in Poland are relatives who may share the crust with him.

"In one week recently sixty Jews left Havana to return to Poland after five years in Cuba and if the migration continues another year it will see the last of these Jews in Cuba. Of old the wanderer had the world; today he walks in a narrow and diminishing circle of the earth."

The wandering sheep of the house of Israel will only find rest when the great Shepherd returns the second time to gather them.—Selected.

A SAMPLE OF THE NEXT WAR

THOSE who wonder what the next war may be like will be interested in the rapidity of the advance of several thousand Japanese soldiers, who recently shattered Chinese resistance east of the Kingan mountains in Manchuria.

With its infantrymen riding in motor trucks, accompanied by airplanes, motorcycles, and armored trains, despite sub-zero weather and deep snow, the Japanese troops made an advance of more than two hundred miles in four days, aided by airplanes which bombed Chinese concentrations and troop trains.

For those who may wonder why the Japanese conduct such expeditions, it is pointed out that the Kingan mountains contain some of the finest forests and most extensive mineral deposits to be found in Manchuria. The alluvial gold in the range has been estimated at $2,500,000,000 in value.

The Blood Upon the Rose

---

I see His blood upon the rose,
And in the stars the glory of His eyes,
His body gleams amid eternal snows,
His tears fall from the skies.

I see His face in every flower ;
The thunder and the singing of the birds
Are but His voice—and carven by His power
Rocks are His written words.

All pathways by His feet are worn,
His strong heart stirs the ever-beating sea,
His crown of thorns is twined with every thorn,
His cross is every tree.

The Editor's Prayer

MOST gracious Father, we thank Thee that we are Thy children, the objects of Thy love and care. We are thankful that we are permitted to work together in Thy service. Be Thou with us, we pray, throughout the summer conferences and Bible schools, that many may have opportunity to learn of Thee and of the gospel which alone can save them from sin and death. Guide us in our efforts to serve Thee to Thine own glory through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Profitable Vacations

SCHOOL IS OUT! The hills resound to the shouts of boys and girls who are as happy as the birds whose music fills the summer air. The breath of freedom and joy is everywhere. The whole wide world feels the call of the open country, and dreams of far-stretching roads that wind away into the misty land of adventure, rest, and recreation.

Vacation time has come again!

The car is burnished, tires inspected, luggage carrier attached. Father is ready for the trip! But mother still has the finishing stitches in sister's play suit, while ten-year-old brother untangles the fishing lines and runs down to the filling station on the corner to ask for a new road map—he really doesn't care of what state or country, just so that it points out the road to "the beautiful land of somewhere."

The highways are already filling with cars, the streams are lined with disciples of Izaak Walton, and the picnic grounds are beginning to show the effect produced by care-less people away from home.

Father and mother were a little late getting away this year, as they had to wait until brother came home from college; for of course they couldn't go without him! It wouldn't be vacation unless the family were together. But now they are nearly ready to start. There is just one thing more for them to do and they will be on the road to — — And that's the question! Where will they go? Where can they find a place that the whole family will enjoy and still be together?

Suddenly and satisfactorily the matter is settled. Mother stops her work as her eyes fall on THE RESTITUTION HERALD. Why, yes! That's the very thing! The suggestion made by Brothers Randall and Lyon to their congregations! Why hadn't they thought of it before? They would go to the General Conference and the Illinois Bible School for their vacation! What could be finer than that?

Father, mother, and grown-up brother Bill would find much of interest in the three classes on prophecy to be given in Oregon (especially now that they have been so arranged that one can take all three and not miss a lesson). First in order of time would be one on fulfilled prophecy to be conducted by Brother MacLeod. That surely would be interesting by a teacher who has had years of experience in the teaching of history in high school. Next in point of time would come Brother Marsh's lessons on "Present Tense Prophecy," having to do with things that are happening in all parts of the world today. Then, of equal interest and importance, there are the lessons on unfulfilled prophecy to be given by Brother Austin who, as everyone knows who has heard him on the subject, has given that particular branch of prophecy most thorough study.

Ten-year-old-brother will be delighted with the work of the intermediate class, especially if he were under the instruction of Brother Thayer last year; while little sister will have a glorious ten days helping Sister Thayer do fascinating things to illustrate Bible stories.

Perhaps they will bring a guest along. It might be the young lady brother Bill is interested in. She is just out of high school, you know. She doesn't know very much about what the Church of God believes, and Bill wants her to know all about it. She will have a wonderful chance to learn under Brother Lyon of Cleveland, who will teach her class in Bible principles. Beside that, she is teaching in a Sunday school and would appreciate the opportunity to attend the class in which Sunday school methods will be taken up, both from the standpoint of teaching and from that of organization and worship. They will just have to invite Madge to go along, she will get so much out of it all. And then, think! She might decide to be baptized before she came home! Wouldn't that be fine!

Of course they will plan to take in one or more of the fine state conferences on the way; they will meet so many good people and hear so many helpful sermons—O why hadn't they thought of that before! Such a vacation as that would be so wonderfully pleasant and also very profitable, mother knew they all would want to go.

And she was not mistaken!

Christ's Abiding Presence

By George B. Alldridge

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—Matthew 28:20.

DR. JAMES J. WALSH in his interesting book Religion and Health relates this incident which occurred during the Great War:

"There is a story that comes from his (Marshal Foch's) own headquarters that when sometimes he was thought to be asleep he was found in prayer. When his first decision as commander-in-chief of the Allied Armies had to be made, and he had to determine whether Amiens should be surrendered to the enemy and a defense made on lines behind that city, both Haig, in immediate command of the British forces, as well as Petain, the French commander, are said to have advised retirement.

"Foch listened patiently to their reasons and then asked for twenty minutes by himself before making his decision, declaring that he would give it in that time. He spent those minutes walking up and down the garden in the slight rain that was falling, very much in the concentrated manner that he was known to assume when praying. At the end of twenty minutes he declared that Amiens was to be held at all cost,—and it was.

"This was the first great step in the breaking of the enemy morale. When three months later, on the 18th of July—after the Germans had tried for three days to come through his lines and had practically succeeded and then, lacking in men and munitions, had to stop—Marshal Foch launched his counter-offensive which represented the beginning of the end of the war, it was easy to understand the strain through which he had just passed and the immensity of the responsibility of the decision that he had to make.

"After the orders for the counter-offensive had been sent out he said, 'Now I must rest.'

"As can readily be imagined he had slept but little on any of the three preceding nights. Half an hour after he retired there came a dispatch which the high staff decided must be communicated to the general-in-chief. They hesitated for some time to wake him, but there was nothing else for it. His adjutant found him on his knees."

After reading this, I thought upon Jesus' words: "And the Lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely: for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."—Luke 16:8.

A book that has afforded me much comfort and enlightenment is The Christlike God, by Bishop Francis John McConnell. His purpose is to get his readers to conceive and

"The infinite always is silent;
It is only the finite that speaks.
Our words are the idle wave-caps
On the deep that never breaks.
We may question with wand of science,
Explain, decide, and discuss:
But only in meditation
The Mystery speaks to us."

understand God as God revealed Himself in Christ. This is a beautiful thought.

Zophar asks, "Canst thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?"—Job 11:7.

In a measure I can answer yes. "And, without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."—1 Timothy 3:16. "For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us."—1 John 1:2.

Bishop McConnell makes this very clear and plain to me, for he says that if we are to believe in a Christlike God, we must get away from the conception of the divinity of all things alike. If we are to hold to immanence, we must do so as a statement of the "everywhereness" of God's activity and the oneness of plan that works through that activity.

This is important because of the tendency, since the coming of the immanence teaching, to say that God is in Christ and in all other men, that He is in Christ and also in the blue skies—which, of course, has its measure of truth, but which misses the essential.

In painting a landscape there must be a focus, which the artist sometimes calls the "eye" of the landscape. In a masterpiece of oratory there is a climax; in a drama there is outcome or denouement; in orchestral music there is a theme; in argument there is a conclusion. Painters, orators, dramatists, musicians, philosophers are, it might be said, in all parts of their work alike. They composed it all and painted and played and spoke and wrote it all.

To say that each creator, however, was "in" the interpretative key which unlocked the one regnant meaning toward which every detail had been moving, in no different sense from that in which he was "in" a minor detail, is absurd. That is to say, if we are to preach God as like unto Christ, we have to maintain that the doctrine of the divine presence in everything is not to conflict with that presence of God in those central aspects which lead to intelligibility.

In the Messiah Handel is present in every note of the oratorio, but we should not say that he is in the drum-beats alone just as he is in the majestic song of the Hallelujah Chorus. If some hearer should begin to disparage the chorus on the ground that Handel also wrote the drum parts, we should declare he was either putting forth commonplace or nonsense.

The believer in a Christlike God beholds in Christ a climax, a theme, a motive, a spirit which gives him God in his deepest nature. In other words, God is in Christ as He is not elsewhere, as revelation of spirit and character.

If, now, some objector will have it that God is also in everything else, we have to reply that no doubt He is, but that we are on the search for meanings and that we do not find meanings in settings of scenes as we do in the scenes themselves. With a clue to a meaning once in our hands the accessories fall into place, but the accessories themselves do not supply the clue.

In Christ we feel that we have arrived at a center. The view outward from a center is altogether different from the view inward from a circumference. As I see Him as revealed in Christ, God is seen to be more than the Creator and Sovereign of the world. Added to these conceptions of Him is that of Father, as He said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

Thus is the true idea of God taken out of the field of speculative thought and brought forth into the borderland of human understanding. He is no longer a being dreadful to contemplate, but one to be loved and adored as a Father.

The Mortality of the Soul

By Harry A. Sheets

---

IN EVERY age there have been people whose religious beliefs have placed them in small groups isolated from the rest. Sometimes these groups were holding to some peculiar, fantastic, or irrational beliefs wholly without foundation in God's Word. On the other hand, God's faithful people have always been a minority, always rejected and often persecuted by the majority. This has not been a pleasant experience for them, but they have found considerable comfort in the words of our Master where He said, "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Luke 12:32.

The Church of God holds to some doctrines which places it with a minority. There are some teachings, generally accepted and popular with the majority, which we do not feel are founded upon an accurate interpretation of God's Word. Therefore, we do not accept them. While God's followers have always been a minority, yet we are fully aware that not all minorities have been right. We do not attempt to derive any comfort from the fact that we are a minority in some of our beliefs. We have adopted a policy of proving all things, and holding fast that which is good. We give herewith our reasons for not accepting some of the popular doctrines taught by certain Protestant churches.

1. We do not believe in the immortality of the soul, because the Bible nowhere speaks of the soul as being immortal. Such expressions as "immortal soul," "immortality of the soul," "never dying soul," etc., are not found, or even implied, in the Word of God.

2. We do not believe the soul to be immortal, because it can be destroyed. "Fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."—Matthew 10:28.

3. We do not believe in a never-dying soul, because the soul can die. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—Ezekiel 18:4. "No man can keep alive his own soul."—Psalm 22:29. "He spared not their soul from death, but gave their life over to the pestilence."—Psalm 78:50. Samson said, "Let my soul die with the Philistines"; and Balaam requested, "Let my soul die the death of the righteous" (see margin in Judges 16:30 and Numbers 23:10). Job said, "My soul chooseth strangling, and death rather than life."—Job 7:15.

4. We do not believe that any portion of man is immortal, because Paul told us to "seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life."—Romans 2:7. We do not seek for what we already possess.

5. We do not believe that man gets his immortality at his birth into this world, because the Bible teaches very clearly that immortality is not put on until the time of the resurrection. See 1 Corinthians 15:51-53.

6. We do not believe that death is a friend, because God's Word states that "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."—1 Corinthians 15:26.

7. We do not believe that death is the door through which man enters to receive his reward, because this would make the devil, not God or Christ, the benefactor of the human race. It was not God's purpose for man to die; satan caused man to sin and thus die.

8. We do not believe that "death is the door to heaven," because this would make the devil the doorkeeper to heaven, as he is the one who has the power of death. Hebrews 2:14.

9. We do not believe that the righteous dead are praising God, because He has told us that "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."—Psalm 115:17. David speaking to God, said, "In death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks."—Psalm 6:5.

10. We do not believe that the dead are "more alive than ever," because the Bible teaches differently. God has said of man in death, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:4. "The dead know not any thing. . . Their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished. . . There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest."—Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6, 10. It is very evident from these scriptures that a dead man is really dead and not alive in any sense. Death is the opposite of life, according to God's own definition. He said, "Thou shalt die, and not live."—Isaiah 38:1.

11. We do not believe that the righteous who died before the time of Christ are in heaven, because Jesus said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven."—John 3:13.

12. We do not believe that anyone, since the days of Christ, has gone to heaven, because He said, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you."—John 13:33.

13. We do not believe that at death good people go to one place and the wicked to another, because God's Word states that "All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."—Ecclesiastes 3:20. That the one common place for all the dead is the grave is evident from God's Word. That is why Jesus said, "For the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5:28, 29.

14. We do not believe that a person receives eternal life or any of the eternal blessings without first coming forth to life through a resurrection. Paul wrote that if there is no resurrection "then they also which are fallen asleep (died) in Christ are perished." Again he stated, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die."—1 Corinthians 15:18, 32.

15. We do not believe that a person receives his reward at death, but at the resurrection of the just at the second coming of Christ. "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."—Luke 14:14. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matthew 16:27. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."—Revelation 22:12. "When the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."—1 Peter 5:4.

16. We do not believe that the righteous shall be rewarded in heaven, because the Scriptures nowhere so state, but on the contrary teach that they shall be recompensed in the earth. "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth."—Proverbs 11:31. "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth."—Matthew 5:5. "Evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. . . The meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. . . Such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth. . . The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever. . . He shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it."—Psalm 37:9, 11, 22, 29, 34. "The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inherit the earth."—Proverbs 10:30. "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."—Revelation 5:9, 10.

17. We do not believe that Jesus meant "everlasting punishing" when He said that the wicked would go into "everlasting punishment." (See Matthew 25:46.) Paul tells us that the wicked shall be punished "with everlasting destruction" (2 Thessalonians 1:9). Other scriptures state: "All the wicked will he destroy."—Psalm 145:20. "The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."—Psalm 37:20. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16. "They shall be as nothing."—Isaiah 41:11. "All that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Malachi 4:1. They shall "lose" life (John 12:25).

18. We do not believe that the wicked are going to be preserved in, and by, eternal fire. God used eternal fire to destroy Sodom as an example of the ultimate punishment of all wicked. God turned "the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly."—2 Peter 2:6. "Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them . . . are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire."—Jude 7. We do not believe that destruction is an example (sample) of eternal torment. "The wages of sin is death."—Romans 6:23.

19. We, of the Church of God, believe and teach: (1) That Adam was created essentially mortal, and as such he could not bestow upon his children an immortality which he himself did not possess. (2) That death was pronounced upon Adam and the entire race ("In Adam all die."—1 Corinthians 15:22) and was accomplished by removing the tree of life. We believe, further, that "it is appointed unto man once to die" (Hebrews 9:27), and when dead he is asleep (1 Thessalonians 4:13) and will "rise again in the resurrection at the last day" (John 11:24); "for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise" (1 Thessalonians 4:16) to be forever with the Lord in this earth.

With this belief we are forced to give up the doctrine, accepted by the majority, that the righteous go to heaven when they die, and that the wicked go to a place of eternal torment. We believe the doctrine of the immortality of the soul to be but another edition of the original falsehood, "Thou shall not surely (really) die." Man believed the serpent once to his hurt and we can see little, if anything, to gain by believing him now. It cost man his life once, will it not do it again?—Gospel Searchlight.

LITERAL TRANSLATIONS

MANY are those who are always going to the Greek or Hebrew to get the "literal translation" of these languages, thinking thereby to get a better meaning of the language of the Old and New Testament. They are certain that getting a "literal translation" will sustain them in their claim for some peculiar notion! Many of those listening to these so-called translators giving the "literal" rendering, are at once swept off their feet, for they are sure if it is a "literal translation" it will give us the exact thought that was in the minds of those who originally gave us the Hebrew and Greek manuscripts.

Of course, nearly all the readers of our religious papers know nothing of Hebrew and Greek; and swallow ("hook, line, and sinker") all such explanations as are built on a literal translation, with the extraordinary hunger of those who are, as the Athenians were, always looking for something new. Often serious errors come on account of all such explanations, and much harm is done.

Now, what is "literal translation"? In translating, we transfer the thoughts and ideas from one language to another. Translation has been defined by authorities as "The act of expressing the words of one language by the words of another."

Since each language has idioms all its own it has often been very difficult to find words in another language in which to express exactly all shades of thought and meaning of this language. It is for this reason that all translations are imperfect.

The assumption that Jesus spoke in the Greek is very well supported, better than many think. As the various translators rendered the Greek into English, many delicate shades of meaning were absolutely and altogether lost. This is not the fault of our Lord, nor the fault of the translators, for it is a splendid example of proving the utter impossibility of representing every shade of thought through the medium of written words. Is it not altogether true that we, as we write to our friends, do not always—cannot always—convey our exact meaning in mere words? This will be seen more and more to be true, the more we study Greek, Hebrew, or any other language.

There are many of these idioms of other languages that make no sense at all to us if rendered literally! All we can do is to use a corresponding idiom in our language; and in doing so very fine-shades of meaning are lost in the transit. In fact, it has been found utterly impracticable to make any translation literal throughout; for to be literal the translation must be according to the letter, or exact words. And as the exact words in other languages have acquired a meaning which the corresponding word in English has not yet acquired, we could never learn from our English lexicons what was the real and exact meaning intended. When such idioms occur, they must be translated in such a way that the meaning of the original will be as clear as possible. And when that is done, we are often very far from a literal translation. And so, whatever anyone may say contrariwise, a literal translation is often very misleading, and really no translation at all! For, the original meaning has been lost in the process of rendering it.

Here are a few illustrations: In the German we have this idiom literally translated. "The book allows itself to be read." Let the English reader take any comfort in a literal rendering of that, if he can! Literally every book allows itself to be read. How could it be prevented? But, were we to give the real meaning, we would render it: "The book is worth reading." The English reader now understands just what every native-born German does by the other phrase. This free translation brings sense; the literal does not. Again: "She will remain sitting." This is the literal; but the meaning is: "She will remain unmarried." Again, "Dear Fatherland, no danger thine." This is a very fair attempt at the German, but the idiom is not expressed as yet. "Dear Fatherland, may you be quiet as a babe is quiet on a mother's breast." The thought of "danger" is there, but the idea of resting on a mother's breast so that the mother absolutely protects the one resting, is the thought.

Take the Hebrew (Genesis 14:10): "Now the vale of Siddim was slime-pits, slime-pits." How can we render that literally and get the sense? We can not? A free translation is: "Now the vale of Siddim was full of slime-pits." There is your meaning! The native Jew might have understood the other better, but we understand it better this way. In Exodus we read: "Thou shalt anoint them (Aaron and his sons) and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister to me in the priest's office."—Exodus 28:41. This is clear, is it not? It is a free translation. Literally it is: "Thou shalt fill their hand."

In the Greek we have the words of Jesus regarding John the Baptist, and Christ attributes them to "children sitting in the market place": "We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you and ye have not beaten the breast."—Matthew 11:17. But this literal rendering does not convey our Lord's thought. A freer translation, "lamented," does. Those people expressed their grief by beating the breast. We do not.

In the words of Jesus (Matthew 18:6; Mark 9:42; Luke 17:42): "the millstone of an ass," we have the literal translation; but without the explanation that must go with it, namely, the large millstone turned by an ass at the mill grinding flour, the language is obscure. Most of the millstones were turned by "maid servants," and were small. Some were large and were, therefore, turned by an ass. When translated, "a great millstone," the meaning is at once made clear to us.—Zeta in Present Truth Messenger.

GATHERING CLOUDS

God speaks to men in varied ways. He does not always send an angel or sound a trumpet to warn them of impending danger. He does not always paint weird pictures in mystic visions of the night. He sometimes speaks as He spoke to Israel in the thunderous tones that echoed from the trembling mountain of the Law. Again He whispers in the still small voice of conscience that reaches none but the ear attuned to hear it. More often still God sends His messages of warning, of assurance, or of promise, in the common language of the day, written plainly in the happenings around us and recorded in the daily press. So it is that God speaks to us now, and so it is that I would ask you to listen to His voice as it comes to us in the eloquence of the events of which we are a part.

The history that we know best has to do almost altogether with the white race. We have studied the progress of mankind from but one angle, that of the white race. All of its great figures with which we are familiar are white men, and it is hard for us to conceive of the possibility that some other race may dispute our claim to superiority and our rights to lead in world affairs. But nevertheless, the time has come when we must readjust our thinking to meet new and strange conditions that have arisen.

It was Kipling, I believe, who spoke so freely of "The White Man's Burden." Our pride of race has led us to assume that the entire burden of civilization rests upon us alone; that intellectual progress and moral leadership reposes exclusively in us; that no other people has been endowed by the Creator with the necessary wisdom and authority to rule the world. And then we dispute with each other as to which of the white nations is best equipped to wield the scepter!

"What fools we mortals be!"

While we have been arrogantly engaged in prideful disputation with each other, while one group of white people has been struggling for supremacy with another group of white people, the brown and yellow races have slumbered on, indifferent to our contentions, resting in the knowledge that their forbears were busy writing ponderous tomes on philosophy and science, and in printing books, when ours were slinking naked through European forests, wild and untaught savages, with no higher thought than to eat and drink and propagate the race. Into such absurdities and dangers does pride and blind arrogance lead us! How complacent we have been! How unmindful of the lessons that history might have taught us had we but heeded them with care!

When we think of conquest we think of the Medes and Persians, the Greeks and Romans, the Germans, French,

In this, the third article of a series of studies in "Present Tense Prophecy," the editor warns of the gathering of portentous clouds in the Far East that threaten not only the supremacy of the white race in world affairs, but the total overthrow of western civilization. . . . .

and Spanish. We forget that mighty conqueror of the East, Jenghiz Khan, whose yellow hordes swept over nearly all of Asia and large sections of Europe, until the extent of his empire was far greater than that of any white conqueror the world had ever known! Less than seven hundred years ago that yellow demon in human form was burning cities and ravaging lands of eastern and northern Europe! It was the invasion of Jenghiz Khan that drove the "bloody Turk" from his original home on the borders of China and forced him into Europe. And he, that is, the Turk, is a blood relative of the Tartars, Chinese, and Japanese, who are now assembling for their contests with the West.

Before we go farther into the study of these races whose backgrounds and traditions are so alien to our own, let us ask why we are interesting ourselves in them and their plans for national enlargement. Surely it is not simply that we may satisfy our curiosity! The reason is a much more vital one than that.

Here it is. If the conclusions we have reached are correct, and the western world is threatened with an invasion of modern pagans, equipped with the latest weapons of warfare, and determined to overthrow all existing white authority, it constitutes a grave danger to Christian institutions, as well as a serious menace to our lives and property. Our Christian civilization could scarcely survive such a complete political overturning as would follow the conquest of the West by the East. It would mean what similar migrations of races have meant in the past, the exchange of one civilization for another!

Impossible! you say. Terrible as it is to contemplate, such a transformation is not only possible, but probable, if we base our conclusions on the lessons history has taught.

Lord Lytton, head of the League of Nations Commission sent to investigate the situation in Manchuria, said in a recent interview: "The little cloud which appeared on the far eastern horizon in September, 1931, has grown into a very threatening storm, which overshadows the whole of international relations."

These are serious words, coming from an experienced observer of international conditions. Lord Lytton represents western civilization, the civilization of which we are a part. He looks upon things from our standpoint, he sees them with western eyes.

To indicate the seriousness of the menace he told the following little story: "They told me an amazing story in Tokyo of the spirit of the Japanese army. The incident happened in Shanghai. There was a barbed-wire entanglement which the Japanese had not been able to break either by shell fire or by machine gun, but it was necessary that it should be broken. Three Japanese soldiers wrapped themselves in dynamite, went forward to the entanglement, and there exploded themselves, achieving the desired results."

Such is the spirit of the people who will lead the invading forces into the West! They are fatalists. They believe that what is to be will be—that nothing can hasten or delay the moment of their death. This philosophy makes them altogether indifferent to danger, and strengthens them to press onward in the face of certain destruction.

China will be closely associated with Japan and probably with Russia in the effort to change the map of the world once more. It is hard for western eyes to see the possibility of such a triple alliance just at this time when China and Japan are but resting for a moment before they renew their contest over Manchuria. Our difficulty here lies in our inability to comprehend the psychology of the Orientals. Their natures are different from ours. They react to a given stimulus quite differently than we do, and as one Japanese statesman recently declared, "They might be fighting today, but tomorrow they would be the best of friends."

China is badly broken up in factions. A strong and popular leader is needed to weld the severed parts of this once mighty nation together. A great common purpose would also serve to do this. Such a purpose might come from within or from without. Should the influence of the aggressive Japanese succeed in bringing this condition about, that is, the uniting of China under a single leader and for the accomplishment of a unit purpose, it would be a comparatively easy matter for those four hundred million yellow people to be led anywhere. And therein lies the danger to the world.

A growing friendliness of the Japanese Government toward Soviet Russia is another important and significant development of recent months. To unite the millions of Russia with the vast man power of China and Japan would indeed create a serious menace to the peace and security of the western world.

Yes! We are facing a world crisis of tremendous portentousness, and only God can foresee the outcome clearly. But in the massing of yellow troops, in the martializing of armies, in the thunder of battle that already echoes round the world, the voice of the Almighty is calling, calling, calling to His people to prepare—not for warfare, but for the coming of the Lord! That is the message of God, carried on the murky smoke-clouds that hover over northern China and many other lands today. The Lord is coming! And with His coming comes the judgment day of the nations—"for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."—Joel 3:14.

But the judgment of the nations means the rewarding of the saints, the deliverance of suffering Israel, the ending of war, the ushering in of age-lasting peace, and the beginning of that endless period of supernal glory of which prophets sung their sweetest songs and for which they offered their most fervent prayers! Jesus, the Messiah of Israel, the Savior of men, the Prince of Peace, comes to this earth to reign, and with His coming the clouds of sin that have shrouded the earth for so long will be banished forever by the Sun of Righteousness!

YOUR attention is invited to the following comparisons. Observe that we are not setting opinion against opinion, but are rather calling to your attention Bible facts, which you may turn to your Bible at once and verify.

HUMAN OPINION SAYS:

1. "Baptism is not necessary in order to be saved."
2. "It makes no difference what mode of baptism is used."
3. "Baptism doesn't take much water, only a few drops."
4. "Sprinkling is just as good as immersion."

THE WORD OF GOD SAYS:

1. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:16.
2. "There is . . . one Lord, one faith, one baptism."—Ephesians 4:4, 5.
3. "John also was baptizing in Aenon . . . because there was much water there."—John 3:23.
4. "We are buried with him by baptism into death."—Romans 6:4; Colossians 2:12.

NO MONEY

By Charles Martin

DURING the recent bank holiday which was nation-wide, we often heard the remark, "I have no money." Even some of the larger churches held services only in the morning and gave as the reason, "Not enough money to take care of the expenses."

What is the reason for this condition? It seems that during prosperity the people left the true God and worshiped gold and silver, the gods of this world. If we would forget these things and return to the Lord, then this deplorable condition would no longer exist.

Let us go back to the time when the tabernacle was erected. We find that there was no cash involved; rather, each one gave as he had prospered and of things he had. They gave gifts of their own making and came willingly—no one was called. Now the majority of people sit at home and wait for some one to come and ask them to come to the church. They gave whole-heartedly and were not compelled. If modern people would follow these old-time characters, then there would not be a condition like that existing today.

We find that both men and women gave freely. The women presented their most prized possessions, jewelry, and earrings. Yet the modern girls and women cannot give up a box of rouge or lipstick that the price of it may go to God's work. The Israelites recognized the fact that there was no distinction between the two sexes in God's sight as far as erecting the temple of God was concerned.

The need of this tabernacle rested on man, not on God, for the Scriptures plainly state that "God that made the world, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing."—Acts 17:24, 25. The temple was necessary as a place where they could gather to worship God. It is, then, for man that the churches are erected, and it is up to man to provide those things needful for the operation of the churches.

As Israel is a type or example for us, let us see how they gave. They gave willingly. David asks the question, "Who are we, that we should be able to offer so willingly?" and then states, "All things come from thee, and of thine own have we given thee." They also gave the best, and no inferior article was accepted. These gifts were all sacrifices. If necessary, a substitution or an article of equal value was permitted.

God has never required the impossible; so if we are told or moved to give, let us not think that we cannot do it, but give the best we have either in service or money. Give it as a freewill offering from our borrowed possessions which are loaned us by God. Remember, we are only returning a small part of what God has placed in our hands.

The offering we make is not ours, but belongs to God; and even though small it is needed and according to our faith will pay great interest on the deposit. It should be a willing offering and, according to our means, a generous offering.

You may say, "I cannot possibly give money."

If so, read Exodus 35:31-35; 1 Chronicles 21:23; and Malachi 3:3. And if you do not give your best, read the warning in Malachi 3:4-10.

SAINTS IN CHRIST

"Paul . . . to the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse."—Colossians 1:1, 2.

IN READING the Bible we find that words we may have read over and over again and that made no special appeal to us may at a particular reading take on a new meaning and make a special appeal, revealing the truth to us as it is in Christ.

These words "saints in Christ" may at first have no special meaning to us; but as we travel from place to place, from city to city, from one community to another, and meet in these places, in church, in young people's societies, in prayer meetings, in missionary societies, real saints in Christ, who form the workers in these places, then we can appreciate Paul's words.

Paul is writing to Colosse, a city no better or no worse, I suppose, than any other city. He is not writing to saints in paradise or in a niche in some church; but to people, men and women, of flesh and blood on earth at Colosse, who are fighting life's battles and temptations and who are in Christ.

How did there happen to be saints and faithful brethren in Christ at Colosse? There were saints and faithful brethren in Christ at Colosse because Paul had gone there to preach Christ and Him crucified. Paul did not leave behind him at Colosse ruined lives or vain regrets; he left behind him saints and faithful brethren in Christ, and they were there because Paul had been there.

Sometimes a man comes to a community and stays a few months and then goes away and leaves behind him a trail of fornication, adultery, suicide, broken hearts, and broken homes. Such are not saints and faithful brethren in Christ. Some call Paul a perfect gentleman. Paul was a perfect gentleman because he was "in Christ," without which no man is a perfect gentleman nor any woman a perfect lady. How long have you been in the community where you are? Are there any saints and faithful brethren in Christ in any place because you have been there?

There are today in every town, city, and community in Christendom little groups of saints and faithful brethren in Christ; and looking down the aisles of time, Paul saw these groups of saints in Christ would bless and help the world. We may take up today's paper and read in it of some deeds of sin in some of our large cities and judge the whole city by that story, forgetting that in that same city there are many groups of saints and faithful brethren in Christ, of which our daily papers may take no account; for it is true as some one has noted that we look to the press as printing only the evil and are not interested in the good things happening in the world.

There were many elements of society in Colosse. There were soldiers in Colosse; there were politicians; there were the city officials; there were the clubs and workmen's societies; but it was to no such group that Paul wrote. It was to the saints in Christ in whatever group they might otherwise be found. It was in these that he was interested and to whom he wrote his letters. It was to groups like these that he wrote all his letters, whether to Colosse, Philippi, Ephesus, or wherever he wrote, as we can see by reading the opening words of his epistles. It is well to note this, for these groups only could appreciate Paul's message.

This is a new element in society, an element by which all other elements measure themselves, an element that is to tune society, an element that is to fit society for the society of the saints and faithful brethren in Christ, living lives like theirs, trusting Jesus, and walking humbly with God. Men there are who live their lives out today, governed by this element in society, and never realize it. How interested God must be in these little groups in society, the hope of the world, the salt of the earth, that make the world sweet to live in.

There may be, as some claim, hypocrites in the church; but you will not find them in these little groups in the Wednesday evening prayer meetings or in the Young People's meetings. Here are little groups God will not forsake, but will show them His salvation. It is to these that His life and love goes out. These are His own, and they wait on Him and hope in His mercy. It was for these that He sent His Son into the world. It was for these that Jesus died and rose again. It is for these that He makes intercession. It is to them that Paul wrote his letters of help and hope. It is to these that God gave His Revelation of His Son Jesus. These are they who call upon Him and whom He hears.

These are they whom God calls sons and that endure chastening that they may be better prepared for the things of God and be made conformable to His holiness. It is these that bear fruit and that are purged that they may bring forth more fruit. These are they that will rise and reign with Christ a thousand years. These are they in whose lives God has manifested His power to enable them to live holy lives in Christ, bearing fruit for God. These may, as godly in Christ, suffer persecution; but they will in Christ be raised first, for in Christ Jesus they are new creatures.

God grant that we all may be one of those whom Paul would call a "saint in Christ" and live and believe and work for God as such.—William Mackay in The Bible Advocate.

A SWARM OF BEES

BIBLE MASTERY

DR. TORREY was once asked by a man who had listened to him and marveled at his wonderful mastery of the Bible how he could gain such a knowledge of the Book. "Read the Second Epistle of Peter fourteen times," said Dr. Torrey, and turned away. However, this man took the advice, and for some days read nothing but the Second Epistle of Peter until he had read it through the prescribed number of times. He had the glad consciousness that his heart had been cleansed and his life kept pure during that reading, which, we are informed, he continued.

A "Bible Mastery Campaign" has been started in the West. Individuals and preachers read a single book repeatedly during the month, and teaching and preaching are centered on the selected book. The plan is to read it through at one reading and repeat it until it becomes a personal possession; to read it without commentaries, giving the Bible a real and vital chance to talk to us. It is not a Bible reading marathon; the aim is quality, not quantity. It is the application of the laws of concentration and repetition.—R. G. Torrell in Messiah's Advocate.

"WATCH YE THEREFORE, AND PRAY ALWAYS, THAT YE MAY BE ACCOUNTED WORTHY TO ESCAPE ALL THESE THINGS THAT SHALL COME. . . , AND TO STAND BEFORE THE SON OF MAN."

REGARDING REPORTS

THE day is fast approaching (June 30) on which reports of the various committees and affiliated organizations, both state and local, are due to the National Berean Society. As usual, the request is that these reports be made on the regular blanks provided by the secretary of the national society, that they be made promptly, and that the items enumerated on them be kept as accurate as possible.

These reports, far from being the unnecessary evils that many consider them, are extremely valuable to the work of the Bereans. Upon them is being based the number of lesson books to be printed for each edition published; upon them is based an estimate of the possibilities for instilling new life into old societies and for organizing new classes or societies. Obviously, inaccurate reports mean simply that there will be either too few or too many Berean books printed and that places which could well use a forward impetus in their religious labors are not given it.

Beyond these official annual reports lie the more frequent reports sent in to the Berean page. For the benefit of the national secretary and the junior and senior social correspondence committees, it is asked that the full names (with "Miss" or "Mrs." in the case of women) be used in mentioning people and that the street and number or rural delivery route number be included with the addresses of such people. These requirements should be observed particularly in the case of officers, the sick, and the newly baptized.

All reports should be sent either to the national secretary or to the Berean editor, and not to any other officer, except in organized states. Money for lesson books should be sent to the National Berean Society, Oregon, Illinois. Money for all other purposes should be sent to the treasurer. Never under any circumstances should money be sent to an individual officer in his name; checks, drafts, and money orders should always be made out to the National Berean Society. Money should always be accompanied by a statement as to the purpose for which it is intended. Please remember this—and that dues should be sent the national treasurer on July 1 or before. Those societies affiliated with a state organization will, of course, send their dues to the state treasurer.

Arlen Marsh, Secretary.

Soldiers of Christ, arise,
And put your armor on;
Fight, for the battle will be ours;
We fight to win a crown.

We fight not against flesh,
We wrestle not with blood;
But principalities and powers
And for the truth of God.

With wicked spirits, too,
That in high places stand;
Let all your loins be girt with truth,
Waiting our Lord's command.

While Jesus is our friend
And His rich grace supplies,
We'll march like valiant soldiers on:
We're sure to win the prize.

The battle's almost o'er;
The race is nearly run;
Then, with our glorious, conquering King
We'll sit down on His throne.

—Charles Wesley.

A great deal can be accomplished in the world if one is not too careful who gets the credit.

We never know how many people are patterning their lives after ours.

Remember only doers of the word are blessed;
'Tis well to hear and believe it, but to do is best.

COMING TO EARTH AGAIN

NO LIFE of our dearly beloved Master would be complete without a glimpse at the final pictures of Him on earth that are given us in His Father's Book. We have just finished a brief study of Jesus' birth, His deeds of love and mercy, His death, and His resurrection. Rather than a review lesson for the last Sunday in June, we will take up, for the Bible Scrapbook Club members, a study of the last views of Jesus just before He ascended to heaven.

For forty days after His resurrection Jesus walked and talked with His disciples. He journeyed from Jerusalem up to the beautiful blue Galilee and back again. His feet never grew weary from treading the rugged hills or sandy shores; His eyes never grew dim from long hours of sleepless labor as in the days of old. For now He had new life, life that would never end, that was not touched by pain or weariness or sorrow.

We find the records of ten different visits Jesus made during this time, five of them on the day of His resurrection. The first just after the women had received the angel's message, you will find in John 20:15-18. A very familiar tone in Jesus' voice caused Mary Magdalene to recognize her beloved Lord. Soon after this He met the other women who had come, thinking He was still dead, to anoint His body, and He said, "All hail." You will find this in the last chapter of Matthew's story of Jesus.

The third mention of Jesus is that most interesting story of the two disciples walking along the road to Emmaus, perhaps a little village about four miles west of Jerusalem. Be sure and read this story, or have Mother read it to you.

Picture in your minds the two discussing their Savior's death and His reported resurrection. These were not of the twelve apostles, remember, but were followers of His, nevertheless. Jesus caught up to them and asked them what they were talking about and why they were so sad. Turn to this story in Luke 24:13-35, and find out what caused them to recognize their Lord. In verse 34 we read that Jesus appeared to Simon Peter. Luke does not tell us what He said to Him, but we know He forgave Peter for being so cowardly. Later He told him to feed His lambs.

Back at Jerusalem again, He appeared in the room where ten of the disciples were gathered, and we can just see His hands extended in blessing over them, as He said,

"Peace be unto you." What did Thomas, the absent disciple, say when they told him they had seen the risen Lord? How many of you know where to find this story?

Eight days later Jesus suddenly appeared among them again, and this time the doubting disciple was present. Jesus proved to Thomas that He really was the Lord, and He pronounced a blessing upon us then. Do you know what it was? Doesn't it seem wonderful to think that Jesus loves us because we believe in Him, even though we have never seen Him?

How comforting, too, to know that Jesus, even after His resurrection, was concerned with His disciples' welfare! Read about the fishing trip and the breakfast on the shore prepared by Jesus' own hands, told by John in his last chapter. Now He was up near Galilee, called here Sea of Tiberias, and there He gave His final lessons to His followers, Matthew 28:16-20. The most important words seem to us to be these, "Lo, I am with you alway." How could they fail with such a Leader, and how can we?

Paul tells us, in 1 Corinthians 15:7, that after this Jesus met His own brother James and talked to him. Then the last picture is the best of all. Turn to Acts 1, and read the first eleven verses. For the last lesson in your scrapbook write the story of this last day of Jesus on earth. All of you who are old enough, memorize verses 9 to 11. If anyone tells you Jesus will never come back to earth again, you can quote those words of the angel.

Find all the pictures you can showing these different visits of Jesus and paste them on your page. Last, copy the song or poem you like best which tells us that Jesus is coming again to make His home here with us in the earth made new. Then, if we are true to Him now, we will have the kind of life He has, perfect, complete, wonderful, never-ending life.

Work hard on your scrapbooks, boys and girls. You have only this month in which to finish them. Then each of you send yours to me, and we will put them up in the Exhibit at General Conference at Oregon, Illinois. Afterwards they will be returned to you. Right after the Fourth of July I'll begin looking for the mail man to bring me scrapbooks. I wonder whose will be the first to arrive!

"Jesus loves the little children,
He would have them shine for Him;
Shine each day like merry sunbeams,
Never let their light grow dim."

LESSON 13. — June 25, 1933

REVIEW: JESUS OUR LORD AND SAVIOR

GOLDEN TEXT

All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.

Lesson I. Mark 7:1-37.

Topic: Jesus Ministering to Jews and Gentiles.

Summary: Jesus and His disciples went into Phoenicia, where a Grecian woman pleaded with Him to relieve her afflicted daughter. Owing to the woman's faith, Jesus granted her prayer. Returning to Decapolis by way of Galilee, the Lord healed a deaf-mute and indicated by signs the cause of the trouble and the source of the power by which he was given hearing and speech. The people witnessing the miracle were amazed at His power and confessed, "He hath done all things well."

Lesson II. Mark 8:1 to 9:1.

Topic: Jesus Requires Confession and Loyalty.

Summary: Jesus, returning to Galilee, feeds four thousand, refuses the request of the Pharisees and Sadducees for a sign from heaven, warns His disciples against the leaven of the Pharisees, heals a blind man, questions the disciples as to what men say concerning Him, asks them who they think Him to be, receives Peter's confession, announces His forthcoming death, commands their loyal obedience, and assures them that the life obtainable through faith in Him is more valuable than all other considerations.

Lesson III. Mark 9:2-29.

Topic: Jesus Transfigured. (Easter Lesson.)

Summary: Following His promise that some then present should not see death until they had seen the Son of man coming in His kingdom, Jesus took Peter, James, and John into a mountain apart, and was transfigured before them. In this vision Moses and Elias were seen talking with the glorified Christ, typifying the resurrection of the dead saints of past ages and the immortalization of the living saints when Christ comes, followed by continued intimate association with Him.

Lesson IV. Mark 9:30-50.

Topic: Jesus Reproves Self-Seeking.

Summary: Returning with His disciples from the scene of the transfiguration, Jesus questioned them as to what it was they were disputing about on the way. They were ashamed to tell Him that it had to do with which should be the greatest in the kingdom Jesus, knowing their hearts, told them that he who would be first in the kingdom must be the servant of all. He further asserted that any service performed in His name should not go unrewarded.

Lesson V. Mark 10:1-31.

Topic: Jesus Sets New Standards of Living.

Summary: The disciples rebuke parents for bringing children to Jesus for His blessing. The Master was indignant with them and declared, as He took the children in His arms, that only those who would receive the kingdom of God as a little child should enter therein. A rich man questioned Him as to what he must do to obtain eternal life. Jesus answered, "Thou knowest the commandments." The man said he had kept them from his youth. Jesus, seeing his greed, directed him to sell his great possessions and give to the poor. This grieved him bitterly. "Who then can be saved?" asked the disciples. Jesus answered, "With God all things are possible."

Lesson VI. Mark 10:32-52.

Topic: Greatness Through Service.

Summary: The time was drawing near when Jesus must die for the sins of the world. As He traveled toward Jerusalem, He instructed His disciples concerning the events that awaited Him: His betrayal, death, and resurrection. In answer to the question of James and John He defined the basis of true greatness in God's sight. He said, "Whosoever of you will be chiefest, shall be servant of all." He held Himself before them as an example of willingness to give on behalf of others.

Lesson VII. Mark 11:1-33.

Topic: Jesus Asserts His Kingship.

Summary: Jesus and His disciples were approaching Jerusalem. Jesus sent two of His followers into a nearby village, instructing them to bring Him a colt they would find tied at a certain place. They found all as He said it would be; and after they returned, Jesus mounted the animal and rode into the city. The great multitude, casting branches and garments on the roadway before Him, acclaimed Him King. He proceeded to the temple, where He cast out those who bought and sold within its sacred walls and reproved them for making the "Father's house a place of merchandise."

Lesson VIII. Mark 12:1-44.

Topic: Jesus Answers His Adversaries.

Summary: The opposers of Jesus, becoming ever more anxious to entangle Him in difficult questions, meet with defeat. Jesus, however, succeeds in catching them in their own nets so frequently that they no longer dare to ask Him any questions. A more honest one among them asks what is the "first commandment of all." Jesus refers him to the one commanding men to love God, and says that the love of man comes next. The scribe agrees so readily that Jesus says, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

Lesson IX. Mark 13:1 to 14:9.

Topic: Jesus and His Friends.

Summary: Jesus admonishes His disciples to "watch and pray" that they may be ready for His return to the earth, for they cannot know the exact time of His coming. Visiting at the home of Simon the leper in Bethany, a woman anoints His head with a precious ointment. The disciples criticize the action, considering it a useless extravagance. Jesus, however, approves the act, asserting that she has anointed His body for burial and that the record of her service will be told wherever the gospel is preached throughout the world.

Lesson X. Mark 14:10-72.

Topic: Jesus Faces Betrayal and Denial.

Summary: Jesus' life is rapidly drawing to a close. He has met with His disciples to observe the feast of the Passover. Following the supper He established the Communion Service, declaring that the bread represents His body, and that the cup typifies His blood, which was "shed for many." "I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine," He says, "until that day when I drink it new in the kingdom of God." Jesus warns them that all of them should be "offended" because of Him that night, which Peter, speaking for himself, vehemently denies.

Lesson XI. Mark 15:1-47.

Topic: Jesus on the Cross.

Summary: Having been arrested, tried, and convicted on false evidence, Jesus is led away to Golgotha and crucified. The inscription placed over His head reads, "THE KING OF THE JEWS." Two thieves are crucified, one on either side of the Lord. He is mocked by the multitude and challenged to come down from the cross. As He dies in agony, the veil of the temple is rent from top to bottom. So deeply impressed is the centurion who stands near at what he witnessed that he says, "Truly this was the Son of God."

Lesson XII. Mark 16:1-20.

Topic: Jesus Rises From the Dead.

Summary: Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James and Salome went to the place where Jesus was buried to anoint His body with spices. It was very early in the morning on the first day of the week. As they questioned as to who would roll the stone from the door of the sepulchre, they saw that it had already been removed and that a young man in white was seated upon it. They were frightened, but the young man said, "Be not affrighted," and told them that Jesus was risen from the dead and would go before His disciples into Galilee, and there they would see Him.

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

Those of you who read the church notices have probably decided that the church at Marshall has ceased to function, due to the lack of news and activities reported. The reason was simple: there was nothing to report. In the first place, a great many of the members live quite a distance from the church; and in the second place, the roads for the past few months have been well nigh impassable. Therefore, very few services were held the past winter.

The roads are in good condition again, however, and services have been resumed. The Sunday school was reorganized June 4, and plans made for the summer. Preaching services will start June 18 and will continue throughout the summer. The writer has been engaged as pastor and will preach the first and third Sundays of each month, also fifth Sundays. We urge each member to cooperate and help make these services a success. Our prayer is that the blessing and guidance of God will be ever present with us as we labor in the Master's vineyard.

Harry Goekler.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The Children's Day program has been postponed a week, which brings it to June 18. It is to be held in the church yard, because of lack of space in the building.

Sr. Schooley's husband was taken to the hospital with an infected eye last week. He got a piece of steel in it over a month ago, and has had trouble ever since its removal. It is very painful and may lead to the loss of the eye.

Bro. Austin was enjoyed to such an extent that he has been asked to return for our conference, which will be held in conjunction with our vacation Bible school, from July 10 to 21. The school will end with the Sunday school picnic.

Bro. Austin offered wonderful sermons. He was called early for the funeral service of Mrs. Gaver. This family lives near Bro. Siple and had not been in church until last Sunday. They seem interested, so Bro. Austin's sermon must have held some appealing gems of thought for them.

Mrs. Fred Hall.

MICHIGAN BIBLE SCHOOL AND CONFERENCE

The Annual Michigan Bible School and Conference is to be held at Grand Rapids July 10 to 23, inclusive. It is planned to conduct the vacation Bible school of the local church at the same time, which will provide classes for every age. There will be a class for YOU.

Make plans now to be present for two weeks of instructive Bible study. Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago, Ill., expects to be present and will be assisted by the local pastor, Bro. F. E. Siple, in conducting the preaching services. These two capable teachers will be in charge of the adult and young people's classes. Other capable teachers will be provided for the younger classes.

Such an extensive program means that we need the cooperation of every member in the state of Michigan. We need your presence at these meetings; your financial assistance is required; also your prayers that the Father will direct this work and that His blessing may rest upon this Bible school and conference.

Our state treasurer is Sr. Nellie Blakely, 1037 Lafayette Ave., S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich. She will be pleased to hear from you. Wm. A. Hanson, Conf. Pres., Caledonia, Michigan.

GOOD NEWS

Sr. Anna Smith, of Forreston, Ill., will again be in charge of the culinary department, which insures the best possible meals with the lowest possible expense. Sr. Thayer will again act as Matron, which insures harmony in dining room and dormitory. Begin to plan now to be here on August 1 for General and Illinois Conference and Bible School.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL

Bros. F. L. Austin and C. E. Lapp will have charge of the class of high school age at Illinois Bible School this year, and that we know means interest and good instruction for the young folks. Bro. Earl Thayer, who had such fine results from his class of intermediates last year will teach the same group again this year. Sr. Thayer, our efficient primary teacher, will be on hand as usual with her program of Bible training for little tots.

The selective course on Bible principles for which the Church of God as a body stands, will be taught by Bro. M. W. Lyon, who has served Illinois so capably for several years in Bible school work. This course is open to all over high school age.

WHAT DO YOU HAVE?

Have you any old publications connected with our church work that you are willing to donate for permanent filing at headquarters? Last summer some one sent an old "Restitution" dated December, 1871. It gave an account of the plight of various members of the Chicago church just after the fire. This paper attracted much attention in the Exhibit Room of the General Conference.

We would much appreciate other historic papers or books.

Exhibit Committee.

VIRGINIA

The Virginia State Bible School and Conference will be held at Maurertown from August 24 to Sept. 3, 1933. Bro. M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Church of the Golden Rule, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be chief speaker for the conference and will also teach one of the classes in the Bible school. This will be the first time many of our brethren have had a chance to hear Bro. Lyon, and his presence will contribute much to the success of the gathering.

Sr. Verna Thayer has promised to return again this year to teach the little people. Sr. Thayer's work the past two years speaks for itself, and the older ones as well as the children will be glad to welcome her again.

We are anticipating a very good Bible school this year. You will find it to be an excellent vacation, and also a profitable and inexpensive one to meet with us in Maurertown next August. This is your invitation to come.

EN ROUTE

The June Meeting with the Brush Creek church, and our associations with the brethren there proved most enjoyable. Sunday night closed a very interesting day, and Bro. Magaw and family were bidding farewell to all as they left for their Minnesota trip; while we were bidding farewells to start our roundabout journey home.

At present writing we are in Cleveland, enjoying Bro. Lyon and the church folks here. On Tuesday night, June 6, a social gathering of church folks in the church basement gave us a wonderful opportunity of getting acquainted. Mrs. Siple and our three oldest daughters have been enjoying very much their first visit to Ohio.

Before these lines appear in print we expect to be settled back at home, busily engaged with our Grand Rapids church.

F. E. Siple.

FIELD WORKERS

Fonthill

It was indeed a pleasure to live in the midst of the zealous Christian activity for the days of the May Meeting at Fonthill, Ont. Surrounded by his loyal backers the pastor and true leader, Bro. C. E. Randall, had left nothing undone in preparing for the meeting, and all continued with the same earnestness to the end.

The work is progressing both at Fonthill and Niagara Falls.

Sr. Randall's patient fortitude throughout her long protracted attack of arthritis makes her to be admired by all.

There are wonderful opportunities in the Niagara field, and Bro. Randall is using all his powers to utilize them to the honor of God and His Son.

Grand Rapids

Sunday, June 4, was a sight good for one's stimulation. An even 300 (and this was 45 below the record of May 22) were in attendance at Sunday school. This would not be such a marvel were it not for the fact that the church building is supposed to accommodate only 100. Their Sunday school enrollment is almost 500—480 odd.

The church attendance Sunday morning was "a full house." The evening service was well attended, though not so large.

The whole shows something of the untiring labors of their pastor and his wife, Bro. and Sr. F. E. Siple. Nor are they lone workers there. They are surrounded by a large number of diligent, prayerful Christian toilers, all of whom are revealing their common faith by their works.

The Grand Rapids congregation is an outstanding example of the results of kindly, persevering effort. Would that many others would learn a lesson from its brilliant efforts.

And their work is in spite of the severity of the general depression upon them. Numbers of their families have had little or no income for two and even for three years. Were they working and receiving incomes it is quite certain that their building would have been greatly enlarged before this. They need fully three times their present floor space to accommodate properly their present Sunday school. And if started now, such an increased building would be crowded by the time it could be completed.

If any of the brotherhood are able and willing to advance a loan for such enlargement, the church will be glad to accept it, and will begin to repay it as soon as working conditions shall make it possible. Such a loan investment would be far better for any real Christian than has been experienced in many of the investments in inflated properties heretofore.

The writer will be glad to receive any confidential inquiry from anyone who might wish to offer little or much as a loan to this end. Such assistance by anyone would certainly be a service in honor to Christ.

Brush Creek

It is a real pleasure to announce the marriage of Sr. Louise Brewer of Tippecanoe City, Ohio, to Bro. Clarence E. Lapp, pastor of the Church of God at Ripley, Ill., and of the church at Eldorado, Ill. This beautiful church wedding was honored by a full house of friends of the bride and well wishers of both.

A report of this wedding of June 7, will soon be in The Herald office. In the meantime the many distant friends of Bro. and Sr. Lapp may address them at Mt. Sterling, Illinois.

On the evening of June 8, more of the faithful work of Bro. Sydney Magaw, pastor, was manifested when a large audience gathered to listen to a requested talk on prophecy. Everywhere the work of Bro. Magaw was praised both by members and non-members of the Brush Creek field. Much growth in different ways is in plain evidence.

Everywhere there in anxious inquiry as to the great changes that are to follow the coming of our Lord.

May abiding faith fit one and all for every blessing of that great day.

F. L. Austin.

BRUSH CREEK TO EDEN VALLEY

We are pleased to report a successful meeting which closed at Brush Creek, Ohio, June 4. Bro. Siple's work was much enjoyed and it was visibly fruitful. Four were baptized the closing Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Lora Pearson, Mrs. Harold Pearson, all of Tippecanoe City, R. F. D.; and Mr. Junior C. Weaver of West Milton, R. F. D.

On Sunday evening after church the writer and family started on the way to Eden Valley, Minn., where at this writing, the annual Minnesota Conference is in session. An exceptionally large attendance is present. Our hearts are filled with joy to again meet with the Minnesota brethren. Other Ministers present are Bro. Denchfield, president of the conference and for two years pastor at Eden Valley, Bros. Adna Hoskins, T. M. Savage, Richard LeCrone, Harvey Krogh, Ray Abbott, Chas. Blanchett, Vurd Thoms, Arlen Marsh, and Sr. Lucille LeCrone.

Following the conference, which closes Sunday, June 11, the writer will assist Bro. Denchfield in a two week's series of meetings at Eden Valley. Remember this effort in prayer.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Your attention is called to the editorial entitled, "Profitable Vacations," which will help you to decide where to spend your vacation.

Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., pastor of the Plum River (Ill.) church, was accompanied to the Minnesota Conference last Wednesday by Srs. Elizabeth Ordnung, Mary Reynolds, and Geniel Carpenter, together with Bro. Arlen Marsh, all of Oregon. They report a safe arrival and a royal welcome at Pastor Denchfield's home in Eden Valley.

The following is from "Golden Rule News," published by M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Cleveland, Ohio, church: "There are rumors floating 'round that some of our folks are beginning to suffer from that annually recurrent disease known as 'Conference Fever.' Frankly, we can't blame them, for this year is a wonderful opportunity to see the General Conference and the World's Fair all in one trip. Conference this year is August 1 to 13, at Oregon, Ill., just 100 miles beyond Chicago. Better plan your vacation to go." Thank you, Bro. Lyon.

Bro. and Sr. F. E. Siple, of the Grand Rapids church, stopped off at Cleveland on their return from the meeting at Brush Creek, and were given a splendid welcome by Golden Rule Church on June 6. Mrs. Siple is a sister of Bro. M. W. Lyon, pastor of that congregation.

"Church of God Messenger," the local church paper published by Bro. C. E. Randall, pastor at Fonthill, Ont., and Niagara Falls, N. Y., asks his people to remember the state and national conferences in prayer. He says that "if you will (attend the General Conference) you will say that it was the happiest time of your life." The Herald hopes that many from the East will be here for the meeting.

Please read carefully Bro. Conner's report of the sale of the greenhouse, and observe that the transaction was made without the transfer of a single dollar in actual cash. So far as the National Bible Institution is concerned we have been relieved of a heavy financial burden, but still have past greenhouse accounts to pay off. The report will be found below.

Sale of Golden Rule Greenhouse

A plain, simple statement of the facts relative to the sale of Golden Rule Greenhouse may be helpful in giving our people a clearer understanding of the situation with the National Bible Institution. Hence this statement.

I have received letters from some of our people which clearly indicate that they either have but little knowledge of the facts in connection with the business side of the National Bible Institution work, or have given but little consideration to the situation in which all business and industrial enterprises in this country find themselves in these times of depression.

Some have thought, apparently, that it would be well to dispose of the greenhouse property, providing we could sell it for as much as we have put into it; while others have thought, apparently, that the returns from the sale of that property would be sufficient to pay off the indebtedness of the National Bible Institution. Between these extreme thoughts are various others which, when the true situation is understood and considered, it will clearly be seen are not justified.

I am offering no criticism, nor finding any fault with anyone for forming unjustified conclusions. That is a common weakness with all of us. My purpose is to state the facts as nearly as I can and again call attention to conditions that have been confronting us during the last few years, and when you have carefully considered them, you will be better prepared to receive the report of our disposition of the greenhouse property.

When the National Bible Institution purchased the greenhouse property we had no funds and, therefore, went heavily in debt, as was the case with the Golden Rule Home property. Being unfamiliar with the greenhouse business, and some of our people being over-optimistic, we made mistakes in branching out in the mail order seed business, which put the Institution further in debt. However, the greenhouse itself seemed to prosper, the first two or three years showing a reasonably good net profit, the grower in charge assuring us that if we had the facilities for growing twice the amount of stock than we were then able to produce, market could easily be found for our products, thus more than doubling our net profits. This prospect caused us to add another unit to our growing space, increasing our indebtedness several thousands of dollars. (over)

This was no sooner done than the greenhouse became a liability rather than an asset. In 1925 the greenhouse property, together with the little farm that was purchased with the greenhouse, was mortgaged for twelve thousand dollars and mortgage bonds for that amount issued and sold to our people, these bonds to mature in 1935. The greenhouse continued to show deficits instead of profits. Then the depression came on and, like all other property, the greenhouse property lost its market value. The National Bible Institution had invested some twenty thousand dollars in it, but, like many of the farms, homes, and securities in which our people had made investments, it had become a heavy burden, losing the Institution thousands of dollars each year.

To continue to operate the greenhouse under these conditions meant bankruptcy for the National Bible Institution and imperiling of Golden Rule Home property, which I determined must be preserved, whatever else might come, and the investments of the bond holders saved, if possible. Two hundred fifty dollars had been paid on one of the bonds some three years ago, and during the last year another thousand was paid, leaving a balance of ten thousand seven hundred fifty dollars ($10,750) of outstanding bonded indebtedness against the greenhouse property.

I could see no possible way in which the National Bible Institution would be able to redeem those bonds when they matured—we have not been able to pay the interest on them the last year without borrowing money to do so, which I determined not to do if it could possibly be avoided. Such business methods serve only to increase, rather than diminish, indebtedness and should be resorted to only in desperate cases. I may be too conservative in my business views, but in my vision I could see only disaster to the National Bible Institution and a loss of at least fifty per cent to the bond holders, if we continued to hold and operate the greenhouse. Interest on indebtedness and running expenses were eating us up. The opportunity to turn the greenhouse property over to the purchaser, Mr. Raymond Wallace, under the agreement that he pay off the $10,750 outstanding bonded indebtedness in full, came and was accepted. And, to assure the bondholders that they are more secure in their holdings, Mr. Wallace is expending at least $2,000 in improving the greenhouse property before he receives title to the property. This increases the value of the security of the bonds to that extent.

Before the proposition was finally accepted it was presented to the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution and considered carefully from various angles and approved by that board. Consent of every member of the Advisory Board was also obtained, and then the contract was entered into and closed.

The National Bible Institution does not receive one dollar from the sale of the property. It simply relieves itself of a liability that it was unable to carry and discharge, but which the purchaser will be well able to do. It is a good property and a good business for an owner who understands the business and can devote his time and energies to it; but it serves as a millstone hung upon the neck of an institution that at best can give it only secondary attention.

In disposing of the greenhouse property we have reserved the little farm that was purchased with the greenhouse, which will afford us the acreage necessary for pasture and feed for a couple of cows which we hope to be able to secure in some way for Golden Rule Home. But, instead, we transfer with the greenhouse one of the lots we obtained from the city of Oregon, and which contains soil particularly valuable for the growing of flowers, which is better for the greenhouse owner than the farm, which has not that quality of soil. As we have sufficient of that quality of soil left, the little farm is much more valuable for our purpose than that rich lot would be. We have eight other lots of the same quality of black soil, which, with the little farm, affords us all the acreage we need and can use advantageously for raising vegetables, etc., for use in Golden Rule Home.

The National Bible Institution is still heavily in debt and must depend upon contributions from our brotherhood to discharge these obligations. But we have valuable properties and safe securities that are free from incumbrances of any kind, except our moral obligations to pay our debts.

We have some properties we would be glad to sell; but, like all other real estate, there is no demand for such properties at prices that we could afford to consider. Our work must go on; and although we have reduced our overhead and operating expenses to what we call the minimum, yet we have not the means from which to secure the necessary amount to meet these expenses, except to ask for continued contributions.

When an institution, like an individual, becomes deeply involved in debt in prosperous times, it is difficult to pull itself out during a depression such as we are now passing through, and the process must be very slow, at best. I do not hesitate to say, however, that the prospects today look many times better than they did a year or two ago; and a continued, united, and steady pull and careful management of our affairs will bring us to the light of a better day.

The National Bible Institution has made many mistakes, but these have been no greater than many of us have made in our individual and private affairs, and in the same way—unintentionally, but with the purest and best of motives. If we will proceed thoughtfully, but cheerfully, to make the best we can of a bad situation, it will all work out well in the end.

To recapitulate in regard to the sale of the greenhouse property: It has been disposed of at approximately one half the price it cost us (not considering losses sustained in operating it); the National Bible Institution has been relieved of a heavy and destructive liability; and the mortgage bond holders have been assured payment of their investments without heavy losses.

I humbly apologize for taking so much space with this explanation, but desire to give our people the information they desire as fully as I may be able to do, trusting that it may be given careful and sympathetic consideration.

WAITING FOR CHRIST

“Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.”—1 Corinthians 1:7, 8.

WHAT a number of times all through the Scriptures do we find this word, wait. On his dying bed the patriarch Jacob, his mind taken away down to the last days of his descendants on the earth, cried out, surely in ecstatic anticipation, “I have waited for thy salvation, O Lord!”

And what salvation was that for which this man of God, such a long time ago, had waited? Why, it could only have been the same as that for which the people of God now are still patiently waiting. It was that ultimate salvation about which the great God made promise when He spoke of the Seed of the woman yet bruising the head of the serpent. The same thing was in the covenant affirmed to Abraham, “In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed,” and repeated to both Isaac and Jacob.

It was the same also in the Psalms: “I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope. My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning.”—Psalm 130:5, 6.

It was the same ultimate and glorious salvation the prophets were constrained to write about. “And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.”—Isaiah 25:9. It was also of the coming time of glory the message came to Habakkuk, “For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.”

The aged Simeon was also waiting for the Consolation of Israel; so when he saw the holy Child, he cried out, “Mine eyes have seen thy salvation.” And those who now wait the return of their Lord are plainly told that they, also, are going to see Him, precisely as He is. It is for Him every true believer is called upon to wait. “Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord.” And Paul tells how the earnest expectation of the creature is waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God. “Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.”

Again our thoughts are lifted up to the heavens and the blessed Son of God is there seen waiting the time when His enemies are to be made His footstool. The early Christians were converted to serve the only true and living God and to wait for His Son from heaven, while the earnest prayer of the Apostle Paul was this: “The Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ.”—2 Thessalonians 3:5.

So that thus we see how heaven and earth, and indeed the whole universe, have been set on waiting for the glorious deliverance that surely is coming. The time of waiting has been long. I often meet with dear saints of God who mention how they began the waiting for the return of Christ many a long year since, and still they go on to wait. And what else is there to be done? If we could imagine ourselves as being without that blessed hope, is there anything at all that can take its place? We know there is nothing. The hope of the return of Christ is all we have. There is nothing else in all the universe of thought or being that can take its place. But, thank God, there is no need for us to lose it.

The time of waiting seems long. Any time of waiting is the same. From the time we begin to wait there is always a tendency to impatience. It is the waiting that does it. The longer we have to wait, the more marked is the sense of longing, the more desirable is that for which we wait, the greater is the yearning for its achievement.

It is a real hunger we have. The longing for the return of Christ is deep and persistent. So arises a measure of impatience. It is a danger, especially for the waiting ones who are getting on in years. The Father graciously recognizes the tendency, and more particularly as the time of the mighty event is seen to be drawing near. “Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.”—James 5:7, 8.—The Advent Herald.

Each Day I Pray

Each day I pray, God give me strength anew
 To do the task that I do not wish to do,
 To yield obedience, not asking why,
 To love and own the truth and scorn the lie,
 To look a cold world bravely in the face,
 To cheer for those that pass me in the race,
 To bear my burdens gaily, unafraid,
 To lend a hand to those that need my aid,
 To measure what I am by what I give.
 God give me strength that I may rightly live.

Does Your Home Speak for God?

THE story is told of a man who built a very fine home and furnished it superbly, and then invited his father to come and make him a visit. On the arrival of the old gentleman the owner of the house proudly took him throughout the building from cellar to garret and directed his attention to its beauty and convenience. When the inspection was over, the son was not a little disappointed at his father's failure to comment on all that he had seen. When they were comfortably seated in the restful parlor, the younger man ventured to ask the elder one why he had not expressed his approval of so splendid a residence.

After a moment's meditation the father said, "Well, my son, you certainly have here a beautiful and comfortable home, and I trust you will enjoy it fully. But as I went through it with you, this thought kept recurring to me: Did I not know my son, and that this house belonged to him, I really could not tell if it were the abode of a child of God or of a child of the devil."

The younger man saw the force of the criticism at once; and before his father's visit was brought to a close, he had hung on the walls of his new home pictures and mottoes that at a glance would assure the most casual caller that here was a home that was also a temple of God. The library table was now provided with the well-worn and much-read Bible of the owner, and the papers and books that lay within easy reach suggested the religious taste of the family that lived in this place.

There is a lesson in this little story that goes deeper than the outward appearance of things. It suggests the need in the Christian home of something more than symbols of religion. A family residence reflects the character of the family itself. That it is that transforms four walls and a roof into a home.

When one enters a strange dwelling for the first time, it is generally not difficult for him to determine the kind of people who occupy it. Their tastes and tendencies will be clearly revealed in the material things scattered about. If the family is especially inclined to music, the piano, violin, harp, or other instruments will be in evidence, and a well-stocked music cabinet will be found to occupy a convenient corner. If the family taste runs to literature, the class of books and magazines on the library table will tell the story of their culture; and the presence of a large dictionary, encyclopedia, or other reference work will assure the visitor that these people endeavor to get full value out of their reading.

Aside from these outward and visible indications of inward and invisible characteristics possessed by the family, every home provides an atmosphere that tells more eloquently than any material objects can the real heart-life of the family that lives within those walls.

Quiet voices, endearing expressions, quick responses, a thoughtful regard for each other's feelings, and an obvious but unstudied evidence of mutual interests existing within the home are the strongest proofs that Christian love governs in the home. A well-considered question pertaining to some spiritual problem, asked and answered, apparently as a customary procedure at the dinner table, reveals more of real Christian character in the family than all the beautiful pictures and poetic or scriptural mottoes that can be hung on the walls!

The songs the children sing at evening time, the kind of stories they ask Mother to tell, the freedom with which the little ones are taken into the heart of the family life, these are the testimonies that speak most eloquently of the presence of Jesus Christ in the home. These are the things that make a home Christian.

Last of all, let us ask this question: Will the children reared under the influences surrounding them in your home, and in my home, grow into manhood and womanhood with such a deep and abiding appreciation of the richness and beauty of Christian living that they will be anxious to become faithful followers of the Lord themselves?

"A Morning Without Clouds"

YOU probably know the verse in which this form of words occurs, it reads: "And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain."—2 Samuel 23:4.

We also read in Deuteronomy 32:2: "My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass." And further, in Psalm 72:6: "He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth."

It is impossible to conceive of a more beautiful picture than that presented in this language, a picture which nature paints as representing the "good times" which God has in store for this troubled world.

Before turning to the scriptures on which we base our hope of these good times, let us exercise our imagination for a few minutes. We shall consider what a delightful place the earth would be to live in if conditions were vastly different from the present, for although the population increased many times, the earth would still produce an abundance for all. Not only so, but effectual provision could be made for the distribution of food supplies, so that all would receive an abundance; no one wanting for anything; no one going hungry; no hoarding of food; no monopolies; few, if any, millionaires; no poor; no oppressor, and none oppressed; no armies or navies to maintain; no munition factories; in fact, no war. Just think of the blessings resulting from the abolition of war, the heartaches spared to mothers, wives, and children. Think also of the immense tax burden of which the people would be relieved. We have read somewhere that seventy-five per cent of all taxes go to the upkeep of war.

Then, also, sickness would be greatly reduced and life lengthened. We read of men living before the flood over nine hundred years. Crime, the curse of every nation, would be almost stamped out. The lucrative business of doctors, undertakers, and lawyers would be gone.

There would be no tariffs or other international questions to cause strife, for good-will would be world-wide.

There will be one universal language spoken and only one religion; no theological colleges or seminaries teaching different conflicting religions, for there will be but one, and that one the true religion, for we read that the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of the Lord."

Furthermore, we are told that the rulers will be all-wise, all-powerful, immortal. No problem will be too intricate or complex, for all would be instantly solved; transgressors of the law dealt with swiftly, and with unerring judgment, like the cases of Ananias and Sapphira before the Apostle Peter.

This is not all; there would be many other like conditions. Would it not indeed be a "morning without clouds"? Would it not be a pleasure to live under such delightful conditions? Would not even the satisfaction of living as a mortal subject even under such conditions abundantly compensate for the sacrifice of all we possess in this troubled world?

We are pleased to say that these things are not visionary nor a fiction of imagination, but based on the sure word of promise. There is not a condition pictured above that is not clearly revealed in the Scriptures as belonging to that Day or Dispensation which is about to dawn as a "morning without clouds" on this troubled world.

If we will open our Bibles, we will find that these conditions have their root in a certain covenant which God made to David. Let us turn to 2 Samuel 7, where we read in the fifth verse, "Go and tell my servant David." Twelfth verse: "Thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee. . . and I will establish his kingdom." Thirteenth verse: "I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever." Sixteenth verse: "Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever."

Let us remark here that David well understood the meaning of this language, that he understood what the promise involved, for when old and about to go the way of all the earth, he took comfort in the contemplation of the promise and based his hope of salvation on the same. It is recorded in the Scriptures, 2 Samuel 23:1, "These be the last words of David." Verse 3: "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." Verse 4: "He shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain." Verse 5: "This is all my salvation, and all my desire." Note the words, "Thou shalt sleep with thy fathers," and, "Thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee."

This certainly means resurrection and immortality for David; and he so understood, for we read in Psalm 17:15 he said, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." No doubt he understood this was to be bodily immortality, as later revealed through the apostles and as taught elsewhere in the Old Testament.

We read in 1 John 3:2, "We shall be like him," and further, Paul in his letter to the Philippians, chapter 3,

Truth Lives On

Progress rolls her car along
Slowly righting human wrong;
Might the right may crucify,
Nothing can her power defy;
Though Herod live and Jesus die,
The Truth lives on.

Burning fagots blazing high,
Gibbets tow'ring to the sky,
Inquisitions rack and pain,
Slavery clanking loud its chain,
Falsehood triumphs still in vain;
The Truth lives on.
—Selected.

verse 21, says we shall "be fashioned like unto his (Christ's) glorious body."

So we pass on and see what is involved in the covenant. Who the son is, is not left in doubt. In Acts 2:29, 30, we read these words: "Let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne."

It is not necessary to refer to any other scriptures for proof; it is very interesting to notice what a great subject this opens up. For instance, the promise made at the birth of Christ, recorded in Luke 1:32, "The Lord God shall give unto him (Christ) the throne of his father David" and further "of his kingdom there shall be no end." Did we not read before that the throne should be established forever? Is not this also in perfect accord with the words of the prophet as found in Jeremiah 23:5, "I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper." And in Isaiah 32:1 we read that "a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." The boundaries of this kingdom are also given in no uncertain terms, for the prophet Zechariah in his ninth chapter states that the "dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth." That the time for these prophecies to be fulfilled is near at hand is indicated in other parts of the Scriptures, notably the eleventh chapter of the Revelation, where at verse 15 we read that "the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever."

Other scriptures which speak of Christ's reign as a day which will be ushered in as "a morning without clouds" are: Acts 17:31, "Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance to all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." A reference, without doubt, to Christ and His work and kingdom. Revelation 22:16, "I (Jesus) am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star." Malachi 4:2, "The Sun of righteousness (shall) arise with healing in his wings."

And, therefore, we affirm from these Scriptures that Christ must return to this earth. The Apostle Peter associates the return of Christ with "times of refreshing (which) shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you."—Acts 3:19. And also he links it up with restitution, "Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3:21.

As to "the times of refreshing," let us consult the Scriptures further. We find the earth is to bring forth abundantly, for it is stated, "There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon."—Psalm 72:16. The harvest will be so great that it will extend into the time for preparing the ground for the next grain planting, and so the "ploughman shall overtake (or catch up with) the reaper," the Prophet Amos continuing the beautiful picture with the statement that the "treader of grapes (shall overtake) him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt."—Amos 9:13. A complete transformation will take place in the dry and arid spots, for says the prophet, "The desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly."—Isaiah 35:1.

The poor and needy will be cared for, not allowed to go about the streets in their present deplorable state, for according to Psalm 72 the poor will receive judgment, the oppressor will be broken in pieces, the children of the needy will be saved, the poor also, and "him who hath no helper."

Then again, think of the present question of disarmament, upon which the nations are unable to come to agreement. At that time it will be fully effective, because war will be abolished completely and entirely. Swords will be beaten into ploughshares, spears into pruninghooks, neither will they learn war any more (Micah 4:3, 4).

Sickness will be greatly diminished, for we read in Isaiah 33:24, "The inhabitant shall not say, I am sick." We have already remarked that it will be a hard time for doctors, undertakers, and hospitals, but a good time for everyone else.

The claim is made by science that owing to better laws of hygiene and more attention to the foods we eat life is being lengthened; but no claim of science, however fanciful or well-attested, can approach the longevity of life promised in Isaiah 65, where at the twentieth verse we read that the "child shall die an hundred years old," and further "as the days of a tree are the days of my people." Consider the age of the giant sequoias and the well-known Mariposa Grove of big trees, and we see what a vast difference there is between the efforts of science and the promised work of God. What man, however his well-wishes toward his fellow man, would dare to make the statement, with the certainty of fulfillment, that "they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid." No man would dare to make such a statement, especially in these crime-ridden times, but God has promised it shall be so in the near future (Micah 4:4).

The rulers in the world to come of the "morning without clouds" will be immortal, able to dispense righteous judgment. It is a promise given in Daniel (7:18) that at a certain time the "saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever." Therefore, they must have immortality to be able to possess it forever.

Lawlessness will not be tolerated, because the "king shall reign in righteousness, and princes rule in judgment." These rulers will not judge after the sight of their eyes or the hearing of their ears; but on the basis of being able to read the heart and the thoughts of the mind they will render an infallible righteous judgment.

Much more is comprehended in this "morning without clouds"; but sufficient has been advanced, we believe, to satisfy the earnest seeker after something better than this life can give. We have spoken of the covenant God made with David, but not with David alone, for Paul in Acts 13: 34 states that God has said, "I will give you the sure mercies of David," a condition of things made absolutely certain by the resurrection of Christ, for it is further stated that "all the promises of God are Yea and Amen in him (Christ)."

Apart from Christ, the Scriptures tell us that we are "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers to the covenants of promise, without God, and without hope in the world," a truly deplorable and hopeless condition. But the escape from such a forlorn condition has been provided: "In him (Christ) ye are fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

The scriptural way of placing ourselves in this desirable relationship is simple. We read in Mark 16:15, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," a simple condition that can be fulfilled by all who desire relationship to the glorious promises of God. And the Apostle Paul, in his letter to the Galatians, chapter 3, verse 27, says, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. . . . And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

In conclusion let us call attention to the exhortation contained in the words given through the mouth of the Prophet Isaiah, chapter 55, verses 1 to 3: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. . . . Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."—A. C. Johnston in Bible Truth.

The Approaching Crisis

---

A CRISIS is an hour upon which great issues hang. The doctor watches the patient with tense gaze, for upon the next few moments the sick one's destiny depends.

The statesmen of two nations, whose relations are strained, are held in suspense, knowing full well that upon the nature of the current communications peace or war will result.

And so both the church and the world are inevitably to be influenced by the crisis so rapidly approaching, and that crisis is the coming of Christ.

The child of God is not authorized to expect the fulfillment of any prophecy, or to anticipate any particular phenomena in the sky or upon the earth before that event takes place. In some respects our situation is unlike that of the waiting ones just prior to our Lord's first advent, for calculated prophecy and immediate divine revelations colored their anticipations.

Daniel had most conclusively announced the very year of that event. Micah had foretold the actual place of the nativity, and Isaiah and other prophets likewise had told of the house from which, according to the flesh, our Lord should come. Haggai, too, had prognosticated the temple would witness Messiah's presence, and Jacob that the scepter would still be in the hand of Judah.

So prophecy inspired their immediate hopes, and as for divine revelations, four people at least had been the recipients of them—Zechariah, Elizabeth, Joseph, and Mary. And the shepherds had both witnessed wondrous glory and heard still more wondrous words, and had not the wise men seen His star in the East? Hence, having both prophecy and phenomena attending upon them, the remnant were instructed by Scripture and sight to expect the Savior.

We know of no Scripture that points its finger to any particular hour. Nor do we expect to hear of any waiting saint receiving a heaven-sent message as to the coming of the Master, and certainly we do not survey the sky for any astral wonder or the earth for any unprecedented happening to announce definitely the "Lord is at the door."

Yet, nevertheless, Scripture does anticipate that certain conditions of things will be in existence just antecedent to the advent, as for instance:

The departure from the faith, to cite one scripture only (1 Timothy 4). Now anyone that will compare this scripture with what obtains in the religious world today cannot but be struck with the accuracy of the description. Is there any part of the faith that has not been attacked and, in the estimation of the attackers, demolished? Who subscribes to the verbal inspiration of Scripture in these days? And have not the virgin birth, the infallibility of Christ, His atoning sacrifice, and His bodily ascension been offered upon the altar of a compromising and an accommodating church? Yea, all those blessed truths connected with Christ which are the bases upon which the believer rests have been the objects of the enemy's unceasing hate. Well may He Himself ask, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" His supposed representatives have so subtly evaporated faith by undermining the faith that we may well ask, "Will He find it?"

Another signal announcing the way is clear for the Lord's arrival is the revival of Rome. How solemn to contemplate that the empire that dominated the world when Christ was born, and whose representatives so shamefully treated Him and set Him at naught, and whose glory they laid in the dust, shall under divine providence receive a resurrection and eclipse the glory of its former days, yet all with the purpose in view that its deeds may be forever judged and its name everlastingly obliterated.

Whatsoever a nation sows that shall it also reap. The environs of Jerusalem that were saturated with the blood of Christ shall be saturated with the blood of the last Caesar, and Babylon the Great, that vast system of worldly religion and idolatry that has enveloped many a saint with flame and smoke, shall have that same punishment meted out to her (Revelation 18).

The awakening consciousness of Israel is surely an intimation that He is not far off. For long, long years the Jew has been a homeless wanderer, knocking at the door of many a country, seeking sanctuary in many a city, yet, alas! hearing those doors slammed in his face, and left to fare as best he may. Oh! the frightful tale of long-drawn-out woe he could tell. Spat upon, blasphemed, denounced, crucified, having tortures beyond imagination heaped upon him, made the subject of every mode of punishment known among men—and now, generally speaking, not in any great favor among the chief nations of the world. Yet, thank God, at last more than dreaming of a resting place in the land of his fathers.

Shame that voices should be raised protesting against this, for does not the land belong to him by divine right? And is not this sufficient? Those that militate against the divine purpose shall yet see that that purposes can never be frustrated when the inevitable hour arrives. They that know their Bible know that the divine name, word, and throne are involved in Israel's permanent reinstatement in Palestine. The anticipations and the arrivals of the Jews in the promised land are a harbinger to the church of God that the time of her exodus is drawing nigh.

A blissful intimation that the coming of the Lord is imminent is the universal expectation of that event. Was there ever a time in the history of the church when there was such a widespread desire to see His face? We think not. The Lord will come when the bride, in unison with the Spirit, cries, "Come!" What, my brethren, if every child of God were fired with a passion to see His face, if the spouse of Christ put on her beautiful garments and arrayed herself appropriately for His advent? If the people of God unanimously rent the air with the cry, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus!" Then what possibly could prevent the unveiling? May it not be that He is waiting just for this affectionate invitation?

When He makes ready a people by influencing their desires, He brings those desires to fruition; and can we not see His own hand setting in motion the yearnings of their hearts! The church scans the barometer and knows a storm is brewing for this guilty world. She feels the pulse of the age and knows that conditions everywhere are unsound and instinctively looks up and knows her redemption draweth nigh. She never will be shaken by the awful world storm. The guilty world's dying pang will never be hers. She stands almost ready to be introduced by her Lord into the saints' everlasting rest and to enter upon a state of eternal strength.

May it be ours in view of the crisis to announce its coming and also answer its demands!—A. Tetstall, in The Advent Witness.

AFFAIRS IN PALESTINE

---

It is reported that "certain Palestinian Jews have proposed that Great Britain be asked to relinquish her mandate in Palestine in favor of direct administration by the League of Nations. Revisionist leaders are said to favor this plan, which is less hostile to the Arabs than Great Britain. The basis of the Jewish recommendation of the termination of the British mandate lies in restriction on emigration, limitation of land purchase by Jews, and failure to support the Jewish National Home." This despite the Colonial Secretary's assurance that Great Britain would stand by both the letter and the spirit of the Balfour declaration.

It is to be seriously doubted, however, that Great Britain will lose her mandate in Palestine until she turns her authority over to Israel's rightful and long-promised King. Such prophecy seems to indicate.

BRIDGING THE EUPHRATES

OF COURSE it might begin there, but the Euphrates!—which of the Moscow rulers feels any concern in that? Yet it is there that the great conflict called Armageddon will have its origin. This being so, all prophetic students will read with startled interest the following cutting taken from the Morning Post of March 6, 1931:

"The Swedish-Danish group which secured, in 1927, the concession for the construction of two great bridges over the River Euphrates, near Malatia, have nearly completed the work. One of these bridges will carry across the river the new railway line from Malatia to Diarbekir, and consists of four main arches of 175 foot span in reinforced concrete, with a total length, including approaches, of about 1000 feet.

"This line is really of a strategical nature and should be very useful for the movement of troops in the event of renewed trouble with the Kurds in this district.

"One of the directors, on whom I called at the offices of the group in Stamboul, was good enough to give me full details regarding the progress of the work. He told me that the Turkish Government was anxious to have this bridge completed at the earliest possible moment, and it is fully expected that it will be opened for traffic in the course of next year. The estimated cost is 100,000 pounds sterling.

"The other bridge, which is being constructed about 15 miles further down the river, which at this point is narrower and deeper, is intended for ordinary wheeled and pedestrian traffic. It consists of one single arch in reinforced concrete of 350 foot span."—Advent Herald.

“Why Do the Heathen Rage?”

INDIA! That alluring land of song and story; the land of the Mogul and Nabob, of marvelous riches and extreme poverty; the land of caste and superstition, where lordly Brahmins crawl prostrate in veneration under the stone image of a hog and mothers throw their babies into the filthy waters of the Ganges to be devoured by crocodiles; where one religion forbids that a man should step upon an anthill lest he destroy an insect, and another orders the burning of widows on the funeral pyres of their husbands! India! the land of splendid marble palaces for the dead and of habitations for the living more squalid than the imagination can paint! India! with its lofty mountain ranges forever crowned with snow and with its festering lowlands and pestilential torrid heat!

India, with its wealth of gold and silver and precious gems, its broad reaches of fertile lands, its blossoming orchards and fruitful vineyards, its 1,805,000 square miles of territory two-thirds as large as the United States, with its 320,000,000 of human beings!

India, the granary of the world, the jewel box of the world! And India, the cesspool and the stench of the world! India, with its background of the world's oldest culture and its foreground of ignorance, illiteracy, and superstition! India, the wonderful, the rich, the glorious; and India, the squalid, the foul, the beggarly, and the pagan. Such is India—India the ancient, India the renowned—of which I write at this time.

To visit India is to look upon the cradle of civilization, for out of this strange land of contrasts has flowed the broad river of Aryan culture, the culture of the white man. We find that here was developed a religious philosophy which now numbers within its communicants about half of the population of the world, and that this philosophy was developed by the white race. As we follow the migrations of our forefathers through the historic passes that form the gateways of India into new and distant lands, we find that they carried with them the basic truth that was to form the foundation of Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity, as well as that of Buddhism, which centered in India itself; for the doctrine of the unity of God is common to them all.

I do not mention this fact to reinforce the bulwarks of racial pride, for such is not necessary, but as a matter of interest and of prophetic significance. It was apparently the purpose of Jehovah that this important truth concerning Himself should be revealed to the world through the Caucasian race. This may help to account for the facts that the Son of God was born of a white mother; that all of the apostles and prophets were white men; that the nation of Israel, chosen of God to be the channel of blessing to all races and the head of the nations in the future, is all of that race.

This is the fourth of a series of prophetic articles by the editor which started in our issue of May 23, in which he is presenting in order some of the remarkable events that are now transpiring in the light of the Scriptures. The present contribution treats of India and its relation to the coming of the Antichrist. . . . .

Before leaving the religious phase of our study of India, we will observe again that in the religions of India—in fact, in the religions of all the white peoples—there remains a lingering shadow of eternal truth concerning God. It is as though these widely scattered tribes had once known and revered Jehovah as the “only true God” but had later wandered far from Him. Such, indeed, is the way in which the Scriptures account for idolatry (Romans 1:18-25). But we cannot take the time here to trace the development and the decline of the true faith further, for we must reserve our space for a brief consideration of the Psalmist's question, “Why do the heathen rage?”

The stirring old “Missionary Hymn” tells how

“From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand,

. . . . .
In vain with lavish kindness,
The gifts of God are strown;
The heathen in his blindness,
Bows down to wood and stone.”

India has long been symbolical of all heathen lands, and her people of all heathen races. Hence, we find in this strange country of contrasts, where truth and error continue side by side, a type suitable to our needs in the picturing of the heathen in general.

The tremendous struggle that is impending between the forces of good and evil will divide the inhabitants of the world into three major groups. The first of these groups, of which I trust you and I may be a part, will be composed of those mentioned in 1 Thessalonians 4:17: “We which are alive and remain (till the coming of Christ), shall be caught up together with them (the resurrected faithful ones) in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.” This favored company will have nothing to do with the fate of the unfortunate groups that remain on the earth to pass through the time of trouble, so we shall set them aside for a time.

The remaining companies apparently comprise two orders of humanity and of nations. One group will consist of some who once confessed their faith in Christ—perhaps even so-called “Christian nations” will be numbered among them—but who have failed to remain steadfast and true to the allegiance they claimed. This is possibly the class of which Jesus speaks and to whom He will address the fateful words, “I never knew you” (Matthew 7:20-23).

Jesus may also have had these two classes of nations in mind when He predicted the judgment that is to take place when He comes, at which time He will separate the nations "as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats" (Matthew 25:31-36.) In this passage two classes are suggested, both of which are nations or races rather than individuals. The first of these groups may comprise those who have called themselves Christian, as has been suggested. The second may be made up of such races as have made no profession of Christianity; they worship "strange gods" or deny all gods of whatever nature. This entire company we may rightly term "heathen."

This observation brings us back to our question, "Why do the heathen rage?"

In our past studies we have considered the relation Japan, China, and Russia may bear to the judgment of nations to which God is even now calling the peoples of the earth. We have learned that in a distant way these races are "blood relatives" and that they will be united in the struggle of the tribulation period.

Each of these three races has at some time in its history entertained dreams of world dominion. The Mongolians under Jenghis Kahn almost succeeded in carrying such an ambitious plan into effect. Russia under Peter the Great and again under the present Soviet rule has entertained thoughts of world conquest. Events now occurring in the Far East seem to imply that Japan may be thinking along the same line. In support of this suggestion comes the recent utterance of Sadao Araki, war minister of the Sunrise Kingdom, who, according to Time, said, "The spirit of the Japanese nation is, by its nature, a thing that must be propagated over the seven seas and extended over the five continents. Anything that may hinder it must be abolished, even by force." The same spirit of conquest, based on a conviction of racial superiority, animated Jenghis Kahn and his Mongols seven centuries ago; so we are introducing nothing new in making this suggestion.

We shall now return to India once more, bearing in mind that the nations which are to engage in the struggle of Armageddon in "the valley of decision" and of judgment, are allies, related to each other by ties of blood, language, tradition, and cultural background. Russia with its Tartar elements, Japan, and China, are so related. But what of India and its people?

In our effort to answer this question we encounter a serious difficulty at the start owing to the fact that India, like the United States, has been the cross-roads of races for many generations; but, unlike this country, it has never been a "melting pot." The divergent races which from time to time have migrated into India have not amalgamated to any appreciable extent. They have not intermarried, but on the other hand have built up a caste system the walls of which it is almost impossible to scale. The consequence is that India possesses a large number of disassociated and antagonistic races.

Yet in spite of these insurmountable barriers of caste, the philologist is able to trace the origin of all the various races of India to a place of common origin in central Asia. It is possible to go even further than this. The early homes of some of the tribes of the country can be located by words which are still in use in both the old and the new localities. For example, there is the word Mogul. This word, which is closely associated with the government of India in the minds of mankind, comes directly from the word Mongolian, giving name to a central Asian tribe which settled in India as a conquering race ages ago and whose chiefs became the rulers of a province or district. From this we know that at least a part of the inhabitants of India are allied by blood and language to the people of China, Russia, and Japan; yes, and Turkey as well.

Religion is another tie that unites the people of India with those of these other Oriental nations. The great majority of her population is either Mohammedan or Buddhist in faith. Of Japan's sixty millions about fifty-two million are Buddhists. China has a vast number of Buddhists and from five to ten million Mohammedans. Altogether there are in Asia something like nine hundred sixty million followers of non-Christian religions, that is, heathen. All of these are more or less associated together in the countries where they flourish.

Millions of these religious people are of the most ignorant and fanatical sort and are perfectly willing to give up their lives for what they believe. When the Antichrist comes with his deceitful professions of piety and lying miracles, it will not be difficult for him to weld this enormous force of human beings into a most powerful army for the destruction of western civilization. It will be no more difficult for him to do this than it was for Mohammed to do it with a very similar people six hundred years after Christ, for these pagans of today as quite as ignorant, superstitious, and easily swayed by emotion as were the masses of Asia at the time of the Moslem conquests.

India is ripe for revolution. Early in January of the present year fifteen thousand Mohammedans were found under arms in northern India and were only brought to submission by sending against them a large force of British troops. The entire country is in a constant state of ferment. We have not forgotten the horrors that resulted from the Indian mutiny of less than a century ago, when all India combined against the whites who made their homes there. The nations of the East, so long sleeping, are beginning to awake to a realization of their numerical strength and the possibilities of it. They are arming for the conflict of race against race, of people against people, and are equipping themselves with the latest armaments to battle under the red banner of the Antichrist, so soon to be revealed.

This is the answer to the question of our text, "Why do the heathen rage?" The Lord is coming, and the ungodly are preparing for the final and most sanguinary warfare of all time. Shall we escape by being accepted by the Lord when He calls His own to meet Him in the air?

The Resurrection of Jesus Christ

THE RESURRECTION of our Lord Jesus Christ was a fact. It was an event, a thing that happened. It was so regarded by writers of the sacred Scriptures. It was so regarded by others in that day who saw the evidence and so regarded by those who knew the conditions under which the event was advertised before the world.

"Like all the original facts of history and science and philosophy, this fact is supported by the integrity of eye-witnesses who were in position to know whereof they spoke and wrote. Their testimony, resulted from multiplied observations and experiences, is much the same in kind, and is fully as trustworthy in quality, as the announcements that are heralded from learned laboratories, where men are engaged with test tubes and microscopes in modern scientific observation and investigation."

With these words Dr. John W. Good, in his book The Jesus of Our Fathers, begins his admirable discussion of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. These words concisely and adequately state the facts in the case.

If we cannot accept the testimony concerning the resurrection of our Lord, we cannot accept the testimony concerning any historical event. The witnesses who testified that Jesus arose from the dead have every qualification of credible witnesses.

In the first place, they were eyewitnesses of the events they described. "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; (for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;) that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you."—1 John 1:1-3.

They saw Jesus on a number of occasions that are mentioned, and it is possible that they saw Him on other occasions that are not mentioned. John tells us that there were many other things done by Jesus that are not recorded in his treatise. He suggests that if all had been recorded "even the world itself could not contain the books" (John 21:25). He affirms that the signs recorded were such as to form a basis for our faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, and that by this faith we may have life in His name (John 20:30, 31).

They walked with Him (John 21:20), talked with Him (John 21:12-23), handled Him with their hands (1 John 1:1), ate with Him (Luke 24:43). Experiences of this character did not occur on a single occasion, but covered a period of forty days. There was abundant opportunity to consider every phase of the question and weigh every objection. The evidence was complete. They knew that Jesus was alive again.

The appearances of Jesus were made, not only to individuals, but to groups of disciples. The appearances were not hurried, but He tarried with them and explained the Scriptures.

He appeared not only to the eleven, but to above five hundred brethren at once (1 Corinthians 15:6). The testimony of one or two disciples might have been questioned. But at the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established (Deuteronomy 19:15). In this case above five hundred brethren could testify that they had seen the risen Lord. Surely here is a sufficient number of witnesses and an abundance of testimony!

The ability of the witnesses to weigh the evidence cannot be questioned. They were slow to believe. Thomas refused to be convinced by the testimony of his brethren and demanded a personal, intimate examination of the body of Jesus. Said he: "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe."—John 20:25. A few days later Jesus appeared to Thomas with the other disciples and gave him the opportunity to make the investigation he demanded. Thomas was convinced, crying out, "My Lord and my God!"—John 20:27, 28.

The apostles were not credulous dupes, as modernists would have us believe, but men of the highest intelligence. Their presentation of the resurrection of Christ was clear and so convincing that three thousand Jewish unbelievers accepted Christ as their Savior and risen Lord at the conclusion of the first sermon on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:41). The number of the men soon grew to be about five thousand (Acts 4:4), and even a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith (Acts 6:7). Churches sprang up throughout all Judea and Samaria and the countries far and near. These marvelous preachers of a risen Christ profoundly impressed the whole world. They were not simple-minded men obsessed with the hallucination that they had seen a ghost, which they interpreted to be the risen Christ. They were convinced by indisputable evidence.

They had been trained by the master Teacher of the ages. They were filled with the Holy Spirit. Their eloquent proclamation of the gospel brought penitent sinners to the feet of Christ, and struck terror into the hearts of wicked rulers until a hardened Roman governor trembled and could bear to hear no more (Acts 24:24, 25). From their gifted pens came the wonderful literature of the New Testament, bringing to mankind the highest ideals in religion and in life that have ever engaged the attention of men. There is no rational explanation of the marvelous achievements of these apostles of Jesus Christ other than that they were what they professed to be—ambassadors of the risen Christ.

Their integrity is attested by their unspeakable sufferings and sacrifices to preach the gospel. They received no earthly reward, but gave up everything the world could offer in the way of pleasure and profit.

To summarize: The witnesses were sufficient in number, they were eyewitnesses of the events of which they told, they were intelligent, they were honest, they made careful and thorough investigation. The witnesses of the resurrection of Jesus were entirely competent. Their testimony was adequate, and upon the evidence they gave God proved to the world that Jesus Christ was His only begotten Son. The supreme proof was that He raised Him from the dead (Acts 2:32, 36).

The resurrection of Jesus gives significance to all that He said and did. What does it matter if He died on the cross for the sins of the world unless He is the Conqueror of death? We do not worship a dead Redeemer, but a living and triumphant Christ. The fact that Jesus arose from the dead is our only hope of resurrection. "Because I live, ye shall live also" (John 14:19), was the promise He made to His disciples.

How foolish it is for us to try to lay any other foundation for belief in the resurrection and the life everlasting! Some hope to attain unto the resurrection by the perfection of their own lives. Others seek to find consolation by certain analogies they discover in nature, which they call intimations of immortality. In the spring all nature revives from the desolation of winter. But vegetation was dormant only, not dead! With poetic fancy men argue that the rose of next summer will be redder because the petals of the present bloom will have enriched the earth that nourishes the parent plant. But the rose that withers now never lives again! Next year's rose is another rose. There is nothing in nature that teaches personal immortality. Every living thing on this earth perishes. This is the land of the dying, and the only lesson that nature teaches is that death is an endless sleep!

The only hope of resurrection is in Jesus Christ. "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."—John 11:25, 26.

Death came as a consequence of sin, and passed on to all in that all sinned (Romans 5:12). "The wages of sin is death." Jesus died to pay the penalty of sin. He conquered death! Having destroyed the power of our mortal enemy and having life to give, He gives it to those who believe upon Him. "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Romans 6:23.

The significance of the resurrection of Jesus, as stated by the Apostle Paul in his sublime and invincible argument in 1 Corinthians 15:12-19, is as follows: "Now if Christ is preached that he hath been raised from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there is no resurrection of the dead, neither hath Christ been raised: and if Christ hath not been raised, then is our preaching vain, your faith also is vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we witnessed of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead are not raised. For if the dead are not raised, neither hath Christ been raised: and if Christ hath not been raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. . . Then they also that are fallen asleep in Christ have perished. If we have only hoped in Christ in this life, we are of all men most pitiable."—American Revised Version.

DOWN to 1888 only thirty days' residence was allowed to any Jew visiting Palestine. This made the resettlement of the land prior to that time impossible. In 1888 this restriction was removed, and two years later the terrible May laws came into full operation in Russia, driving out Jews by hundreds of thousands from their great international ghetto in Eastern Europe. In 1897 the first Zionist Congress was held in Basel, marking the inception of the Zionist Movement. In 1917 the Balfour Declaration assured to the Jews a national home in Palestine.

Dr. W. Dawson, of Montreal, calls attention in The Hebrew Christian Quarterly to the following significant sequence of dates relating to "the times of the Gentiles" and to "Jerusalem's downtreading":

In 623 B. C. the Babylonian Empire was founded, the first of the four great empires in Daniel's prophecy. Ezekiel, in his first chapter, dates his prophecy (which opens in 593) as "the thirtieth year" (that is, of the Babylonian Empire). From 623 B. C., 1,260 years run to the winter of A. D. 637-638, when the Saracens captured Jerusalem. Again, from A. D. 637-638, 1,260 more years bring us to 1897, the date of the First Zionist Congress. The entire period is 2,520 years, the full "seven times."

So the capture of Jerusalem by the Mohammedans took place in the central year of the whole period—a noteworthy fact in the history of the Holy City, for up to that year it had been under the domination of all the empires of Daniel's vision. From that time on the "downtreading" came from a different power, the Mohammedan succession of Saracen and Turk. Thus the dividing of the story of Jerusalem is made in equal stretches of time.

It is noteworthy that the Mohammedans, who have held Palestine so long, reckon by lunar years. The era from which they count, the Hegira, begins in A. D. 622. From that date the period of 1,335 (lunar, not solar) years ends in 1917, the year in which Jerusalem was taken and in which Mohammedan domination over Jerusalem ceased. Now 1,335 years is Daniel's "blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days" (Dan. 12:12).

The year 1335 of the Hegira is the last ever counted from that era by the Turks. In that year (in 1917 by our reckoning) the Turks adopted the Gregorian calendar.—Sunday School Times.

PARADISE

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

EVEN the earliest records of civilized man show that he entertained the hope of life after death. The question of Job—"If a man die, shall he live again?"—is perhaps one of the oldest questions of reasoning mankind. And there are other similar questions—"If he shall live again, where and how?"

Religions as far back as they are traced show that man believed almost universally in a beautiful home somewhere for the worthy dead. Because no perfect place was found on the earth, this paradise was supposed to exist elsewhere; but in it were the pleasant things of earthly life with none of the unpleasant. All the loveliness of nature was there, the trees and hills and animals and springtime. There was always enough to eat without hard work. To its beauteous places a good man took all his loved possessions to help make him happy. The paradise imagined by primitive man, then, was essentially a perfected earth.

With the advance of civilization, more intricate and detailed religions were developed, but the reward of the faithful was still an idealized earth somewhere far away. Then Christianity came, with its new law of love. Its consummation is to be the kingdom of God, the earth restored to its original perfection. Many followers of Christ do not realize that God can and will make the whole earth a paradise for His people. They believe that the righteous will be taken up to dwell with God. Let us see what the Bible says on this subject.

The first paradise was on the earth. God Himself pronounced the new, sinless earth good. Genesis 2:8, 9: "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food." This garden was perfect, it was on the earth, and it was man's first home. Even before man sinned, God did not place him in heaven, but on the earth. God ordained that the earth should belong to man. He commanded: "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth."—Genesis 1:28. "The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men."—Psalm 115:16.

Peter's hope of paradise was the earth. He speaks of the destruction of the heavens and earth and all therein, as in the days of the flood. Then he says: "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—2 Peter 3:13.

Isaiah speaks often of the beauties of the earth when it shall be restored to sinlessness. "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as a rose. . . . The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious. . . . Violence shall no more be heard in thy land. . . . thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise. . . . thy people also shall be all righteous. . . . a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment. . . . They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

How many times we have seen a tree-covered hill that would have been so beautiful if it were not for garish signs, advertising motor oil and shaving soap, and ugly, run-down buildings. How often we have thought what a pleasant world this would be if we could keep our friends always with us, if danger and death were not so near even when we are happiest. God will banish this curse of sin and make a glorious new paradise of this earth for His people. Revelation 21:1-3: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

That is the paradise of God.

Berean Day is August 7. It pays to be there!

ISRAEL'S NEW LEADER

How many of you have watched a little plot of ground with no one to tend it during the long summer days? Early in the spring when the first warm rain falls gently upon it, the soft breezes blow over it, and the bright sunshine calls it from the chilly arms of winter, tiny green shoots appear. At first we fondly hope that these are flowers and will later blossom forth in beauty, shedding forth their lovely perfume to the passerby. But in a few short weeks we recognize that they are only unsightly weeds.

Vacation time! The very words spell rest, recreation, happiness. Long days in which to play for some of us! Even though our minds may not be engaged with lessons, every waking minute they are employed. Ever think of that? Our brains are busy factories, turning thoughts into action and action into character, just as surely as Henry Ford turns out automobiles. Seems queer, doesn't it?

Every boy and girl, every man and woman needs change and relaxation. Play fills a great necessity in our lives. And let's put something worth while into our play each day, so that in the busy workroom of our minds kindly deeds may follow and noble character result. Only in that way can you, my boy, become the great doctor you hope some day to be, or you, my girl, the skillful nurse.

As soon as each one of you who belong to our Bible Scrapbook Club finishes your scrapbook, be sure to send it to me. If you are coming to conference at Oregon, you may bring it with you, providing you don't drive off and leave it. Then when you are about ten miles from home, you'll exclaim, "Daddy, I left my scrapbook on the library table!" So keep your wits about you and don't forget to pack it to bring with you, or else mail it to me when it is done.

For the next three months our Sunday school lessons go back to the Old Testament, and we shall have some of the most interesting lessons about people who did things, people who were leaders, not followers. Talk about movie stars! Why, more exciting things happened to Joshua, Gideon, Saul, and David than to any one of them!

Now let's make some little booklets, one for each of these leaders. Take three or four sheets of paper, bind them together with paper clips or colored cord, or have

Mother stitch them on the sewing machine. If you can, get some colored paper for the cover that will make your book more attractive. Print the name of the one it's about on the cover in fancy letters. The first one is Joshua.

By this time I'm sure all of you have some very good ideas and could tell me many things to add to your booklets that I don't think of. I want each of you that puts some special work into your book to write and tell me about it, so I can tell all our other page readers about it, giving your name and address.

All right, here we go! If you have a Bible dictionary or encyclopedia look up Joshua, after you read about him in your Bible. In Numbers 13:16 we learn that his name at first was Oshea, and Moses changed it to Jehoshua, later shortened to Joshua. The first job Moses gave him you find in that same chapter, and the next chapter tells how well he did it. His reward for doing his work well and telling the truth was a big one. Read Numbers 14:30, 37, 38.

Write this story in your own words in your book. Then tell how Joshua got his people over the rough and frightening Jordan River without a bridge and without anyone's getting his feet wet except the priests. Don't forget who Joshua's Helper was. You will find this story in Joshua 3 and 4.

The next story is even more exciting. Big stone walls fell down without anyone's touching them! Joshua 6 tells you all about it. Write that story next and make it sound real! Get all the help you need, but do as much of the work yourself as you can. Draw two pictures to illustrate this story, before and after they took the city.

Now you may add as many more stories about Joshua as you like. There is a good one on almost every page of his book. It looks as though Joshua never had a dull moment. God even commanded the sun and the moon to stand still for him. He surely was his Helper, wasn't He? How old was Joshua when he died? Can you find the verse telling that?

I hope that all the boys and girls of the Bible Scrapbook Club and many more will start this new work the first of July. Each one of you write me a post card and tell me about it, will you? Don't think it's going to be too hot, because you know it's not nearly so hot when you're busy. And you'll get so much enjoyment out of this, you won't be asking Mother all the time, "What can we do?" You'll have so much fun with paper and paste and scissors and your Bible that the days will fly by as if on wings.

JOSHUA

Joshua, chapters 1-6, 23, 24

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Be strong and of a good courage; . . . for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.—Joshua 1:9.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Source of Joshua's Strength.

Aim: To teach the pupil that God gives strength to those who serve Him.

Basic Truth: "They went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them."—Mark 16:20.

I. Joshua Called Into Service. (Chap. 1: 1-4.) A good business executive selects a successor for the present occupant of every important position long before such position is made vacant by promotion or death. Long before his death Moses was instructed to consecrate Joshua as his successor in office. When the time came for Moses to die, Israel was not left without a competent man properly qualified to lead the people immediately forward.

II. Joshua Equipped for Service. (Vv. 5-9.) God did not provide Joshua with vast stores of gold or direct him to secure a broad worldly education to fit him to carry forward the great task He was about to place upon him. He simply strengthened his faith! He assured Joshua that He would continue to be with him wherever duty called him to go. Instead of worldly education, God gave him divine wisdom. Instead of wealth in gold, He gave him riches of faith. Instead of material equipment, He gave him spiritual insight. And, having laid such a foundation for Joshua's success, God assured him that continued faithfulness and obedience would lead to boundless prosperity and blessing.

III. Joshua Rewarded for Service. (Chap. 23:1-14.) Our lesson of necessity omits the details of the long and difficult struggle through which Joshua led the children of Israel in their conquest of Canaan. It simply assures us of its eventual success. Joshua's life may be written down as a most fruitful one, for he had spent it in the service of God and man. Israel, peacefully and prosperously located in the promised land, formed the obvious evidence of the success of his long and faithful service. But his greater reward was found within himself, in his own spiritual development and increased faith in God. He was now content to lie down in peace and sleep, for he knew from his own experience that Jehovah would ever prove true to His people.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Joshua the Leader: Joshua succeeded Moses as leader of Israel. He was selected by God to lead Israel into the promised land because of his faith and whole-hearted belief in God's promise and the certainty of its fulfillment. On the other hand Moses failed to reach the promised land because of unbelief. In the two great leaders we have a wonderful contrast between unbelief (Num. 20:12) and unquestioning belief. Emphasize the loss sustained due to unbelief and the reward resulting from whole-hearted belief. Discuss the same contrasts with believing and unbelieving individuals today. John 3:36.

A Straight Course: "Turn not from it to the right hand or to the left." The success of Joshua as a leader hinged on his implicit obedience to God's Word. If he faithfully adhered to God, wisdom would be imparted to him and he would be able to deal wisely and prosper whithersoever he went. This straight road of belief, action, and life was to be supported by "strength" and "good courage." He was not to be "afraid" or "dismayed," for God would be with him. Will such a policy of walking straight with and toward the Lord with courage bring similar blessings today? —C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Be strong and of a good courage; . . . for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."—Joshua 1:9.

Joshua had a great task to perform; so he needed all the strength, both physical and mental, as well as all the courage that he possessed, to carry on the work of the new leader of Israel. Joshua needed; God gave. Joshua was a man of great faith; so when God spoke, Joshua was ready to obey.

The promise that God would be with him gave Joshua the assurance that he could go forward in the work assigned him. And this he truly did, trusting God for guidance and for strength and courage. Can we not have as much faith and courage as did Joshua? And do we not have the same promise? for it is written in the Hebrew letter, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."—Heb. 13:5. —L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Source of Joshua's Strength

We are always anxious to discover the secret of greatness of every illustrious man because of our desire to emulate him. We must always remember that true greatness is attained only by drawing near to God. Paul once wrote: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."—Phil. 4:13.

As Paul drew his strength from Christ, so did Joshua draw his from God. Joshua's whole life was one of service and devotion. First we see him leading a party of Israelites against the Amalekites. He went with Moses to Mt. Sinai and waited for him to return; thus he was one of the few who never worshiped the golden calf. When Moses established a camp for the worship of God, Joshua was with him and was left in charge of the worshipers when Moses was absent.

Joshua was one of the twelve spies selected to make a report concerning Canaan. He was one of the two who said Israel was able to conquer the inhabitants and possess the land. As was usually the case the multitude refused to heed the counsel of God's leaders; and while Joshua urged, the rest decided to turn back. As a reward for his faith God spared his life and permitted him to enter the land of promise. This privilege was shared by but one other.

Since Joshua was always found working for God, it is not surprising that God should select him to succeed Moses as the commander of the twelve tribes. His willingness to follow God made him a very capable and efficient leader. His successful conquest of Canaan is well known. Before his death he had Israel promise to continue to obey and serve God.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: A Strong Leader of Israel.

To the teacher: Before you begin the study of the lesson today, make sure that your pupils are acquainted with some of the interesting stories about the children of Israel. The story of Joseph is a good beginning. This explains how the Israelites came to be in Egypt.

Another story to be given should be "Baby Moses." The next, "God Calls Moses to Lead the Israelites Out of Egypt," should be followed by "Crossing the Red Sea" and so on down to the death of Moses. Why Moses did not get to lead the people into the promised land should be given.

"The Twelve Spies" should be told last, emphasizing the part Caleb and Joshua had in this story. Ask the children if they can see from this story why God chose Joshua to lead the people after Moses had died. Now, you are ready to let the children take up the work from here.

God chose Joshua to lead the people on into the promised land. Joshua was not afraid. He said they could take the land away from the giants that were living in it. Oh, yes, he was very brave! But do you know why? God had told him something. God had said to Joshua, "Do not be afraid, I will always go with you to help you." That's why Joshua led the people across the Jordan River into Canaan, the promised land.—V. C. T.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT CLEVELAND

Going up! Higher and higher goes the Sunday School attendance record, and now we have a new one to shoot at, for a new high of 229 was registered on Children's Day, June 11. This is about 50 above our average attendance. The adult class had 41, a record for it, too. The encouraging thing about all this is that as the high records go up the average attendance figure goes up too. It has increased from 150 to 180 since June a year ago.

After the regular class sessions, the program was presented at the preaching hour to a full house of about 240 people. The exercises were especially good, reflecting the hard and conscientious work of the committee, Sr. Ethel Swartz, Sr. Mary Elton, and Sr. Helen McMurtrie.

A special children's sermon was given at the evening service.

M. W. Lyon, Pastor.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Our trip came to a very pleasant conclusion Friday night, June 9. Upon leaving Cleveland we piled Bro. Lyon into the car and motored around Lake Erie, stopping at Niagara Falls and the Fonthill, Ontario, district. Although time for making calls was exceedingly brief, we were most royally entertained at the Weldon-Holland home in Thorold and at the Randall home in Fonthill.

The home church activity had held up well during our absence, and the congregation had enjoyed Bro. Arlen Marsh and Bro. Austin. A most encouraging feature of our first Sunday back home was at the close of the evening service when a splendid man and wife came forward to present themselves for Christian service.

The regular monthly men's meeting was held on June 10, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

Bro. Murdock Craig fell asleep on June 12 and was buried the 15th. An obituary will follow later.

Don't forget our Bible school and conference, July 10 to 23.

F. E. Siple, Pastor

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

A great feast was enjoyed by all at our annual state conference held at Eden Valley. Everybody went home with encouragement to carry the gospel news of the coming kingdom of God.

Sunday afternoon, June 7, I baptized in Sauk River Lyle Miller, age 11, 430-19 1-2 Ave. N. Just a year ago his mother was planted with Jesus in baptism. It was a beautiful occasion when her son followed in obedience to God. May this young life in his new walk find it the most pleasant of adventures and may he be instrumental in leading others to Jesus. Let us pray for him.

Shall we "watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation."

A. E. Hoskins.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The program for the Quarterly Conference, which will be held at the Carpenter's Union Hall, 1144 Olive St., Long Beach, California, was the chief topic of discussion at the Ministerial Association meeting at the MacLeod home in Pomona on the first Sunday in June. Friday's program will include two sessions of Bible school morning and afternoon, and a sermon by Bro. Lichty. Saturday morning there will be a Bible school session followed by a sermon by Bro. Adamson: "The River of Life"; and in the afternoon there will be a baptismal service at Recreation Park followed by a general social period. On Sunday July 2, the items in the program will be as follows: 10:00 a. m. Young People's meeting, in charge of Sr. Kauffman of Riverside; 11:00 a. m. sermon by Bro. MacLeod: "The Coming Conflict"; 1:30 p. m. short talks by various brethren; and at 2:15 sermon by Sr. Railsback on fundamentals. We are looking forward to these conference meetings because they bring us in touch with many people who are not ordinarily within our circle of visits.

Many of the Los Angeles brethren have been on their vacations early this summer. Bro. and Sr. Saylor, and Bro. and Sr. McCallister were in the northern parts of California for their vacations. Sr. Railsback and Sr. Jessie Scroggs are spending four weeks in Northern California and Oregon; Sr. Scroggs is visiting her husband and his folks in their home in Oregon, and Sr. Railsback is visiting with her daughter Sr. Moore at Red Bluff, California. Sr. Railsback expects to see many of the isolated brethren in various parts of Northern California.

A VIRGINIA CENTENNIAL

One hundred years ago this summer the people of Powell's Fort Valley started digging clay which they molded into bricks and burned. With these and the fine pine lumber obtained from the nearby forest, they built a union "Meetin' House." One after another the denominations that had used the building constructed churches of their own, until today the Church of God is the only one still worshipping in the old brick structure. We think it is only fitting and proper that we commemorate the founding and building of this historic church with an appropriate service. This will be undertaken in the near future. Watch for our announcement concerning it.

MINNESOTA CONFERENCE REPORT

The June annual conference of Minnesota convened at Eden Valley, June 8, holding over Sunday, June 11. All services were well attended, the church being filled to capacity at nearly all meetings. We had much good preaching; and we rejoiced to have the words of the Lord concerning His soon coming expounded to us so clearly.

It was a pleasant surprise to have Bros. Arlen Marsh and Harvey Krogh and Srs. Ordnung, Carpenter, and Reynolds from Oregon, Ill., attend our conference. Our conference was blessed by having with us Bro. Sydney Magaw and family from Ohio, and Bro. Claud Mills and family of South Dakota. We hope they all come again.

Sunday afternoon four of our ministers were ordained: Adna Hoskins, John Denchfield, T. M. Savage, Sr., and Virgil Thoms. Bro. Sydney Magaw was the presiding minister, with Bro. Le Crone and Blanchett assisting.

Bro. Magaw is holding a series of meetings at Eden Valley and will visit the other churches while he is in Minnesota.

Mrs. T. M. Savage, Sr., Conf. Sec.

COMMUNICATION

Writing from her home in Cheyenne, Wyo., Sr. G. B. Sprinkle says in part:

"My two small children and myself have just returned from a lovely trip to Arkansas, where we visited at the home of my parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Humphreys. The trip did us all good, both physically and mentally.

"My parents still gather around the fireside and read the Bible and have prayer, as they did when I was a child. I am thankful to have been reared in a Christian home.

"The last few days we were there Bro. L. H. Shelton preached in the schoolhouse at Bear. I certainly enjoyed his sermons, as he preaches the Bible in a way that all can understand. I hope and pray that he may be able to be there often, as I believe that much good may be done in Bear.

"Not having a church of our own within reach out here in Wyoming we generally attend the United Brethren Sunday school in the morning and that of the Baptist church in the afternoon. We hear many good things, and feel that if we cannot hear those of our own faith we should go and hear others.

"We certainly enjoy reading The Herald. I believe there is not a better paper in the world. May our dear Lord bless and strengthen each one of you who is promoting the good work, is our prayer."

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Sprinkle.

BREWER-LAPP

An interesting June wedding took place at 7:30 p. m. in the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church of God, when Sr. Louise Brewer, daughter of Sr. Edna Brewer of Tippecanoe City, Ohio, became the bride of Bro. C. E. Lapp of Mt. Sterling, Ill., pastor at Ripley and Eldorado, Ill., at an impressive marriage service at which Evangelist F. L. Austin, of Chicago, Ill., officiated.

Relatives and friends completely filled the church, which was effective in its simplicity of decoration composed of baskets of June roses screening the altar, making a perfect background for the gleaming tapers arranged in a candelabrum.

Preceding the services a trio from West Milton, Ohio, consisting of Mrs. W. R. Hatfield, violinist, with Mrs. M. J. Carrol at the piano, played a program of wedding music, while Mrs. L. S. Dexter sang, "The Sweetest Story Ever Told." At the opening strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin the bridal party entered the church.

The ushers, Bryon Brewer, brother of the bride, and Howard Brewer, her cousin, led the processional. Edgar Demmitt, her brother-in-law, as best man, followed. The bridesmaids were Miss Mildred Brewer and Miss Mary Wise. Mrs. Edgar Demmitt, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Little Max Eugene Lehman carried a Bible with a very unique floral piece containing the rings. Wanda O'Connor with her basket of flowers, scattering rose petals, preceded the bride on the arm of her mother.

Mrs. L. S. Dexter sang "I Love You Truly" preceding the double ring ceremony. Bro. F. L. Austin gave a most significant address based on the sacredness of marriage as given by Paul in Ephesians 5.

The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white satin crepe; a veil of sheerest tulle was arranged to a closely fitted turban. She carried a bride's bouquet of white roses.

Following the ceremony the bride and groom withdrew to the home, where about 80 were served refreshments.

The bride has spent her whole life in this vicinity and is a young woman of unusual talent and character. Her loyalty, faithful service, and smiling face will be sorely missed by the church people and in fact all who came in contact with her. She was foremost in the activities of the church as pianist, director of the choir, and teacher in the Sunday school.

Bro. and Sr. Lapp left Saturday for Mt. Sterling, Ill., to be present at the meetings now being conducted by Bro. S. J. Lindsay.

We beseech the heavenly Father to bestow His richest blessings on this new home.
Dessa Benn.

VIOLA WIGGINS

Viola Martin was born to G. W. and Liza Martin, May 11, 1870, near Eldorado, Ill., and died in the early morning of June 3, 1933. Her childhood was spent in the vicinity of the Murray settlement. On Dec. 23, 1896, she was united in marriage to Jesse C. Wiggins. To this union were born six children, all of whom are living. They are: Jessie Turner, Bessie Woolard, and Walter, Luther, Marshall, and Emil Wiggins.

Several years after her marriage she manifested her faith in Christ and was baptized into His all-saving name by Eld. H. C. Gregg. All of her life has been spent in devotion to her Lord and her family. She spent much of her time searching the Scriptures and had great delight and hope in the promises which they gave. Every opportunity to spread the gospel was eagerly grasped, and she indeed was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ. In her home the spirit of self-sacrifice and whole-hearted cheerfulness was manifested both to her family and all visitors.

In death she leaves her husband and six children; one brother, R. S. Martin; and a sister, Aldora Martin, all of Eldorado.

The grim reaper has taken one more of our number, but we lay her away in hope of the soon coming of Christ who will banish all sorrow, pain, and death, and bring to us life for all eternity.

C. E. Lapp.

MARY ELLITHORPE KIMBALL

Mary Ellithorpe was the oldest of the five children of Sophia and David Ellithorpe. She was born in Detroit, Mich., March 3, 1850, and passed her girlhood at Paducah, Ky. When the Civil War robbed them of their home in the South, they returned to Michigan. In 1868 she married LaVirgnc John Kimball, and they lived happily together for over fifty years. He died June 14, 1924.

Although they were childless they made a home for three little girls who grew to womanhood realizing they had a priceless memory of as happy a home as few are blessed with having known. The oldest girl, Mammie W. Robinson, died about twenty years ago. The other two, Ola Hillis and Laura Hillis Bleasdale, were the orphan daughters of her youngest sister, Laura Ellithorpe Hillis.

Mr. and Mrs. Kimball moved from Grand Rapids, Mich., to Southern California in 1877, living first in Long Beach, then in Pasadena.

Hers was a life of service to her community.

She organized the Ladies of the G. A. R. in Pasadena and was their first president. She was also an officer in the Long Beach Ebell and Shakespeare Club. Soon after they were married, both she and her husband were baptized in the Church of God. Many of the older brethren will remember the labors of Bro. Kimball as a minister of the gospel in California.

The last two years of her life were passed very quietly with her niece, Ola Hillis, who gave her all the loving, devoted service of a daughter. Her life was devoted to her Lord and Savior over a long period, and her gentle manners were a delight to all who knew her.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Splendid reports reach us of the recent Minnesota conference held at Eden Valley. The spiritual uplift and inspiration of such gatherings carry on through the years.

Do not neglect to attend some of the conferences this summer. Read over the announcements on page 14 and make your plans for vacation with this thought in mind.

Bro. Paul C. Johnson, our associate editor, and his wife and daughter, are spending a few days with relatives in Iowa. We understand that Bro. Johnson has been requested to deliver a sermon or two during his stay in the Hawkeye State.

Sr. Rachel M. Whitcomb of Frankfort, Ind., sends in a contribution to the "Helping Fund," to send the paper to some who are unable to pay for it themselves. She says, "I would like to send hundreds to help the paper for I know it helps the cause everywhere. . . I always look for letters from California, which I visited when Bro. Marsh was preaching there."

Prepare yourselves for classwork at the Illinois Bible School by buying Berean books. For children, young people, and adults no better outlines of the scriptural basis for the beliefs of the Church of God can be obtained. Address the NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY, Oregon, Illinois, for further information.

The Restitution Herald joins with their many other friends in wishing for Bro. and Sr. C. E. Lapp long, happy, and useful life together in the Lord's service. Personally acquainted with them both as we are, we know them to be deeply devoted to the Master, and pray that in their united efforts in His cause they may find much of joy and of success.

"I always look for Bro. Alldridge's articles first of all when The Restitution Herald comes," said a sister recently in commenting on the paper. Our readers all have their favorite authors, and we are always glad to receive comments regarding their preferences.

Requests are already coming in to have the forthcoming series of prophetic studies to be given at the Illinois Bible School prepared in such form that outlines can be furnished to those unable to attend. This shows a growing interest in this important branch of Bible study.

We were pleased to observe on the front page of "The Bible Advocate," in its last issue, an article by Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., which appeared recently in our columns. Bro. Krogh is one of our youngest and most promising preachers, and we are glad that his literary work is appreciated by others.

A letter from Bro. D. G. Harvey, whose excellent articles appear in this paper from time to time, informs us that Sr. Harvey has not been well this spring and summer, and may not be able to carry on the service she has rendered so ably in the past as matron of the Indiana Bible School. No one could perform that task more faithfully and more satisfactorily than Sr. Harvey, and if she cannot be there her absence will be deeply felt we are sure.

An issue of the St. Cloud, Minn., bulletin issued by Pastor A. E. Hoskins was made a memorial to those of the congregation who have fallen asleep in the Lord. The bulletin bears the following inscription: "In memory of those who died in former years, we are stirred to greater service for God, because of their faithful labors." Then follows a list of those who await the Master's call to life.

THE SCRIPTURAL BASIS FOR THE TITHE

AN ARGUMENT that establishes the antiquity of this principle is taken from the story of Cain and Abel. Both made an offering. Cain's offering was rejected. That something was radically wrong is evident. Jehovah said to Cain, "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." What was the sin of Cain? The Septuagint, the most ancient Greek version of the Old Testament, says, "If thou hast offered aright, and hast not divided aright, hast thou not sinned?" It would seem from this that the sin of Cain was that he had not divided aright, that he had kept back a part of God's portion.

Another light is thrown on this ancient passage by the writer of the Hebrews. "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." The Greek word translated "more excellent" is pleiona, and means, richer, larger, or more complete. Therefore, it would seem that the sin of Cain was covetousness, "robbing God."

In the fourteenth chapter of Genesis is the account of Abraham paying tithes to Melchizedek, priest of God Most High. This was four centuries before the Mosaic law was given. Abraham not only recognized God as "possessor of heaven and earth," but that the tithe was His in a special sense. Who taught Abraham to tithe? Why this proportion? Must we not believe that somewhere prior to this, in laying the everlasting foundations of His kingdom, God placed His hand on the tithe forever claiming it as His own?

In the twenty-eighth chapter of the first book of the Bible is the story of Abraham's grandson Jacob and his tithe vow. Read the chapter. Think of the extreme spiritual exaltation of that moment. Think of the ladder, the angels, the vision of God and His promise. No wonder Jacob said, "This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." When we get as near to God as Jacob was, there will be no question about our tithing. But was this not a strange vow? How did he come to hit on the tenth? Surely in some way he knew it to be the will of God. He had an example in his grandfather and doubtless also in his father. Now as he leaves home to establish a home of his own, he makes up his mind to follow the example of him who was called "the friend of God." What a splendid example for every young man!

This principle is not only as old as Eden, but universal with the race. Clay tablets found in the ruins of ancient cities show that the nations of the earth to the east as far as Babylon and to the south as far as Egypt were tithing in the days of Abraham. Dr. Adam Clarke says, "Almost all nations of the earth have agreed to give one-tenth to religious use." The learned Grotius says, "From the most ancient ages one-tenth was the portion due to God." Montacutius says, "Instances are mentioned in history of nations that did not offer sacrifices,—but none that did not pay tithes." Must there not have been some divine origin for the practice?—Present Truth Messenger.

BAD MEMORIES

By H. L. Hastings

THERE are many people who have such bad memories that they cannot remember the Scriptures. They can remember other things. They can remember the price of beef and the price of butter, the style of a hat and the shade of a ribbon, the news of the day and the gossip of the neighborhood; and if a man insults or abuses them, they can remember what he said and how he said it and how he looked when he said it, and could tell it over in court and swear to it; but they cannot remember God's Word—they have bad memories. If I had a barn that had room for thorns and thistles, brakes and briars, chaff and weeds, and had no room for wheat and rye or oats or beans or barley, I should call it a bad barn and should want to pull it down and build a better one. And if I had a memory which retained stories and trash and jokes and scandals, but would not retain the Word of God, I should wish to do something to improve it.

Do you know the secret of this failure to remember God's Word? "The sower soweth the word. And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown; but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts."—Mark 4: 14, 15. When you plant your gardens, you shut up your hens, lest they scratch up the seed as fast as you cover it; and if you wish to remember God's Word, you must not let the devil make a thoroughfare of the place where it is sown.

The apostle says, "We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip," or "run out as leaking vessels."—Hebrews 2:1, margin. You remember the old vinegar barrel in the cellar. You thought there were several gallons in it; but you went and shook it one day, and there was nothing there. It was empty. No one had smashed in the head or pulled out the bung; but it had all leaked out, and the empty barrel would hold nothing. How many church members there are who are ranged in rows like such leaky barrels. Everything they ever had in them was gone. They look sound and perfect, but how hollow they are; everything has leaked out.

What can we do with such leaky old casks? Well, we used to watch for a time when it was cloudy and lowery, and when a long rain began to fall, we would take one of them out under the evespout and let the water run into it about four days and soak the old thing out, and then it would hold water and be as tight as a drum. Now if you have a memory that will not hold God's Word, you had better shove it under the spout and let the Word of God run into it steadily for a while. Drop other reading, let the papers and novels and magazines wait, and let the Word of God have free course in your heart, till you learn to love it. You can learn to love anything. I have seen men who have learned to love tobacco; and a man who can learn to love that can learn to love anything!

"What Think Ye of Christ?"

By George B. Alldridge

"Now while the Pharisees were together, Jesus put this question to them: 'What is your opinion concerning the Christ? Whose son is he?' 'David's,' they answered."—Matthew 22:41, 42, Centenary Trans.

THE people in Jesus' day, even the Pharisees, were too well posted in the Scriptures to hold the views of Trinitarianism. They were well informed regarding the solemn oath God had made with David that "when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom."—2 Samuel 7:12. Upon the day of Pentecost Peter under the power of the Holy Spirit referred to this very promise.

Did David understand, also? To me it is very clear that he did, for I read in 1 Chronicles 16:13-19, "O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones. He is the Lord our God; his judgments are in all the earth. Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations; even of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac; and hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant, saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance; when ye were but few, even a few, and strangers in it."

We sometimes speak harshly of the Pharisees, but let us be kind enough to recognize that they knew what God's covenant to Abraham and their fathers in the flesh consisted of and in whom they would be verified. So Paul, a Pharisee of the Pharisees, pointed out in Galatians 3:16 that "to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."

Sometimes we think that Paul had all this revealed to him after his conversion. I do not think so. Why do you think God in His infinite wisdom so ordered it that this His chosen vessel to the Gentiles should spend his rest days for acquiring knowledge at the feet of Gamaliel (Acts 22:3)?

The history of Christ's life is but briefly told in the four Gospels. A few references are made in the Acts of the Apostles. Yet with only this brief biography before us, reading between the lines we get a good understanding of His message and just how it appealed to the people of His day.

Why was He rejected? Jesus in allegorical language tells us. In Luke 19 He recites the parable of the pound; and, strange to say, very shortly He will be riding upon the back of an unbroken colt into Jerusalem and proclaimed to be King. But He knew the hearts of men; so we read in verse fourteen, "But his fellow citizens hated him, and sent a deputation after him to say, 'We do not wish this man to become our king.'"—Cent. Trans.

His earthly ministry is about to close. For three years He has been active among the Jews, proclaiming Himself to be their king. No earthly king before or after submitted such well-authenticated credentials proving his genealogical descent as He. When challenged to prove His kingship by signs, His miracles were of a type that only one who claimed to be the Son of God could perform.

Before He permits them to acclaim Him as their King, He asks them the question which every man some day must answer, "What think ye of Christ?" Now to make the crucial test complete He adds, "Whose son is he?"

He did not say, "Whose Son am I?" They had already done that, as thousands are doing today: "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him."—Mark 6:3.

The Pharisees answered very discreetly by replying, "David's," just the answer Jesus wanted.

"So he saith unto them; How then doth David in spirit (this is by inspiration) call him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footstool? If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?"

A Prayer of Trust

Teach me, Jehovah, the way of Thy statutes,
That I may keep it unto the end.
Give me understanding, that I may keep Thy law,
And observe it with my whole heart.
Make me to go in the path of Thy commandments;
For therein do I delight.
Incline my heart unto Thy testimonies,
And not to covetousness.
Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity;
In virtue of Thy ways quicken Thou me.
Behold, I long after Thy precepts;
In virtue of Thy righteousness quicken Thou me.

—Psalm 119:33-40, Delitzsch Translation.

Mocking the Holy Spirit

AMONG the many deceptions that try the faith and threaten the salvation of God's people in these closing days of the present dispensation none is more insidious in its appeal, and consequently more dangerous, than that which disguises itself under the cloak of “Holy Spirit.” It is to be doubted if there is a false religious system in the world that bears the name “Christian” that does not claim for itself the leadership of the “Holy Ghost.” It is perhaps fortunate that the latter term is more generally used than the former, as we know that there is, and never has been, such a thing as a holy “ghost.” While the word ghost occurs some one hundred nine times in the King James Version, it is found but seventeen times in the American Revised, and never in connection with the Holy Spirit. The word ghost is not found in the Emphatic Diaglott. The meaning of the mediaeval English gost is entirely foreign and antagonistic to the idea of God's spirit of power as it is presented in the Bible, and it should be avoided as misleading and untrue when used for the mighty energy of the eternal God.

But the danger does not consist in a mere misapplication of words. It is a much more serious matter than that. When one says, “I was led by the Holy Ghost” (or Holy Spirit) “to do this or that, to say this or that, or to go here or there,” he is claiming that God has actually given him a miraculous command to do these things. When one uses those expressions so glibly, does he stop to consider whether or not he is sure that his “leading” is really from God? If he is not absolutely certain that such is the case, his expression becomes but a hollow mockery, and borders on that which is profane. “Believe not every spirit,” admonishes that disciple whom Jesus loved, “but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.”—1 John 4:1.

It is a most serious matter to claim to speak for God by inspiration (which is exactly what one does when he claims to act under the immediate and personal guidance of the Holy Spirit) if such is not the case. It is not only hypocritical mockery, but it brings reproach on the name of Jehovah and of His Son for one to assert that he acts by divine leadership when in reality he is moved by his own thought in the matter and is falsely ascribing to God the mistakes that follow.

An even greater danger that comes from the thoughtless use of such expressions as we have quoted is found in the fact that these are the days of self-deception (2 Timothy 3:13), and men are especially apt to be misled by their own emotions and desires. To all such the words of Jesus definitely apply: “Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the (real) power of God.”—Matthew 22:29. A growing number of sincerely religious people, claiming direct leadership of the Holy Spirit through miraculous baptism or otherwise, are coming to assert, to quote from a recent letter, “We need no Bible study in our home, for I am led of the Holy Ghost.” If his claim be true, the man is right in saying that it is no longer necessary for him to study the Bible, “for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.”—Matthew 10:19, 20. But if one is deceived by his own heart (Jeremiah 17:9) and is thus led to set up his own judgment in the place of God's Word, he is in a sad and dangerous condition indeed!

Let us make no mistake! Men are led by the Spirit of God. Of this there can be no doubt; otherwise, there would be no true followers of Christ. But one need not question the source of his leadership if he keeps before him the words of his Lord: “The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.”—John 6:63. He who is truly “led by the Spirit” is governed in both faith and action by the words of the Lord recorded in the Bible. Any leadership that is found to lead away from the Bible is not of God.

Man's Indian Summer

By Arlen Marsh

SYRIA conquered Israel, but Hazael, king of Syria, died. Like Augustus of Rome and Catherine of Russia, the conqueror left in his stead a comparative weakling, incapable of successfully administering the realm which had fallen to him. Ben-hadad III, successor to Hazael, watched the disintegration of the empire of his fathers and could do naught to halt the process. Syria, in common with every mighty power, had reached its zenith and had begun the disastrous plunge to its national nadir, the opposite extreme.

Contrariwise, the government this decadent kingdom had succeeded in subjecting underwent a temporary reviviscence in strength and hurled back the Syrian armies from its borders. Straightway, under the ruling scepters of the third and fourth kings of Israel's house of Jehu, the ten tribes leaped into prominence as a nation of power. Their former masters in Syria were subdued; Judah was made tributary; and their capital, Samaria, gave the laws to a large portion of Solomon's empire. This period from 840-780 B. C. marked the highest pinnacle attained by the kingdom of the ten tribes; and, owing to its "brilliant but brief prosperity," it justly has earned the title, "The Indian Summer of Israel."

Nearly every country recorded by history has had its brief revival from decadence to prosperity. Egypt experienced it under the Ptolemies, Rome under Constantine and Diocletian, Judah under Hezekiah, Babylon under Nebuchadnezzar. In no case was there more than a short relief from steady retrogression; but the relief was there, nevertheless.

Correspondingly, the entire human race is to experience an "Indian Summer" before its political and economic collapse. Perfect candor would require the confession that civilization is at best stagnant and more than likely in a condition of retroversion toward actual barbarism. Depressions and wars kill hope and culture, and it requires a true optimist to see a future that is not black as the night from pole to pole. (These statements take into account the outlook from a purely human point of view only and disregard the teaching of Christianity altogether.)

That the only hope for the salvation of men lies in the return of the Christ is undeniably correct; nevertheless, indications both biblical and secular point to a return of prosperity, a prosperity, however, that will be more dangerous than any depression the earth has yet endured, a prosperity that will lead men to the heights of which they have dreamed and that will then destroy them by hurling them to depths from which they cannot rise. Internal decay and the amassing of wealth have abolished six great empires—Egypt, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Macedon, Rome, and China—and they can yet abolish others.

Predictive prophecy—so limited because all the Bible is prophecy—appears to indicate a marked upward trend in the business graph immediately preceding the return of the Messiah. In reference to Gog (presumably an alliance of the Russian powers), Persia, Ethiopia, Libya, Gomer, and Togarmah (the latter also probably of Asiatic origin), Ezekiel (38:10-13) writes: "Thus saith the Lord God; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought: and thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates, to take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land. Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish (the British Isles even then—six hundred years before Christ—were renowned as a territory of commerce), with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?"

William Zukerman, writing in the May, 1933, issue of Harpers, comments under the title, "The Palestine Boom," on the fact that, if Palestine were not so insignificant industrially and so small physically, the world might now be turning to this, the one nation in the earth not suffering from it, for guidance out of the general economic depression. "As in former days the word of God came forth out of Zion," Mr. Zukerman remarks, "so

The Better Day

I am waiting, ever waiting,
For a brighter, better day.
Just beyond the clouds and shadows
That surround my lonely way.
For a day of light and gladness
Such as earth has never known,
When in equity and justice
Christ shall reign on David's throne.

Now the world is full of suff'ring;
Sounds of woe fall on my ears,
Sights of wretchedness and sorrow
Fill my eyes with pitying tears.
'Tis the earth's dark night of weeping;
Wrong and evil triumph now.
I can wait, for just before me
Beams of morning roseate glow.

I am waiting, hoping, praying,
For Messiah's glorious reign,
For I know He'll rule in justice;
Right and truth will triumph then.
Worldly pleasures cannot win me
While I wait for that bright day;
Worldly splendor cannot charm me
While its light beams on my way.
—Selected.

today might be emanating from there the hope of economic revival for all mankind."

The author's verb possesses insufficient power. Might properly could be changed to will, for, according to the immutable purposes of God, the salvation of mankind is to have its genesis on the hills where David ruled. Nevertheless, man's Indian Summer, with which this exposition is primarily concerned, will be of world-wide scope. Indeed, the first faint rays of universal recovery are already becoming visible, not because of any dangerous inflationary program in which a Roosevelt or MacDonald may indulge, nor because of any rejection of the evils of capitalism by socialists, but because recovery finds a place in the plans conceived by an omniscient Jehovah inconceivable eons before the universe was born.

At present it is obvious that a revival of industry is only beginning. Even in favored Palestine conditions are such that labor can no longer be found for the swarms of Halutzim (peasants) who invade the boundaries of David's kingdom. Unemployment everywhere still is rife. Standards of living have fallen and there appears little evidence of improvement. Formerly solid governments have canceled their contracts and have departed from the gold standard. Finance, politics, and society are in a state of chaos. Yet, despite these facts, very slowly the business scale is teetering toward balance.

A decided upturn in business of all sorts is essential to the plans of God. Greater prosperity in concrete form—factories, farms, railroads, buildings—than now exists must come to Palestine before the northern Asiatic coalition will be attracted to it by avarice. The Antichrist is to seize enormous wealth for himself as he ingratiates himself into the rulership of the three kingdoms he will control. (Parenthetically it may be remarked that this personification of evil will rule only three kingdoms and not the whole earth, as generally is supposed.)

Not only this, however, but the revelation given to John on the Isle of Patmos would indicate that a return to "boom times" is in order. The entire eighteenth chapter is devoted to a vivid portrayal of the lamentation of men over the fall of the great god Commerce before the onslaught of Jehovah.

Regardless of whether one considers Babylon a literal city or a symbol of industry, it is evident that business will not be stagnant during the period immediately preceding the Christ's return; else, John would have been given no cause to write of the things "dainty and goodly" bought and sold in the visionary metropolis. Abundant luxuries do not accompany depression. "Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness!"—Revelation 18:19. Certainly present circumstances scarcely warrant such a prediction; only prosperity could result in general wealth among the shippers.

But, however great may be the riches to come during the period described, they, like the salutary weather of true Indian summer, will be transient and illusive. As in the case of the Florida and New York land booms and the nation-wide Coolidge boom, this period of man-created wealth will be short. John's prediction of the mighty plait to be sent up over the destruction of the source of humanity's coming ephemeral prosperity is supplemented by certain of the Old Testament prophets, notably Ezekiel, Daniel, Joel, Zechariah, and Malachi, who also offer descriptions of the calamities to fall upon men.

Rome rose and retrograded, enjoying a brief moment of prosperity shortly before it perished. So did Egypt, China, Medo-Persia, Babylon, and India. Total collapse has not always followed on the heels of such brief Indian Summers of men; but it will follow the Indian Summer to come. God's kingdom will be established; old systems in time will be completely swept away; but permanent peace, prosperity, and happiness will fill the earth.

IN THE SPARE BEDROOM

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

---

NOT LONG ago I heard about some people who believed in Jesus and wanted Him in their home, yet they wanted to keep Him in the spare bedroom most of the time. I was curious to know why they did not want Him in the rest of the house and here are the reasons.

I was told they did not want Jesus at the table at meal time because the conversation would not be just the kind that He would care to hear. They did not want Jesus in the living room because they might have to apologize for the cigarette smoke and language of some of big brother's friends. They did not want Jesus in the parlor because sister had her bridge parties there, and He would not enjoy those.

I became anxious to know just why they wanted the Savior in their home at all, but I was also told the reason for this. Last winter when baby sister was very sick with pneumonia and the doctor seriously shook his head, they wanted Jesus to be with them to comfort them and save their little girl. One time father was hurt while working and was not expected to recover. They all wanted Jesus then. They prayed that father would get well, and after long months of good care he finally was restored to health.

I hardly know what to think about people who want Jesus handy in times of trouble, in their spare bedroom, so they can call Him out when they want Him, but do not want Him in the rest of their home. I honestly hope that the number of such families is small. The fact is Jesus does not come into a home just to be put into the spare bedroom until called. He is in the spare bedroom when a true Christian comes to that home to visit and is in that room, but Jesus goes when the Christian goes.

We want Jesus in our homes and always where we are. Let us have Him in our presence always. May we not be doing that which we would not like to be doing in Jesus' presence. May we not be saying what we would not like to be saying in Jesus' presence, and let us be nowhere we would not like to have Jesus with us.

The Lions of Tarshish

IT is impossible in a brief study to present the biblical and historical evidence upon which the conclusion rests that Great Britain and her associated Commonwealths are "the merchants of Tarshish, and all the young lions thereof" mentioned in Ezekiel 38:13. It must suffice for the present to state simply that after careful investigation by most thoughtful students the general opinion has been reached that this is the correct interpretation of the prediction. Should the reader desire to enter more fully into this phase of the question, we would recommend for his guidance the voluminous work The Eastern Question, by J. P. Weethee, or the equally scholarly but more abbreviated analysis presented by W. H. Wilson in The Destiny of Russia.

To restrict this article to a single issue we shall, therefore, take for granted that "the merchants of Tarshish" refers to that greatest commercial nation of all history, Great Britain, and that the "young lions thereof" points definitely to the various powerful Governments founded by her on both hemispheres.

More than a hundred years before Herodotus, "the Father of History," wrote the earliest reference we possess to the British Isles, God had foreseen and caused to be inscribed in a book the most startling and important event that was ever to come within the experience of the nation that was to occupy their territory. Surely no one but Jehovah could do a thing like that! It exceeds the power of man to read aright the sealed pages of futurity.

There are certain great mountain peaks of revelation that must be kept constantly within the range of our vision if we are to follow successfully the footprints of the prophets as they lead ever closer to the grand consummation of the ages as it has been planned by the eternal God. The most prominent of these monuments of truth which raise their crowns of golden promise above the distant horizon of events is Israel, the chosen people of Jehovah. We must focus our attention on the Jew if we would keep the prophetic path clear and plain before us. This fact was never more true than it is in connection with our investigation at this time, for the Israelite holds the key that unlocks the mystery of the passage to which we would give our attention.

The basic thought is expressed in the form of a searching question addressed by one federated group of nations to another: "Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?" This is the question that is asked apparently without customary diplomatic circumlocution by "the merchants of Tarshish" of the Northern Confederacy as the latter assembles its hosts for the conquest of Palestine.

In this, the fifth of a series of articles on "Present Tense Prophecy," the editor attempts to analyze the prophecies relating to Great Britain and her associated Commonwealths and suggests the possible part this great empire will take in the remarkable developments of the last days.

To understand the sequence of events we must glance for a moment comprehensively at the world as it will be organized in the closing decade of the present age. We discover that the Scriptures teach that the nations will be arranged into several groups or alliances, and that each of these groups will be suspicious of and antagonistic to the others. For the sake of convenience in identifying them later we will term the two leading groups the Northern Confederacy and the Western Confederacy. These terms are by no means accurate, as the Northern Confederacy will probably include the great eastern nations, Japan and China, as well as the northern power which we identify with Russia. A part of the Germanic nations will also be aligned with it. The Western Confederacy will also have incorporated within it certain Oriental nations such as Egypt and Palestine, and possibly rebellious India. But for convenience in locating these two outstanding groups we will venture to call them the Northern and the Western Confederacies.

The picture painted in Ezekiel (chapters 36, 37, 38, 39) is aglow with the royal colors of Israel! Its details cannot be grasped properly unless we observe the important position held by this strangely favored race, for all other scenes revolve around the children of Jacob. As we proceed, we shall find that the one great purpose of all that follows, in so far as God is concerned, is the deliverance of His people from their age-long bondage and degradation and their reestablishment in the land of their fathers. Whatever Russia, China, Japan, or any other nation may be permitted to do, we may be sure it will be made to further the plans of Jehovah for the regathering and for the spiritual reclamation of Israel. "And so all Israel shall be saved: . . . .for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins."—Romans 11:26, 27.

From the Valley of Dry Bones, where Israel has been resting for so long a time, there comes a noise of "shaking"—bone coming to his bone—and soon sinews and flesh and skin will come upon them, and those dried and lifeless bones will live once more, for God will breathe into them the "breath of life," and all Israel will stand "upon their feet, an exceeding great army."—Ezekiel 37:10. Such will be the resurrection of the nation that died because of sin.

Returning to their homeland, the land of eternal promise and hope, the Jews will take with them the portable wealth of the world. Their hands already rest upon the door of the world's treasure house. Few can engage in a major business enterprise without first securing the financial support of this people. The prosperity of all nations is in their keeping. They will return with the gold (now being gathered in the treasuries of the nations), the silver (rapidly coming to be recognized on a par with gold as a standard of monetary value), and with the "commercial paper," the stocks, bonds, and mortgages that blanket all lands with rustling documents that fill the hearts of the debtor with fear today.

Gathering in Palestine with the financial resources of the world largely in their possession, they will arouse the avarice of the enemies everywhere. The great Northern Confederacy (Ezekiel 38:1-6), led by communistic Russia (Gog and Magog) and aided by anti-Semitic Germany (Gomer), will look upon them as a menace to their own security and as legitimate prey, and they will say to each other, "I will go up to the land of unwalled villages," (i. e., villages without strong military protection) "... to take a spoil."

Here it is that "the merchants of Tarshish" (Great Britain) enters the picture. Since December 9, 1917, when Jerusalem was surrendered to General Allenby, the British commander of the army in Palestine in the World War, the Holy Land has remained under the control of the empire he served, and that nation is to retain the government of Palestine until it is finally turned over voluntarily into the hands of the Messiah of Israel.

So we find that when the "evil thought" of conquest enters the minds of the nations making up the Northern Confederacy Great Britain will be exercising her long and generally satisfactory protectorate over "them that are at rest" because they feel secure under her strong and friendly protection. Through diplomatic channels she will question the meaning of the general mobilization she observes is taking place in the North and East. Not receiving a satisfactory explanation, she will gather her own vast forces together before Jerusalem, not only to hold the position she has in Palestine, but to protect the gateway to India, the granary and the treasure house of Asia.

And there it is that the nations of the world will meet for the last great struggle of the present age. There it is that they will battle in the Valley of Jehoshaphat for possession of the key city of world dominion. And there it is that the Lord will find them ready for the judgment of the nations that is to take place when He comes. When hope is at the lowest ebb, when the city of Jerusalem shall have actually fallen into the hands of the enemy, but while the flag of old England still waves bravely beside the blue and white banner of Zion amid the smoke wreaths of battle, in the midst of the tumult, in the roar of bursting shells, while the ground trembles at the echoing blasts that sweep its scarred surface with a rain of death, then it is, I say, in the din and stench and smoke of history's most awful struggle, down through the circling aeroplanes, unaffected by their gushing billows of poison gas,

"Our Lord will come in power and glory from on high," to set the nations in array before Him for judgment!

Signs of the Closing Age

A WRITER in The Bible Advocate has compiled an interesting number of quotations taken from the assertions of men prominent in world affairs concerning the sad condition in which humanity finds itself at this time. Referring to the prediction of Jesus that "distress of nations" would mark the close of the present age, he says, "In this age of boasted learning and civilization, there never was such distress throughout the world." He then quotes as follows from several influential leaders of world thought.

Sir Auckland Geddes:

"In Europe we know that an age is dying."

Frances Gribble said in the nineteenth century:

"The historian of the future will write . . . that the most highly organized world's civilization deliberately committed suicide."

H. G. Wells says:

"Destruction is not threatening civilization; it is happening to civilization before our eyes. The ship of civilization is not going to sink in five years' time, or in fifty years. It is sinking now."

Sir Philip Gibbs declares:

"All of us will be engulfed. . . . The stage is set for the greatest melodrama, entitled, 'The Downfall of Europe.'"

Mr. A. Simms asserts:

"Europe today is an armed camp, under military laws and dictators, having more men under arms, equipped, and possessing more dangerous engines of destruction and devastation than ever before."

D. M. Patton writes:

"In a torrent of peace talk, which seems to act like a kind of chloroform, the world arms, while the world sleeps. There are ten million more trained soldiers now than there were in 1914, and weapons of destruction are five times more shattering."

It is no wonder that David Lloyd George writes:

"I speak from personal experience when I say that . . . every day I hear the rattle of machine guns. . . . the hoarse roar of cannons . . . and the boom of naval artillery. This is going on in every civilized country on earth. We have covenants against war; we have pacts which we have signed that there shall be no more war; and yet we are preparing for those things we have determined should never happen again. The international situation is bad. We are building up barriers against each other. We are blocking and trying to starve each other. . . . The atmosphere is poisoned with suspicion and distrust."

Mussolini says:

"All the world is arming."

The peace and safety cry, amidst great preparation for war, is a sign of the returning of our Lord. Therefore, let us "lift up our heads and rejoice."

Helpful Hints in Bible Study

YOU can know just as much about the Bible as you want to know. It is a revelation of the mind of God, and in it He has revealed to us as much of His own mind as the human mind is capable of grasping. The acceptance of all its truths combines to make a full-orbed mind—just such as God wants every human being to have. It holds the most precious secrets, and these will be given up to everyone who searches its pages with diligence and prayer. No book is so charming and no theme so uplifting as that of this one and best Book. God is its Author, truth its theme, and salvation its end.

In its study everyone should have a suitable Bible—not one too costly for everyday reading, nor too small print, so that he can read it only by the sunlight, but one of good print, well bound, medium size, containing maps and other helps, and if possible the Revised Version. In fact, if you must choose between the Revised Version and the helps, get the Revised Version and get your helps elsewhere. If you already have a Teacher's Bible it will be only an additional cost of twenty-five cents to one dollar to procure a well bound copy of the Revised Version of the New Testament, or two dollars for the whole Bible, or more, according to the style of binding, but by all means use for your daily reading and study the Revised Version.

Do not be afraid to use your Bible and give no thought about keeping it clean, although it is supposed that it will not be soiled unnecessarily. It is the truth you are after and not the paper that makes the pages. That paper is no holier than any other paper, and for a trifle you can get another Bible when that one has become too soiled for use, but the information from those pages is what the soul is athirst for—such information as was said of it and it only: "Thy word is truth," and, "It shall stand for ever." Practice carrying your Bible to church, especially to the prayer meeting and the Sunday services, and make use of it there as opportunity may offer itself. Make it a living companion.

Read it often, and you will have laid hold of that promise which is, "Blessed is he that readeth," but especially study it as you would mathematics or Latin. The command is, "Search the scriptures," just as one who is working a problem in mathematics or translating a sentence in Latin or, having lost something, removes every piece of furniture in the room to find that which is lost. God's Word no more quickly gives up its secrets than other lines of study. Emerson rightly said: "This world belongs to the energetic," and it is so with the study of God's Word. It belongs to those who combine their energies and surrendered wills to its mastery.

If one is so situated, it is well to have a certain time for the study of the Word; but if circumstances be against this, be determined to get some time for study, and be sure to get it, for your life depends upon it. It is your spiritual food, and the soul must have it. It is significant that in the oldest book of the Bible—at the very beginning of writing—Job should have said of God: "I have esteemed the words of his mouth more necessary than my daily food"; and Jeremiah said: "Thy words were found, and I did eat them." The Christian's failure to grow is due either to the lack of appetite for the Bible or to the fact that, having the appetite, he does not take the time to gratify it. This is supreme. The soul should be fed as regularly and as continually as the body.

Memorize as much of the Bible as possible and say it to yourself frequently. Argue with yourself for a holier life on this basis. Do not memorize the Scriptures simply for prayer meeting talks or to meet others in argument, but do this for your own salvation. Plant the Word right in your heart and, like a careful florist, keep it growing. It is the greatest bulwark against sin. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," said the Psalmist. This is the divine remedy, and it cannot fail. Take the sermon on the mount for an example. This can be easily committed to memory; and the daily repeating of it, even in part, brings God more largely into human life. For a long time I have practiced saying this as soon as I retire at night, and with equal diligence I practice saying it immediately on awaking in the morning. I have found this to be an incomparable mental purifier. It may appear as a trifling practice to bring into one's life, and it is a small matter, but it has brought great blessing to me.

Find out the purpose of each book in the Bible and the circumstances surrounding its composition. No scripture can be fully understood without inquiring: By whom was it written, and to whom? When was it written, and where and why? These questions are necessary for us in order to understand anything men may write; and they are no less necessary in understanding what God has written, for the same laws of interpretation that apply to a clear understanding of other ancient books apply to the Bible. Not only the Old Testament, but many of the Epistles, are far from comprehensive without a strict adherence to these rules. The books of the Bible, especially the Epistles, should be so studied that one would be able to give a general outline of the book, perhaps getting to memory verbatim some special verses, but making it all very brief and marking the verses that you have come to love and that have become to you living sentences. Refer to these frequently and usually in the connection with which they were used.

Make a careful study of those lands which have been made so sacred to us because of Bible history. Not only study the map, but practice map drawing until you are able to make a general location of the places mentioned in the New Testament; otherwise, those names of cities and countries and rivers and mountains will have no meaning to you. This part of Bible study is too frequently neglected. It is very important. It locates facts and so makes them more real.

Remember that the first law of Bible study, which in fact is the law of all other branches of knowledge, is to practice what you learn. You know that this is an essential rule in the study of grammar, mathematics, and everything else; and it claims the very first place in Bible study. The promise is very simple: "If a man shall do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." Without doing you cannot know. Everything that the Bible commands you must try to practice, just as you do in obedience to the laws of grammar and rhetoric in the hope of being able to speak and write in purer English. This is vital, and Bible study is of no practical value unless we enter wholeheartedly into the practice of all we learn. In this way, and this way alone, are the secrets of God open to the human heart. "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

You must not expect to master the Bible in a year or several years. You did not do that in the study of Latin, which was written by men. God is the Author of the Bible, and the highest knowledge lies hidden in its pages. It is a life-long study, every day the Word getting sweeter and the great world it opens getting larger and more beautiful, until like Kepler, we shall exclaim: "O, Almighty God, I am thinking Thy thoughts after Thee!"—Peter Ainslie in The Christian-Evangelist.

REMEMBERING GOD

By Brayton E. Crandall

---

"I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase."—1 Corinthians 3:6.

TRUE it is, though how little have we given it any thought. I have planted a seed, you have watered it; but which of us can change the form of that seed into a marvelous plant? Neither are we able to find on all the earth another that is worthy of such an honor. We thank God that He did not leave the beautiful things of life to man, for man has proved in many of his ways to be a failure.

Shall we regard this thought to be just merely a happen-so, or shall we stop and consider it and make every possible effort to receive its full value? Oh, that the hearts and minds of men might open up and absorb enough of God's plan to encourage them to find what lies in store for them! Every bone and muscle in his mortal body would tremble with fear if only man could get a glimpse of the future, when each one is called before the seat of judgment, to be judged of his works here on earth.

The fact that by the disobedience of one sin entered into the world does not mean in any way that we should continue in sin. For we are not bound by the law to serve sin, but by grace, if so be that God dwells in us. What shall we say then: shall we continue to be a servant of sin? We cannot serve two masters; we must serve one and hate the other. Again we thank God that He gave His only begotten Son that man might be saved.

God was mindful of man's needs. He created him and loved him and was not willing that he should suffer the pain and agony that sin would force upon him. More than this, He gave him life, peace, love, and happiness for only a reasonable service. Do we realize from day to day how wonderful are His blessings? There seems to be no end to His giving if we would only put ourselves in the way to receive it. All this and much more is contained in God's promises. Do we show that we have appreciated anything that He has done for us?

This reminds me of a parable that Jesus taught His disciples, of a man whose ground yielded plentifully, so much that his barns were not large enough to hold his fruits. So he decided to enlarge his barns, that he might store up a greater supply. This being done, he said to himself, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?"—Luke 12:16-20.

"What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" May we be mindful of the soul and enlarge the heart that our treasure in heaven may be sufficient to preserve the body. May we be mindful of the future when old age creeps suddenly upon us, when past pleasures have somehow lost their charms. We then begin to think seriously, we find that we do not grasp new things so easily as we did when we were new ourselves, we glance back over the past and something seems to murmur within us, "Too late, too late."

Jesus said we should think on these things, meditate on them day and night, know what is that good and perfect will of God. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found."—Isaiah 55:6. It is evident by these last words that He will not be with us always. He also tells us to "remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."—Ecclesiastes 12:1.

JERUSALEM

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning."—Psalm 137:5.

Jerusalem; dear name of joy and beauty,
Of woe and anguish, never, never known
Beneath the sun, to any other city,
Since in the dust went down thy regal crown.
Blood, blood and tears and fiery desolation,
And every form of torture and despair,
Thy dreadful portion, since upon Golgotha
The cross was lifted in the shuddering air.

No other spot on earth has such a story
As thine, Jerusalem; thy circling hills
Have seen thee shining with unequaled splendor;
Have seen thee trampled under matchless ills;
Joy of God's chosen in the wondrous ages,
When men to God's bright presence could draw near
And see the glory light the inner temple,
And God's own voice of Majesty could hear.

City of doom, that holy light forsook thee;
That voice grew silent—then the veil was rent.
The battle ground of nations thou becamest:
Egypt and Rome in thee their forces spent.
Persia and Babylon made blood like water
To flow abundant in thy mourning ways,
And Franks and Turks and Moors and wild Crusaders
Swelled the red tide that rolled through fatal days.

Center of moral storms, whirlwinds, and earthquakes,
"Innocent blood" was long avenged in thee,
From Abel's down to "His" who would have saved thee—
Whom thou didst nail to the accursed tree,
Football of nations, every heathen robber,
All peoples, good or bad, have found a place
In thee to dwell—all save the Jew were welcome—

Where thy best lover dared not show His face.
But times are changing, O devoted City!
Jerusalem of ever sacred soil:
The awful depths of misery are closing;
Wand'ers in exile hope amid your toil
Near, near to come, the times of promised blessing,
When Gentile feet shall tread you down no more.

Jerusalem! name beaming sunlike ever,
The days of wailing now are almost o'er.
Joy of the earth! beloved of all people!
City of God, to rule in grandeur meet:
Christ, Son of David, soon will reign in glory,
The thronging Gentiles bending at His feet,
While Israel's millions offer incense sweet.

WHEN THEY WERE AWAKE

IN READING the familiar record of the transfiguration of our Lord I was impressed by the sentence, "When they were awake, they saw his glory" (Luke 9:32). The three disciples, so close to the Lord, were sleeping; they had no eyes and vision for His glory. And so they were asleep in Gethsemane and had no eyes and vision for His agony and suffering. But when they were awake, they saw His glory, the altered countenance and the raiment white and glistening.

To behold His glory the believer must be awake, his eyes must be wide open for spiritual vision. I mean the eyes of our hearts. We have eyes, physical eyes, in our bodies, and in our new nature we have eyes to see; but the flesh, the old nature, often dims the spiritual vision. Thousands of believers suffer from a spiritual cataract. There is a film which makes all hazy. The spirit of worldliness, worldly ambition, if not worldly pleasures, disturbs and greatly interferes with the spiritual vision a child of God should have at all times.

"Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."—Ephesians 5:14. This exhortation is not addressed to a sinner or to an unbeliever. It is addressed to a backslider, one who is a Christian but is out of touch with the Lord. He is in spiritual sleep, and sleep is akin to death. By a broken fellowship he has turned back to the state of spiritual death; instead of following the road of life, he has set foot on the road of death. Awake! Arise! When there is a spiritual awakening of the carnally-minded believer, true repentance, and a true return to the Lord, He will give light and restore the lost spiritual eyesight. The real vision of Christ and His glory is given by the Holy Spirit to those who are awake in spiritual things, who are ambitious to please God. The Holy Spirit gives the vision of Christ and His glory to all in whom it is not grieved nor quenched. It takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us.

We are living in days of steadily increasing darkness. Everything of the truth of God, and especially the truth which is most precious, concerning Christ and His glory, is being obscured. Christendom with its unscriptural program to produce a better world, to bring in that "kingdom" of man, man-invented and man-centered, has turned away from the supernatural Christ and His glory.

But may we, we who are awake and reaching out after the spiritual things, may we not expect an increasing vision of Christ and His glory? Are there not many things which we have not yet apprehended? They are within our reach, only our increasing vision must keep step with separation from the world.

"When they were awake, they saw his glory." Some day this will come to pass with all His saints. It was David's assurance expressed in the seventeenth Psalm: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."—Psalm 17:15. The saints asleep (as to their bodies) will have an awakening in the first resurrection. And we who are alive in that blessed moment, when His voice calls us to the gathering together unto Him, will be delivered from the limitations which prevent the perfect vision of Christ and His glory. Then, fully awake, we shall become like Him in seeing Him as He is; and we shall be satisfied and He will be satisfied, when He sees and has with Him the travail of His soul. Oh, may it soon come! That supreme event of our blessed hope, when we shall be awake and see His glory!—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the writings of A. C. Gaebelein.

“WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?”

If I were a Jew, events now transpiring in Europe would convince me that Christ is Israel's Messiah. Jeremiah 30:7 is being fulfilled right before our eyes. I will quote from Moffatt's Translation: “And why is every face turned to a deadly pallor? Ah, this is an awful day! what day is like it? An hour of anguish for Jacob, but he shall come through it. For on this Day, says the Lord of Hosts, I will break the yoke from their neck, and snap their thongs, they shall serve foreigners no more, but serve their God, the Eternal, and their Davidic king, whom I will raise up for them.” At your leisure read the rest of this chapter. Moffatt's Translation clarifies its meaning.

The Jew has done more for Germany than probably any other country; her greatest thinkers and men of culture are Jews. Then why, like Spain (who now sees her mistake and is inviting Jews to return), is she persecuting and harassing the Jew “from pillar to post”? “This day this scripture is being fulfilled in your ears.” Jeremiah 16:16-18: “I am sending for many a fisherman, says the Eternal, to capture this people. After that, I will send for many an huntsman, to hunt them out of every mountain and hill and cranny of the rocks. For mine eye is on all they do, nothing is hidden from me, their guilt does not escape me, I will doubly punish their guilt and sin, for desecrating my land with dead, detestable idols, for filling up my heritage with their abominations. So I will let them feel, this once I will let them feel, the full force of my power, to teach them that my name is the Eternal.”

Why is Germany doing this? God needs a nucleus of educated and able men to establish a government in Palestine preparatory to the recognition of His Son as their Messiah. “For it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem; and I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace, and of supplication: and they shall look upon him whom they have pierced; and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.”

Now note the deep significance of Jesus' question. Under the form of government familiar to the Jew the father was recognized as the chief. For Jesus to suggest that the son was to take priority over the father and thus become lord or chief was unthinkable, and yet this is exactly what their Scriptures were teaching them. To make this point clear I shall quote Isaiah 9:9, from the Douay Version: “For a child is born to us, and a son is given to us, and the government is upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God the Mighty, the Father of the World to Come, the Prince of Peace. His empire shall be multiplied, and there shall be no end of peace; he shall sit upon the throne of David; and upon his kingdom: to establish it and strengthen it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth and for ever: the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.”

I wish we had space to enlarge on these four attributes of the Jews' Messiah when He will be revealed to them in all His glory.

Wonderful. No other word can express the magnificence of His first advent, which Paul epitomizes in Acts 10:38: “How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him.” In the coming age over which He will be King, Lord, Father, and Chief all that He did will be amplified at least a hundred forty-four thousand times more (Revelation 14:3.) “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do.”—John 14:12.

Counsellor. Barnes says of this, “This word expresses a distinct attribute or quality, it denotes one of honorable rank qualified to advise, one who is fitted to stand near princes and kings as their adviser. It is expressive of great wisdom and of qualifications to guide and direct the human race.”

Jesus said, Matthew 12:42, “The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.” Dear Lord, hasten the time when Psalm 98:9 will be realized: “Before the Lord; for he cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity.”

The Mighty God. If Paul could say of Jesus in 1 Corinthians 1:24, “But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God,” then cannot you see that since He Himself said, “For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son,” and, “All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth,” in the age to come He will indeed be the mighty God at least upon this earth?

The Everlasting Father. Glorious! Wonderful! We die now because our fathers were mortal. In that age, if He is now our Father, having begotten us by the word of truth (James 1:18), then we shall never die. “Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.” And He also said, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.”

ILLINOIS REPORT FOR APRIL

THE Rockford Berean Society meets Friday evenings at 7:45 at 1904 N. Main Street with a membership of twenty-eight and an average weekly attendance during April of twenty-four. The interest is good.

Marjorie Mogle, Secretary.

The Oregon Berean Society meets Sunday evening at 6:30 at the Church of God with a membership of thirteen. The average weekly attendance for April was ten. The interest is good.

Rosalie Carpenter, Secretary.

The Dixon Berean Society meets Wednesday evening at 7:30 at the Church of God with a membership of thirty-eight. The average weekly attendance for the month of April was twenty-six. The interest is good. A contest has been started, and two sides were chosen. Mrs. William Eckert is the captain of one side, and Alice Myers is the captain of the other. Some interest has been created through this contest.

Helen Roberts, Secretary.

Again may I ask the local secretaries please to have their reports in by the twenty-eighth of each month? It is very difficult for the state secretary to get her report in to the Berean editor on time, as the above report will show.

Elizabeth Ford, State Secretary.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE

"Christ has no hands but our hands to do His work today;
He has no feet but our feet to lead men in His way.

He has no tongue but our tongue to tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help to bring them to His side.

"We are the only Bible the careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel, we are the scoffer's creed.
We are the Lord's last message, given in deed and word;
What if the type is crooked? What if the print is blurred?"

"What if our hands are busy with other work than His?
What if our feet are walking where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him and hasten His return?"

This little poem was read at one of the Dixon Berean meetings by a senior Berean. It was taken from an old RESTITUTION HERALD. It would be well if each Berean would examine himself and see if he thought Jesus would be proud to have His work here carried on by such a Bible as the Berean would offer to the world. Elizabeth Ford.

THE TIME FOR PRAYER

When is the time for prayer?

With the first beams that light the morning sky;

Ere for the toils of day thou dost prepare,

Lift up thy thoughts on high;

Commend thy loved ones to His watchful care:

Morn is the time for prayer.

And in the noontide hour,

If worn by toil, or by sad cares oppressed,

And He will give thee rest;

Then unto God thy spirit's sorrow pour,

Thy voice shall reach Him through the fields of air:

Noon is the time for prayer.

When the bright sun hath set,

While eve's bright colors deck the skies;

When with the loved at home again thou'st met,

Then let thy prayer arise;

For those who in thy joys and sorrows share,

Eve is the time for prayer.

And when the stars come forth—

When to the trusting heart sweet hopes are given,

And the deep stillness of the hour gives birth

To thoughts of grave import;

Kneel to thy God—ask strength life's ills to bear,

Night is the time for prayer.

When is the time for prayer?

In every hour, while life is spared to thee;

In crowds or solitude, in joy or care,

Thy thoughts to God should flee.

At home, at morn and eve, with loved ones there,

Bend thou the knee in prayer!

ANOTHER BRAVE LEADER

AMONG those twelve men, one from each tribe of Israel, appointed to do a certain job for Moses, there was only one who had the courage to stand up with Joshua and tell the truth. His name was Caleb, and he was from the tribe of Judah. There is some one from that same tribe who is called "the Lion of the Tribe of Judah." Do you know who that is?

These men were sent to find out secretly what sort of people lived in the land which God had promised to His people, Israel, and what sort of land it was. The land, you know, was then called Canaan, from the word Canaanites, the name of the people who lived there at that time. It was a part of what we call Palestine and it must have been a very rich land judging by the size of the bunches of grapes the spies found. Did you ever see any that big?

The ten cowards reported the wonderful fruits growing there, but said that there were giants living there who had high walls around their cities. Just think of being afraid to go anywhere with God as your Leader! God had shown the Israelites what He could do when He piled up the deep and dangerous waters of the Red Sea. And yet they were afraid of the Canaanites! You wouldn't be, would you, if God had told you that was to be your home?

Read Numbers 14:31-34, and learn the punishment that came on the people because of these ten false and cowardly men. Then read Numbers 26:65 and Joshua 14:13, 14, and find Caleb's reward for his believing what God said and being brave enough to stand up and say so.

Now look in the back of your Bibles or in a Bible atlas and find the map showing the land as it was divided among the twelve tribes. Find Hebron, Caleb's city. It's a little west of the Dead Sea, about half way down the coast. Do you know anything about Hebron? Turn over in your Bibles to the second book of Samuel and read the first four verses of chapter 2. King David was of the same tribe as Caleb, you know.

Now, let's make a little booklet for Caleb. Take three or four sheets of paper, any kind you have left from your school work, or you can take wrapping paper and iron it out smoothly. Fasten it together with colored cord or paper clips, or sew it; make a pretty border on the cover with your crayons, and print the title on it. You'll think of many things to add to your little books from week to week, I know.

You older boys and girls write the story of Caleb's bravery, telling about the big bunch of grapes, the giants, the way Caleb was treated by the people (you know, they stoned him and Joshua), the city of Hebron, etc. Then draw a map locating that city. Now look up the word truth in your concordance and find a good verse to copy about telling the truth always. Last, print these words in colored crayon, "Caleb wholly followed the Lord God of Israel."

The younger boys and girls may draw several pictures to represent Caleb's life, or paste in your booklets any pictures you can find about these stories. Draw twelve men, just with straight lines, and one leader to represent Moses telling them, "Go!" Then draw them coming back home, two carrying a bunch of grapes hanging from their shoulders by a big branch. If you can, draw a city with high walls around it and giants inside. Then print these words, "I will tell the truth always," and if you are tempted to tell a lie, think about Caleb and remember God loved him, because He trusted Caleb and Caleb trusted God.

Here is a nice little poem for your booklet:

"O hands that are willing and hearts that are true,
Must surely find something pleasant to do;
Our eyes we keep open, feet ready to run,
That each kindly deed will be carefully done.

"Each day has its labor, each hour its own deed,
And God will give to us the strength that we need;
We'll ask Him to help us as long as we live,
To be truthful and happy and ready to give."

I wish I could peep over your shoulders as you work on your booklets. I hope many of you are enjoying this page on these summer vacation days. One little girl wrote me that she could understand her Sunday school lessons so much better now. And I guess that makes her teacher happy, as well as me.

Here are some new members for our club: Elain, Thelma, Kenneth, and Richard Judan, and Mary Jane Easton of Long Beach; David Rahn of Los Angeles; Kenneth, Malcom, and Duncan MacLeod of Pomona. Welcome, California! We hope you'll enjoy the Bible Scrapbook work immensely. Let's give these boys and girls three rousing cheers to show how happy we are to have them with us. Rah! Rah! Rah! And now, good-bye till next week.

CALEB

Numbers 13; Joshua 14

Devotional Reading: Psalm 121

GOLDEN TEXT

Blessed is the man that maketh the Lord his trust.—Psalm 40:4.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Caleb's Confidence in God.

Aim: To impress upon the pupil the fact that confidence in God is always justified and rewarded.

Basic Truth: "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform."—Romans 4:20, 21.

I. Caleb's Confidence in God. (Vv. 6-9.) Caleb's confidence in God was not a passing emotion. It was a positive element of his character, constantly developed by his own desire. In his first public appearance as recorded in the Bible he indicated that he already possessed a deep and abiding faith in Jehovah (Num. 13:30). All things were possible with God. He feared no danger, he anticipated no failure when engaged in whatever work the Lord commanded. Because of his unfaltering confidence in God he brought back a favorable report when he returned from inspecting the land of Canaan. "Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it," he said.

II. Caleb's Confidence Strengthened. (Vv. 10-12.) Caleb's confidence increased as time went by. His dependence upon God increased with the passage of the years. His life was preserved, his physical strength maintained, and his mind was as quick and active as it had ever been, even when he had passed the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth. At that advanced age, so great was his confidence in God, he would not hesitate to attempt the conquest of the city of giants.

III. Caleb's Confidence Rewarded. (Vv. 13, 14.) Caleb's faith was fully justified by the outcome. Joshua kept the promise Moses had made. He gave Hebron to his faithful friend, and Caleb promptly overthrew the Anakims regardless of their enormous size and supposedly impregnable defenses. Caleb realized that to confess his faith in God orally was not sufficient. He must do something that would indicate to himself as well as to God that he trusted fully in the Lord. To apply the language of James concerning Abraham, "Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?"

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Wholly Followed the Lord: Caleb's success can be attributed to his action as stated in verse eight: "But I wholly followed the Lord my God." His devotion to and trust in God gave him such confidence that he believed and brought a true and favorable report when they went in to espouse the land. He did not doubt God's ability and power to do all that He had promised. He allowed God to lead him. He was a follower of God. Many of the tasks and labors in Christian service today seem to be too large and impossible of accomplishment, but perhaps these jobs that look to be of mountain proportions are really not so immense but assume the size because we are not "wholly following the Lord."

Caleb was willing to stand with the minority in order to be on God's side. The majority are generally at cross purposes with God. It took courage to bring in this minority report, and according to the reasonings of natural man the report of the majority was far more reasonable and logical than the one submitted by the two. But what seemed impossible to man was an easy task for the Lord. This has always been true and is equally true at this stage of God's dealings with man. To the natural man the redemption of man and the world through the plan provided by God is impossible of realization; but to those who wholly follow God, it is wholly and completely accepted and believed. —C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Caleb, like Joshua, brought back a true report when the spies returned from looking over the land of Canaan. These two were willing and wanted to enter the promised land at that time; but, alas, the faith of the others failed them, and they turned back. The faith of Caleb and Joshua permitted them to live and enter in, while those without faith fell in the wilderness. Caleb wholly followed the Lord and reaped the blessing for his obedience and trust.

It is just as needful for the Christian today to put his trust in the Lord as it was for Caleb and Joshua in their day. God only is the One in whom we can put our trust, for He is the One to whom we are indebted for life here and the promise of everlasting life through His dear Son. Caleb and Joshua received the blessing of entering in because they put their trust in God and followed Him. Let us follow their example that we too may "enter in" when the Savior comes to claim His own.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

Caleb was the man selected by Moses to represent the tribe of Judah as the twelve spies went to search out the land of promise. When these men returned to make their report, it was Caleb who spoke first. He said: "Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it." The greatness of his faith is best understood by contrasting it with that of the ten other spies. They reported: "The land through which we have gone to search it, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof. . . . And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which came of the giants: and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight."

The Hebrews believed the evil report. They declared that they would not attempt to conquer the land. Caleb's great faith shone forth again when he, with Joshua, spoke these assuring words to the angry, faithless host: "The land which we passed through to search it, is a good land. If the Lord delights in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us. Only rebel ye not against the Lord, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread for us: their defense is departed from them, and the Lord is with us: fear them not." The same great faith was stirring in his heart that was in the heart of the boy David many years later when he went out against one of these giants.

The ten faithless spies perished that night, but Joshua and Caleb were spared and given a promise of blessing. They were the only two adults permitted to enter Canaan. Their faith saved them. God's punishments are sometimes speedy, and His blessings are always sure.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: Another Brave Man.

Who remembers the story about the twelve spies? Who were the two spies that said, "Yes, we can take this land" (Caleb and Joshua)? Which one did we study about last Sunday?

We want to study about the other one, Caleb, today. Of course, we know Caleb was very brave when he came back and told Moses about the giants that lived in the promised land, when he said, "Yes, we can take the land."

But today we will learn of another brave thing that he did.

One day Caleb came to Joshua, the leader, and said, "Do you remember what Moses said to me on the day that we returned from our trip into the promised land? He said that some day, because I had not been afraid, I would get that land."

"Up here on a mountain live the Anakims. I know they have great cities with thick, high walls around them, but I know I can drive them out."

Joshua let Caleb have this land, and he did drive the Anakims out.

Do you wonder why Caleb knew he could drive the Anakims out? Because he knew that God would help him and had promised this land to them. God is with us, too, and will help us each day.—V. C. T.

MARATHON, IOWA

There will be meetings at the Arthur Carlson home, eight miles northeast of Marathon, on Sunday, July 2. All within driving distance are cordially invited to come.

Anna Boyanovsky.

CLEANING DAY—NORTH SALEM

Friday, June 30, has been set to clean the church and dormitory at North Salem, Ind., preparatory to Bible school and conference. Many good hands will make work easy.

INDIANA CONFERENCE NOTICE

The conference business meeting will be held at North Salem on Saturday at 2 o'clock, July 15. Send your delegates.

The conference treasurer will appreciate it if the various churches will also send along with their delegates a contribution to help defray the expense of the meeting.

F. A. Stilson, Pres.

HAMMOND, LOUISIANA

The Happy Woods Sunday School near Hammond, Louisiana, are making plans for a Jubilee Sunday on July 4, the second Sunday in July. This is in celebration of the 25th anniversary of this Sunday school. A program consisting of short talks by members and special music will be given.

The celebration will be continued on July 11 by a picnic on the banks of the Natalbany River west of Hammond.

The Happy Woods Sunday School invite all brethren and friends in the surrounding territory to come and enjoy this celebration with them.

Ella M. Siple.

AT EDEN VALLEY

Working with Bro. Denchfield at Eden Valley among former friends is indeed a pleasure. The attendance has been only fair due to severe heat and to the busy farm season. However, five have already accepted the Savior during this series of meetings. On Sunday, June 18, Bro. Denchfield baptized three, and the other two will be baptized the coming Sunday. We trust others, too, will be converted before the meetings close.

Bro. Denchfield will report in full when the meetings are over. Suffice it now to say that we are pressing on and the Father is with us.

Sydney E. Magaw.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTICE

Again we remind you that the time for the General Conference of the Church of God is approaching. The date for the meeting has been set for August 1 to 13 inclusive, and it will be held as usual at Oregon, Ill. The local church kindly grants us the use of its beautiful new house of worship, and the Illinois State Conference invites us to make use of their convenient dining hall and dormitory. "It is all in the family, anyway," is the way they look at it. So come and enjoy the meeting and help us to plan for more successful work next year.

While we are speaking of the future of the National Bible Institution, we might suggest that it would be well for you to study the needs of the general work carefully and prayerfully, taking into consideration The Restitution Herald, The Truth Seeker's Sunday School Quarterly, and all other matters pertaining to the publishing plant, Golden Rule Home, and Bible Training School, with the thought in mind of offering constructive practical criticism for the guidance of the executive board during the coming year.

Do not forget to consider the requirements of the Institution in the way of officers and management. The responsibility that rests upon those whom you choose to govern the work for the year is a heavy one. Choose each one with prayerful thought, seeking the best qualified for each position regardless of any purely personal feelings in the matter, for this is God's work, and His will must ever control.

Come, help us to make the meeting the best spiritually and constructively and from the standpoint of individual development that we have yet held.

G. E. Marsh, Secretary.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

We are pleased and proud of our young people here, as there were five graduated from the Dixon High School, all members of our Dixon church: Elizabeth Ford, Alice Myers, Arlene Reis, Lois Weitzel, and Lyle Drew. From the class of one hundred fifty graduates, a double quartette had a part on the program, in which two of our girls, Lois Weitzel, soprano, and Elizabeth Ford, alto, took part; also four of our girls were members of the Girl's Glee Club.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

A very successful Children's Day program was given on Sunday morning, June 18. Our church being too small to take care of such a gathering arrangements had been made for it on the lawn. The weather favored us with a beautiful day, and the committees had amply provided for a splendid occasion.

Sunday night, June 18, was Father's Day at our church. Following a sermon on fatherhood roses were distributed to all fathers present—the roses having been very thoughtfully provided by two of the ladies.

Bro. Robert Townsend who is in the Forestry service has been located on the northwest coast of Lake Michigan. He may be addressed, Wells State Park, Cedar River, Mich., Company 678. He is at present enjoying a broken thumb.

Final plans are being made for our Daily Vacation Bible School, July 10 to 23.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

REGARDING EXHIBITS

We want to make this year's Exhibit bigger and better and more far-reaching than was last year's excellent beginning.

We are sure that many of you have been working to this end. Now will you help by sending all material to Oregon before conference? Don't wait to bring it.

Your committee was much handicapped last year because we had no idea on the opening day whether to expect much or little. Materials kept coming in from day to day, thus making it impossible to classify the work and to determine the amount of space needed.

Room must be provided, and we must know how to plan. Everything should be in by July 28. So send your materials along any time from now on.

We will much appreciate this help, and we hope that the office will be swamped with bundles from here, there, and everywhere. Thank you.

Address Mrs. F. L. Austin, %N. B. I., Oregon, Illinois.

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

The Church of God at Rockford enjoyed very much the sermon given them by Bro. Arlen Marsh on Sunday morning, June 18. Interesting, pleasing, profitable, is the way we would describe the discourse as we hear about it from those who were present.

The pastor and family made a week-end visit in Indiana among friends at Plymouth and South Bend, attending Sunday school at South Bend, in the morning. In the afternoon we returned to the old homestead near Plymouth, where most of the writer's early days were spent. About mid-afternoon a very few of us motored to the "Lake of the Woods" near by where "mother" and "sister" took upon them the name of our Lord and Master by baptism.

This step is one that they have been considering for some time. Mother, Mrs. Andrew J. Thayer, is well along in years, but happy to spend the rest of her life in service. "Sister," Mrs. T. B. Boyd, is just in the prime of life and enjoying the hope of many years to serve in the Master's vineyard.

Only those placed in very similar circumstances may realize the writer's joy, because this now makes three of this particular family who have given their lives to Christ.

V. Earl Thayer.

MT. STERLING, ILLINOIS

Mrs. C. W. Barclift, superintendent of a splendid new Sunday school located in the country near Mt. Sterling, writes interestingly of the success that has attended her efforts to carry on the Lord's work among the children in her community. In a previous letter she remarked on the difficulty which all schools experience in securing qualified leaders. The matter of teacher training will occupy the attention of one of the Bible school classes at Oregon in August.

Mrs. Barclift says, "The Lord has blessed our work wonderfully here. We have an average attendance of 33. The weekly offering is also good. We are starting a weekly Bible class to be held on Wednesday nights in our place of worship."

LET'S HELP

Very helpful and encouraging are the memories of last year's General Conference, a feast of good things for all who attended. It was so good that it is very difficult to forget it. One of the grandest ideas presented was that splendid work of our Exhibit Committee: gathering together from various fields ideas that had proved a success in Sunday school, church, and Berean work.

We fellowship one another (though separated in our fields of labor) by bringing together in one place and exhibiting our various ideas and accomplishments.

This the Exhibit Committee had victoriously accomplished in their first attempt. The exhibit was so fine that we are now looking forward to that day in August when we can once more receive enlightenment by another's idea.

However, to make it a better exhibit this year we must all see to it that our ideas and accomplishments are on display. The success of our committee depends entirely upon you and me. Let us then make this our aim, "To help others, bring or send our ideas," that they may be on display in the Exhibit Room.

You may think that your work does not amount to much; you will be surprised to find that the things you do in your class or any other work of the church will help somebody else to solve his problems.

I want to take the liberty at this time to urge every church to give complete cooperation and make this year's exhibit the best, yea, better than the best. All who are in favor of this please signify by writing in your approval. I am sure the committee will be glad to hear from you. LET'S START NOW. THEN LET'S GO!

A. E. Hoskins.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

Another Bible school and annual June meeting is past history, and we feel that the time spent was most profitable.

Bro. Siple of Grand Rapids, Mich., was the main speaker for the meetings and gave us most timely instructions in his usual pleasing manner. It was also a real pleasure to have with us Sr. Siple and the three older daughters, who accompanied him and proved to be of valuable assistance.

Bible classes were held each afternoon at 2 o'clock and were divided into four groups in the following manner: adult class, Bro. Siple; high school age, Bro. Magaw; intermediate, Sr. Dorothy Siple; primary, Sr. Emma Gardard. Sr. Verna Stine also assisted with the junior and intermediate classes.

Although our Bible school was one week earlier than usual and farmers had been held back with their spring work, we had better attendance than at former schools, and we feel that Bro. Magaw's earnest work among us for the last two years brought these results.

Services were held each evening at 8 p. m., and the adult choir conducted by Sr. Louise Brewer, also the junior choir conducted by Sr. Edna Smith, added to the worship.

Four accepted Christ as their Savior: Mr. and Mrs. Lora Pearson and Mrs. Harold Pearson, all of Tiptecanoe City; and Junior Weaver, Troy. It is a real joy to see these young people, who have already founded homes, yield their lives in Christian service. Junior Weaver is yet young in years, but we are looking forward to the time when we pray that he consecrate his life's work for the Master and use his talent of speaking.

Our congregation shows much growth under the leadership of Bro. Magaw, and we are truly glad that he has accepted our call as pastor for another year. May the Lord direct and guide us in Christian service.

Edna Brewer, Secretary.

FROM SOUTH BEND

The Sunday school missed their faithful superintendent, Bro. Rolland Stilson, on June 11. He is at Purdue University for a nine-week summer course.

The school was happily surprised on the above Sunday by having Bro. and Sr. Earl Thayer and son Lyle from Rockford, Ill., as visitors. They spent the week-end with relatives and friends.

We also had a new member present, Yvonne Marie, only 20 days old, but who received as much if not more attention than anyone else present. She was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Leighty, with whom she came to live on May 29.

The young people of the pastor's class began choir work last spring, which they have been doing very faithfully and creditably to themselves and the church. It is a big help to our services, which are held every second and fourth Sunday in the month at the Y. M. C. A.

Floyd A. Stilson, Pastor.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Helen Porter; Mrs. Chas C. Ezell; Mrs. Ella Skeels; Mrs. Eva Phelps; Brayton E. Crandall; Mrs. T. B. Boyd; Mrs. Emma Fugate (for self and another); Mrs. O. J. Dorsey; Sylvester Logan.

RUHN-HAMILTON

On Wednesday, June 14, it was our privilege to unite in marriage Leslie Hamilton and Miss Vernice Ruhn. Both are young people of the Eden Valley Church of God. Vernice for several years has been active in the Sunday school, and Leslie was just recently baptized by Bro. Denchfield, the local pastor.

The wedding ceremony was held at 4:00 p. m., in the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. Herman Ruhn. Many pleasant hours we have had in the Ruhn home, but this occasion will probably be remembered longest of all. Just the near relatives witnessed the wedding, but a hundred and more came in the evening with bells and cheers.

Although both the bride and groom are from this vicinity, they are leaving for South Dakota, where Mr. Hamilton is employed on a large farm.

We wish them a happy married life.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

From the far East and from the extreme West comes the encouraging news of brethren preparing to come to General Conference. We look for a great gathering this year and a most profitable one. Are YOU coming?

The editorial in this week's paper was called forth by a personal and exceedingly touching letter from one of our subscribers. May we all pray earnestly that we be not led into error by our own hearts.

Sr. O. J. Dorsey, Alma, Colo., brings us joy by saying under date of June 16: "Still enjoy each number of The Herald, and the 'Specials' are very instructive and attractive. May God bless each of your efforts." How much we appreciate such letters!

We rejoice with Bro. V. Earl Thayer, pastor of the Rockford, Ill., church, that he was permitted to be the instrument in God's hands for inducting into the body of Christ through baptism his own beloved mother and sister. May God keep them both faithful until the Master comes.

The next state conference is that of Indiana, which convenes at the North Salem church, five miles north of Plymouth, eighteen miles south of South Bend, beginning Wednesday, July 5, and continuing over Sunday, July 16. Those who have had the privilege of meeting with the Indiana brethren in conference in the past know that a splendid and profitable experience awaits those who attend.

A very pleasant happening in which the entire Oregon (Ill.) church was interested occurred on June 15, when Mr. and Mrs. Wendell A. Doeden welcomed into their home a son, Robert Lewis. Mrs. Doeden is the daughter of Bro. and Sr. George Siple, and will be remembered by those who have attended the General Conference for her beautiful soprano voice, which has charmed so many in the past. We pray that the Father's richest blessing may attend Robert Lewis through life.

We are sure the Exhibit Committee will appreciate the appeal being made in this issue by Bro. Hoskins, pastor of the St. Cloud, Minn., church. Help the committee to make the forthcoming display even better than it was last year.

"We just can't get along without The Restitution Herald, depression or no depression." So writes Sr. Ella Skeels of Grand Rapids, Mich. Thank you, Sr. Skeels.

Has your church and state conference appointed its delegates to the General Conference yet? Better get busy, as you will want to be represented. See the special announcement concerning representation elsewhere in this issue.

It is possible that owing to the conferences and the time and space required to prepare reports and announcements concerning them, there will be no special issues of The Restitution Herald this summer.

Bro. S. T. Shirley, an aged and greatly beloved brother of Rock Falls, Ill., writes of the declining health of himself and wife and expresses the hope of being able to attend conference this year. Bro. Shirley stands firmly for the truth of the gospel, and we pray that his desire to meet with us is granted.

Word reaching us by way of Phoenix, Ariz., provides the information that Bro. Cecil A. Smead and his mother of Southern California are en route east. The exact time of their arrival is not given, but no doubt they will reach Indiana in time for the conference.

A personal letter from friends in Los Angeles tells of the splendid work that has been done there by Bro. Norman J. MacLeod. The brethren of the Middle West and of the East will have the opportunity of hearing this interesting young defender of the truth at the General Conference, the Lord willing.

DID CHRIST DIE?

By Vivian Magaw

BEFORE a man dies, he leaves a last will or testament for the proper distribution of whatever he has owned. He leaves such a statement of his will in those matters because he knows that he will be unconscious and utterly helpless after death. After he has died his last testament is read and acted upon accordingly. "For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth."—Hebrews 9:17. Hence, it was absolutely necessary for Christ to die before we could inherit anything from the Father through Him; "for where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator" (Hebrews 9:16).

Thus we see how vital is the teaching that Christ died. Certainly the shedding of His blood and the giving up of His ghost or spirit or breath of life can give us no hope if He continued to live and not die as many are now teaching. But man's ideas and teaching are sometimes contrary to the glad tidings recorded by God's holy writers. So let those who are on the Lord's side listen to His Word and find their hopes on those "Glad Tidings; because they are the power of God for Salvation to every one believing; both to Jew and to Greek (Gentiles)" (Diaglott).

In Mark 10:34 the word-for-word translation reads like this: "And they will mock him, and they will scourge him, and they will spit upon him, and they will kill him; and the third day he will stand up." The three English words "they will kill" are translated from the Greek word apoktenousin. In Luke 18:33 the same thing is told: "And having been scourged they will kill him; and the day the third he will stand up." In 1 Corinthians 5:7 we read to "cleanse out the old leaven, that you may be a new mass, as you are unleavened; even for the paschal lamb of us was slain, Anointed." The Greek word for "Anointed" is Christos. Let us rearrange the last part of the sentence like this: "For even Christ our paschal lamb was slain."

Now let us find out whether Christ was killed or slain without becoming dead: "And from Jesus Anointed, the witness, the faithful, the first-born of the dead ones, and the prince of the kings of the earth; to the one loving us and having washed us from the sins of us in the blood of himself."—Revelation 1:5. So, then, He was raised from among the dead ones, and He was also "of the dead ones."

There is no doubt that Christ was unconscious, for God's Record says, "For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing."

The first few verses of the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians reveal the truth as well or better than a word-for-word translation: "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures."—1 Corinthians 15:3. "Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not."

LORD'S SHARE

By C. E. Randall

"REMEMBER the Lord in your will" would be a good slogan for the church to adopt. Our people over the country, who have been reared in and taught the truth and who have the glorious privilege of regular church worship and who are what they are because of the church, seldom remember it when they make their wills.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been willed to undeserving individuals and people who have no interest in the truth or who are bitterly antagonistic to the truth, and God has been entirely forgot. Maybe God will forget them in the day of awards, too!

Does it not seem strange that people who profess to have such a wonderful love for the gospel of the kingdom will make no provision for it to be spread, but on the contrary will oftentimes give that with which God has blessed them to total strangers or to people who they know well will use it in wicked living and fail to leave enough to the church to pay for the heating of the building for their funerals?

Show the Lord your appreciation for the blessings which He has given in response to your many prayers and "remember the Lord in your will."—Church of God Messenger.

RELIGION

By J. W. Lent

RELIGION is any system of faith or worship, love and obedience to God. To those of us who have heard the "call" it means not a matter of external meaningless rites and ceremonies, but a deep inward conviction of the heart. We acknowledge Christ as our Master and Teacher. We yield Him our hearts, depend upon Him for guidance and teaching, as the Author and Finisher of our faith.

It is not so much a matter of creed and dogma as it is a renewal of life. Having love in our hearts for our neighbor, fulfilling the commands of Christ our Master, seeking not to acquire riches and power in this life, we lay all our offerings on the altar of the life to come. As followers of the new life we are strangers and foreigners to this present world and have our citizenship in life everlasting.

We try to walk ever in the "light of our great Master's eye."

Thus, we can say, like Paul, when our present ephemeral life comes to a close, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—Church of God Messenger.

WITH CHRIST TO GALILEE

By Lottie E. Young

Two thousand years of reading the beautiful Bible story of the resurrection of the only One who could say, "I am he that liveth, and was dead, and, behold, I am alive for evermore," have opened our eyes to some things which the early followers of Jesus Christ could not understand. Multitudes had come in contact with this Man of Galilee as He, with His disciples, had walked the length and breadth of Palestine. Many had been wonderfully blessed, for He had healed their painful diseases and comforted their troubled hearts. Boys and girls had seen Him in the streets, and some had even felt the touch of His hand upon their heads. People had said, "Never man spake as this man," and His life had made a more profound impression upon the Jewish nation than any other prophet or priest. A few men had left their occupations to follow Him; day after day they saw His deeds and listened to His instructions, but how slow they were to learn the truths He had tried to teach them! While thoughts of the cross were uppermost in His mind, His nearest disciples were more interested in the positions of authority they wanted to have in the kingdom they felt sure He would set up.

But now all the events about which He warned them—His delivery to the chief priests, the condemnation to death by the Roman governor, the cruel mocking and scourging, and finally the cross—had come to pass, and they were left without a Leader, without the One they were sure was the Messiah, who would redeem Israel and make Jerusalem the glory of the world. How eagerly and anxiously a few women who had loved Jesus were waiting for the dawning of the first Easter day when, after a Sabbath of reflection on the beautiful life and cruel death of a precious Friend, they could go to His tomb with the prepared spices and ointment to anoint the dead body. It seems strange to us they could have forgotten such a blessed promise as the one He had given, that after three days He would rise again; but they did, finding only an empty tomb and an angelic being who joyfully announced to the women, "He is risen from the dead, and, lo, he goeth before you into Galilee, there shall ye see him."

The tomb in the garden was fully seventy-five miles from the Galilee where most of the life of Jesus had been spent, and it was "home" to His specially chosen ones. We cannot be sure how many took that long walk, but the twenty-first chapter of John mentions seven who, when Peter at the Sea of Galilee said, "I go a fishing," agreed to go with him; and then the wonderful meeting between the beloved Master and themselves took place, certainly filling their hearts with joy as they realized the truth of His words, "I am the resurrection and the life."

Over and over Jesus said, "Follow me." How far had those who had heard Him done so? The shouting crowds on the street with, "Hosanna to the son of David," when He made His triumphal entrance into Jerusalem riding on an ass in fulfillment of prophecy, followed Him to the temple; Judas followed to the upper room; the eleven disciples followed to Gethsemane; Peter followed "afar off" to the trial hall, but the record is "they all forsook him."

It meant a long hard journey all the way from Jerusalem to Galilee before the disciples could see their risen Lord and turn themselves from self-seekers for earthly glory to men eager to show the world the sacrificial love of One who had said, "Whosoever cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." "Follow me" was not meant for the earliest Christians alone, but for those who through all ages have been willing to "take up the cross daily" and follow Him. How far are we willing to follow Jesus? To the "upper room" where our selfish desires cross His commands, or all the way "to Galilee," there to find the Friend who sticketh closer than a brother? The way to Galilee may be rough, with many trials before we can see Him; and yet harder is the road on which life holds so many earthly pleasures our feet are apt to slip aside from the "strait and narrow" path which leads to life eternal. Jesus said, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God," and we know the promised "crown of life" will be given only to those who are "faithful unto death." Each day brings the resurrection nearer, if we are asleep, or translation, if we are awake, when Jesus calls; so "let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

A Prayer for Peace

Lord of the nations, let no nation reign
To crush another. Free us from the stain
Of blood and slaughter—let us not forget
The loving, kind example Christ has set.
God help us lift the Golden Rule so high
That its bright words will flame against the sky:
"Do unto others as ye would that they Do unto you," and then will come the day—
The crushed will rise, the bound will find release,
And we shall know the blessedness of peace.

—Grace Noll Crowell in The War Cry.

Marred as it is by the mistakes of faltering human hands, in our eyes it is still the most blessed of all lands of earth—our country! With increased interest and desire we pray for its coming glory, when the land we love will willingly and joyfully come under the dominion of the King of kings, for such we believe is to be its splendid destiny. Then the rugged grandeur of the New England hills will reflect the glory of our God, the undulating prairies of the Middle West speak eloquently of His presence, the snow-crowned mountains lift their heads above the clouds to echo the story, while the tides that wash the sands of the Pacific slope will bear the same glad message round the earth: "God rules America!"

My Country

THE religion of Jesus Christ is essentially a religion of patriotism. It inspires a fervent love of country in the hearts of its adherents and teaches them to recognize the sacredness of even human governments. It commends their present rulers to them as divine appointees and the rightful objects of their prayers. It makes respect for law and obedience to man-made ordinances an obligation due to God. It raises patriotic impulses and emotions from a position in which they appeared merely as expressions of sentimental fervor and places them upon a lofty plane of spiritual devotion.

Christianity, as represented in the gospel of the kingdom of God, goes even farther than this. It causes its more prayerful and studious believers to perceive that the very soil of their native land is holy because it belongs to God, because it forms a part of the haven of their eternal hopes. Whether that land be the United States, Canada, England, or godless Russia, if it is a territory on this earth, it is a potential province, state, or dominion of the coming kingdom of the heavenly Father, the eternal home of His redeemed!

What a difference this makes in one's viewpoint! How much it adds to the interest he feels in the land of his birth to know that from the historic shores of Massachusetts to the Golden Gate of California, the entire country over which floats the stars and stripes is God's territory, a part of His future kingdom of glory!

Religion and Politics

WE SOMETIMES hear men speak of "religious philosophy," and of "political science." With regard to the technical meaning of these terms both would seem to be misnomers, for philosophy, while literally meaning the love of wisdom, in practical usage signifies "the knowledge of phenomena as explained by, and resolved into, causes and reasons, powers and laws," as deduced from human observation and experience. In reality religion, that is, the Christian religion, is a positive revelation from God, and in no way dependent upon man's reasoning powers for its existence. As thus seen religion is a finished product, a completed system of spiritual knowledge, subject to neither subtractions nor additions except as God may open up the minds of men to grasp more fully that which has already been revealed.

Politics on the other hand is a philosophy rather than a science, in that science primarily means knowledge, definite ascertained facts that are obtained from the study of the unchangeable laws of nature, while politics in reality is as diversified as the variable trends of the human mind. True science, like revelation, is, theoretically, positive, but politics is amenable to all the deviating influences that man's prolonged experiments in government have engendered.

The religion of Jesus Christ provides a complete and unchangeable system of world government that will meet every demand, both spiritual and material, for all eternity.

The Nation and the Christ

By Arlen Marsh

ODDLY enough, the impression is held by many that following in the footsteps of Jesus Christ precludes patriotism, that the Messiah's teachings call for the abolition of the very natural pride in his country possessed by every loyal citizen. That this impression is partially true cannot be denied, but that it is altogether correct is a decidedly erroneous contention.

Certainly, the Savior's sermons would not lead men to any such expression as that of Daniel Webster: "Let our object be our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country"; but it is also certain that those sermons in no instance deny loyalty to the government that permits freedom of religion and that offers a safe haven to all who may become its citizens.

It is to be assumed that the Apostle Paul was more nearly without sin following his conversion than are the majority of us today; yet, to give a pre-publication quotation from The Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly (lesson one, fourth quarter, 1933), "Paul apparently found satisfaction in knowing himself to be a Roman citizen by birth. His sense of loyalty to the government that granted him its protection and freedom is expressed in Romans 13:1-7, where he asserts that the civil officers of the Roman Government were ministers of God at whose hands no righteous man had anything to fear. Loyalty to the government of which he was a citizen was one of the elements of character that contributed to his success as a missionary in the Roman Empire."

Paul not only practiced patriotism, however; he actually preached it under the inspiration of God. In 1 Timothy 2:1-3 he wrote, "I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour." His demand in Colossians 3:2 to "set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth" cannot be construed to signify that the Christian should have no love for his fellow men; no more can it be said to indicate that patriotism, love of country, is a fault.

There is no doubt whatever that the Christ made no assertions which could be taken to mean that loyal affection for a government founded for the purpose set forth in the constitutional preamble of this nation should not exist. On the contrary, the Messiah's every teaching was to the same end that "we, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America." Jesus said nothing that would prohibit loyalty to such a government as this.

Criticism of all forms of government is rampant. Taxes, socialism, capitalism, monarchism, and republicanism all undergo a constant censorship. This in itself is good, since it constitutes an effective check on the rulers of the world; but unfortunately prejudice against various laws has created an abiding desire to disobey not merely the laws against which that prejudice primarily is directed, but all laws. No patriotic attempt to make a better government here exists; indeed, in it lies merely a rebellion against God. As Paul expressed it in Romans 13:1, "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers (secular rulers). For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God."

The Apostle in this statement was not relying upon his own knowledge, but upon divine inspiration. There remains no doubt as to his meaning, either in this or in the following assertion: "Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation." Penalties for disobedience to men's laws, as long as they stay within the bounds laid down by God, are exacted not only by men themselves, but by Jehovah as well. True Christianity, like true patriotism, consists in obedience to law because it is law, whether the law refer to murder or to rules of the road.

Paul continues his remarks in direct contradiction to those who declare plainly that all government is rotten to the core. Nor were the conditions at the time of his writing one whit better in the Roman Empire than they ever have been anywhere. Sensuality was allowed full play. Honest

A Prayer

O Thou whose equal purpose runs
In drops of rain or streams of suns,
And with a soft compulsion rolls
The green earth on her snowy poles:
O Thou who keepest in Thy ken
The times of flowers, the dooms of men,
Stretch out a mighty wing above—
Be tender to the land we love!

If all the huddlers from the storm
Have found her hearthstone wide and warm;
If she has made men free and glad,
Sharing with all the good she had;
If she has blown the very dust
From her bright balance to be just,
O, spread a mighty wing above—
Be tender to the land we love!

—Author Unknown.

men were incarcerated for years at the whim of a ruler; Christians endured horrible persecution. Yet, despite all this, Paul found it in him to say, "For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise for the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil."

Taxation in Rome was far more confiscatory than taxation in this nation, wherein is continuous complaint regarding the terrible burden borne by the taxpayer. Yet both the Christ and Paul taught plainly to "pay ye tribute also" (that is, pay tribute as well as obey law). Efforts to reduce taxation are not denied to any man, but no opportunity is left to refuse payment on biblical grounds.

Combining all of these facts, then, in brief summary, there is this: the patriot is foremost a Christian, but secondarily every Christian should be a patriot; and, above all things, obedience to every law of man not contrary to the laws of God is required by Jehovah, regardless of that law's intrinsic worth or importance. The Apostle finally states the cause for such a patriotic, Christian obedience in a single sentence: "Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake," not only for fear of punishment, but also out of desire to obey. Undeniably the Christian is a patriot.

Old Wagon Roads

---

WE REMEMBER how rough and full of ruts the old roads were, while now we have roads as smooth as a tabletop. Yet experience in driving tells us that the modern roads are far more dangerous to travel. They are so smooth that the slightest trace of moisture turns them into a sheet of glass. Then is our skill called for, as we must know just how to meet each emergency. On one of the old wagon trails all we had to do was let the horses take their own way down the road. If we were traveling this road now, the ruts would help to a small extent to guide us on our way.

This also applies to our spiritual life. We have had smooth roads all our lives and have found travel over our course easy until the time we have accepted as our pilot the One who is the Way, Truth, and Life.

Immediately we seem to hit a rough piece of road. Then, like all motorists, we back up and hunt a smoother highway. But this is the wrong road to travel, for we find by using our common sense, backed up by the Scriptures, that whenever we have reached a place where things are not rough and hard to cross we have either detoured or have selected the wrong fork of the road.

We are told to rejoice in overcoming all manner of evil, and we know that there are always better things ahead for us. Also, to those who overcome will be granted to sit on the throne of Christ. Yet when the time comes for us to show our spirit and faith, we say it is so hard to do so.

If we were permitted to return in mortal life to the time of Christ, how much more reason we would have to complain! Would any one of us undergo the torture and agony of the cross or even suffer as those faithful disciples and early Christians did? Would we even suffer as the brave mortals of the Dark Ages did, that we might still have that most published book, the most enduring book, ever known—the Bible? We can complain of the hard times, the depression, and lack of the necessities of life; yet the disciples were worse off than we are or ever will be.

Sometimes it is too hard for us to spend three or four hours a week on Sundays in the study of His Word. We must have short services because we are afraid that our meals will be a little late. To those who are in that condition: How do you expect to spend your time if you are of the church class when Jesus comes? For we shall be helpers in teaching the residue of men of the Word of God.

"And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest awhile: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure, so much as to eat." We know that it would be hard for us to go on without resting or eating. Was that a rough road to travel?

Think how happy the disciples must have been to spend their time and talents in His service, with His help and leadership!

We find that all those who were following Christ suffered all manner of punishment and torture traveling that rough road for Christ.

Some will say, "I am a Christian and do not have temptations, nor can I sin." God have mercy on all such, for they think they are better than Christ, since we find that He was "tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." He was without sin not because it was impossible for Him to sin, but because He obeyed His Father in all things.

So, if we are not meeting temptations, we are on the smooth, wide road to destruction. There are bound to be all manner of trials and temptations after we have given up this life and have accepted Christ as our Guide and Example. Rejoice when we are tempted, for it shows that we are still on the rough road of trials and tribulations and are still following Him into that perfect life for which we long and pray.

LIFE AND SIN

By George B. Aldridge

"But the Adversary answered, 'He has saved his own skin! A man will let all he has go, to preserve his life.'"—Job 2:4, Moffatt.

AT THIS season of the year, life in all its ramifications is seen at its best. Who wants to die? Not me, although I am upon the eve of threescore and ten years. In my home wherever I look I see roses of various kinds and colors. When I spray, several robins begin hopping around; and as a worm shows itself, a robin soon makes one worm less. As it descends into its crop, it turns its head and seems to smile up at me and say, "Thank you; do it again." I throw out bread crumbs for them.

A little boy like one of those Sister Gesin is teaching each week was doing this.

A gentleman passing said to him, "Son, that is God's business to feed the birds."

"Yes," answered the boy, "I know, but I love to help Him, too."

Somewhere I have read these words:

"Ye curious minds, who roam abroad,
And trace creation's wonders o'er,
Confess the footsteps of your God,
And bow before Him, and adore!"

I am not familiar with the science of ornithology, ichthyology, or zoology. To me it is simply birds, fish, and animals. Yet I love to observe them and mark how happy they all seem to be. Their life consists of eating, sleeping, and seeing that their race is continued.

Since my visit to the ornithological department in the New York Museum of Natural History my love and respect for birds has become so great that I hate to look upon a picture of a man carrying a gun and a string of dead birds. In this museum are specimens of every known species of birds, including their nests and eggs, found upon the Western Hemisphere, from the arctic tern (sterna arctica) to the penguin (aptenodytes patachonica), which inhabits the antarctic regions. I cannot conceive of any person who, after seeing this wonderful display, could leave the building without lifting up his heart to God who created them all and endowed them with such marvelous instinct. Yet each of their generations passes away, and they are remembered no more.

But man is endowed with such reasoning faculties that he may exercise them in obeying his Creator and thus obtain life on a plane and environment which is impossible for our minds, however educated or cultured at present they may be, to grasp or comprehend. The scripture which most nearly expresses my thought is found in Romans 2:7: "For he will render to every one according to what he has done, eternal life to those who by patiently doing good aim at glory, honour, and immortality."—Moffatt.

In these days we hear a great deal about the love of God. "But anger and wrath to those who are wilful, who disobey the Truth and obey wickedness—anguish and calamity for every human soul that perpetrates evil, for the Jew first and for the Greek as well, but glory, honour, and peace for every one who does good, for the Jew first and for the Greek as well. There is no partiality about God."

To be humble, I understand, is to be modest, meek, and to eliminate from our lives all self-interest. But unfortunately humility is often of the "Uriah Heap" quality, as Dickens so skilfully portrays in David Copperfield.

Dr. Samuel A. Elliott well says that we must remember that the religious life is not all a matter of meek submission. To be genuine, it must have in it also a touch of fire and a breath of flame. It is not all passionless humility. There is a demand for the power of righteous wrath to go hand in hand with the gentler qualities that we are accustomed to call Christian. Dr. Elliot calls our attention to the fact that in the nature of Jesus all recognize forbearance, humility, and self-sacrifice; and these qualities have too often absorbed attention. These things which go straight to our hearts are apt to make us forget the sterner side.

Art and poetry often serve to distort our view of Jesus. They show us the meekness and longsuffering, but they have neglected the fearless energy of His career. We remember that Jesus said, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." We forget that He also said, "Bind him hand and foot, and cast him into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." We remember the saying, "Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you"; but we are likely to forget His other saying, "Ye serpents, ye offspring of vipers, how shall ye escape the judgment of hell?"

The severity belonged to His nature just as much as the humility; and as we lose sight of the ro-

New Things

New every moment is the love
Our wakening and uprising prove,
Through sleep and darkness safely brought,
Restored to life, and power, and thought.

New mercies each returning day
Hover around us while we pray:
New perils past, new sins forgiven,
New thoughts of God, and Christ in heaven.

—Selected.

bust manliness, we miss the real Jesus. He drew men to Him by His tenderness; but He is coming again, and then another attribute of His character will be revealed as He inaugurates a new epoch in the world's history. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."—Isaiah 55:6, 7.

I am not considered a preacher, but I am satisfied that there is an imperative call today for those called to preach to speak in plain and searching words about sin and to make men feel what God thinks of sin. It is only as we catch Jesus' abhorrence of sin that we understand Romans 6:23: "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

In these days of psychology a murderer hires a skilled psychologist to prove to the jury that he was insane when he committed the crime. If he is wealthy, he usually is considered insane and is committed to an asylum for the criminal insane. After a few months another psychologist is hired who proves that he is now sane; the court releases him, and the whole farce is soon forgotten. Psalm 7:11 reads, "God judgeth the righteous (margin, God is a righteous Judge), and God is angry with the wicked every day."

Here is a paragraph I read in a sermon published sixteen years ago: "So that immortality is a free gift of God to all those who believe in His Son Jesus Christ, and serve Him, and to none others. The great scheme of human redemption by the voluntary sacrifice of the Son of God, upon the cross, as an atonement for sin, whereby men could recover the love and favor of God, and attain to immortality, was not known under the old dispensation of Moses.

"It was Christ who revealed that, and who according to the Apostle 'brought life and immortality to light through the gospel,' not through the law; and hence he says that those who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, honour, and immortality, shall find eternal life. And if we are to seek it, how can we possess it by nature?

"And, brethren, the multitude of passages in the New Testament, which speak of death and not life, as being the normal condition of fallen men, and the fate of the lost hereafter, prove to demonstration, that the doctrine of man's natural immortality is a pure human fiction."

Sunday, June 18, we studied the resurrection of Christ. What a glorious lesson! Jesus was a living example of deliverance from death and the grave. We saw in this fact hope for our glorious future with Him. He is now the resurrection, the way, and the life. What a significance these texts now have for us who believe: "He that hath the Son hath life"; "we have passed from death unto life"; "God hath given unto us eternal life"; "whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath everlasting life."

So daily we mentally feed upon His words (symbolized by His flesh, for He was the Word made flesh). If we do this, then we abide in Him, and He abides in us. This means that we have eternal life reserved for us; and when we are changed or raised from the dead, then that life will indeed be ours.

What joy and comfort these words are to me: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life; (for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;) that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full."—John 1:1-4.

A Mr. A. D. Cosgrove, called the "Burbank of Cotton," has succeeded in producing a new kind of cotton which averages fourteen locks to the boll, instead of five, the usual number. While the discovery seems to come at an inopportune moment, because it was only a little while ago that a monument to the boll weevil was erected in one of the cotton states, yet really it is all for the good of man; and when these dunderheads of financiers have made their last stand for selfishness and the Lord God Almighty takes full control of earth's affairs, the new kind of cotton will be a blessing to all mankind.—The Golden Age.

A PSALM OF THE GOOD TEACHER

The Lord is my Teacher:
I shall not lose the way to wisdom.

He leadeth me in the lowly path of learning,
He prepareth a lesson for me every day;
He findeth the clear fountains of instruction,
Little by little He showeth me the beauty of the truth.

The world is a great book that He has written,
He turneth the leaves for me slowly;
They are all inscribed with images and letters,
His face poureth light on the pictures and words.

Then am I glad when I perceive His meaning,
He taketh me by the hand to the hilltop of vision;
In the valley also He walketh beside me,
In the dark places He whispereth to my heart.

Yea, though my lesson be hard, it is not hopeless,
For the Lord is very patient with His slow scholar;
He will wait awhile for my weakness,
He will help me to read the truth through tears.

Surely Thou wilt enlighten me daily by joy and by sorrow:
And lead me at last, O Lord, to the perfect knowledge of Thee.—Henry Van Dyke.

Who Owns the Wool?

IN LAW and reason the wool on sheep belongs to the owner of the sheep. If a man owned sheep, and sold them, he could not afterwards enforce a claim to the wool they might grow. The right in the wool follows the right in the sheep. The wool is an appurtenance growing out of sheep. God's people are God's sheep. They are His by creation, by preservation, by redemption, by their own consent. There never was a better title to any property. This title holds the sheep and the wool. The sheep cannot hold property because they are property themselves. The wool is theirs only as their skins are theirs and their eyes and feet by way of accommodation. The supreme title is in God and this title holds against all comers. Our times are in His hands. Whether one of us lives a day is wholly with God. How we shall die, as well as when, is with God. While men live, move, and have their being in God, they must allow His right to do what He will with His own.

Not only are the sheep the property of the Creator, but the goats are also. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." That title takes in everything. Rebellion can never overreach the Divine sovereignty over all men and everything. "The commandment is exceedingly broad" because the Divine authority is as limitless as creation. We have made a poor study of the Bible if these simple truths have not lodged themselves in our hearts. Conversion comes simply as a recognition of the Divine ownership in us. It is an acceptance, on our part, of our proper relation to our Creator and Redeemer.

The greatest question in the world today is: Who owns the wool? Or, to drop the figure, To whom does the property, the gold, the silver, the cattle, and all, belong? If that is settled on the right principle, the whole question of Christian living is far advanced towards a glorious settlement. Until it is settled, nothing is settled aright. Or, in other words, if we settle our financial relation to God on the right principle, our lives are bound up with God's in such a way that we can never go far wrong.

The mightiest controversy of the age is over "rights in wool." It is, or ought to be a controversy both in the pulpit and among Christians in the pews of every church in Christendom till God's right is admitted and acted on. To flinch on this fundamental doctrine is to trifle with the greatest practical question the world confronts. Let God's right to the wool of His own sheep, to say nothing of the hair of the goats—I say, let God's right be settled, and we are at the opening of a new era in the world's history. The triumphant march of God's army is slowed up, waiting for us to settle the wool question. There can be but one adjudication, and that is, that whosoever owns the sheep owns the wool also.

Shear the sheep? Yes, frequently and close. The pastors are the shepherds; and it is their business to feed the sheep, care for them, and shear them. A shepherd who neglects to shear the sheep ought to be turned off. He is an unfaithful servant of the Great Owner. Pastors need to face this question. They must face it; for the time is at hand when pastors will be judged according to their works, not by their dignity or their pretenses, but their work, and one of the works is to shear the sheep.

But the question has two sides: God's side and our side. Is it not hard on the sheep to shear them? Not at all. It is good for them in every way. If sheep are not sheared, they become unhealthy. How many of God's saints are surfeited with the things of this world! Their spirituality is smothered by a plethora of the things of this life. Many are sick because their lives have no outlet. Their affections are turned after their earthly possessions, and not set on things above. One of the best things a pastor can do for his people is to induce them to give liberally to the cause. He is doing the best thing for his people when he brings them to recognize their obligations to God in their financial affairs.

So important is this matter in the churches and in the lives of the people, that it demands special and extremely earnest treatment. Some of the sheep must be cornered and crowded before they will submit to the process clearly taught in God's Word; but they must be sheared.

The question takes on another practical turn. Where our treasure is, there will our hearts be also. This is Christ's word fulfilled in every life. If sheep are not sheared they drop their wool, or the devil picks them. Alas! for the waste of God's money in the service of the world, the flesh, and the devil—and this to the hurt of God's people. Sin costs more than religion, bad habits far more than the most liberal giving to God's cause, if we count money, and what is more than money. Robbery of God is a horrible and undoing sin. Giving to God has a wonderful power to bind the life to Him.

Two sisters, daughters of a wealthy father, were converted and started out side by side in the divine life. The father died and left each a fortune. One became at once a liberal giver. The other withheld more than was meet. The first has been these many years successful, useful, and happy in her simple life, giving more and more constantly, both of herself and her money. The other is withered. She spent her money for the world. In grazing on the Devil's pasture the Devil robbed her of money, of health, of happiness, of usefulness, and now her life is not much but a lament. Each is reaping as she sowed. As surely as we live, Christian giving is a long step toward right living.

One more thought. Money kept back from God becomes a curse to a family, often ruining them, both for time and eternity. This is the testimony of Scripture and human experience. Giving liberally on the right principle is the best possible education and safeguard for a family, and the right principle is the principle of God's ownership of the sheep and the wool. Next to redemption the greatest question in the Christian world today is the question of rights in wool. If God's sheep were properly sheared, they would abound in health, and countless missionaries could be sent, as torchbearers, to every benighted region of the globe. The tears of widows and orphans could be dried, the sick cared for, pastors supported, home illuminated by the Word of God, and the world belted with the light of truth.

This wool question is a tremendous issue in the hearts and lives of Christians and churches. If we settle God's right to the wool of His sheep, we settle the world's destiny.

We feel that if God's children would really pray up, it would not be long until they would PAY UP. It is an almost universal rule that conscientious tithers are people of piety and Prayer.

Friend, take your measure.

“ARE WE AWARE?”

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

“And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.”—Luke 21:34.

THE times in which we are now living are times unlike those which we have ever before seen. They are filled with trouble and unrest all over the face of the earth. Many are running to and fro, and knowledge is increasing. But they are “ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.”—2 Timothy 3:7. “Men's hearts (are) failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth.”—Luke 21:26. “Evil men and seducers . . . wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived.”—2 Timothy 3:13.

And as Paul prophesied that men would be in the last days, so they are: “Lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof.”—2 Timothy 3:2-5.

Because of all these things, there is a time of trouble coming upon this gluttonous, sinful world, and the world is not prepared for it. “Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate: and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it.”—Isaiah 13:9. The Lord says: “I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible.”—Isaiah 13:11.

When our Savior was speaking concerning the day of the Lord, He said, “As a snare shall it come upon all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.”—Luke 21:35. To His brethren He said, “Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.”—Luke 21:36.

It is hard for Christians in these days to find time to study the Bible and to walk in the paths of righteousness because of the greatly distracting influences which the world casts upon us. That is why we have to put forth greater effort to serve the Lord as we should.

Each day that passes without some meditation on the Lord leaves us farther from Him; and as we drift from Him, we come closer to that group who will be caught as in a snare on the great and terrible day of the Lord. We may not be guilty of surfeiting and being drunk with wine or intoxicating liquor, but we may be drunk with too much of the things about us, the natural, having forgotten the spiritual side of life. We may be overcharged with the cares of this life so that we find no time to spend in study, in meditation, and in fervent prayer.

There is our work of making a living which takes much of our time; there are commercial entertainments which sometimes attract our attention; there are the neighbors we try to keep up with, and the speed of the world and all that goes with it. These things all make it doubly hard to devote our lives to Christ. So many of our friends are not true Christians, and to be companions with them we must do the things they do.

Oh! It is hard sometimes to live as we know Jesus would have us live, but He told us a way that is easy. He said, “Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.”—Matthew 11:28-30. Does Jesus really mean that His yoke is easy and His burden is light? Yes, He means what He says, and every word is true. If we do cast our burdens upon Him who is able to save us, we shall find that His yoke is easier than we expected. If we give ourselves wholly to Him, we do not have to turn from the world, for it will turn from us.

Let us learn more about Jesus, and we shall love Him more and we shall not be caught as in a snare, but He will keep us “from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.”—Revelation 3:10.

ATHEISM CONFOUNDED

THERE is no truth more grandly illustrated and clearly developed in the material world—the book of nature—than the fact of an Almighty Power lying back of the wonderful phenomena of nature's great exhibitions. To deny this truth and to obscure this light is to oppose the clearest evidence touching any one subject of which humanity has any knowledge.

There seems to be a demand made upon all who can read the handiwork of Deity and who are settled in their minds respecting the evidences of His existence and who do not "believe that God is everything and everything is God," as some affirm, to present logical arguments and convincing discourses upon the great theme of God's existence and of His sovereignty over the universe. This is apparent since infidelity of the boldest type is stalking in every possible place where it can get a foothold and defying the humble and faithful ones to produce their cause and show forth their strong reasons.

CAUSE AND EFFECT

We think it must be obvious to every candid mind that it is a correct way to reason from cause to effect. This system of reasoning holds good when applied to moral as well as to material things. There are no moral, physical, or political changes that occur in our world, but what there can be found a cause to produce those changes. Again, wherever we can find an effect in the universe, we may conclude that there was a cause to produce that effect and that the cause existed prior to the effect. From an effect we can learn something of the nature, power, and efficiency of the cause that produced it.

Whatever exists must have a cause of its existence in itself or outside of itself, or it must have been brought into existence by a pre-existing cause. Does the universe have the cause of its existence in itself? We respond in the negative. The world did not make itself; if so, where did the first particle of matter come from, out of which the universe was formed? Does not the wonderful arrangement of the universe show conclusively that it is an effect produced by a previously existing cause? The universe has an existence. It therefore owes its existence to a cause antecedent or outside of itself, adequate to account for its being what it is. Since, then, nonentity cannot be the cause of real existence, something must have existed from all eternity as the great first cause of all things, both visible and invisible.

If there is intelligence exhibited in the effect, the cause or agent that produced it must be intelligent. To illustrate this point: Suppose a man builds a house; having completed it in all of its departments, he can say the house is, that is, it exists, it is made. Now the cause of the existence of the house does not lie within itself, but outside of itself, and existed prior to the building of the house. The house exhibits the fact that an intelligent agent produced it. The intelligence is not in the house, but in the man who made it. The power and intelligence of a cause are understood by the work it produces.

The universe exhibits the highest order of intelligence and power. So, then, the cause that produced it must be omniscient and omnipotent, all-knowing and all-powerful; which attributes belong to the great God of the Hebrew prophets and patriarchs.

AN ARGUMENT FROM DESIGN

Let us state it in a syllogistic form. Design supposes a designer. The world everywhere exhibits marks of design. Therefore, the world owes its existence to an intelligent agent or designer.

By design is intended the selection of an end to be attained, the choice of suitable means for its attainment, and the actual application of those means for the accomplishment of the proposed end. Such being the nature of design, it is a self-evident truth that it is indicative of intelligence, will, and power. It is simply saying that intelligence in the effect implies intelligence in the cause. It is a clearly indicated fact that the object designed is distinct and separate from the designer. It is, moreover, true that the intelligence indicated by design is not in the thing designed. The intelligence revealed by a calculating machine or any work of art is not in the material employed, but in the inventor or artist. The mind indicated by the structure of the bodies of plants is not in the plant, but in the being or agent who made them. And in like manner the mind indicated in the world itself is in the great Agent who produced it. There is an obvious difference between the works of God, in this respect, and the works of man.

In every product of human art dead materials are employed, fashioned, and united to accomplish a given purpose; but some of the organized works of nature are animated by the living principle, such as vegetable and animal. In other words, they grow; they are not constructed. In their respect there is a great difference between a house and a human body. But nevertheless, the mind that produced them is external in the things produced, and existed prior to their production. As the plan or idea of a piece of mechanism must have existed in the mind of the inventor and constructed before the machine was made, so the plan of the human body must have existed in the mind of the Maker before it was formed. So also in relation to the universe. The plan must have existed in the mind of the Architect before it was made.

Such is the nature of the argument drawn from design that of necessity it implies an intelligent agent; and, therefore, wherever or whenever we see evidences of design, we are convinced that it refers to the operation of mind. On this ground we are not authorized, but compelled, to apply the argument from design far beyond the limits of human experience, and to say it is just as evident that the universe had an intelligent Creator as that a book had an author. If a man can believe that a book was written by a blind, unconscious force, or by chance, then he may be led to believe that his own material being is but the development of the mushroom or the oyster and monkey, as pantheists and spiritists do. Throughout the vast universe order reigns. In the midst of the endless variety, there is unity. The same laws of gravitation, of light and heat, everywhere prevail. Order is the sure indication of mind and intelligence.

This argument of design is constantly urged by the writers of the Old and New Testaments. In the Psalms we read, "He that planted the ear, shall he not hear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see? he that teacheth man knowledge, shall he not know?" "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse."—Romans 1:20. Here the argument is clearly developed that God is made known and understood by the things which are made, "even his eternal power and Godhead." These are only a few of the many scriptures that might be brought forward to show that this argument of design is made prominent by the inspired writers of the Bible. Wherever there is an exhibition of design, there is associated with it the fact of the intelligence of the designer.

Whenever there is intelligence manifested in the cause that produces the effect and also in the agent that produces design, there is implied the fact of the personality of the designer; because there cannot be intelligence disconnected from personality. Since, then, the universe everywhere presents evidence of intelligence and design, we are driven to the conclusion that the agent that produced them must possess personality and intelligence. And this accords with the testimony of the Apostle where he says: "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person."—Hebrews 1:3.

The grandeur of the argument of design is only seen when the principles involved therein are practically applied to material things. It must, we think, be obvious to every intelligent mind, when the facts are taken into consideration connected with the subjects of design and cause and effect and applied to the surrounding objects of nature, that an all-wise self-existent, omnipotent Being formed this wonderful arrangement which we behold in the universe as we gaze into the firmament of the heavens.—A. W. Sibley in Present Truth Messenger.

"Many Christians create their troubles by gratifying instead of mortifying the flesh, thus yielding to the lustful flesh and the spirit of the world, which is saturated with the spirit of the devil. Just as long as Satan can keep people's affections set on things and customs of this world, he succeeds in preventing their contact with God and their preparation for an entrance into the kingdom of God."

SUFFICIENT GRACE

"My grace is sufficient for thee."—2 Corinthians 12:9.

GRACE is a charming word. It is one of Paul's favorites; for it is found twice as often in his epistles as in all the rest of the New Testament. Dr. Findlay points out that for Paul "it includes the sum of all blessing that comes from God through Christ."

Another word for grace is favor, especially manifested as kindness or goodness bestowed freely and lovingly upon those in no wise worthy of it. In the case of our text, it is God's lovingkindness bestowed upon us for the sake of Jesus Christ, the power of Christ resting upon us.

The Apostle Paul reminds us in this chapter that God had been pleased to vouchsafe to him marvelous visions and revelations, "unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter." This put Paul in possession of superior knowledge and power which might quite naturally lead him to feel above his fellow men. It is evident that God foresaw this very danger, and to save the Apostle from a "superiority complex" sent a great trial into his life which he calls "a thorn in the flesh, a messenger of Satan to buffet me." And it is twice repeated that the purpose of this "thorn" was "lest I should be exalted above measure." What the thorn was we do not know, but Paul calls it an infirmity and enumerates some of his trials in verse 10 as "infirmities, reproaches, necessities, persecutions, distresses."

For the removal of this annoyance he besought the Lord three times in earnest prayer, and God was pleased to answer, not by removing the annoyance, but by promising "grace sufficient" to bear the infirmity. So sufficient was that grace that Paul writes of it, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." God's grace, in this instance, is seen to be "the power of Christ resting upon him," transforming his weakness that fainted under the trial into strength to bear and overcome it; for when he was weak in himself, then he was strong in the Lord. Christ's strength was thus made perfect through human weakness.

Whatever your trial, whether personal or domestic, in your business life or in your religious experience, outward or inward, if you will commit it to God and trust it with Him, you will find that He will either remove it from you or will prove His grace sufficient for you. Thus, the thing which to you may be so humiliating and hard to bear God will use to discipline your will and mold your life into the very likeness of His own dear Son.

"God has not promised skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathway all our lives through;
God has not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow, peace without pain;
But God has promised strength for the day,
Rest for the labor, light for the way,
Grace for the trials, help from above,
Unfailing sympathy, undying love."

"BE YE OF AN UNDERSTANDING HEART"

"GIVE OF YOUR BEST TO THE MASTER"

ONCE there was a girl who could play the piano. She took lessons from the very best teacher in town. She loved to play, too. Her home was always filled with the strains of Chopin or Mendelssohn or Saint-Saens.

Then one day the president of the Young People's Society of her church asked her to play a piano solo at the next meeting.

She was sorry, but she couldn't. She couldn't because—well, because she was going to a movie! It was one she had wanted to see for a long time, and at last it had come to town. So she couldn't go to Young People's meeting and play.

There was a boy who could play the piano, too. He hadn't taken many lessons, but he could play hymns. So he played for the Young People's meeting.

Later, at the church business meeting, some one suggested the girl for Sunday school pianist. She would have liked that honor. But the others shook their heads. The girl played beautifully, but she wasn't dependable. So the boy became the Sunday school pianist.

Everyone does something well. God gives us all skill in something, but sometimes it is hard to remember that we owe our service to God first. If you can sing, sing in the choir; if you are eloquent, speak for Christ; and if you like to write, won't you send something to this page?

THE SON OF GOD

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

God's two sons. Luke 1:35 and 3:38.

Difference in their natures. 1 Corinthians 15:45-49.

Was the second spiritual and immortal in earthly life, or so when Paul wrote these words? Notice verses 42-44. Was He in nature, God, angel, divine, or in any way more than man, while in the flesh? Romans 8:3; Philippians 2:5-8; Hebrews 2:9, 14, 16, 17. Is He still man? 1 Corinthians 15:47; 1 Timothy 2:5. Was He ever anything else? How different from other men? Hebrews 4:15; 7:26; 1 Peter 2:22.

As Son of God is there a sense in which He was equal to God? John 5:18; 10:33. Was He necessarily equal to God in immortality of nature because He came into life miraculously? Notice by Job 33:4 that the natural sons come into life exactly as He did, by God's Spirit; and yet the natural sons are not, because of that, divine in nature. Isaac was born after the Spirit in a special way. Galatians 4:29. Was he natural?

All men sons of God, on the natural plane. Acts 17:28, 29. Only Christ was ever called "the" Son and the "only begotten."

So He was both Son of God and Son of man at the same time. (He called Himself "the Son of man" the oftenest of any title; and by such, as Psalm 8 and Ezekiel 2:1, "son of man" means a human being.)

When did He become equal to His Father in nature of immortality? 1 Corinthians 15:42-44; 1 Peter 1:21; Romans 6:9. Compare the words power and glory in these references. Notice one of the words again in Romans 1:4, in relation to His Sonship. See Hebrews 7:16, where it occurs again. Powerful for what blessed purpose? Isaiah 63:1.

In Acts 1:1 His whole earthly ministry is put into two classes. Name them. Both classes performed by God's Spirit:

(1) John 3:34; 8:28; 12:49, 50.

(2) John 14:10; Acts 10:38; Luke 11:20; Matthew 12:28.

These words and works were the equality with God that Sonship gave Him. (1) Luke 10:21, 22; John 3:35; 15:15; 16:12-15. (2) John 5:19, 20; Colossians 1:19; 2:9.

In these two respects He was not only equal with God, but identical with Him. John 10:30; 14:9; 17:11, 22.

Representatively, He was God. John 1:18; Matthew 11:27; 10:40.

God's blessed motive in begetting an only Son and sending Him as a gift to us. John 3:16; 1 John 4:9, 10; Romans 5:8; 8:32.

To beget the same state in us. 1 John 4:11; John 15:12; Ephesians 4:31, 32; 1 John 4:19 and 3:16.

Thus a perfect salvation, in brotherly love now, and in immortality in future, results from His being God's Son.

A TRIP TO THE HOLY LAND

It's vacation time, and the boys and girls of the Bible Scrapbook Club will meet me in New York City, and there we will take passage on a long, swift steamer, for we are going to the Holy Land. Over the rolling waves of the Atlantic we sail, disembarking at Cherbourg on the coast of France, where we take the evening express for Paris. We arrive there around two in the morning, and the lights of this gay city blink drowsily, much like the lights in our own home town at that hour. We are not detained by the glitter of the French capital, however, for our eyes are on a much more important spot.

We take the night train for Italy and catch a glimpse of the Alps at sunrise, vineyards and gardens, small cities and larger, until we arrive at Naples. Many beautiful spots we must hasten by if we would reach our destination, though even at this great distance we are only ten days from home, so swiftly have we traveled.

A beautiful white yacht carries us from Naples, plowing its way through the tranquil Mediterranean waters in brilliant sunshine and tropical nights. The African coast comes into view; a stop at Alexandria is made for exchange of freight and passengers. How different the people look! Egyptians dressed in white cotton, Turks with their red fez, Arabs in brown, Greeks in embroidered coats, and a venerable Hebrew with gray beard dressed in a black robe with a hood and a yellow scarf. For all nations meet in this crowded harbor city.

On we go toward Palestine! Soon into view come the flat-topped houses of Jaffa, where we anchor a mile from shore, and tiny boats sail out to meet us. As seen from the sea, this city, called Joppa in Bible times, looks like a hill of sparkling color rising abruptly out of the water. In Palestine, 7,800 miles from home, just fifteen days since we steamed out past the Statue of Liberty! We'd like to stop in Jaffa and walk over the streets that Dorcas walked on her errands of mercy to the poor, following the example of her Savior, but we must hasten. For just now we are going to follow another woman, leading a victorious army against the enemy, more than three thousand years ago.

Jerusalem, called Jebus at that time, lies about fifty miles to the southeast of us, and in between were Ramah and Bethel, where this woman held court. But we journey by camel northward along the fertile seacoast plain, past orange groves and palm trees, till we come to a Y-shaped region, the remarkable Plain of Esdraelon, in the northeast corner of which is Mt. Tabor, the battle field of the ones in whom we are interested. This plain is the scene of more battles than any other field in the world. It was called in Old Testament times the "Valley of Jezreel" or the "Valley of Megiddo," from the two cities at the southeastern entrance; in the New Testament, "Armageddon." The last victory on this field was that of Allenby in 1917, but there will be another great conflict there in the future. How many of you boys and girls know who will be the great General then?

I hope all of you whom we have left at home can see in your mind this great plain, flanked by Mt. Tabor, Mt. Gilboa, and Mt. Carmel, the River Kishon flowing through it figuring in the battle, also. For this region is the scene of much Old Testament history which we will study this quarter.

We are ready now for our handwork. Make a little book as you did last week. Print "Deborah" on the outside. Then write the story of her life—how the Canaanites fortified themselves in the mountains and determined not to allow the Israelites to settle in their fertile valley; how for twenty years their oppression was endured, until God told Deborah to go up and conquer them; how with ten thousand men she and her general opposed Sisera with his nine hundred "chariots of iron" and his "multitude," and came off victorious because God was their greater General.

Don't forget to tell how Barak refused to go unless Deborah went with him, and that the honor would come to a woman (not herself); how the mighty Sisera was slain, and the Israelites subdued Jabin, the Canaanite king, and had peace for forty years. Then draw a map showing Ramah, Bethel, the scene of the battle, with Mt. Tabor in the background, and the river flowing through the plain. The younger ones may write a few sentences about Deborah with Mother's help; paste the picture you receive at Sunday school on July 16, and copy these lines:

D is Dependence which Deborah placed in God;
 E is with Energy she followed His word.
 B is for Barak, her leader of men;
 O is for Onward the Israelites went.
 R is for Ramah, where Deborah held court;
 A is the Action her wisdom called forth.
 H is high Honor she gave to the Lord,
 When she sang of the victory given her by God.

DEBORAH

Judges 4 and 5

Devotional Reading: Psalm 46:1-3, 8-11

GOLDEN TEXT

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Leadership in Emergencies.

Aim: To teach the pupil that those who are led by God are assured of success.

I. The Emergency. (Vv. 1-5.) The opening verses of the chapter inform us that "the children of Israel again did evil in the sight of the Lord, . . . and the Lord sold them into the hand of Jabin king of Canaan." As a result of the oppression under which they suffered they "cried unto the Lord," and He heard their prayer. They had brought the distress upon themselves by their sin; yet God graciously hearkened to their plea for deliverance and provided a way of escape. Such is His attitude toward us. We ourselves are responsible for the suffering that sin brings, but God provides in Christ a deliverer.

II. The Leadership. (Vv. 6-10.) The wisdom and foresight of God is required to provide for future emergencies. Men cannot foresee what is coming to pass, nor can they make the preparation necessary to meet such conditions. God, who sees the end from the beginning, He who is possessed of all power, can both foresee all that is coming and prepare for every situation that is to arise. God furnished a leader for Israel in the emergency here recorded in the persons of Deborah and Barak. In Christ He provides a leader who is able to meet every difficulty that the future can reveal.

III. The Deliverance. (Vv. 13-15; 5:13.) The leader God provided demanded that the people should be up and doing at once. God would provide the means of their deliverance, but they must be prompt in embracing the opportunity so graciously afforded them. When they acted in harmony with God's purpose, for them success came at once, and they were filled with rejoicing. We observe that Deborah and Barak gave thanks for the leaders that God had provided. They took no credit to themselves. They obeyed and served faithfully, but after all it was God who really led them on to victory. They opened their hearts to receive His commands and made ready their hands to obey them. God then used them for the deliverance of Israel.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Deborah: Deborah was a prophetess, and the first verse of our lesson says she "judged Israel at that time." There seems to be some doubt as to whether she was a full-fledged judge in the same degree her predecessors and successors were, but at any rate she is so designated by Scripture, and that is our final authority. She was a God-called leader to deliver Israel from the oppression of Jabin and through her prophecy directed and led Israel back to God. Israel came under the iron hand of their enemies only when they did "evil in the sight of the Lord," and for them to be delivered from their enemies necessitated their being brought back in a repentant manner to God. Deliverance meant a return to God. This is the plan God always followed in delivering Israel. Sin enslaved them, righteousness delivered them. The same is quite true of all nations. "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

Woman: Woman has a place in the great plan and purpose of the Father. She challenges the best in man. A God-fearing woman is priceless, her price is far above rubies and diamonds. The Bible records many outstanding women who have played an important role in God's dealings with man.

On the other hand, woman can be a mighty force for unrighteousness and immorality. Her influence is far-reaching in its effect. Her thoughts and actions are indelibly stamped upon her offspring. As she thinks and acts, so man is lifted or debased, brought nearer to or led farther away from God. The present status of women seems to be a gradual, yes, a revolutionary, departure from God. Read Isaiah 3:16-26 and you have a description of the "daughters of Zion" in the last days, the days when the "Branch of the Lord shall be beautiful" (Isaiah 4:1, 2).—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

The children of Israel had done evil in the sight of God, so they were sold into the hand of the king of Canaan. As usual they cried to God for help, for they knew from whence came their help and in whom they could find strength and refuge.

This time a woman, Deborah the prophetess, was used to deliver the Israelites out of the hands of the Canaanites. Jael was also given strength and courage to drive the nail into Sisera's temple.

The Christian can and should rely on God for strength and help, not only in times of trouble, but at all times. He should live so close to the Father that he may be used in any way the Father sees fit to guide.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

Leadership in Emergencies

The great Nebuchadnezzar learned a lesson that should be learned by every statesman, viz., that God "doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?"—Dan. 4:35. Since God does sometimes guide the nations, it is not strange that in every emergency there has appeared a leader capable of meeting that emergency. "The Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will."—Dan. 4:25.

Abraham was called upon to meet the crisis of idolatry. He met it by leaving the country and settling in another. There he became the father of all the faithful. Moses delivered Israel from Egyptian bondage and taught a new set of laws to God's followers. The Maccabees, Esther, Gideon, the judges, and many others arose from time to time to meet some great need.

Then Jesus came to bring release from the letter of the law and to establish the freedom of the spirit. He met the greatest crisis of the human race. He won the victory over sin and death and is now leading His people little by little toward that land of freedom where there will be "no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."—Rev. 21:4. When His work is completed, all enemies of mankind will have been destroyed. "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped: then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing."—Isaiah 35:5, 6. Jesus is the leader that can meet every emergency.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: A Very Brave Woman.

The Israelites had had many leaders up to the time of our lesson today. Joshua had died. Others had led them. Some were good, some very wicked, and so on to the time of this leader Deborah.

Deborah was a very, very brave woman. One day she said to Barak, leader of her army, "Did not God tell you to take ten thousand men and go take the land away from Sisera?"

Barak said, "I will go if you will go with me."

Deborah said, "I will go."

So Barak gathered his ten thousand men together and with Deborah started to march against Sisera.

But Sisera heard that they were coming, so he gathered all his people together and got his chariots all ready to fight Barak and his men.

Of course, Deborah, Barak, and his men won. Not one of Sisera's men was left. They were all killed.

God was on Deborah's side. But do you not think it was a very brave thing for her to do? Imagine yourself in her place. Tell what you would say. Tell how you think you would feel.—V. C. T.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

The two weeks' special meetings following our June Conference closed Sunday evening, June 25. The preaching was done by our former pastor, Bro. Magaw. He was assisted by our pastor, Bro. Denchfield. It was our privilege to listen to splendid sermons throughout these meetings. They were food for thought and an inspiration to all. We were glad to see five young people confess Christ and obey in baptism. One young married man, Leslie Hamilton, and two of our Sunday school boys, Ernest Hamilton and Warren Edwards, were baptized at Eden Lake, Sunday afternoon, June 18; and two of our Sunday school girls, Marilyn Brossard and Lorraine Gaspar, at Rice Lake, Sunday afternoon, June 25.

Besides enjoying the meetings, we all enjoyed having Bro. and Sr. Magaw and family with us. The people here hold the Magaw family in high esteem, and it was a great pleasure to have them here.

Mrs. Herman Ruhn, Clerk.

INDIANA CONFERENCE NOTICE

The conference business meeting will be held at North Salem on Saturday at 2 o'clock, July 15. Send your delegates.

The conference treasurer will appreciate it if the various churches will also send along with their delegates a contribution to help defray the expense of the meeting.

F. A. Stilson, Pres.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Following the morning service on June 25, fourteen families of our Grand Rapids church folks motored to Dutton, where a bounteous pot-luck dinner was enjoyed with the folks there. At 2:30 we gathered in the church with Sr. Woodward and enjoyed worshipping with her again in the place that was her home church for so many years.

The Lord is continuing to be good to us, and strong hopes are being developed toward enlarging our building before winter. We will appreciate the prayers and thoughtfulness of our people throughout the land that the way may be opened up for this sorely needed increase in room. If the basement to our new church can be constructed this year, we will be able to operate quite comfortably until such time as conditions are suitable for erecting the superstructure.

We are earnestly praying that God may direct us how to serve more effectively.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

GENERAL CONFERENCE REPRESENTATION

The constitution of the General Conference of the Church of God provides for both individual and delegate voting. Each individual member of the Church of God present at any business meeting of the conference has the right to cast his own ballot whenever a vote is taken if he cares to do so. Each state conference through its duly qualified delegates casts the vote of one half the entire membership of that state, while each local congregation that is connected with such state conference casts the vote of one half its membership. Thus the entire membership is represented, and the voting power equally divided between the local congregations and the state conference. Any individual member of such church or conference may cast his own ballot after it is deducted from the delegate vote of both the church and the conference of which he is a member.

Local churches that are not associated with any state conference are entitled to their full membership voting power.

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

It has been a long time since a report has been sent in from the Blair church, but it has not been because there was nothing to report. The work in all departments is going along very nicely.

We still meet on Thursday nights for our Bible study and prayer meeting. Some have expressed the opinion that this is the best service we have. Eighteen were in attendance last week, which does not seem like much of a crowd in comparison with Cleveland's and Grand Rapids' reports. But our congregation is mostly rural, and this is a busy time of the year.

We have enjoyed having Bro. Richard LeCrone with us the last two weeks. He has spoken twice and has taught the mid-week Bible study class. But he is planning to go back to his own work at Lester Prairie, Minnesota, this week.

Our hearts were made to rejoice yesterday when four of our young people accepted Christ. In the afternoon we drove to the Elkhorn River, where Bro. LeCrone baptized the following into Christ: Miss Faye White, Bennington; Glenn Appleby, Kennard; Byron Appleby, Blair; and Leslie LeCrone, Kennard.

This is vacation time. Blair is on Highway No. 30, and if any of the brethren from other parts of the country are going through here, we should be glad to have you stop and worship with us.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A conversation with Mrs. Bleasdale and Hillis shortly after the funeral of their aunt, Sr. Kimball, brought out the following facts in addition to those of the regular obituary notice: after living some time in Paducah, Kentucky, Sr. Kimball returned to Leoni, Michigan, where she was married to LaVirgne J. Kimball in May, 1868, in the same house in which her mother was married on the homestead taken up by her grandfather, James Otis, in 1832. In July, 1868, she and her husband were immersed at Coats Grove by Bro. O. R. L. Crozier, and immediately became acquainted with Bros. Joel A. Simonds, Edwin Hoyt, Ephraim Miller, and Levi Chase. In 1877 they left Grand Rapids, Michigan, and moved to Stockton, California. At Stockton they met Bro. B. F. Cook, Bro. and Sr. Stone, the parents of Sr. B. F. Cook of San Francisco, and Sr. Emma Condon of Cleveland. With Bro. Corbaley of Healdsburg, conferences were often held. In 1878 Sr. Kimball's mother and two sisters were immersed by Bro. Corbaley. Later Bro. Benjamin Wilson was their pastor at Sacramento. In 1897 she moved to Southern California, and lived in South Pasadena and vicinity. Sr. Kimball and her husband lived for over 53 years together, always growing stronger in the faith that they had joined just after their marriage. He died on June 14, 1921, almost exactly twelve years before she followed him in death.

Bro. Smead and his sister Ruth and their mother, Sr. J. E. Hammond, left for Indiana last Thursday. Enroute they expect to stop in Phoenix, Arizona, to see Robert and Eugene Smead, and possibly will spend some time in Iowa with friends there. We shall miss their attendance at all of our Bible classes and services and their cheering company at other times, but trust that we shall see them soon again. Bro. and Sr. Railsback expect to accompany the MacLeod family in their trip East. After the close of the Southern California Conference on July 2 they expect to leave for Indiana in time to enjoy some of its sessions and to do some visiting in Ohio and other points east before returning to Oregon, Illinois, to participate in the Illinois and General Conferences. Just what arrangements will be made for carrying on the work in Los Angeles during their absence has not been determined, but we feel sure that it will be carried on with the usual determination. We are looking forward to a most thrilling summer seeing many of those people about whom we have heard so much, but have never had the privilege of seeing.

Norman John MacLeod.

OYLER - AUSTIN

On Saturday evening, June 24, the marriage vows were solemnized at the home of F. A. Stilson in South Bend, Indiana, by which Mr. Nobel Oyler and Miss Annabel Austin were made life companions.

Mr. Oyler has impressed us as being a young man of noble ideals and character, while the bride, whom we have known from infancy, commands our highest respect as a young woman of sterling character. She is the daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. Leroy Austin.

After a short trip they will be at home about five miles north of Plymouth.

F. A. Stilson.

JEREMIAH CONWAY

In Seattle, Wash., June 11, 1933, Jeremiah Conway, aged 93 years, died.

Bro. Conway was born near Rock River, Illinois, January 1, 1840, the late Mrs. Morrell of Aurora, Illinois, whom some of the older readers will recall, being a sister of his. He was graduated from, and became an instructor in, Rock River College, a Presbyterian school. His first vote was cast for Abraham Lincoln for president, of whom he was ever an ardent admirer, the G. A. R. button always having a place on his coat. He served from 1862 to 1865 in the U. S. army, taking part in many important engagements and witnessing the impressive grand review at the close of the Civil War when 250,000 soldiers marched down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington.

After the war he pioneered in Kansas, breaking the soil and living in a sod house, later going to Arkansas. In 1880 he left that state with two covered wagons for the Pacific Northwest. Other wagons joined the train until he was in charge of 75 covered wagons, the long march terminating at Boise, Idaho. Here he became warden of the penitentiary, and engaged in writing religious newspaper articles under the title of "The Stranger." He pushed on to Portland later, and in 1889 went to Seattle, where he has since made his home.

Bro. Conway was baptized at about 14 years of age, and while still in his teens he began his public work of preaching and debating. He was ordained to the Christian ministry by the Illinois Conference of the Church of God, and ever took great delight in publicly debating theological questions, being a keen and diligent student of the Scriptures. His faith in the soon coming of Christ and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon earth was his greatest comfort and joy, and he earnestly hoped and prayed to live to see his Lord return. His last conversation with the pastor of the Advent Christian Church was regarding present world conditions and the "blessed hope," his last audible words being "the trumpet shall sound."

He was a man of strong character, a keen mind, and a ready tongue. His beloved wife, about four years his junior, has accompanied him for over 60 years since their marriage in Chicago, and now mourns his loss. Together they were a most unique and charming couple, while the wonderful devotion of a son, six daughters, and several grandchildren testify to the love all had for the dear father and mother. It was in the hope of living "one year more" that they traveled to San Diego last December, spending six months there, and shortly after their return our brother was taken with his last illness. The day before the end he indicated his realization of it, also his perfect resignation, and his steadfast hope of the resurrection. He was truly "faithful to the end," and for such "a crown of life which fadeth not away" is reserved.
Lottie E. Young.

MURDOCK CRAIG

Many of our older Michigan workers will remember Bro. Craig, who at the age of 70 fell asleep at his home near Grand Rapids.

Sister Craig has been one of the most beautiful examples of faith that the writer has ever known, and this faith will stand her well in hand now as she faces the loss of husband and companion. Besides Sr. Craig are two daughters and three sons who mourn the loss of a stalwart father.

Bro. Craig had been in failing health for the past few years, and during the last several months had suffered much. He died in a full hope of the resurrection, and was laid to rest June 15, 1933.

A FAITHFUL SOLDIER IS AT REST

In the death of Bro. Jeremiah Conway, whose obituary appears in these columns, the Church of God specifically and the Adventist movement generally have lost a highly talented advocate and also a splendid example of the spiritual value of faith in the Lord's speedy coming.

Bro. Conway was one of the finest characters it has been our privilege to know. In his younger days he was an associate of our beloved Bro. Eychaner, whose influence for good continues to grow long after his active service has come to a close. Both of these splendid men were devout in their study of the Word. With neither of them was the doctrine they taught a mere matter of philosophy, but a profound spiritual experience.

They lived their hope in the Lord's coming!

Our hearts go out in sympathy to the beloved wife who was the faithful companion of Bro. Conway's long journey and who now awaits the glad reunion that will mark the call of our returning Lord.

How applicable to him are the inspired words of David in the thirty-seventh Psalm: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace."

WE APOLOGIZE

An unfortunate error appeared in our announcement last week of the meetings to be held near Hammond, La. We realize it is too late to make an effective correction, but we offer our sincere apology. The notice as sent to us read as follows:

"The Happy Woods Sunday School near Hammond, Louisiana, are making plans for a Jubilee Sunday on July 9, the second Sunday in July. This is in celebration of the 25th anniversary of this Sunday school."

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Owing to a more plentiful supply of original matter for this issue, the editor's contribution on "Present Tense Prophecy" is omitted until next week. The article is entitled "Gods of Gold," and the one to follow will be "The Menace of Coming Prosperity."

A revision of the constitution of the National Bible Institution is advisable in the interest of clarity of expression and to avoid several confusing provisions it now contains. This matter will be brought up for consideration at the forthcoming conference.

The brethren everywhere should feel encouraged by the splendid results of the meeting at Eden Valley, Minn. May God's sustaining blessing abide with those who have taken upon themselves the sacred name of Christ until He comes.

Bro. Leland T. Hanson, Vice President of the National Bible Institution, is attending summer school at Lebanon, Ill. Sr. Hanson, who accompanied her husband south a month ago, has returned to their home in Franklin Grove, Ill., where Bro. Hanson holds the position of superintendent of schools. Bro. Lyman Booth came north with her and is spending a few weeks in Chicago visiting relatives. He expects to be in Oregon for the conference next month.

Sr. Lucille LeCrone, pastor of the Blair, Neb., church, is broadening the field of her activity in a most commendable way. Recently she assisted in the organization of a Sunday school at a country school house near Blair, where she will also hold preaching services every second and fourth Sundays. Eighty-five per cent of the churches established west of the Alleghenies were first organized as Sunday schools. We pray for the success of the new effort.

Again we ask for the united prayers of our people in behalf of the several conferences which are still to convene, and especially on behalf of the General Conference in which all are so vitally concerned.

If you have not already done so, do not fail to read Sr. Carpenter's splendid editorial on the Berean page. It contains a wonderful lesson for older ones as well as for those to whom it is directly addressed.

Owing to Independence Day's coming on Tuesday, our regular day of issue, the paper goes to press earlier this week than is usually the case. Some news items may be delayed a little on this account, but it cannot be avoided.

The poem, "A Psalm of the Good Teacher," on page 6, was selected by Mrs. Mary A. Gesin from Van Dyke's "Out of Doors in the Holy Land." Sunday school teachers will particularly enjoy this book, which gives a beautiful picture of the Holy Land of both Old and New Testaments, as well as the modern setting.

Through an unfortunate error the name of Lucille LeCrone was omitted from the report of the Minnesota State Conference. On Saturday morning, June 10, the "ladies' service," which was in charge of the women, she preached, according to all reports, "a very good sermon; we all enjoyed it very much. We were very glad to have her."

We are very much pleased to learn of the decision of Bro. and Sr. Ezra Railsback of Los Angeles to make the long drive across the country to attend the General Conference. Last year Sr. Railsback received full ministerial recognition by the California churches, and is known to be a deep student of the Word, an unusually successful personal worker, and an interesting speaker.

ETERNITY'S BRINK

RATIONALISM solves nothing. Herbert Spencer, who gave to the evolutionary theory its philosophic basis, repudiated his rationalism shortly before he died, as is plainly set forth in the "Reflections" with which he closes his Autobiography.

Spencer was nearing seventy-five years of age when he penned these "Reflections." He had spent a long lifetime rearing, or attempting to rear, a splendid structure of human knowledge based upon man's reason. He had conceived his synthetic philosophy as a magnificent arch. It was to be a related, unified whole; an "archetechtonic" masterpiece, to use his own word. In this intellectual triumphal arch, man, as in Nebuchadnezzar's image of gold (Dan. 2), was to be deified.

But, as he neared the completion of his beautiful building, the thing began to totter. Something went wrong. This mortar of finite human reason by which base, keystone, and component parts were to be held together began to crumble. Reason, and reason alone, failed him at the end.

And so this wizened, white-haired old philosopher, a frail wisp of a man weighing little more than a hundred pounds; a neurotic physical wreck; enabled to sleep little and that brokenly only by virtue of his one and one-half grains of opium given him regularly; waited upon by servants and carried about in a swinging hammock; unable to converse with friends or concentrate his mind more than ten minutes at a time; without wife, children, or other near relatives in the world; this broken old worshiper at the human shrine, with one feeble hand holding on to his leaning tower of finite wisdom and with the other shading his aging eyes as he gazes out across God's shoreless ocean of infinitude—this old apostle of doubt begins to doubt his own doubt. He begins to ask himself, "What? Whence? Where? To what end?" He begins to realize that he has a "need" as yet unsatisfied; a "wish" for something his philosophy cannot give; a vague "sympathy" stirring within him with things he has all his life spurned. Listen to Herbert Spencer in his Autobiography.

"We find indeed an unreflective mood general among both cultured and uncultured, characterized by indifference to everything beyond material interests and the superficial aspects of things. There are many millions of people who daily see sunrise and sunset without ever asking what the sun is. There are university men, interested in linguistic criticisms, to whom inquiries concerning the origin and nature of living things seem trivial. And even among men of science there are those who, curiously examining the spectra of nebulae or calculating the masses and motions of double stars, never pause to contemplate under other than physical aspects the immeasurably vast facts they record. But in both cultured and uncultured there are lucid intervals. Some at least either fill the vacuum by stereotyped answers, or become conscious of unsolved questions of transcendent moment. Of those who know much, more than those who know little, is there felt the need for explanation. . . . ."

"Then behind all these mysteries lies the all-embracing mystery—whence this universal transformation which has gone on unceasingly throughout a past eternity and will go on unceasingly throughout a future eternity? And along with this arises the paralyzing thought—what if, of all that is thus incomprehensible to us, there exists no comprehension anywhere? No wonder that men take refuge in authoritative dogma! . . . ."

"So it is, too, with our own natures. No less inscrutable is this complex consciousness which, in other shapes, is manifested by animate beings at large—consciousness which during the development of every creature, makes its appearance out of what seems unconscious matter; suggesting the thought that consciousness, in some rudimentary form, is omnipresent.

"Lastly come the unsolvable questions concerning our own fate; the evidence seeming so strong that the relations of mind and nervous structure are such that cessation of one accompanies dissolution of the other; while simultaneously comes the thought, so strange and so difficult to realize, that with death there lapses both consciousness of existence and the consciousness of having existed.

"Thus religious creeds, which in one way or another occupy the sphere that rational interpretation seeks to occupy and fails, and fails the more the more it seeks, I have come to regard with a sympathy based on community of need; feeling that dissent from them results from inability to accept the solutions offered, joined with the wish that a solution could be found."—Sunday School Times.

A PAPER SERMON

ONE DAY, it is related, Queen Victoria visited a paper mill. The owner showed her through the works, not knowing who she was, and among other places, took her to the rag room.

When she saw the filthy rags she exclaimed, "How can these ever be made white?"

"Ah, madam," was the reply, "I have a chemical process by which I can take the color out of these rags."

Before she left he discovered that she was the queen. A few days after the queen found lying upon her table the most beautiful polished paper she had ever seen: on each sheet were her likeness and her name. There was a note which read as follows: "Will the Queen be pleased to accept this paper, with the assurance that every sheet was made from the dirty rags she saw, and I trust the result is such that even the Queen will admire. Will the Queen also allow me to say that I have learned many a lesson in my mill. I can understand how the Lord Jesus can take the poor heathen, and the vilest of the vile, and make them clean, and how though their sins be as scarlet, He can make them white as snow. And I can see how He can put His own name on them: and just as these rags transformed may go into a Royal Palace and be admired, so poor sinners can be received into the Palace of the Great King."—The King's Business.

Religion and Business

“Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And . . . the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.”—Mark 9:23, 24.

I HAVE just been reading Religion and Business by Roger W. Babson. He has one chapter on “The Greatest of Undeveloped Resources—Faith,” and from it I wish to select some quotations. Coming as it does from the pen of a business man and statistician, it is worthy the consideration of some of us whose lives are given entirely to religious work.

“Business men may be surprised at a statistician devoting a chapter to this phase of religion. The temptation naturally is to present religion only as the founder and protector of life, liberty, and happiness. This statement is true, and as a business man I gladly testify that all we have today which is worth while we owe to religion.

“In order, however, for religion to appeal to the manufacturer, merchant, and banker, it must provide something more than material protection or prosperity. What men have does not interest them. The church has lost rather than gained by its interest in wealth and numbers.

“Business men desire spiritual help from religion. It is spiritual power for which they really hunger. The great opportunity before the church is in the development of such spiritual power. The greatest of undeveloped resources is faith; the greatest of unused power is prayer; the business men of the nation are waiting for the church to open to them these resources and powers. . . . During later centuries we have become so engrossed in material things that we have forgotten the great spiritual power to which we owe so much. Steam, electricity, and other powers have taken the place of the Holy Spirit, the greatest of all powers. Is not this neglect of spiritual power the real difficulty with the church today? . . .

“We must not think that this spiritual power does not exist because it is being so little used. Electricity had been lying dormant in the world for thousands of years, and only recently has it come to be used. Great spiritual powers, to which the preacher refers as the Holy Spirit, exist in the world, even though they are not being utilized. The church has prospered when it has helped people spiritually and when it has developed this spiritual power. The time is coming when the church will again put forth these powers. . . . This means that those interested in the revival of true religion should devote their energies to reviving the spiritual power of the church instead of trying to awaken interest in the church before such spiritual power is revived. When the church has recovered its faith and its ability to use this faith then people will of themselves seek religion and become energized by its spirit.

“Whether or not scientists have as yet a knowledge of prayer, it nevertheless is a great and powerful force. Electricity is still unknown so far as its origin or make-up is concerned. We simply know that doing certain things develops a certain invisible power known as electricity, and that if this invisible power is connected with machines made in a certain way, these machines will revolve. We also know that this same electricity can be used for producing light and heat. But where electricity comes from, or of what it consists, or how it is transmitted, no one knows. Yet we use electricity and it will soon be the basis of our new civilization.

“We know just as much about prayer as we know about electricity. . . . Both history and science clearly demonstrate that prayer has great possibilities. Prayer is our connection with the Holy Spirit, with the great sources of abundant power. The real forces of life are not found in material things, but are unseen and spiritual. . . . The Holy Spirit is the great source of supply, the invisible, formless, but living substance. Man is the motor that can use this great invisible power. Prayer is the wire or the pipe that connects man with the great source of supply. As a statistician, without partiality or prejudice, I urge all business men to learn more about prayer and its great possibilities. The Holy Spirit is the great undeveloped resource of religion; while prayer is the means of tapping this great undeveloped resource. The Holy Spirit is the coal mine, and prayer is the transportation system that will get the coal to us in order that it may be used—the two go together. Each is useless without the other. Both together are all-powerful.”—Selected by Lottie E. Young.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879.

Paul C. Johnson, Associate Editor

“Thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.”—Ezekiel 2:7.

The Editor's Prayer

MOST gracious God our heavenly Father, in our humility and weakness we would approach Thee, the Source of all wisdom and of all strength, asking Thy guidance throughout the short journey of this life that we may follow closely in the footprints of Thy Son.

Make us, we pray Thee, like unto Him in faith, in love, and in devotion unto Thee our Father. May we reflect clearly and brightly the glory Thou hast shed into our lives. Trim Thou the dimming lamps we hold in our hands with the keen blade of adversity, that we may be brought to trust more fully in Thee and less in ourselves.

Bless the efforts and plans that are being perfected for the coming General Conference of Thy people. Inspire those who attend with a holy zeal for Thy truth, and with a spirit of sacrifice and of service on behalf of mankind, to Thy name's honor and glory. Amen.

Mechanicalism

TO THE scientist the universe appears as a vast and intricate machine, ungoverned except by natural law. As Bentley has so aptly said, “He acknowledges nothing besides matter and motion; so that all must be performed either by mechanism or accident.” Those who attempt to include in their scientific thinking the idea of God, can conceive of Him as nothing more than “a hopeless Deus ex machina who must be dragged into an imaginary cosmic drama to save imaginary souls from an imaginary hell,” declares Dr. Arthur Holmes. There is, and there can be, no thought of personality in such a definition of God. The Deity ceases to be an intelligent, self-existent, and responsible Being, and is reduced to the status of an inanimate force or energy. A law-governed god ceases to be a God at all, for he is deprived of the very authority and independence that distinguishes the character of true divinity. Such a god could not love or hate, he could not show mercy, or manifest wisdom. He would possess none of the qualities that are indispensable to a Being of infinite power. No sin could be committed against him, for sin involves willfulness on the part of the sinner and consciousness on the part of the one against whom the iniquity is committed.

Humanism

ORGANIZED religion in recent years has taken a decided trend toward Humanism. Leading denominations have come to center their attention in Man, rather than in God or in Christ. “To remember that Man is the measure of things . . . is the root of Humanism,” says Schiller. This changed attitude of the nominal church results in the exaltation of the ego which, of course, is pleasing to the natural man, but displeasing to God, for to the extent that we elevate man, to the same degree we debase Jehovah.

It sounds well for one to say that he would center his attention on the interests and needs of men! It is thought to indicate the practical value of religion. The chief difficulty lies in the inability of men to distinguish between that which is physical and moral, and that which is truly spiritual. The so-called “moral virtues” are frequently confused with the spirituality that comes only through faith in Christ. If morality is equivalent to spirituality neither Christ nor the Bible is necessary for the salvation of men.

Incarnation

AMONG the many important lessons taught by Jesus, none was more strongly emphasized than that of man's dependence upon God. Even the Son acknowledged His reliance upon the Father for all things. “I do nothing of myself; but as the Father hath taught me, I speak these things.” Again He confesses, “All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.”

“Christian theists,” writes Dr. Arthur Holmes, “believe in one God who is the Author both of the universe and the Bible.” We further understand that no man can come to a knowledge of God except as God shall reveal Himself to him through Jesus Christ His Son. Christ was the incarnation of the divine character and attributes. He was a complete reflection of God. The disciple in turn, through the indwelling of the Spirit of Christ, becomes the incarnation of the Son, and thereby a reflection of the eternal God, for the “Spirit of God dwelleth in you.”

The Dual Nature of Man

By D. G. Harvey

"For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do."—Romans 7:19.

MANY who have read the famous tale written by Robert Louis Stevenson pointing out the danger of mocking God will remember the fictitious hero, "Dr. Jekyll," had the theory that by the use of a drug he could separate the good and evil natures of a man, so allowing his better nature to rise to great heights. But the result was the reverse, the evil nature being the stronger. Thus the good doctor released his evil self, being able to go about the alleys of London with evil and murderous purpose without the annoyance of conscience, under the name of "Mr. Hyde." The time came when Dr. Jekyll could no longer restrain the evil nature, Mr. Hyde. The change came without the use of the drug at such inconvenient moments that the doctor committed suicide.

While the above is but a short review of a story of fiction, there is more truth in the theory of dual nature of man than many seem to realize. Some one has said, "There is so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, it behooves none of us to speak ill of the rest of us."

No matter in what walk of life we go we find this to be true: there is some good in all. Recently we read of a murderer who spent the last few weeks in his death cell writing letters to his mother. A friend was to mail them to her from time to time. Why? So that the aged mother would never know how her son died. He was an evil man, it is true, one who did not regard the life of others; but he loved his mother.

There is another case in mind. This man in the sight of the world was a good man, very pious, a deacon in his church, surely a good man, one would think. Yet he murdered a little child.

This battle of dual natures is raging always in the hearts and minds of men.

Not in the members of the church, you say. Yes, my friends, even there, unless we are more righteous than was that inspired Apostle, Paul. The same age-old battle raged within his heart and mind. We hear him cry, "For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would

I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do."—Romans 7:18, 19.

What? Then must we of our own selves overcome this evil nature? That is utterly impossible. Our intentions may be the best, we may have great zeal; but we shall find it a losing fight. If perchance we show any outward progression, we, too, in time, like Nebuchadnezzar, shall be found saying, "Look what I have done." We shall be worshipers of self rather than God, coming under that class who have "worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator" (Romans 1:25).

There is but one hope. We must be led by God. Not that we may expect a miracle and feel the hand of the Almighty at all times on our shoulders, but our minds must be controlled by the Holy Spirit, the power of God. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."—Romans 8:14.

Being under the control of the Spirit, the evil nature is restrained, the actions of the body are subject to the mind. If the mind is evil, so are the acts of the body. But if the mind is under control of the Spirit of God, the mind becomes Christlike, the walk in life will be Christlike. "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him."—Colossians 2:6.

Paul tells us (1 Corinthians 2:16), "We have the mind of Christ." Every man? No, only that class to whom Paul spoke, the true church. The question then will arise, How may this mind of Christ be attained? Let the Master Teacher speak to us as recorded in John 15:15: "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." Listen to Paul again: "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son."—Hebrews 1:1, 2.

Then, my friends, as you go through this life with this war of natures raging in your mind, do not wait until you are righteous. "There is none good but one, that is, God," said our Lord (Matt. 19:17) There

Looking for the Savior

Each morning when I wake from sleep,
O teach me, Lord, to say:
"I know that Thou art coming soon,
And this may be the day!
Then help me, Savior, by Thy grace
To live this day for Thee,
That I may look for Thee with joy
And long Thy face to see."

I should not like Him, when He comes,
A wandering lamb to find;
If I were idle, selfish, proud,
Untruthful, or unkind,
How I should try to hide my face,
And from His presence flee;
I should not look for Him with joy,
Or long His face to see.

Lord Jesus, as the years go by
And Thine own "Day" draws near,
Oh, make me know that I am Thine,
For then I need not fear.
If I am cleansed and kept from sin,
From Satan's power set free,
Then I may look for Thee with joy is none without sin. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."—Romans 3:23. Do not wait until you feel strong and able to live up to your code of religion. Realize you are weak, a mere mortal of clay, which is liable to err and go astray. Trust God for strength. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble," cries David in Psalm 46:1.
And long Thy face to see.

Selected by R. A. Curtis.

True, you may stumble, perhaps fall; but must you lie helpless? No, no. Cry to the Father, "God help me," and get up, go on, for God has promised to provide all your needs. "But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

No man can of his own self overcome his evil self. Like Dr. Jekyll, his attempt only deadens his conscience. Then man sees no evil in his own acts. He becomes self-righteous. Oh, if man could but see his helpless condition, that of his own self he can do nothing!

Let us, as we watch for the return of the Son of God, study His words, absorb them, apply them to our own needs. Let us make His thoughts our thoughts, for the mind of Christ alone can help us to overcome our natural evil or carnal nature.

THE TRUE VINE

By Lyman Booth

---

JESUS told the apostles in John 15:1, 2 that He was the true vine, and His Father was the Husbandman. "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

The vine is a beautiful emblem of the spread of Christianity over the earth. Obscurity hides the origin and early cultivation of the vine. Our attention is called for the first time to it in connection with Noah's disgraceful act. From Numbers 13:23 we learn that the vine flourished in Palestine exceedingly and bore fruit abundantly.

The vine has been carried from its native place into all parts of the world, from the eastern shores of the Old World to the western slopes of the New. In this respect it is a fitting emblem of the true church. I believe the commencement of God's church dates as far back as the origin of the human race. It is indeed implied in the promise that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. We know not how long the vine was confined to the place of its nativity. But we know the church was confined to Israel in the Holy Land for many centuries, spreading its foliage over God's chosen nation, nourishing it with its spiritual fruit, while all other nations were left without moral shelter. But in the fullness of time its exclusiveness was done away and it had spread to the remotest shores and is no more chained to one place or people, but is free to all peoples of earth. Even so Christ and His people, like the vine, may be found everywhere.

In the vine we find an appropriate type of the mystic body of Christ which is composed of Christ as the living Head and all who have been united to Him by faith. As the vine and its branches and foliage are one, so the mystical or spiritual body is one corporate organization. This sacred vine is a beautiful and complete unity. The union between Christ and His followers and between each other is of the closest relation. Each member has his own personality, and whether living or dead is a scion or branch of the main stock. The same bond or tie unites all into one. The same life, the life hid with Christ in God, animates all of them. This sacred vine will live forever. It has been increasing from the earliest days of its existence till now, and will continue its growth till all the elect and chosen are grafted into it, and its foliage shall shadow the nations and fill the earth with God's glory.

Each individual believer is mortal and perishing and subject to death and decay; but the vine, the body of Christ, the church, lives on. One generation of Christians passes away and is succeeded by another, as the annual shoots of the vine die and drop off and never revive, while the Christian has the promise of a revival, for his life is hid with Christ in God who will bestow it to them in imperishable and glorified bodies.

Though Christians die they remain related to each other and to Christ in the gracious promise, "Because I live ye shall live also." The separation of Christians by death is temporary. They are all members of the same living vine, parts of the whole plant, which are inseparably one with Christ in God. Death has not, nor cannot, deprive them of the rights and privileges which were theirs by promise while living. What was theirs while living is still theirs, and will be fully realized in the future when raised from death to immortality; for Paul has written, "Neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

When a vine is grown in infertile soil and in a crowded shady place and does not have the air and light of the sun, it will not develop and bear the same amount of fruit it would if it were in an open space. In some instances some Christians bear this resemblance of the vine. Unfavorable environments may prevent full and fruitful growth, but the vital change which was made when grafted into Christ, though incomplete, has begun in all parts of his being.

Every Christian is a miniature type, more or less true to the perfect and original image of God, and he bears a resemblance to all others in character which cannot be concealed. He is like the vine in which every branch is typical of the whole. As the vine is separate and distinct from all other plants, so the Christian "is not of the world, even as Christ is not of the world." He who is the "branch" demands that all others should pattern after Him. "Let the same mind which was in Christ be in you." A test of true discipleship is in the close similarity in character to Christ.

We know that various circumstances, such as unbelief, worldliness, the cares and anxieties of life, the enjoyment of earthly pleasures tend to retard and chill our efforts in making a full transformation into the likeness of Christ. We also know that under the most favorable conditions the sinless perfection of the Great Model cannot be completely copied so long as we dwell in and groan under this perishable body of sin and death. To be with Christ and to be like Him is, indeed, far beyond the grasp of our full comprehension; for "it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

As no two branches or leaves of a vine are exactly alike, so with Christ's people. They resemble each other in general appearance; they are all alike in so far as they bear the image of the heavenly Pattern. Their faith and aim and hope are one. Each has some peculiar virtue. In one it may be hope; in another, extreme reverence; in another, faith; in another, love. Yet this diversity presents in the Christian church a most charming unity, each aiding and contributing to the splendor and harmony of the whole.

The vine has been called the most graceful of plants which, perhaps, is one reason why Jesus selected it to teach His apostles an impressive lesson. It is not given as a display of many colored flowers, but is admired for the gracefulness and the beauty of its foliage, and the perfect symmetry of its luscious fruit. Every leaf, in its shape and coloring, is a model of beauty; and artists say that "to study the perfection of form, color, light, and shade, united in one object, we must place before us a cluster of grapes."

In every country where the vine is extensively cultivated it presents one of the most beautiful features of the landscape. "The Land of the Vine" is a poetic title which has been given to the Sunny South because of its many vineyards. There it may be found in festoons on the wayside trees, or covering the lowly cottage, laden with clusters of delicious, purple fruit. In this respect it affords an appropriate emblem of Christ and His people. Thus it is with those who may wish to study the perfection of all things pertaining to life and godliness; they must place before their eyes the divine character eminently displayed by Jesus, "who was the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely," He who displayed in beauty and perfection the high and noble qualities of the "fruits of the Spirit."

Whether the vine grows in the most favorable surroundings or beside poison ivy its growth is not blighted. Its nature remains the same, and yields an abundance of delicious fruit. Thus it is with the Christian who is thoroughly imbued with the love of truth. Whether his feet tread smooth and pleasant paths, surrounded by beautiful scenery, or in paths amid the ivy-vines of sin he will remain steadfast and true, ever manifesting those qualities of character of which civilization so proudly boasts, and the sweet influence of Christianity. Were it not for this influence society would soon lapse into decay, and the world would become a barren waste of sin.

Christ is, indeed, a fruitful vine and all in Him must bear fruit or be cut off at the Father's pruning time. The fruit of the vine has greatly blessed the world and will continue to bless the world when He places His feet once more upon Zion's holy mount, only in an everlasting and infinitely greater degree, until it extends to every tribe and nation. As it was with the vine so must it be with the branches. Christ said, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."

Fruit grows only on live vines. A vine without fruit is either dead or dying. Fruits are the outward manifestation of the life within, and the abundance or scarcity of the fruit denotes the strength of that life. The one having life cannot fail to produce fruit. Fruitfulness is the result toward which all Christian labors bend. A perfect plant is known by the abundance of fruit it bears, and is not perfect until it bears all the fruit it can. There can be no greater sign of a worthless vine than when it produces only leaves and branches, likewise of a Christian when his faith is only an empty profession. A vine that bears no fruit soon falls under the fatal decree, "Cut it down," so every branch in Christ "that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

The instructions Jesus gave His disciples apply with equal force to all Christians. He said, "I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." To abide in Christ is life eternal; not to abide is disastrous, to say the least. Paul said, "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." And Peter said that if we add virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly love, kindness, charity to faith and they abound in us they make us that we "shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." He also gives us the blessed assurance that if we do these things we shall never fail, for in doing so "an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," which will be the consummation of every Christian's desires and expectations—the full fruition of hope in Christ, a destiny achieved only by those who bear the precious fruit of the Spirit.

Because of these facts should we not seek to make preparation for the future? Should we not so count our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom, that we may faithfully serve Him who alone can save our life and change it into a life hid with Christ in God? We should ever remember that apart from Him our life is vanity, but united to Him our labor will not be in vain.

When Jesus Comes

By George B. Alldridge

A KNOWLEDGE of history is essential to a right understanding of the Word of God. We are admonished to "remember the former things of old." God also says He has declared the end from the beginning.

The Scriptures are surely opened up to us today. I was thinking this morning after reading that apparently the conference now in session in the Geological Hall at South Kensington, London, will end in failure. I wonder if Isaiah 29:14 has any reference to it? "Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

Twenty years ago who could have foreseen the trouble Germany is in today? And, for that matter, the whole world? Do we realize that during a period of less than five years these powerful rulers were dethroned: the emperors of Germany and Austria; tsars of Russia and Bulgaria; the kings of Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, Hungary, and Greece; and the sultan of Turkey? In Russia and the Balkan States princes, grand dukes, and dukes gave up their hereditary rights and sought refuge either in obscurity or in exile. Some are living in New York, Paris, and many in London with the exiled king of Spain.

In July, 1914, when Russia at the command of the late Tsar Nicholas II mobilized her military forces, who would have thought that in three years Leo Trotsky, a Russian Jew, banished for life to Siberia, would with Nicholas Lenin organize a government known today as "Soviet Russia," a government which is making all other governments fear for their own form of nationalism.

When John Hay was Secretary of State under the late President Theodore Roosevelt, he issued to the whole world a manifesto declaring that China must maintain "the Open Door." The League of Nations was organized partially to enforce this principle.

Japan, less than a hundred years ago, was considered one of the weakest nations from a military viewpoint upon earth. Today she is walking over China, virtually defying the military and naval forces of the whole world.

Upon the last page of the June 6 issue of THE RESTITUTION HERALD, "A Sample of the Next War," our attention is called to the immense treasures lying dormant in the mountains of Kingan in Manchuria and with what speed in sub-zero weather the Japanese troops advanced with all their modern equipment.

These are the items that never escape me, for I immediately look for the scripture to apply, and here it is in

"Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me. Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure."—Isaiah 46:9, 10.

Habakkuk 1:7, 8, 10: "They are terrible and dreadful: their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves. Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more fierce than the evening wolves: and their horsemen shall spread themselves, and their horsemen shall come from far; they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat. . . . And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them: they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it."

Brethren, analyze these verses. Japan seems to be the guilty party. Horses are not swifter than leopards, but motor trucks are. Horses do not fly like eagles, but bombing airplanes do. What nations but Japan and Russia are scoffing at kings and princes today?

We speak about the coming of the Lord. But be careful; do not become fanatical in your enthusiasm. Let us consider a few former things. In six years Joshua was master of the whole land of Palestine, from Mount Halak at the ascent to Mount Seir on the south to Baalgad, under Mount Hermon, on the north. In all, his conquest was six nations with thirty-one kings, including the Anakims, who caused Israel to sin at Hazereth (Numbers 13:32, 33).

Everybody knows that Joshua is a type of Christ. In his great Antitype do you not suppose that it will take time to bring the nations into subjection to the rule of Christ? Before the last enemy typified by the Anakims—death—is destroyed a thousand years will pass.

Some Bible students teach that Napoleon and the history of his times are described in the book of Daniel. A knowledge of what he accomplished in sixteen years will give us an idea of how quickly things will change when Jesus begins His great work. Four times earthquakes are mentioned in the book of Revelation. Some students teach these to refer to revolutions.

In 1799 a young man, supported by a military force, executed a coup d'etat and made himself virtually master of France. History knows this young man as Napoleon Bonaparte. He believed himself to be "the man of destiny."

At the close of the revolutionary period, Europe seems to have been in a condition similar to that in our day. Napoleon, by his military genius, had Europe, except Russia and Great Britain, at his feet; and he forthwith installed his relatives and favorites upon the thrones surrendered to him. He instituted new laws covering finance, sanitation, and legislation, many of which are in force today.

At last, to preserve the European balance of power, Great Britain formed coalition after coalition of states opposed to France, using her money, her ships, and her armed forces, naval and military, unsparingly, and successfully at Waterloo, June 18, 1815, accomplished in the overthrow of Napoleon her purpose.

After his downfall the victorious allies concluded with France a peace which stripped her of all the territories annexed by Napoleon. Read Germany for France, and we are in the same position, except the United States is added.

I do hope you are reading and filing Brother Marsh's articles, "Gathering Clouds." I glean from these articles that a European dictator will soon arise with power that will lead him to accomplish upon a large scale what Napoleon failed to do, namely, the formation of a United States of Europe with himself at its head. It is a remarkable coincidence that Great Britain and Russia will be again the opposing forces. Probably the United States will be one of the "young lions."

Now who will destroy all these nations? Do you think there will be a flash in the heavens, and they will all fall down dead? Well, let us look again at the "former things." Read the sixth and seventh chapters of the book of Judges. Note and read the communication between Gideon and an angel. The angel gave him instructions what to do. Jesus will send forth His angels to instruct His Gideons, also. We read, "Then all the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and the children of the east (read Brother Marsh's articles carefully) were gathered together, and went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel." Brother Marsh so far seems to have the correct combination that is to oppose Christ.

It seems at first Gideon had a force of thirty-two thousand. Of this number all but ten thousand proved to be fearful, destitute of true faith. Seeing the multitudes of the Midianites, their courage sank. These expected their own valor would save them. This is the trouble with the church nominal today. This work belongs to God (Isaiah 10:13; Daniel 4:30).

Some of the soldiers that still remained were not so courageous as they would be thought; but Gideon had done his part in that respect, and it pleased the Lord Himself to prove and purify the company by an extraordinary expedient. Perhaps they were led to the water after the fatigue of a long march under the idea that they were going directly to attack the enemy. It seems to have been customary for them to drink as cattle do, by putting their mouths down in the water and drawing it in; but they who only took a little into their hands and sucked it up (as dogs are remarked to lap a little water hastily) might be supposed to be less enslaved to their appetites, more able to endure hardship, and more eager to battle. It may be presumed that most of this very small company by whom God was pleased to save Israel were men of genuine faith and piety as well as of steady courage.

Note that Gideon and his small company are up in the mountain above their enemies. So will be the small company Jesus soon will gather. How significant the dream that today the multitude is dreaming: "Their hearts failing them for fear." Each carries a trumpet, a lamp, and an earthen pitcher. How beautiful to the eyes of faith these symbols are! The enemy could not see the lamp of truth until the earthen pitchers were broken. The pitcher represents our mortality (Ecclesiastes 12:6).

First the trumpet was blown: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." Now what followed? And the three hundred blew the trumpets; and the Lord set every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host; and the host fled.

And the men of Israel gathered themselves together out of Naphtali and out of Asher and out of all Manasseh—all the tribes of Israel. Ah, yes, God intends to use Israel as in the days of Queen Esther to strike down their enemies. So this is how Jesus will destroy His enemies. Listen to Jeremiah 51:20: "Thou art my battle axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms."

The saints will do no carnal fighting. They will not be seen during the battle. Gideon and his men surrounded the hosts of Midian, but by the enemy unseen. God has forces, human and natural, which Christ and His saints will requisition upon that day; and as it was in the days of Esther, the Jews will be prepared and will be used of God in destroying their enemies.

So, dear brethren, see that you rightly divide the Word of truth and thus be counted among God's immortal three hundred.

"AS YE SEE THE DAY APPROACHING"

THERE is a word in Hebrews 10:25 that is of tremendous significance for the day in which we live. As we see the time of Christ's coming approaching through every sign about us, we are commanded not to forsake assembling together as Christians, but "so much the more" to stand together in the worship and service of Christ.

Church attendance and participation in the soul-winning enterprises of God's people is made a very important test of one's faithfulness to Christ, and especially at the age end. If ever we should stand in close relation to one another, it is then. Yet many are saying that so many churches have become apostate that the only hope is to withdraw from all and abide in the fellowship of the "mystical body." On every hand orthodox churches are split and soul-winning work is at a standstill because believers, offended by the faults of some preacher or church member, have withdrawn their support and take their religion at home over the radio, where no collection basket is passed.

To take such an attitude in this hour is to desert the cause, disobey the plain command of Scripture for these days, and profess to the world that one is ashamed of his relation to the body of Christ. Will not such be ashamed at His coming?—Selected by R. A. Curtis.

GODS OF GOLD

THE financial situation facing the world at this time is but one of many perplexing problems which our statesmen must endeavor to solve. Yet as we read the voluminous reports of the commissions appointed by the government to accomplish this purpose, it would appear that even the most experienced financiers among them are almost as much in the dark as to the reason why the wheels of business squeak like rusty hinges as they slowly—O, so slowly!—revolve as is a veritable tyro in the science of finance. In fact these “experts” do not seem to know just where the empty greasecups are or where to find the lubricant to fill them if they could locate the cups!

In the June issue of Harper's Magazine a writer calls attention to the frequent failures of the predictions of these financial seers to come to pass. For instance he says that Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, then Secretary of the Treasury, declared in a New Year message addressed to the country on January 1, 1930:

“I see nothing, however, in the present situation that is either menacing or warrants pessimism. I have every confidence that there will be a revival of activity in the spring and that during the coming year the country will make steady progress.”

Mr. Mellon's prediction proved true in a sense—the country made steady progress for two years thereafter—backwards! Financial journals and banking institutions which have so-called experts to assist them in reaching correct conclusions are no more successful in their attempts to see into the future than you and I. I would not accuse these men of dishonesty. They are simply suffering from the same weakness that marks us all—mortality, and the ignorance that accompanies it. The giants of finance have been losing money consistently throughout the period of the depression. It is said on supposedly good authority that Herbert Hoover left the White House half a million dollars worse off than when he entered it. He would have saved that half million had it been within the power of legislation to do so.

Having learned that the wisdom of the worldly-wise is but foolishness after all, we shall turn to the only reliable guide in matters pertaining to human welfare.

Gold is the symbol of capitalism and also its standard of value, and capitalism is the foundation upon which the present structure of civilized society rests. In fact, history shows that capitalism—the individual ownership of property—has been not only the basis of civilization, but the chief incentive to progress and achievement; and, in spite of communistic denials, it will continue to occupy this important position for at least a thousand years in the future, for Isaiah declares that during the wonderful period of prosperity and peace that is to follow this age of distress, men “shall build houses, and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat.”—Isaiah 65:21, 22. Micah adds, “They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree” (observe the evidence of individual ownership) “and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it.”—Micah 4:4. Yes! Individual ownership is to continue on into the golden age of eternal glory. But, of course, capitalism, like every other force or power controlled by man today, will exist under very different conditions and forms of government that will remove its many objectionable features now in vogue and result in greater happiness than was ever known before. For even the most earthly and fleshly needs will be transformed through the presence of the Lord among men.

Finance plays an important part in the drama of the nations, and Gold is the star performer, for it represents the standard of value in all material transactions. That gold will continue to exercise a tremendous power over the developments which are to prepare the way for the coming of the Antichrist is clearly evident. In this, the editor's sixth article on “Present Tense Prophecy,” the international financial situation is briefly considered.

“Soon will our Savior from heaven appear,
Sweet is the hope and its power to cheer;
All will be changed by a glimpse of His face—
This is the goal at the end of the race.”

Almost from the beginning men have worshiped “Gods of Gold.” Gold is the first metal mentioned in the Bible (Genesis 2:10-12), and is declared to be “good.” Gold is described in the New Standard Encyclopedia as “a metallic element, probably the first known to man.” It is not strange that this beautiful yellow metal was accepted so early as a universal symbol of material riches and in time was adopted by the nations as the standard of value, an unchangeable value being placed upon it. Gold thus came to be called the Gold Standard, and formed the basis of the monetary systems of the leading nations.

And now, in spite of the fact that with the exception of France the nations have been forced off the gold standard by the depression, this metal remains the world's one recognized standard of value and stands as the symbol of a materialistic civilization. It is the image before which the entire race of men bow in worship. It is the god without whose aid but little could be done in these days, it is generally thought.

Men have robbed and murdered to obtain possession of the “Gods of Gold.” The whole world was plunged into the most bloody conflict of history through their alluring appeal. All these things have happened because men have come to look upon gold as the means whereby happiness and success are assured. They have felt that gold could meet every demand and every liability, both material and spiritual.

In spite of the high value that has been placed upon gold as a medium of exchange, there is less than half enough of this precious metal now in the coffers of the nine leading gold-holding nations to pay off the mortgages that have been foreclosed in this country alone during the past few years! These nine nations held in their treasuries in 1931 the vast sum of $11,265,910,000 in actual gold, coin, and bullion. The real estate dealers of this country declare that "there are at the present in the United States $30,000,000,000 tied up in foreclosed mortgages."

Remember, these figures have to do only with foreclosed mortgages and do not include the vastly greater amounts represented by the mortgages which have not as yet been foreclosed. It is not surprising that the mortgagees are not protesting more vigorously against a mortgage moratorium. There is little value in the land itself; it can in many instances scarcely pay the taxes, to say nothing of interest on the money invested in it.

The "Gods of Gold" have failed us! They are unable to grant the heart-rending prayers of their worshipers.

Even those who own the mortgages can get no benefit from them, they can buy nothing with interest which they cannot collect. And even if they were able to secure the money due them, if the mortgagors could pay in full, they would still be in a sad case indeed if they continued to put their entire confidence in the protection afforded them by financial resources. At the best it cannot reach beyond this present fleeting life. It can provide no assurance for themselves or for their children for the endless stretches of eternity. "They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches; none of them can by any means redeem his brother: nor give to God a ransom for him . . . that he should still live for ever, and not see corruption."—Psalm 49:6-9.

No political panacea will relieve the pain of the sin-sick world. Neither can the "Gods of Gold" do it. And when the final time of decision comes, no opportunity will be given to any man to offer a golden bribe to the Judge! He will neither be deceived by pretense nor influenced by gold. At that time it will be said of all men, as it is predicted of Israel, "Their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord."—Ezekiel 7:19.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

PRACTICALLY all the efforts put forth to get people to do right and to fall in with the ways of God is done upon the promise of a reward in a "sky kingdom." Yet the Book of God, the Bible, can be searched carefully from Genesis to Revelation, and such a thought is unknown, the promise being that the meek shall inherit the earth (Matthew 5:5). And "the righteous shall never be removed."—Proverbs 10:30. "What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teach in the way he shall choose. His soul shall dwell at ease; and his seed shall inherit the earth."—Psalm 25:12, 13. "For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth."—Psalm 37:9. "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth."—Proverbs 11:31.

We might continue on and on, but why, for in the last verse quoted, it is specifically said, "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth." But why should we think that man would "be recompensed" anywhere else? Did not the Lord make the earth and give it to Adam? Was he not told to multiply and replenish it, and to have dominion over it? Then why ask about leaving it? Why urge men and women to do right, that they may go to heaven?

Read carefully the first two chapters of Genesis. Note with care that which the Lord said to Adam concerning the earth. Then tell why the thought could have ever entered the mind of man that he was going to die and go to heaven, or at death the immortal souls of men and women would wing their way to heaven. God made men to make the earth beautiful and a happy place in which to live. Then after Adam's sin the whole thread of the biblical story was that of death; that man, because of sin, would die; that he would be laid to rest in the grave with "his fathers." But with this thought there came the promise of a resurrection. While this body might decompose and return to mother earth from whence it was taken, yet the promise was there of a life beyond the grave and that man would at the proper time be resurrected and brought back to life, to live eternally upon this earth.

As far as the immortal soul is concerned, there is no such thing. The thought is based upon a mere assumption. In 1 Timothy 1:17 we have these words: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever." Here it is plain that God is immortal. Again we read in Timothy that at "the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ: which in his times (which as yet have not come) he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting."—1 Timothy 6:14-16. Then it matters not how many men may say that man has an immortal soul. It is emphatically stated here that God "only hath immortality." And if man has an immortal soul, why did God use these words after Adam sinned or transgressed His Word by setting it aside? "And now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever."—Genesis 3:22. Thus God saved men from becoming immortal sinners. If we desire immortality, it is given to us as a specific work: "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life."—Romans 2:7. It would be the height of folly to seek after something we already have.

Would you know where the idea of an immortal soul came from? It came direct from heathen mythology. It is a relic of thought that has come down to us from the days of Gentile supremacy. They could well talk in such a deceptive way, for they are not of God's creation; hence, there is no promise to them of ever being able to attain to eternal life, except some of them should be grafted into the house or stock of Israel upon some branch where some unbelieving Israelite had been broken off (see Romans 11).

Years ago the writer was holding a series of meetings in a western community, and he spoke about the saving of immortal souls. That evening he was invited to the home of a brother by the name of Hoyt to spend the night.

As all were sitting around the fireside before retiring, Brother Hoyt handed the writer a Bible, saying, "You spoke about an immortal soul. Will you please find the text that I may read it?"

The Bible was taken with the words, "Yes, I will show you."

He said, "You need not hurry. Take your time, and find it while you stop with us."

The promise was, "Yes, I will gladly do so," for I thought it was in the Bible.

But for more than a week at this home under the trees in the lawn, I wrestled with the Scriptures until I finally gave it up, and said: "Brother Hoyt, I cannot find it; it is not in the Scriptures."

He said, "Yes, I knew it, but I wanted you to find it out."

Just so should every minister and evangelist do, before using the words any more. First know of a truth that the word can be found in the Bible; and if it cannot, be honest and do not use the deceptive words any more.

If we have no immortal soul and we are commanded to seek for immortality, when do we obtain it? "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep (die), but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"—1 Corinthians 15:51-55.

The question is asked, Where is the grave's victory? Let us see. "And in this mountain (Mount Zion, in Palestine) shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of wines on the lees well refined. And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people (death of His people Israel) shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it."—Isaiah 25:6-8.

So it is here, not in heaven, that God is going to do this mighty, lovable act, when He is going to wipe tears away, when He is going to return to us our beloved departed dead, make all things new, and restore to us a sinless earth, just as it was given to Adam. And this cannot be very far away, for the nations of earth are crumbling; soon David will come as king and counselor, and Jesus will come as our High Priest, and we shall "sit every man under his own vine and fig tree." Blessed be God. Midst the crash into which we are entering, God's word to us is: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."—Isa. 26:20, 21.

Too long has vain man ridden ruthlessly over the earth and trampled the rights of God's poor beneath his unholy feet, too long has the oppressor got gain out of God's poor and downtrodden people; and now the day has come, God's day, His fearful day, the day of His recompense and of His indignation, and He is going to give back to His people an earth which will be covered with righteousness, as the waves cover the sea. So let us rejoice and lift up our heads, as the day of our redemption draweth nigh.—The Torch of Israel.

THE LORD COMETH

---

THE end of earthly misrule is at hand. Human despotism is drawing to a close. Soon the scepter of misrule will fall from its nerveless grasp. Its blood-stained career will terminate when earth's rightful Ruler takes the reigns of government. God has selected a Ruler for this earth, One who will reign in righteousness. Man's misrule has burdened the pages of history with its tales of cruelty and oppression. Right has been ignored, and wrong upheld. War has been the god of injustice. Babylon, the world's first mighty empire, was the birthplace of religious and political despotism. Medo-Persia followed in its footsteps. Grecia died of moral gangrene. Iron Rome trampled upon the rights of humanity with despotic glee. Mohammed's crescent dripped with the blood of martyred men. Kingly ambition has sought to wear the crown of universal empire. It has made crime a stepping-stone and violence a ladder in striving to reach it. When God marked out the limits of human empire, He named the kingdom of His Son as the fifth in the series of kingdoms destined to hold sway over the human race.—Selected by R. A. Curtiss from the writings of H. W. Bowman.

"O LORD OUR LORD, HOW EXCELLENT IS THY NAME IN ALL THE EARTH! WHO HAST SET THY GLORY ABOVE THE HEAVENS."—PSALM 8:1.

A PRAYER

O God, we thank Thee for this universe, our great home; for its vastness and its riches, and for the manifoldness of the life which teems upon it and of which we are part. We praise Thee for the arching sky and the blessed winds, for the driving clouds and the constellations on high. We praise Thee for the salt sea and the running water, for the everlasting hills, for the trees, and for the grass under our feet. We thank Thee for our senses by which we can see the splendor of the morning and hear the jubilant songs of love and smell the breath of the springtime. Grant us, we pray Thee, a heart wide open to all this joy and beauty, and save our souls from being so steeped in care or so darkened by passion that we pass heedless and unseeing when even the thornbush by the wayside is aflame with the glory of God.—Walter Rauschenbusch.

OBEDIENCE

"Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?"

OBEDIENCE is the complement of faith. The one implies the other. When one believes the gospel promises, and truly repents, he will change his course of life from sin to righteousness, from disobedience to obedience.

When a foreigner comes to this country, he has not yet qualified for citizenship. He must be tried and found true. He must prove for himself and by himself the meaning of the new ways he has adopted.

When one is a sinner he is free from righteousness. When one is free from sin he becomes the servant or righteousness.

Life offers but two pathways of conduct, obedience to sin and obedience to God.

God asks us to obey our parents; to obey as citizens; to obey in all of life's relationships; then to yield a willing obedience to His way that we may be prepared for that greatest of all blessings, eternal life.

—Lois Carpenter, age 14.

FAITH'S REPOSE

Father, beneath Thy sheltering wing
In sweet security we rest,
And fear no evil earth can bring;
In life, in death, supremely blest.

For life is good, whose tidal flow
The motions of Thy will obeys,
And death is good, that makes us know
The Love Divine that all things sways.

And good it is to bear the cross
And so Thy perfect peace to win;
And naught is ill, nor brings us loss,
Nor works us harm, save only sin.

Redeemed from this, we ask no more,
But trust the love that saves to guide—
The grace that yields so rich a store,
Will grant us all we need beside.

FRED'S UNCLE EDWARD RETURNS

"OVER there, behind that shed it rolled, Jimmie," called John. And Jimmie's swift feet carried him into the alley looking for the lost ball.

"What's under that bundle of old rags?" thought the startled boy, whose quick eyes perceived the dirty and ragged mass rising. There stood an old man, so disreputable, tattered, and unsteady on his feet as to be absolutely repellant. And what was worse, he was thrusting a claw-like hand into a barrel of refuse, searching for something!

A shudder of disgust swept over Jimmie, as he recovered the lost ball and returned to his playmates. Back on the clean diamond, surrounded by the healthy tanned group of boys, whose clear young voices cheered each other on in the game, somehow Jimmie could not entirely wipe from his mind the image of the revolting man he had just seen.

A knock sounded at the back door! It was just seven o'clock, and Jimmie and John were seated at the breakfast table next morning with Father and Mother. John had been entertaining Father with an account of the good game the boys had enjoyed the day before, and Jimmie had described the dreadful figure he had seen in the alley.

"Answer the door, please, Jimmie," said Father, and as he did so, there stood the same haggard creature!

His request for breakfast was answered with a plateful of well-cooked, appetizing food with which Mother satisfied the hunger of the twins, whose clean minds and straight bodies were her special pride. While the rest of the family finished their interrupted meal, Father sat on the back porch and talked with the degraded man who begged from door to door and slept in alleys, apparently unmindful of the disgust he caused in those who saw him.

Evening time, and the hour set apart by Father when, with the twins, he studied the lesson for next Sunday!

"Well," began Father, as he glanced at the subject of the lesson for Sunday, "we've had the best demonstration I can think of for our lesson." Then he proceeded to tell the boys the pathetic story the tramp had told him that morning, and which had been verified before noon.

"Do you remember the Gilberts who used to live next door speak of an uncle who ran away from home so long ago?" inquired Father.

"Oh! yes," answered John. "He was going to make his fortune and send Fred all kinds of fine presents. But they never heard a word from him."

"And Fred always bragged to me," put in Jimmie, "of how handsome his uncle was, and what fine manners he had, and how he hoped some day to be just like him."

"That was Fred's uncle, boys," said Father, slowly, "to whom we gave breakfast this morning."

Amazement, shock, unbelief, and horror passed in turn over the boys' faces, as Father told them the story of Edward Gilbert's downfall—how at first it was only a smoke he thought he had to have to enjoy life, then a drink now and then "just to brace a fellow up," then loss of position, gradual disrespect of all who knew him, and finally complete downfall into the wreck of humanity which had caused such disgust in the eyes of Jimmie and John that day.

With this picture before them, Father and the boys began their study of lesson four.

By this time I hope all you members of the Bible Scrapbook Club have finished your scrapbooks and mailed them to me, or put them just where they will be the first things to be packed when you are getting ready to come to Oregon for conference. I'll be anxiously watching the mail every day for a card from each one telling me that you have mailed your book to me or you are bringing it with you. If you have not been able to finish your book send it anyhow.

Be sure to write in your scrapbook your full name and address, also your age, the name of your Sunday school teacher, or the one who helped you if you had help. We want a full display of our Bible scrapbooks for the Exhibit at Oregon on August 1. Afterwards they will be returned to you so that you may keep them to show to your grandchildren. Wouldn't that be funny? I think it would be interesting, too.

The names of all those who send in their scrapbooks in time for conference will be printed on this page, and if you have something unusually good in your books, that will be mentioned also. I am not giving you any booklet work for this week in order to give you a chance to make up any back work you may have missed.

It is just June 22 when I am writing the story for this page, almost a month before it is printed, and so it may be that when you are studying the lesson for July 23, I will have received many of your scrapbooks. I hope so. See you next week, good bye!

LESSON 4. — July 23, 1933

ISAIAH DENOUNCES DRUNKENNESS AND OTHER SINS

Isaiah 5:1-30

Devotional Reading: Psalm 85:7-13

GOLDEN TEXT

Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people.—
Proverbs 14:34.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Evils Which Must Be Overcome.

I. Woe to the Avaricious. (Vv. 8-10.) Avariciousness is a character-destroying form of selfishness, killing all sense of justice in the individual controlled by it. It is one of the greatest causes of present world unrest.

II. Woe to the Drunkards. (Vv. 11, 12.) The drunkard is forgetful of time and place and duty. His mind is deadened to all sense of right and wrong. The baser passions are aroused by the class of music that is heard in saloons and brothels where liquor is sold.

III. Woe to Those Who Encourage Sin. (Vv. 18, 19.) To frequent places of iniquity is to submit oneself to the slavery of vice. Associates will either elevate or debase.

IV. Woe to Deceivers. (V. 20.) Paul warns of the coming of deceivers in the last days (2 Tim. 3:13). The liquor interests attempt to make their vile business appear as righteous, but their punishment is sure.

V. Woe to the Unwary. (V. 21.) The warning of Paul is especially applicable to those who say, "I can use liquor or I can leave it alone"; "the use of beer or wine will never lead me to drink stronger liquors." "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. 10:12.

VI. Woe to Bribe-Takers. (Vv. 22-24.) The liquor business debases all things with which it comes in contact. It destroys character, home, family, and even life, for the individual who indulges in its habitual use. It perverts the courts, debases politics, and places the government of the country in the hands of the most vicious element. It encourages the giving and accepting of bribes, thus undermining the morality of both officials and people. The only safe method of liquor control is to place it outside the reach of both old and young.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Woes: There are several woes pronounced in our lesson today. The majority of these have to do with our social life. If heed were paid to the counsel of God in regard to the various problems touched on and dealt with in our lesson, much of the misery and suffering of the present would be eliminated.

"House to house"—"Field to field."

This is greed of the worst sort. It is one of the taproot evils of the present unbalanced economic crisis that is shaking the entire structure of human governments. It is this continual premeditated and organized effort to acquire additional possessions for self at the expense of others that gives import to the saying, "The rich are getting richer, and the poor are getting poorer."

"Rising early to follow strong drink."

Comment on this ever-present evil almost seems unnecessary. Our daily observations of the tragic results of unrestrained intemperance should so stamp upon our minds the ever-recurring horrors and sufferings caused by indulgence in strong drink that no ground would be given to this great enemy of humanity. Yet we have forgotten the unholy scenes and blighting miseries of "yesterday's licensed liquor traffic," and many are giving personal aid to its immediate return. Before doing this we should ponder well the woe pronounced by the Almighty.

"Justifying the wicked for reward."

"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil . . . which justify the wicked." This is a clear-cut indictment of present-day opinion. Public discernment of good and evil is so obscure and the line of demarkation between right and wrong so obliterated that wickedness comes in for its acclaims and justifications along with righteousness. What a low ebb of righteous discernment! We are witnessing the reappearing antediluvian life when "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually."—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Israel is a good example of this text. Whenever she did God's bidding and lived close to the Father, she was exalted and found favor with God; but when she went off after other gods, an abomination to the true God, she fell from grace and was allowed to go into captivity. The sin of idolatry was certainly a reproach to her.

Our United States is called a Christian country and has been exalted in man's sight, but just now every eye is watching to see the result of the sin of returning beer. I cannot help but feel that it will be a reproach to our people. We are not so different from the Israelites; if we want God's favor, we must be righteous in His sight. The return of alcoholic beverages may be as disastrous to us as idolatry was to the Israelites.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

There are many evils in this world that must be overcome: international, national, and personal. As far as we are concerned, our first anxiety is for our own personal evils. International and national ills will largely, if not entirely, disappear with the conquering of the personal. There is little to be accomplished by working for international peace as long as we continue to have trouble with our neighbors across the back-yard fence. When we learn to love those around us and love them all the time—never allowing the sun to go down upon our wrath—then there will be little need to work for international peace, for that will have been accomplished.

Paul tells us in Galatians 5:19-21 the evils which we must overcome if we would enter the kingdom of God. This is a formidable list, and it will keep one busy conquering these tendencies of the flesh.

A habit is really never broken. We can make it non-operative by substituting another habit. Paul gives us a list of substitutes for the evils listed above. These are "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Peter gave his list which is very much the same: "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Peter 1:5-8.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Isaiah was a great man or prophet. A prophet is one who can tell you things that are going to happen before the time they are to happen.

He watched the people of Israel very closely. When they did good, he told them of the many good things God would do for them. When they became wicked, he also told them of what punishments they would receive.

It seems one of the things they did was to get drunk. Now Isaiah knew this was very wicked and told them not to do it any more. He said, "You will surely be punished if you do not listen."

He told them many other things they did were wrong and asked them to stop doing them.

These warnings from Isaiah are very good for us, too. Now we know we will never want to get drunk like some we see, but let's watch ourselves that we do not do some other things that might be just as bad.—V. C. T.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

A two weeks' special meeting was held by Bro. S. J. Lindsay, beginning June 10 and closing June 25. Large crowds attended regardless of the intense heat and busy season.

Bro. Lindsay spoke every evening, excepting the 18th. On that evening the children gave a Children's Day program.

At the close of the meetings nine were obedient to the call and were baptized in the all-saving name.

We were indeed glad to have Bro. Lindsay with us again. He gave us much food for thought.

With these new members added to the body we have much to rejoice over.

May we all be strengthened to do more in the Master's service the coming days and finally hear His words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," is our prayer.

Tessa Laning, Sec.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE, JULY 10 to 23

By the time this issue of The Herald reaches you several days of the Bible School and Conference will be past. We wish to announce there will be no services either Saturday during the Bible School. Saturday evening, July 15, will be devoted to a meeting of the Knights of Abraham. Saturday, July 22, a picnic is to be held at Caledonia State Park.

There will be preaching services morning, afternoon, and evening on both Sundays. The Grand Rapids Church extends a cordial invitation to one and all. A real spiritual treat awaits you. Come!

The Annual Business meeting is to be held Thursday evening, July 20, at 8:30.

Wm. A. Hanson, Pres.

ENTERTAINMENT AT CONFERENCE

All who desire to remain close to the church during General Conference will be accommodated in the dormitory. Those who prefer rooms outside should communicate with Miss Elizabeth Ordnung, 704 Jefferson Street, Oregon, Ill., who will be glad to make arrangements for them in advance. The price will probably be the same as it was last year, which was quite reasonable, and depended upon the length of time the rooms were occupied.

No direct charge will be made for meals at the dining hall, but the cost will be met by voluntary contributions. Fruits, vegetables, and other supplies of like nature, will be gladly accepted to help in lowering the cost of the gathering for everybody.

THE INDIANA CONFERENCE

We extend the hearty greeting of the National Bible Institution and the Churches of God which it represents to the brethren now in session at North Salem Church for the annual state conference of Indiana. We pray that they may have a most successful and spiritually uplifting gathering, and that they will plan to press forward with renewed energy and faith in the work of the new conference year.

THE MICHIGAN CONFERENCE

The National Bible Institution through its executive board extends to the brethren now assembled in their annual state conference at Grand Rapids, Mich., its Christian greeting. We pray for the success of the gathering and for God's blessing to rest upon the various local churches represented.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

As these lines go to press our church is putting on two weeks of Daily Vacation Bible School. Last year our daily attendance averaged 93, and we are hoping to better that this year. There are nine classes for the different ages, and the daily program is as follows: 9:30 to 9:45, opening exercises; 9:45 to 10:45, class study; 10:45 to 11:00 supervised recreation; 11:00 to 11:25, dramatic period; 11:25 to 11:45, secretary's report and musical drill.

These sessions run till July 22, with meetings each day except Saturdays. The Michigan conference is convening with us at the same time. Bro. Austin is teaching a class each day, and there is a sermon each night, except Saturdays. The annual Sunday school picnic will be held on Saturday, July 22, and our meetings will come to a close with three services on Sunday the 23rd.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

ST. CLOUD MINNESOTA

It appears that the best way to keep from doing things we should not do and accomplish that which we should do is to be busy, not about other people's business, but God's affairs. This writing finds our people here busy for the Lord and the salvation of all.

Following our State Conference we enjoyed the fine program rendered by the children in honor of Children's Day. The church was prettily decorated with Minnesota's natural foliage, which added to the occasion messages of God's great love for humanity.

Thursday afternoon, June 29, on the banks of Sauk River, the church school enjoyed themselves with games and refreshments.

Wednesday evening, July 5, we shall again possess a feast with God's people, as Bro. S. E. Magaw of Tippecanoe City, Ohio, brings us God's Word in the splendid way that is his custom. Bro. Magaw will be with us five days. We are glad to welcome him and do earnestly solicit the prayers of all while he labors with us.

We shall rejoice with the hope that we can see through the prophet Isaiah, in his 21st chapter, the 11th and 12th verses, "Watchman, what of the night? . . . The Watchman said, The morning cometh." Our hope is in that morning or that time when the trumpet shall sound. Are we listening for it?

A. E. Hoskins, Pastor.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

A special business meeting of the Church of God of Oregon, Ill., was held at the church, July 2, 1933, for the purpose of calling a pastor for the coming year. A motion was made and seconded that Bro. G. Eldred Marsh be retained as pastor for the coming conference year and that we cooperate with the General Conference to this end. This decision was unanimous.

Mabel Andrew, Secretary.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Sunday afternoon, July 2, another Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of California ended. Sentiment became enthusiastic as the brethren gave short talks and old-time songs warmed the hearts of those who participated.

On Friday afternoon Bro. Lichty gave the chief sermon of the day on the subject: "The Fallacy of the Doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul as Revealed by Recent Medical Experiments," in which he presented many interesting details of the experiments reported on reviving people who had been pronounced dead, and of their statements as to their experiences. On Saturday morning Bro. Adamson gave the chief sermon of the day, "The River of the Water of Life," using a chart of his own composition to emphasize his remarks. He gathered together many circumstances to show that the centurion spoken of in various places in the life of Jesus was none other than Cornelius, the first Gentile convert. On Sunday morning Bro. MacLeod occupied the time with a discussion of "The Coming Conflict," in which he showed that life is a conflict from the cradle to the grave, and that this age will end in a conflict social, economic, religious, and political as well as military. Bro. Hatch conducted the communion service with his usual fervor. In the afternoon, as a fitting closing to the regular services, Sr. Railsback summarized the biblical method of "How to Become Adopted Sons of God." Her sermons are noteworthy because of the great number of Scripture passages she is able to quote. The Bible school sessions were of great interest, and culminated in the best one led by Sr. Kauffman on Sunday morning.

On Saturday morning a permanent conference organization was set up, Bro. MacLeod being elected president; Bro. Adamson, vice president; Sr. Kauffman, secretary; and Bro. Hammond, treasurer. The next conference was tentatively set for early in October, and both Pomona and Los Angeles bid for it to come to their church homes. As one of its last acts the conference officially designated Bro. and Sr. E. C. Railsback, Bro. and Sr. Norman J. MacLeod, Sr. Jessie Kauffman, and Bro. Geo. P. Lichty to act as delegates from California to the General Conference. Those who attended the conference were delighted with the spirit of cooperation that pervaded the entire meeting, and are looking forward to the fall assembly.

At this writing we are grieved to hear that Sr. A. R. Dresser of Santa Ana is very low; she is well over eighty and is in bad condition with her heart. May the great Healer of all diseases take her case in hand. The two patients in our midst who are suffering from fractured hips, namely, Sr. Rich of Long Beach and Sr. Lizzie Railsback of Los Angeles, are getting along quite nicely.

HISTORIC PROPHECY

The class to be conducted by Bro. Norman J. MacLeod at the coming Bible School in Oregon, Illinois, which will have largely to do with fulfilled prophecy, will of necessity depend much on sacred and profane history for support. Bro. MacLeod was chosen to have charge of this important branch of biblical study owing to his special educational fitness for it, and because of the many years of experience he has had in the teaching of history in high school.

Prospective ministers and other Christian workers who contemplate engaging eventually or immediately in public activity, should not fail to avail themselves of this particular course in Bible and secular history, and its prophetic application. This course alone would more than repay one for the time, effort, and money expended in order that he might be present at the Bible School this year.

A BEREAVED SISTER

The following letter reaches us telling of the death of Mr. C. H. Nye, of North Anson, Maine. The bereaved widow will be remembered by many by her maiden name, Ervena S. Emery. May God's comforting arms surround her. Her communication is in part as follows:

"My husband (C. H. Nye) died a week ago last Sunday morning, June 18, from an internal cancer. He had an operation four years ago this month, but the disease had gone too far, and all that could be done was to make him as comfortable as possible. In all of his affliction he never wanted to speak of his trouble to others, and would answer when asked concerning his condition, 'Not too bad,' and turn the conversation to other things.

"Mr. Nye was a firm believer in the one 'precious faith,' the necessity of Christ's second coming; that living again depended on this, and on the resurrection when He comes. He would generally make an opportunity for talking on these things to those he met, and also of the signs of the times, passing out Restitution Heralds or some other literature on these important truths of God's written Word.

"We always found so much in The Restitution Herald that was helpful, and we looked forward to its coming each week, and when he was able we loved to read together.

"What would we do if we did not have this 'blessed hope' of the resurrection to look forward to? May I ask the prayers of God's dear children that we may all be faithful to the end and accounted worthy to share in the first resurrection when He comes, and moment by moment be found with the 'wedding garment' on."

FROM THE OLD DOMINION

The following items are gleaned from the "Gospel Searchlight," the excellent local paper issued by the energetic pastor of the Maurertown, Virginia, church. We omit quotation marks.

We are planning to be at General Conference the first of August, and busy in the Virginia Bible School the first of September, so we are not expecting to publish the Searchlight again until October.

We wish it were possible for each reader of the Searchlight to attend the Illinois Bible School and General Conference. We are living in very important days, and the classes on past, present, and future fulfillment of Scripture should prove of unusual interest and value.

We expect to spend the fifth Sunday of July with the brethren at Browntown.

Again we remind you that our own Virginia Bible School and Conference will be held at Maurertown, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3. We solicit the prayers of all for its success. Bro. M. W. Lyon will be our chief speaker this year. We invite you all to attend, and promise you a big welcome, and Christian, as well as Virginian, hospitality. Those desiring further information should write the pastor, Eld. Harry A. Sheets, Woodstock, Va., R. D.

The Restitution Herald has been so good recently that we feel that we must make mention of it again. If you do not take it you are missing some very fine, inspiring and instructive articles. We feel that The Herald should be in every Church of God home. We know that it is hard to meet all expenses and that there may be some who really cannot afford to subscribe but we would encourage you to try. It is necessary to feed the "inner man." We know that the source of all spiritual food is God's Word, but The Restitution Herald will help you to digest and assimilate that "food".

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Coffman are the parents of a son, born on June 3. The mother of this fine boy will be remembered as Sr. Mary Ritenour.

We also congratulate Bro. and Sr. Ezra E. Boyer on the arrival of a son in their home, born June 27. When we have learned the names of these little ones we will report concerning them again.

Sr. E. Regina O'Neal was graduated from the National University Law School and School of Economics and Government. We rejoice with Sr. O'Neal in her success.

BIBLE PRINCIPLES

One of the most valuable classes of the coming Illinois Bible School will undoubtedly be that conducted by M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Church of the Golden Rule (Church of God), of Cleveland, Ohio. This class, under the leadership of this experienced teacher in first principles, will be of special help to at least two different groups of people, whether they are old or young.

First, all who are seeking to know the essentials of Christian faith and practice as they are given in the Scriptures will find exactly what they need in this series of lessons. If you should have a friend whom you especially desire to interest in the gospel of the kingdom, the nature of man, coming of Christ, and similar basic truths, urge them to attend the class on Bible principles.

Second, those who wish to perfect themselves for teaching and preaching these elements of truth will also find in Bro. Lyon's logical and appealing method much of value, not only presented in a theoretical way, but demonstrated practically.

The committee in charge of the curriculum of the Bible School plans to make these lessons a part of the regular work of the Workers' Class in Christian service.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Bro. Arlen Marsh of Oregon, left last Wednesday for Indiana, where he is to assist in the Bible school and conference now in session at North Salem Church of God, five miles north of Plymouth.

Sr. Mary A. Gesin and her daughter, Alice, are spending a few days in St. Louis, Mo.

We notice that Bro. S. E. Magaw of Ohio, has just concluded a five day evangelistic effort at Eden Valley, Minn. Bro. Magaw is a powerful and interesting speaker, and we await a report of the meeting with much interest.

Speaking of the Exhibit, we are placing in the hands of the committee a number of our exchanges for comparison with The Restitution Herald, and that you may learn what others are doing and thinking with reference to the Lord's coming and conditionalism.

Inquiries are coming into the office regarding the possibility of resuming the Bible Training School work this fall. The entire matter rests upon the decision of the General Conference to be held next month, the funds that are made available, and the possibility of placing our students in active work when they have graduated. Let us all pray over this problem.

The splendid results following the joint effort of S. J. Lindsay and C. E. Lapp at Ripley, Ill., is a source of great encouragement to the church everywhere. A year ago last May twenty were baptized in Ripley at the close of the meeting conducted by F. J. Austin, and together with the nine more now reported indicates a splendid growth going on in this church in this rural community. May God continue to bless the efforts of our evangelists and pastors everywhere.

Bro. Cecil Smead, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. John Hammond of Los Angeles, and his sister, made a short stop in Oregon on their way to Indiana for the conference.

The summer Bible school now in progress at Grand Rapids, Mich., should result in much good to Sunday school and also to the local church. The greatest work of the church begins with children.

Pastor A. E. Hoskins of the Eden Valley, Minn., church has been getting out some very attractive bulletins which will be on display at the General Conference. They will provide one of the hundreds of helpful ideas to be presented by the Exhibit Committee this year.

Is there an aged one in your congregation who has no one to care for him or her? Suggest to all such that they investigate what Golden Rule Home has to offer in the way of tender care and lifelong security.

Bro. L. E. Conner and Bro. J. H. Williams, president and vice president respectively of the National Bible Institution, donned their overalls last Wednesday, and demonstrated their ability as cement workers by laying the foundation for a garage at the rear of a property owned by the Institution in this city. The rest of the board say, "Thank you!" by way of paying for their time.

With deepest sympathy we learn of the serious loss sustained by Sr. Ervena S. Nye, North Anson, Maine, Route 2. Sr. Nye will be remembered by many in New York and in Ontario, as well as in the middle west, by her former name of Emery. For many years she has been a faithful supporter of the Lord's work and a most earnest student of the Word. A line of sympathy will be appreciated we know.

Menacing National Perils

IN THESE days when the world is so rapidly making history our nation is menaced by many grave perils both from within and without. Want and hunger stalk through the land, little children are starving for bread; husbands and fathers, crazed by their failure to provide for loved ones, are taking their own lives; armies of the unemployed are growing desperate and Bolshevistic; rural life, the backbone of our nation, is being sapped and destroyed by the unbearable burden of exorbitant taxation; human life is held cheaply, murder for gold, for lust, for thrills is a daily occurrence; law enforcement is lax—while greed, graft, thievery, vice, and every form of dishonor prevail among public officials from the highest to the lowest—until we know not whom we may trust; meanwhile war clouds threaten, the skies grow darker.

A noted evangelist tells that in his boyhood days, while guarding cattle on a great western ranch, he learned to detect the signs of an impending stampede by the general nervousness prevailing throughout the entire herd just before the stampede began. And so it is throughout the world today; this great preacher tells that all the nations seem restless and nervous, so to speak, as if in expectation of some mighty impending catastrophe.

Yonder in Geneva, the wise and the great gathered to discuss peace—while wars and rumors of wars shook the earth. God's Word tells us plainly that there shall be no lasting peace on earth till the "mighty Prince of Peace" comes to begin His reign of righteousness. Until that day the only real peace shall be that peace which abides in the heart of the true believer—a peace which the world cannot give—a peace "which passeth all understanding."

The spiritual bankruptcy which we are facing today is the peril of all perils which menace our nation. America's future rests with our young people of today—the citizens of tomorrow. It is to these young people, God help us, that the evil one is making his strong appeal; seeking to break down the faith of our fathers, our heritage of the ages. Little by little, inch by inch, rank heresy under the guise of "modernism," "New Thought," "high science," and what not, has crept into the majority of our colleges and other institutions of learning. Many of our theological seminaries are tainted with it, and from thence it goes out to be broadcast from the pulpits throughout the land.

The Bible—God's own Holy Word in all its purity—is out of date and not to be taken literally, so say these self-styled wise ones—but must be changed and modified to suit the "itching ears" of the present generation. Once let these ideas of modernism get a foothold—and it is but a step into infidelity.

Whither shall we turn, and how shall we protect our children in these perilous times? God's Word answers this in Ephesians 6:11, "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

Yes, the Word of God, "the sword of the Spirit," is our only weapon for fighting the powers of darkness.

Christians, are we studying, teaching, and living God's Word today? Are we keeping the "sword" bright and shining, or is our "weapon" idle and dust-covered while we follow the god of pleasure and worship the idols of gold?

And what of the church today? Is she busy wielding the sword of the Spirit? "Be ye separate," commands the Lord in 2 Corinthians 6:17. Yet instead of pursuing its appointed way, following the Lord Jesus in its heavenly calling, the church has used its powers to acquire wealth, in building fine churches and institutions, in the observance of meaningless form in worship, and in the endless red tape of much organization. Instead of gathering her young people in colleges and schools where they might be trained after the manner of the Spirit in separation from the world, she has followed after the things of the flesh in order to build up large institutions with worldly prestige.

A president of a well-known denominational college once remarked in all seriousness, "We have to overlook many things in our college which are not permitted in state colleges—otherwise we could not get students to come." At another denominational university, the president of which is the head of his denomination in the South, great football games are held throughout the season. A large part of the men attending these games openly display bottles of whiskey, many of the girls are seen to be under the influence of drink, and many of the men publicly and shamelessly are drunk. Yet the Lord's money is used to support colleges like this and others; the Lord's money goes to hire students to come to these colleges and play on these teams in games which are scenes of such drunken revels. And ministers of the gospel are there and look on these scenes; then from their pulpits they plead for funds to support our denominational colleges.

Is it any wonder that our contributions are falling off? Is it any wonder that church boards all over the land are facing bankruptcy when the Lord's money, sorely needed for sending the gospel to lost souls, is so misappropriated in keeping up with the world? If such things must be, leave them to the secular institutions. Why have church schools and colleges unless they differ from those of the world? "Be ye separate," says the Lord. "Come out from among them."

Truly the forces of evil surround us today. Never was there a time when God's Word was so sorely needed. Never was there a time more imperative that Christian people be wielding "the sword." Great peace conferences, the League of Nations, arms, ships, and soldiers shall not avail for our protection—but the truth of God alone. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."—Caroline S. Colman in The Bible Advocate.

EPILOGUE TO HORROR

By Arlen Marsh

AT NO time in the history of the world has the mighty god of war exercised such power as that he is wielding today. In the dark days of 1914 immediately preceding the historic assassination of the Austrian Archduke Ferdinand at Sarajevo Europe bristled with a forest of swords, Mars held the entire continent in a grip of iron, peace was manifestly impossible; yet under the conditions aroused by the suspicion-breeding and invidiously governed international conferences of recent years the entire world is more ripe for a martial holocaust than it was when the Hapsburgs and Hohenzollerns pursued their mad dream of universal empire. Failure of the economic conference is inevitable; adjournment will be but an excuse for inability to reconcile differences; and, consequently, the ancient racial animosities will be raised to a still greater fever by domestic propaganda and by strict nationalistic policies. With Lausanne, London, Versailles, and all the other half-hearted attempts by men to insure perpetual military peace and monetary stabilization, this new convention will augment the forces of the great Red God. For such is Jehovah's will.

Predictions of this inevitable conflict and the irresistible pressure which now is evolving it indicate a period of terror and carnage such as has never been known before. Not only are all the death-dealing devices invented or controlled by men to be used in the terrible decimation to come, but the Bible also declares that at the worst of the struggle Jehovah will fight as in the day of battle, and the horrors of great earthquakes and plagues and storms will be added to the awful destruction of the war itself. So intense will be the fear created in the combatants by the divine visitation that they will cry for the rocks to fall upon them. Quick death will be sought in preference to a life of constant terror.

Joel describes these conditions in his closing chapter: "The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining. The Lord also shall roar

"Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless. And account that the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation."—2 Peter 3:14, 15.

out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake." Zechariah augments this description by saying of the plague "wherewith the Lord will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem": "Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth . . . And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague." Of such tremendous proportions will be the earthquakes that "the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south."

Convulsions so terrific as to equal those which must have torn the earth during the deluge will flatten and split mountains, create new and destroy old valleys, and establish an entirely new topography. The rule of Mars will be forgot in the face of cataclysms too dreadful to be described adequately. In establishing the eternal kingdom God will unleash every force among the elements to impress upon men that He is Jehovah and to punish them for their deliberate rebellion against His omnipotent will.

But when the awful carnage and destruction is complete and the civilization erected by man is almost completely wrecked, God will begin the operation of His government in Zion in a tranquillity unprecedented among nations. Ruling through His kingly Son, Jehovah will make peace where once was war, a haven for His own and for all other people. With its capital set up in Jerusalem this new form of rulership will gradually extend itself throughout the world at the voluntary invitation of all other nations. David's kingdom again will come into its own; and, as promised in a multitude of texts, the Israelites will become a respected and, perhaps, an envied race. Under this regime "the (Please turn to Page Ten)

The Editor's Prayer

MOST gracious heavenly Father, Thou who art the Preserver and Protector of Thy people, once again we present ourselves before Thee as suppliants at Thy throne. Because we realize our weakness, we come unto Thee, the source of all strength, asking Thy help that we may battle more successfully against the forces of evil around us; that we may resist the insidious influences that press on every side; that we may not be led away from Thee and from Thy truth by the specious promises of the pleasure-loving world; but may we be kept close to Thee, sheltered from the ravages of sin until the Master comes, in whose name we pray. Amen.

Among Those Present

ASPORTS writer for one of the large dailies, in commenting on a recent prize fight in New York, says that the management of the event passed out to the representatives of the press a mimeographed list of "prominent or notorious names entitled, 'Among those present were —.'" The correspondent observes, "Down in front, as named in the long list, we had with us, among others, half a dozen of the most cynical grafters that the City of New York has produced. All were well dressed, well behaved, and famous for their private virtue and their goodness of heart, at general public expense, to poor democrats in the slums. But in the back seats, no doubt, we had with us a correct proportion of petty thieves and hoodlums, loafers, chain store stickup men, wife beaters, and such. But being in the 'crowd,' they were the masses; the longsuffering, noble masses."

However cynical his remarks may be, the reporter, nevertheless, shows an interesting and suggestive cross-section of American life that "points a moral" if it does not "adorn a tale."

We are not concerning ourselves here with the brutality of the prize fight. That is too obvious to need emphasis. What we are concerned about is the matter of associations and their effect on character. Not only is "a man known by the company he keeps," but he is largely what he is because of the company he keeps.

Consciously and unconsciously we are affected for better or for worse by those with whom we habitually associate. Every individual, however lacking he may be in the qualities of leadership, is possessed of a certain degree of influence over others. It is impossible for us to entirely insulate ourselves against the power of personal contact. We are by nature emotional beings. We absorb sensations as a sponge does water. It is this fact that makes the matter of associations of such vital importance. Pour a bottle of red ink about the roots of a plant bearing a white flower and in a short time the blossom turns to pink, and if the treatment is continued it will take on the exact shade of the color applied to the roots. It is the same with men. They readily take the "color" of their constant associates.

If we are frequently counted "among those present" at places given over wholly to worldly pleasure, sinful or otherwise, we will soon take on the tint of worldliness as a consequence. This is inevitable. On the other hand, if we form church-going habits, seldom absenting ourselves from Sunday school, Berean and church services, we will become in a measure a reflection in character of those whom we meet in the house of God. And this change in disposition and character will be brought about quite as much by the associations we enjoy as it will through the teaching and preaching to which we listen.

Contrast, if you please, the "atmosphere" of the church—any church—with that of the theater, the dance hall, the card room, and the prize fight arena! Which of these places where people gather in mass association will uplift the jaded spirits most? Which will quiet the tired nerves, bring new hope and courage to the "down-and-out," ease the sting of sorrow or regret, and send forth the individual who attends them with the greatest degree of spiritual and bodily rejuvenation? Need we even pause for the answer?

In the not distant future there will be assembled in one place the largest and most distinguished gathering of men and women that has ever been seen in a single company. It will be composed of the noblest and most faithful souls of all history—men and women who have given their lives to the self-sacrificing service of God and man. They are Jehovah's choice ones. They are His called ones. These are they who have passed through the fires of testing successfully, and are now awaiting the laurel wreath of victory from the hand of the King. Shall we be numbered "among those present" when the Lord calls and crowns His own?

THE INDIGNANT CHRIST

"Take these things hence; make not My Father's house an house of merchandise."—John 2:16.

THE CHRIST has been painted in His gentleness, which would not break a bruised reed nor quench a smoking flax. He has been painted in His meekness, turning the other cheek to His smiters, and healing the ear of one who was His enemy. He has been painted in His patience, excusing the sleeping disciples for their torpor, after, in His supreme crisis, He had besought them to watch with Him but one hour. But if anyone thinks of the Lord Jesus as a mollycoddle, let him behold Him as He comes suddenly into His temple!

In the court there is a perfect hubbub of activity. The sharp voices of the buyers and sellers engaged in their bargaining mingle with the bleatings of the animals. The sanctuary on Mount Zion has become transformed into an Oriental bazaar!

Upon that scene of seething commercialism the Man of Galilee makes His appearance.

Year after year that pandemonium has gone on, sanctioned by the priests as a source of revenue. Did not Jewish pilgrims to the temple need to procure sacrifices? Was this not an accommodation to them?

From the steps Jesus of Nazareth beholds the scene of desecration with a soul stirred to its depths. Suddenly, above all the bedlam, His voice rings out like a trumpet blast. It reaches the ears of every man in that multitude, and in an instant quiet prevails. All eyes turn in the direction of the sound.

Jesus stands alone, in a commanding position. His eyes flash, and in His hands there is a whip of small cords. With burning gaze He sweeps the whole area of profanation. And He cries, in a tone which winds and waves and devils and the dead are powerless to disobey, "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise."

He overthrew the tables of the money changers, and cast out the buyers and sellers. Like guilty culprits they cowered before Him as if afraid He would use upon them the scourge He held in His hand. From the force of moral authority they shrank, and in their haste and confusion to get away, overturned their own tables, leaving their dishonest gains scattered upon the ground.

The wrath of the Lamb is infinitely more dreadful than the wrath of the dragon. To those cowering Jews was given that day a glimpse of a coming day when the captains, the great men and the mighty men shall flee into the holes of the rocks "for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth."

Jesus was never angry for Himself. No personal affront ever ruffled His temper. But that in the place consecrated to the worship of God should have been so forgotten and the principles of His cause so outraged—that the Son of God could not endure. In the name of His Father He rebuked the high sacrilege, and in so doing He revealed His divinity.

And He is still the same holy, sin-hating Christ. The presence of worldliness in His precincts He will not tolerate. A secular policy, a commercial spirit, irreverence, grieve Him as much today as then.

What if Jesus of Nazareth were to stand watching at the doors of modern church life? In a recent address, a prominent religious editor listed what he termed the "Seven Fatal Follies" of the church, as follows:

The political church, endeavoring to hold the influence of legislators by professional lobbyism.

The sensational church, with Jazz bands instead of choirs, and picked beauties as ushers.

The financial church, which makes the end justify the means.

The epileptic church, which institutes Bible marathons and endurance praying.

The social church, maintaining that its first duty is to solve race problems, install better bath tubs, and investigate coal mines.

The inactive church, smugly self-sufficient.

The modernistic church, which would equalize Einstein with Christ.

This list might be almost indefinitely extended to include among others:

The somnolent church, altogether indifferent to the needs of humanity and careless of the trend of the times.

The tenetless church, which has no teaching which is counted of sufficient moment to be worthy of emphasis.

Great Purifier of the Church, purge Thy temple of its unholy traffic! Before the white light of Thy holiness, make every evil thing to flee!
—Llewellyn A. Wilcox in The Bible Advocate.

The Star Road

"The star, which they saw in the east, went before them."

The star road is the fairest road
That we may ever follow;
It winds, as sweetly as a song,
Through desert and through hollow.
It leads us to high mountain peaks,
And into promised lands—
And, at its end, A Baby sleeps,
With tiny, outflung hands.

The star road is the straightest road,
Although it climbs and dips;
There always is a garden spot,
A spring for parching lips,
There always is a bit of shade
When midday gilds the skies—
And, at the end, a Mother stands,
With wonder in her eyes!

Oh, we who follow in the path
That starlight has made bright,
Need never fear the crash of storms,
The tumult of the night;
For through the crowding centuries
The angel voices call—
And, at the end, the Savior waits—
A haven for us all!

The Renaissance of the East

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

RECENTLY, it was the writer's privilege to hear an address given by E. Stanley Jones, lecturer, author, and missionary of the East, who spoke on the above subject at a mass meeting of about two thousand people.

Just before sailing for America he had a round-table experience for ten days with Gandhi. He said there was never a time that he felt more like being a missionary than after he had left Gandhi; and he thinks he would rather live in India the next ten years than in any other country. He says the immediate future there lies between Karl Marx (communism) and Jesus Christ, and that communists are just waiting for Gandhi to pass off the scene.

In the beginning of his lecture he told of the vast changes that were going on both in China and India because of the revival of learning that is revolutionizing this entire country. They are turning to the facts of life and do not listen to old ideas as they used to do. They expect to be on equivalent terms nationally with any other nation; for India's three hundred and fifty millions have great faith in themselves, and there lies the chief tendency toward revolution which, if not controlled, will undoubtedly completely overthrow western civilization.

The tragedy in the western world is that we have more power than characters to control it and stabilize our industries and institutions which are trembling because of the breaking of character. The great underlying principles of integrity and unselfishness are sadly lacking in our present system, and these are the only conditions that can keep it from a collapse.

He said that Americans have too soon forgotten whence they came and that it is a long way from the Scotch of the fourth century to Henry Drummond, and that when the Indians were highly cultured our ancestors were savages. India never will forget this, and again wants to stand on its feet as a nation of the world, thinking that they can match anything the western world has.

In this connection he told of a conversation which he had with an Indian. They had been talking about the airplane as an American achievement. The Indian did not like to acknowledge American superiority, so he said that when India was a great nation, they even had flying houses. Mr. Jones said he looked at him a moment to see if he meant it and then said, "You don't mean that, do you?" To this he replied, "As an Indian I do, but not as a man." He told how their absolute faith in themselves was bound to give them a place of equality nationally. The seriousness of this condition will be in what follows. What will India's national consciousness mean to the world?

In the following review of a most enlightening lecture on conditions in India, Sister Kent indicates the danger that menaces Western Civilization through the awakening of the Eastern races, and then very forcefully declares that the only hope, not only for the West, but also for the East, and for all the world, lies in the speedy coming of the Lord as King of kings. An article entitled, "Why Do the Heathen Rage?" dealing with the same subject appeared in our issue of June 20.

In speaking of the caste system, he told how dead their life had been for the past thousand years because of this system which has so greatly hardened them that they are the most rigid of any nation. Now a new day seems to be opening to them, and there are actually five revolutions going on there at the same time which will cause vast and possibly sudden changes, not alone in India, but in the entire world.

Taking these revolutions in the order that he gave them, they are: the intellectual and spiritual; the industrial, for India is trying hard to turn to modern industrialism; the social; the political; and the national. The effect of these revolutions upon the life there is terrible and their minds are most sadly confused, one would imagine, as a result. He thinks it is a shame for outside nations to take advantage of the chaotic conditions there, for it has taken other nations a much longer period of years to accomplish what India "expects" to do in a comparatively short period.

He spoke of the crashing of outside industries that is going on in India's great struggle for economic independence, and he said that India was ruined industrially for years because of so many foreign industries. In order to bring about the crushing of them the average day wage in their march for freedom is the pathetically small sum of six cents. For months they did nothing. Then the idea came to them to "sit and spin," for which India seemed to have a tremendous capacity. "India judges wages on one-fourth-stomach or one-half stomach and not on a Cadillac or a Ford," he said. He mentioned capitalism, saying that communism was "a mustard plaster on the back of capitalism," but on account of the atheistic tendency he fears it cannot endure long. But it has truly stirred the life of India to the very depths. He then told of a missionary meeting in which revolutionary literature was cast down from the balcony and some one cried out "Long live revolution!" He stated some of the dire results revolution would have upon the sixty-two million outcasts, who are restless and on the move. "Where are they going?" he asked. They

The River of the Water of Life

By J. E. Adamson

I AM reading for a text the first two verses of the twenty-second chapter of the book of Revelation: "And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." The chart we have before us is made with the desire that the thoughts expressed in the text, and the other scriptures we will read, may be presented to our minds in a somewhat concrete form, and perhaps leave a more lasting impression than would otherwise be the case.

We propose to present the idea that these passages deal with the spiritual aspects of life as contrasted with the fleshly side of life, and that the two together form a stream or river of life from the earliest dawn of spiritual qualities in man, the Spirit always warring with the flesh and the flesh against the Spirit. There have been periods when the Spirit seemed to predominate, and at such times the power and blessings of God were seen spread abroad in the world. Then again there were times when the flesh seemed to get the leadership, and there was little or no evidence of any relationship between God and man.

In the chart the spiritual is shown in blue, originating in the Garden of Eden, with the streams named for the fruits of the Spirit which grew and fruited along their banks. These are Love, Joy, Peace, Gentleness, Goodness, Faith, Meekness, and Self-control. (Galatians 5:22-24.) This blue stream has feeders all down through the ages, but we only attempt to show the more outstanding examples, such as the time of the great movement of Abraham and his followers and heirs; then the time of David and the prosperity of the nation of Israel up to the time of the Babylonian captivity; then the time of the Maccabees, when the Spirit had great out-pourings and mighty deeds were done in the name of the Lord God. Then came the Christ and the greatest single advance in spiritual up-building ever known, affecting the River of the Water of Life more than any other inflow of the clear as crystal type of water up to now. The time of the Protestant martyrs brought another small flood, which was added to by the times of the Reformation.

The fleshly side of the stream is shown in red, rising in the land of Nod from the influence of Cain and his clan.

The following thought-provoking sermon was delivered before the California Conference held recently in Long Beach. We regret that some of the force of the discourse is lost through our inability to reproduce the original chart with which the speaker illustrated his remarks. Brother Adamson is a Bible student of many years' experience and of unusual ability. For many years he was the pastor of the Church of God ("Williams Street Chapel") in Pomona, California, which he was also largely instrumental in establishing.

These streams are named for the fruits which they produce, Adultery, Wrath, Strife, Envy, Drunkenness. (Galatians 5:19-21.) These fleshly elements have polluted the stream of life from the time that the sons of God took themselves wives of the daughters of men. (Genesis 6:2.) The pollution became greater in times of prosperity, until man in the pride of selfishness seemed almost to forget God; then came times when God let man fall into the hand of the spoiler and hard times of one kind or another brought him to his knees, and the stream was partially purified.

Sometimes it became a broad quiet stream, "The Waters of Shiloh," which flow softly and which the people of Israel refused (Isaiah 8:6); and then they were flooded by the wildly rushing stream of the king of Assyria.

Never was there a book so full of figures of speech as is the Bible, and there is no figure used more often than this one of water in its various characteristics, of springs, brooks, rivers, and seas. They represent the people of the earth in their various groups, such as tribes, nations, and groups of nations. When we come to understand the use of these figures the Book takes on a new interest.

Never was there a river flowing to the sea but it had its source somewhere in brooks and springs. So with this River of the Water of Life. We find at its source the "fountain of living waters" (Jeremiah 2:13), which is Jehovah of Israel. In Jeremiah 18:14, 15 it goes back even to the melting snows of the mountains of Lebanon. Again, Jesus says, "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."—John 4:14.

In Psalm 46:4 we have this: "There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God." To my mind there is no doubt that this can be none other than the River of the Water of Life which we find as the outstanding feature of the street of "the city that lieth foursquare." This river is shown with its source of supply coming out from under the throne of God and the Lamb (Revelation 22:1). Joel sees the stream coming from the house of the Lord (3:18). John calls it "the fountain of the water of life" (Revelation 21:6), from which all who thirst may drink freely.

Every living being may, if he so desires, not only take of this fountain of the water of life, but he may go even farther and become one of the springs from which the branches are supplied. Hear what the Master says in John 7:37, 38: "On the last day of the feast Jesus stood up and cried aloud, 'Whoever is thirsty let him come to me and drink. He who believes in me, from within him rivers of living waters shall flow.'"—Weymouth. Are we keeping the outlets of this spring clear of weeds and filth, so that the water may come bubbling forth clear as crystal and able to make the tree of life bear the fruits of love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, and faith? Or is it kept choked with the things of the flesh, so that the outflow is tinged with red? If it is filthy let us come to the fountain and wash, for we are promised that though our sins be as scarlet He will make them white as snow (Isaiah 1:18).

The teachings of Christ act to cleanse the thoughts and actions of them who hear and believe, as a filter cleans mud out of water as it passes through. It is not usually done in a moment or a day, and sometimes it takes years. One story to portray this will not be out of the way. We are told that Jesus entered into Capernaum at a time when the centurion's servant was sick and ready to die. The elders of the Jews urged Jesus to heal this man's servant, because the centurion was such a good man, having helped them by the building of a synagogue and had done much alms to the poor. The centurion, however, showed his character and his faith by asking Jesus not to bother to come to the house, but to only say the word and his servant would be healed. Jesus told them that this was faith beyond any He had found in Israel; and the servant was healed at once. (Luke 7:1-10.)

Months passed, and the centurion was moved to the city of Jerusalem, and we come in contact with him on Calvary, sitting to one side as the terrible tragedy of the cross was being carried out; and out of his sorrow and disgust at the scene we hear him saying, "Truly this was the Son of God." (Matthew 27:54.)

Then for several years we lose sight of this most remarkable centurion of the Roman army. Almost without warning we have him brought back into the picture in Acts the tenth chapter, where we have set before us the finished product of a man, once a pagan officer in the Roman army, now a Christian in every way except for burial in the grave of water, as "the answer of a good conscience toward God." The "fountain opened in the house of David for sin and for uncleanness" has done its work, and this man of the flesh is now the man of God. Here he is set before us as Cornelius, captain of the Italian regiment quartered in Caesarea. He was religious and Godfearing, and so was every member of his household. He was also liberal in his charities to the people, and continually praying to God.

No one can doubt that this was the same centurion we saw at Capernaum and at Jerusalem. Seven years or more the Spirit of God had been striving mightily with the once pagan mind to rid it of unfruitful works of darkness and bring it into oneness with the infinite Jehovah, and now the work is nearly complete.

We have set before us also the Jew, Simon Peter, who still thought God did not want anyone except Jews for His people. It would seem that the final scene was as much for Peter's benefit as for the completion of the conversion of Cornelius. When he heard the story of the vision of the angel from the lips of Cornelius, Peter cried out, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."

Down through the ages great characters have come on the scene from time to time whose lives have fed with crystal water the River of the Water of Life. David says (Psalm 84:6), "Blessed are the ways of them who, passing through the valley of Baca findeth in it springs." The springs are there if we but look for them and the Valley of Baca is a figure of the course of our lives. We may find it a desert, or we may in the name of Christ find in it springs of that water which "springs up into everlasting life."

In Isaiah 33:21 we are told that in God's city the "Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams." And again, in Isaiah 35:6: "In the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." One of the effects of these waters will be to make "the lame man leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb sing." "The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life."—Proverbs 10:11. "Understanding is a wellspring of life unto him that hath it."—Proverbs 16:22. "The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and the wellspring of wisdom as a flowing brook."—Proverbs 18:4. "The Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not."—Isa. 58:11.

Well did the sweet singer of Israel say, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."—Psalm 1:1-3.

Ezekiel, in his forty-seventh chapter, pictures these waters of life flowing out from the throne room of the temple, at the right side of the altar, and flowing out to cleanse the nations of the world in a stream that increased in volume as it flowed on its healing mission. These waters are made up of all nations and languages, people and tongues, coming up to the throne from year to year for the story of how to be clean. "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."—Isaiah 2:3, 4.

On the way through the years these waters have furnished the background for some notable symbols. In Revelation seventeen the harlot of all times is shown sitting upon the waters, and they were red with the blood of the Protestant martyrs. "The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues."

In the future will be displayed the blue waters gathered to form "as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God. And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God . . . Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest."

Every person has the opportunity to partake of the fountain of the water of life freely, and when it has been taken it will, if we only let it, spring forth into everlasting life. When we get into the wrong environment we will be liable to get some red into the blue, but we have with the Father a sympathetic Advocate in the person of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who is able to save us to the uttermost, that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for us.

"And he shewed me a pure river of the water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him: and they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads." "And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

How Would I Face Death?

By George B. Alldridge

---

"My eager desire and hope being that I may never feel ashamed, but that now as ever I may do honour to Christ in my own person by fearless courage, whether that means life or death, no matter! As life means Christ to me, so death means gain."—Philippians 1:20, 21, Moffatt.

ONE week ago today, July 4, a brother, also an elder in the Church of God, was present with a gathering of young people members of the ecclesia over which for several years he served as senior elder. Today he lies in his grave. My wife and I attended the obsequies, which were held in the church, he being a member of that body for many years; also his father, brother, and sister.

The minister who presided gave a brief eulogy, and after reading a selection of scriptures appropriate to the occasion gave an eloquent discourse, basing his remarks upon the text of Philippians 1:21: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

The last words of the deceased as he passed away in his brother's arms, were, "I don't want to die; I would like to live a little longer."

To some these words may seem inconsistent to the profession of faith he always faithfully maintained in the hope of a resurrection from the dead. The more I think of his last words, the more I feel he expressed the same wish that Jesus expressed in the Garden of Gethsemane (Luke 22: 42-44), and which Hebrews 5:7 confirms: "In the days of his flesh, with bitter cries and tears, he offered prayers and supplications to Him who was able to save him from death; and he was heard because of his godly fear."—Moffatt.

My wife's mind was deeply impressed with what she had heard and seen. She remarked, "Pa, death is a horrible thing, and far from a thing desired."

This has set me thinking. Suppose I had been in his place. A sudden illness swoops down upon me. No one but me seems to guess its extent. My friends are quite calm about it; I am not so, for I have felt the chill of death. It advances; others begin to stir around me. It advances still; they grow alarmed. And while it is gaining on me rapidly, surely, one distracted soul is looking out for its way. Unless Jesus or an angel be standing by, it is horrible. For agony has seized upon me, and hardly leaves me power to think.

They say this is the experience of drowning men. The abyss summons me. My whole being seems to shrink from itself; but my mind, if I am conscious, looks on, contemplating the inevitable, this near dissolution, that it has no power to prevent.

How cold it is where we are going, how bare, how sad! It seems as though a mere void were opening out; nothing more that is familiar; nay, nothing whatever.

Those we love are standing by, mute, alarmed,—they weep; but those tears seem to me far off. I feel I am quite alone, most completely denuded of all. I am traveling a road whose end only I discern. No one—not even those whose pale faces are more altered than my own—no one comes with me. I seem to hear them. They remain in the place inhabited by men: I—I am swept away: I must go: darkness surrounds me. All is over, life has passed away and returned to that glorious God who gave it.

This, my brothers, is death. Was our brother justified in saying, "I don't want to die; I would like to live a little longer"?

Shall I give you another picture of One to whom I look for final deliverance from this terrible enemy?

Poor! Jesus was poor! Depreciated! who was ever more so? He who came eating and drinking; public respectability was in arms against Him. He, the disturber of the people, the destroyer of the law—why! Caiaphas, listening to His words, tore his robes and cried out, "Blasphemy!" He, the Heir to the throne of David, was dragged by the partisans of order and good government before Pilate and condemned by Pilate to be beaten with rods, and crowned with thorns. Oppressed! Jesus lived in the very midst of the coarse and ignorant, and those rough natures weighed upon Him. Weary! No cross in the world could ever repeat His lassitude. Despoiled in His affections! Judas sold Him; Peter denied; His brothers even proclaimed Him mad. Tortured by inner conflicts! Satan tempted Him. Moved with beautiful sadness! Ah, yes! Beyond doubt He sighed for the kingdom of heaven, even as we do, only more emphatically so, because His vision of it was so much more exalted than ours. He yearned to save the world with a greater intensity than we do. Exiled as it were from the abode of His Father, what a longing desire! "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee: as thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

Could I have uttered these words, my whole being must have been filled with an immense desire; yet afraid of death, trembling at the thought of encountering the divine justice as expressed in Isaiah 53:10.

Dear brethren, the agony of Gethsemane answers to ours. No sane man longs for death. Even the animal world seeks to avoid it. It is the law of our being.

As I think of this departed brother my heart warms toward him, for he was a manly fellow. To me these lines express his character:

"Our God is love; and all His saints
His image bear below;
The heart with love to God inspired,
With love to man will glow."

My golden text is, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."—John 3:14.

Death will come to me sooner or later. How can I meet it? I realize that now I am living, that I am the master of my own conduct and accountable to no one here upon earth for the tempers which I cherish or the disposition I manifest in my daily life. Do I hate an enemy or refuse to forgive an injury? Do I pass by on the other side while my neighbor may be in grievous want? Do I spend my substance in selfish gratifications or even to hoard it up for others? God leaves me to follow my own bent; there is no fear, if I am churlish or malicious, that fire will come down and consume me. Now God's sun shines alike upon the merciful and the uncharitable; and the rain waters alike those fields which spread their bounty upon God's needy creatures, and those which enrich no one but their covetous owner.

But it will not be always so. There will be a time when we must render an account. And just as it is appointed for men to die once and after that to be judged, so Christ, after being once sacrificed to bear the sins of many, will appear again, not to deal with sin, but for the saving of those who look out for him. (Heb. 9:27, 28.)

The question will then be, Have you used your strength to injure, your wit to insult, your power to oppress? If we now are guilty of these things, we are bearing the name, but do not possess the spirit of a Christian. "For the interests of the flesh are hostile to God; they do not yield to the law of God (indeed they cannot). Those who are in the flesh cannot satisfy God. But you are not in the flesh, you are in the Spirit, since the Spirit of God dwells within you. Anyone who does not possess the Spirit of Christ does not belong to him."—Romans 8:7-9, Moffatt.

It is the creed of some and the thought of most people, at times, that there is an evil one, some rival power who is the foe of God and the human race who is the author of all this darkness and destruction. They will not have it that an infinitely good and wise God is responsible for so much confusion in this world. They therefore vindicate God and indict the devil who, it seems, is almost equal to God, and in much gets the better of Him. If this could be done it would be an easy way for us to justify our impatience in times of trouble. We could then charge them up to the devil and be as vindictive as we wished. But it would not be so easy a matter to point out where infinite wisdom and goodness end, and where the evil work begins, or what is evil and what is good and to whom and under what circumstances they are such. Any attempt to point out what is the work of divine goodness in this world and what the mischief of a demon would be vain. Two rulers, whose powers are respectively in any proportion to the evil and the good that exist, would be a fatal dualism.

We are not always in a position to know what evil and good are. The only safe attitude is that of faith in God's infinite wisdom and goodness. We can with confidence depend upon God. He does not share His authority with another. We may not know, but we know that He knows. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" He sees the end from the beginning, and toward that end He beneficently works.

"I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction."—Hosea 13:14.

Once I knew a man who had a pious look;
He'd been totally immersed, except his pocketbook.
He'd put a nickel on the plate,
And then with might and main he'd sing,
"When we asunder part, it gives us inward pain."

The Key to God's Prophetic Calendar

By John E. Hammond

DANIEL, a prophet greatly beloved of God, was used in a marvelous way to bring to view the order and many details of events leading up to the end of the present age. He, however, was not privileged to understand the final consummation of these, even though he sought diligently to do so. God's set time for this had not arrived; for His plans and purposes had not yet developed to the point when His deep mysteries and the unsearchable riches of His grace should be made known. He had purposed that the revelation of these mysteries should be given into the hands of His Son. Daniel was told: "Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."

It is written by John as recorded in the fifth chapter of Revelation, "And I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals. And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof? And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon. And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book neither to look thereon. And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book."

We must bear in mind that Jesus now sits with His Father in the midst of the Father's throne. The throne of David is the one promised to be His, and those who are His at His coming will reign with Him in the midst of that throne, on the earth, in Jerusalem.

The book here opened by Jesus is the book of Revelation, one of the least understood books of the Bible. Earnest and devout men have sought to find the time of its fulfillment and to unravel and apply its mysteries. The One who gave ample warning of His thief-like coming in the closing dark night of this present age has entered into this glorious God-given mission no other could accomplish. We have reached the day-dawn, and the illuminating Holy Spirit is the day-star heralding the coming of a new era (2 Peter 1:19).

Soon, after the sounding of the six trumpets, and the seventh, or last one, begins to sound, the Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings. The brightness of that day shall dispel all darkness, replace the stony heart of man with a heart of flesh, and write indelibly the righteous eternal laws of Jehovah in their inward parts. The Holy Spirit is the fire that shall burn as an oven in the hands of the righteous to tread down the wicked (Malachi 4:3). When God shall have poured out His Spirit upon all flesh, then shall all tears be wiped away from all faces.

The author of the following interesting prophetic study realizes that all will not immediately look upon the details of this theme exactly as he does, but he invites the prayerful and studious consideration of our readers to his message, being very firm in the conviction that the threatened destruction of the ungodly is not far away. In connection with the publication of this article it is well for us to state that the Church of God does not claim to be able to foresee the exact day of the Lord's return, but we watch with deepest interest the signs that indicate His speedy coming.

The opening of these seven seals in the hands of the worthy Lamb of God is being fulfilled before our veil-covered eyes. He has been a faithful High Priest and Advocate for a firstborn company at the right hand of God. From thence He comes, clothed with all power in heaven and in earth, to judge the world in righteousness. As a preparatory work He has been exercising that power through the Holy Spirit, making way for His personal return to call forth and change those who are His.

The World War was the result of the opening of the sixth seal. Seven is God's number of perfection. When the seven seals are broken, and the seven trumpets are sounded, God's curses shall be lifted from the scattered sons of Israel and they shall come into the blessings promised to them through their despised and long-rejected Messiah, the Son of God. Then shall these curses come upon the heads of Israel's enemies, when they, too, come into judgment through the plagues poured out upon them.

Then shall be fulfilled Deuteronomy 33:13-17: "Blessed of the Lord be his land (Joseph's), for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh."

These two horns have the blessing of the angel which redeemed their grandfather Jacob from all evil, and that have grown into a multitude in the midst of the earth (Genesis 48:16). These two horns comprise the "fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches (have) run over the wall."—Genesis 49:22.

England and the United States, respectively, represent Ephraim and Manasseh, the two horns of Joseph. The international conflict now brewing, will bring a temporary overwhelming scourge upon them by the archenemies of these two nations as a result of deep-seated hatred and jealousy. But because of God's purpose in using them to protect Judah and the bringing in of everlasting righteousness, their bow shall abide in strength, and the arms of their hands shall be made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob (Genesis 49:24). The Lion and the Eagle are kings of all the beasts of the earth and birds of the air. The Almighty has designed them as such, and His zeal shall accomplish the works He has purposed in His heart to perform from ancient times.

The attitude of most of the nations, given aid and nourished by the United States, has shown them unthankful for the unselfish benevolence extended to them. The liberality extended is now looked upon as a piece of foolishness. But, as is true with individuals, God shall use the foolish to confound the wise and mighty.

We return now to the opening of the seventh seal. In Revelation 8 we find that there was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour. It is well understood that heaven as here used signifies governments. In God's calendar there are twelve hours in the day; and a day is as a year, with 360 days in the year. Thus 360 days by His count equals 360 years. One month, or one-twelfth of a year equals one-twelfth of 360 year-days, or 30 years. The silence period, then, is one-half of 30 years or 15 years. Silence came at the close of the World War November 11, 1918. Fifteen years added to 1918 brings us to 1933. The revelator says about half an hour, leaving the time indefinite for the sounding of the first trumpet which must be not far from the 1933 Armistice anniversary in November.

It is easy to see that the present economic world conference will fail to accomplish what on the surface is sought; for the love of gold and selfishness will only hasten the day to be seen now when clouds of thick darkness are gathering.

When the time arrives for the sounding of the first trumpet the four winds of heaven will break loose. If you are not in the Ark of Safety I implore you, with all the earnestness I possess, to consider carefully the things I have here written. To the brotherhood they are meant as a contribution of an unworthy and unprofitable servant, trusting in the all-sufficient grace extended through Jesus Christ our Lord who is able to keep all that are His until the day of the Father's finished mystery in His worthy Son.

THE RENAISSANCE OF THE EAST

are waiting for an opportunity. Will it come when the nations are all ready for the world's last great war, is the question that seems to come to one's mind as we ponder these gigantic problems that no one but God can ever solve.

Yes, the East is being stirred to its very depths. We hear it from many sources. The outcasts are rising everywhere and demanding social equality. They are not interested in going into temples any more, but are waiting for an opportunity to conquer. If it comes, they will take everything they can get. Our present foreigner against whom we often hear outbursts of wrath and disgust, may not be a drop in the bucket to what the future one may be, and should Christ tarry much longer we do not see a very cheerful outlook for the white race, who are, it has been reported, outnumbered greatly by the dark skinned races.

But now, to go back to the speaker. In conclusion he illuminated the cross and told the great need of Christian teaching and training there. Yet after all had been said by this forceful speaker, one could not help but feel a little disappointment to think that he had not mentioned that the great and only hope of deliverance for India from its present seething condition, as well as for all other nations, was the soon coming of Christ as King of kings, for the situation is such the world over that nothing but a divine Ruler could handle the present almost chaotic conditions.

EPILOGUE TO HORROR

ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: and they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

As an eternal epilogue to the horror of Armageddon, the Plain of Esdraelon on which countless decisive battles have been fought and on which the mightiest conflict of all time is to occur, will be the peace and safety of the empire of God. Measures of righteousness and not of selfish war will cause the kingdom to cover eventually the entire world. Graft and immorality of every sort will be eradicated from the government of Israel; and, in consequence of their recognition of this fact, "many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

In accordance with the predictions of Daniel and of the Christ the growth of Jehovah's government will be slow; the kingdom will not at first be established throughout the earth. The nations, seeing the benefits to be derived from union with the rulership of the Messiah, voluntarily will seek to be added to His territory. Torn by the awful destruction of the tribulation period and by the convulsions wrought by God, the countries gladly will ask admission to the kingdom of prosperity, health, and happiness, so putting a period to the insensate warfare and argument in which human government always indulges. Thus, slowly the divine will is to grasp the scepter of the world; and in this grasping lies the conclusion and the epilogue to the terrors and horrors of man's rule.

WE KNOW that many Bereans from different localities are coming to Conference and Bible School at Oregon, and that these Bereans are looking forward to obtaining a great deal of benefit from the Berean Day activities. An interesting program is being planned, the details of which will soon appear on this page.

SOME DUTIES OF A CHRISTIAN

Joy

"Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice."—Philippians 4:4. The Christian has a positive command from God to be joyful, and it should be kept as scrupulously as the others. After all, a Christian's is the only happy life. To the natural joy in living is added, in the Christian's case, the hope of a better and happier condition in the future.

A Christian and a believer in Jehovah has many definite reasons for being glad. Psalm 5:11 gives one of these.

Firmness

After one has taken on Christ, one must remain true and unshaken in order to be worthy of Him. Christianity is no field for weakness and vacillation. This duty is expressed in Hebrews 10:23: "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering."

Kindness

Certainly this is not the least important of Christian virtues. It is, in effect, the spirit of true service. It lies behind the work of teaching Christ to the world. "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love."—Romans 12:10. Kind to whom? The answer to that is given very plainly in the Sermon on the Mount, Matthew 5:43, 44: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies." As Christ says, even the worldly love those who do good to them.

Gentleness

Here gentleness means meekness or mildness. Gentleness is a good attitude to have for the world. "Meekness, temperance (fruits of the Spirit): against such there is no law."—Galatians 5:23. Christ counseled the twelve apos-ties to be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves," which is another way of saying meek. To those faithful who are meek is promised a great inheritance in Matthew 5:5: "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth."

The Language of a Christian

Since Christ's followers are His representatives to the world, it is their duty to keep words and actions fit for so high a calling. James 1:26: "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."—Matthew 12:36. So strong a statement would seem to exclude gossiping from the things a Christian may do.

This was written up from a Berean lesson used in Oregon recently, based on one in the 1923 to 1925 series of lessons.

HIS SERVICE NEVER DIES

A letter received recently by the Sales Committee ordered one copy of The Hebrew People for Roscoe Story. This fact in itself was hardly enough to deserve attention in the columns of this paper, but it was augmented by the circumstances. Mr. Story's address is the Orthopedic Hospital, Lincoln, Nebraska, and the letter in a postscript remarked, "He is a cripple and has been there for more than two years and thought he could use it in teaching Bible lessons there. He has been conducting Bible lessons there for some time."

Service such as this is rare. Paul preached regardless of the fact that he was under constant military guard throughout the period of his imprisonment in Rome. The Christ taught His people in spite of handicaps, persecution, and ridicule. But unfortunately for the church this spirit of labor seems to have perished almost altogether from the earth. When one like Mr. Story is brought to our attention, we feel that it is only right and proper that recognition should be accorded him. May all others in similar—and better—circumstances profit by his example.—Arlen Marsh.

MORE ENEMIES TO CONQUER

Two weeks ago we were in Palestine, following Deborah and Barak as they drove back the Canaanites on the battlefield below Mt. Tabor, and now we are back there again. This time we are following Gideon, a fearless young man who put the Midianites to flight after they had persecuted the Israelites for seven years.

What would you think of a person, having received wonderful presents from some one, a beautiful home to live in, and every want supplied, who soon forgot all about that one and did just the things he would not like? You'd say he was a pretty poor sort of individual, wouldn't you?

That was just the way the Israelites did! God gave them Palestine for their home, where everything grew that was good to eat and beautiful to look upon. And all He asked in return was that they should not worship the gods of the heathen, but that they should worship only Him. And, you know, they were in their beautiful new home only a little while when they began to bow down to idols.

When they wandered too far away from God, He allowed them to be troubled so that they would leave the idols they were following. God really was good to them in allowing that to happen, don't you think? He wanted them to worship Him, because He knew that worshiping idols would only bring them sorrow, disappointment, death in the end.

This time the people of Midian began to steal from the Israelites. They took everything the Israelites raised, left nothing for them to eat, nor any food for their animals. They had to hunt for all sorts of hiding places for their food, caves and dens and holes in the mountains.

How many of you boys and girls have seen big grasshoppers come into your fields and gardens and destroy everything? Well, the Midianites were as bad as that. But God never let the enemy completely destroy His people; He always found some one to fight for them. This time it was Gideon.

You know, Gideon was something like Moses because he didn't think he was great enough to do God's work. Sometimes God chooses even boys and girls like you to do something for Him. Read Judges 6:16-21 and 36-40, and learn three things that showed Gideon he was to work for God.

Gideon saw at last that only God could do those things and that it was really God talking to him, and so he started out with thirty-two thousand men. But they hadn't gone far when most of them turned back. Read Judges 7:3, and find out why.

Now Gideon went forward with ten thousand, but that was still too many. You see, if the Israelites had so many soldiers they would say they had conquered the enemy themselves. God wanted to show them that He was the One who was doing it, so that they would once more trust Him.

Now read verses 5 to 7, and find out how God chose three hundred men out of the ten thousand. Can you see the thirsty men coming to this stream of water, some of them kneeling to drink and others just quickly dipping a handful up and drinking it on the run? Read verse 13, telling the funny dream one of the Midianite soldiers had.

Now they are ready for the battle. Verses 16 to 18 tell us how Gideon equipped his men. Did he give them sharp swords, or bows and arrows, or machine guns? It took really brave men, don't you think, to face the enemy as they did? But what did Gideon and his men have that the great army of Midian did not have? What was Gideon's battle cry?

The Midianites were so confused and frightened when those lights flashed up, trumpets were blown, and soldiers shouted, that they turned on each other with their swords. Once more God was the Victor, and His people were saved.

Now make your "Gideon" book. Take three or four sheets of paper, as before, fasten them together and decorate your cover page. Answer these questions in story form:

Why were the Israelites in trouble?

How long had Midian bothered them?

What were some of the things the enemy did?

How did God show Gideon he was chosen deliverer?

How was Gideon's army reduced in number?

Tell the soldier's dream and what it meant.

Describe the battle and tell the result.

Add pictures or drawings of your own.

Another new member joined us just lately, and it's a dear little girl from St. Louis, Mo. Her name is Ina Ruth Graham, and she just celebrated her seventh birthday by inviting in her little friends for a party. I think the surprise was really on Mother, for she didn't know it very long ahead of time and had to hurry around and get the birthday feast ready. I saw Ina Ruth's booklet on Caleb, and the picture she drew of Moses and the spies was very good. How nice it is to have a mother and a daddy to teach you the beautiful Bible stories!

Are your scrapbooks on the way to me?

GIDEON

Devotional Reading: Psalm 98:1-6

Judges 6 to 8

GOLDEN TEXT

The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?—Psalm 27:1.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Gideon: Winning With a Few.

Aim: To show that much can be accomplished by a few if God is with them.

I. Gideon Excludes the Fearful. (Judges 6:1 to 7:4.) Thirty-two thousand responded to Gideon's call to come and help repel the invaders of Israel. Twenty-two thousand were rejected because they feared to engage in the hazardous enterprise. All but three hundred of those who remained were also sent away at the command of God. It is always better when a difficult task is contemplated to weed out the fearful and the doubters. Much more can be accomplished by a small but united company than by a much larger one that is filled with forebodings concerning the outcome.

II. Gideon Discharges His Reserves. (Vv. 5-7.) As is often the case, God had more than one purpose to accomplish in this instance. He would repel and punish the invader, and He would revive the failing faith of His people. To accomplish this second purpose the Israelites must not be permitted to feel that the success of the enterprise was in any way due to their own wisdom and valor; it must be made very clear that Jehovah alone accomplished their deliverance. It was for this reason that Gideon was commanded to send beyond immediate recall all but his little band of valiant followers.

III. Gideon Routs the Enemy. (Vv. 16-21.) Apparently without weapons of war, with nothing more dangerous than lamps and pitchers and trumpets in their hands, Gideon and his three hundred marched quietly down from the hills in the darkness and took their places about the enemy's camp. When the moment for action came, they broke the pitchers, revealing the lamps; they sounded the trumpets and shouted their challenge to the sleeping Midianites. The rout was complete, not because Gideon and his little band were there, but because Jehovah was present in mighty power!

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Our lesson today reveals a perfect victory. Well may we say that all victories where God is the Leader are "perfect."

God planned the method of attack. It was vastly different from methods employed by man. No mistake was made. The very first attack was made at the most vulnerable spot or weakness. This was fear. When the attack was made, it was their own fear that wrought havoc and disaster among the Midianites. The enemies of God always meet defeat. It would seem that after six thousand years of experience man would learn that he cannot fight against God. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"—Rom. 8:31. Before sending His army against the enemy God made a couple of tests. These tests eliminated the unqualified. They were God's method of choosing His workers or soldiers. Just anybody will not do. God's workers are selected individuals, people selected according to rules and regulations provided by the Father. And unless these are minutely complied with, we are automatically eliminated from the field of acceptable ones. The perfect Leader directed this attack.

The majority are always against God. To be on the side of the majority is almost positive proof that you are on the wrong side. These statements are made concerning the world of mankind. God's minority always triumphs over the world's majority. God works with the few rather than the many. He does not need numbers. He wants only those who will accede to His wishes and who will give all the glory and honor to Him. To this group, no matter how small, the "sword of the Lord" is a seal of victory.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Gideon could truly say with the Psalmist, David, "The Lord is the strength of my life," for it was God who directed every act of Gideon in today's lesson. The Lord spoke to Gideon a number of times to assure him that it was He who was directing.

Gideon was told not to fear the gods of the Amorites in whose land they dwelt, so he trusted and did as he was told. Gideon no doubt lived close to God, so could be directed by Him; and thereby the Lord became his strength, and he need not fear anything.

The Psalmist also said, "The Lord will give strength unto his people."—Psalm 29:11. Do you belong to Him and receive strength from Him? If not, why not?—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

Many times God has used a few to accomplish His work. He has done this that man might know that He can accomplish His will without man's aid. He has also revealed to man His great wonders and power that man might have faith enough to go where He directs. God wants us to know that His side is going to win even if there are but a few with Him. It is not human nature to follow God, and it may be for this reason that the multitude is seldom right. Our lesson is a good example of how God wins with a few. Gideon and his three hundred, selected from thirty-two thousand, put to flight an army of considerable more than one hundred twenty thousand.

Would this not be a very good plan to follow today? The Sunday school teacher would do well to have one or two from her class that can work with her to the advancement of the group. Build up the few, and let them help build the rest. Inspire them with a sense of duty, share responsibility with them, and let them help to inspire the rest. These few should be selected carefully. Gideon selected ten thousand from the rest, and then the three hundred were selected from these. God selected the qualifications for this smaller group.

In the church there are many who are willing to fight the enemy. These are of great value, but the smallest group should be selected according to the qualifications specified by God. The church which is controlled and directed by the few can be much stronger than the one directed by the multitude. This is not man's democracy, but it is God's theocracy; and it will work.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: Gideon and His Three Hundred Men.

Gideon was now the leader of the Israelites. He had gathered thirty-two thousand men together to fight against the Midianites.

God said, "No, Gideon, you cannot take all those men. The people would say that they had conquered the Midianites without my help. You tell all that are afraid to go home."

Gideon obeyed God, and twenty-two thousand went home.

"Ten thousand are still too many," said God. So He told Gideon to take his men down to the water to drink. He said, "Put all those that lap up their water as a dog into one group, and all those that kneel down to get a drink into another group."

In the first group were just three hundred men. God said, "Now take these three hundred men and go fight the Midianites. Let the others return home."

Now listen carefully to see how they defeated the Midianites. Gideon divided the men into three groups. He gave each man a trumpet (horn) and a pitcher with a light in it. Doesn't that sound strange? Think of fighting with those things! They were to blow their trumpets when Gideon blew his. Then they were to break their pitchers.

When they came to the camp of the Midianites they blew their trumpets and broke their pitchers. They cried, "The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon." How frightened the Midianites were! They fled, and even fought each other in trying to get away.

Who do you think was helping the Israelites? I can just hear you answer, "God."

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

General and Illinois Conference and Bible School at Oregon, August 1 to 13
 Arkansas-Oklahoma at Mcgintytown, Arkansas August 3
 Eastern Nebraska Conference at Florence August 6 to 13
 Western Nebraska State Conference, at Holbrook, August 20 to 27
 Iowa Conference at Waterloo August 22 to 27
 Virginia Bible School and Conference at Maurertown, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3

THAT WORKERS' CLASS

The Illinois Bible School is progressing. During the sessions of the last two years a class has been provided where workers in the Master's vineyard might share their joys and sorrows, problems and experiences to the up-building of all. Last year a special course in Teacher Training was studied. This year we are going even farther.

Three special classes for teachers and workers have been provided. First is a class in Fulfilled Prophecy (Bro. MacLeod teaching), which will give a rich background to any teacher or student of God's Word. Next in order for the teacher of today and tomorrow is the series to be given by Bro. Lyon, setting forth the fundamental truths of the Bible as generally accepted by our conference. Surely no teacher or personal worker will want to miss these lessons, for no one can teach without a working knowledge of his text. And even the older teachers need occasionally to renew their minds.

Each afternoon a specialized class will be conducted for those interested. Leaders especially qualified to handle their subjects will be provided. One lesson each will be given to Primary, Junior, Intermediate, and Senior teaching. In which are you interested? There will be a lesson on "Music and Church Work," "Worship and the Worship Service," and others which will be mentioned later.

Are you a worker now? Do you plan to become one? Then come to Oregon prepared to get the most from these three classes.

Local churches and conferences would do well to recommend these classes to those of their young people whom they expect to assume the mantle of active service. Send us their names and suggest their possible field of service, so that we may be prepared to aid them in selecting classes.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

On June 26, Bro. S. J. Lindsay and Bro. and Sr. C. E. Lapp drove to Eldorado from Ripley, Ill., to conduct a week's meeting. Although the weather was extremely hot and the people busy with harvesting, the meetings were very well attended. A comfortably filled house listened very attentively to the sermons given by Bro. Lindsay. This was his first visit to Eldorado for nearly thirty years and he made many friends. At the close of the meeting the church members elected elders, deacons, and a secretary-treasurer. We feel the lack of organization at this point has been a very great handicap, and hope and pray that this new move will be for the honor and glory of God. Although there were no additions, we feel much encouraged and ask the prayers of the entire brotherhood.

OUR EDITORIAL POLICY

Following a rule adopted two years ago when the present Executive Board came into office, every important matter pertaining to the management of the National Bible Institution and its various activities has been referred to the members of the board for careful consideration at their monthly meetings.

Our president and business manager, L. E. Conner, has declined to engage in any important activity, improvement, or change, without first securing the advice and consent of the entire board. The editor of our publications has followed the same rule, and submits any unusual manuscripts or requests for space in the paper to his fellow board members for their action. Thus the present business management and editorial policy rests in the hands of the Executive Board, rather than coming under the control of any one individual.

Regarding the policy of the paper, it was decided some years ago by an overwhelming vote of the General Conference that The Restitution Herald should not be opened for the discussion of any and all religious subjects which might be submitted to it for publication, but that the scope of its teaching should be restricted to those elements of truth, to advance which the General Conference was organized, as expressed in our constitution and working rules.

In the carrying out of this policy the editor has met with surprisingly little criticism from our subscribers, but on the other hand has received hundreds of commendatory letters regarding it. But from time to time articles are sent to us for publication, more often than otherwise from writers who do not endorse the National Bible Institution of which The Restitution Herald is the mouthpiece, and some of whom do not even subscribe for the paper, asking for generous space in our columns for the presentation of personal ideas or for the furtherance of purposes which are quite at variance with the clearly stated objects of the National Bible Institution and the churches it represents.

All such requests are referred by the editor to the Executive Board which acts as an editorial committee to assist him in carrying out the will of the great majority of our supporters. We believe that the success of our effort depends on the continuance of this policy, both in the business administration, and in the publication of the paper.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

The week of meetings held here has come to a close. We were joyous to have Bro. and Sr. Magaw with us. His splendid sermons will be long remembered. Bro. Magaw preaches the Word. We highly recommend him to any congregation for special meetings. Thankful are we for his service and may God bless him in his work at Brush Creek, Ohio. Likewise are we thankful to the singers under the direction of Sr. George Savage for their messages in song; and to those who came out during the heat to attend. There were no confessions; but many feasted upon the Word of God, which will be helpful in these trying times.

One of our faithful sisters, Mrs. Charles Thoms, who recently underwent a throat operation, is recovering nicely.

A. E. Hoskins, Pastor.

THE DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

The "Dollar-a-Month" Club was started early in the summer of 1930, and has been maintained with considerable success since that time. At the present there are, according to our records, one hundred thirty-one active members who are regularly sending in their pledges of at least one dollar each month to help carry on the work of the General Conference of the Church of God through the National Bible Institution, which is its working body.

As we are aware, all forms of religious activity must be supported financially by those who are interested in such efforts. The work is not self-supporting in the sense of returning in cash certain profits on the investment made. From the beginning of Christianity the Lord's purposes, which have always required an expenditure of money, have been accomplished through the voluntary contributions of those who had already been benefited spiritually by the gospel. Giving was looked upon as a privilege by which men might express in concrete form their appreciation of that which God had done for them. It served also to provide each member of the body with an opportunity to have a definite part in the spreading of the truth, and thus be given greater cause to rejoice in the results that followed.

Were it possible for the local church or the General Conference to be placed on a wholly self-supporting basis by engaging in some form of business effort, it would neither be desirable from a spiritual standpoint, nor right, according to scriptural example and precept, for this to be brought about. The giving of tithes and offerings of a material nature is no less beneficial to the Christian than it was to the Israelite.

At the present time membership in the "Dollar-a-Month" Club is divided as follows among twenty states and provinces: Illinois, 40; California, 18; Ohio, 12; Indiana, 7; Minnesota, New York, and Virginia, 6 each; Michigan, 5; Louisiana, Washington, and Ontario, 4 each; Missouri, Nebraska, and Iowa, 3 each; Wisconsin, Wyoming, and the District of Columbia, 2 each; while one member of the club resides in each of the following states: Florida, Kansas, Mississippi, and North Carolina.

The membership rolls remain open for others.

CASEY, ILLINOIS

On Thursday, July 6, Bro. S. J. Lindsay and members of the Restitution Church enjoyed a basket dinner at the park. Upon request Bro. Lindsay preached at the church in the evening on the subject, "The Three Crosses." There was a large attendance. Besides enjoying the sermon we all enjoyed having Bro. Lindsay with us again.

Our hearts were made to rejoice when two accepted Christ: Mrs. Rose Jenkins and Mrs. Dessie Miller. The baptismal service was held Friday morning.

Our Sunday school is working along very earnestly and the attendance is good. Several of the people who are not members are attending regularly. We have many things to be thankful for, and we pray that God's guidance and help will continue in all our undertakings.

Edna Weaver.

MINISTERS AND BRETHREN

For the last two or three years we have been having ministerial meetings in connection with the Illinois Bible School and General Conference. Much good has resulted from these meetings, but we realize that much more good could be accomplished if there were more time to devote to them. It has been hoped for some time that we could have a Ministerial Conference at a date which would not demand the dividing of time with any Bible school or conference. However, the financial condition of the present time, together with the limited time the ministers have free from their congregations, makes us feel that the time has not yet arrived for a separate conference.

We are calling a Ministerial Conference to meet at Oregon, Illinois, August 2 to 12. The Ministerial Conference is being called to meet at this particular time and place only because of its convenience to the large numbers who desire to attend the Illinois Bible School and General Conference, but it must be remembered that the Ministerial Conference is not a subsidiary of either of these two organizations.

We regret that many of our ministers will find it impossible to attend, but you can be benefited by those who do. If you have any matter to present to your fellow ministers, kindly write the same and submit it to your chairman and he will present it to the conference. In this way mutual cooperation can result in mutual benefit.

In times past some very fine suggestions and questions have come to the ministers from the laymen. We solicit all such questions and suggestions. If you cannot be there to present them in person you may mail them to the address given below and they will be given consideration, if time permits. You can be of great benefit to us in this manner.

We request the brethren everywhere to pray that the Illinois Bible School, General Conference, and the Ministerial Conference may result in glory to God and mutual advancement of His work.

Harry A. Sheets, Chairman,
Woodstock, Virginia, Rt. 1, Box 56.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

On July 9 another man came forward for baptism, thus uniting a family, other members of which have recently walked the same path. The following day our Daily Vacation Bible School began, and the attendance and interest give us high hopes that several others will respond to the gospel call. Attendance at the school each morning is splendid, averaging for the first week about 140 per day.

Bro. F. L. Austin, who teaches the adult class in the school, has also been giving some splendid evening sermons. Sr. Austin is giving valuable help in music.

The Michigan Conference is cooperating with the local church in these meetings, and its business session and election will be held Thursday night, July 20, following the sermon at 8:30. Berean night will be Friday, the 21st.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

GEORGE NICHOLAS SITLER

George Nicholas Sitler, husband of Sr. Vertie Sitler, a resident of Oregon, Ill., for many years, died in a Rockford hospital on July 7, 1933, following an operation. Mr. Sitler, a son of Albert F. and Laura Belle Sitler, was born at Haldane, Ill., May 26, 1884. He is survived by his widow, his mother, two children by a former marriage, a sister, and three brothers. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved family. The pastor of the Oregon Church of God gave the funeral sermon, being assisted in the service by the pastor of the Methodist Church, of which church the deceased was a member.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

The following items of general interest are gleaned from "Golden Rule News," which is published in the interest of the Church of the Golden Rule, of which M. W. Lyon is pastor:

The annual business meeting of the church was held on Monday evening, June 12. The following officers were elected for the coming year: pastor, M. W. Lyon; moderator, H. H. Hawkins; clerk, George Jones; treasurer, H. J. Stadden; Sunday school superintendent, W. J. Halls; elders, George B. Alldridge, H. J. Stadden, H. H. Hawkins, and W. J. Halls; deacons, J. O. Conrad, J. Don Swartz, R. S. Lindstrom, H. W. Stadden, George McMurtic, and George Jones.

On Sunday morning, June 18, we were glad to welcome to our services Bro. and Sr. Jas. A. Patrick, their two sons, Merle and Cecil, and daughter, Miss Ione, and also Mr. Alvin Leidigh, all of Ashland, Ohio. Mrs. Edna Warren, from Painesville, who was visiting her daughter here, was also present, and we have been glad to have her with us again on two occasions since.

The new "Golden Rule News" title heading, which adorns our front page this month, was designed and lettered by Miss Peggy Blakemore. So now we have an artist on our GRN staff. This is the first issue of our fifth year, so we had to celebrate.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Last Saturday a group of voluntary workers met at the Oregon church to lay an apron of cement about the outside wall of the building to prevent seepage of water into the basement. They wish to have everything in readiness for the biggest and best conference we have ever had.

Attention is called to the correction made in the dates announced for the Nebraska Conference which is to be held at Holbrook. The correct time of the gathering is August 20 to 27.

Robert Mattison, son of Bro. and Sr. C. V. Mattison of Oregon, Ill., who has been seriously ill for the past four weeks is slowly improving, for which all who know him are exceedingly thankful. Robert is a young man of sterling qualities and much promise.

The evangelistic effort under the leadership of S. J. Lindsay and C. E. Lapp at Eldorado, Ill., was brought to a close recently. Bro. Lindsay is one of the most successful evangelists the Church of God has ever possessed and has a happy faculty of making friends for the truth everywhere he goes. We regret that, owing to his pastoral work at Tempe, Ariz., he is not available for such labors throughout the year.

The president of the Illinois Conference recently received three aprons from Sr. C. B. Compton, Manassas, Va., for use in the dining hall at conference. Bro. Johnson and the board appreciate all such gifts. Others having bedding of any kind, fruit, vegetables, or meat that will keep, that they are inclined to send for the use of the gathering, will be contributing quite as acceptably to the success of the work.

Interesting individual reports are reaching us from various sources of the Indiana Conference which came to a successful close, with one baptism at least, last Sunday.

Oregon brethren welcomed among them last Sunday Sr. Leota B. Hanson of St. Louis, who drove the car for Sr. Gesin and daughter on their return trip. Sr. Hanson will return home in a few days, but will be on hand for the opening of General Conference on August first.

The obituaries of J. E. Roose of Sac City, Iowa, and Louis S. Haney of Fenwick, Ontario, will appear next week. We extend our sympathy to the families of these brethren and pray that the Father's comforting assurances may bring hope. Bro. Haney was a staunch supporter of the Lord's work at Font-hill, and will be greatly missed. Bro. Roose was equally dear to those of his community.

Our president, L. E. Conner, dropped in on the Indiana Conference the other day and was prevailed upon to give a sermon during the absence of State Evangelist J. H. Anderson, who had been called away for a funeral. Bro. Conner reports that an interesting and profitable meeting was being enjoyed at North Salem Church.

Sr. Mary Gesin and daughter Alice are happy to be back with home and church folks after a three weeks' stay at St. Louis, Mo., where Sr. Alice underwent the first of a series of operations on the eyelid, which we trust will eventually prove to be all that is anticipated. Our prayers ascend to the Father for His care and guidance over them during this period.

THE GLORIOUS LAND

By Lyman Booth

POETS and historians have striven for centuries to render to their readers the most fancied and beautiful description of that region of bliss that their command of language could produce. Many beautiful word pictures have been drawn in prose and poetry, wherein the authors have located it in one of two places—one upon earth, the other beyond the limits of starry space. Wherever it is, all will admit it the eternal home of the saints. The question is, where is it?

The only land any mortal being has ever seen is upon earth. We have never seen anyone who has ever explored the region beyond the stars. No one has ever produced any authentic chart of those delightful regions, wherein the glorified forever dwell: with nothing to do but sing and play on golden harps, to walk the pearly paths of Paradise, to stroll along the River of Life and eat of the fruit of the Tree of Life, and to rest beneath the leafy bowers. They say it is a land of pure delight, with transporting, rapturous scenes, sweet fields of living green: there rocks, and hills, and vales, with milk and honey flow, and o'er all those wooded lots and wide extended plains shines one eternal day.

A beautiful picture! But is it true? We have no evidence of any land except what we find on earth. God, speaking through the Psalmist said, "The heavens, even the heavens are the Lord's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men."—Psalm 115:16. We find no promise of an inheritance of land or any other substance in heaven; but Jesus said, "The meek . . . shall inherit the earth."—Matthew 5:5.

In speaking of the reign of Christ, David said, "In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth."—Psalm 72:7. Isaiah wrote concerning Christ's kingdom on earth and said, "Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water."—Isaiah 35:6, 7. In Isaiah's description of that condition he said that the wild and ferocious beasts and poisonous reptiles would become tame, and "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain (or kingdom): for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."—Isaiah 11:9. The Lord said to Moses, "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord."—Numbers 14:21. When that time shall have arrived the whole earth will be a glorious sphere, and all lands will be glorious.

David sang, "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name for ever: and let the whole earth be filled with his glory."—Psalm 72:18, 19. Then, not only Palestine, but every land of this old earth will be glorious.

John tells of a new heaven and earth, and a New Jerusalem, and "heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death . . . : neither shall there be any more pain."—Revelation 21:3, 4. What better home could be found in all the infinite universe than the earth made new, when God Himself shall dwell with His glorified and deathless people?

The following poem, "There's Joy for Thee," is a beautiful exhortation for all to seek a home therein.

"Lonely pilgrim, sad and weary,
Who hath many ills endured,
What though troubles round thee gather,
There's a final rest secured;
For the children of the promise,
Those in faith who firmly stand;
Heirs with Christ, awhile they suffer,
Soon to reign in Israel's land.

"God, His gracious mercy showing,
Hath invited all to share
Endless joy and bliss forever,
In that realm of glory there!
Bear thee, then, the contest bravely;
Fear not, faint not, by the way:
Soon shall boundless, ceaseless mercy,
All thy weary toils repay.

"Soon the bitter tears of anguish,
All those sighs that sorrow pays,
Shall be lost in smiles of gladness,
Merged in songs of endless praise.
Here thy weary feet are bruised,
There thou'lt tread a verdant sod;
Here, by enemies surrounded,
There, in friendship with thy God."

IF you would have friends, you must show yourself friendly. Very few people are able to resist the steady shine of friendliness. By and by they will unbend and like you. If they do not, you have not lost anything, and the effort you have put forth has done you good. If anyone you have to do business with is grumpy, fault-finding, jealous, suspicious, or sarcastic, do not let that person induce you to imitate him. Don't fret. Don't antagonize. Don't hit back. Life is too short. Most of such nasty tempers disappear after a while in the sunlight of friendliness. You don't have to be familiar. You don't have to be officious. You don't have to grin all the time. Just keep friendly and good-natured. It will create an atmosphere around yourself in which it will be pleasant to live and in which you will be much happier at your work.—Dr. Frank Crane.

HOPE EVALUATED

By Lyman Booth

WHAT is hope? If I were asked to define the word, I would reply that it contained all the elements of desire and expectation. The two are inseparable. One without the other does not constitute hope. Hope applies to that only which is obtainable. We cannot say that we hope for that which we cannot obtain, even though we may have a great desire to possess it. Such things lie beyond the province or possibility of hope. If one desired to purchase an elegant home and had sufficient means with which to pay for it and knew it was for sale, he might reasonably expect to purchase it. Then, and not till then, could he say with confidence, "I hope to make it my home." Thus we see that confidence becomes the base or foundation upon which his hope must rest, and confidence is gained through knowledge.

Before gaining this confidence he may say, "I have hopes that I will be able to purchase the property." But that does not really constitute hope, because it contains an element of doubt, and the doubt makes the statement vain.

Hope and faith are very closely allied, and both must stand upon the statement of fact. A statement, unsupported by proof, though it be true, may be doubted, and therefore is lacking in the element of either hope or faith. When proved to be true, it becomes the foundation upon which both faith and hope can stand. If we plant seed, we do so with the desire and expectation of reaping a harvest. We do it with the confident belief that we shall be rewarded for our labor, because we have observed that others have done so and reaped bountiful harvests. This is not only true in agricultural pursuits, but in all industries.

It is the profit men expect to receive after the work is finished that prompts them to engage in any business. As a rule men do not toil for pleasure except that which they expect to enjoy as a reward for their industry.

A mere promise made by one person to give something of value to another is not enough to beget hope; but if made by one who is known to be truthful, it will beget a desire and expectation to receive the gift. If the same promise be made by an unreliable, untruthful person, it will be considered doubtful and will not beget any expectation or hope in the mind of the other. Therefore, confidence must be established on the part of the party making the promise before the promise can be relied upon.

We hold that this principle will apply with equal justice to all promises found in Holy Writ. All along the line of ancient worthies men were given signs by angel messenger, sent from God to prove His word. Did not Gideon ask for a sign from the angel of the Lord that His promise was true when the angel told him he should smite the Midianites as one man (Judges 6:16)? Did he not ask the angel to give him a sign by burning the flesh and broth which Gideon placed before him? The angel did this to prove the message true. Still Gideon insisted on another sign when the angel told him he should save Israel. God gave him a sign by covering the fleece with dew and leaving the ground dry. His request was granted; and still he seemed to doubt, and asked that the fleece remain dry and the ground be wet with dew. This wish was also granted. He was satisfied and did as he was commanded to do.

Abram and Sarai both doubted when God told them that she should bear a son; but God's word was proven true in the birth of Isaac. Previous to this God had promised Abram that his seed should be as the number of the stars, and it is recorded "he believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness."—Genesis 15:6. Although it is stated he believed God, still he seemed to want some assurance and asked God, "Whereby shall I know that I shall inherit the land?" In answer God told him to prepare certain animals and birds and place them upon an altar. Then at the setting of the sun Abram fell asleep and a vision of "an horror of great darkness fell upon him." In the vision he was told of the affliction his seed should suffer and that he should go to his fathers in peace; and God said, "Thou shalt be buried in a good old age." This vision was placed before him to assure him that God's promise was true, a purpose (Please turn to Page Nine)

The Editor's Prayer

UNTO Thee, O God, do we lift up our hearts in grateful praise for all of the comforts and blessings of this present life which we enjoy. But more than for these temporal things we are inclined to glorify Thee for spiritual and eternal gifts which Thou hast so bountifully conferred upon us. Realizing Thy goodness to us, and Thy constant care over us, we venture to call yet once again upon Thee to be the Director and the Teacher of our forthcoming Conference and Bible School. Help us, we pray, to strengthen the bonds of affection that already unite us in Christ Jesus our Lord, and inspire us with a holy zeal for service that is based upon a positive knowledge of Thy will. Amen.

General Conference Prospects

WITHOUT claiming to be a prophet or the son of a prophet, we venture to predict that one week from today will witness the opening of the greatest General Conference the Church of God has ever held. The largest delegation that has ever represented the state of California has already reached the Middle West, and still others write that they are planning to come. Texas is sending a fine group from the shores of the Gulf of Mexico. Virginia and New York on the east are perfecting plans to be definitely represented. Minnesota and Ontario brethren will soon be on the way. Thus North and South and East and West are packing their bags with Bibles and notebooks and lifting their hearts in prayer in anticipation of imparting and receiving a great lasting blessing from the attendance at the forthcoming gathering.

Conference Preachers and Teachers

WHILE the attendance of ministers at the gathering a year ago was perhaps the largest we had had up to that time, nevertheless there is a strong probability that more of our preaching brethren will be at the General Conference this year than were present then. In addition to these there will be Bible teachers of experience lending their aid to the success of the meeting who have never before been available. Altogether the preaching and teaching staff of the conference will be the strongest it has ever been.

The Bible School Curriculum

AS HAS been previously stated, the Illinois Bible School has been thoroughly reorganized and placed on a more definitely educational basis. Not that less attention will be given to the study of the Word of God, but that the plan of the various Bible classes has been so arranged that the greatest possible practical good may be derived by the earnest student from each of the various courses provided.

The Illinois State Conference has manifested from the beginning of its close association with the annual General Conference a most generous disposition toward the latter in every way. Realizing that many would be in attendance from out of the state, the Illinois board has consulted each year with the General Conference board as to the planning of the Bible school program, in order that the needs of the church throughout the country might receive as much consideration as those of the congregations of Illinois.

This year the joint committee of State and General conferences has planned the most complete and practically helpful curriculum that has ever been offered, instruction being provided suitable to all ages, from that of the child in the kindergarten to that of the most advanced student.

Entrance Requirements

EVERY school of whatever nature requires certain scholastic attainments of those who continue their education under its direction and instruction. The entrance requirements of the Illinois Bible School do not pertain to scholarship, but to the heart and mind and spirit. Anyone, regardless of the educational advantages he has enjoyed or has not enjoyed, will be gladly welcomed to the various classes provided he comes with the earnest desire to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ." Sincerity of purpose and a zeal for God are the only prerequisites of entrance into the Illinois Bible School.

When Falls the Dew

By Arlen Marsh

HE WAS in charge of the registry bureau of the post office in a large city, a position calling for business acumen, severity, knowledge of men, and a remarkable degree of wisdom. Under a summer sky, black as the night from pole to pole, dotted with innumerable pin points of light which represented stars circling at an incalculable distance, he stood talking, talking not of business, nor of taxes, nor of politics, but of God and of religion. For a half hour he had stood there in earnest conversation, and he continued for half an hour more.

Presently, waving a hand upward toward the scintillating stars, he concluded his remarks with, "As long as there's anything like that, I'll believe there is a God. If there weren't, I'd be an atheist," and he left.

For a long moment his deserted companion remained silently speculating on his words. After all, was his philosophy not eminently proper? Had the Christian any reason for his tenets and his faith if he had no evidence of his God's existence? Certainly, that evidence could not be found within the common sources of religious dogmas; not even the Bible could be proved to be inspired until history and science had been applied to establish its veracity. And was there any stronger evidence than those indicated stars, distant by a thousand light years from the earth, twinkling red and green and blue and white—the cause of which variation no man precisely knows—that Jehovah ever has been and that He ever will be?

So, while the dew gathered on the grass and the bloody moon rose over the trees that constituted the horizon, these two men, one a leader in the business world, the other a confirmed logician, arrived at a conclusion that but paraphrased the expression of King David in the nineteenth Psalm: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard." And yet, because in their sight heaven held more proof of the existence of Deity than did the Bible, they were, in the eyes of fellow church members, heretics, agnostics, skeptics of the rankest sort.

This was no skepticism, this was not even lack of faith; this was building of a solid foundation for their beliefs. The science of debating calls one of the many possible errors in reasoning the fallacy of simple iteration, and by it the debater signifies the attempt to prove anything true by itself. It is an error common in all logic, conversational and formal; and unfortunately it is especially common in the church. God is because He is constitutes the sole argument the large majority of Christians can advance to establish the being of their worshiped Deity. And by this very fact they unintentionally confess a lack of the faith which they consider essential to their salvation.

Paul's definition of faith is undeniably one of the best known texts in all the Bible; yet, despite this, many refuse to accept it and set up in its place an erroneous definition of their own manufacture. "Faith," asserts the Apostle in Hebrews 11:1, "is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." In the place of "substance" the margin inserts "ground, or, confidence." The very Christian who declares this definition to be inspired by the Almighty refuses to countenance the existence of the trait it explains in his own life by declaring that God must be "accepted" as fact, since the Bible says He is and since no proof can be obtained external of the Scriptures that He is. A "ground" is a solid foundation; but the average Christian possesses no such basis. "Evidence" is composed of "any matter of fact that serves as a basis of proof," according to W. C. Shaw, Professor of Public Speaking at Knox College; but few indeed are the Christians who can provide any matter of fact in support of their contention that an omnipotent, personified Power holds sway over the universe.

We are told by such Christians to come to God through the Bible. Contrary to this, Paul insists that "he that cometh to God must believe that he is," so indicating that a belief in the being of God must precede a belief in the inspiration and truth of the Bible He has caused to be written. Paul prefaces his statement with a flat declaration that "without faith it is impossible to please him," that is, Jehovah. According to his own definitions and the method outlined for reaching an understanding of God, faith consists not in a casual, unreasoning, and hopeful acceptance of the being of Deity, but rather in a concrete system of factual and logical evidence—which was exactly what the two men were seeking and had found. They were to be praised, not adversely criticised; for they had fulfilled the thing desired most by God—they had secured an abiding faith, evidence, confidence, ground, foundation. (over)

God Seeks a Prophet

You, O youth, can I reach you?
 Can I speak and make you hear?
 Can I open your eyes to see Me?
 Can My presence draw you near?
 Is there a prophet among you,
 One with a heart to know?
 I will flash My secrets on him;
 He shall watch My glory grow;
 For I, the God, the Father,
 The Quest, the final Goal,
 Still search for a prophet among you
 To speak My word in his soul.

—Anonymous.

That this required faith cannot be found within the Bible is obvious. Until we know that there is a God, we cannot know that He has inspired certain men to wearisome literary toil in the creation of the Bible. It is, therefore, necessary to seek evidence outside of the Bible in support of the doctrine that there exists a mighty Creator, person as well as indefinite power. For the true Christian, no higher authority can be than the inspired Word of God; but even the apostles demanded that the followers of Jesus be able to state their reasons for believing that the Bible was inspired and that God Himself really was. The same requirement today remains, neglected and ignored, it is true; but nevertheless, it remains.

Science now is willing to concede that somewhere back of the orderly arrangement of the universe lies a great First Cause, and some few students of cosmology—the study of the universe—go even further and admit the anthropomorphic, or manlike, quality of this Cause. Even Einstein, he who has put the entire cosmos into a mathematical equation, confesses that some power must control to secure the perfectly governed swing of the planets in their orbits, the exactly timed drift of the entire universe, the careful manipulation and movements of planetoids and comets. Although science is willing to concede these things, the Christians, who can look as two men looked toward the heavens, who could, if they would, see as those men saw the argument there presented, stubbornly and ignorantly refuse to admit any proof outside of the Bible of the being of Jehovah, so failing to obey the inspired exhortations of Paul.

It is absolutely certain that the Bible itself, standing alone, can never be used successfully as evidence of the existence of a supreme Deity. The Christian believes it to be inspired by that Deity; but before any book can have divine origin, the Deity must be in existence; and, consequently, His being must be established before the Bible can be put into use as an argument in favor of Him and His power. This fact the Apostle recognized by stating in his epistles that belief in God must precede belief in and comprehension of that God as revealed in the Bible; but all too few modern Christians are able or willing to follow in his steps. The majority, therefore, having no firm basis of fact upon which to build their religious house, are open to all forms of skepticism, infidelity, and atheism, the arguments and evidence of which superficially appear to be excellent. Only a close and understanding examination, supported by strong “ground,” “confidence,” and “evidence” can dissipate entirely the effects left by continued exposure to the doctrines of the agnostic, who knows definitely why he doubts.

The time that witnesses the falling of the dew is unparalleled for gathering evidence in proof of the being of intelligent Deity. Stars, meteors, planets, comets, and planetoids blend in mighty evidence that God is and that He holds control. As Einstein reached his conclusions, so can every thinking man reach similar ones. With unvarying speed and on a constant course, the earth races through infinite space at over nineteen miles a second. In harmony immutable, harmony that has not changed since the Egyptians began the study of astrology, the tiny dots of light that represent stars a million million miles away watch the revolution of planets about themselves as the sun watches the revolution of the earth and Mars and Venus about itself, a revolution that has been the same since the creation of the universe. Nothing save an omnipotent, reasoning, omniscient Power could have created anything in such perfect, unchangeable order.

Slowly every continent on earth drifts to the west, always at the same rate of speed. Flowers of variegated hues bloom on the same stalk—why, no man can tell. Darwin's theory of organic evolution has been discarded even as a tenable hypothesis by almost every really great scientist in favor of a theory that nothing will develop within itself but must be improved by external forces. Definitely disproved by recent experiments, the idea of spontaneous generation of life also has been discarded. Yet, in the face of these facts, those who confess themselves to be faithful followers of the Christ insist that no proof exists of the being of God outside of the Bible, that He must be taken as existing without question, that application of science, history, literature, and art to religion is rank heresy. Paul, David, and Jesus Himself found these things necessary; they referred to contemporary literature, art, history, and to the then known facts of science. No better example can be found. Establish through the medium of scholarship and logic that God is, and the faith which is required by Jehovah has been secured; but, until God's being has been so established, no Christian rightly can contend that he possesses that much-prized “substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.”

THESE ARE CHRISTIANS

---

THAT which distinguishes the character and conduct of Christians from others is the principle of holy love. The powerful and purifying influence of divine love operates in the renewed heart, and nowhere else can it be found in the world.

The desires and pursuits of true Christians begin and end in love. Their words and works are an expression of this heavenly principle. Thus are we informed by the Scriptures.

Without the spirit of love, none is like Christ. With it in the soul, none is like the world. Christians are like Him. Our Lord loved every creature. He laid aside the riches of glory to seek after men and make them like Himself. Christians love their neighbors, their enemies, and all mankind. They will give up anything if thereby they may persuade some for whom Christ died to come to Him.

These are heart-searching words. They should cause us to examine ourselves whether we are in the faith.

Breathe on me, breath of God,
Fill me with life anew,
That I may love what Thou dost love,
And do what Thou wouldst do.

A Pentecostal Church

By George B. Alldridge

"Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."—Acts 2:41.

FRANCESCO PETRARCH, the great Italian poet and first reviver of learning in medieval Europe, who lived during the years 1304-1374, had this said of him by Voltaire: "He is the genius of the world, most skilled in the art of saying always the same thing."

Gamaliel Bradford in "his 'Daughters of Eve' says of Madame Guyon that she carried the process even further than Petrarch. She was so absorbed with the one thing needful that all needless things that make the charm of life and especially the diversity of literature slipped by her unperceived. And when you distill the essence of her work, it comes down to a few very limited ideas, repeated over and over with extraordinary fertility of variation." Her complete works, in the most extensive edition, fill forty volumes. There are twenty volumes of commentary on the Bible; various volumes of poems, many of them delicate and charming and curiously enough setting the abstract passion of mysticism to popular secular airs; many solid volumes of spiritual letters; besides a few more formal works which are supposed to contain the quintessence of her doctrines. This also might be said of John Wesley.

Recently I was asked why so few men are joining the church. In reading the reports of the different churches (in fact this applies to all denominations) it is seen that women predominate. I read the Scriptures daily in accordance with a schedule which, if followed, will carry one through the Bible once every year. Today the selection is Acts 2. The verse quoted at the head of this article arrested my attention. I thought, "What is the secret of winning three thousand souls after hearing one sermon?"

Somebody may say, "This was a special occasion; it was the day of Pentecost." Well, maybe he is right; but would God have manifested such power if the human conditions were not in harmony with His will? I thought of Psalm 133. How many churches today meet this condition?

Note closely that on this day the disciples were all in one place (a good hint for our August conference); and, like us, there were not many, but they were all there. A broken circuit plunges a whole city into darkness: can it be that God's Spirit is somewhat weakened by the absence of brethren from our meetings? Vacant chairs do not help the work of the Spirit, and I am sure they do not help the preacher.

Recently I read a book the heroine of which became so because she had the presence of mind to scatter the embers of what seemed would become a terrible conflagration. Live embers compacted together burn and glow intensely. Thus it is with us; when there is a blending of our hearts and minds "with one accord," God will add to the church as it was said of them: "Praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

In the early church which God so singularly blessed there were no factions, no strifes, and no strained relations among the members to break and scatter spiritual power. It does seem that there is a spiritual law here which we must recognize. The Spirit cannot travel along a broken circuit, but must have continuous minds and hearts.

At this meeting there were one hundred twenty hearts and minds, all fused into one great thought and passion; it was simply an open channel free from any human clogs through which the Spirit of God could flow in unobstructed fullness. If our coming conference meets these conditions, I shall hope to see what I am praying for—a marked evidence of God's presence and the greatest spiritual blessing the church has yet experienced. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

I can always understand Jesus, His illustrations are so simple. He was a man of one idea. Listen to this: "I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." Nicodemus was an able man, and Jesus dealt with him so simply that a child could understand; yet he failed to grasp Jesus' thought.

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." How beautifully Jesus uses the wind as a fitting symbol of the Spirit's work!

Ordinarily the air lies around us invisible and impalpable, so soft and still it does not rustle a leaf nor fret an infant's cheek, so transparent and silent it seems to be so much emptiness and to have no power or use for us. But let the sun play upon it and wake its slumbering power, and it begins to blow in breezes and to gather into a storm, and at length it sweeps along in a gale or tornado that levels forest and city and tears and lashes the sea, imperiling the lives of those who are in the staunchest ships (Psalm 107:24-30).

God's Spirit is everywhere unseen and unfelt (Psalm 139:7-12). Let a gathering of God's people assemble and comply with Peter's admonition, "And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover a multitude of sins" (1 Peter 4:8), and then see what will happen.

To win men the church must have the spirit of Christ. To have the spirit of Christ means that our lives will conform to that suggested by Paul: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you."—Philippians 3:13-15.

Science tells us that coal and wood are simply condensed sunshine. Listen to the words of Jesus: "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."—John 6:63. Job realized this. He said, "The spirit within me constraineth me"; and Jeremiah offered the same testimony (Jeremiah 20:7-9).

How can we win men? Tell them just what John, Jesus, and Peter told them: Repent! When you tell men they must first repent, they think they have to pass through a terrible ordeal; but if the Word of God is correctly presented to them, repentance is seen to be a very simple thing. I understand that the Greek word translated "repent" means "change the mind." It is a broad, deep word that grasps the inner character and the outer life and covers the whole man.

Change your mind is thus the first word Christ speaks to us and is the initial message of the gospel. Christianity is a revolution starting in the mind and spreading down through the heart and out into the life and producing a new man (2 Corinthians 5:17; Galatians 6:15).

All who hear the Word of God preached faithfully and earnestly to them have a tremendous weight of responsibility to accept it. And in fact it means to all of us that we are to change our minds toward sin and toward Christ out of indifference and inaction into faith and obedience.

If men were told how heinous sin is in God's sight and that He has made a way possible for the remission of sins, it seems to me that men would yield, for God's love is so manifest in Christ that it does seem terrible for men to spurn it.

To know and do one thing well is the secret of success. If our lives show something of this oneness of purpose, men will be drawn to the gospel and souls will be added to the church daily.

THESE are many encouraging and important signs in these days that the Jews are more interested to know the truth concerning the Lord Jesus Christ than they have been in many a year. Over and over again questions concerning Christ are being asked in the Jewish daily and weekly papers.

Often these questions take an indirect turn, as in the case of a question recently asked by a reader of one of the Jewish newspapers in New York. The question was, "Whom does the prayer on the New Year Day, which says, 'for the sake of Joshua the Prince of the face' mean?" Different rabbis were asked to give their answers, but these answers were so vague and revealed such ignorance that even the unlearned Jew could see there was neither learning, nor wisdom, nor truth in the sophistries.

Another question was, "What should a Jew do with an English Bible he had bought for the young people, and in which he finds a verse in the second Psalm which reads 'kiss the son'?" Some of the Jewish readers sent protests to the editor of the Question Column, in which they insisted that such a Bible should not be kept in the holy synagogue. But one Jew, a teacher of the Talmud Torah, wrote, "There is nothing wrong in the translation 'kiss the son' because the great commentator Ibn Ezra gives it the same meaning." The conclusion of the matter was that it is better to throw out that Bible and buy another.

Such answers do not satisfy the Jews, and many of them are driven to seek elsewhere for solutions to their problems, so that we may well hope and pray that the Lord will use those inquiring minds to bring them eventually to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

From Warsaw, Poland, comes a report that a Jew by the name of Samuel Block made a unique attempt to hasten the coming of the Messiah. On the Day of Atonement last fall he entered upon a fast which he announced he would not break until the Messiah put in His appearance. The Jews looked upon him as a very righteous man, but besought him to break his fast. This he refused to do, however. After the first week of fasting, he became very weak, but started in to preach and to exhort, and in spite of his great weakness he displayed the energy of a strong man. At last, his endurance completely gone, he dropped to the ground and whispered, "The Messiah is coming, I see Him!" With these words on his lips he passed away.

Whether there are Jewish bees and Gentile bees is a question that may be debatable, particularly so since the Jewish publication, The New Palestine, tells of the beehive industry of Palestine. Both the Arabs and the Jews are in the beehive business. The beehives of the Arabs yield one and one half kilograms per hive, while the Jewish farmers obtain a yield of thirty to fifty kilograms per hive. There are 50,000 hives in Arab villages and only 4,500 in the Jewish colonies; yet the yields of honey are 50,000 tons from the hives owned by the Arabs against 150,000 tons of honey from hives owned by the Jewish farmers.—Leopold Cohn in The Chosen People.

EXAMPLES OF LOVE

By Lottie E. Young

WE ARE more or less familiar with the men of the Bible; where they lived and what they did. But beyond knowing that certain women were mothers or wives of some of the men, their history is comparatively unknown. And yet, thousands of years after they lived we still love to read the stories so graphically told of Sarah and Rebekah, Leah and Rachel, Deborah, leader of her people into battle, and Esther, the queen who risked her life to save the life of the Jewish nation. While we do not know very much about the mother of Moses, although a learned man in these days puts her among the three greatest women the world has produced because of her son, we have quite a little insight into the life of Hannah, the mother of Samuel, last of the judges of Israel.

There is a saying: "All the world loves a lover." There are three outstanding cases in the Old Testament of love so devoted as to make us wonder even today. The first is the love of a man for a woman—Jacob for Rachel. Seven years of service to the father before Jacob could claim Rachel as his wife; and yet the record is, "They seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her." Hundreds of years after this romance we have the love of a man for a man—David and Jonathan. The latter was the son of a king, while the former was but a shepherd boy. But we read that when they first met "the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul"; and at the untimely death of Jonathan we hear David's lament, "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan; very pleasant hast thou been unto me. Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women."

But perhaps the sweetest love story of all was away back in the days when judges governed Israel, or rather misgoverned, as the book of Ruth tells us "every man did that which was right in his own eyes." It was between two women, an elderly one and a younger one—Naomi and Ruth. We all know the story of how famine in Bethlehem sent a man, his wife, and two sons over into Moab to find bread; how during the next ten years the boys married and, with their father, died.

We who live in this land, in this century, can have little idea of the plight of a widow in the Orient, but we know that even today they are but slaves in the household, often ending a wretched existence by suicide. Very likely conditions were no better then, and it is not surprising that a flood of homesickness swept over Naomi when loss after loss by death came in the family and she resolved to return to kin in her native land. Both the younger women started on the journey with her, but on Naomi's telling them they had better remain with their home folk and marry again, as she could not offer them anything in her land, while they all three wept, Orpah kissed her mother-in-law, went back, and was lost to history.

Not so with Ruth whose love was so deep and strong for Naomi that she uttered the memorable words, as sweet today as when spoken: "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: Jehovah do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me." After this proof of affection nothing more could be said, "so they two went until they came to Bethlehem."

All kinds of cruel words have been spoken about mothers-in-law through generations, so Naomi must have possessed a fine character to draw this daughter-in-law to her with "hooks of steel." Israelites and Moabites were ever at war and very likely Ruth had been brought up to look upon the former as hated enemies. The gods she had worshiped were very different from the Jehovah of Naomi. Weary days of walking were ahead of her; and hard work, with possible suspicion of her motives, awaited her among the alien people with whom she was ready to cast her lot. But she was "stedfastly minded" and went all the way with Naomi. We recall that she became the bread-winner of the two. She married, became the mother of a son, great-grandmother of David, and one of the ancestresses of the Lord Jesus Christ, truly receiving a great reward for her loving devotion.

What a wonderful life Naomi must have led with these daughters to make them love her so dearly! Years of being in close contact in a little house had not made her "cranky," nor caused these girls to say, "If that is the God you worship I want nothing to do with Him." Rather, "If Jehovah can make women like you, I want Him for my God." When days of affliction came Naomi could tell them of the One who had sustained her in similar trials and who had promised that "underneath are the Everlasting Arms," perhaps telling of a resurrection from the dead of the loved ones. Orientals have always desired to be buried with their ancestors; but listen to Ruth as she says, "Thy God shall be my God: where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried." These women had no blessed Book full of precious promises as to the future, but Ruth saw so much faith, hope, and love in Naomi that she was content to leave behind country, family, and gods and to go into a new life.

Naomi was a true "living epistle" and Ruth doubtless imitated her life. Is anybody imitating you for good or ill? Are you imitating the actions of your neighbors or doing as the Apostle Paul says we should do in Ephesians 5:1: "Be ye therefore imitators of God"? We know we cannot possess the omniscience and omnipresence of our heavenly Father; but is it not possible for the oldest and youngest Christian to heed the words, "Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another," and to "walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering," and in this way be "imitators of God"? Let us all remember the warning James gives in the third chapter of his epistle, and daily say the prayer of David, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."

IMAGE OF ANTICHRIST

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

---

"And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace." — Daniel 3:6.

IN THE book of Daniel we find that God "ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will." "He changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings." God changed the times from Jewish times to Gentile times by removing the kings of Judah and setting up Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon.

Gentile times began with a great potentate over a world empire, and Gentile times will end in a similar manner with another great potentate over another world empire. The time is nearly ripe for the imperial type of government. Already we see a few dictators which are nothing less than kings. Not long ago a prominent dictator made a statement to the effect that men would no longer endure the corruptness of the representative form of government, but would turn to one-man rule in which one man will be directly responsible for the success or failure of a nation.

Our own country will not be an exception in accepting this apparently new system of governing because conditions are making it necessary. Already our president (dictator) is setting the price on commodities and fixing the wage of laborers. The government is taking things in hand in order to bring back prosperity, and one-man rule is aiding it. In fact, the world is rushing toward the time when one man will be hailed as world dictator because of his genius.

In the third chapter of Daniel we have a striking picture of the end of this Gentile age. King Nebuchadnezzar was an exalted ruler with great power. After his dream of the great and terrible image of chapter two Daniel said to him in interpreting the dream, "Thou art this head of gold." The king evidently forgot most of the interpretation except those six words, and thus he became proud.

It seems that he wished to perpetuate the "head of gold" or make the whole image of gold, so he erected in the Plain of Dura in the province of Babylon a great image all of gold. "Then an herald cried aloud, To you it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages, that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up: and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace."

We behold in Nebuchadnezzar a type of the Antichrist, who will make similar demands. Paul tells us of him in 2 Thessalonians 2:3, 4, "That man of sin (shall) be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God." Like Nebuchadnezzar he will have power over all people, as we are told in Revelation 13:7, 8, "And power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations. And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life." Also, like Nebuchadnezzar's commands, there will be an image that must be worshiped as prophesied in Revelation 13:14, 15. The Antichrist or beast spoke, "saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast . . . and he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed."

After Nebuchadnezzar had made the command that all should worship his image, it was reported that certain of the Hebrews were not obeying. Daniel's three friends, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, the violators of the decree, were called before the king and given another opportunity to worship the image.

Why was Daniel not mentioned with those who did not worship the image? Was his name accidentally left out? No! If this were ordinary history, we might say that a mistake was made somewhere, but this book of Daniel was inspired by the Almighty. There are no mistakes, and nothing was left out that should be in it. We shall see later why Daniel was not present.

The king commanded that the furnace be heated seven times hotter because these three Hebrews were not careful in answering, but boldly stood for Jehovah the true God. They were thrown into the furnace, and the men which took them up were burned to death. Then the king saw four men walking in the furnace, and the fourth was "like the Son of God." He called Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego to come out; and they came forth without as much as a hair of their heads scorched or the smell of fire on their garments.

A great victory was won, and Nebuchadnezzar was shown that God is supreme. Then he blessed the God of the Hebrews and made a decree that every people, nation, and language which spoke against God should be destroyed.

We look once more at this chapter as a shadow of the end of the Gentile age, and we see Nebuchadnezzar a type of the Antichrist or beast who will demand worship of himself and his image and who will destroy all people who refuse to bow down to him.

At that time will be the great tribulation of which Jeremiah says: "Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it."—Jeremiah 30:7. You remember the three Hebrews were saved out of the hands of Nebuchadnezzar. Even so will faithful Israel (the antitype of these Hebrews) be saved out of the tribulation. You remember Daniel, who was not present? If we may interpret prophecy in this way, Daniel represents the church, which we believe will not be present during the severest of the tribulations.

At the end of that time of trouble God will set up His kingdom on earth once more, and Judah will again be a nation. God will change the times by removing Gentile rulers and will place Jesus, the divinely anointed King, over the earth. No more will men be compelled to bow down to false gods, nor will there ever again be a great tribulation like Jacob's time of trouble.

My earnest prayer is that you and I may be acceptable in God's sight and be found in the class of worthy ones which Daniel represents in this lesson.

HOPE EVALUATED

it must have served, for Paul said, "He looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

John the Baptist was a child of promise whose parents were Zacharias and Elisabeth. Zacharias held a doubt in mind, for he said to the angel who spoke to him, "Whereby shall I know this?" In answer the angel said, "Thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed." We find that the promise from God which the angel delivered to Zacharias came to pass in every particular. Jesus was a child of promise, also, and the promise came to pass. There are many promises in relation to Him and His work, some of which have been fulfilled.

In Paul's letter to the Hebrew brethren he exhorted them to "go on unto perfection in Christ's doctrine" and told them that "God had confirmed his counsel to the heirs of promise by an oath" "that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before us: which hope we have as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail." The hope of those worthies was based upon the promise of heirship in land for an everlasting possession which referred primarily to Palestine, but will finally include the whole world; for Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth" (Matthew 5:5). These instances serve to prove beyond doubt the verity of God's word. It is, therefore, needless to cite others, for it is written, "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established."—Matthew 18:16.

Paul began his letter to Titus by writing, "Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness; in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began."—Titus 1:1, 2. With these statements who can doubt or disbelieve any of the promises God has made by Moses, the prophets, Christ, and His apostles, who spoke and wrote as the Spirit dictated? Then who, knowing the good things God has promised, should fail to have faith in His promises? Why should not that knowledge beget a desire to receive the benefits that will follow? If the desire is strong enough to urge one to comply with the conditions connected with the promise, he could confidently expect to receive its benefits. His desire and expectation constitute his hope, and his faith will urge him to comply with the requirements.

Life is the most precious possession men have, and it is only lent to them that they may prepare for a better. This life is as nothing when compared with eternal life, which has been promised to all who will accept and comply with the necessary terms. The terms were briefly stated by Jesus when He was about to ascend to heaven. He said to His apostles, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:15, 16. The thing to be believed is the gospel which Jesus and His apostles preached everywhere they went. The requirements are, "Believe, repent, and be baptized." This salvation is a release from the grave and death; and that is not all, for those who are saved have the promise of eternal inheritance in the kingdom. In order to enjoy the inheritance it is necessary that life be equal in duration to that of the inheritance, which is unending.

How sweet is the Christian's hope! It points him to a better time, to a goodly land he can call home. It bids him to look forward to the day when Jesus will give him glory, when he will be like Him. It gives him joy and peace. Though his friends whom he loved so dearly desert him, his hope bids him to rejoice and sing, for "his redemption draweth nigh." It plants his feet upon the solid Rock and keeps him in the narrow way.

THE LITTLE CHURCH 'ROUND THE CORNER

An unpretentious little church
That stands just 'round the corner,
Built by a humble little flock
That loved their Lord to honor;
A simple little edifice,
That boasted no proud steeple,
Reminding one of that small room
Where Jesus met His people.

Its modest pulpit, humble pews—
All told the simple story:
"This audience met to worship Him,
The Lord of life and glory."
Its neighborhood, somewhat obscure,
Not in an elite center,
But in a place where lowly ones
May always freely enter.

I merely thought to saunter in
And while away an hour;
But, wife, I never heard a man
Imbued with so much power.
And when he offered up a prayer,
Direct to heaven reaching,
The Holy Spirit seemed to come
And rest on him while preaching.

He read Isaiah fifty-three,
And, commenting upon it,
He gave its simple meaning, and
He put "no other" on it:
How that the soul of Jesus died—
Did not ascend to glory;
And, wife, that version must be true
Of that pathetic story.

They sang, "Nearer my God to Thee"—
It seemed to bring us nearer;
Then, wife, I never heard the Word
Expounded any clearer.
Some grand old truths (though new to me)
Were read and clearly given,
Which proved the dead unconscious are,
And not alive in heaven.

The gospel, thus interpreted,
I listened to in wonder;
From my old pagan theories
I must be torn asunder.
That Christ will come, and raise the dead,
Is taught in every section,
And give His saints eternal life
At the grand resurrection.

I'm done with creeds and theories,
And hold the firm conviction,
'Tis better to believe the Word
Than follow pagan fiction.
And now I pray that God will bless,
And with the "Truth" adorn her—
That little unpretentious church,
That stands just 'round the corner.

THE NEGRO PORTER

---

DR. HARRY IRONSIDE tells of an experience he had on the train to Atlanta, Georgia. He was talking with the colored porter, who was a Christian and loved to read his Bible. The colored man told of a conversation he had with Clarence Darrow on that train not long before. The porter was reading his Bible one day, and Mr. Darrow walked through the car.

"What's that?" asked Darrow.

"The Bible," he replied.

"Well, do you colored folks read the white man's Bible? I shouldn't think you would have any use for it. My name is Clarence Darrow. I am an atheist; I have no use for the Bible, and if there is any man on earth should throw it away it is the colored man. How can you have anything to do with it when you think how cruel the white man has been to your race?"

The negro answered, "Mr. Darrow, I have often thought of that, and there is a verse in the Bible that explains it all. It is this: 'These things must needs be,' and, Mr. Darrow, I thank God for it all! My ancestors were wild heathen savages in the heart of Africa; maybe they were cannibals, but savage and ignorant at any rate; and, sir, God allowed the white man, a wicked man, to steal some of them and bring them to this country. He allowed their children to grow up and become slaves, and some of the white men were cruel and some were kind. Maybe some of them used the whip, but at any rate they taught my ancestors to work, to be clean, and gave us the gospel, so that we were changed completely. You know, I feel like taking off my hat to every white man I meet when I think that God allowed him to bring my forefathers to America that I might not be a poor ignorant heathen in the heart of Africa, but that I might have the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, my blessed Savior."

Clarence Darrow said, "Well, I never heard anybody put it as you have. I will have to think about what you have said; you have put things in a different way from anybody else."

Certainly God works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform; and He uses the wrath of man to praise Him.

ANNUAL REPORTS

AT ITS annual business meeting held at North Salem Church, Indiana, the Indiana State Berean Society re-elected to office the members of last year's executive board: Mrs. Pearl Zechiel, Culver, president; Mrs. Lulu Stilson, 411 East South Street, South Bend, vice president; Edgar C. Harvey, 907 South Waugh Street, Kokomo, secretary; Mrs. Martha Senff, Bremen, treasurer. Societies at Burr Oak, Bremen, South Bend, and Kokomo were reported; with a total membership for the state of 129, divided as follows: primary, 5; junior, 14; senior, 31; adult, 79. The meeting was held on Wednesday, July 12.

The Minnesota State Berean Society, meeting at Eden Valley on Saturday, June 10, elected the following executive board and adopted for itself the constitution of the National Berean Society: John Savage, Waite Park, president; Vivian Bennett, Eden Valley, vice president; Miss Ella Randall, Mora, secretary; Marian Hopkins, 321 28th Avenue North, St. Cloud, treasurer. There were local societies at St. Cloud, Mora, and Eden Valley. A total unclassified state membership of 60 was reported on June 30.

LOVE

LOVE is one of the most essential things that a Christian should have. In Matthew 22:35-40 Christ was asked which was the great commandment in the law. His answer was, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." By this we can see that if we follow the teachings of Christ we must have love for God and our fellow men.

The reason that God sacrificed His Son was that He loved the world; and we should, to the best of our ability, return this love by obeying His commandments.

Jesus, while eating the last supper with His disciples, said to them, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this all men shall know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

If all men knew they were Christ's disciples because of the love they had for one another, why can we not have the same kind of Christian love for one another and be His disciples, also?

There are many ways by which we can show our love for our fellow men, but the question may sometime arise as to what is the greatest way in which we can show our love to our friends. In John 15:13 we have the words of Jesus as follows: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." While it is improbable that any of us will have to show this kind of love, we should keep in mind the fact that Jesus gave His life for us because He loved us.—Harry Goekler, Marshall, Illinois.

ONE'S attitude toward things that should be held sacred has much to do with the respect in which others hold him. Paul's condemnation of foolish jesting we do not understand to apply to simple, harmless pleasantries and fun, but to displaying the fool's attitude by making light of sacred things and thus being irreverent. There are many relationships in life which should be held sacred and ideal, but instead are too often the points of vulgar jokes, and thus become lightly esteemed.

Many of us are entirely too careless, also, in our attitude toward and conduct in the house of worship. If a building has been dedicated to the service of God, it is God's house, and we should respect it as such. Oftentimes one's sincerity in sacred things is seriously questioned because of his loud, boisterous, or irreverent conversation and conduct in the church building. We should always bear in mind that our most telling influence is our example in personal conduct.—F. E. Siple.

A GROUP OF INTERESTING PICTURES

MANY of the stories for this page have been of greater interest, perhaps, to the boys, but for the first Sunday in August we have one that appeals first to the girls. The boys will find a great deal of pleasure as well as profit in this story, however, for a wealthy man is introduced in it who became an ancestor of our great Ideal, Jesus the Savior.

The first picture we see is of a husband and wife, Elimelech and Naomi, parents of two boys, Mahlon and Chilion. A happy home is theirs in Bethlehem, where over a thousand years later was born the One whose history is interwoven with theirs. Famine hovers over their country, and Elimelech takes his family to Moab, a country south and east of Canaan. Here the boys grow up and marry girls of the new land.

Now the Moabites were an idol worshiping people, not knowing the God that Elimelech and Naomi loved. But through all these strange surroundings, we are sure Naomi continued to worship Jehovah and to teach her sons to love Him, also. Little glimpses of conversation with her son's wife tell us that. And she did it all in such a kindly way as to cause Ruth later to decide to leave her idols and accept the God of Naomi.

We turn the page of our picture book and find the three women, Naomi, Orpah, and Ruth, alone, death having taken the father and his two sons. The older woman had heard that God had blessed Canaan once more and removed the famine, and so she decided to return to her own people, having no near relatives in Moab and not wishing to be a burden on her young daughters-in-law, who naturally would marry again.

The picture of the parting of Naomi and the two beautiful young women brings the tears to our eyes, for the three must have loved each other dearly. Naomi is about to leave alone on a long and wearisome journey when suddenly Ruth decides to go with her, not being able to bear the thought of separation. We can hear Naomi explaining to Ruth just how much this will mean, for the people of Bethlehem would be strangers to this girl from Moab, their customs and habits different, and most of all their worship another worship altogether.

The next picture comforts us a great deal, for here we see the older woman cheered, aided, and comforted on the long journey by the younger woman, who had left not only her people but her gods of wood and stone behind and had chosen the God of her dead husband's mother. We may be sure very great blessings came to Ruth, as always come to us when we choose God above all else. But we must hurry on, or we shall not finish our picture book.

Ah, here we have a beautiful picture! It is of the homecoming of these two and the welcome they received from Naomi's old friends. They find a little spot for themselves, and Naomi becomes the homemaker, Ruth the provider. Out in the fields Ruth goes, gathering the grain that the harvesters leave, and now enters the hero of the story.

The wealthy relative of Naomi, a kindly gentleman and a worshiper of God as well, could hardly help but notice a beautiful young stranger working in the fields, and thereafter Ruth's worries were ended. The next picture shows us Ruth's return at night, when she related to Naomi all that had happened—the generosity of Boaz and the kindness of the laborers to a strange young woman.

We hasten over several smaller pictures and finally find the one we are seeking—the wedding scene of Boaz and Ruth. Naomi is no longer without the comforts of life, but is cared for and loved in this new home, and later, in turn, cares for and loves the little ones that come to bless it. Chief among these was the boy Obed, who later became the father of Jesse, who was the father of David, one of the ancestors of our Savior.

*“God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform.”*

This is the lesson for the first Sunday of conference at Oregon, Ill. As I am writing this more than two weeks before that date, I am hoping that many of my Bible scrapbook boys and girls are planning to be here with your parents or older friends. If that is not possible, I'm sure you have sent your scrapbook to be put up in the Exhibit. Even if it is not finished, I hope you have sent it or will send it right now, today. We want as many of the thirty-seven scrapbooks or booklets as possible, so that the folks from near and far can see them. Send your little booklets of Joshua, Caleb, Deborah, and Gideon, at once. I'm looking for them, so don't disappoint me.

And now, who of you older boys and girls can write a play around the story of Ruth? Look in Truth Seekers' Quarterly for third quarter, page 27, Intermediate Class, for suggestions. Write and tell me about it. See you next week. Goodbye!

LESSON 6. — August 6, 1933

RUTH

The Book of Ruth

Devotional Reading: Psalm 4:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Let us love one another: for love is of God.—1 John 4:7.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Message of the Book of Ruth.

Aim: To show the comforting effect of sympathy and the uniting power of love.

Basic Truth: "Let love be unfeigned . . . With brotherly kindness toward each other be tenderly affectionate."—Rom. 12:9, 10.

I. United in Sorrow. (Vv. 1-5.) There is no experience in life that tends to unite people more firmly together than does a common bereavement. Quite often death serves to break down the walls of misunderstanding that have divided families for years and to bring them together in tender affection. In this case no separation had ever occurred to mar the beauty of the relations that existed between Naomi and her daughters-in-law, but the loss these good women had sustained in the deaths of their husbands, who were so closely related to each other, brought them nearer than ever before.

II. United in Love. (Vv. 6-10.) Tennyson saw in the book of Ruth "a poem which no art can improve upon." It presents a charming picture of a home and family, the various members of which were of different religious faiths and racial backgrounds, successfully maintained by a spirit of mutual affection. If sorrow has a tendency to draw people together in sympathy, love possesses the power to hold them united in the closest and most lasting bonds. The affection shown between Naomi and her daughters-in-law, while by no means a rare experience, is not met with so frequently as should be the case. Should "in-laws" take each other fully into their hearts and lives, as true fathers and mothers, real brothers and sisters, much heartache that sometimes results from attempts to unite families of widely different backgrounds would be avoided.

III. United in Faith. (Vv. 14-19.) Sympathy for each other in their affliction held the little family of Naomi together for a time. Affection carried them forward in unison for a time. But differences of religious faith finally sent Orpah back to her people, but bound Ruth and Naomi at last together not alone for time, but for eternity! "Thy God shall be my God," declared Ruth. Religious faith and hope is the most blessed and lasting tie that can unite a family.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Ruth's Devotion: The name of Ruth is the symbol of devotion and loyalty. Her life as scripturally related is inspiring and nobly uplifting to everyone that is seeking highness of purpose and elevating ideals. Her personality and character stand out prominently because of the wisdom of her decisions and her determination to cling to her choice. Her loyalty to a purpose right and true necessitated her forsaking her gods, bidding lifelong farewell to her flesh kinsfolk, that she might become heir with the "people of God."

A Great Decision: Her decision, "Thy God shall be my God, and thy people my people," was the turning point in her life. It was her making. Had she chosen otherwise, she would have dropped into obscurity as did her sister-in-law. What a lesson for those considering the same decision! Her pathway was to be God-directed. With this leadership she was led to pastures green and to still waters through paths of righteousness and became like a tree planted by the rivers of water. And so it is today. All that seek first the kingdom of God will have all necessary temporal blessings granted to them (Matt. 6:33). Peace, even God's peace, will be their portion, and an abiding rest their present day blessing.

A Life-long Separation: To become heir with the people of God, she must leave her former surroundings and come out from among them and be separate. This was not a sacrifice; it was an investment. It was not giving up; it was stepping up. This Gentile girl did what we must do today to become heirs with God—renounce our former life and live a new life in Christ Jesus. This requires a separation from those things that enslave us and keep us in bondage. 2 Cor. 6:14-18. Let us not think of it as a giving up, but a stepping up; not as being bound to a new code of precepts, but as deliverance from sin to liberty that is in Christ Jesus the Deliverer. Our citizenship is transferred. We become seekers of a new country. John 17:15, 16; Heb. 11:14-16.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God."—1 John 4:7.

Love is the root of all good works. All that God has done for humanity (and that is more than most people realize) has been done because of love. Ever since the foundation of the earth love has been the ruling spirit of those who followed after the things of God and not after things of the world. God Himself, being love, rules with a loving hand.

Ruth loved her mother-in-law and showed it in many ways. First, in verses 16 and 17 of today's lesson, then afterward in the care she gave by providing for her. Ruth no doubt had learned of Naomi's God, and this helped her to be loving and kind to Naomi. Since love is of God and God is love, His children should be in a way like Him. Jesus came because of love; we love Him because He first loved us; therefore, "let us love one another."—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Message of the Book of Ruth

The practical lessons of the book of Ruth are manifold and impressive. Preeminent among these lessons is the one of loyalty and its blessing. Ruth learned to know and trust the true God. When the time of choice arrived, she was ready for the test. Ruth and Orpah were natives of Moab. They had married two Israelitish brothers who had settled in their land. When their husbands and father-in-law died, Naomi, their mother-in-law, decided to return to Judah. She called the two young women to her and gave them their choice of going with her or returning to their own people. It is stated that Orpah decided to go back. Ruth decided differently.

Naomi and Ruth returned to Judah. Ruth experienced dire want until her kinsman, Boaz, noticed her. This godly man recognized her great choice and asked God's blessing on her. She soon was married to the wealthy Boaz. They had a son named Obed, who in turn had a son named Jesse, the father of King David. Her family was selected as the royal family of Israel, and Ruth was thus the great-grandmother of the second king of Israel. Her name is mentioned in the genealogy of Jesus. Orpah returned to her people, her gods, and obscurity. Ruth remained loyal to the God of her selection, and her name will be remembered as long as the name of God is read. Loyalty pays.—H. A. S.

Topic: Ruth's Love for Naomi.

A great famine came to the land where the people of Israel lived. So one man, Elimelech, took his wife and two sons and went to Moab. Here they lived for some time. But one day Elimelech became sick and died.

The two sons married two girls, Orpah and Ruth. But, sad to say, the two sons also died.

One day Naomi said, "I hear the famine is over, so I think I will return to my own country." Orpah and Ruth started to go with her, but Naomi said, "Do not go with me; go back to your mother's house." This she repeated several times.

Orpah finally did go back to her mother's home, but Ruth said, "Don't make me go back. I want to go with you. I want to live with you, do as you do, and stay with you until I die." When Naomi saw how much Ruth loved her she let her go with her to Bethlehem.

How surprised the people were to see Naomi again. But how sad she was. She said, "Do not call me Naomi any more; call me Mara."

What lesson can we learn from the story of Ruth and Naomi? I think we should love each other as Ruth loved Naomi.—V. C. T.

GENERAL CONFERENCE DAILY PROGRAM

The following order of services for the first week of General Conference and Illinois Bible School which is to open (D. V.) one week from today, will be adhered to as closely as possible.

7:00 a. m.—Breakfast served in the dining hall. No meals will be served at Golden Rule Home except to the regular residents, nor will meals be served at the various homes in the city where conference guests are entertained. All are urged to adhere strictly to this rule and to be on hand at the dining hall promptly at mealtime.

8:30 a. m.—Devotional services will be conducted each morning by a competent leader.

8:00 a. m.—The Ministerial Conference, which is an entirely separate organization from the General Conference, having its own officers and arranging its own program, has been assigned the period from eight o'clock to nine-thirty each day except Sundays. The organization extends a cordial invitation to all ministers and evangelists to meet with them and discuss the many problems that especially concern the work in which they are engaged.

9:30 a. m.—All classes will meet in the main auditorium of the church for a brief worship program. They will then proceed to the various classrooms for the study period. The first class in prophecy will meet at this hour under the leadership of G. E. Marsh.

10:45 a. m.—After a short recess the older classes will again convene. The second class in prophecy, led by Norman J. MacLeod, will meet at this time.

12:00 m.—Dinner.

1:30 p. m.—All classes will meet for a devotional opening service in the church. The third class in prophecy will meet under the instruction of F. L. Austin. At the same hour the class in Christian service will be held under various able teachers, each especially qualified by experience and education for the work he is to perform.

3:00 p. m.—General Conference session. A sermon will be given by one of the visiting ministers, to be followed if desired by an open forum for the discussion of what has been presented, or for the introduction of such other questions as may be submitted.

5:30 p. m.—Supper.

7:30 p. m.—Song service. Mrs. Harold Starbuck will have charge of the musical program during the week.

8:00 p. m.—Sermon.

The first Saturday afternoon no classes will be held, the time being given over to recreation, a suitable program for which will be arranged. The usual evening service, however, will be held.

During the devotional period on the first morning a meeting of the Bible School teachers will convene.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

At the close of the Sunday morning service on July 16, a baptismal service was held, at which time four people were inducted into the body of Christ at the Oregon church. Those baptized were as follows: Mrs. Maude Young, Mrs. Kathryn Bullard, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Blanchard, all of Oregon.

Mabel Andrew, Secretary.

THE WORKERS' CLASS General Program

9:30 a. m.—Fundamental Truths, Lyon.
 10:45 a. m.—Fulfilled Prophecy, MacLeod.

1:30 p. m.—Specialized Classes.

The outline for Specialized Classes is given below. Choose your subjects and be prompt:

Aug. 1.—The Junior Teacher, Mary Gesin.

Aug. 2.—Music for Church and School, Evelyn Austin.

Aug. 3.—Worship and the Worship Service, F. L. Austin.

Aug. 4.—Personal Evangelism, Emma Railsback.

Aug. 7.—The Senior Teacher, N. J. MacLeod.

Aug. 8.—Organization, M. W. Lyon.

Aug. 9.—The Primary Teacher, Verna C. Thayer.

Aug. 10.—How to Teach Stewardship, H. A. Sheets.

Aug. 11.—The Intermediate Teacher, Leila E. Whitehead.

Bring notebooks and pencils and your Bible.

Come prepared to get the most from every class you attend.

INDIANA CONFERENCE REPORT

The Indiana Bible School and Conference convened at the North Salem church from July 5 to 16 with an attendance equal to that of preceding ones. Bible classes were taught by Bros. Anderson, F. A. Stilson, Smead, Arlen Marsh, Long, Parker, and Mrs. Lulu Stilson and Maggie Anderson. Sermons by the ministers present were enjoyed each evening except Friday when the young people, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Hatten, presented "The Voice of Youth."

The people of Indiana were very glad to have with them Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Railsback and Mr. and Mrs. Norman MacLeod and family of California. Sr. Railsback conducted two lessons on the old and new covenants and Bro. MacLeod delivered two impressive sermons.

One, Logan Pickeral, obeyed the call of the Savior and was immersed the last Sunday of conference.

Officers for the following year are president, F. A. Stilson; first vice president, O. J. Parker; second vice president, Paul Magnus; treasurer, Willis Roose; secretary, Verna Himmelright.

DELTA, OHIO

On Sunday, July 9, Bro. S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Ill., began a series of meetings at Delta, Ohio, continuing over Sunday, July 16. The attendance was good, and the attention unequalled. Each sermon was filled with good and wonderful thoughts concerning God's plan of salvation and contained an earnest appeal to accept Christ and to accept a more Christian living that we might gain an abundant entrance into His everlasting kingdom. While there were no visible results, yet the good seeds of truth that were sown brought forth many expressions of commendation which we hope in the near future will bring forth fruit unto life eternal.

Mrs. Roscoe Dunbar.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Friends of Bro. and Sr. Randall were glad to have them stop for a day while en route to Minnesota. Sr. Randall has been a wonderful example of patience and endurance in her long affliction, and friends here were glad to see her cheerful and full of faith.

As these lines are written our Bible School is in the midst of its closing week. While a finished report cannot be given yet, it can be stated that the interest and cooperation have been wonderful. When you stop to realize that this one church alone has conducted a school for two weeks with larger daily attendance at its classes than has ever attended any school conducted at Oregon by all of our churches combined, then you can appreciate something of what the task has been.

All here were happy to have Bro. and Sr. Norman MacLeod and children and Bro. and Sr. Ezra Railsback present for a two-day visit. Bro. MacLeod spoke one evening, and his sermon was appreciated by the church.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

LOUIS S. HANEY

Our hearts were saddened when Bro. Haney fought a losing battle with the dread enemy, death. He had been ailing for some time, and a couple of weeks previous to death went a couple of hundred miles north in hope of regaining his health. Shortly after leaving home he began getting worse and was removed to the Soldiers' Memorial Hospital at Orilla, Ont., where he died on Wednesday morning, July 12, 1933, in his sixty-first year.

About twenty-five years ago he was baptized by F. L. Austin and became a member of the Fonthill Church of God. He remained loyal to this espoused faith the rest of his life.

On Christmas Day, 1901, he was united in marriage to Edith Bertha Robinson, and they twin were one flesh until separated by death.

Funeral services were held from the home in Fenwick and burial made in Ridgeville cemetery. The pastor gave a short sermon on resurrection hope.

C. E. Randall.

J. E. ROOSE

John Eugene Roose, son of Carl Gustav and Carrie Johnson Roose, was born in Hallsberg, Sweden, October 24, 1860, and passed away at his home in Sac City, Iowa, July 7, 1933. At the age of nine he, in company with his parents, came to America and located in Denison. In 1872 the family moved to Lake View, where he helped his father build their home, the first frame house in the town.

On Feb. 11, 1885, he was married to Miss Augusta Johnson of Sac City. They resided in Omaha for two years, after which they moved to Sac County, where they have since made their home. To this union were born ten children, seven of whom survive; two sons, Alvin and Leland, and one daughter, Mrs. Esther Brownell, preceded the father in death. He leaves to mourn his loss his devoted wife; three sons, Garland of Sioux City, Walter and LaVerne of Sac City; and four daughters, Mrs. Alma Allard of Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. Ellen Wilson of Storm Lake, Mrs. Ethel Blumgren and Mrs. June Saline of Sac City. In addition there are sixteen grandchildren, three brothers, and four sisters.

He was reared under religious instruction and has been a faithful member of the church for over thirty years, consistently living true to the faith of the gospel. He was a faithful, loving husband and father, held in affection by his family, and in esteem and love by all who knew him.

Bro. J. W. Williams had charge of the services, and he was laid to rest to await the resurrection call.

COSTELLO - McINTURFF

Sr. Eunice E. McInturff was united in marriage to Mrs. Robert L. Costello on July 19, 1933, at the Church of God parsonage, near Maurertown, Va. They left immediately after the wedding ceremony for a motor trip through southern Virginia and the Carolinas. They expect to return about the first of August, at which time they plan to establish their home at Middleburg, Va.

Sr. Costello is one of the finest girls it has been our privilege to know. She was reared in an excellent Christian home by God-fearing parents and from them she acquired the high ideals that have made her the true Christian girl she is today.

Mr. Costello has, during the five years we have known him, proven himself to be a young man with high ideals, clean Christian character, and a determination to succeed in life. He has been employed in a drug store for over five years and is held in high esteem by his employer.

It certainly is a pleasure to see two such promising young people decide to go through life together as "one flesh," sharing life's joys and sorrows and fortunes and misfortunes as they come. We pray that God's blessing and guidance may be with them through their wedded life, bringing to them the richness and joy of spiritual lives and a Christian home with the promise of eternal life at the coming of Christ.

Harry A. Sheets.

In remitting for The Restitution Herald Miss Abbie H. Fiske of Maryland kindly says, "It is the best Adventist paper that is published. I enjoy reading it. The articles are scriptural, and spiritual, and I would not like to be without it."

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Dr. J. W. Lent of the Niagara Falls church is recovering from a short illness at his home in that city. He regrets his inability to attend the conference at Oregon this year, but hopes to visit our headquarters later in the summer.

Those who expect to attend the class in fundamentals at the Illinois Bible School will find any one of the senior Berean books of value to them in their study. Price lists have been given in former copies of this paper. Address all orders to the National Berean Society, Oregon, Illinois.

A pathetic letter reaches us from a stranger in New York to the following effect: "Will you please send me some tracts that will help to encourage one soul who thinks he is lost?" How much we regret that we have so few tracts along lines like these! The great doctrinal subjects must be thoroughly covered, but we should not neglect the equally vital individual problems.

Speaking of tracts, pressing calls are reaching us all the time for well-written, appealing, and scripturally true literature for free distribution. Let us think this over at Conference.

With one exception the group baptized at Oregon on July 16 were entirely unfamiliar with the faith of the Church of God a year ago. They, together with some ten or a dozen others, have been under special instruction preparatory to the action they have now taken. We pray for responses to the gracious gospel call from others of the group later.

Quilt pieces—do you have them? Ladies who are planning to attend the General Conference are requested to bring with them any material they may have that is suitable for quilt pieces. If they will do this Sr. Gruber of the Oregon church volunteers to see that it is worked into quilts for use of the conference next year.

A reader of The Restitution Herald in England who receives the paper, as do many others, through the courtesy of H. W. Patterson of El Cajon, California, said in a recent letter, "The various articles I have read in The Restitution Herald have been a great blessing to me personally." The comfort and the hope our writers provide each week reach far out into the world.

Sr. Leota B. Hanson of St. Louis dropped in on "Clean-up Day" at Oregon and joined the ladies of the Rockford, Dixon, and Oregon churches in their house-cleaning program in church and dormitory. Her ever-present smile did much to brighten the very dust-clouded atmosphere for everybody.

The wives of the pastors of three churches entered into the spirit of the occasion—"Clean-up Day"—and another pastor who was present had an equally efficient representative among them. When preachers' wives take hold of things, they move!

Those of you who really cannot attend the conferences now being held in various states can remember them in prayer, asking the Father's blessing to rest upon the efforts of His people to carry on His work.

Bro. S. J. Lindsay declares he has enjoyed one of the most successful and satisfactory evangelistic seasons this summer he has ever known. Bro. Lindsay is a zealous worker, a deep student of the Word, and a convincing speaker. May the blessing of God continue to attend his effort to advance the truth.

In addition to the General Conference and the Illinois Conference, which are to open jointly next week, the Arkansas-Oklahoma Conference meets at Mcgintytown, Ark., on Aug. 3, and the Eastern Nebraska Conference at Florence on the 6th to the 13th. May God bless each of these gatherings.

Mrs. Levi Mick, matron of Golden Rule Home, has been granted a short leave of absence. She left Sunday morning for her old home in Indiana, where she will remain for a brief rest from her difficult duties. She has been a faithful "mother" to the members of the "family" and will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Ida M. Stone, a member of the Oregon church, who was entertained at the home of the pastor during her recent illness, is again able to be about and has gone to the home of her son in this city.

Will you have room in the back of the car that brings you to Oregon next week to slip in a jar of fruit or a few vegetables? They will be appreciated. And how about an extra bed-sheet for use in the dormitory—one you can leave behind when you go home?

THE PRUDENT SHALL KEEP SILENT

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

ONE of the hardest things to do in life is to be quiet. We are told in 1 Thessalonians 4:11 to "study to be quiet." The lack of this silence seems alarmingly true to us when we withdraw for even a short time from the world's noise and confusion into the stillness of God's presence and permit Him to talk to us. How refreshing it is! It is, however, much easier, as many Christians have learned, to talk to God, telling Him our needs, asking His blessing upon our efforts, and to feel a load lifted because we have done this.

All this is good and necessary. But how many times do we stay long enough in God's presence to have Him talk to us in order that we may have the confidence that we need to overcome the many distressing things that seem to loom up at times, that we may have courage to fight the good fight of faith, and that we may escape the things that are coming on the earth from which Christ told us to pray for escape.

Some of us may need more lessons than others, but the secret for the Christian has always been to learn in secret and in silence of God that He may exalt us in due season. That "due season" has not come yet, and just before the time that it is about due is the time for the Christian to be careful.

Even the best of Christians often have much of the creature haste in them, the feverish, ever-increasing tension so common to modern life that is making of us almost a nation of nervous wrecks and the pressure of which is driving many deluded people to destruction. It is not always an easy thing for Christians to maintain their peace of mind under the present almost chaotic conditions which are not at all conducive to peace of mind or poise of body. Hence, as the disturbing elements increase, we need to spend more time in quietness, for this is where the Christian's power begins. Isaiah tells us, "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength." Christ often went out alone and avoided the crowds so that He had renewed strength to give out the glad tidings.

The spirit of God is just the opposite of this modern world spirit. We notice this as we take note of how some of the godly men of the Bible acted after having sought God for some length of time. When God spoke to Job, he put his hand over his mouth in order that he might be silent long enough to permit God to talk to him (Job 40:4, 5).

Another reason why we must be silent is that there are so many voices and so many spirits that it is sometimes hard to distinguish between two ways that seem alike unless we are familiar with the Word of God. David said, "In thy word do I meditate day and night," and that is what we must do. But Solomon tells us that much study is weariness of the flesh (Ecclesiastes 1:18; 12:12). This one way the Christian suffers, for godly wisdom is foreign to the carnal mind.

It is power, then, that we need and that we get in the stillness of God's presence in order that we may have strength and courage to hold up the truths of God's Word in these depressing times and, too, that we may be among those faithful servants that are giving out "meat in due season" when He comes.

Christ said, "Unless I wash your feet, ye have no part with me." And who is there who has not felt the refreshing of God's presence when he resorted to it after having mingled in this world with its conflict of ideas?

And now, when we are so near the end of this age for which we have been so long looking and waiting, how it behooves us that we walk in closer fellowship with Him whose wonderful presence we may soon behold! And what it will mean to us to see the holy, righteous God, the King of kings, face to face!

MAN IS RESPONSIBLE

By R. H. Judd

THE minister of education in a despatch from Mexico City is reported to have said: "There is not a Divine Being who rules the lives of men, insensible to their pain, insensible to their misery, capricious and thirsting with absurd vindictiveness."

The writer would take the same words and give them a meaning the exact opposite of what was intended, as he agrees there is no such being, for God is not responsible for, neither is He indifferent to, the sufferings of mankind. Every good gift that man can want, to satisfy not only his needs, but his desires, has been supplied on this wonderful earth, and that, too, in abundance inconceivable, and in perfect and everlasting adaptation to the being He created to live upon it. Man himself is responsible for the misery and the chaos that now exist, and no man can deny the self-evident fact that, were every man true to his brother man, "to love his neighbour as himself," there would be no such conditions as at present obtain.

The true facts in the case are that men in their lust for gain have forgotten God and have forsaken His Word, because that same Word denounces their lust, upholding the right of the poor, and lays down laws for the well-being of all. Were His laws followed and obeyed, peace, plenty, and happiness would be universal. As surely as disobedience to man's laws brings penalty, so surely will penalty follow the breaking of the laws of God, which are always on the side of right, justice, and mercy. The only remedy for the world's ills is for the world to get back to God and to His Word; but, having despised His entreaties, judgment must and will follow as surely as the night follows day. And just as surely is the day coming when "righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

Will All Roads Again Lead to Rome

By H. A. Sheets

IN THE days of its greatest power Rome built substantial military roads which radiated to all portions of its great empire. These thirty-one arterial highways were supplemented with lesser ones until all strategic posts were linked with the capital city. It was during the days of Rome's greatness that some one remarked that "all roads lead to Rome." That proud observation was all too true at that time, but Rome declined and was finally so completely overthrown that its greatness became but a memory. However, that memory has stirred and is now stirring the heart of every "son of Italy."

Benito Mussolini has been and is dreaming dreams. In his fancy he can see all roads of Europe again leading to Rome. He stated in a public address that Rome must again rise to the position of greatness and power enjoyed in the days of the Caesars. He stated that they were going to fight any and all who attempt to thwart their rise to the chief position among the nations.

The leader of the Fascisti Black Shirts believes in war. In 1914 he advocated Italy's entrance into the World War on the side of the Allies. His chief argument was: "Neutrals have never dominated events; events have always dominated neutrals. Blood alone moves the wheels of history." That argument reveals the heart and mind of him who now rules Rome.

There are many scriptures which seem to teach very conclusively that Rome must be elevated to a position of authority over a vast empire that will duplicate or surpass the Rome of the Caesars. With this thought in mind the following Associated Press dispatch becomes very interesting, if not very significant:

"London, June 13.—The small nations of Europe tonight turned longing eyes toward Rome and a possible bloc under Benito Mussolini's strong-arm dictatorship as the big powers, squabbling over war debts and stabilization, threatened progress of the World Economic Congress.

"Should the United States, Great Britain, and France fail to point the way out of the economic morass at the World Economic Conference," Emile Francoui, the veteran Belgian diplomat told the Associated Press tonight, "the small nations of Europe will cluster about one sole statesman capable of leadership—Mussolini.

"Il Duce is fostering sensible ideas for united action while the great powers are talking about civilization dropping over the abyss, but doing nothing. The small nations, crying for leadership, will follow Mussolini."

"The northwestern European States—Scandinavia, Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg—took the first step ten days ago toward the formation of the bloc at Stockholm, when it was decided to seek a powerful leader around whom they could gather should a stalemate develop at the economic conference.

"Representatives of these states said tonight Mussolini gained prestige by the four-power pact and Il Duce's recent pronouncements led them to believe he would step in—perhaps before the London conference ended.

"There was no hint, however, in Finance Minister Guido Jung's speech today that Rome contemplated accepting such responsibilities.

"Ten states, it was said, would be sufficient to force others to join a customs union. Opinions of the small nations are so hardy they believe France and Germany eventually would be drawn in.

"This scheme, a spokesman declared, would carry far-reaching political consequences, making all roads from small continental nations again lead to Rome."

Brethren, we are living in very important days. The Scriptures give us many signs which should enable us to know when the last days arrive. As we write, we are unable to recall one sign that is not in process of fulfillment unless it is the revealing of the Antichrist; and if Mussolini should be placed at the head of a great federation of nations now occupying territory formerly in the Roman Empire, then he might easily be in a position to fulfill that prophecy. We feel, therefore, that the second coming of Christ must be near. "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch!"—Gospel Searchlight.

The Editor's Prayer

MOST gracious Father, Thou in whose service we assemble at this time, we would praise Thy most holy name for the privilege we now enjoy. To meet with others of similar faith and hope is inspiring. To exchange experiences with them, to receive and to impart something of the spiritual blessings which Thou hast bestowed upon us individually during the past year will, we believe, be mutually beneficial. Bless, we pray Thee, every effort that is made at this gathering that is in harmony with Thy will, and prevent the furthering of any purpose that is contrary thereto, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

The Church of God

UNDER Article III of the constitution adopted by the General Conference of the "Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the United States and Canada" in Philadelphia in 1888, it is stated that "the Objects of this Conference shall be by concerted action to promote Christian work and fellowship, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ."

Clearly and broadly stated as it was, the delegates at the conference realized that such an announcement of purpose was not sufficient, that it was not specific enough to reveal the definite objectives of those who had instituted the general conference movement among the scattered congregations of the Church of God. Something must be added to this inclusive scriptural statement that would serve to define its terms.

A Committee on Church Union was therefore appointed which in process of time submitted an acceptable report entitled, "Some Leading Principles of Faith." It is not necessary for us to repeat the entire statement contained in that report, as it is on file in the archives of the General Conference and available to all; but it is advisable to remind ourselves of its provisions in a general way. Its more outstanding declarations covered the following doctrinal points:

The Bible the only standard of faith and practice; each local church to be permitted to formulate its own statement of faith; the inspiration of the Scriptures; baptism by immersion of believers into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; the Lord's supper; literal coming of Christ; the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth under the rulership of Christ and His saints; mortality of man; immortality obtainable only through faith in the gospel by a resurrection from the dead; that "the wicked perish as a consequence of their persistent iniquity"; the restitution; the new heavens and new earth "as the future abode of the people of God"; and the restoration of Israel.

This analysis was followed by a concluding paragraph to this effect:

"These and other kindred truths distinguish us as a people from the great religious bodies of our time; and living, as we believe, near the close of this dispensation for taking out a people for God's name, we recommend our preachers, evangelists, and churches to place and keep these too much neglected doctrines of the Scriptures prominently before the people."

This outline of "those things most surely believed" did not result from the calling of the Philadelphia conference, but the conference was called because there was a rapidly growing number of Bible students who had already adopted these views. The report of the committee constituted a restatement of what had long been the general belief of the Church of God everywhere and presented to the world the real reason for the organization of this body as a separate and distinct company of disciples of Jesus Christ. Had there been no further purpose for them to accomplish than that which was stated under Article III of the constitution adopted, it would have been a useless and even sinful act for them to separate themselves from other religious bodies whose objectives could be honestly stated in exactly the same terms.

In reality, however, the Church of God then held, and it still holds, "some leading principles of faith" that are ultra-important, truths that are necessary to salvation if the positive force of Bible language is to be accepted. The dissemination of these vital requirements of the gospel is the only justification for the existence of the Church of God as a denomination.

A careful comparison of the truths stated forty-five years ago in Philadelphia with the teaching of those who are affiliated closely with the General Conference of the Church of God today will clearly indicate that these great revelations of divine will are still considered essentials.

CHRIST OUR HOPE

BLESSED be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."—1 Peter 1:3. "If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you."—Romans 8:11. These scriptures are emphatic and conclusive, yet they are distinctive in their utterance. The New Testament never puts before the believer the probability of death while it recognizes the possibility. Our mortal bodies will need the quickening of His divine life in order to be changed, but it is only those who have fallen asleep who will need to be raised from among the dead. The one thing to which the resurrection of Christ begets us is "a living hope."

We do not hope to be saved, although we are saved "to the" or "in hope" (margin, Newberry, Rom. 8:24). Our condition before we were quickened by the Spirit of God and justified by His grace was "without hope" (Eph. 2:12). But we are not hoping for salvation, that is, hoping to be saved from the punishment due to our sin. "Ye are saved," writes the Apostle to the Ephesians: or, as the Revised Version has it, "Ye have been saved." When? Upon believing in the Lord Jesus (John 5:24).

WHAT IS NOT THE TRUE HOPE?

By noting what a thing is not, we narrow it to what it is.

Death is not the hope of the believer in Christ. Death is the result of sin. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men."—Rom. 5:12. Again, "And as it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment"; this is the portion of man as a sinner. But notice what the Lord says further: "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."—Heb. 9:27, 28. Death and judgment are the portion of each one through sin; but Christ has died the death and borne the judgment for those who believe in Him, so now we are looking for neither, but for the personal return of the Lord Jesus.

We have a most striking distinction between death and the coming of the Lord in John 21:18-23. The Lord was telling Peter that he would die: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not. This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me." But Peter, seeing John, wanted to know what he was to do. The Lord replied, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" Then the other disciples jumped to the conclusion that John would not die; but Christ did not say that he should not die, but, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" Peter knew that he was to die, as he himself says: "I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus hath shewed me."—2 Peter 1:14. But the other disciples evidently thought that John would not die. And it is clearly seen by their words that they knew the difference between Christ's coming for them in person and their going to Him in death.

The coming of the Holy Spirit is not the hope of the believer. We are not told to look or wait for the Holy Spirit, which dwells in every believer in Christ. "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost?"—1 Cor. 6:19. Again: "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."—Rom. 8:9.

It was after Christ had spoken of His going away and coming back again that He said He would not leave His disciples orphans, but that He would send them another Comforter, which would be with them and dwell in them (John 14:16); and besides, it is by the power of the Holy Spirit that we wait for the hope of righteousness by faith (Gal. 5:5). Since we are indwelt by the Holy Spirit, we are not waiting for it to come, but we are distinctly told to wait for Christ.

Of the Thessalonian saints we read that they turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God.

WHAT IS THE TRUE HOPE?

It is the personal return of the Lord Jesus for His people. Just as He was seen in the flesh to go up into heaven, so will believers see Him return. Who saw Him go away? Or, we might ask, who saw Him after His resurrection? We are told in 1 Corinthians 15:5-7, "He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve; after that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once. . . after that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles."

This hope is the hope of the gospel (Col. 1:23). The gospel not only tells us what Christ has done, what He is to us, and what He is doing for us, but also what He is yet going to do for us when He comes again. The Old Testament saints did not know of the Lord's coming for His people, only of His coming with them. But the gospel has brought this to light. (Please turn to Page Ten)

"Hold Fast"

"Hold fast till I come!" Thy words,
O Lord, we hear
From out the glory, where enthroned
Thou art,
Thou once wast scorned, despised,
a Man of tears,
But Victor now art Thou, and crowned in part.

"Hold fast till I come!" Thy words,
O Lord, we hear,
"Hold fast" shall we to Thee, our Hope, our Strength.
So shall our work be done, our lives brought near
To Thee: our heart's desire fulfilled at length.

ZIONISM

By George B. Alldridge

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the victorious entrance into Jerusalem by General Allenby and his troops on December 11, 1917, there appeared an article in the New York Times written by Henry Morgenthau, America's gifted and clever ambassador to Turkey during the late President Wilson's first term. The opening paragraphs to me are wonderful, so pregnant with thought which covers all involved in the occupation of Jerusalem by the Allied forces.

"The fall of Jerusalem, its recapture by Christian forces after twelve centuries of almost uninterrupted Mohammedan rule, is surely an event of the greatest significance to us all. American Christians, and indeed Christians everywhere, will rejoice that the Holy Land, so well known to them through both the Old and New Testaments, has been restored to the civilized world. I with my co-religionists, rejoice not only as an American but as a cosmopolitan who recognizes the fertile seeds of civilization in all truly religious faith and experience. For the whole civilized world, the tenth of December, 1917, will be remembered as a day of profound historical interest, and, I hope also, of large meaning for the future.

"During my recent visit to Palestine, I was greatly impressed by the progress made by the Jewish colonies. These colonies had developed under most adverse circumstances, and had demonstrated fully that, when real opportunity is given, the people of the Jewish faith can create most creditable self-governing units. With Palestine liberated from the curse of Turkish misgovernment, this work will go on with ever greater success.

"All Jews, both Zionists and those of us who do not take part in the advocacy of the entire programme of the Zionists, rejoice at the prospect which is now open. Many Jews will wish to settle in Palestine. Many others, as well as great numbers of Christians from all lands, will wish to visit the Holy Land, and there undertake studies in history and religion. Many of us hope that the Hebraic language and the elements of the Hebraic culture will develop there sufficiently to be again, in a new way, of genuine service to the moral and cultural life of the world."

Everything appertaining to the acquisition of knowledge respecting our Lord's second coming and Zionism holds me, for it is the richest food I can find that nourishes and spiritually stimulates my "new mind." "It was his own will that we should be born by the Word of the truth, to be a kind of firstfruits among his creatures. Be sure of that, my beloved brothers."—James 1:18, 19, Moffatt.

"You worship One of whom you know nothing. We worship One whom we know; for salvation comes from the Jews"—John 4:22, Weymouth.
"You pay homage without knowledge; we pay homage with knowledge; because salvation comes from among the Judeans."—Ferrar Fenton.

I read it; it will hold you, and your mind will feel as though it had partaken of a spiritual tonic. However, as I read the chapter under the caption, "Zionism: a Surrender, Not a Solution," which was originally published July, 1921, in the World's Work, I felt chagrined and mortified to think that this gifted man belonged to the ranks of the anti-Zionists.

How easily scriptures come to your mind if you know them. So John 6:66-71 came floating in, and what a deep meaning Jesus' words had for me: "Will ye also go away?" How glad I am that I belong to Peter's company: "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life."

These are Morgenthau's words: "The political pretensions of Zionism are fantastic. I think the foregoing paragraphs have demonstrated this. Is Zionism a spiritual will-o'-the-wisp? I assent with all the vigor of my most profound convictions that it is. Its professed spiritual aim is the reassertion of the dignity and worth of the Jew. It is a mechanism designed to restore to him his self-respect, and to secure for him the respect of others. The means by which it proposes to accomplish this have been described above. How pitifully inadequate these means are has been demonstrated."

The previous chapter treats on "My Mission to Poland." This is what he refers to; and after reading his report presented to President Wilson, it is not necessary to go back to the medieval hatred and bigotry of the Jew, for his report shows it to have been just as bad during the last few decades in Poland, Russia, Ukraina, and Austria.

In reading history it often to my mind seems strange that powerful nations should champion the cause of those who are doing wrong and seek to oppress and destroy those nations who are weak and yet are doing right. Why has Great Britain always championed the cause of the Ottoman Empire? Well, my faith in God's Word is magnified and strengthened as I see how God holds the nations back until "the fulness of times" arrives. Then like "lightning from a clear sky" the foreign policies of nations will be suddenly changed!

During the last century and the first decade of this, Great Britain was the friend of Turkey. She could, if she had wished, have destroyed Turkey back in the Crimean War by supporting Russia, in fact, at any time before Germany became the friend of Turkey. But God's time had come, and, as the old saw says, "Politics has strange bed fellows," there was a change in Europe. In four years God opened up the way for His people to return to their own land.

Hadrian, in the year 135 A. D., issued his edict that no Jew should be permitted to live in Palestine. In 1856 the Sultan lifted this ban; but nevertheless, even then it was not universally recognized. Ah, yes, Ezekiel knew; so he wrote, "After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years (see Deut. 32:29) thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them." Who accomplished all this? Just those whom God said would. Read Ezekiel 18:13.

What possessed President Wilson to get into this war when he was elected to keep us out of it? If your country is listed among God's "four hundred," the elect of nations, nothing can keep you out; so in this case the United States, being a young lion, and apparently the most lusty of the litter, had to go notwithstanding our noble first president's warning to refrain from foreign alliances.

Now, please read Jeremiah 33:9-14. Are we living in these days or not? My fellow Gentiles, deep down in your hearts you despise the Jew, do you not? Well, I love him; but there is a reason why I do. I read Romans 9:4 from Weymouth's translation: "To them belongs recognition as God's sons, and they have His glorious Presence and the Covenants, and the giving of the law and the Temple service and the ancient Promises. To them the Patriarchs belong, and from them in respect of His human lineage came the Christ, who is exalted above all, God blessed throughout the ages. Amen."

Did ever God say this about any other nation except to those to whom Jesus said, "Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. 21:43)? Now read Deuteronomy 7:6 and 14:2. It is to be presumed that my readers believe that God changes not, that He is the same today, yesterday, and forever.

So, since God has decided as He declared through Moses that Israel should be made a peculiar people unto Himself above all the nations that are upon the earth God will surely do it. Hence, we read in Malachi 3:6, "For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." To accomplish this, soon He will put into operation Jeremiah 31:31 and 32.

I reiterate a former declaration that the Jews are the most intellectual, patient, suffering, and courageous race the human family has ever known; and by my knowledge acquired by reading their history and by observation of their loyalty and faithfulness to the God of their fathers I can see why God spared them through all the awful vicissitudes of suffering for their disobedience.

Predestination and Endless Misery

---

MR. WESLEY, in addressing the reprobates on the supposition of eternal predestination, says, "There is no help for you in God. Your God! No. He is not yours: He never was; He never will be. He that made you, He that called you into being, has no pity upon you! He made you for this very end, to damn you; to cast you headlong into a lake of fire burning with brimstone! This was prepared for you, or ever the world began! And for this you are now reserved in chains of darkness, till the decree brings forth; till, according to His eternal, unchangeable, irresistible will,

You groan, you howl, you writhe in waves of fire,

O God, how long shall this doctrine stand?" (Wesley's Works, vol. 10, p. 145.)

Again in his letter to the Rev. Mr. Hervey, he says, "But what becomes of all other people? They must inevitably perish forever. The die was cast or ever they were in being. The doctrine to pass them by, has Consigned their unborn souls to hell,

And damn'd them from their mother's womb!

I could sooner be a Turk, a Deist, yea, an Atheist, than I could believe this. It is less absurd to deny the being of a God, than to make Him an Almighty Tyrant." (Wesley's Works, vol. 10, p. 201.)

The ground on which Mr. Wesley believed that the system of predestination made God "an Almighty Tyrant" was its representing Him as having a disposition to delight in the torment of His creatures, from which disposition He is supposed to have predestinated their sins as the necessary means of their eternal misery! But if it be said that God now has a disposition to delight in the undiminished anguish of all that are in hell and hence fixes them under a necessity of sinning by His own decree for the sake of perpetuating their misery, will not this make Him an Almighty Tyrant as much as the predestinating system of the Rev. Mr. Hervey? The one doctrine is that He had an original disposition to make sinners, in order to make them miserable; the other, that He has now a disposition to keep them sinners, in order to keep them miserable. If He has such a character now, He always had it; for I must still repeat, "With Him is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."—Selected by R. A. Curtis from Asa Shinn's work, On the Benevolence and Rectitude of the Supreme Being.

The Purpose and Efficacy of Prayer

WHILE I do not expect to tell you anything which you do not already know about prayer, I think it proper at my advanced age of 92 years to stir up your minds by way of remembrance of what is written, lest we forget the purpose and efficacy of prayer.

Prayer in its relation to the plan of salvation is like a golden thread which runs through the whole fabric to give it strength and beauty. The purpose of prayer is to provide a means of communication between God, who is in heaven, and His people, who are upon the earth, through the medium of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, who is now in heaven interceding for His people as a high priest after the order of Melchizedek. (See Hebrews 4:1-14.)

In offering prayer much depends on the state of mind at the time. "To this man will I look. He that is of a contrite spirit and trembleth at my word." God has magnified His Word above all His name. Every word used in prayer should reflect reverence for God's Word and adoration, praise, and thanksgiving for His past blessings, and in all meekness make our requests known unto Him.

The history of God's people shows them to be a humble, contrite, praying people, trusting implicitly in His providence and in His promises. Solomon at the dedication of the temple prayed for wisdom to govern the nation. His prayer was answered and much more was added which he did not ask for. The Prophet Elijah prayed that it might not rain, and it did not rain on the earth for three years and six months. Again he prayed for rain, and it rained copiously and the earth brought forth abundantly (1 Kings 18:1; James 5:16, 17.) The Prophet Daniel had a custom of praying three times a day. But none of these worthy characters equaled the Lord Jesus as a man of prayer.

Although He was the Son of God, He was in our nature tempted to sin as we are; and He prayed continually for God's help to overcome sin. On one occasion He remained all night in prayer to God. All of His prayers were answered, except one. He knew that He had to die, and He spoke often of His coming death to His disciples; but, being in our nature, He dreaded the sting of a violent death, and He requested His Father, if it were possible, to remove the bitter cup from Him.

It being impossible, according to God's plan of salvation, for sinners to be pardoned or reconciled to God without the shedding of His blood, He qualified His request by saying, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

He was led like a lamb to the slaughter; He was followed to the cross by an angry mob crying out, "Crucify him! crucify him! We will not have this man to rule over us." And they crucified Him—the Son of the living God. Tender and loving hands took Him down from the cross and buried Him. But God would not suffer His Holy One to see corruption; so He raised Him from the dead and clothed Him with His own incorruptible Spirit nature. He can also say, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and I will raise him up at the last day."

During His life upon earth, even before His death, He said, "My sheep hear my voice, and they follow me," and, "I will give them eternal life"—the life which He now has, of pure unmixed Spirit-nature manifested in a glorious, incorruptible body. Christ told Nicodemus, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6, 8; Rom. 8:11); being born of the Spirit, they will be equal to the angels of God and cannot die any more.

The Apostle Paul in his letter to the Hebrews in chapter eleven refers to many wonderful things which have been accomplished by faithful prayer and concludes in Hebrews 12:1 by saying, "Seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." This was written about nineteen hundred years ago, and to those who understand prophecy and have observed its fulfillment as recorded in history that great cloud of witnesses can now be doubled, for history, both ancient and modern, is nothing more than a record of prophecy fulfilled and fulfilling. God sees the end from the beginning, and for the benefit of His people He has revealed the history of Adam's race in advance, by and through His holy prophets, who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit.

Current history, in recording the events of the present time, is unwittingly recording the fulfillment of prophecy which was made more than twenty-five hundred years ago. Speaking of this age of the world, the Prophet wrote of an unprecedented time of trouble and that during that time the resurrection of the dead and the reward of God's people would take place. (See Daniel 12:1-4.)

The Lord Jesus Christ was requested by His disciples to mention some future event in the world's history by which they could know the time of His coming. He said there would be trouble among the nations, great distress upon earth, perplexity and fear in men's hearts, "looking after those things which are coming on the earth," and "they shall see the Son of man coming with power and great glory." "When you see these things," said Jesus, "then know that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand," and, "Lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh."

In the last book of the Bible, Revelation 11:18, it is recorded that the resurrection and reward of God's people will take place when the nations are angry and the time of God's wrath is come. This truth is taught throughout the Scriptures. There are many people, including some of the world's wisest statesmen, who believe that the nations are preparing for the battle of Armageddon, in which a great many of the wicked now living will be destroyed.

One of the queens of England is reported to have said, "The government of the world belongs to Christ by right of inheritance, and after the battle of Armageddon it will belong to Him by right of conquest; and I am ready at any time to surrender my crown to Him without opposition."

When the prayers of the faithful are answered, Abraham will realize the promise made to him, that all nations of the earth would be blessed by the administration of a righteous law by his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. (Gal. 3:8, 16; Isaiah 2:1-4.) And David will realize the fulfillment of God's promise that his throne and kingdom will be established forever in his presence. (Psalm 89:20-27; 2 Sam. 7:12-16.) Both of these promises will surely be realized, for they were confirmed by God with an oath.

And Mary, the mother of Jesus, will realize the fulfillment of the promise made to her by the angel that her Son would be great and that God would give unto Him the throne of His father David and that He would rule over the twelve tribes forever. (Luke 1:25-33.) She will recall the time when she saw her Son as the Lamb of God led to the cross to be crucified. The next time she will see Him in power and great glory as the Lion of the tribe of Judah, destined to rule all nations with a rod of iron. She will behold Him as the nobleman who went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, now returned to possess it. She will hear Him say, "Bring hither those mine enemies that would not that I should rule over them, and slay them before me." And to the righteous, she will hear Him say, "Come now, my people, inherit the kingdom prepared for you"; the kingdom for which you have been praying to come is now here that God's will may be done upon earth even as it is done in heaven. And she will see her Son occupy the kingdom and re-establish the throne of David; she will see Him crowned "King of kings, and Lord of lords" and all earthly kings, nobles, and potentates at His feet pleading for mercy. She will hear the voice of the great multitude praising Him, saying, "Thou art worthy, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us by thy blood out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people and hast made us kings and priests unto our God, and we shall reign on the earth." (Rev. 5:9, 10, 11; 20:4.)

What a grand and glorious hope is set before us in the gospel of Christ, which comes to us as the result of believing and obeying the Word of God. Among professing Christians in the world there are many hopes and many gospels, but to us there is but one hope and one gospel (Eph. 4:4-6; Gal. 1:6-9; Acts 26:6-9).

The coming of Christ and His righteous reign on earth is the one and only hope for a suffering world. To His people it means everything, so let us continue to pray, yea, let us pray fervently, pray without ceasing, "May Thy kingdom soon come, that Thy will may be done upon earth as it is done in heaven."—G. W. Banta in Bible Truth.

Gods of Travel Call

By Arlen Marsh

---

AS THE sun swings south toward the equator, leaving behind it midsummer heat, the problem of maintaining church attendance equal with that of fall, winter, and spring becomes increasingly acute. Despite the fact that membership and attendance in every denomination have been augmented considerably during the depression by those who ostensibly are returning to God out of appreciation for their dependence upon Him but who in reality are returning to God because they cannot afford to go elsewhere, the difficulties accompanying church work of all kinds during the summer months are enormous.

It is commonly known that June, July, August, and September mark among most churches a decided drop in interest on the part of their congregations. The precise cause of this varies, of course, with each locality; but in general the reasons for the sudden dearth of desire for religious services are not difficult to ascertain. The statement is made that summer is vacation time and that church members go traveling. Theoretically this constitutes no good excuse, since in most cases for every man who leaves the town of his residence to spend his vacation somewhere in the distance some one from a distance enters to spend his vacation there, a mere temporary transfer of locales.

However, as is frequently true, practice disproves theory. When the average individual travels, he leaves his God behind. (This was something the ancient Greeks would not do. They refused to go anywhere without their lares and penates—household gods—believing that they gave protection and blessing. Christians would do well to follow their example.) Church is forgot. In the consideration of the one who is taking his vacation religion plays no part.

Obviously this evil should be eradicated. With equal obviousness it cannot be. Although the tendency toward religion is ingrained in humanity, men rebel against their gods upon the slightest provocation. In the opinion of the majority no vacation is a good one unless God is left behind, and this opinion is so deeply set as to be ineradicable under present conditions. When men have nowhere else to go, they turn to Jehovah; but while they can go elsewhere, the church must carry on as best it can without their poor assistance.

This is not pure pessimism, but recognition of the facts. Biblical predictions pointed to these circumstances; and indeed conditions similar to these always have existed. The church should make every effort to conquer this tendency to ignore Jehovah when pleasure and the gods of travel call, and it will succeed in some measure; but it cannot hope to subdue among all of its members the feeling that, when they are on vacations, God should remain behind.

The Tribulation and the Last Trump

---

By John E. Hammond

---

THERE are two schools of thought having to do with the divine purpose regarding the church during the period known as Jacob's trouble or the great tribulation. One, and the most widely accepted view, is that the rapture of the church takes place before the tribulation; the other is that the church goes through this time of trouble, escaping any harm through God's miraculous protection.

If the last view be correct, there must be some necessary contributing service for the living members aside from the discipline afforded them. With the first view the wonder has always been that no statement is found as to where the place of waiting is to be in the intervening time of some three and one half years between the rapture and the return to Jerusalem. The pre-rapture thought involves the belief that some Antichrist man of sin coming into power makes a covenant with Israel for seven years, breaking it at the middle of the week of years. Others maintain that this was fulfilled by the prince that came at the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. The predominant teaching has been, and I have always held to it, the pre-tribulation-rapture view.

I shall endeavor to present what I have been recently led to understand as a definite and scriptural reason that this view is wrong. In Revelation, chapter 8, after the opening of seven seals, the first, sealing the servants of God, definitely designated as the twelve thousand from each of the twelve tribes of Israel, seven angels appear, each given a trumpet to sound, not simultaneously, but in succession. Immediately before the sounding of these trumpets another angel having a golden censer with much incense offered with the prayers of saints fills it with altar-fire which he casts into the earth.

At Pentecost the Holy Spirit came as cloven tongues of fire, and I believe the fire here represents the cleansing of the outpoured Holy Spirit of truth for the hundred forty-four thousand servants previously anointed or sealed. I am giving these details because of the light they throw upon events which follow.

The description of events following each trumpet's sounding is highly symbolical, but who can read it without a feeling of horror of the condition to prevail in the earth when these trumpets sound? It certainly gives the impression of a time of great trouble. Now at chapter 10, verse 7, we read: "But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets." Let us bear in mind that this is the beginning of the seventh and last trumpet, and let us now look elsewhere for light concerning this "finished mystery of God."

Let us look to the Apostle Paul, God's great mystery-revealing servant. He explains in 1 Corinthians 15:51, 52: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." Again, 1 Thessalonians 4:16: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

If we go to Revelation 11:15, we find what follows as a result of the completed seventh trumpet sounding, thus: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Can this be any other event than Jesus' coming at the conclusion of the tribulation with the resurrection and translation immediately preceding, in this same last trumpet?

Our conclusion is that such destructive events accompanying the first six trumpets certainly present a picture of unprecedented disaster wherever one wishes to place it in the calendar of time. And wherever one does place it, the consummation reveals the completion of the mystery of God; for the redeemed shall be partakers of the divine nature when the Father's beloved Son comes in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then to sit upon the throne of His glory. We do well to walk in fear and trembling before the mighty God of Israel, to whom belongs the abundant storehouse of wisdom and understanding pertaining to riches in glory, who through His Spirit gives liberally to all who come to Him in faith and through that mercy extended through the merits of His Son.

All praise and honor to His holy name. The Lord is suddenly coming to His temple, even the messenger of the covenant. "A book of remembrance has been written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."

"AND HE BAPTIZED HIM"

By Wiley Jones

SUCH is the simple statement regarding the work of an earnest, Spirit-commissioned follower of our Lord. He was told to join himself to a chariot. An Ethiopian was therein. Philip "preached unto him Jesus." "And he baptized him." (Acts 8:30-39.)

"Baptize," read in the Greek Testament, is baptizo. It means to dip, to plunge, to submerge, to overwhelm, to immerse, to bury. There is another word in the Greek Testament which looks very similar to baptizo. It is rantizo. It means to sprinkle. It so reads in our Testament. It never means baptize. "Baptize" never means sprinkle.

Philip "baptized him." Let no one mistake. He did not rantize him.

Dean Stanley, the late Queen Victoria's preacher, is quoted in the Nineteenth Century magazine, October, 1879, as saying: "The change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of the Apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word, . . . speaking generally, the Christian civilized world has decided against it." (That is, against immersion.)

By what authority did the Christian world "decide against it"? By the authority of the Roman Catholic Church in council assembled. But is it not time for the Protestant Christian world to protest this Roman "decision" also? Paul says that "we are buried with him by baptism (not "rantism") into death."—Rom. 6:1-5.

Man was not created in Christ, but in Adam. All bear the "image of the earthy." But God has created a new man, a "second man," "the Lord from heaven." (1 Cor. 15:45-47.) God has further provided that each may have the opportunity of becoming dead to the old man and alive to the new. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature."—2 Cor. 5:17. Being then born of and in Adam, how will one become transferred into Christ? Paul answers: "So many of us as were baptized into Christ, were baptized into his death." Notice the word "into." They were out of Christ. "So many as were baptized into Christ."

God has laws for everything. Here is a law for getting into His Son. The writer has searched God's Word in vain for some other law of God, by obeying which one of Adam's children could be transferred into the second Adam. The Savior's last commission was to "preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

The apostles followed this law, this order or method. It was from God. Compare Acts 2:37, 38, 41; 8:12, 26-39; 10:48; 16:33; Col. 2:12; 1 Peter 3:21.

Note carefully the method of getting into Christ in the following text and the result: "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ. . . . And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:27-29.

"There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." May every one who has faith in His name and is repentant of all other names comply with that God-given law and become "baptized into Christ."

GOD'S CHURCH AND SECTARIANISM

By J. G. Haupt

FROM the day of Pentecost all the apostles inspired by the great Father speak of God's church or the church of God as the name by which the one church should be called. Peter, Paul, John, and Luke all tell us about this one church. Any departure from the doctrines of this church has been called sectarianism, each branch being called a sect. When the Apostle Paul arrived in the great capital of the Roman nation, he gathered the members of this church and other interested men and women into his own hired house and taught them more fully of God and of Christ.

The words "universal church" mean "catholic church." It seems that the Roman believers in the city of Rome organized the Catholic Church. Whether the latter met with those gathered in the Apostle Paul's residence it is difficult to determine. Paul evidently officiated in the garb of the Jewish people of that day. It seems that those who gathered in a church edifice had adopted a garb of another type. But one Catholic Church existed until the believers of the East centered at Constantinople separated from the mother church and called their church the Greek Catholic Church. The bishop of Rome was called papa, father, pope. The name "bishop" at first referred to every individual preacher of a church. In time it became used for a preacher who was over other preachers. In the Greek Catholic Church every preacher was known as a papa or pope.

I cannot here speak of any divisions in the Greek Catholic Church, but the Roman Catholic Church remained together until King Henry of England asked the pope to grant him a divorce. This was refused, evidently upon full and sufficient grounds. King Henry, however, caused the Holy Catholic Church to be established in the British realm. This British church was also called the Episcopal Church or Bishop's Church. This went through several subdivisions. From one of the Episcopal churches sprang the Methodist Episcopal Church, also known as the Wesleyan Church. The Methodist Church went through several subdivisions.

Early in church history many fine preachers and their adherents became known as Anabaptists. Ana is the Greek prefix meaning "again." By Anabaptists was signified "again baptizers," as the pastors always baptized in water those who had been baptized by baptizers not considered qualified or by methods not considered regular. Not considering that they were "again baptizers," these in time omitted the prefix and became Baptists. The Baptists have divided into several sects.

Years ago Alexander Campbell organized the Disciples' Church, a church with which I had some acquaintance as a boy and a young man. In perhaps a dozen or twenty years Mr. Campbell and his coworkers changed this name to the Christian Church. This was by degrees changed into a number of sects. The Church of Christ was established in Kentucky by those who refused to accept an accompaniment to the singing. I think there are several divisions of this sect in the United States, Great Britain, the New Zealand Islands, and other eastern British possessions. In the United States there is a sect that pronounces the first syllable with a long i. There is also the Christadelphian sect, whose meetings I have attended on several occasions. (I was present at a meeting when the preacher announced the discovery that electricity was the Holy Ghost. Upon learning this new truth, a man announced his desire to be rebaptized into this item of faith, a desire which was granted by the preacher, and the man was baptized in the cistern attached to the building.)

In Germany and Scandinavia Dr. Martin Luther early organized the Lutheran Church from adherents to the Roman Catholic Church. These early divided upon the nature of the emblems of the Lord's Supper. One branch held the emblems to be the real body and blood of Jesus miraculously transmuted, the other considered the emblems to be representatives of the broken body and shed blood of Jesus. The Lutheran churches have been divided into a number of sects in different parts of the world.

This sketch must be considered as quite imperfect. It is a hint to students to continue the study if desired.

God's church has remained the same from its organization, except that a branch in the United States has taught that the birth into the Holy Spirit has already occurred. The Bible teaches that the natural body will become the spiritual body when the Messiah returns again in the great resurrection day. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." The regular Church of God expects this phase to come about with the resurrection of all those who have died in the Messiah and the transformation of those still alive who have put their trust in Him.

THE BIBLE

Give me the Bible, star of gladness gleaming,
To cheer the wanderer lone and tempest-tossed.
No storm can hide that peaceful radiance gleaming,
Since Jesus came to seek and save the lost.

Give me the Bible, all my steps enlighten,
Teach me the danger of these realms below.
That lamp of safety o'er the gloom shall brighten;
That light alone the path of peace can show.

THE ABIDING EARTH

DOCTOR Seiss says that the prevailing notion that when Christ comes it will be to depopulate, destroy, and annihilate the earth is the mere dream of poets without foundation in the Word of God. This earth will endure forever, and in the light of its sister worlds roll on to all eternity. It will be changed in fashion, but not destroyed. It will be renovated, but not depopulated. It will be restored, not annihilated. It will yet be the bright dwelling place of righteousness and peace. The will of God will yet be done here as it is in heaven. The earth will be the perpetual home of a saintly population reflecting the glory of its Maker, and rejoicing forever in His smiles. All that is vile in principle or impure in effect will be purged away; but its firm substance, its splendid scenery, and its impressive images of the Creator's power and the Redeemer's love will never end.

After Christ comes and sets up His throne here, as Chalmers says, "There will be a firm earth as we have at present and a heaven stretched over it as at present. Heaven and earth will forever be. And on earth man in the flesh will spend his eternity. And glorified saints will dwell forever in the New Jerusalem which is to descend from God out of heaven and rest upon the earth. And thus man's endless dwelling place will be on the planet where he was born, bred, raised, and enjoyed his first life and had conscious existence. Happy thought. And may we all be prepared to enter into life and a joyful home. Amen."—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the work of Dr. Hatchett in the "Millenarian."

CHRIST OUR HOPE

Remember the words of Paul by the Holy Spirit: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."—1 Cor. 15:51, 52. Notice the little word "we" because the Apostle is writing to believers. The "last trump" we read of here is the last trump in connection with the church, not the world (see Rev. 8, 9, 10).

"But," says some one, "by this you make two comings."

No. But as there were two stages in His first coming, so there will be in the second. In the former, He came first to Bethlehem and then to Calvary; and in the latter, He will come first in the air (1 Thess. 4:17) for His people and then to the earth with them (2 Thess. 1:8, 10).

This hope is the blessed hope (Titus 2:13). It is blessed because of Him who is the hope, because it tells us of what He is yet going to do for us, and because when it is realized it consummates His happiness and ours.—F. E. Marsh in The Alliance Weekly.

"IF WE CONFESS OUR SINS, HE IS FAITHFUL AND JUST TO FORGIVE US OUR SINS, AND TO CLEANSE US FROM ALL UNRIGHTEOUSNESS."—1 JOHN 1:9.

A PRAYER

OLORD our God, grant us grace to desire Thee with our whole heart; that so desiring we may seek and find Thee; and so finding Thee may love Thee; and loving Thee, may hate those sins from which Thou hast redeemed us. Amen.—Anselm (1033 - 1109).

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

THE annual conference of the National Berean Society will convene at Oregon, Illinois, on Monday August 7, 1933. Therein lies your opportunity for service, since it is your presence and your ideas and votes, regardless of your age, that enable plans for the coming year to be laid. Young people particularly are urged to be present.

The program for the day is as follows: 8:00 a. m., devotional service, followed by a survey of the year's work; 10:45, Bible classes usually held each day at 9:30; 1:30 p. m., regular Bible classes; 2:45, an open discussion of all phases of Berean work, led by M. W. Lyon; 3:15, election of officers; 7:30, song service, led by Mrs. Harold Starbuck; 8:00, Berean sermon, delivered by J. Richard LeCrone.

It is true that business meetings usually are dry affairs, but they never can be made interesting until a group is present with the idea that their help is necessary to the session. In this case, your help is. If you have criticisms, especially constructive criticisms, offer them; nothing can improve without being changed. At the time of election of officers, make nominations and cast ballots intelligently; those you select will do your work and spend your money. Bring your suggestions to the forum at 2:45; you may assist others more than you realize. Check up what reports are given to insure their accuracy, and add whatever of interest you can to them. In brief, make this conference an interesting one; your officers cannot do it all. And, above all, come with the thought that it is a privilege and not merely a duty to work for God through this conference. Whether or not you are a Berean, you doubtless will find something of benefit to your church work during this meeting, so be there.

—Arlen Marsh, Secretary.

WORKS OF CHARITY

LET not the hope of any worldly advantage nor the affection thou bearest to any creature, prevail upon thee to do that which is evil. For the benefit of him, however, who stands in need of relief, a customary good work may sometimes be intermitted; for, in such a case, that good work is not annihilated, but incorporated with a better.

Without charity, that is, love, the external work profiteth nothing; but whatever is done from charity, however trifling and contemptible in the opinion of men, is wholly fruitful in the acceptance of God, who regardeth more the degree of love with which we act, than what or how much we have performed. He doeth much, who loveth much; he doeth much, who doeth well; and he doeth much and well, who constantly preferreth the good of the community to the gratification of his own will. Many actions, indeed, assume the appearance of charity, that are wholly selfish and carnal; for inordinate affection, self-will, the hope of reward, and the desire of personal advantage and convenience are the common motives that influence the conduct of men.

He that has true and perfect charity, "seeketh not his own" in anything, but seeketh only that "God may be glorified in all things"; he "envieth not," for he desires no private gratification: he delights not in himself; but wishes for that which is infinitely transcendent, to be blest in the enjoyment of God: he ascribes not good to any creature, but refers it absolutely to God: from whom, as from its fountain, all good originally flows; in whom, as in their center, all saints will finally rest.—Thomas a Kempis.

ILLINOIS BEREAN CONFERENCE

THE annual conference of the Berean Society of the State of Illinois will convene at Oregon, Illinois, on Friday, August 11, 1933, at 3:00 p. m. It is hoped that every Illinois Berean present at the General Conference will attend this business session, at which a new board will be selected for the coming year. An invitation to attend is also extended to everyone who is interested in Berean activities. Something must be done to better the work in Illinois, so give us the benefit of your ideas.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

"For this child I prayed; therefore have I lent him to the Lord."

HOW A PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

AMONG the beautiful stories of the Bible, many of which we have illustrated this year in our scrapbooks, there are several stories of mothers who loved God and taught their children to love Him, also. But today we have a story of a young woman who had no little boys or girls and who wanted a son more than anything else. In fact, her longing was so deep that she prayed to God year after year about it. And because Hannah showed such constant faith in God, her prayer was granted.

Can you see in your mind the picture of Hannah, going with her husband each year to worship at Shiloh? You know the Hebrew people, or the Israelites as we sometimes call them, thought it a great blessing from God if in their homes they had several boys and girls. And Hannah was so grieved because she had none that she couldn't eat, and she bowed her head down and cried bitter tears.

These same people, if they were true Hebrews, were careful to keep God's laws and to teach their children God's way, also. Hannah promised God that if He answered her prayer and gave her a son she would give him back to God in service all the days of his life. It seems strange that she would find great joy in having a son, only to give him away again, doesn't it? But Hannah was such a devoted woman that she did that very thing.

God heard Hannah's prayer, as He hears all true prayers, and sent her a son; when he was old enough to be away from her, she journeyed once more up to Shiloh, the place of worship, taking her little boy with her. But she returned home without him, and she wasn't sorrowful either. For she left him in the tabernacle to help Eli, the aged high priest.

Now you can see why she would find great happiness in giving God's gift—her son—back to God again. Hannah loved that place of worship, and the thought of having her own boy growing up there, learning God's work, cheered and comforted her all the rest of her life. We give back to God a part of what He gives us, but Hannah gave all.

Now let's make a booklet for Hannah, taking a few sheets of paper and fastening them together. Decorate your cover page just as attractively as you can. Put the title on it, "A Wonderful Mother." Inside write the story of Hannah's prayer. Then draw a picture, and color it, of the little coat she made Samuel each year.

Now look in the Bible dictionary and learn all you can about the tabernacle. Copy some of the simpler pictures of it. Next draw a map showing Lake Galilee, the Jordan, and the Dead Sea with Shiloh northwest of it. Copy your map several times on scrap paper until you can draw it without looking at the map in your Bible. Don't be afraid of making mistakes, because you know we learn by trying over and over.

Now find a picture of a mother with a child kneeling by her side, or paste the picture you receive at Sunday school. Then write the words, "Dear God, I thank you for my Christian mother."

Last copy these lines:

"Our Father, we thank Thee for Mother,
No treasure on earth can compare
With her guidance and care,
Her love and her prayer;
Our Father, we thank Thee for Mother.

"May we by our words and our actions,
Give proof that we love her in truth;
And all of our lives may we follow
The way she has taught us in youth."

On July 20, I was very happy to receive the first Bible scrapbook for the Exhibit. And whose do you think it was? Jack Parsley's, grandson of Sr. Addington, from far-off Texas! He is a little boy of five, and his mother did the writing while he drew the pictures and colored some of them. He has two or three pages that are especially good—"Jesus, the Great Healer," and "Two Kinds of Gardens"; also, "Jesus Stilling the Waves," and "Feeding the Five Thousand." The boats and the baskets in the last two are very good. There is also a little drawing of a boy with a Bible in his hand that I like very much, Jack. I think it must be a picture of yourself. Did you look in a mirror while you drew it? All of the folks at Conference will enjoy looking at the work you did from January to June; and I hope, Jack, that you enjoyed doing it just that much, too.

Another new member for our club this week—Margaret Pearson of Troy, Ohio. She is just 6, and her scrapbook will be here for the Exhibit. I wish all our thirty-eight members were here with their scrapbooks. Don't you?

HANNAH

1 Samuel 1 and 2

Devotional Reading: Psalm 128

GOLDEN TEXT

A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.—Proverbs 31:30.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Hannah: A Devout Mother.

Aim: To teach children to appreciate the devotion of their mothers and to believe that God hears and answers prayer.

Basic Truth: "Her children arise up, and call her blessed."—Proverbs 31:28.

I. Hannah's Faith Tested. (Vv. 1-10.) To be as effectual and sustaining as it should be, faith must be known to be strong enough to stand firm and unyielding under the most severe circumstances. Such a knowledge of the dependability of faith can be attained only through hard experience, "that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 1:7. Severe were the trials through which Hannah passed before her faith was rewarded, yet she never lost confidence in God.

II. Hannah's Faith Shown. (Vv. 11-18.) Year after year Hannah bore the taunts of her husband's more fortunate wife and continued to pray for the thing she desired above all else. True faith never gives up. It knows that confidence in God is never misplaced. "If thou wilt," (v. 11), was as much a part of her prayer as was her expression of desire. The vow she made indicated that her prayer was not wholly selfish, but that it was an expression of deep spiritual longing. Prayer to be effectual must take God's will and work into consideration as well as human desire.

III. Hannah's Faith Rewarded. (V. 19 to chap. 2:2.) Hannah was finally brought to the attention of Eli by her constant praying. The high priest, having learned the true meaning of her strange actions, assured her that God would grant the boon for which she asked. When the joyful event took place, Hannah looked upon her son as a blessing too great to keep for herself alone, she must give him to God from whence he had come. We, too, should remember "the giver of every good and perfect gift" when special blessings reach us in answer to our prayers, and return to Him in one form or another some of the riches He has granted. Such an act not only shows our appreciation, but it creates an uplifting sense of cooperation with God.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A Good Vow: Hannah in offering her prayers to God made a vow. It was a good vow and had no touch of selfishness in it. It was a vow that if her prayer were answered and she were given a son she would consecrate that son to the Lord and would lend him to the Lord. It is a common thing for people to make vows. And in the main it would be much better had they never been made. For the majority of them are never considered sacred and fulfillment made. "Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay."—Ecl. 5:5. Hannah kept her vow. She realized her son was an answer to prayer, that he was a gift from God and properly belonged to God; therefore, she "lent him to the Lord." This was not only her duty toward God, but it certainly was her responsibility toward the child.

A Bounden Duty: It is the duty of every mother, a responsibility that she shoulders, that she present her children to the Lord. Mothers owe this action to their children. It gives them a real start in life. Motherhood is a great blessing. It is God's way of filling the earth with His image-bearers. Mother will be held accountable for her stewardship in this matter.

True Mothers of Great Price: A true mother, that is, one that is God-fearing and rears her children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, is and will be greatly praised. Her children will rise up and call her blessed, and the blessing of God will rest upon her. Her price is far above rubies. Prov. 31:10. It is mothers that are keepers of home and whose adornings are to be found in the hidden man of the heart that are in the sight of God of great price. 1 Pet. 3:1-5. Such shall fulfill their true mission and give life to a people that shall glorify their Creator. Rev. 4:11. To this group Hannah belonged.—C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT Devout Mothers

In almost every instance God has not chosen to bring the greatest blessing by the first, but by the second. Thus the human family is benefited more by the second Adam (Christ, 1 Cor. 15:45) than by the first. Israel was delivered by Moses and not by his older brother Aaron. God chose Isaac and not Ishmael; Jacob and not Esau. So, too, it seems that God selected, not man, His first created person, but woman, His second, through whom to give the greatest blessing to mankind. That woman he called "mother."

To man God gave the command to "replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." To accomplish this it is necessary for man to wield great power and to direct great forces. Man must be equipped morally and spiritually for this great task if lasting benefits are to be enjoyed. The moral and spiritual development of the man has been left to mother. Mankind is benefited by the wielding of this great power only in proportion to mother's loyalty to her task.

Hannah is a good example of a devout mother. Her work was well done, and Israel profited. The mother of Moses did her task so effectively that her son chose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ (Moses believed that the Messiah would come) greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward."—Heb. 11:25, 26. God gave Moses a great task and entrusted him with great power, all because one mother had been true to the task assigned to her.—H. A. S.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."—Proverbs 31:30.

The last few verses of this chapter are a description of a virtuous woman. As Ruth was the only one called virtuous in the Old Testament, it is thought by some that it is a description of her. It seems to me that it also fits Hannah, for she feared the Lord and trusted Him, as otherwise she would not have poured out her heart to God in petition for a son. Her prayer was answered, and she fulfilled her promise in lending him to the Lord. This, too, showed her love and reverence, which is godly fear, to the Lord.

Today our love and reverence should be shown to the Father as was Hannah's of old. We, as mothers, should train our children in such a way that they will honor us, that we may receive the praise due those who fear and reverence the Father.—L. A. R.

PRIMARY

Topic: Hannah's Prayer Is Answered.

A long, long time ago there lived a woman named Hannah. Hannah had no little boys or girls of her very own, and, oh! how she did want a little baby boy!

One day when Hannah and her husband had gone to the temple to worship Hannah wanted a baby boy so badly that she sat down and cried. When Hannah prayed to God there at the temple she said, "O Lord God, if you will just let me have a baby boy I will give him to you. He will work for you all his life."

Do you think Hannah's prayer was answered? Oh, yes! And now I can just hear your next question, "Did Hannah give him to the Lord?" Yes, she did.

When he was yet very, very small she took him to the temple. There he lived with Eli the priest and learned to do the work in the temple. Each year Hannah went to see Samuel, for this was the name of her little baby boy. She took him a new coat each time. We will learn more about Samuel next Sunday.

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

General and Illinois Conference and Bible School at Oregon, August 1 to 13
 Eastern Nebraska Conference at Florence August 6 to 13
 Western Nebraska State Conference, at Holbrook, August 20 to 27
 Iowa Conference at Waterloo August 22 to 27
 Virginia Bible School and Conference at Maurertown, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3

YOU ARE WELCOME

The officers of the local Oregon church, the Illinois State Conference, and the General Conference bid you in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ a hearty welcome to the annual gathering of God's people. May your stay be profitable to you in every way. We wish you to feel wholly at home among us and to exercise every privilege that naturally accompanies such an attitude of mind.

We are looking forward to meeting many whom we have seen here in the past and to grasping the hands of many more who have not before been present. May God's richest blessing attend you in every experience, both while on your journey here and on your return trip, and during your stay with us.

You will, we feel sure, bring to the gathering a message from God, some spiritual blessing to impart to us; and we hope that we may be able to do something for you of like nature in return.

GENERAL CONFERENCE BUSINESS MEETINGS

The annual business meeting of the General Conference of the Church of God will convene for its first session on Tuesday, August 8, 1933, at 3 p. m., and continue each afternoon at the same hour over the succeeding three days.

Be sure your delegates are provided with a list of the names and addresses of the members of the conferences and churches they represent.

G. Eldred Marsh, Secretary.

ILLINOIS STATE CONFERENCE Annual Business Meeting

The annual business meeting of the Illinois State Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus will be held in the church at Oregon, Illinois, on Friday afternoon, August 11, 1933, beginning at three o'clock. May we have a good representation from all churches.

Paul C. Johnson, President.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE

The annual meeting of the Conference of the Church of God in Michigan convened at Grand Rapids, July 9, and continued over July 22. This was an unusual conference in that notwithstanding the abnormal conditions of the times it ran for two weeks instead of the usual time. This was made possible in that it was conducted in connection with the annual Bible school of the church at Grand Rapids. Bro. Austin, the outside speaker, and Bro. Siple of the Grand Rapids church outdid themselves in presenting the gospel message, especially as it relates to us today; and eager throngs daily listened to their discourses. Some indication of the intense interest manifested may be had from the expression of an outsider that "the only defect in their sermons was that they were not long enough." At the conclusion of the meetings, eight people, ranging in ages from those in their early teens to those whose hair time had turned to silver, went down in the watery grave to come forth new creatures in Christ.

Another happy incident, vital to the cause, was the ordination of Bro. Owen Barney in the ministry. For some time Bro. Barney has been conducting services at Dutton and has succeeded in effecting a wonderful rejuvenation at that place, and we predict that this addition to the ministry is going to be a healthy asset to the cause in Michigan.

It was regrettable that many of the brethren from outstate were prevented from being present because of infirmity and the press of economic conditions which weigh heavily upon us, but we are looking forward to that greater conference where the sordid things of today cannot interfere.

L. Bridegam, Sec.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Our church is rejoicing now in the added strength and encouragement furnished by the entrance of eight new members. Sunday afternoon, July 23, we went to the waters and the following took upon themselves the name of their Lord: Mrs. Jerry Keyes, Allen Road, S. E.; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Keyes, and their two daughters, Shirley and Arlene, Keyes Avenue, S. E.; Mrs. John Barrows, John St., S. W.; Marcella Conrad, Keyes Avenue, S. E.; Mary Ellen Bridegam, 101 Hall St., S. W.

The four adults in the above group have been attending faithfully, studying and meditating on this move for some months, and the four young people are the product of church, Sunday school and Berean activity. We thank God for these new members, and pray that we may be able to grow and develop together into true followers of our Lord.

The regular schedule of meetings for each week will be maintained through August except Sunday night services. These will begin Sept. 3.

Sr. Ada Simpson of our Grand Rapids church is helping as a teacher in the two weeks of Daily Vacation Bible School now being conducted at our church in Blanchard.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

ILLINOIS BEREAN CONFERENCE

The annual conference of the Berean Society of the State of Illinois will convene at Oregon, Illinois, on Friday August 11, 1933, at 3:00 p. m. It is hoped that every Illinois Berean present at the General Conference will attend this business session, at which a new board will be selected for the coming year. An invitation to attend is also extended to everyone who is interested in Berean activities. Something must be done to better the work in Illinois, so give us the benefit of your ideas.

ATTENTION, PARENTS AND TEACHERS

Pictures that will add greatly to your child's or your pupil's Bible scrapbook and booklets may be obtained from the National Bible Institution for the small sum of four cents for a complete set covering a full quarter's lessons. Order a set today and watch the enjoyment that comes to your boys and girls as they prepare their lessons from the Children's Page.

OREGON AND WASHINGTON

Bro. Maurice Kerr and Miss Irene Crowhurst, both of Corvallis, Oregon, were married June 5 at Portland, Oregon. Bro. Kerr, who is the son of Sr. Minnie Kerr, was graduated from Oregon State College last month and now holds the position of State Dairy Inspector. The couple will make their home in Corvallis.

Bro. H. B. Hathaway has returned to Corvallis after spending several weeks at Felida, Wash. The new eight room house which Bro. Hathaway is building on Kiger Island to replace the old family residence which burned this spring is nearing completion.

Gladys Barber has returned from Newport, on the coast, where she spent a week visiting Bro. and Sr. Horace Prosser.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Tremaine of Rt. 1, Corvallis, are rejoicing over the arrival of a nine pound baby boy, who was born July 21. He has been named Robert Henry. Sr. Tremaine was formerly Lulu Taylor, daughter of Sr. Flora Hogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal Gross, nee Sr. Evelyn Kerr, have come to Corvallis, Ore., to make this city their home, following a brief wedding trip. Sr. Kerr and Mr. Gross were married Saturday in a little chapel at Stevenson, Wash., with just a few relatives in attendance. Following the simple service they returned to Portland and were in that vicinity for a brief time before coming on to Corvallis. Both are graduates of Corvallis High School and are former Oregon State College students. Sr. Kerr is the daughter of Sr. Minnie Kerr and Mr. Kerr, while Mr. Gross is the youngest son of Mrs. Millie Gross.

TO SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The pastor of the Los Angeles church, to the people of Southern California, Greetings! We have been doing a great deal of traveling during the month of July without mishap, for which we give thanks to God. We have been enjoying meeting many of those of like precious faith throughout the states of Indiana, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, and now in Illinois. We had the pleasure of taking part in most of the Indiana Conference, of visiting for two days the conference and Bible school in Michigan, and are now resting up in preparation for work in the Illinois Bible School. Besides, we visited with Bro. Lyon in Cleveland, Ohio, and had the pleasure of seeing the church buildings there, though we were disappointed in being unable to attend services in that city.

To mention the various people whom we have met would be out of the question, and to mention some few without the rest would be favoritism; and so we make mention of only those who would be of general interest to the people of Southern California. We feel that many would be interested to know of dear old Sr. Maxey who lives in the vicinity of Burr Oak, Indiana. She is one of those people who have grown old in the service and are not in as affluent circumstances as formerly, in fact, she is in rather pitiable condition. She asks that the brotherhood remember her in their prayers. Though paralyzed on her left side and incapacitated in general, she still remains faithful to the Lord and Savior and longs for the time of His coming.

At the end of the Illinois Bible School we expect to travel westward to Holbrook, Nebraska, where we will take part in the Bible school and conference there which convenes from August 19 to 27.

Norman John MacLeod.

NORTHWESTERN CONFERENCE

The annual Northwestern Conference of Oregon and Washington was held June 15-18, 1933, at Felida, Wash. The meeting was opened by Bro. A. W. Darby, of Gresham, Ore., who conducted a Bible study on the rich man and Lazarus. This was a very interesting study and was requested. At the afternoon meeting Bro. Darby gave another Bible lesson on meat in due season. "The Great Untils" was the title given a sermon delivered by Bro. J. C. Wilson of Lebanon, Ore. Some of the texts used were Ezekiel 21:25-27; Luke 21:24; and Acts 3:19-21.

On Saturday morning a Bible study on the resurrection was led by Bro. Darby, followed by a sermon by Bro. Wilson on "The Baptism of Jesus." Sr. Lottie E. Young of Seattle, Wash., conducted a very interesting study on hope. The business meeting followed. The evening message was given by Bro. Darby, the subject being, "God's Promises to Abraham."

Sunday was a day full of spiritual food. The morning lecture on "Baptism," preceded by a song service, was ably delivered by Bro. Darby. At noon a basket dinner served in the church basement was greatly enjoyed by all. The afternoon hours were spent listening to Sr. Lottie Young's interesting account of her trip through Palestine. Reports received late were submitted at an evening business meeting. Bro. Wilson delivered the closing sermon, "The Signs of the Times." There were about forty present, and this prophetic sermon was something entirely new to the outsiders who were present.

Letters were read from B. N. Bury, Mabton, Wash.; Anna Willey Carter (a gold star mother who is in France) Portland, Ore.; and Gladys Barber, secretary, Corvallis, Ore. Visitors were Sr. Minnie Rogers, Eugene; Sr. Flora Hogue, Corvallis; Bro. J. C. Wilson, Lebanon; Bro. Darby, Gresham; Sr. Debora Knapp, Comas; Sr. Luella Caples, Vancouver; Srs. Lottie E. Young and Amy L. Young of Seattle; Srs. Edna Aithand and Verna Weatherwax, Aberdeen; and R. E. Nugent.

A resolution was passed that we extend to Sr. Flora Hogue, Bro. and Sr. Delbert Hathaway, Sr. Conway, Sr. Mabel Buck and family, Bro. L. G. Jaeger, Srs. Wilbur Tremaine and Lela Taylor our sincere sympathy for the loss of their loved ones during the past year.

The attendance was good, and a wonderful spirit of brotherly love prevailed. Some of the audience felt that they had been transported to the new kingdom age, so great was the enthusiasm of the ministers for their work.

May God continue to bless us and keep us steadfast unto the soon coming of our Lord and Redeemer.

(Note: Report written from notes submitted by Srs. Rogers and Weatherwax.)

A NEW BULLETIN IDEA FOR PASTORS

The Layman Company is now putting out its Tithing pamphlets in four-page Bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank, for local material. The cost will give a saving of at least $5 per week to any pastor who uses four-page bulletins in his Sunday services. A good opportunity for five or ten weeks of tithe education without expense or special distribution. Thirty-two subjects to choose from. Sample set, 15 cents. Prices 40 cents per 100; $3.00 per 1000.

Please give your denomination, also please mention The Restitution Herald.

AN INTERESTING NEWS ITEM

The following appeared in a recent issue of "The Austinite," a paper published in the section of Chicago where our former secretary and manager now makes his home. We are sure that the audience in this great church was as well pleased with Bro. Austin's sermons as we have ever been in the past.

"Rev. F. L. Austin, founder of 'Back to the Bible' evangelism and Bible conference speaker, will preach at both services Sunday in Judson Baptist Church, Austin Blvd. and Berkshire. His subjects will be: at 11, 'The City of God'; 7:45, 'The Suffering and Glory of Jesus Christ.'"

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Among the early arrivals for General Conference were Pastor C. E. Lapp and wife of Ripley, Ill. They were accompanied by Margaret and Gerald Cooper of the same place.

Sr. Marguerite Zechiel of Indiana returned to Oregon for the conference with Bro. and Sr. Frederick Claussen.

The last midweek service of the Oregon local church was made a consecration service that all might be prepared to put the most into the forthcoming conference and get the most out of it through a deepening of spiritual experience.

Norman J. MacLeod, pastor of the church at Los Angeles, Calif., with his wife and family, together with Bro. and Sr. E. C. Railsback, arrived in Oregon Sunday morning in time to attend services. Bro. MacLeod will be instructor in the Bible school, teaching a class in fulfilled prophecy.

Among the visitors on a recent evening at the Oregon prayer meeting were two young ladies from out of the city, who telephoned around to find a prayer meeting on their arrival here. Ours was the only church in town holding such a service. This would not be the case if people realized the value of prayer.

"The paper is getting better and more helpful to me all the time," writes Mrs. Jessie L. Groves as she renews her subscription to The Restitution Herald. Pray for us, Sr. Groves, that the paper may continue to honor the Master's name until He comes.

The quarterly Northwestern Conference will be held September 1 to 3 at Corvallis, Ore. Meetings will begin promptly at ten o'clock, Friday morning.

Do not forget at the last minute to include in your baggage something for the Exhibit. The display this year will be much larger than it was a year ago. Several of the largest publishing houses in the country are furnishing complete sample lines of their Sunday school and church supplies. A display has reached us from the Church of God (Seventh Day) Publishing House of Stanberry, Mo., which will be of special interest.

In a personal letter to Bro. Glenn M. Birkey Mr. C. B. McQueen, superintendent of Chicago Union Mission, which is located in the heart of that city, says, "The summer months are the hardest for rescue mission work, and it is still worse this summer on account of the return of 3.2 beer. Intoxication has increased at least 200 per cent in this locality. From the Mission door you can count nine places which have opened recently."

A recent issue of one of our exchanges which we consider to be one of the best that reaches our desk contained three articles selected from the columns of The Restitution Herald. One was "The Reasons Why," (a tract issued by us); another, "Minor Chords in Life," by Charles W. Howe; and the third, "Why We Are Thankful," by James A. Patrick. We, in turn, have copied extensively from this excellent paper, "The Bible Advocate," published by the Church of God (Seventh Day), at Stanberry, Missouri.

TEXAS AROUSED TO DANGER

IT is said that "to be forewarned is to be forearmed," but this is not always true. If a dangerous condition is to be corrected, we must not only be made aware of the nature of the menace that threatens, but we must know the proper means to employ to prevent its development. The authorities of Texas evidently realize that a decline of spirituality is the cause of the present "crime wave" that is sweeping the country, but they fail to understand that something more than secular education is required to change the situation. Not even the church can bring about the complete moral regeneration of the nations. The coming of the Son of God and the establishment of His kingdom throughout the earth alone will bring the relief from sin so much desired by every thoughtful citizen of America.

We publish the following resolution passed by the legislature of Texas without quotation marks:

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Texas has been called in extraordinary session by the Governor for consideration of actions necessary to the conservation of the resources of the State of Texas; and

WHEREAS, the most important of all concerns, even above material values, is the life of the people itself; and

WHEREAS, the unprecedented wave of crime sweeping over America, crowding our jails and penitentiaries and increasing the prison population of our State of Texas to more than five thousand prisoners, fifty per cent of them under twenty-five years of age, which is an alarming degree of delinquency, and the increase of divorces, in our state, by one tenth of the total national number of divorces, which, together, are signs of disintegration of family life; and

WHEREAS, in the opinion of sociologists, this alarming condition is due to the emphasis which in recent years has been placed upon material values and the small concern paid to spiritual values in home, school, and society, and

WHEREAS, the multiplicity of bills offered in other legislatures is proof of the concern felt, as well as the difficulty of enacting into laws provisions for producing the ends sought; and

WHEREAS, Washington stated in his farewell address, "No nation can exist without religion," for the strength and efficiency of any republic, a government by the people, depends upon the best development of those people, and which experience—the history of our nation—has demonstrated that the strength of our republic has been in the character of its citizens according to the moral character and intelligence of its people; and

WHEREAS, it uniformly is conceded that the remedy for prevailing conditions must be effected through the inculcation of morality, spirituality, and conscience in the young by parents, pastors, and teachers; and

WHEREAS, statesmanship must concern itself for the perpetuation of the state by building a future citizenship in the strength of morality;

THEREFORE, be it resolved by the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring, that the people of the State of Texas be enjoined to address themselves to renewed efforts to rebuild the idea and ideals of the family, to overcome the tendency of the present juvenile delinquency so prevalent and militating against the future security of the state, restoring the balance between the spiritual and the material by the precept and example of parents, that their children may be reared in inculcation of the principles of fundamental righteousness;

That parents be adjured to exert every effort to restore the old-time influence of the home for the development of conscience and morality, that family worship be restored, and that in self-sacrificing love the little ones be trained in the virtues of truthfulness, honesty and respect for the rights of others;

That the churches and Sabbath schools be urged and constrained to intensify their spiritual efforts to extend it to every child within their respective spheres of influence and responsibility;

That the schools promptly reform their methods so that the rudimentary studies, as well as the sciences, be taught only as subordinate to righteousness, that the emphasis be placed upon morality, good conscience, respect for parents, reverence for age and experience, and the subordination to authority, and that all learning is but the hand-maiden of eternal goodness;

That it is the suggestion of the Legislature of the State of Texas that only upon the lines herein suggested for the re-trenching of the ideals of family life can the true balances be restored, social confusion be corrected, the appalling crime wave checked, and the future of the state be assured by the conservation of the citizenship represented in our youth, and civilization itself be preserved.

TIME TO WORK

PEOPLE of the world make great sacrifices to attend conventions and rallies of political, fraternal, and social organizations; and with this we have no fault to find or criticism to make. But we do believe that Christian people should be more willing to sacrifice for their faith and labor to make it a going and successful venture than these worldly people do for their organizations. Christianity that does not inspire the holder to sacrifice is an inferior kind and quality.

Time to work is short. The workers are few. The message is very imperative. It requires under these conditions the undivided loyalty and unfaltering support of every one whose heart is centered in and on the cause of Christ. This is no time to flirt with time. Of all periods of time this time is the most important for faithful stewardship. As the days of work become less, less time should be used on the unnecessary and on the lustful pastimes, and time redeemed for carrying on the gospel work. Lay aside your work that can possibly be laid aside and join your strength with other workers during the special conference efforts. Spending time with the Lord in His work is most profitable. —Church of God Messenger.

JESUS IS COMING

By Mary A. Gesin

GATHERED together from near and far at Oregon, Illinois, are the ministers, leaders, teachers, young people and older ones, brothers and sisters from our several churches. Daily we are being nourished with that spiritual food which sustains the inner man, of whom the great Apostle writes so revealingly in his epistle to the Ephesians, chapter three, verses sixteen to nineteen. One is absent—our Elder Brother—One who is dearer than all others.

To us as a people no truth is more precious, however, than that this same Jesus will return from the right hand of His Father to the scenes of His ministry among men, to this very earth again. Two men in white apparel, messengers from the throne of God, announced this fact at the moment of Christ's departure. And that truth has been the stimulus to His followers throughout the years of His absence, even to the present day.

We read, in John 20:10, that after the disciples had found the empty tomb on that day of amazement and doubt so long ago, they "went again unto their own home." Not perceiving the truth their Master "must rise again from the dead," they rested from their labors. Discouraged and disillusioned, they concluded that the cause for which they had witnessed their Captain give His life blood in awful agony was lost. The Hope of the world—their Messiah—dead, even His body missing!

But on that very day they met Him, alive, vibrant with immortality, tangible, in that upper room which had become dear to them all through association with Him. He showed them His hands and feet, to dispel all doubt in their hearts and to establish the truth in their minds that theirs was a living Christ. "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord"—simple words, but pulsing with emotion that filled them with peace and confidence!

Forty days later, days spent in "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God," days of preparation for His absence, days in which final instruction was given His followers, the Master left them. Theirs it was to carry forward this message of the kingdom and to witness for Him "in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." They were not left, however, without the promise of power and wisdom with which to spread this glad news.

Not returning to their labor of fishing, nor in their homes, but continuing "with one accord in prayer and supplication," they remained in that upper room until the promise was fulfilled. No longer discouraged and disillusioned do we find them, but filled with power from God, confident, instructed, prepared for their task.

Our Master still is absent; He has not yet fulfilled the promise of the messengers in white apparel. But His delay does not weaken our faith in their assurance of His return; it does not cause us to question God's veracity when He told us He would come again. That fact is as dear to us today as it was to His disciples of nineteen hundred years ago. In truth, it is the impelling power of our service.

Equally, the promise of power and wisdom to carry forward the message of the kingdom of God comes down to us today. Were not almost His last words, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world"? Would He forsake one who would carry on His work in this year of nineteen hundred thirty-three, any more than He would Peter or James or John on that day so long ago when He instructed them to "teach all nations"?

From here and there a few of us have gathered to receive that wisdom and strength to impart the glad news of the coming King which James assures us we have a right to ask of God. Through communion with Him in prayer and study of the message He has left us in His Book, we are enabled to fit ourselves better for the task. Grateful indeed are we who are permitted thus to share in the benefits to be derived under the instruction and the guidance of our best thinkers and workers.

If indeed, as Jesus assured His disciples, (and we have not the slightest reason to doubt) all power was given unto Him in heaven and in earth, and He has promised to be with us even unto the end, can we fail with such a Leader? Dare we drop the task until He returns? We must carry forward the glad news to dying humanity until that glad day when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

The Editor's Prayer

MOST gracious God, with thankfulness we come into Thy presence in this our service of the printed page. We realize that as our lives and our talents are wholly dedicated unto Thee that whatever we write should be written as unto the Lord as an act of worship. Thus each issue of THE RESTITUTION HERALD becomes a holy service unto Thee. Accept, we pray Thee, these weak and faulty efforts of ours and bless them to Thine own honor and glory through Christ Jesus. Bless those also who read the words contained in each succeeding issue of this paper that they may be drawn closer unto Thee and incited to greater zeal, to deeper spiritual conviction, and to a fuller realization of Thy grace. To this end we rededicate our paper unto Thee. Amen.

Christian Fellowship

NEAR the close of the first week of what promises to be the greatest General Conference the Church of God has ever held, our minds naturally turn to thoughts of fellowship in the Lord Jesus Christ. Already brethren from thirteen states and one Canadian province are here to clasp each other's hands in greeting, to lift united hearts in prayer, and to strengthen each other's faith in God, in Christ, and in the Bible which we love.

As we look into the faces of those whose homes are on the Pacific coast or who reside on the Gulf of Mexico or who live near the Atlantic or in our great sister nation, Canada, we are impressed with the fact that from whatever place they come they all are brethren—brothers and sisters of a common family who love, and who possess the love, of a common Father.

As we type these words, the commodious Oregon church is filled almost to overflowing with a great audience that is listening with thoughtful attention to Pastor M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, as he presents for consideration the inspiring truths of God.

What a wonderful and blessed experience it all is! How we wish that every reader of THE RESTITUTION HERALD might be here with us to enjoy the fellowship that we feel as we look into this sea of earnest faces that appears before the speaker's desk. Over yonder is a brother from Ontario, and here one from Virginia; on the other side is a sister from Nebraska seated by one from Minnesota. And so it goes throughout the congregation.

What is the power that has drawn this great company of believers together from all parts of this wide land? What common motive has prompted them to leave their homes and come so far to be together here? Surely it was no sordid matter of material business that has carried them across the intervening miles to a converging point in northern Illinois! It is a force that is deeper, fuller, more irresistible than any other motivating influence in the world.

It is the power of love—divine love—that has drawn these people from their homes!

First, it is their love for God and for His truth that has brought them here. These are Bible-searching folk! In their distant homes they heard the glorious message of a coming Savior! Of a promised kingdom of peace and endless prosperity to be established upon this earth! Of an age of deathlessness and supernal joy to be ushered in by Jesus Christ! They believed the glad tidings which they heard. They repented of their sins. They were baptized into the saving name of the Son of God. All this they did that they might have a part in the wonderful things revealed in the gospel.

A second thing that has drawn them together here is the love they feel for each other. As they came to see in the promises of God a reflection and an assurance of divine love, they found their hearts glowing with tender affection one for another. They wanted to know each other better, to exchange their ever-increasing knowledge of the Father's goodness with others who also were growing in grace. They wished to hear others confess the blessed hope they also held.

Thus a common love and a common faith have brought us here to this great gathering, and God is pouring out upon us a blessing such as we have never known before. He is filling us with a desire to be ready when the Master's call for the conference of the ages will go forth. As we listen to the stirring words of those men and women who have consecrated their lives to God's service, our hearts go out to them in love. We are filled with joy at the prospect set before us that soon we shall be called together once again to part no more, for the dear Lord is coming, and with His coming we shall know a deeper, fuller, richer fellowship than we have ever known before!

The Times and Seasons

THOSE there are who are almost determined to assume an indifferent attitude toward the proximity of our Lord's second advent under the guise: "We are too busy preaching salvation to spend any time speculating about 'the times and the seasons.'" "

Little may these good (but mistaken) folk realize that such an attitude always grows into an attitude of belligerency toward the glorious advent if we do not check it.

Their great bulwark is Acts 1:7. It serves, in their estimation, to close the mouths of all agitators touching the signs of our Lord's second coming and the nearness of it. The words of Jesus are: "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons." Behind these words they hide!

Now what does Jesus mean? Does He mean that the church cannot (should not) know anything about "the times and seasons" of His second advent? Let us see.

He answers the disciples' question: "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"—Acts 1:6.

His answer implies to them (not to us) that such a restoration—if such there be—is not for them, "at this time" (at that time, the time the question was put) to know; but they (not we) shall receive power and be witnesses "in Jerusalem, and in all Judea."

The question put by them, not by us, is replied to by our Lord; and the reply is addressed to them and not to us.

They asked Him nothing here touching His second advent; at least, not directly. When they did ask Him in Matthew 24, Luke 21, and Mark 13 about the time of His second coming, He never used these words: "It is not for you to know the times and seasons of My coming back." He rather willingly advised them just what would come to pass before His return; and He also told them about when His waiting church might look for Him. Now our Lord will not contradict this in Acts 1:7, just because He has been raised from the dead!

He said a great deal in Luke 21, Mark 13, and Matthew 24 about "the signs" and other things relating to His second advent. How can we ever treat His words with indifference or varnished contempt?

Let Acts 1:7 apply where it may and mean all it does mean and can mean; but it is perverting the Scriptures and twisting our Lord's words and misreading the connection entirely and misapplying the context to say He meant in Acts 1:7 that we should not study about the times and seasons of His glorious advent. He cannot contradict Himself, and He said in His great Olivet discourse that "when" certain things had taken place His coming would be near, even at the doors; and that the watchers could—and should—"know" it.

We are indebted to the editor of "Messiah's Advocate," the journal of the Advent Christian Church published at Oakland, California, for the following rousing appeal to seek out the "old paths," the paths of truth that alone give any adventist body the right to exist as a separate people. The warning voiced by J. J. Schaumburg is as applicable to the Church of God as it is to the church the "Advocate" ably represents.

If the watchers cannot "know" when these events come, it reflects on our Lord's wisdom as a teacher and prophet and on their knowledge as watchers, to see the prophetic word of our Lord come to pass.

We may say: "I prefer to be busy, and care little about the time." Such a course of reasoning at once betrays great ignorance of dispensational truths. Could Noah only have said: "The time, Lord, of this flood is a thing I'm not interested in; therefore, I'll preach instead of building an ark"; or, could Jonah only have said: "Nineveh will be overthrown; but as to when, I do not know, nor does anyone, and why should that worry us?" Both these men could have been busy enough, and been much more popular. The modern church is busy, but, what doing?

The last part of Matthew 24 tells us that there was a lazy "servant" (slothful). He was busy, too. But his laziness and his wickedness are joined by our Lord. And no one dares separate what He joined!

Now, was this servant lazy because he was inactive? No! He was active enough saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming." Did Jesus condemn him and give him his portion "with the hypocrites" because he was inactive? No! But, because he was inactive about giving "meat (food) in due season," when the season was "due."

Is it true that adventists are losing out because they are preaching the imminent return of Jesus? No! A thousand times, no! Their losing out is due to the fact that they let down on the very things our fathers made most prominent; and when we did that, and where we did that, we multiplied fast. This is a manner of history among us.

We may turn up our noses at the horns and hoofs of Daniel and the Apocalypse, but that will not help us to grow. The chart made us. Where that is used, we are at least holding our own. Where it is shelved and we are becoming "like others," there we are losing out.

Nothing is gained by us to quote Acts 1:7 to sustain our ignorance as to where we are on the stream of time. We need not be ignorant. We may "know." And if we would call on God to awaken our interest in this matter and kill our laziness in regard to these things, we would yet get hearers. But if our message is just what any ordinary church may preach and does preach, there is no reason for our distinct existence as a people at all. None at all! To perpetuate an organization for the sake of hero worship or mere sentiment is a poor reason for any existence! Let us be done with that, and declare ourselves as a people with a message to warn the world of fast-approaching judgment and to comfort waiting hearts in this great time of world trouble. If we will do that, the Lord will bless us for it.

"The Glory Is Departed From Israel"

By Norman John MacLeod

"And she named the child Ichabod, saying, The glory is departed from Israel: because the ark of God was taken."—1 Samuel 4:21. "And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom."—Matt. 27:51.

THE scene is one of consternation in the camp of Israel. Defeat has come, has come unexpectedly to the self-confident Israelites. How will they right the situation? God has forsaken their cause. Some one has a happy thought: let us get the ark of God—it will help us! But presumptuous Israel suffers defeat again with great slaughter. But worse yet, the ark of God that was intended to bring victory has been captured! "The glory is departed from Israel," for the ark of God is taken.

Many centuries have elapsed. Jerusalem has undergone many experiences since the days of Ichabod. And now again a dark page is added to the bloody history of Israel. The Savior, the King of Israel, hangs on the cruel cross at the instigation of the leaders of the "Chosen People." The priests are about to perform their duties in the Holy Place. The earth rocks, the day becomes night, and the veil which separates the Holy of Holies from the outer chamber is torn in two from top to bottom. "The glory is departed from Israel."

To him who had studied the prophecies of the great men of Israel from Deuteronomy to Malachi and had heard the discourses of the Savior, the disappearance of the glory of God from Israel was not strange. The predictions of centuries before were being fulfilled. History is prophecy written afterward to prove the truth of the prophecy. These two are inseparable. For centuries Israel has been in a sad plight. The Jew has been beaten about by all the nations of the world, has been persecuted, slain, tormented, and despised. But now new times are on foot. We are rapidly approaching the time near the end of the period of the absence of the glory of God from Israel. We see new symptoms in the world affairs which show that things are rapidly approaching a climax. The new persecution by the Hitlerites of Germany and the Fascists of Italy portends new things for Israel.

Over and over again the Jews expected that their kingdom would be restored by the long-looked-for Messiah. When would the glory return to Israel? In that attitude of mind the apostles asked Jesus just before His ascension: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" His answer left them uncertain, in the dark. But now we see the land of Israel being restored. The prophecy of Ezekiel, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him," did not refer to the people of Israel, but rather to their kingdom. They will inhabit their land for some time as they are doing now and as they did in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah and Christ, but their great power and the glory of God will not return until the proper moment.

The great horde from the north is developing: the hour of our depression is the hour of Japan's advantage. Only two places in the world is depression lacking: Japan and Palestine! Hence, Japan is coming to dominate the situation and is now driving slowly but surely westward toward the "glorious land," the "Holy Land."

The Jew is at last in his homeland again. The hour of England's need was the hour of the Jew's opportunity. Came 1914 and the World War and the disaster to the cause of Britain and her allies. And in 1915 England was on her knees. In order to beat her foes, the Germans, she must have help. She called the Italian to London and promised him that he could have the whole Dalmatian coastline, not counting on the complete disappearance of the Austrian Empire and that Jugo-Slavia would be there to counter that claim. She called the Frenchman into conference in London and loaded him with promises that could not be fulfilled. She called the wily Japanese to London and promised him dominance of the entire Far East if only he would take care of India. But as if that were not sowing enough of future trouble, she offered the Arab an independent land in the region that borders the Mediterranean on the east; and, then, finding that the Jews had certain chemicals without which she could not successfully defeat the Germans, she promised the Jews at London in several negotiations that she would grant them the identical territory when the war was over. Now comes the time for settlement.

Europe is alive with foreign statesmen assembled to make peace with the Germans in the famous halls of the Palace of Versailles. England's former friends become her enemies. But the Jew gains his homeland, with a partner to the enterprise, the Arab. Each is watching the other with anxious eye. All that is necessary to fill the situation with danger is the introduction of foreign gold to either Jew or Arab. And there are always strong governments who are willing to take advantage of the weaker in order to gain ends that will further the cause of commercialized nationalism. Things are not very bright for building up that period of peace in Palestine which the Jews desire so greatly; the future holds only further trouble for Jacob. But over beyond that time of trouble for Israel we read of other things.

Let us examine some elements in the temple of Ezekiel. As to whether that temple will really be built or not, we do not care to state. If it is to be built under the present dispensation, then there will be more trouble between the Jew and the Arab, for a mosque stands on the temple site. But, be that as it may, we see that some day the glory is to return to Israel. "Afterward he brought me to the gate, even the gate that looketh toward the east: and behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east: and his voice was like the noise of many waters: and the earth shined with his glory. . . . And the glory of the Lord came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east. . . and behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house." When shall these things be? When the Lord returns and Israel's time of trouble is over; then and only then will the glory that once departed return again to Israel.

THE HOLY SPIRIT

By George B. Alldridge

---

"But truly I am full of power by the spirit of the Lord, and of judgment, and of might, to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin."—Micah 3:8.

LAST evening at the home of my daughter we met with some friends to discuss matters of a scriptural character upon which their minds did not seem clear. One question among many others was asked the writer: "Can we now receive the Holy Spirit as those did in the days of the apostles?" Luke 11:13 was quoted: "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" The editorial in THE HERALD of June 27, under the caption, "Mocking the Holy Spirit," was brought forcibly to my mind and suggested that the question asked seems to have many inquirers who are seeking to know the truth.

The scripture quoted (Luke 11:13), you will notice by reading the first verse, was addressed to Jesus' disciples, as only they upon this occasion could address God as their heavenly Father; the rest of the chapter seems to be addressed to the Pharisees. The question of the personality of the Holy Spirit is irrelevant to this article; as it is to be presumed my readers are sufficiently advanced in scriptural knowledge to know that the Holy Spirit is spoken of as belonging to the masculine gender because the personal pronoun "he" is used speaking of the Spirit. No one considers a man faulty in his grammatical speech when he speaks of the sun as "he" or the moon as "she" or a locomotive or ship as "she." Even the Bible speaks of wisdom as "she" and as an animated thing by saying, "She hath killed her beasts; she hath mingled her wine; she hath also furnished her table."—Prov. 9:2. And in Romans 6:16 Paul, whose language is always exquisitely beautiful, wrote, "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey?" So we see sin is spoken of as being in the same gender as the Holy Spirit.

In Ephesians 4:4 we read, "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." Please read 1 Corinthians 12:1-13. Paul herein reveals some of the manifold operations of the Holy Spirit, and concludes verse eleven with, "But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

One portion of Scripture I love to read is John 4:5-26. Verse twenty-four: "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Note Jesus says, "God is a Spirit." Now get this point, also: God has spirit. When I repeat Jesus' words, "God is a Spirit," Jesus by this reveals to me the very essence of God Himself. But while I do not understand what this essence is, any more than I do what electricity, gravitation, heat, light, or like forces are, I readily understand the various manifestations revealed in the operation of these forces, however diverse they may be.

Let me illustrate what I mean. Jesus said to Nicodemus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." I am very thankful to Jesus that He always used such simple illustrations that men possessing mediocre minds like mine can discern His meaning.

Jesus knew how limited our knowledge of things spiritual would be, so He said to Nicodemus, "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?"

How beautifully water symbolizes the Spirit! The chemist, before the untutored mind, can with water apparently work miracles. So he invites me into his laboratory and points out a glass tube shaped like a U. This he inverts after filling it with water and places each opening over a terminal; he now turns on the current, and the water begins to boil. After awhile, the water is gone; and holding a lighted match, he slightly cants the glass tube, when, lo, there is an explosion!

He says, "You know, in our language, water is H<sub>2</sub>O; I have changed a liquid into a gas, its original element."

I walk along the docks. Men are using this gas to weld the structure of a mighty Atlantic liner. I notice monster cranes hoisting huge boilers into this ship: the only power the engineer uses is air and water. Passing me is a locomotive hauling a long train of cars.

I say to the engineer, "What is the secret of all this power?"

(over)

He says, "Steam, of course. That's it; look, that white vapor going out of the stack."

And then on a winter's morning I see rain, hail, ice, and snow, all composed of the same elements as water. And then the glorious vegetable and animal world can only live as they partake largely of these elements in water. Now, dear Paul, I understand you when you say, "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit."

So, if I am born of water and I have been immersed into this wonderful element capable of such a diversity of operations, in like manner to be born of the Spirit I will be immersed in an element capable of such a diversity of operations upon the spiritual plane that a fleshly being can only partially understand. As Paul says, "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth: comparing spiritual things with spiritual."

Today President Roosevelt (a mortal man) is in touch with every civilized government throughout the world. Radio, telephone, and telegraph are controlled by the same unknown element—electricity. Almost instantly he can converse with his representatives; though they are thousands of miles apart, their voices are perfectly audible to each other as though they stood side by side.

I believe that as light and heat emanate and radiate from the sun so God's Spirit emanates and radiates from His person, filling space, surrounding and enveloping our earth. So when God's prophet Hanani said to Asa the king, "For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him," he stated a scientific fact.

God has put into His Word His Spirit. Jesus said in John 14:26 that the Father would send the Comforter in Jesus' name to teach us all things. In John 16:13 Jesus tells us that this is the Spirit of truth, and in John 17:17, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." Can you have anything plainer than that? If you read carefully 1 Corinthians 2:9-16, you will see that God reveals things to us through His Word. Paul actually quotes Isaiah 64:4.

In Isaiah 66:1, 2 I find that God is seeking among men "even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word." If you do not read and obey God's Word, how can you tremble at the thought of disobeying Him or grieving His Spirit?

People say, "I do need the Bible. I am led by God's Spirit, the Holy Ghost."

Well, that sounds strange to me, that God should favor you more than He did Jesus and His apostles.

Peter says, "This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance." What does he mean by "pure mind"? Surely that cannot be the mind of the flesh, for that is carnal, sold to sin and opposed to God. Well, James will answer because he and Peter always agreed (see Acts 15:14); so James says, "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." Ah, that is where this "pure mind" came from—the Word of truth. So how natural for Peter to say,

"That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandments of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour."

Now, my friend, since Peter and the prophets are all dead, where will you find their words and commandment to stir up your "pure mind" except by the study of God's Word? And if you are praying that God will send His Holy Spirit down upon you, you had better open your Bible and begin to read Romans 10:8: "But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach."

Peter says in 1 Peter 2:5, "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices." Now, Peter, what do you mean? He answered me again right from the Scriptures: "Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded."—1 Peter 2:6.

I wonder if Paul will amplify this for me? He says, "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." This is the building for a habitation of God through the Spirit.

So, brethren, never, never absent yourselves from church, which is the pillar and ground of the truth. If you want God's Spirit, and I know you do, pray by all means; but you will get the answer to your prayer in church through the ministry of the Word. "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."—Matt. 18:20.

"THE RESTITUTION HERALD"

By R. H. Judd

Yes, "The Restitution Herald"
Is the paper you should buy.
It seeks to find the truth of things,
And to know the reason why.

It does not claim to "know it all,"
No, nor yet to know the half.
But it surely tries to winnow
Lots of good wheat from the chaff.

But best of all it tells about
The one Savior who can save,
Not only in this present life,
But in that beyond the grave.

It holds up the highest standard
By which each of us should live,
That each one may to everyone
Give the best he has to give.

Its standard is the Book of books
And its theme is Christ, the Lord.
It worships but one living God,
And it spreads His name abroad.

WHEN TO OBEY

By Arlen Marsh

TWELVE men on one of the peaks of the Mount of Olives, twelve men dressed in the costumes of the ancient Hebrews of the period of the Roman Empire. Eleven of them stood together in a group; the twelfth, standing a little aloof from the others, looked on them benignly. Before this man the eleven bowed, some performing their genuflections with a vague skepticism apparent on their faces, some with almost fanatical eagerness. Jesus the Christ and His eleven remaining apostles. "And when they saw him, they worshipped him: but some doubted."

Presently the twelfth man, the Messiah of Israel, approached the group and, with the note of positive command in His voice which had frequently in the past confounded the Pharisees and priests alike, said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

As He had taught them to pray, so now He taught them to work. With the same spirit with which they had been commanded to offer petitions to God, they were to go forth to the world, baptizing those who were in that number that comprehends the God we worship and which understands the truths laid down by Him. The method employed by that baptism was to be that suggested by the definition of the word itself, immersion in water. The form of the words used during the ceremony was immaterial; but it was absolutely necessary that the individuals receiving baptism be versed sufficiently in the Bible to live in accord with the Christ's doctrines, to be in communion with Him, to have Christianity deeply imbedded within them. Else, the rite possessed no significance for them.

The commission as recorded by Mark lends not only amplification but force to the text in Matthew: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." There is nothing equivocal in this statement; clearly, positively, it sets forth the fact that those who fail to receive baptism are condemned to death, that only through baptism can salvation be obtained for them who have lived since the founding of the Christian church. Immersion is in a single sentence made an integral part of the Christian creed, and no deviation from it is to be tolerated.

But previous to that immersion, the baptism required by the Christ, definite belief in Him and in His teachings must be held. There is no meaning in the rite for one who knows little or nothing of the causes for his baptism; the ceremony is nothing more than the equivalent of floundering about in the unhallowed water of the muddy Mississippi. It is belief and faith that give baptism its significance. And that belief must encompass not merely the fact that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God, but it must encompass the several great teachings which He delivered to men as necessary for their salvation.

At no time in the Scriptures is the rite of baptism mentioned without the implication or the definite statement that the baptized believed the gospel. Indeed, the great commission itself (that commission quoted from Mark) placed belief in a superior position to baptism; undeniably, belief in the doctrines of the Messiah must, according to His own commands, precede the act of immersion which God requires of all men who now wish to approach Him.

On the famous day of Pentecost, the day on which the apostles were given the gift of the Holy Spirit, "there were added unto them about three thousand souls." As a result of Peter's powerful sermon in Jerusalem, these three thousand received baptism; and, although it is not recorded definitely that they already possessed the essential beliefs, it is evident that they were all Jews. Because of their race, they had known the truths given them by God centuries before: they knew that man is mortal; they knew that a Messiah was to come who was to be their deliverer and that He would eventually set up an earthly kingdom of eternal peace over which God Himself would rule; they knew that God was one and not a combination; they knew that life could come only through the program evolved by Jehovah. Therefore, Peter found it unnecessary to conduct any pre-baptismal classes among them; and, consequently, the apostles were able to immerse them without delay.

The baptism of Saul may be placed in the same category. For years he had been one of the strictest and most devoted of the Pharisees; during his entire life he had been familiar with the teachings of the law and the prophets, which contained all of those things which Jesus taught to be essential to any man's salvation. He, Saul, believed in a unit God, in human mortality, in a coming Savior who would be the Son of God, in an earthly kingdom to be ruled over by God and by His Son. Certainly, it could not be said of Saul that he lacked in knowledge of the Bible, for that Book had been his lifelong study. He was, therefore, prepared for baptism; and, when converted by special call to a belief in Jesus as the divinely appointed Messiah, he was baptized forthwith by Ananias.

Luke, writing of the acts of the apostles, declares in the eighth chapter of his history of their deeds, "When they," the people, "believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip."

Belief, as in every other recorded instance in the Bible, was the prerequisite of baptism. The people believed Philip's teachings before they were baptized. Baptism would have been but an empty form, affecting them not at all. Simon, also, believed; and, after believing, he was baptized. Had he not believed that baptism was essential to his salvation, his baptism would have been nothing.

It is to be noted, also, that the people believed "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." These things were the associated doctrines: human mortality, divine Sonship of the Christ, free moral agency of men, as well as the simple teaching that the Christ was the world's Messiah and that baptism was required for salvation from death. They concerned the kingdom, they concerned the Christ; and they were, consequently, auxiliary doctrines. With belief in baptism and the establishment of the kingdom on earth, they constituted the things which the apostles and early disciples required of their converts before baptism.

No change has been made in the commission originally given to the disciples of the Christ; the church possesses no authority to change that command by one iota. It still is necessary that the one baptized believe in the essential elements of Christian faith before his baptism; it still remains true that for the one who waits until after such baptism to learn about its causes and results the ceremony is of no avail. Now, as in apostolic times, belief and baptism go hand in hand; and baptism which is efficacious still remains the result and not the precedent of belief.

"SHALL NEVER DIE"

By F. E. Siple

---

IT WAS a broken-hearted Martha that went forth with tear-stained cheeks to meet her Master and said, "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." But though torn with grief and sorrow at the death of her brother Lazarus, yet extreme faith in Jesus was hers as she added, "But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee."—John 11:22.

It is plainly evident that Jesus had emphasized the teaching of resurrection in His visits in their home and that Martha had not always been busy with household duties; for when the Master said to her, "Thy brother shall rise again," she immediately replied, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." There was no question in her mind as to what death meant. Her brother had fallen asleep in death, and she did not consider him alive in any sense, but she did confidently look forward to the resurrection day realizing that he would awaken to new life then.

This knowledge of the facts of death and resurrection which Martha had received from the lips of the Savior is the knowledge that the Bible would impart to all of us if we would quietly listen to its teachings, banishing all preconceived ideas.

The Old Testament writers have plainly stated man's nature and the fact of death as the opposite of life over and over again. In Psalm 146:4 David, in speaking of man at death, says, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." According to Psalm 6:5, in death there is not even any remembrance of God or ability to give Him thanks. In fact, as far as the condition of death is concerned, man and beast die alike and go unto one place (Eccl. 3:19, 20). Furthermore, he that has died has no knowledge of anything that takes place with friends or loved ones left behind. This latter point is especially referred to in Job 14:21, where, in speaking of a man in death, the patriarch says, "His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." This is in accordance with the thirteenth verse of the same chapter, in which he has prayed for death, for the end of his sufferings and trials, that he might be laid away in the grave till a set time and then be remembered.

It is that set time, the resurrection day, that the New Testament talks so much about, showing us that the only hope of life for man beyond death is in being awakened out of death's sleep in the morning when the new day dawns. Immortality is not possessed by man today, but is a thing to be sought by patient continuance in well-doing. To those who thus seek, it will be given (Rom. 2:7). This gift will be put on at the resurrection (1 Cor. 15:52-54). Furthermore, immortality will be conferred upon the body, not upon an invisible nonentity (Phil. 3:20, 21).

All of this Martha understood and believed. There was no question in her mind but that her brother would rise on the resurrection day, but it was the time then present that was worrying Martha. She and her sister were left alone, and they needed their brother. The Master, observing her great faith, said to her, "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" There ought to be no difficulty in understanding this language if one carefully considers the whole conversation. "Though he were dead, yet shall he live"—when? The time under consideration has been named in verse 24, "The resurrection at the last day." In similar manner consider the next statement, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die"—when? The same period of time is still the basis of the Master's language. What He has actually said, then, is that if a person believes in Him, though he die, yet he will live again in the resurrection at the last day; and if he has not died, but is living and believing in Him at the last day, then he will never die.

This is in accordance with 1 Corinthians 15:51: "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." Also, 1 Thessalonians 4:16: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air."

The fact that men do not at death pass, one by one, into reward, but that the faithful of all ages will be ushered into life together, is one of the most beautiful teachings of the Bible. When Solomon built his temple, stone cutters worked in the quarries for many years, shaping, polishing, and finishing one stone at a time, then laying it to one side as they worked on the next. When all were done, Solomon proclaimed an assembling day; and the stones were all brought and placed in position at once, regardless of the order in which they had been prepared. In like manner the different characters have all met their experiences and trials by which they have been shaped and polished, each in the period in which he lived, and then have been laid to one side to await the assembling day. "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." It was to this day Paul referred in the language quoted above in 1 Thessalonians 4, and it was to this same event Jesus referred in His words to Martha in John 11:25, 26.

There was no suggestion in the Savior's language that to believe in Him then or now would keep a person from dying. It is a recognized fact that physical, Adamic death comes just as quickly to a Christian as to a person who does not believe in Christ. Belief in the Savior is not intended to keep a person from dying the natural death of mortality, but rather to make one worthy of the better resurrection. And so the Lord explained further that those living and believing at the time of the resurrection would not pass into death, but would be changed from mortality to immortality, translated into the likeness of the Son of God Himself.

It is for us, then, to recognize Christ as the Law-Giver, the Resurrection, and the Life; to consecrate ourselves to His service; and to order our lives so that though we die yet shall we be raised, or, if still living at His coming, we shall never die.

ANCIENT BABYLON

BECAUSE of the iniquity of Babylon and the wicked revelry of her rulers God decreed her judgments. Jeremiah consequently gave a prophecy (Jer. 51) that Babylon would fall and never rise, that the great city fifteen miles square, the metropolis of the world, would become a perpetual desolation.

It was the writer's privilege to visit the place where the ancient city of Babylon once stood. It was during last July, and I found conditions exactly as God had declared through His ancient prophet. The broad walls of Babylon were not to be seen, neither was there even a trace of them left. The glory of this great empire has faded away, and excepting the work of recent excavations only the shifting desert sands remain to mark the spot. Nebuchadnezzar was the king of ancient Babylon.

The Bible records many acts of cruelty and tyranny by Nebuchadnezzar which caused the God of the Israelites to visit punishment on him. He besieged Jerusalem three times and finally destroyed the city. At the first siege he put King Jehoiakim to death. At the last siege he captured King Zedekiah, ordered his eyes put out, and had him kept in prison for the rest of his life. He also carried the Israelites into captivity.

The book of Daniel tells how Nebuchadnezzar was troubled with many dreams. On one occasion he had a dream which he could not remember afterwards and called upon his magicians, astrologers, and sorcerers to interpret it for him. As they could not do this, they faced the unpleasant prospect of being flayed alive. Then Daniel obtained the facts about the dream in a vision and was able to interpret it to the king.

After that Nebuchadnezzar committed an audacious sin when he ordered an image of himself to be set up and worshiped. The pious Hebrews, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, refused to worship the image and were cast into the burning furnace; but they stepped out unharmed. The king promoted them, and the miracle is said to have cured him of his sacrilegious arrogance for a time.

But later he committed many more sins and iniquities, in consequence of which he heard a voice from heaven saying: "King Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken, The kingdom is departed from thee."

It was after this that he was condemned to become like an animal. He ate in the fields like an ox, his hair grew like eagles' feathers, and his nails became like birds' claws. It is now believed that the king suffered from the mental disease called lycanthropy, which makes a man think himself an animal. He appears to have suffered for seven years, after which he recovered.

In driving across the desert from Bagdad to the Euphrates River, westward, we saw a great heap of ruins on the plains of Dura to the north. It can be seen for fifty miles in every direction and still tells the famous story of God's deliverance. It was on the foundation comprising these ruins that the golden image of Nebuchadnezzar was erected. The image was ninety feet high in addition to the great foundation, which it is estimated stood nearly two hundred feet in height, composed of brick and stone. The image, however, was of gold, as the Bible narrative states. God is no less able now to deliver His faithful people who put their trust in Him and who refuse to break His holy commandments.

ANCIENT AND MODERN BABYLON

As you read of the sinful orgies conducted in the highest places of ancient Babylon, compare them with what is now transpiring on a far greater scale throughout the entire world. Ancient Babylon is used as a symbol of present Christendom, the mother church and her daughters (Rev. 17:5). As old Babylon has fallen never to rise again and remains a perpetual desolation, likewise will modern Babylon speedily come to her end.

The sins of this present world will not pass without notice before heaven, and God has decreed the destruction of present Babylon (see Revelation 18:21, where she is compared to a mighty millstone cast into the sea).

A strange fate has overtaken Nebuchadnezzar's great temple at Kish in Babylonia, one of the oldest cities of Mesopotamia. Nebuchadnezzar was the mighty king of Babylon who imagined his gods were greater than Jehovah.

The place was excavated recently by Professor S. H. Langdon, the American archeologist, now of the University of Oxford and for some years engaged in research work for the University in Babylonia. After standing for more than two thousand, three hundred years, this temple-palace is to be pulled down to permit excavation for much more interesting remains that are believed to lie underneath. Thus modern science shows small regard for the fame and greatness of Nebuchadnezzar.

This temple-palace was one of the many places where the mighty king held his wicked revels, feasting and drinking with the fair slaves his soldiers had caught for him in all the known parts of the world. It was here that he vaunted himself to be greater than Jehovah and ordered various cruelties inflicted on the unfortunate Israelites.

One staggering misfortune after another fell upon Nebuchadnezzar in punishment for his sacrilegious pride and cruelty. After one outbreak of wickedness he was afflicted with a strange form of insanity, which caused him to act like an animal, and "he did eat grass as the ox." Soon after his death the degenerate Belshazzar was surprised in the midst of his shameless gayety and feasting and killed. Next Nebuchadnezzar's great capital, Babylon, with its many marvels, was destroyed by foreign enemies.

Some idea of the wicked revelry of these rulers may be gleaned from the biblical reference to old Nebuchadnezzar's descendants, the still more debauched Belshazzar. The Bible says that "Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand. . . . Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem; and the king and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank in them."

From such passages it is clear that these vain kings were always seeking for new forms of sacrilege and idolatry.

The immense temple connected with the palace of Nebuchadnezzar is the best preserved and largest example of a Babylonian temple ever exposed in Mesopotamia, says Professor Langdon. From these ruins it was possible to obtain an idea of the upper part and roof of a temple. Walls reaching up to the very top of the building, and even part of the cornice, have been preserved.

There is ample evidence that the purpose of the temple was to accommodate Nebuchadnezzar upon those frequent excursions he made from his capital and to serve as the scene of the semi-religious rites and revelries at which the moon goddess was worshiped. One may say that it was here the king passed his week ends. Much of the merriment of Nebuchadnezzar's picturesque life occurred on such pilgrimages.

It is believed that at the feasts given in his temple-palace at Kish Nebuchadnezzar went through the ceremony of marrying the moon goddess, whose role was played by the most beautiful girl discoverable in that part of Babylonia. She also represented Ishtar, or Astarte, the Babylonian goddess of love and beauty. Through the ceremony the daring Nebuchadnezzar became a super-god, the husband of the greatest of goddesses. There is little wonder that he became insane.

The ceremony began with the worship of the ancient divinities with strange rites and sacrifices and passed by easy stages into a feast of wine and excesses. The chief goddess was clothed in an exquisite diaphanous costume. The wines and food were served in gold vessels plundered from the principal neighboring nations. At the close of the feast such of Nebuchadnezzar's friends as were able to walk carried away the golden objects. Amid the general intoxication many no doubt fell into the hands of the servants.

The soil has yielded abundant evidence of Nebuchadnezzar's gay life. Not only at Babylon, but at Ur of the Chaldees and at Kish, have been found the graves of many women of his harem. Their number is incredible.

At Ur alone were opened the graves of one hundred eighty women, all wives or favorites of this versatile monarch. In each of the graves were golden ornaments, rings and bracelets and necklaces cunningly devised and set with lapis lazuli, rock crystal, carnelian, and other semi-precious stones. There, too, were the toilet articles of these long dead women, their rouge pots, their powder boxes, their combs, and their hairpins.

Their bodies had crumbled to dust, but in the sealed scent bottles there remained a drop or two of the perfumes which they had delighted in thousands of years ago. The lips had turned to dust, but the lipsticks with which they had been brightened could still be used. It has been proved, by the way, that the fashionable women of early Babylonia made up very effectively and artistically.—A. N. Dugger in The Bible Advocate.

"THOU SHALT LOVE THE LORD THY GOD WITH ALL THY HEART, AND WITH ALL THY SOUL, AND WITH ALL THY MIND."

"HOW GOOD AND HOW PLEASANT"

MAN is innately a social animal. It is natural for him to gather with others of his kind to consider ideals and aspirations, beliefs and hopes. Indeed, a renowned scientist has advanced the theory that this tendency to band together, which he calls "mutual aid," is responsible for the preservation of some forms of life, notably man, and its lack for the extinction of others. The deer, for instance, practicing the principle of mutual aid, is still numerous in a region where the wolf, who fights for himself alone, is practically extinct.

With some people this devotion to the group rather than to oneself has gone to fanatic lengths—all for the state, nothing for the individual. With others the opposite has been true, as with the medieval robber barons.

Mutual aid applies also to the Christian life. The fellowship of Christian brethren is one of the loveliest phases of Christianity. The affection between the followers of Christ is mentioned many times in the New Testament. Acts 2:42: "And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." 1 John 3:11: "For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another."

This love for others underlies all Christianity. It was the origin of Christianity according to John 3:16. Because of His love, Christ died. He tells of His love for His followers in the fifteenth chapter of John: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you."

With such an example and with such a positive command, our Christian fellowship should be so sweet as to make us exclaim with David, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

GOLDEN RULE BEREAN SOCIETY

AT THE annual election of officers, Friday, June 9, 1933, the following were chosen: Don Swartz, president; M. W. Lyon, vice president; Miss Mary Milburn, secretary; Mrs. Ethel Swartz, treasurer. There will be no meetings during August; there were none during July. The regular attendance is expected in September, when the society continues its meetings for the fall and winter. The annual Berean picnic was held Tuesday, June 27, at the home of the retiring president, Miss Ruth Tomlinson, near Chagrin Falls. About 60 Bereans were there, and all enjoyed a delightful time.—Golden Rule News.

JESUS SHOWS HIS POWER

JESUS stilled a raging tempest that arose as the ship in which He and His disciples sailed was crossing the Sea of Galilee. At the eastern shore, after they had arrived, the Lord was met by a demoniac of great strength and frenzy. The man desired to remain with the One who rescued him from what was worse than death, but was sent to Decapolis to act as a witness for Christ instead.—Florence Steffa, 12, Oregon, Illinois.

ILLINOIS Bereans should be present at the annual conference of their state society on Friday, August 11.

DON'T FORGET

AN OBEDIENT SON

A mother who loves God deserves to have a son who loves Him too; don't you think so? And that is just what Hannah had. Last week we learned how a godly mother gave her son in service to God to assist the high priest in the tabernacle. This week we will learn how that son followed his mother's early teaching and rewarded her sacrifice by his obedience and reverence.

We have no record of Samuel's life from the age of about three when his mother left him with Eli in Shiloh, the place of worship, to the age of twelve, where we find him in today's lesson. But no doubt he was busy at play with the little Levites and doing errands for Eli, who naturally came to take the place of father to the little Samuel.

By the time he was twelve he would know the tabernacle and the care of it as you boys know your church, and he would love it just as dearly. How carefully he would tend the lamps that were kept burning all night! How brightly he would help to polish the golden trimmings on the altar in the Holy Place! How clean he would try to keep the laver which held the water for the sacrifices!

Oh, there were many, many little tasks which a boy could help the Levites perform in and around the tabernacle! But into the Holy of Holies the boy Samuel never went. Do you know why? I'm sure he had great respect for all the rules and regulations of God regarding the place of worship, just as you boys and girls have for your own place of worship. When God said a thing should be done just so, we know Samuel tried his very best to do it just so. And I think he had a happy childhood, too, don't you?

Just before sunrise one morning Samuel heard some one calling his name. He supposed it was Eli, and jumping up from his bed, he ran to Eli's side, saying, "Here am I." But Eli had not called him and told him to lie down again.

The same voice sounded in Samuel's ears again and yet again. Then Eli knew that it was God calling to Samuel. So he told him to answer the fourth time, "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth."

God had not talked directly to man since the death of Moses, as far as we have any record in the Bible, and now He was speaking to a twelve year old boy. You know, God talks to boys and girls even today, and His voice reaches them from the pages of His Book. He says in one place,

"My son, give me thine heart." In other words, "Serve and obey me."

And on almost every page of the New Testament we find the words of God's Son, telling us of great rewards that will come to us if we give our lives to Him—rewards not only in the future but in the present as well.

Now read the last three verses of 1 Samuel 3, and learn that Samuel grew up something the same as Jesus grew up—in favor with God and man. He became a prophet of the Lord, and he led the people back to God after they had sinned in worshipping idols.

Now let's make a booklet for Samuel. I'm sure many of you have good ideas for these booklets by now, and I hope you are enjoying this work as much as your scrapbook work. It is pleasant work for minutes when you need a change from the strenuous games of ball or tennis, or from the daily tasks you do for Father or Mother. And besides, you are preparing your lesson for next Sunday and gaining something of value for later life.

I hope that all of you can find a good description of the tabernacle. Notice the care and the beauty the Israelites put into their place of worship. Write a description of one of the six departments of the tabernacle—the court, the altar, the laver, the tent, the Holy Place, or the Holy of Holies. Add any pictures you have or drawings of your own.

We have some very fine scrapbooks on exhibit—four from Oregon. They were made by Kenneth, Arlene and Leota Gruber, and Mildred and Oran Hiscox; one from Charles Smith of Forreston, Ill., which is fine; two booklets from Ina Ruth Graham of St. Louis, very well done for such a little girl. Several did not send theirs because they hadn't finished, but I wish they had. I am looking for more books next week.

Mildred and Oran worked on their book together, and a nice thing they have in it is a verse from the Bible for each letter of their names, also Oregon, Ill. What do you think they have for the last letter of their name? Kenneth, and Arlene and Leota have some good drawings, especially the two gardens, the Light of the World, and the child kneeling in prayer. Lucille LeCrone brought two that her class had made; eight of them finished their scrapbooks but did not send them.

Wouldn't it be nice if you were all here at Bible school? If all the members of the Bible Scrapbook Club could get together in Oregon, we could have a fine time during the conference, I'm sure.

SAMUEL

1 Samuel 3, 7, and 12

Devotional Reading: Psalm 125

GOLDEN TEXT

Serve the Lord with all your heart.—1 Samuel 12:20.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Samuel Responding to God's Call.

Aim: To teach the pupil that a child can understand the will of God and learn to serve Him.

I. Samuel Enters the Service of God. (1 Sam. 3:1-10.) Through the influence of a godly mother and the careful instruction of Eli the faithful high priest Samuel at a very early age developed a depth of spiritual understanding that was far beyond his years. Yet he lost none of the joys of childhood, and added much to the peace and contentment of old age. As soon as a child can understand and appreciate a story he is old enough to be taught many of the wonderful truths of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ. But care must be taken not to confuse truth with error. If Bible facts and fairy tales are both stored in the little mind it cannot be expected that the child will distinguish between them. It is much better to satisfy their natural desire for interesting and adventurous stories by telling or reading to them the splendid ones of the Bible. Teach them early, as Samuel was taught, to pray understandingly and with confidence. Teach them that God still speaks to children through the Bible and that He is calling them all to serve Him.

II. Samuel Finishes His Service to God. (1 Sam. 12:1-4.) For more than half a century Samuel continued in the public service of God. From a little boy of twelve years, who listened and responded to the call of God, he became a man of splendid character and ability whose faculties, like those of Moses, remained unimpaired until he was "old and grayheaded." Throughout his long life he showed himself to be the same humble, teachable, faithful servant of the Lord that he had been in childhood. When Israel sinned in demanding a king like the other nations, God comforted him with the assurance, "They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them."—1 Sam. 8:7. His distinctions were many and his life work a glorious success, his last days being crowned with the testimony of his people that he had done them good and not evil all the days of his life.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Early Training: Samuel was the product of his early training. His mother had loaned him to the Lord, and of course the Lord had a work for him to do, for He has a work for everyone that is presented to Him and who is willing to rise up at the Father's call as did Samuel. This great man is an outstanding vindication of the principle set forth in Prov. 22:6: "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." His mother had paved the way for his life's work.

A Great Ruler: From boyhood to old age he had listened obediently to the voice of God. He did "justly, loved mercy, and walked humbly with God."—Micah 6:8. When his days were drawing to a close, no one could justly accuse him of wrong doing, defrauding, or receiving a bribe. Before man and God he was blameless. What a great life he had lived! It must bring tears of gladness to the eyes of an aged person to look backward over such a beautiful life.

Like Other Nations: Samuel had served Israel well and faithfully. Against him they had naught to accuse. They wanted to be like their neighbor nations—have a king. It was not a rejection of Samuel, but a rejection of God ruling over them. Israel learned a bitter truth in making this request. They found that God allows man to go his own way when he so chooses. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." This has been God's attitude toward man since creation; and experience has not taught us yet the folly of choosing the evil and rejecting the good. As a fact, time indicates man is more deliberate in his choice of the evil and in his desire to be more like the rest of the world.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Israel had been very wicked and sinned many times. The last wicked thing it had done was to ask for a king. Samuel was judge over Israel and felt that Israel was rejecting him when it asked for a king; but God said, "Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them." This is why asking for a king was such a great sin.

When the people realized their sin, Samuel tried to comfort them by saying, "Though you have done this wickedness: yet turn not aside from following the Lord."

This admonition is just as good for Christians as it is for Israel. Let us strive to serve Him with our whole heart that we may be accepted when He sends His Son to claim His own.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

We know that God has called many people for special service. In our lesson we discover Him calling Samuel by speaking to him in the stillness of night. Moses was called at the burning bush, and David while he was watching sheep. Paul was called when he was smitten with a bright light, brighter far than the noonday sun. Other illustrations may be added to show how God has called people into His service. God always calls special people by special means when He has some special work to be performed.

It will be noticed, however, that in each instance God called some one who was already trying to serve Him. Samuel was already serving in the temple. God called Noah who "was a just man and perfect in his generation." It is also stated that he "walked with God" (Gen. 6:9). Before his call Moses had chosen "rather to suffer affliction with the children of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season."—Heb. 11:25.

If we desire to be especially called by God, we must first accept Him and learn to obey His Word. Then if He needs us, we will be ready.

The expression "heeding God's call" is often used when referring to one's repentance and baptism. In this case God calls in a different manner. It is written: "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."—1 Cor. 1:21. When you hear the gospel, you must remember that it is God calling to you—it is your special invitation. Preaching is God's method, and the gospel is His power. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."—Romans 1:16.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Do you remember the story we had last Sunday about baby Samuel? Tell what you remember.

Each year Samuel had grown just like you boys and girls do. The story today tells us something that happened to Samuel when he had grown to be a big boy.

One night after Eli and Samuel had gone to bed, Samuel heard some one calling him. Of course he thought it was Eli. He went to Eli's room and said, "Here I am."

Eli said, "I did not call you. Go and lie down."

Samuel went and lay down. Again he heard some one calling him. He was sure it was Eli calling, so into Eli's room he went again and said, "Here I am."

Eli said, "But I did not call you. Go lie down again."

The third time Samuel heard some one calling him. "It must be Eli, surely, this time," he thought.

Now Eli knew it must be God calling Samuel to tell him of some special work for the boy to do. He said this time, "Go lie down again. Should you hear some one calling, you must answer, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'"—

God did call again and Samuel answered as Eli had told him. God told Samuel he would become a leader of the Israelites.—V. C. T.

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

General and Illinois Conference and Bible School at Oregon, August 1 to 13
 Eastern Nebraska Conference at Florence August 6 to 13
 Western Nebraska State Conference, at Holbrook, August 20 to 27
 Iowa Conference at Waterloo August 22 to 27
 Virginia Bible School and Conference at Maurertown, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3

IOWA STATE CONFERENCE

Plan to spend your vacation at the Iowa State Conference, Aug. 22-27, at Waterloo, Iowa. A very interesting program is being planned with Bro. L. E. Conner as special speaker from out of the state. Other ministers and teachers are Bros. J. W. Williams, C. W. Howe, O. J. Allard, and Arthur Johnson; and Mrs. Alta King, Hester Berry, and Gayle Allard. Music will be in charge of Sr. J. M. Kiger. She is planning an orchestra, so you young folks bring your instruments. Also, come prepared with a number for the Berean Day program, Thurs., Aug. 24. Any vegetables and fruits that can be donated will be much appreciated. Come, let us reason together. A special invitation is extended to the brotherhood out of the state.

Esther Sealine, Cor. Sec.

VIRGINIA CONFERENCE NOTICE

We would remind you again that our Bible School and Conference will, D. V., convene at Maurertown, August 24 to Sept. 3. We urge all who can to meet with us. We feel all owe it to themselves and their God to meet for common encouragement and edification, to the end that God's name may be glorified and His people prepared for the return of His dear Son.

It was planned to hold the morning and afternoon services of the first Conference Sunday at the Brick Church in the Powell's Fort Valley. However, it has been discovered that this is not best, so these plans have been definitely dropped. There will be no meetings at the Dry Run church during the time of the Virginia Bible School and Conference.

Harry A. Sheets, Sec.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

A church business meeting was held Tuesday night, Aug. 1, at which serious consideration was given to plans and prospects for enlarging our building. Since in order to build some money will have to be borrowed in addition to what we can raise among ourselves and since Michigan banking institutions are loaning no money, it was decided to try the advice of our local attorney and see if several hundred people are willing to loan ten dollars each to the church on bank notes maturing in from two to ten years, bearing interest at the rate of 4 1-2%, payable semi-annually. An effort is being made to find three hundred or more who will do that in the next thirty days.

Bro. Albert Siple and wife and son, together with Miss (Sr.) Margaret Bylsma of Hammond, La., made the pastor's home and the Grand Rapids church happy by a visit August 1 to 3.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

JUST A HINT

One of our sisters here at conference, being a widow with five children and not being blessed very abundantly financially, desires to show her appreciation of the many blessings God has showered upon her and her family through the years. In addition to many other services, she gives one-tenth of all her canned products (and they are not a few). This year she brought them to be used at the table at General Conference.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

During the absence of Pastor Norman J. MacLeod, who is assisting in the General Conference at Oregon, the work in Los Angeles is being carried on under the guiding hand of Bro. John E. Hammond, an efficient elder of the church, and his coworkers.

Sr. Lizzie Railsback is now able to sit up in a wheel chair after four months confinement to her bed due to a broken hip. She is suffering, however, from a severe case of arthritis brought on by the fracture of the bone.

We pray that this year's Bible school and conference will be the best ever held.

Mrs. G. J. Rahn.

WILL YOU LEND TEN DOLLARS?

The largest field, and most responsive, for church and Sunday school activity that has been opened by our people in the United States is the one at Grand Rapids, Mich. Average attendance last quarter exceeded three hundred, with building and facilities sufficient for only a little more than one third that number.

The members of the church are under the load wholeheartedly and enthusiastically, but in order to proceed with building operations more than three thousand dollars must be borrowed. This is no request for donations, but an appeal to everyone who can spare ten dollars or more to lend it to the church now. The church will issue to you a note to mature in from two to ten years, will pay you interest at 4 1-2% every six months, and on maturity will pay the full loan back to you. It is a safer and more remunerative place to put money than in your bank or in stocks and bonds, and the gospel will be taught to many by your help. Send your money to the treasurer, Harold W. Simpson, at Grandville, Mich., Rt. 1; or you may communicate with the pastor, F. E. Siple, 135 Pennell, S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich. A properly executed note will be sent on receipt of your money, interest to begin November 1, 1933.

Will you help all you can—and encourage others?

MARATHON, IOWA

Services as follows will be held at the Wayne Titus home, four miles southeast of Marathon, Sunday, August 6. Sunday school will convene at 10:30 a.m., succeeded by a sermon at 11 o'clock in the afternoon. All who can do so are cordially invited to be present.

FROM THE FIELD

Shortly after the St. Cloud, Minn., series of meetings a short series of services was held in the old home church near Lester Prairie, Minn. This small congregation has for a year or more been led by Bro. LeCrone, and many encouraging words were heard of his work. On Sunday, July 23, Miss Lilly Berry was baptized at Lake Mary, north of Winsted, Minn.

On Monday the family accompanied us to North Branch, Minn., where we had a pleasant visit with a former high school teacher.

On Tuesday evening, July 25, a series of meetings began at Graytown, Wis. It was indeed a pleasure to meet again the brethren there and to encourage them in Christian effort.

At present we are visiting a few days with Mrs. Magaw's mother and brother, Mrs. Hatch and Paul, of Harvey, Ill. In another day we will be on our way to the General Conference at Oregon, Ill., where we hope to meet many brethren even before these lines are in print.

We are thankful to have had the privilege to meet so many former friends in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Illinois, and pray God's favors upon all.

After the General Conference a day or two will be spent at the Chicago Century of Progress, and then we shall be on our way back home at Tippecanoe City, Ohio, where we shall gladly take up the work with the Brush Creek congregation. Sydney E. Magaw.

AN APPEAL TO WATCHFULNESS

While sending in a new subscription for a friend in Florida, together with a contribution to help in carrying on the general work, Bro. A. L. Corbaley, of Puyallup, Washington, writes as follows: "I would greatly enjoy attending the General Conference, but conditions forbid. Was pleased with the editorial on the subject of 'The Holy Ghost,' in the June 27 number. It is surely one of the greatest of the many modern delusions that are sweeping over the world. Those who claim they have received the Holy Ghost almost without exception believe in the natural immortality of the soul and other kindred beliefs. It is very evident that Jesus was referring to this cult in Matthew 7:21-23 and 24:24-27; and Paul, in 2 Thessalonians 2:8-12. Some of the members of the Church of God have departed from the faith and have given heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, as predicted in 1 Timothy 4:1-5. Truly we are living in 'perilous times.' Jesus says, 'WATCH!'"

HERALD RECEIPTS

H. S. Bell (for others); Mrs. Olaf Lewis; J. W. Grimsley; Mrs. E. L. Cronk; A. L. Corbaley (for another); John O. Conrad; Mrs. Chas. A. Harris; Mrs. Anna Smith; Norman J. MacLeod; Geo. F. Scott; David Elliott; Mrs. J. E. Hammond; Mrs. Geo. J. Rahn; Mrs. Arra Hanson; Ella C. Boyer.

NICHOLS - CHADBOURNE

On Thursday, July 6, at the home of the bride's mother, Sr. Grove Chadbourne, which is located eighteen miles north of Spokane, Wash., on Wild Rose Prairie, Bro. Vernon Nichols and Sr. Ruth Chadbourne were united in marriage by the writer. The bridegroom is the son of Bro. Alexander Nichols of Cashmere and is a model young man of exemplary character and fine personal habits. He has been working as a lineman for the Great Northern Railroad for many years. The bride has for many years been a member of the Church of God at Wenatchee and has been secretary, organist, and song leader, and an earnest religious worker in that organization. It is seldom that one meets with young people of the Church of God so well suited by both character and disposition to be founders of a happy Christian home. They have the confidence and well wishes of the Church of God in Washington wherever they are known. The writer and wife went by auto with Bro. and Sr. Lyle Rankin (the latter a sister of the bride) from Puyallup to the home of the mother, a distance of 400 miles, to perform the ceremony. May the Lord's blessing attend them along life's pathway.

A. L. Corbaley.

LOUIS BURK

On Sunday, June 11, Louis Burk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ress Burk, was drowned in Puget Sound at Point Defiance, near the city of Tacoma. He and a companion were riding in a speed boat. The boat upset, leaving them struggling in the water. Louis could not swim, so went down before help could reach him. His companion could swim some, so kept afloat until rescued. Up to the present time Louis' body has not been found. Louis was seventeen years of age and a young man of exemplary character. His mother, Sr. Mabel Burk, and his grandfather, Bro. L. G. Jaeger, who live in Tacoma, have long been members of the Church of God and occasionally attend our services in Puyallup. He will be greatly missed, as he was the only son of his parents and Bro. Jaeger's only grandson. He is survived by his parents; one sister, Hazel; and his grandfather.

A. L. Corbaley.

I AM THE BIBLE

I am the Bible.

I am a message to childhood, a challenge to youth, and a strength to maturity.

I came out of the past.

I have always been alive in the throbbing present.

I was fused into existence in the hot forge of human experience—where hearts are sensitive and where God can best speak to mankind.

I have through all the centuries challenged men when their souls were absorbed in the murky swamps of life's low levels.

I have constantly lifted their eyes to the sunlit summits where prayer and faith work their magic spell upon the soul.

Across my pages march the spiritual masters of the centuries and in me they still speak.

Through my printed page alone there looks out the wistful face of the One who has completely redeemed the whole life of humanity.

I have lost much of my power in the world because teachers have failed to interpret me aright to children and youth.

I move onward to capture the oncoming generation on the wings of teachers like you.

You are my last and only chance to be read aright by the world of tomorrow.

—Percy R. Heyward in "Church Chimes."

HEROES OF ISRAEL

The history of any people is written in the lives of its great leaders—its heroes. Thus the story of America is told in the biographies of Columbus, Washington, Lincoln, and the men and women who have given of their lives and talents to the development and preservation of American institutions.

In our present quarter's Sunday school lessons we are to take up the study of some of the outstanding characters of Hebrew history; men and women of renown who lived during the interesting period that reached from the time of Joshua to that of Solomon, and whose faithfulness and devotion provided the strength of Israel from a human standpoint, and whose achievements form the major portion of her history. Such a study cannot be otherwise than helpful to all who engage in it.

It was Thomas Carlyle who said, "Great men, taken up in any way, are profitable company. We cannot look, however imperfectly, upon a great man, without gaining something by him. He is the living light-fountain, which it is good and pleasant to be near." As we study our lessons for the next three months we will be repeatedly impressed with the truth of Carlyle's conclusion, for we will find ourselves, time and again, stirred to emulation by the inspiring examples of those noble men of old.

That, in a measure, is why those fascinating records of sacrifice and heroism in the service of God have been left us; they are our examples, living patterns, of the sort of men and women in which the Lord takes delight. "Wherefore," reasons the writer to the Hebrews, "seeing we are compassed about by so great a cloud of witnesses, let us, (as they did), lay aside every weight, and the sin (of faithlessness) which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Pastor M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, occupied the pulpit of the Dixon Church of God Sunday morning, and Norman J. MacLeod, pastor of the Los Angeles church, was invited by the Methodist Church of Chana to conduct the Sunday evening service there.

Pastors of other churches in Oregon, who have inspected the exhibit of church and Sunday school materials and methods, expressed themselves as highly pleased with the exhibit, which is much more complete than was the case last year.

Sr. E. L. Cronk, who is eighty years of age and who lives in Vermontville, Mich., writes that she likes all of the writers for The Restitution Herald, but is especially pleased with articles from the young people who were members of the Training School. "They are so needed (these young workers) in the church. I have read our church papers since I was a child, and they have been a great help to me."

The Ministerial Conference is now in full swing at Oregon, and many questions of great importance not only to ministers but to the church in general are being thoughtfully considered. Questions pertaining to marriage, instruction before baptism, requirements before baptism, conditions of fellowship, defining Christianity, and many others equally interesting and vital are being presented.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

National Bible Institution

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

The article by F. E. Siple, "Shall Never Die," printed in this issue, may be secured as a tract free and postpaid in any quantities by addressing the National Berean Society, Oregon, Illinois.

By special action of the Ministerial Conference which is being held in connection with the General Conference, the present editorial policy of The Restitution Herald was unanimously approved. The policy of limiting articles to a positive affirmation of the truths generally believed among us was adopted at the beginning of the General Conference movement in 1921, and restated by special action of the conference in 1930. It has met with the widespread approval of the brotherhood.

It is already evident that we are in the midst of one of the greatest gatherings that was ever held by the Church of God; the attendance is the largest and the most widely representative, the work of the Bible School is better organized, the curriculum most helpful and interesting.

Writing on Monday morning, following the splendid services of Sunday which were marked by a crowded auditorium and the deepest interest at all three sermon periods, we are impressed with the devotion shown by those who took part in the worship of the day. A deep spiritual atmosphere pervaded each service.

THE JUDGMENT OF GOD

By S. J. Lindsay

"Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way. And all the people shall say, Amen."—Deut. 27:18.

THERE seems to be something in human nature that has a tendency to lead into strange paths and into ways where righteousness would not have us go. There is ever before us the tempter who asks, "Yea, hath God said?" This spirit in man appeared in the first parents of the race, and it has been with them ever since. That spirit amounts almost to a demand of the flesh to be given the right to do as it pleases. And this spirit needs no support.

All the way along the route God has given His commandments for our good, and all the way man has striven to go his own course. There have arisen faithful advocates who have labored hard to advance the cause of God because they have seen that it is for man's best interests that they do so. But wherever the true prophets of God have been, there we also find false prophets to encourage the flesh in its downward course. In fact, the false have generally outnumbered the true. Read the history of Israel during their Babylonian captivity, and you will find that while Ezekiel was hard at work trying to get Israel to take the proper course for their final deliverance there were many false prophets who had set themselves to destroy Ezekiel's influence. And it has always been so.

We believe that there are true teachers of God today who are striving to make the way plain for the wayfarers on the way to the kingdom. At the same time we find many who profess to love God, yet who are asking the old time question, "Yea, hath God said?"

The Church of God is built upon doctrine which is very distinctive. Among other things, it stands out severely against that insinuation of the first higher critic. God had said, "Thou shalt surely die." The higher critic said, "Thou shalt not surely die."

We believe it to be one of the chief duties of the church to keep ever before the people that on this occasion God told the truth, and the serpent told a lie. We believe also that we should stress the fact that by acting upon a lie, man lost life. Yet, within the membership of the church on one occasion we had conversation with one who had been baptized who said to us that if she had known before she was baptized that we did not believe in the natural immortality of the soul, she never would have come into the church. She very strongly expressed herself as believing that some parts of her would never die. We have found others who have come into the church who believe that their final home is up in heaven.

It is our contention that all who come into the body should be so thoroughly taught that such things should never be heard from any. It is here that we wish to call attention to the text quoted at the beginning of this article. Let our teachers take warning and use great care.—The Bible Advocate.

OUR HOUSE WHICH IS FROM HEAVEN

By M. W. Perrine

IF WE find out where and what the Father's house is in which He is to dwell, we shall know what the mansions are and where they are located. Too many people jump to the conclusion that this house is located in heaven and that Jesus proposed to go there and prepare us dwelling places there in which we shall eternally dwell, utterly ignoring the many blessed promises that God has made that the earth is to be the saints' abode and their eternal inheritance.

That God's throne is in heaven no one will dispute, but I know of no place in the Scriptures where it states that His house is in heaven. However, that has nothing to do with our house, which Paul says is from heaven. Find out where the house is in which the Father will dwell, and what it is, and we will know where and what our mansions are.

Paul speaks of our earthly house as this tabernacle which is to be dissolved, showing that he means our mortal bodies made of dust. We have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, not eternally in the heavens as some would teach, but it is a house that will last forever.

Now our house, because it is mortal and must die, will be dissolved. Now we do not desire to be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."—Phil. 3:21. "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."—1 Cor. 15:44. This spiritual body is our body after it has been dissolved in death, raised up and immortalized.

The record is in 1 John 5:11: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." God's Son is in heaven; therefore, Paul could say, "Clothed upon with our house, which is from heaven," immortality, for does not Paul say, "This mortal must put on immortality"?

Now the church is God's temple, His house, His dwelling place. Writing to the Corinthian church, Paul says in 1 Corinthians 3:16, 17: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." "What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. . . . And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters."

To have the belief in a home in heaven is to uphold the serpent in his lie: "Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil."

Heard at General Conference

READING from Paul's second letter to the Thessalonians, " 'We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren,' " said Bro. Austin, applying the Apostle's words to those assembled at conference, " 'because that your faith groweth exceedingly.' " Out of the midst of this present day with its problems and perplexities you have come here to study. I thank God for you, one and all.

"It would be a lonesome road down the pathway of life were it not for those of like precious faith," he continued. "We stand for the same Lord and Master. Would that we were standing for Him stronger; that each first day, in honor of His resurrection, we would every one gather together and bow our heads in worship; that we would more and more refrain from the things of this world that detract from His honor."

Bro. Austin then proceeded to point out to us the insidious evil of atheism that is creeping into our homes and turning the youth of our land, our dearest possession, over to the religion of reason, as it is called. Reading from an especially alarming periodical, entitled, Godless Man, he declared that its purpose was to take belief in God from the heart of every man on the earth. This monster, atheism, is abroad in the land, thrusting its filthy tentacles into everything pure and lovely which tends to the worship of God, he warned us.

The speaker showed that the youth movement in the guise of education is purely destructive, and he proclaimed the judgment of God upon its leaders, referring to his text in 2 Thessalonians 1:7-10, where the Apostle predicts the coming of Christ "in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God."

Reading from a second publication, Bro. Austin sounded another note of warning in regard to a federation of all religions which is being contemplated throughout the world, and which will most surely involve persecution for those who would remain firm in their faith.

"We are down near the end of time, brethren," he

Splendid messages from the Word of God, faith-building, uplifting, and filled with the Spirit of God's eternal truth, distinguished the sermons presented by those who provided this portion of the great annual feast of the Church of God. In this series of brief reviews Sister Mary A. Gesin brings to us interesting echoes of the services held in Oregon during the past two weeks.

exhorted us, "and His coming draws very near. We will not meet in many more conferences. The great question is, 'When the Son of man comes, will he find faith on the earth?' We must read and study His Word and then follow it up with a faith that acts, with a life of devoted service to Christ and His Father.

"May you all go often to the beautiful pages of His Book to strengthen your hearts so that no matter how fiercely the storms of life may blow about you, your faith will remain firm. Dear people of God, bow down before the Father day by day," Bro. Austin counseled us, "and when the Master comes may He say, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.' "

THE COMING CONFLICT

EQUALLY forceful and instructive was the sermon delivered by Bro. Norman John MacLeod, pastor of our Los Angeles church, on Sunday afternoon, who took for our comfort and guidance some lessons from the life of the great Apostle. "Paul was about to make the supreme sacrifice," he said in opening. "Through many and long trials, severe, burdensome, and wearying, the aged man, bent but not broken in spirit, had come to the close of his career. Through his many journeys, we see the divine Word of God as an intensely human document, appealing to our hearts as well as to our minds. We hear him asking for the simple comforts of life—his cloak, his books and parchments, and our heart goes out to him. He is not whining or complaining, but comes back with this impassioned appeal, 'The Lord stood with me, and strengthened me. And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work.'

"We see our own life as a constant conflict from beginning to end. We must choose between good and evil. If we choose the good, it is a continual conflict to carry it through. Many forces come in to weaken us in the battle, and we want to be able to say with Paul at the end of life that we have fought a good fight."

Referring to 2 Timothy 3:1-7, Bro. MacLeod pointed

The Editor's Prayer

OUR Father, at this time we would unite our hearts in praise unto Thee for the blessings which Thou hast given unto us during the General Conference and Bible school through which we have just passed. We thank Thee for the sweet spirit of unity and of cooperation that was manifest throughout. We thank Thee that so many were able to meet with us in those gatherings and bring to us their inspiring messages of fellowship and encouragement. Lay Thy hand in blessing upon us as we separate, we pray. Amen.

God Never Forgets

GOD never forgets! When once His word has gone forth, it stands forever. Be it a promise of blessing or a warning of punishment, God never forgets! There is both comfort and cause for apprehension in this solemn reflection: comfort for the faithful, and apprehension for the unfaithful. The assurances that every act of righteousness will be rewarded are no more definite and final, no more certain of accomplishment, than are the punishments to be meted out to the transgressors.

As far back as the time of Moses Jehovah foresaw the disobedience and rebellion of the people of Israel and pronounced upon them the sufferings and sorrows through which they are passing today. God never forgets! The Lord still earlier recognized in Abraham a man who would teach the great truths concerning God unto his children and unto his children's children, and so pronounced upon him a blessing of far-reaching character which awaits its complete fulfilling in the distant future. Eventually through Abraham and his seed all the nations of the earth will be blessed, because God never forgets!

It was because Paul was firmly convinced of this splendid truth, that God never forgets, that he was able to say with so much conviction that "ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." While the Master said, "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple . . . shall in no wise lose his reward." Such an assurance as this should serve to stimulate men to greater zeal in their efforts to press forward in the service of God.

The Glory of Righteousness

HOWEVER depressing the picture may be that the prophets paint of the present evil world in its final condition of sinfulness, its darkness and gloom will but serve to make more vivid and glorious the "Sun of Righteousness" which is about to rise above the horizon of our experience. Let the storms sweep how and where they will, God is stronger than the tempest! Let the fiery billows of the time of trouble writhe and flame, God is greater than the fires of the tribulation! And we, His children, may press on without fear, for God is here! Christ leads the way! His truth is our shield and buckler, our defense in every hour of danger and of need.

Even now the portents of morning may be observed by the careful watcher, by the earnest student of the Word. As the darkness gathers, as it grows more dense about us, then is the time to lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh! Already we can see the light breaking faintly above the turrets of Jerusalem, and throughout the world the storm sweeps onward to lose its force beating vainly against the ramparts of God's eternal judgment!

The Darkness of Sin

DARK and gloomy is the picture painted by inspiration of the closing days of time! As we study the prophecies pertaining to this present period, we can see little to relieve the darkness that broods over the entire earth. We realize that such a condition is not at all strange under the circumstances that now prevail. Crime is rampant. Iniquity is increasing. Spirituality and faith are rapidly declining. Men are forgetting God! And in the absence of God or in the failure of men to perceive God darkness always settles over the earth.

Speaking, no doubt of this same time, Isaiah says, "In that day they shall roar against them like the roaring of the sea: and if one look unto the land, behold darkness and sorrow, and the light is darkened in the heavens thereof." The same prophet says again, "They shall look unto the earth; and behold trouble and darkness, dimness of anguish; and they shall be driven to darkness."—Isaiah 5:30; 8:22.

HOME AND REST

By Lyman Booth

How true are the words, "There's no place like home." From childhood to old age, no matter where we may roam, whether for pleasure or profit, we cannot find a place that can afford the joy and sunshine that filled and shone round the place we called home when little children. Those days left an impression of serene happiness that time cannot efface. Old age looks back to scenes and friends that cannot be forgotten. Though time and fortune may favor one with a palatial dwelling in some foreign land, still it holds not the sweet joys of the place where one's earliest years were spent. How often one longs to visit the dear old home, and how often has this sentiment led gray hairs and tottering limbs back to scenes which have been cherished in memory's casket only to find the picture changed almost beyond recognition. The buildings are not the same; the orchard has died; the shade trees are missing; nothing seems natural except the brook, and even it does not present the same charm it did when the returned was a boy.

He turns from the scene with tearful eyes and in a melancholy mood, he sighs. Alas! alas! how everything has changed! nothing remains as it was. Upon further reflection his thoughts recall the words of David, "Behold, thou hast made my days as a handbreadth; and mine age is as nothing before thee: verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity. Selah. Surely every man walketh in a vain shew: surely they are disquieted in vain: he heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them."—Psalm 39:5, 6. "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away."—Psalm 90:10.

A man toils early and late to provide a comfortable home in which he hopes to rest in his declining years, but his hope is soon cut off and his expected rest is buried beneath a flood of worry and grievous disappointments; his mansion and money hold little or no comfort; his sleep is vexed with distressing dreams, premonitions of evil; his entire life has been devoted to laying up treasures for his own pleasure and to leaving a large legacy to his heirs. In this he may meet with a fair measure of success, or his treasures may be swept away over night. "He has spent his years as a tale that is told," and at last he lies down to rest and silence in the damp and narrow chamber of death and is soon forgotten.

Is this the end of the chapter? Is this his final destiny? Will he remain a prisoner eternally in his lonely cell? Not if Jesus' words are true which He uttered at the tomb of Lazarus when He told the wondering throng that "the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5:28, 29.

This is a cheering promise to those who have done good. To know that after years of trials and temptations, sufferings and afflictions, he will rise from his slumbers to life eternal is, indeed, the most cheering thought one can entertain. The Christian's hope is based upon the resurrection. He looks forward with extreme delight to the time when he will be clothed with incorruptibility, that state of physical perfection that will know no change. It is then the weary pilgrims will find rest in an eternal abiding place, for Jesus said to His disciples, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself: that where I am, there ye may be also."—John 14:2, 3. The mansions mentioned are "many abiding places." The rest spoken of does not mean that there will be nothing to do. Rest does not mean idleness, but it may mean a change of work. In this connection I take it to mean to cease from the cares and trials and temptations to which men are now exposed in mortal life. Here we labor and grow weary, then we shall run and not weary. Here labor may be an irksome task performed for personal benefit, there it will be a pleasure performed to the glory of God.

The homes that are built here are not permanent, for in time they fall into decay; but the mansions of the just will endure. The Christian's will be in a land of rest. It will be in the kingdom of our Lord, where His glory will shine forever. No grief or woe, pain or sickness

The Glorious Land

We have heard from the bright, the holy land,
We have heard and our hearts are glad;
For we were a lonely pilgrim band,
And weary and worn and sad.
They tell us the pilgrims ever dwell there,
No longer are homeless ones;
We know the goodly land is fair
Where life's pure river now runs.

They say green fields are waving there,
That never a blight shall know;
And the deserts wild are blooming fair,
And the roses of Sharon grow.
There are lovely birds in the bowers green,
Their songs are blithe and sweet;
And their warblings, gushing ever new,
The angel's harpings greet.

We have heard of the palms, a robe, a crown,
And a silvery band in white;
Of a city fair, with pearly gates,
All radiant with light.
We have heard of the angels there, and saints,
With their harps of gold, how they sing;
Of the mount, with the fruitful tree of life;
Of the leaves that healing bring.

The King of that country, He is fair;
He's the joy and light of the place!
In His beauty we shall behold Him there,
And bask in His smiling face.
We'll be there, we'll be there in a little while;
We'll join the pure and the blest;
We'll have the palm, a robe, a crown, will afflict the inhabitants of that eternal city, for they will be crowned with eternal life. Now we have no abiding city; but we seek one that is to come, filled with everlasting light. It is a home of heavenly peace where weary pilgrims within its sacred walls will find rest.
And forever be at rest.

When God fulfills His promised word, Zion, the city of our Lord, will shine in all its richness and splendor. Then the glory of God will shine on His people, for then it will be His abode. There He will plant His throne. Then the kings of earth will own His power; then all the tribes of earth will come and spread their presents at His feet. But who will see that glorious day when the Lord will remove the veil which now blinds the nations, when pain will cease and tears be wiped from every eye, when the sighs and groans that sorrows bring will be lost forever in smiles and songs of gladness?

The accompanying stanzas, entitled "The Glorious Land," give a beautiful, poetical description of Palestine as the future home of the redeemed. They were published in The Restitution in 1868 or 1869 when Thomas Wilson was editor and J. M. Stephenson and Hiram V. Reed were associate editors. It appeared over the initials "J. M. S." In 1872 Bro. Wilson published it in the Christian Psalmist, a collection of hymns.

THE ATONEMENT

By George B. Alldridge

---

THE "atonement" in Christian theology is the action of Christ's ministry in bringing men by faith and obedience into right relation with God.

In Elpis Israel, page 164, the late Dr. Thomas wrote, "It is a well established principle of the sacred writings, that what the Everlasting Father does by His agent, He is considered as doing by Himself. There is a maxim in law similar to this which runs somehow thus: qui facit per alios, facit per se, what one doth by, or through, others, he does of himself. If this be borne in mind, many seeming incongruities will be harmonized."

How clearly this thought illuminates 2 Corinthians 5: 19, 21: "To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed (margin, "put in us") unto us the word of reconciliation."

The Hebrew word for atonement is kawfar to cover, cancel. The Greek word katallagay is to exchange, reconcile. In accordance with the force of these terms of Scripture, the atonement is the covering over of sin, the reconciliation between God and man accomplished by the Lord Jesus Christ. It is that special result of Christ's sacrificial suffering and death by virtue of which all who exercise proper penitence and faith receive forgiveness of their sins and obtain peace.

In the light of this, how significant Paul's words are in 1 Corinthians 5:7, 8: "Clean out the old dough that you may be a fresh lump. For you are free from the old leaven; Christ our paschal lamb has been sacrificed. So let us celebrate our festival, not with any old leaven, not with vice and evil, but with the unleavened bread of innocence and integrity."—Moffatt. Hence, we see that the death of Christ was not to appease the wrath of offended Deity, but to express the love of the Father in a necessary sacrifice

"For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life. And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement."—Rom. 5:10, 11.

for sin that the law of sin and death which came into force by the first Adam might be nullified in the second Adam in a full discharge of its claims through a temporary surrender of its power; after which immortality by resurrection might be acquired in harmony with the law of obedience. Thus sin is taken away, and righteousness established.

Suppose we consider the passover for a moment (Exodus 12:1-51). The passover was instituted in memory of Israel's preservation from the last plague visited upon Egypt (the death of the firstborn) and their deliverance from bondage. The deliverance of Israel from Egypt was accompanied by their adoption as the nation of Jehovah. For this a divine consecration was necessary, that their outward severance from Egypt might be accompanied by an inward severance from everything of an Egyptian or heathen nature. This consecration was imparted by the passover, a festival which was to lay the foundation of Israel's birth (Hosea 2:15; Ex. 6:6, 7) into the new life of grace and fellowship with God and to perpetuate it in time to come.

How easily we now understand Paul's words in 1 Corinthians 11:26: "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."

When the Jew upon the eve of each recurring fourteenth day of the month Nisan keeps the passover and the feast of unleavened bread, he shows that the death of the passover lamb spared his firstborn and delivered his nation from the bondage of Egypt and reconciled it to God as his especial treasure (Amos 3:2).

So the Lord's death to me shows that as one of His firstborn my life is spared and that He has delivered me from the bondage of sin (Heb. 12:23, 24). "For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."—1 Thess. 1:9, 10.

Dear brethren, how cruelly God is misrepresented even by those who profess to be His friends! By the nominal church in general the death of Christ is regarded as the supreme act in that mediatorial agency. An efficacy has been ascribed to it beyond the emphasis it gives to the general influence of His character and life, as an attestation of the truth, as the highest proof the Son of man could give of the strength and sincerity of His conviction. In the view of many Christians, it is a good deal more than this. According to some, it is an expiatory sacrifice required by God for the remission of sins, the satisfaction of a debt due to divine justice, which has a right to demand the everlasting perdition of the human race as the penalty of Adam's sin but was willing to accept the death of Christ as compensation instead.

Compare this teaching with Titus 2:14: "Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

Again I will quote from Ferrar Fenton (2 Cor. 5:21, 22): "He who never knew sin, for our sakes was regarded as sin, so that we might be righteousness towards God in Him. And working together with Him, we also encourage you not to accept the gift of God in vain; for He says, I have heard you in a favourable season, and in a day of salvation I have helped you."

Peter's words as translated by Weymouth read, "And it is to this you were called; because Christ also suffered on your behalf, leaving you an example so that you should follow in His steps. He never sinned, and no deceitful language was ever heard from His mouth. When He was reviled, He did not answer with reviling; when He suffered He offered no threats, but left His wrongs in the hands of the righteous Judge. The burden of our sins He Himself carried in His own body to the cross and bore it there, so that we, having died so far as our sins are concerned, may live righteous lives. By His wounds yours have been healed. For you were straying like lost sheep, but now you have come back to the Shepherd and Protector of your souls."—1 Peter 2:21-25.

The Bible does not reveal Christ as our substitute. The Bible teaches that when a man dies he pays the penalty of sin, irrespective of whether he is raised from the dead or not. Death is the penalty of sin; and when each man dies, each one pays the penalty himself; and if so, it is folly to say Christ paid it for him. So the "substitution" of Christ is as impossible as it would be immoral.

A text often quoted is 1 Timothy 2:5-7 (Weymouth): "For there is but one God and but one Mediator between God and man—Christ Jesus, Himself man; who gave Himself as the redemption price for all—a fact testified to at its own appointed time, and of which I have been appointed a herald and an apostle (I am speaking the truth; it is not a fiction) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and truth."

Only three places in the New Testament is the word

"ransom" translated by Weymouth "redemption," viz., Matthew 20:28; Mark 10:45; 1 Timothy 2:6. In the first two the Greek word lutron is used, which means something to loosen by redemption, to release, to deliver. (See Hosea 13:14.) And in the other reference the Greek word antilutron is used, which means the price paid before the release can transpire.

Jesus declared Himself to be a representative personality, a revelation of God in man, a manifestation, a showing forth of the divine, by which mankind is to be taught and won, redeemed from evil and united to God. Paul says, "For in him dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily."—Col. 2:9. John says, "Ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins."—1 John 3:5, 8.

Why did Paul say, "For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (1 Cor. 2:2)? Jesus answers the question: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John 12:32. Many quote the next verse and say this refers to the manner of His death. To me it means that through this death His release from sin and the world will establish Him in a position set forth in the Epistle to the Hebrews to draw men to God and to help them who are drawn die daily to sin and in due time gain deliverance from death and the grave.

Paul said, "I am crucified with Christ" (Gal. 2:20), but was he actually? No; figuratively, yes!

It is in the light of this idea that we are to interpret the atonement. That central truth of the Christian system finds its best expression in the words already quoted, "If I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me."

We have here the end to be accomplished and the means by which it is to be effected. The end is spiritual emancipation, redemption from the power of sin and death, reconciliation and union with God. The means by which it is to be effected is Christ's drawing power. (See Acts 4:12.)

The moral attraction of that supreme example of self-renunciation, of self-annihilation, which the cross exhibits to our reverent contemplation is a great one. "He that seeketh his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

As Christ is a typical personage, so all His history is typical; consequently, His passion is a manifestation, a symbol, the contemplation of which exerts a saving influence on our minds. "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church."—Col. 1:24.

—o—

God warned against putting our trust in man or the rulers of this world. The wisdom of this warning is becoming more evident day by day. Man has failed and will prove a greater failure in future days. Permanent security is to be found in God and His Word. Do not build too much hope on better days as results of economic conferences and world gatherings. The only peace and prosperity that we can expect in this day is only temporary.

—Church of God Messenger.

The Thief on the Cross

By F. E. Siple

"And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

THE conversation between the penitent thief and our Savior as they hung in dying agony upon their crosses is referred to by many as indisputable proof that death is not the cessation of man's life, but that at death of the body the inner, or real, man goes to its reward. The reply of Jesus is considered to be proof positive that Jesus and the thief went to a place called paradise when death overtook them that day. Therefore, we that believe the Scriptures to teach that death is not a transition, but the end of man's existence till the resurrection, should give this account careful consideration, and without prejudice try to determine just what the import of this conversation is.

We realize that some have endeavored to explain this matter by changing the comma of verse forty-three, so that instead of reading, "Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise," it would read, "Verily I say unto thee to day, Thou shalt be with me in paradise." If the English language had been the tongue in which Jesus spoke and these the very syllables which came from His lips, this explanation might be permissible; but all who have ever studied any foreign language will recognize that when a translation has been made as nearly accurate as synonyms can be found to convey the meaning, it is unfair then to change the punctuation to conform to a person's idea. That comma in the English was considered necessary by the translators to convey the thought embodied in the original Greek. For this reason it is necessary, if we would get the essence of the matter, to go to the original text and examine it.

The words "to day," of verse forty-three, are translated from the Greek word semeron. This word occurs just forty times in the New Testament; and twenty-two of these times it is translated "this day," and the other eighteen times find it rendered "to day." Thus the translators recognized that the expression "this day" even better suits the original than the words "to day." For that reason we beg permission to use the preferred translation in this verse also, and thus it reads, "Verily I say unto thee, This day thou shalt be with me in paradise."

You may wonder what advantage is gained by this, and how that can harmonize any better than the other expression. In order to understand this perfectly it is only necessary to consider well the request that had been made by the thief. He did not say, "Lord, remember me today after we are dead." Nor did he ask to be remembered in heaven. His request was, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Jesus had preached the gospel of the kingdom throughout this whole region; and the thief, without doubt, had heard that teaching and believed it to be true. That he believed Christ to be all He claimed to be is plainly shown by verse forty-one. He admitted that Jesus had done nothing amiss, although He had taught that He was born to be a king and that some day He would come to the throne of David and reign over the whole earth.

Consequently, the "day" spoken of by the Savior was not the day of their crucifixion, but the day that the thief had in mind when he made the request—the day when Jesus should come into His kingdom. The Christ's answer was, "This day (the day to which you refer) shalt thou be with me in paradise."

The whole matter, then, boils itself down to a study of the kingdom. If we would know whether or not the promise of Christ has yet been fulfilled, we must discern as to whether Christ has yet come into His kingdom or not. If He has not, then the time has not yet arrived when He promised he should be with Him; and, furthermore, the time has not yet come when the thief asked to be remembered.

Revelation 3:21 ought to be enough to answer that question for any sincere person. In it Christ, long after His ascension to heaven, says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." Christ's own statement is that He is not yet on His own throne. He sits now at the right hand of His Father, on the Father's throne in heaven, there to act as mediator for us; and the promise is plain that when He comes to His own throne the overcomers will be given a place with Him.

A careful reading of Psalm 72:8; Zechariah 9:9, 10; Jeremiah 23:5, 6; and Luke 1:31-33 will reveal the fact that the only throne ever promised to Christ is to be on earth—a literal throne—the throne of His father, David. Add to this a study of Matthew 25:31; Acts 1:11; 2 Timothy 4:1; and Hebrews 9:27, 28, and it will be plainly seen that Christ was not to come to the throne of His kingdom until He should return from heaven in the same manner as He went up—visibly, literally, physically. Inasmuch as Jesus has not yet returned in fulfillment of these prophecies, we know that the kingdom has not yet been established; and, hence, the time spoken of by the thief and Jesus is still future.

Some endeavor to make a distinction between the request and the reply by saying that the thief spoke of a kingdom, but that Christ spoke of a place called paradise—a different place—a spirit world. The word "paradise" is of Persian origin, and means a beautiful garden, or park.

The only perfect paradise that we have record of ever having existed was the Garden of Eden as God formed it in all its beauty; and we know that paradise was lost through Adam's transgression. The only other paradise spoken of in Scripture is the future restoration of that former condition through Jesus the Christ. See Acts 3:19-21, and then behold John's vision of it in Revelation 21:1-5.

There are just two other places in which the word "paradise" is used in the New Testament. The first is 2 Corinthians 12:2-4, and there the word is used synonymously with "the third heaven." Now study 2 Peter 3:5, 6, 13, and you will observe that the first heaven and earth passed away with the flood, and the second is to pass away with the Lord's coming judgments, so that the new heavens and earth of verse thirteen constitute the "third heaven," or paradise—the Edenic condition restored. The other place in which the word "paradise" occurs is Revelation

2:7. The promise here is that the overcomers will eat of the tree of life in the midst of the paradise of God. Turn now to the fifth chapter, and the tenth and eleventh verses show that these same overcomers have been granted positions of honor in the earth.

Hence, "paradise," whenever and wherever found, refers to the perfection of God's creation—that which was lost through Adam, and is to be restored through Christ. In other words, the kingdom over which Christ is to reign and paradise are one and the same thing. Therefore, we are forced to confront the fact that perfect harmony existed between the request of the thief and the reply of Jesus. The former asked to be remembered when Jesus should come into His kingdom, and the latter promised that he should be with Him when "this day" should arrive.

May we, also, so understand His gospel and order our lives as to be included when that glad day shall come.

Harmony With God

By Lulu Johnson

---

SOME time ago I read an article in THE RESTITUTION HERALD under the heading, "Minor Chords in Life," pointing out that sorrow, suffering, and all complaints, which are a result of sin, are the minor chords of life. I would call them "discords of life," since minor chords are not without harmony, while discord is. Sin and its results are out of harmony with God.

The thought brought to my mind the opposite, or harmony and its relation to God and His plans. All that God has created, with the exception of man, has remained true to the principle under which and the purpose for which it was created. Man alone has broken and disregarded God's laws. All nature brings forth fruit in harmony with the nature God created in it.

Man recognizes the absolute necessity of harmony in all things except his relations with God. In the scientific world man realizes harmony's significance. The radio very clearly demonstrates the necessity of harmony, since it must exist between the two instruments before there is any reception. The same is true of telegraphy. The two instruments must be in perfect tune, harmonize one with the other, before one can expect communication. The same principle holds good in the mechanical world. Any machine must harmonize in each of its many parts before the whole can give proper service.

Man knows and enacts in every day of his life these many lessons which illustrate the necessity of harmony, yet sees no connection among the things governing everyday life and his relations with God. When it comes to religion, he expects any or all kinds to give him proper connection with God. The majority of the world will tell you it makes no difference what we believe as long as we are sincere.

No one would undertake to handle a piece of machinery without first knowing how to operate it. Sincerity in belief will make no difference in the working of the machine. A knowledge on the part of the operator of the plan and purpose of the machine is necessary before there is harmony between the two. Yet how many readily admit that they make no effort to understand God's plan, that the Bible is too deep for them, and they do not believe those who do study it know much about it. The queer part of it is that many who say just such things profess to be Christians. "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God."—Romans 10:3.

It is just as necessary to know God's working principle for man as it is to know the working principle of an automobile. How can we expect any communication with God if we know nothing about Him or what He expects of us? The more we learn of Him, the nearer we are drawn to Him. Just as long as we make no effort to learn anything concerning God and His wonderful plan of salvation, just that long will we remain strangers to Him and miss the blessings true harmony can bring.

The story is told of an old man carrying a violin, who approached a group of workmen engaged in erecting the steel work of a structure. The old man remarked that he could play the structure down. The workmen looked upon him as not being just right mentally and paid no more attention to him. Day after day the old fellow sat at the foot of the structure sawing away on his violin. At last the workmen discovered many loose bolts and connections, and the cause was finally traced to the vibration caused by the old man's violin.

Each piece of metal, wood, and even of stone, has a certain tone which will vibrate in answer to a tone of the same pitch. It would be difficult to determine the power of harmony. Remove its principle from the earth, and man could not exist. Man understands and uses it, yet fails to give credit for its being to the Maker thereof.

It is only through harmony with God that we can love our enemies and pray for them that persecute us (Matthew 5:44), for love is the ruling element in harmony. Without love in the church there is no harmony, but discord, and discord breeds all sorts of mischief.

"Out of harmony with God," is the answer to "What is the matter with the world?" Harmony is the keynote of the universe; and when we know and strive to do God's will, then will the soul vibrate with the Spirit of God.

A FOUNDATION FOR FAITH

By James A. Patrick

---

"But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—Hebrews 11:6. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge."—Psalm 19:1, 2.

FROM whence comes our faith in God, from nature and the starry heavens or from the Bible? Many otherwise enlightened men in India study the stars and nature, but they never find God. The men of Japan, one of the most advanced nations of the world in many respects, look at the heavens; they see the sun rise and set and the moon run her course, but they never find God. Scientists gaze at the sun, moon and stars through the most powerful telescopes and study cosmic and ultra-violet rays that emanate from these bodies; but they are drifting farther and farther from God. I know it is said that the greatest scientists in the world believe in God. Do they believe in God or in a god?

I heard a modernist preacher in debate with Clarence Darrow say, "When Christ said, 'Lo, I come to do thy will, O God,' He meant that He would bring Himself into harmony with the forces of nature that brought Him into existence."

With these men God is the creative forces that bring things into existence.

I like to think of God as revealed in the Bible; the One that walked and talked with Adam in the Garden of Eden; the One who called Abram out of Ur of the Chaldees and whose friend Abram was; the One who met Jacob in the way; the One who talked face to face with Moses; the One whose tabernacle will be with men and who will dwell with them and be their God, and they shall be His people. And I like to think of a loving heavenly Father who "shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." The forces of nature cannot do these things; but they can rend and tear and send forth miasmas and fevers and reduce things to dust, but can never restore them again.

No, the study of nature has never brought anyone to have faith in God. Only when the Bible is taken to the Indian and the Japanese have they been brought to see God in nature. The Bible is the binoculars through which they look and see that the heavens declare the glory of God.

I wish to quote one scripture to clinch the foregoing argument: "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," and not by looking at the heavens or studying the stars.

THE CHURCH OF GOD

---

THE following paragraphs contain part of a high school girl's questions concerning the Church of God as answered by Dr. J. W. Lent of the Niagara Falls, New York, congregation.

What is the belief back of baptism and christening? Baptism means immersion. Their tenets do not include sprinkling, as the members hold that one must come to an age of reason before one can live the new life. The ceremony of christening is not held.

Do they especially celebrate any one holiday? As a rule programs are presented on Christmas and Easter as observed by other denominations.

How is Lent kept outside of the regular services? It is not regarded, except for the final service at Easter.

Does the faith keep any fast or feast days? No.

Does the church sponsor testimonial meetings? If a member is moved to express his gratitude or thankfulness toward the Creator, he may so express himself at the informal gatherings, but generally emotionalism is frowned upon. Inward convictions of the heart are too deep for mere noise and emotion.

Do the people get very emotional and go around saying, "Amen," when anything moral is said? Not in this church, and I am sure the other churches do not sponsor it.

When one is baptized or immersed into the "New Life," as it is termed, it does not mean that he is a member of the organic Church of God especially, but that he enters into membership in that great body of men and women who are sincere believers in Christ and are trying to live after the precepts of the Master.

There is another denomination using or having the title, "The Church of God," their headquarters being at Anderson, Ind.; but they believe in faith healing, also in healing by prayer and in getting the Holy Spirit, while they think that under the Spirit they can speak in tongues.

THE TESTIMONY OF SCIENCE

By H. A. Sheets

ON THURSDAY forenoon, June 15, we listened to a program, "The Voice of Experience," which was coming to us over radio station WJSV (Alexandria). It proved of unusual interest to us, as the speaker was telling of a new ray discovered rather recently. This ray has the power to restore life when death is a matter of but a few hours. He told how one dog had been restored as many as thirteen times, and (if we heard correctly) he stated that several hundred persons had already been restored to life. In several cases death certificates had already been issued to the persons restored. As far as medical science could determine, death had been actual and complete in each case where one was raised.

The speaker stated that a number of clergymen had been invited to witness the operation of the ray. Every raised person was closely questioned regarding his experiences while dead. The clergymen wanted to know whether they had been "more alive than ever" and whether they had been conscious of anything whatsoever. Each one, without an exception, stated that death was like a deep sleep and that they experienced no joy or sorrow, pleasure or pain; in fact, they had no feeling whatsoever. A lawyer asked the speaker if this would indicate or prove that there was no heaven or hell at death. He replied, "No," and stated further that people often have dreams which they are unable to recall upon returning to consciousness.

With all of this proof we are wondering why people will continue to disbelieve the Word of God when it repeatedly speaks of death as a "sleep." (See John 11:11, 13; Acts 7:60; 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18.) The Bible states further that "the dead know not any thing. . . also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished."—Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:4.

HEARD AT GENERAL CONFERENCE

out to us the fact that throughout the history of the world there have been different periods when one or more of the perilous conditions enumerated by Paul were present. But he declared that we may with assurance know ourselves to be living in the last days because we find every one of these alarming conditions present now. Not one of these above tells the story, but when we find all of them prevalent, it is time we awoke out of sleep. "The world's greatest economists have said that our civilization is crumbling, that the world cannot stand another such depression. We see a social and moral breakdown all about us," the speaker averred.

But an anchor sure and steadfast has been given us in God's Word, and when we see these things coming upon us we need the encouragement that Paul found therein. We catch a glimpse of a day beyond the period of conflict, a day of universal and individual peace, a day of hope and confidence.

Coming from the lips of a thinker and an educator, the admonition of Bro. MacLeod to keep our faith firm unto the end despite the storms of doubt and unbelief, carried much weight with all present. Remaining firm we shall be able to say with the Apostle Paul, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

FOCAL POINT OF THE AGES

"THE COMING of our Lord is the Focal Point of the Ages," was the theme of Bro. G. Eldred Marsh, pastor at Oregon, Ill., on Sunday evening, August 6. He judged Christ's second coming to be an event of more importance to the world from a national as well as an individual standpoint than any other event of history. In fact, it marks the converging line of history.

"God in His wisdom has planned for the coming of His Son," Bro. Marsh declared, "through whom should flow all of His blessings. It is the focal point of all faith, all hope, all desire. No announcement is so pregnant with hope as that of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ back to this earth again."

The speaker then proceeded to show the necessity of Christ's coming, the reality, and the nearness of that event. First, he said, it is a divine necessity, a human, political, social, and spiritual necessity. It was conceived in the plan of God ages before the world had heard of Jesus Christ, and His word shall not return unto Him void. All phases of life demand it, for we know God never issues a simple mandate that is unnecessary.

"True, the Master is with all His sincere followers today in spirit," Bro. Marsh said, "but the world needs to realize that there is a Man of love and tenderness alive today, who looks with pity on the hearts of men. We need Him in order to perceive the heart of the Father, His goodness, His greatness, His justice. We need some one who can understand youth and gratify the cravings of their lives in a legitimate way. The world needs the only One who can bring peace to the troubled nations, for word comes to us that all peace conferences have failed and the problems before them are lacking of solution.

"The coming of the Lord of lords is also a spiritual necessity," he continued. "The church has forgotten the message of Jesus and His apostles, forgotten the only gospel by which men and women can be saved. Men have been fleeing to the church to find relief from the perplexities of life, but the Bible is not an open Book in many of the churches. Adversity has driven men into the portals of the church, and its doors have been thrown wide."

Bro. Marsh likened conditions in the world religiously today to those in the time of Christ, when the Pharisees, instead of the truth, taught the commandments of men. There is power in the gospel of Jesus Christ, but there is no power in the philosophies of men. Nothing save the coming of the Master can rescue man from the depths of sin to which he has descended.

"When we contemplate yonder cemetery," Bro. Marsh said, "we realize that Christ's coming is more precious than any other event. Our loved ones shall rouse out of their slumber. Our entire hope of meeting them once more and clasping their hands lies in His coming and kingdom."

The speaker concluded with the lines of the beautiful poem entitled, "The Coming of His Feet."

ALIVE YET DEAD

THE speaker of Tuesday evening, August 8, was Bro. H. A. Sheets of Maurertown, Virginia, who found his text in Revelation 3:1, "Thou hast a name that thou livest and art dead."

"Was God looking down to our day?" he queried. "Could such an indictment be pronounced over any church now? I verily believe that to be the case—a church having all the appearance of being alive, yet, as far as God is concerned, it is dead. People today are attracted by many things—prophecy, a great program, enthusiasm, entertainment. But nevertheless they are dead as far as faith in God is concerned.

"The people of Jesus' time," Bro. Sheets said, "felt that they were the chosen people. But they missed the real truth of the law, and Jesus called them a generation of vipers. They had the appearance of being alive and yet were dead. The words of Luke 3:7, and Matthew 5:20, show us what Jesus thought of them.

"We must be alive in fact and deed if we would gain salvation," the speaker warned us. "Salvation depends on what we do from the day of baptism forward. If we do not guard our conduct God will count us as dead, though we may have the appearance of being alive, God will forget the past if we arise to walk in newness of life."

Bro. Sheets enumerated several features of which we as a church might well be proud. For the Church of God has strongly influenced religious thought. Not many years ago we were the only ones who preached the second coming of Christ. There is hardly a denomination today that does not preach it. The return of Israel was once laughed at, but many now proclaim that truth, though not so many as should. As another teaching that is due to our influence, Bro. Sheets named the destruction of the wicked. One of our faith, Bro. Benjamin Wilson, is the author of the Emphatic Diaglott, that most valuable work so widely used among teachers and ministers of the gospel.

"But let us not live on the past or we will receive the awful condemnation pronounced in our text, that of being alive and yet dead," he counseled us. "I speak to you as representatives of seventeen states and Canada. Go back home and tell your people we must stand for certain fundamental truths laid down by Christ Himself. We must preach salvation in no other name than His. If we neglect that truth we are not teaching all that He commanded.

"If we stand upon these things and hold to them it will not be said of us that we are alive and yet dead in the sight of God," Bro. Sheets continued. "If we fail to warn people their blood will be upon our heads. We must show them God's warnings. He has placed the responsibility on every member of the Church of God, and the Master will require an accounting of us when He returns. May we be true to that trust."

THE VISION THAT SUSTAINS

ON Wednesday evening the message was brought to us most convincingly and appealingly by Bro. Sidney Magaw of the Brush Creek, Ohio, church; and his text was found in Proverbs 29:18, "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

"The things we look at determine what our characters become," was his opening sentence. The admonition of the Apostle Paul to look upon things that are lovely, things that are pure, true, of good report, was pointed out to us as being of much assistance in ordering our lives. Our attention was then directed to the several opportunities God has placed in our pathway whereby we may be uplifted and strengthened, in spite of trial and perplexity.

"Isaiah cautions us in 51:1 to look unto the rock from which we were hewn and to the pit whence we were taken. We were once willing to remain where we were, but now God is using us, and this fact should encourage us greatly," Bro. Magaw continued. "Let us look up often and see how the heavens declare God's glory. Let us direct our prayer to God in the morning as David did. We shall not perish if we have the vision we receive when we look up." We are encouraged to seek God at all times, not to wait until disaster overtakes us. Jesus Himself tells us if we seek we shall find, and if we knock, it shall be opened to us.

We are instructed as well to look straight on, to have a goal in mind and steer our course straight toward it. Bro. Magaw, in illustrating this point, took a lesson from the life of Paul, who said that he pressed forward toward the mark he had chosen, forgetting those things which were behind him.

Another "look" that we should have is the outward look, looking upon the fields about us. "Be attentive to every circumstance about you," Bro. Magaw enjoined us. "Seize every opportunity to do good, every chance to sow the good seed. No two of us have the same opportunity; your duty is different from mine. Let us be watchful that the Master may not come and find us sleeping. It may be our fault if some one near us does not accept the Lord."

The heavenward look was also considered by the speaker. Nothing will purify us so much as the upward vision, looking for the coming of the Savior. Our hearts are interwoven with the doctrine of His coming and with the hope of receiving an incorruptible body, a body fashioned like unto His glorious one at that time. If we keep this vision, we shall not perish.

At the conclusion of Bro. Magaw's sermon, three young girls came forward with the desire to answer the Master's call by obedience in baptism, and all assembled were rejoiced at their decision.

WHEN we think of Bereans, we always think of Acts 17:11: "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so."

There is a peculiar fact about the things of the Bible: it is impossible for one who believes them to keep them to himself. He has an urge to tell others. Go back to Andrew, the brother of James. After he had found Christ, his thought was to lead his brother to Him. So the young people of the Church of God should tell the news to others. Our neighbors need the "things" of Acts 17:11 as much as we do.

The world today is seeking the truth concerning life. No one has a better right than the Christian to go to his neighbors and say, "We have found the light." The world, proud of its knowledge, is seeking the light; and the Christian knows Jesus, the Light of the world. Paul explains the meaning of light in Ephesians 5:13.

Everyone has noticed the difference a little light makes. When one walks in the twilight, mysterious, frightening forms appear; but a flashlight's rays dispel any fears. Good things appear terrible in semidarkness, and sometimes the imperfections of horrible things are hidden by half-light. The Bereans are trying to spread the light.

Some people do not wish to be brought into the light because their actions are evil, for those who do evil hate the light. This is shown clearly by a happening in Omaha. There was a section of the city where the lighting was poor and which abounded in crime. The people appealed to the authorities for extra police forces. Instead of this, extra lights were installed. Immediately the crimes and misdeeds were reduced a great deal. Those who do evil refuse to come into the light, lest their evil deeds be made manifest.

When we have light, our daily life changes. Things look altogether different to us. Common everyday affairs are changed. "Shady" business deals no longer seem clever, but offensive. To the man of the world the depression seems terrible, but to the Christian in the light it is an opportunity to serve the Master, a sign to tell us of the nearness of the coming kingdom. We can turn the light around and focus it on ourselves. We see that we are committed to the service of Christ, that we are not our own master.

To the people of the world the earth is only a natural phenomenon, but to us it is a gift from God. To those out of the light the destiny of the inhabitants of the earth is a difficult social problem, but to us all people are individuals whom Christ died to save. To the world the church is rather peculiar. When we throw the light of the gospel on it, we see a group of people chosen for service. Our great Example, Christ, is to the world only a historical character at most. In the light He stands forth as the Son of God, sent to redeem the world. That is the light which the Berean society of the Church of God was organized to spread.

We are told in Matthew 5:14-16 to let our light shine and glorify our Father in heaven. The church organization is in the final analysis a candlestick to hold the light for the world.

When one goes on a dangerous road, one wants a bright light. On a smooth road this is not needed so much. Sometimes there is a place on our road that is rough, but we go on because we have the light. A brother's light is not so bright. Perhaps he follows us and stumbles. We often emphasize that we may do what we think right, but we sometimes forget that we must not do things that lead others astray. The Master died for all people, and there was rejoicing in heaven when one accepted Him; let us not destroy him by our pleasures. You may have light and liberty, but take heed lest you become a stumblingblock. Suppose we stood before the Master and had to answer for the fall of our brother. Let us hope we never have to do that. Paul says we should support the weak. If we wish to be kings and priests in the kingdom, we must prove ourselves worthy.

Sometimes we dim the light of the world by our conduct. If we hang useless ornaments on a candlestick, shadows are cast in which some one may stumble. In that case we would be responsible. We, the Bereans, have the light. We are doing a great work in spreading it, but sometimes we forget. Let us take advantage of our wonderful opportunity and hold high the light of the world so that the ways of all may be illuminated.

HELP ALONG THE WAY

THERE are so many fine things for us to enjoy at Bible school here at Oregon, Illinois, that today I am going to tell you about some of them. The first thing that comes to my mind, and that I know you would like very much to make, is a picture roll that Sr. Thayer has. You know, she is teaching the little tots, and she has about fifty of them in her class. They like the picture roll so much, and you who do not live near enough to attend Sunday school will like it especially.

Take a heavy cardboard or light wooden box about the size that quart fruit jars come in; cut off the covers and make two holes in one side and two holes in the opposite side near the ends. These are for the sticks to roll in, so have them fit your sticks nicely.

The pictures are made on part of a roll of wall paper, just as long as the pictures you want to use. Space your pictures each one the same distance apart. Now for your pictures you can get fifty-two pictures of the life of Jesus for thirty-three cents from David C. Cook, Elgin, Ill., or you can get a set on the life of Paul, eight pictures for fifteen cents. You can paste these pictures on your roll, or you can copy them if you are good at drawing, or you can transfer them with a duplicator if you know anyone who has one; also you might trace them with carbon paper. If you like, you may use any pictures that you have at home, or ask your friends for some.

Now fasten the ends of the paper on two nice smooth sticks for the rolls; roll up the pictures on one stick; insert the sticks in the holes you have made in the box; fix some little drapes of crepe paper at the sides, and, behold, you have a moving picture machine all of your very own!

I hope these directions are clear to you. If they are not, write to me and ask me any questions you want to, and I will try to answer. I know you'll have lots of fun making this picture roll, and you'll learn so much from it. Be sure and write me telling me you have made one, and I'll put your name on this page.

The lessons, you know, beginning October 1, are about the Apostle Paul, so if you send for the pictures of his life and make your box, you will be all ready for the new quarter. Several in a Sunday school class might meet with their teacher and together make a picture roll for use in their classroom. Each quarter you can have different pictures to insert. So be sure and use a good strong box of heavy cardboard or light wood.

Another nice thing at the Exhibit is a large picture illustrating the different words in the Lord's prayer made by the children of the Blanchard, Mich., Bible school. In addition they have illustrated this little "Thank you" prayer:

Thank you, God, for the flowers so sweet;
Thank you for the food we eat;
Thank you for the birds that sing;
Thank you, God, for everything.

Something else you would enjoy very much is an electrical map of Palestine made by Sr. Elton's class of intermediate girls in our Cleveland, Ohio, Sunday school. If you point with one pointer to a certain name in the list at the side, then touch the thumb tack with the other pointer that locates that spot on the map, a light will flash. But if you point to Jerusalem with one pointer and touch the spot with the other pointer where Nazareth is, you will not succeed in flashing on the light. That would be good map drill, wouldn't it?

And now I must tell you about some more Bible Scrapbooks we have here. Charles Timothy Pearson, age 8, and Margaret, age 6, of Troy, Ohio, have such nice books. Charles Timothy's JOY verses are very good, also his drawing for "Gifts for Jesus." Margaret's, "Feeding the Five Thousand," and "A Good Habit," are especially nice.

Then we have two other very fine Scrapbooks, from Malcena Catherine Cleek and George Kime Cleek of Warm Springs, Va. Malcena has three very nice drawings in her book, "Preparing the Way of the Lord," "A Busy Day," and "Three Crosses." George has two extra good lessons on "The Storm and Calm on Galilee" and "Preparing the Way of the Lord."

Now, all of you boys and girls who read this page, begin to save your work; do the lessons each week given here; get all the pictures you can illustrating the lessons. Then keep them for the Exhibit next year at Oregon—unless we do not have a conference because Jesus should come back in the meantime. I think that would be the only reason we would not have one.

In the meantime, let us all work for Jesus, big and little, just the best we can. You know by working our best always grows better, and Jesus will be pleased with that. Who will be the first one to make a picture roll?

LESSON 9. — August 27, 1933

SAUL

1 Samuel 9 to 11, and 15

Devotional Reading: Psalm 40:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice.—1 Samuel 15:22.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Saul: His Strength and Weakness.

Aim: To teach that disobedience to God is a serious sin and obedience necessary to attain the highest success in life.

I. Saul Disobeys God. (1 Sam. 15:13-15.) Saul, like all succeeding kings of Israel and of Judah, was but the agent of Jehovah who was the supreme Ruler of the nation. All that the king did was to be done as God ordered. God had commanded Saul to utterly destroy a very sinful race of people and all that they possessed, lest Israel be led into idolatry. But upon demand of the Israelites he reserved the best of the cattle taken from the enemy for a sacrifice, apparently not remembering that these animals were accounted as unholy by the Lord, and therefore altogether unacceptable to Him. No matter how righteous the purpose in view may be, God will not accept and bless a gift to Him that is the fruitage of sin.

II. Saul Tries to Justify Himself. (Vv. 16-21.) Saul's sin consisted as much perhaps in his attempt to justify himself at the expense of others and thus evade personal responsibility as it did in his disobedience. David, on the other hand, was quick to acknowledge his iniquity before God (Psa. 51:1-4). Saul had to be forced to make such an acknowledgment of guilt. Saul was possessed of certain praiseworthy qualities (1 Sam. 10:9, 10) but they were more than counterbalanced by his weakness of will in submitting to the demand of the people.

III. Saul Seeks in Vain for Pardon. (Vv. 22-26.) God's merciful spirit "shall not always strive with man," and there will come a time when the disobedient, like Esau of old, will be able to find "no place for a change of mind in his father, though he (seek) it diligently with tears."—Heb. 12:17, A. R. V. By no means could Saul be reinstated in the favor of God. His rejection was final, although he continued to exercise kingly authority over Israel until his tragic death occurred on the field of battle. (1 Sam. 31:1-13.) The experience of Saul presents an impressive warning against disobedience to God, and suggests the reward of obedience.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Disobedient Saul: For nearly forty years Saul had ruled the children of Israel. He was chosen by God as king over Israel when Israel clamored for a king like the other nations. His reign had been quite successful, but he was gradually going toward the final climax—his fall. Well might the rulers of nations today take a leaf from the experience of Saul. God sent him on a mission. Neither the letter nor the spirit of the commission were carried out. Instead of fully carrying out the instructions of God, Saul spared the spoils of the victory and was going to use them in sacrificing to God. Securing anything contrary to the command of God cannot be made righteous by merely using it in God's service. An obedient use will not justify a disobedient gain. There is no excuse for disobedience.

Obedience Only: There is no substitute for obedience. There is only one thing that satisfies God and that is whole-hearted, true-hearted obedience. Rebellion against God is a great sin. To rebel against His Word is to rebel against Him. He holds His Word in great reverence. "For thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name."—Psa. 138:2. Saul rejected the Word of the Lord and in so doing robbed himself of many of the temporal blessings of life. Moses and Aaron did likewise at Meribah, and their unbelief became a barrier between them and the blessings that would have been theirs to enjoy had they been permitted to enter the promised land. It is undoubtedly true today that we separate ourselves from many of God's blessings, even some of the choicest blessings of life, because we reject in part at least the clear and plain-spoken Word of God. No matter how much we sacrifice and give to the Lord of our substance, unless we obey Him and His Word in our actions of life, we cannot expect to have His approval resting upon us.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

From the beginning God has required obedience. Disobedience brings a penalty. Saul lost his kingdom by disobedience (1 Samuel 15:23).

There is a future kingdom in which Christians are promised to be kings and priests, for we read in Revelation 20:6 that "blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Revelation 5:10: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

Let us by obedience make our calling and election sure, that we may be accepted of the Father and not, like Saul, lose our promised positions as kings and priests.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Strength and Weakness of Saul

So much of the account of Saul deals with his disobedience to God's commands and with his consuming hatred for David that we are inclined to think mainly of his weaknesses. But he did have some elements of strength and nobility. At the first Saul seemed to recognize his weakness, and he did not appear to want to become king. He hesitated about accepting such great responsibility. When he did accept, he entered upon his reign with vigor. He found the people under foreign dominion and left them free. He met with considerable internal opposition in the early part of his reign, but he extended great clemency to them who opposed.

Saul so endeared himself to the people that many continued to fight for his house after his death, even in opposition to God's anointed king, David. It may be that God foresaw this great love for Saul and his house and allowed Saul's sons, including the magnanimous Jonathan, to be killed so that there would be less bloodshed in Israel when His selection, David, came to the throne.

Saul's great weakness seemed to be his desire to make a great name for himself and to leave a son upon the throne. To this end he courted public favor even to the extent of risking God's wrath. When he learned of God's decree regarding his house, he developed a very disagreeable disposition that made him heartless. He sought David's life, tried to kill his son Jonathan, and did kill eighty-six priests of the house of Eli and all of the population of Nob. No wonder God completely forsook him.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: Saul Disobeys God.

God was always willing to help the Israelites each time they needed help. But He usually asked that they do something in return.

In this lesson the Israelites, with Saul as their king, had gone to fight with the Amalekites. God had told them to destroy all the people, all their camels, all their cattle, and all their sheep, in fact, everything that belonged to them.

But Saul did not obey God. He did not kill the king. He saved all the best of the sheep, cattle, and everything and brought them home with him.

Samuel came to Saul and said, "What does this mean? Didn't the Lord tell you to destroy everything that belonged to the Amalekites?"

Now what excuse do you think Saul gave for not doing as God had said? Here is what he said to Samuel, "Why, I brought these sheep and cattle home with me to offer sacrifices."

Samuel said, "Don't you think God would much rather you had obeyed, than to offer animal sacrifices to Him? Yes, indeed, He would."

God wants us to obey, also, so why make excuses when we know what we should do?

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

Western Nebraska State Conference, at Iowa Conference at Waterloo

August 22 to 27
Virginia Bible School and Conference at Maurertown, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The pastor and family have been enjoying the association and inspiration of the General Conference and Bible school. It was our privilege to present the idea of the "Ten Dollar Loan to the Grand Rapids church" to the ministerial gathering and also to the General Conference, and the hearty endorsement from both these groups was very encouraging. If a sufficient number of people are willing to lend money to the church in amounts from ten dollars up, at four and one-half percent interest, receiving notes to mature as desired in from two to ten years, we shall proceed at once to enlarge our building sufficiently to take care of the attendance.

We expect to be back home for the men's meeting Saturday, Aug. 19, and to fill the pulpit the next day.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

WILL YOU LEND TEN DOLLARS?

The largest field, and most responsive, for church and Sunday school activity that has been opened by our people in the United States is the one at Grand Rapids, Mich. Average attendance last quarter exceeded three hundred, with building and facilities sufficient for only a little more than one third that number.

The members of the church are under the load whole-heartedly and enthusiastically, but in order to proceed with building operations more than three thousand dollars must be borrowed. This is no request for donations, but an appeal to everyone who can spare ten dollars or more to lend it to the church now. The church will issue to you a note to mature in from two to ten years, will pay you interest at 4 1-2% every six months, and on maturity will pay the full loan back to you. It is a safer and more remunerative place to put money than in your bank or in stocks and bonds, and the gospel will be taught to many by your help. Send your money to the treasurer, Harold W. Simpson, at Grandville, Mich., Rt. 1; or you may communicate with the pastor, F. E. Siple, 135 Pennell, S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich. A properly executed note will be sent on receipt of your money, interest to begin November 1, 1933.

Will you help all you can—and encourage others?

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE

We wish again to call your attention to the Nebraska State Conference to be held at Holbrook, August 20 to 27. Norman J. MacLeod of Los Angeles, California, is to be the principal visiting minister. We cordially invite all who can to convene with us and enjoy Brother MacLeod's sermons and Bible lessons. Those who attended the General Conference are already assured of their interest and value. Brother MacLeod will be assisted by Grover Gordon, pastor of the Church of God at Holbrook.

Carol Wilson, Secretary.

A GREAT CONFERENCE CLOSES

What was without a doubt the greatest General Conference the Church of God ever held was brought to a glorious conclusion Sunday night, F. L. Austin giving the final inspiring message to the large congregation that almost from the first day had filled the Oregon church to capacity. More than five hundred were actually registered by the secretary of the Bible school, and we are safe in saying that at the very least another hundred were present but escaped the recorder's pencil. Nearly twenty states and provinces were represented, and the ministers present numbered more than a score.

The expression was frequently heard about the grounds, "This is the most helpful Bible school and conference I have ever attended." One brother from the far South who enjoyed the annual meeting for the first time this year said, "If the Lord permits, I shall never miss another!"

The sermons, while widely varied as to subject, were uniformly of a spiritually uplifting and encouraging nature. They dealt with the blessed promises of God which find their fulfillment both in this life and in the life to come. The mysteries of God were laid bare concerning His eternal purposes for man, and all were urged to press forward more energetically and faithfully in their effort to advance the glad tidings of Jesus Christ throughout the world in these closing days of time.

The conference held by the ministers was both interesting and profitable, and its results we feel will be far-reaching and helpful to the entire church. The actual nature of their work we leave for the secretary and the various committees to report later.

The closing day of the conference saw ten young people take on the name of Jesus Christ in baptism. That service in itself was worth going many miles to witness; but as George B. Alldridge has promised to give us a review of his impressions of that service, we omit further reference to it here.

Altogether the conference just closed was a real feast where God presided at the table and provided the strengthening spiritual food and drink.

TO CALIFORNIA

We have been having a whirl of classes and sermons till we feel that we have enough inspiration to last for several years to come. To hear so many good sermons from so many able young ministers, not to mention the older ones, is indeed a most unusual pleasure. Our only regret is that the people of California cannot enjoy them with us. We were thrilled to witness the confession and baptism of several young people during the conference and were privileged to receive the confession of three of them ourselves. After sojourning in Nebraska until near the end of this month, we expect to take our journey home again, and anticipate a great year of work in Los Angeles.

Norman John MacLeod.

BAPTIZED AT GENERAL CONFERENCE

The following young people were inducted into the body of Christ through confession of faith and baptism at the hands of the pastor of the Oregon church before a capacity audience Sunday, August 13, 1933:

Misses Thelma Hardacre, Lanark, Ill.; Ruth Goekler, Marshall, Ill.; Edith Hendrix, Martinsville, Ill.; Dorothy Nedrow, Oregon, Ill.; Mary Margaret Vernet, Pierceton, Ind.; Ada Graham, 1943 Hodiament Ave., St. Louis, Mo.; Elizabeth Montross, Troy, Ohio; and Doree DeNise, Rock Springs, Wyo.; Messrs. James Nedrow, Oregon, Ill.; and Charles Smith, Forrester, Ill.

May God's blessing attend these young people and keep them faithful to their Lord until He comes!

BRUMFIELD, KENTUCKY

On Wednesday, July 26, Bro. J. H. Anderson of Michigantown, Ind., with his son Harold and two daughters, Maggie and Pearl, arrived at the home of Bro. B. F. Skeels and on the same evening began a meeting continuing over Sunday, July 30.

Six sermons were given at the church, all consisting of prophecy. On Wednesday evening the subject was "Value of Prophecy," Thursday evening's subject was "The Nations in Prophecy," the following subjects were "The Antichrist," "The Burning Bush," "The Seventy Weeks Given to Israel." Sunday evening the meeting came to a close, the last subject being "The Battle of Armageddon and the coming of Christ."

In each of these lessons Bro. Anderson pointed out how the nations of the world are in trouble and how fast we are approaching the time of the end and how we need the return of our Lord. Many scriptures were read and proved that prophecy is fast fulfilling.

The Methodists were holding their annual meeting; however, meetings at the Church of God were very well attended, and attention was good. At the close of the Saturday evening service, two young ladies, daughters of Bro. and Sr. Bert Bottom, came forward for baptism; and on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. they were baptized into Christ. After baptismal service a number gathered at the home of Bro. Skeels, where the Lord's supper was made ready and where these two young sisters, Claudia and Floreme Bottom, received the right hand of fellowship. The church at Brumfield is considering having Bro. Anderson with us every other month as long as the weather permits, but we have not yet made any definite plans. Quincy Carpenter.

COMMUNICATION

I take this opportunity of dropping you a line after receiving my paper, which reminded me that the time for which I paid expired sometime the fore part of July. My chief source of comfort, outside of the blessed Word of God and my ever-present Lord, is the paper.

I certainly appreciate the paper, as I do not believe there is a soul in all this great city (Everett, Wash.) that seems to be a believer of the gospel, and they scoff at me when I present to them the truth as it is in Christ. A Mr. Halley from the East, who gave a week's recitation from the Bible and who says he can recite the whole Bible by heart, after reciting the covenants of promise, laid special emphasis on the covenant with David; and speaking about Jesus' preaching the kingdom of God, said none of the apostles understood the kingdom. They thought it was to be a political affair just like the kingdoms of this world. They did not understand that it was to be a spiritual kingdom, as Jesus said, in the heart. Surely David could say to him, "Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant: thou hast profaned his crown by casting it to the ground."—Psalm 89:39. What would become of David's throne and kingdom that was to be restored? and of God's promise that it should be no more until He came whose right it is (Ezek. 21:25-27; Amos 9:11)?

M. W. Perrine.

GREETINGS FROM SOME WHO ATTENDED GENERAL CONFERENCE

Sr. E. C. Railsback, of Los Angeles, California, whom all were glad to welcome after an absence of some time, considers this by far the largest assemblage of those of like precious faith it has ever been her privilege to attend. "The discussions in the ministerial meetings and in all classes," she says, "are carried on in fine Christian spirit. The Exhibit exceeded my expectations, and the kitchen and dining room are being managed very efficiently. May all return to their respective fields of labor with more scriptural knowledge, better ideas for promoting and carrying on their work, and more zeal and earnestness in the Master's vineyard."

Dear old Brother Booth, whose inspiring words are often found on the pages of The Herald, tells us that he has attended every conference for the past thirty-seven or eight years, except one, says, "I do not hesitate in expressing the opinion that the present session is the banner, not only in the number of attendants, but in the spirit of unity and brotherly love."

An earnest admonition is given us by Sr. Edna Brewer of the Brush Creek, Ohio, church, that "we, as parents, recognize the dire need of consecrated lives and training of our children so that they will place their faith in God in these perilous days." To which we all echo, "Amen."

Sr. Mabell Eaton Bell, of La Crosse, Wis., who with her husband, Bro. H. S. Bell, and sons, Merle and Guilford, are always most welcome attendants at conference, is especially appreciative of the privilege. She wishes us to know that "it would be impossible to point out one part as more outstanding than the rest. Mere words could not express the joy and satisfaction of meeting with others of our faith and hearing and learning from our ministers, particularly for the isolated."

Sr. Jessie M. B. Kauffman, whose friendship we so happily formed at this meeting, her first visit to Oregon, calls this "a beautiful and inspiring place among God's trees and streams to assemble ourselves in conference, mingling with those of the household of faith." We hope she enjoyed herself so much she will want to come again next year.

Here we have the greetings of a young sister and faithful contributor to all activities, Opal Robbins, of Riviera, Texas: "It has indeed been an inspiration to each one of us to be able to attend the various sessions of the Bible school and conference. The harmony and the cooperation demonstrated by members present are very commendable. We hope that this same unity may be enjoyed in the churches throughout the country."

Bro. and Sr. W. F. Hoskins of Eden Valley, Minn., express themselves as more than pleased to be able to attend General Conference again. "We feel the wonderful love and the manifestation of the Spirit that is shown in this body of God's believing ones. May we all continue faithful till our Lord's return," is their message to us.

Bro. Ezra C. Railsback, of Los Angeles, whose presence among us again was much appreciated, called this conference "the best ever." He noted a very decided spiritual uplift.

This is the greeting from Sr. Mary E. Elton, one of the very efficient junior teachers in Golden Rule Sunday School of Cleveland, Ohio: "We certainly have enjoyed meeting with a goodly company of God's people at this General Conference at Oregon, Ill. 'Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.' Psalm 133:1."

The pastor at St. Cloud, Minn., and his good wife, Bro. and Sr. A. E. Hoskins, send greetings to all from the loyal and consecrated group at their home church. "The splendid fellowship and instructive messages are much appreciated," they tell us. "And we are glad of that Abrahamic faith. We cherish greatly this association with God's children."

A new visitor to General Conference and one whose acquaintance we prize very much is our young sister, Margaret Bylsma, of Hammond, La. She says, "The greatest inspiration of our conference to me lies in the wonderful demonstration of the unifying force of our faith. The mingling together in close association of such a number, drawn from widely separated sections of our country, of those who would otherwise be strangers one to another, is most valuable. To be one in Christ, as was His desire for us, and to knit these ties still closer in the family of God—this we should find easier to feel and to manifest to others because of such meetings."

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

National Bible Institution

Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Among the Iowa group we were pleased to see Bro. O. J. Allard, who was present for a few days.

Two of the young ladies baptized at conference, Misses Elizabeth Montross and Doree DeNise, are grandchildren of Bro. J. E. Robins of Los Angeles, Calif., who for many years before his removal to the West was an active supporter of the work in Iowa.

Much appreciation was shown for Norman John MacLeod's lessons in fulfilled prophecy, which were based on both profane and biblical history. No branch of learning is more helpful to the student of prophecy than is history.

We were delighted to have with us George B. Alldridge of Cleveland, Ohio, whose regular contributions to The Restitution Herald have proved so interesting to our many readers. Later Bro. Alldridge will give us a resume of his impressions of the conference.

A group of men remained over Monday to help our local workers in putting a new roof on the barn at Golden Rule Home.

Ministers at the General Conference reported a widespread and growing interest in the study of prophecy. This is to be expected at this time. When human efforts fail, men naturally turn to God to learn the meaning of the conditions that sin has brought into the world. The Lord is coming!

One of the safest investments that can be made at the present time according to many thoughtful business men of our experience are loans to churches for the advancement of building programs. Moral as well as business integrity of the highest order stands behind these enterprises. As you read the suggestion made in this issue by the church at Grand Rapids observe that these brethren are not asking for contributions, but for interest-bearing loans to carry forward their building program.

HUMAN OPINION SAYS:

1. "No one believes in the second coming of Christ any more."
2. "If He does come, it will not be a personal coming."
3. "But Jesus is now spiritual. We surely cannot expect Him to come back to this earth literally."
4. "The world must be converted before Christ will return."
5. "People aren't ready for His coming yet. They are still too wicked."
6. "Death is the Lord's coming, for the believer."
7. "Christ has come already, secretly, and is now present."
8. "Well, I don't think the Lord's coming will be in our day."

THE WORD OF GOD SAYS:

1. "If I go. . . I will come again and receive you unto myself."—Jesus, in John 14:3.
2. "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout."—Paul, in 1 Thessalonians 4:16.
3. "This same Jesus . . . shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Angels, in Acts 1:11.
4. "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"—Jesus, in Luke 18:8.
5. "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man."—Jesus, in Luke 17:26-30.
6. "We shall not all sleep (die), but we shall all be changed."—Paul, in 1 Corinthians 15:51.
7. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him."—John, in Revelation 1:7.
8. "In such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—Jesus, in Matthew 24:44.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE MASSES

By S. J. Lindsay

IN A recent issue of The Literary Digest (October 29) are two articles, one entitled, "America Debunked," and the other, "The Modern Woman's Rediscovery of Religion," which gives the reader some idea of the view generally taken by religious people if one is taken at all.

Among other things the first article says, "America from a Ford—see it, as a literary traveler did, and find believers if you can." Upon an examination of some five hundred people, the author found one man who said, "My church, my God, is a prop to me." "He was sincere, and I believe him." "The others, too, were sincere, and I believe them. Nowhere did I encounter a genuine religious feeling. Everywhere I encountered skepticism, distrust, or amusement, at the beliefs of our fathers." And he came to the conclusion "that Christianity is hardly to be considered at all as a force in American life, in directing its currents or its desires."

In the other article, by Helen Cody Baker, she begins her article as follows:

"I can't think what keeps her going!"

"Perhaps she has a religion."

"Oh, no! It can't be that. She's too intelligent!"

"They were discussing a woman whose gaiety and courage had withstood circumstances that would crush the ordinary mortal and had commanded the respect and affection of the entire community." Further it is said of Mrs. Cody, who had suggested the possibility that religion had something to do for the woman in question, that "soon she discovered that most of the enlightened women of her community unconsciously assumed, as had her fireside friend, that religion and intelligence had nothing in common." After she had brought them to the point where they cared to say anything about religion, they asked her frankly: "What is your religion, that you care enough about it to defend it?"

Mrs. Cody's defense, given all the strength it deserves, is weakness itself. In answer to the question, "Why are you a Christian rather than a follower of some other teacher?" she replies in part as follows: "And because I believe that when the story of His life is stripped of every superstition—every miracle, even—though I do not take it upon myself to deny His miracles—enough is left of fineness, of courage, of steadfastness and of hope to make Him the greatest of our teachers."

That there is a general trend in the direction of infidelity today there can be little doubt, but the kind of Christians who defend Christianity by apologizing for it can do little to stem the tide. Yet this is the kind of Christians who today make up the list of church memberships, thus forming high-toned moral and social clubs.—The Bible Advocate.

NUMBER 47

General Conference Report

THE most widely representative and most largely attended General Conference ever held by the Church of God met at Oregon, Illinois, August 1 to 13, 1933. It would be difficult to enumerate the many distinguishing features of this great gathering of God's people that places it on a level above any similar meeting in the past. While we may not say that the spirit of unity was more noticeable than it was last year, nevertheless, harmony was observable throughout all sessions, both those of a purely spiritual nature and those which were devoted to the transaction of business. It was this spirit of unity and of recognized fellowship that made it possible for the delegates from the various states to complete their task of planning the work for the new conference year in so short a time and in such a satisfactory manner.

In justice to all who took part in the conference it should be clearly stated that much credit is due to the spirit developed in the Bible school before the beginning of the General Conference business sessions. Because of the deep spiritual tone maintained in the Bible study classes those who afterward took part in the business affairs of the conference entered upon their work with the spiritual thought uppermost in their minds.

Without in any way seeking to prevent full and open discussion of any and all biblical subjects which anyone might wish to present to the general body, the afternoon sessions of the first week were, by general consent, given over to sermons. Each day the invitation was given for anyone to introduce subjects for free investigation by the entire conference. No one embraced the opportunity thus afforded, and so the time was otherwise profitably employed.

The first business session of the General Conference was called to order by President L. E. Conner at three o'clock on the afternoon of August 8, 1933. Following a period of devotion, the minutes of the last business session of the last conference were read and approved.

The president then called for the report of the treasurer, T. J. Ellis, which was read as follows:

Although covering a period of the greatest depression the country has ever known the financial statement of the treasurer was made more encouraging than could have been foreseen at the beginning of the year. Owing to the generous response made to the appeals of the board during the year the indebtedness of the Institution was appreciably reduced, and at the close of the period instead of showing an overdraft, as was the case last year, the treasurer had a small balance on hand.

In connection with the above report we give the following analysis of contributions covering the last four years, believing it will be of interest and encouragement to all concerned. (Please turn to Page Six)

The Editor's Prayer

WE THANK Thee, our Father, for Jesus Christ who has taught us the way of salvation. We thank Thee for the assurance that the reign of sinful men will soon be over, and Thou shalt send Him of whom the prophets wrote to be King of kings and Lord of lords over all the earth. Lead us, we pray, to believe the gospel, to respond gladly to its appeal, and to live in accordance with its demands that we may have a place in that kingdom of glory. Amen.

"Seek Ye First —"

THE GOD who set the great astronomical clock going in the heavens and timed it with such exactitude that it does not vary the fraction of a minute in a thousand years is obviously a God of order. He is a measurer of time. With God "to every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven." Because this is true, men are able to plan their work in advance. The farmer may plow his fields and sow his grain with the assurance that "while the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." Time and order are fundamental laws established by God and revealed both in Nature and in Revelation.

As we study God's dealings with man with reference to his redemption from sin, we are impressed with the orderly manner in which all things are arranged. The conditions of salvation which provide the stepping stones that lead to life in the eternal kingdom of God are placed in logical sequence in their relation to each other. One requirement follows naturally after another, each step on the way leading onward and upward toward God.

The element of time enters into the divine plan as definitely as does that of direction. All is planned and must be carried out on schedule. The second or the third step may not be taken before the first, and the desired destination reached. Each must be taken in its prescribed order. No deviation as to order or direction is permitted. He who attempts to climb up by some other way brands himself as "a thief and a robber."

When our Lord commanded, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," He laid down a rule that may not be disregarded and salvation obtained. The kingdom of God is the great incentive to salvation. It comprises the central theme of the gospel. Its nature, location, and purpose include all rewards held out by the Lord for faithful service. The peace, the joy, the assurance which men crave in this life and which God alone can give are contingent upon an intelligent faith in "the things pertaining to the kingdom of God."

And so the Master said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God . . . and all these things shall be added unto you." That is the divine order. The heart of the gospel, which reveals as nothing else can do the heart of God, must first be discovered and understood; then all other blessings will follow in its train.

Throughout the New Testament, both in the teaching of Jesus and of the apostles, the same order is maintained. The first public message of our Lord had to do with the kingdom (Mark 1:13-15). It was not confidence nor trust in God, it was not prayer nor worship nor consecration that Jesus preached as initial conditions of salvation, but faith in the gospel of the kingdom of God! That must come before all else.

When "Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them," it was apparently "the things concerning the kingdom of God" that he first instilled within their minds; these things constituted the truth that saves, the "power of God" to save men and women from sin. Nothing but the gospel can do that. Prayer cannot accomplish it. Faith in the being and goodness of God alone cannot do it. Nothing but the "glad tidings of the kingdom" which Jesus is coming to establish on this earth possesses the divine regenerating power that brings life everlasting.

After such an understanding has been reached and is followed by repentance and baptism into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the believer is started on the Highway of Faith that leads to Life. Not until he has taken these divinely appointed steps is he able to start true spiritual development. Until he has complied with these first requirements of salvation, he is "without Christ" and "without God in the world." But after he has embraced the gospel and become "a new creature in Christ Jesus," he continues to "grow in grace and in . . . knowledge" and is led into the closest and most beautiful communion with his Lord.

GOD'S PROMISES ARE SURE

BROTHER C. E. Randall, the speaker of Thursday night, August 10, brought us the greetings of our sister churches in the East, Fonthill and Niagara Falls, and extended a cordial invitation to all to accept their hospitality when on a visit to the Falls. He referred to the name by which the Oregon organization is known in the community, "The Church of the Open Bible," and commended the custom of having the Bible always open upon the speaker's desk.

Bro. Randall's theme was the promise of God made to Abraham, repeated to Isaac and to Jacob, centering in God's Son and reaching down to us. He showed us how that promise was not limited to Abraham or to the scope of his eye, but reached even to the ends of the earth. We should be interested in learning what those promises are, for they are of vital concern to us; and if we understand them, we can understand the other promises of God.

"God created the earth for a purpose, and we find that purpose plainly stated in Isaiah 45:18," Bro. Randall said. "God planned that His offspring, created for His honor, should enjoy the earth. Throughout Psalm 37 we hear David voicing assurances that the meek, the faithful, the upright shall inherit the land and dwell in it forever.

"But we learn from Stephen's sermon in Acts 7 that in his lifetime Abraham did not realize the promise," the speaker continued. "A great valley of darkness intervened; and not only Abraham, but all his offspring, likewise fell at the hand of the enemy. God's reason for so doing is summed up in the last two verses of Hebrews 11, 'that they without us should not be made perfect.'

"One great event must take place to bring these countless numbers together," the speaker continued. "All will be compensated at the resurrection of the just. When that event takes place, the faithful of all ages will come into possession of the promised inheritance. For our God is a covenant-keeping God, and what He hath spoken, that will He perform."

Bro. Randall then painted a picture of the earth made new, freed from the curse, the veil of sin lifted, and quoted the words of the Prophet Isaiah found in chapter thirty-five. He then exhorted us to be prepared for that day when angelic joy will be shared by the saints of all ages and the shekinah glory of God will shine over all.

LET THE LORD BE YOUR FEAR

ON FRIDAY evening we enjoyed a fine musical program given by the pupils of the primary and intermediate departments, after which Bro. MacLeod brought us a brief message from the words of Isaiah found in chapter eight, verse thirteen.

"Throughout all the land of Israel there was a great deal of trouble because of the armies of Assyria," he began. "The northern kingdom had ceased to exist as a separate nation, and enemies had swept over the land, bringing distress over all Israel. The Prophet Isaiah had warned them that the king of Assyria would come against them, leaving Israel as a small island in the midst of a storm. But he tells them to let the Lord of hosts be their fear.

"What? Not afraid of the most cruel nation of all ancient times? No! Sanctify the Lord God, he tells them, and He shall be for a hiding place and a sanctuary."

Bro. MacLeod then applied Isaiah's words to our own lives. We see today the gathering of many clouds, and we may have the Lord God for a hiding place during the tempest if we will. Just as God was ready to be a sanctuary for Israel, so He will be for us if we will seek Him.

"But Judah did not fear her God," the speaker continued. "She feared the hosts of Assyria. Those foreign countries had made her land a pathway, laid it waste except for a small portion around Jerusalem; and Israel feared her enemies more than she did the Lord.

"Put yourself in the place of Israel. If you saw a vast army approaching, you would tremble, wondering what that army might do. Israel's experience should be a lesson for us. We should sanctify the Lord of hosts, fear Him with a fear mingled with love, and He will be a refuge and a hiding place for us."

Bro. MacLeod then considered some of the excuses people make who delay in their service to God, saying they are not good enough. We are none of us good enough. None was good save Jesus Christ only, for all have fallen short. The ancient worthies all had some flaw in their characters, but their faith in God and their fear of Him remained firm. No, we are none of us good enough, but that is all the more reason why we should come to God for a safe hiding place.

Some say they want to enjoy more of the pleasures of the world, but the speaker showed us that the greatest pleasure is to be found in God's service. And he counseled us to forsake those things that would draw us away from God, to lay aside every weight which hinders our progress. Let us accept that refuge which God has offered.

In response to the invitation three young girls came forward for baptism at the close of Bro. MacLeod's convincing message.

THE KEYS OF THE KINGDOM

WE WERE privileged to hear Bro. A. E. Hoskins, of St. Cloud, Minnesota, on Saturday night, most of us for the first time. He took for his theme the answer of Jesus to Peter on the occasion of their conversation recorded in Matthew 16:15-19.

"We can see Peter as the Master asked him, 'Whom say ye that I am?' Peter, the old rugged fisherman, his very features showing forth his occupation, the sturdy Peter of Galilee, acknowledged Jesus Christ as the Son of God. Perhaps some may wonder what the Master meant when He said He would give him the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

"I am wondering if there is not a connection between Christ's answer to Peter and the words of John 1:14, 'The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us.' Jesus stood before Peter in the flesh; he had been under His guidance and teaching, and we can see the hand of God working in his life. A key is used for an express purpose—to unlock. And we find as we go on that Peter used the key and opened the way for many to enter the kingdom."

Bro. Hoskins then proceeded to show us how each one may use the key in preparation for that great day when the kingdom will be set up on the earth. Peter unlocked the door, opened the way for us, showed us how to acquire the gifts that will fit us to be partakers of that kingdom. He used the parable of the ten virgins to warn us not to be found sleeping when the Master comes to open the door of the kingdom to us.

"Jesus is the Key to the kingdom of God," he said. "Jesus, who suffered and died on Calvary, who was buried but rose again—He it is who will bring all the blessings of the kingdom to men. Let us all be watchful, for we know not the day nor the hour when our Lord shall come."

One Sunday Morning

By Arlen Marsh

---

IT WAS a hot, stifling day. The sun poured down a blaze of heat that brought the sap of every plank in every building to the surface. There was no breeze, save for an occasional gust that was still warmer than the ordinarily stagnant atmosphere. What few people moved upon the streets were as sluggish as the air.

Inside the church the preacher's voice droned on and on in a soporific monotone. Sprawled out uncomfortably over the hard wood seats, the congregation nodded dreary and unconscious assent to his remarks. Now and again, from a small boy up in front, came plaintive murmurs of protest against this enforced quietude. Presently his head tipped forward, jerked, bobbed a moment or two; and his mutterings grew still as he subsided into uneasy slumber.

Five minutes, ten minutes, fifteen minutes passed, an intolerable length of time for those listening to the sermon. Then, "Amen!" said the speaker with inflections of relief; and the members of his audience heaved sighs and drew themselves erect. The pastor strode to the communion table, covered with a cloth of pristine whiteness, and flicked its covering aside with a weary gesture.

"The deacons," he decreed sonorously, "will come forward."

The deacons came, and stood before him, their faces painfully devoid of human feeling. They stiffened to attention in an embarrassed silence.

"Brethren," the minister intoned, "once more we meet about this table —"

A man in the congregation turned to his wife.

"That," he whispered, "is the established formula. He's used the same words for the last ten years every time we hold a communion service."

"— to commemorate the death, burial, and resurrection of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," continued the speaker automatically. "In accordance with the command He left with His disciples when they were gathered together in the upper room to celebrate the passover, we meet to partake of this bread and of this fruit of the vine which represent the broken body and the spilled blood of our Lord."

The preacher paused. The audience gazed steadfastly out of the windows or stirred restlessly as was their individual bent. Their expressions were vacuous, their thoughts still more so. The rote repeated for the one hundred twentieth time by their pastor had no more effect than the vapors of a small child.

"This is," went on the speaker, "a solemn occasion, an occasion for serious thought, but at the same time an occasion for intense joy. We must think of the awful agony of Christ as He hung on the accursed tree, dying between two malefactors, thieves of the worst degree. He died in atonement for our sins. He died in order that all who desired might be saved."

The people in the congregation stared out of the windows and stirred uneasily. Thoughts of lunch oppressed them, thoughts of a lunch delayed. The small boy down in front muttered sleepily.

Mrs. Reagers leaned toward Mr. Reagers. "Look!" she commanded lowly. "Mrs. Jensen has a new spring coat!"

"Um-hum," said Mr. Reagers, and returned to his bored examination of the cracked pane in the nearest window. The trustees should do something about it. Leaving a broken glass like that! Mr. Reagers shuddered with the thought.

"Let us stand," urged the minister, "while Brother Tompkins leads us in prayer over the emblem of the broken body of our Lord."

They stood. Brother Tompkins delivered himself of a fervent repetition of the communion prayer he had memorized three years before, and they sat down noisily. The deacons passed the emblems.

"Shall we all partake," said the minister.

"Look!" whispered Mrs. Reagers. "Sadie Frontenac's got a new hat!"

"Um-hum," said her husband, and looked at the broken pane. Vaguely he wondered why, if the communion service was so important, the preacher did not invent some new form of describing it. It was, Mr. Reagers felt, a travesty. He withdrew his gaze from the window to consider how many others in the congregation could have used the word travesty correctly. None, he decided, except the minister. Momentarily he puzzled over whether he had.

"Let us stand," reiterated the pastor, "while Brother Landing leads us in prayer over the emblems of the spilled blood."

Again they stood, balancing first on one foot and then on the other. Brother Landing, more versatile than Brother Tompkins, succeeded in delivering a variation of the petition raised over the "broken body." Again they seated themselves noisily.

The small boy in front spoke aloud. "Shh!" warned his mother, and half the congregation scowled. Such interruptions in the communion service should not, they thought, be tolerated. The scream of a distant fire siren drew their combined gaze to the windows. The siren died away, and they removed glasses from the trays passed by the deacons with a mechanical precision.

Miss Frontenac straightened in her seat.

"Look!" exclaimed Mrs. Reagers. "The show-off!"

"Let us all partake," said the minister.

The deacons collected the glasses amidst a gloomy silence. Thoughts of lunch and hats and business and valves that must be ground filtered through the assembly. Three or four sat in a profound study of the deacons. Glass tinkled against glass.

"Now," said the minister, "that we have all been in communion with our Lord, we shall sing one verse of number five and be dismissed."

With a languor that made the hymn sound like a funeral dirge, they sang. The pastor pronounced a benediction, and the church became bedlam. The people poured into the aisles, blocked those who attempted to leave, vigorously shook hands with a happy disregard for whoever was unfortunate enough to get in the way, and engaged in voluminous conversation.

"Yeah," said one, "the N. R. A. is terrible!"

"What does it stand for?"

"National Recovery Administration, of course! Have you heard about the train wreck?"

"Mrs. Ginlon has an awfully pretty dress, don't you think?"

"Um-hum. But with that figure —"

"Prices aren't going up a bit. Why, I heard —"

"Yes, Roger will be home on the twentieth. I do so want you to meet him!"

"Wasn't the sermon awfully long?"

"Terribly hot, ain't it?"

Far in the back of the church, aloof from those who talked, stood a man. His smile was ironic as he surveyed the milling crowd. Presently he turned to the one who was by his side, one of the elders of the church.

"Quite a difference between modern communion and the original service," he observed quietly. "It would be interesting to know just how many really realize what that service signified."

The elder looked at him in astonishment.

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Just this," explained the man softly. "After they had met in the upper room, they took the things which represented the Christ's body and blood, sang a hymn, and went out. According to all the records, during the service the disciples thought only of what the service meant; thoughts of fishing, of tax collecting, of eating, were furthest from their minds. And when they were through, they spoke of what was to come; they went out filled with devotion and not with criticism, they went out inspired to service. How many here do that?"

The elder shook his head.

"Your forms—our forms—have become so fixed that they are automatic. We go through the rites like machines. When the bread is given us, we eat and long for more to satisfy our growing hunger; when the liquid our minister invariably calls 'the fruit of the vine' is handed us, we drink and criticise the deaconesses for not having made it more sweet. That it stands for agony that none of us would be willing to bear is something that never occurs to the majority of us. A dozen may have the thought, of course, but certainly not more. The end of the service is a time for rejoicing, not because Jesus died for us, but because the service is over.

"Paul's statements regarding the communion over in Corinthians might as well not have been made for all the effect they have. The communion service is like the Lord's Prayer; we repeat it out of habit, and not because it means anything to us." The speaker's voice rose a trifle. "Yes," he concluded, "and no greater blasphemy could be found than that. We object to the vain use of the Lord's name, but we're perfectly willing to profane the service that stands for Him. 'They which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar' is true enough, but we don't wait there. We go through the forms as the Jews did; and as the Jews were condemned, so are we."

"SINCE the Spanish Republic declared for religious freedom, Spaniards have taken to reading the Bible," says Reuter's Madrid correspondent. "So many packets of Bibles now reach Madrid from Britain that the small hand-cart in which they were carried from the local station to the offices of the Bible society has had to be replaced by a motor van. The figures of 190,554 Bibles and Testaments sold in 1931 as compared with 130,554 sold in 1930, clearly show the considerable increase in sales. Two of Spain's present cabinet ministers were educated in Protestant schools, and the Republican government is more favorable towards spreading the use of the Bible."—Selected.

GENERAL CONFERENCE REPORT

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

July 1, 1929 to June 30, 1930	$5694.42
July 1, 1930 to June 30, 1931	5986.32
July 1, 1931 to June 30, 1932	5393.77
July 1, 1932 to June 30, 1933	7918.94

It will thus be seen that the brethren contributed to this work $2525.00 more this last year than they did in the previous year in order that they might relieve the financial strain brought upon the Institution by the depression and the consequent failure of the bank with which we had carried on our business for so many years. This helpful spirit has done much to encourage the management to continue their efforts in behalf of the general work under what would otherwise have been exceedingly gloomy prospects.

AUDITING COMMITTEE APPOINTED

It was moved by Mrs. T. J. Ellis, supported by Leland T. Hanson, that the chair appoint a committee to audit the books of the Institution; this committee to consist of three members. The motion was carried, and the president later appointed the following to act in that capacity: Norman John MacLeod, California, chairman; Leota B. Hanson, Missouri; and Francis Compton, Virginia.

In order that the report of the auditing committee appear in connection with its appointment the report as finally received by the conference is appended at this point.

REPORT OF THE AUDITING COMMITTEE

Having checked over the treasurer's report (and examined the books of the National Bible Institution) we find it to be correct, and in addition (to our approval of both the books and the treasurer's report) make the following statement of the National Bible Institution for the end of the fiscal year July 31, 1933:

(Signed) Norman John MacLeod, Chairman.

The chairman appointed the following committees:
 Credentials; Leila E. Whitehead, Illinois, chairman; Blanche Harland, Iowa; Lydia Railsback, Indiana.

Nominations: Virginia Kincheloe, Virginia, chairman; Elizabeth Ordnung, Illinois; Albert Siple, Louisiana; W. F. Hoskins, Minnesota; Lila Lathrop, Nebraska.

Survey: Clyde Pearson, Ohio, chairman; W. L. Robbins, Texas; Eva L. Stearns, South Dakota; Ernest Boyer, Virginia; Mary Elton, Ohio; Wilson Calkins, California; Ruth Hoskins, Minnesota; Cleora Denchfield, Minnesota; Verna Himmelright, Indiana.

The reports of these committees will appear in the order in which they were presented to the conference with exception of the Credentials Committee which reported each day.

Following the appointment of the committees the president and business manager gave his annual report, the substance of which is given below.

BUSINESS MANAGER'S REPORT

The president spoke forcefully to this effect:

We have been passing through the worst time of economical distress any of us have ever known. I would venture to say that there is not another institution like ours, that has had the things to contend with that we have had to meet, which is still operating regularly as we are doing today. We have had criticism, both constructive and destructive. But criticism is welcomed at any time, especially that of a constructive character.

When this institution was started, we did not have a dollar. We purchased the Golden Rule Home property, and later the greenhouse property, and took over the Restitution Publishing Company's plant and equipment for the publishing of our paper and literature.

Regarding the publishing business, no money was ever made by the Restitution Publishing Company before the National Bible Institution took it over, and none has been made since. No publishing company of that character can pay expenses. No paper of any kind pays its expenses from its subscriptions. They make their money in advertising. There has been little job printing to be secured during the past two years and so there was no income from that source.

The Golden Rule Home is not paying expenses for the reason that we do not have enough residents. The cost for heat, light, taxes, etc., is the same when there are but a few in the home as it would be if every room were occupied, but the income is much less.

We require a certain amount of money from each person entering the home. Some think we should not do this, but it is unavoidable. We wish it were possible for us to maintain the home without charging the residents anything.

We have investigated other homes. Many that have a large reserve require their members to turn in all the property they have. We require a minimum of $1,600, and what they have in addition up to $3,000.

We have taken over properties, but we cannot realize much on them. We cannot sell them. We have made many mistakes, one of them when we bought the greenhouse property. We have lost thousands of dollars on it. But we did the best we could with it. Many of you have lost money during the past years on your personal investments. We want you to be sympathetic in your criticisms, unless you can tell us what to do to remedy the situation.

In 1925 we borrowed $12,000 to pay off some of our indebtedness, as we had gone into debt about $20,000 for the greenhouse and the Home. We sold mortgage bonds on the greenhouse and little farm for this amount. These bonds come due in 1935. The greenhouse did splendidly for the first few years. We thought everything was fine. We then spent $5,000 in improving that property. By then things began to go down. Then we wanted to get rid of it, but could not do so.

We have been working on different propositions for a year, but none of them would protect the bondholders. We wanted to protect two classes of individuals, the residents of the home (they need have no fear of losing what they have put in there, for they are amply secured) and the bondholders who loaned us the money on the greenhouse property. We communicated with the bondholders, and the majority of them were willing to take sixty per cent for their share. The young man who had been with us for two years at the greenhouse, one of the finest young men I have met, and who comes from a splendid family, wanted to know if he could get hold of that greenhouse. So we got hold of that proposition. He thought he and his people could raise the money to pay sixty per cent in cash to the bondholders. But when it came to cashing their securities, which are perfectly good, they could not dispose of them. He could have bought the property for approximately $7,000 cash, but it is now costing him $10,750. We talked it over, and I said if I could get the consent of the board and also the advisory board, and if he would pay off all those bonds so that the bondholders do not lose a cent, we would turn the greenhouse property over to him. We did want to get rid of it when it was losing us from one to three thousand dollars every year.

We have been asked why we did not close it up but, as we have explained before, we would have lost a great deal more from damage to glass and the heating plant. The insurance would have been rendered void, and after a time the property would be worth nothing.

So we worked out a proposition. We did not turn over the farm, because we needed it for the home. We gave Mr. Wallace one of our lots of rich ground instead of the farm. In order to make the security as good as and even better than it now is, he has agreed to spend at least $2,000 in improving the property. That makes the security of the bondholders $2,000 more than it was. If he paid off the bonds, we told him we would give him a deed to the property after he had spent at least $2,000 on the property. He began paying the interest on those bonds the first of April.

We have been unable to pay our interest on those bonds for the last several payments. We have no property that has been bringing in money. We have less regular contributions. We have cut down the running expenses, discharged help, cut salaries, until we have reached below what is reasonable. When work gets slack, those in the print shop have helped at the greenhouse or at the home. They have worked to improve the property we hold. We utilize all our help and coordinate all departments as far as it is possible for us to do.

Now, where does this money go that we receive, besides for wages? Our notes payable amount to $12,695.57 and our accounts payable, $2,737.57. The interest on the notes payable and the annuity bonds amounts to over $1,100 a year. We have to pay taxes and insurance, besides our help. We are back in interest on our mortgage bonds to the amount of $523.75; interest on notes, at the bank and to individuals, $108.00; on our annuity bonds, $509.00.

Now as to our assets. We have the Herald plant. The building cost us $5,000 cash. The equipment cost from eight to twelve thousand dollars. The home property when times were good would be worth $20,000. It would not be worth half that now if we wanted to sell it. We have a contract for land in Ontario for $1,600. It is perfectly good, but slow; and we cannot get the money. We have a mortgage note on property in Lanark, Ill., for $1,600. The man who owns the property cannot pay the mortgage, and we do not want to take the property. It will be perfectly good when property comes back. We have property in Dixon worth $1,500. We have a residence in Oregon that we are now remodeling which is worth $2,500.

We have $2,100 in bonds. These are mostly municipal bonds, but we couldn't get face value for them if we were to cash them now. A good many of our people fell down on their pledges. Many of our subscribers have not paid their subscriptions. I suppose the reason is because they do not have the $2.00.

I have been the manager, looking after things, but always with the advice of the board. We have met every month. We have not missed a meeting in the two years we have served. We have always had a quorum present. When we fixed the garage at our residence in town, the boys from the print shop did the preliminary work, then two of the board members donned their overalls and laid the foundation.

At the conclusion of his report the manager asked for an expression from the conference as to its approval or disapproval of the present editorial policy of THE RESTITUTION HERALD.

The editor, G. E. Marsh, was called upon to define the policy followed by the paper, and replied in effect as follows: It is the design of the board to carry out the expressed will of the brethren as stated in the past, that is, to restrict as far as possible the subject matter appearing in THE RESTITUTION HERALD to those teachings enumerated in the constitution and by-laws and to such other subjects as are generally believed among us.

It was then moved by Norman John MacLeod, California, seconded by Albert Siple, Louisiana, that the board be commended and asked to continue its present policy. The motion was carried unanimously.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

FOLLOWING the usual opening exercises on Wednesday afternoon, the president called for the report of the nominating committee, which responded by recommending for president, L. E. Conner; first vice president, Leland T. Hanson; second vice president, J. H. Williams; secretary, G. E. Marsh; treasurer, T. J. Ellis. Upon motion of F. L. Austin and C. E. Lapp the report was received.

Nominations were then made from the floor for president, and the names of L. E. Conner, F. L. Austin, and G. E. Marsh were submitted. The election resulted as follows: L. E. Conner, 1,823½ votes; F. L. Austin, 2. L. E. Conner was declared elected.

Nominees for first vice president: Leland T. Hanson, J. H. Williams, C. E. Lapp, F. L. Austin, and Paul C. Johnson. The election resulted in Leland T. Hanson's receiving 1,707½ votes; F. L. Austin, 114 2-3; C. E. Lapp, 3; Paul C. Johnson, 3. Leland T. Hanson was declared elected.

Nominees for second vice president: J. H. Williams, Benj. H. Carpenter, C. E. Lapp, Paul C. Johnson. The election resulted as follows: J. H. Williams, Rochelle, Ill., received 1,692 1-6 votes; Paul C. Johnson, 78; C. E. Lapp, 3; Benj. H. Carpenter, 2. J. H. Williams was declared elected.

Nominees for secretary: G. E. Marsh, F. L. Austin, C. E. Lapp. The election resulted as follows: G. E. Marsh received 1,498 votes; F. L. Austin, 232 19-24; C. E. Lapp, 3. G. E. Marsh was declared elected.

Nominees for treasurer: T. J. Ellis, Leota B. Hanson, Paul C. Johnson, Paul Hatch. The election resulted as follows: T. J. Ellis, 1,889 1-3; Leota B. Hanson, 4; Paul C. Johnson, 1; Paul Hatch, 1. T. J. Ellis was declared elected.

The entire executive board of the General Conference, which also serves as the executive board of the National Bible Institution, was re-elected by large majorities, evincing the satisfaction of the brotherhood at large with its past service. The large and favorable vote cast also provided a splendid expression of confidence of the entire Church of God in the integrity and faithfulness of its several members.

(over)

Before the election took place C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Ontario, spoke earnestly in protest against electioneering on the grounds during the progress of the meeting, stating that such action was contrary to the spirit of the gathering and should be severely frowned upon.

REPORT OF SURVEY COMMITTEE

Following the usual formal opening on Thursday, August 10, 1933, the report of the Survey Committee was submitted.

Your Survey Committee has visited the properties of the National Bible Institution located in Oregon, and has personally investigated Golden Rule Home, the Printing Plant, and other holdings of the Institution, and wishes to report that we find the condition of all these properties to be very satisfactory.

(Signed) E. C. Pearson, Chairman;
Wilson Calkins;
Eva L. Stearns;
Ernest Boyer;
Dessa Benn;
W. L. Robbins;
Cleora Denchfield;
Mary Elton;
Ruth Hoskins.—Committee.

After this brief written report was received by the conference, at the request of the committee Mrs. Eva L. Stearns of South Dakota gave a more detailed and comprehensive oral report of what had been observed during the investigation. She said in part:

First, we visited the print shop, which we found in very good condition and well organized. The offices are well kept and satisfactory. The Training School room, however, should be better ventilated.

With others, I have been staying at the home, and we are all well pleased with conditions there. The rooms are clean, the accommodations are good, and the food provided excellent. I wish that everyone here at the conference would report to the people at home the opportunity for entrance here, as we need more paying guests. As a means of economy would it not be possible during the winter to provide rooms for all the home members on the first floor?

The two sick ones in the home are receiving the best of care, including daily alcohol baths, orange juice, and the same careful attention they would have in a hospital or sanatorium.

If we were to put up other buildings to replace the ones we have, just as they are now, it would cost from $35,000 to $40,000, at least double the amount of our present indebtedness.

We really have a great organization, and we should be proud of it, and support it gladly and generously.

The president then asked Mrs. Clara Chaffee, who was the first member of the home and who has lived there from the beginning, as to whether any special preparations had been made in advance of the Survey Committee's tour of inspection. Mrs. Chaffee replied that no special effort had been made to prepare for the committee's coming and added that she was well satisfied with the comforts and care provided and especially thankful for the kindness and good work of the matron.

Miss Leota Hanson of St. Louis stated that she had visited the home on frequent occasions unexpectedly and always found everything kept in fine condition and the food excellent.

Several spoke in favor of putting on an educational campaign to acquaint our people everywhere with the advantages the home provides for elderly people.

G. E. Marsh then explained that the board had already discussed plans for such a campaign to be carried on through THE RESTITUTION HERALD and by other more direct methods.

Mrs. Mary A. Gesin called attention to the fact that it had been reported that Golden Rule Home was an "Old Ladies' Home," owing to the fact that at the present there were no men resident there. She felt this misconception should be corrected, as the home was quite as comfortable and quite as much intended for men as it was for women.

The president then told of the way in which the home gardens provided vegetables for the home table and raised a goodly surplus for sale.

Mrs. G. E. Marsh emphasized the generous way in which various members of the Oregon local church assisted without pay at time of need in the home, to which F. L. Austin added a statement concerning various kinds of service the local church had freely rendered to the home and its family.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT

Owing to the fact that the business manager had covered the entire ground thoroughly in his general report, the secretary limited his remarks to matters pertaining especially to the work of the publishing plant.

The annual review of the work of the National Bible Institution for the past year, like that of every other business enterprise, is a fluctuating story of success and failure, of advances and retreats, of anxieties and rejoicings. We feel sure, however, that we have had more occasion for encouragement than we have had for depression. God has been very good to us throughout the year—far more generous and kind than we deserve.

Retreat was necessary at the outset of the year before we could even plan an advance. As was the case a year ago, the first act of the re-elected board was to go over the entire financial standing of the institution with an eye to cutting expenses again if possible without reducing the efficiency of our work to any great extent.

The General Conference had instructed us to discontinue the Training School for a time, a thing which we were regretful to do, but could not avoid.

The board had also been fully authorized to dispose of the greenhouse as speedily and advantageously as possible. Our manager has informed you of our efforts along that line and the happy results that finally attended them.

We gave immediate attention to increasing the security of the home and its people, and we feel that the work there has been well done.

The minutes of our first board meeting which I append hereto indicates the way in which we have endeavored to retrench throughout the entire year.

Minutes of the board meeting of September 13, 1932, (in part): In spite of the importance and valuable service she had so long rendered to The Restitution Herald and to the Training Class, it was decided that it was necessary to discontinue the employment of Sr. Mary A. Gesin, her work to be taken over by the editor and by Paul C. Johnson.

The secretary volunteered to accept a further reduction in salary amounting approximately to 30%, his salary thereafter to be $17.50 per week. The offer was accepted by the board.

Paul C. Johnson, in charge of the print shop, volunteered a further reduction in his salary of practically the same percentage. It, too, was accepted.

The bookkeeper and assistant treasurer voluntarily promised to return to the institution $2 per week out of her already limited salary. This promise has been faithfully kept.

In addition to these reductions members of the board and employees of the institution gave liberally in cash throughout the year.

A proofreader being necessary, the work was taken over by Arlen Marsh without salary. Later in the year he was placed on salary of $1 per week.

Brethren throughout the country were sacrificing likewise that they might contribute to our mutual effort. Because of this sacrifice and support we have been able by the strength of God to carry on.

Many religious papers suspended during the past year, while many others were greatly reduced in size and frequency of publication; but The Restitution Herald was issued fifty-two times as usual, with no reduction in pages or contents.

With other papers, both secular and religious, our subscriptions fell off to a certain extent, yet not nearly so much as was the case with others. Last year we lost but 75 subscribers, the year before that 85, and the preceding year 125. So the number is being reduced rather than increased as time goes on, and we have every reason to believe that we will see an increase rather than a decrease in the present year.

The special issues, which were devoted to particular themes, proved popular with the brethren; and they were used more or less extensively in evangelistic work.

Working in the most perfect harmony, the editorial and mechanical departments improved the general make-up and appearance of the paper to a considerable extent. A comparatively small outlay in type would contribute to still further improvement along this line.

Our restricted editorial policy continues to meet with general approbation, as was evidenced by the resolutions of approval passed by both the Ministerial Conference and the General Conference this year. The same policy will be continued.

The Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly has held its own throughout the period of depression. Our Sunday schools say they could not get along without this guide to the study of the International lessons.

We are in dire need of a complete line of doctrinal tracts and booklets for wide distribution. The recent action of the Ministerial Association in suggesting a basis of teaching will help materially in the preparation of such a series of publications.

The greatest unity prevailed within the board itself throughout the year. In addition to the regular monthly meetings held, many informal consultations were called to meet unexpected or unusual situations. These were very helpful in every department of the work.

The entire business of the institution has been kept before the complete board, no one member dominating action or governing the conduct of the business of the brotherhood. This has also contributed to harmony and to whatever degree of success we have enjoyed.

REVISION OF CONSTITUTION NEEDED

THE necessity of having the constitution of the National Bible Institution thoroughly revised was then presented. It was explained that as the constitution now stands the executive board must secure the permission of the advisory board, consisting of the presidents of all supporting state conferences and of the National Berean Society, before they can legally acquire and hold real and personal property, sell or otherwise dispose of real estate or personal property, raise money by subscription, receive gifts and donations, receive and hold money in trust, employ a manager and heads of various departments. The work of the board was thus seriously hampered and frequently delayed.

To meet this situation G. E. Marsh made the following motion: "I move that the president be and hereby is empowered to appoint a committee of three persons, including himself as chairman, the others to be selected by him, to thoroughly revise 'The Declaration of Understanding of the General Conference of the Church of God' to eliminate difficult phrasing and confusing conditions. Said committee to report at the next General Conference." The motion was seconded by Norman John MacLeod, and after due consideration was carried.

The president then appointed the following to act on that committee: L. E. Conner, chairman; F. E. Siple; and Norman John MacLeod.

REPORT OF THE EXHIBIT COMMITTEE

THE report of the Exhibit Committee was called for and read by the chairman, Mrs. F. L. Austin.

Your Exhibit Committee offers as its tangible report the Exhibit in the south half of the basement of the church.

We wish to thank heartily those who have so splendidly cooperated in making the Exhibit possible.

There are specially and well prepared materials from Cleveland and Brush Creek, Ohio; Blanchard and Grand Rapids, Michigan; Holbrook, Nebraska; Los Angeles, California; St. Cloud, Minnesota; South Bend and Burr Oak, Indiana; Fonthill, Canada; and Dixon, Rockford, and Oregon, Illinois.

These materials include church forms, attendance inducements, memory drills, finance methods, scrapbooks, notebooks, posters, maps, charts, banners, church bulletins, an electrical map of Palestine, and numerous miscellaneous helps for Christian service.

A "reflectograph," a "duplicator," and a "shadow-tint" outfit are on exhibit, all of which are helpful in lesson preparation and presentation.

A chart made of outing flannel and felt is on display showing the possibilities in the use of these materials.

The Children's Page Bible Scrapbook Club has planned all year to have their work at conference. The result is a nice lot of scrapbooks on display.

Besides all these, there are samples of tracts, books, etc., from our own Restitution Herald print shop; full lines of samples from David C. Cook Pub. Co., Elgin, Ill.; Standard Pub. Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; William A. Dietz, Chicago; Eye-Method Pub. Co., Oakland, Cal.; J. W. Miller Pub. Co., Decatur, Ill.; Layman Co., Chicago; and Oxford University Press, N. Y.

The Church of God General Conference, Stanberry, Mo., a Seventh Day Adventist Conference, publishers of the "Bible Advocate," one of our exchange papers, sent book samples and tracts.

There are also some historic things and pictures of various church groups in the exhibit room. There are copies of the "Advent Harbinger" dated 1850; one of the "Restitution" dated Oct. 19, 1871; and an account of the first attempt at a General Conference of our church people and photographs of many who were present at that meeting in Philadelphia in 1888; files of Restitution Herald, and Truth Seekers' Quarterlies, etc.

Many have visited the exhibit room again and again studying its various phases and making notes. We hope that it has been a truly helpful feature of the conference.

Again we thank those who have sent materials so beautifully prepared and explained in such a way as to help others in Christian service—all to God's glory and honor. We appreciate this thought and painstaking care.

Mrs. F. L. Austin, Chicago, Ill., Chairman;
Mrs. W. J. Halls, Cleveland, Ohio;
Mrs. Esta L. Starbuck, Rockford, Ill.—

Exhibit Committee.

It was moved by Mrs. F. L. Austin, seconded by Leila E. Whitehead, that the report be received and the committee discharged. Motion carried.

G. E. Marsh expressed the appreciation of the board of the work of the Exhibit Committee and moved that another committee be immediately appointed to carry on the work for next year. The motion being seconded and carried, the president appointed Mrs. Mary A. Gesin, chairman; Miss Genniel Carpenter; and Mrs. Esta Starbuck.

Discussions pertaining to the Dollar-a-Month Club were engaged in extensively, but by motion the matter was left to the discretion of the board.

Reports of the various vocational committees appointed last year to solicit funds were received. Miss Margaret Ellis, chairman of the Committee of Teachers, reported that her committee solicited twenty-seven teachers, and received but two replies, one stating that she was paying in the Dollar-a-Month Club, and the other promised to contribute later.

C. B. Compton, chairman of the Committee of Government Employees, reported $11 received as a result of its efforts.

These reports were properly received and placed on file.

Pastor Adna Hoskins of Minnesota suggested that it would be well for the board to set aside a certain day for the churches to observe for acquainting the people with the work and needs of the National Bible Institution and that on that day special funds might be raised for specified purposes.

Communications were presented from Sr. Mary A. Woodward, Dutton, Mich.; E. O. Stewart, Sweetwater, Texas; and John Hammond, Anaheim, California.

The manner in which the Oregon church had successfully carried its heavy load of paying off its building indebtedness, keeping up its local work, and contributing to the general work of the National Bible Institution having been mentioned, C. E. Lapp asked how it had been done. The answer came in one word: "Tithing!"

F. A. Stilson, South Bend, Ind., suggested that a display ad be published in THE RESTITUTION HERALD setting forth the desirability of the Golden Rule Home as a place in which our old people can spend their final years in peace and security. The editor stated he would see that the suggestion was carried out.

F. E. Siple, pastor of the church at Grand Rapids, Mich., presented the problems of his congregation and stressed the need of more room to carry on its rapidly growing work. On the advice of their lawyer they have undertaken the proposition of borrowing money from 300 or so persons who could lend $10.00 or more at 4½% interest to run from two to ten years. They are not asking for donations and are willing to bear their own burdens and pay back every cent. They were wondering if the General Conference would back such a matter and give their moral backing to such a movement.

Moved by Norman J. MacLeod, seconded by Mrs. F. L. Austin, that the General Conference go on record as approving the proposition of the Grand Rapids church to ask the loan of money. Motion carried. It was explained that these would be regular bank notes, secured by first mortgage on the property.

The matter of finance having been presented, Mrs. E.

C. Railsback of California moved that the president immediately appoint a committee to solicit funds among those present and to secure pledges to be paid within ninety days. The motion was seconded by Norman J. MacLeod and carried.

The president appointed the following to act on the committee: Mrs. T. J. Ellis, Iowa, chairman; Mrs. E. C. Railsback, California; Miss Leota B. Hanson, Missouri.

Pledges were called for from the floor of the conference, and later on the grounds. Final report of the financial committee reported that some fifteen hundred dollars had been pledged. The report was received and the committee discharged.

It was suggested that these pledges should be listed under a special heading in THE RESTITUTION HERALD.

The General Conference thus brought to a close will go down in the history of the denomination as one of the most satisfactory and fruitful gatherings ever held by our people. The spiritual tone was high throughout. Unity and fellowship prevailed. The vital importance of the great basic truths of revelation that hold us together as a body of Christian workers was emphasized strongly. The blessed hope of a coming Savior was held ever before us as the inspiring incentive to service and sacrifice. Fine weather prevailed; and the local attendance as well as the attendance of those from a distance were large, more than five hundred being actually registered on the secretary's book. Nearly two thousand members were represented by official delegates.

May God's blessing attend the work and the workers that were assembled here that His name may be exalted and His eternal purposes advanced at our hands.

G. Eldred Marsh, Secretary.

WHERE WAS THE KEY?

---

A LITTLE girl died at a hotel where she was stopping with her father. The mother was dead. Just two followed the body to the cemetery, the father and a minister. The man's grief was great. At the grave he took from his pocket a key, unlocked the casket and looked on the face of his child once more, then silently closed the casket and handed the key to the keeper of the cemetery. On the way back to the city the minister quoted to the broken-hearted man Revelation 1:18, explaining how the Lord Jesus though once dead was now alive.

"But what is that about the keys?" asked the man.

"It means this," said the minister, "You think the key to your little girl's casket is in the hands of the keeper of the cemetery. Let me tell you, the key to your little girl's grave hangs at the girdle of the Son of God, and He will come some morning and use it."

Then the light broke through the man's tears, and he saw the glory of the resurrection.—Condensed from Record of Christian Work.

"GREAT IS THE LORD, AND GREATLY TO BE PRAISED; AND HIS GREATNESS IS UNSEARCHABLE."

TWENTIETH ANNUAL CONFERENCE

THE twentieth annual conference of the National Berean Society was opened at 8:00 a. m., Aug. 7, 1933, in the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois, with a short devotional service led by Mrs. Louise Lapp. The business session which immediately followed was devoted to a survey of the year's work, formal and informal reports being accepted from each committee and affiliated society. At 10:20 the meeting was recessed to 2:45 p. m. The reports presented to the conference will be published separately.

The Colportage Committee established in 1931 declared that no work had been accomplished, but that the field was a large one. Its duty had been to direct the general sale and distribution of Berean literature. A new committee consisting of three members was to be selected by the president, and the old committee was discharged. A second special committee announced that transfer of the Relief Committee work to the National Bible Institution was impossible at the time.

The afternoon session of the conference convened at 2:45 p. m. with a forum conducted by M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, on methods of leading Berean classes and organization. General agreement was reached that each local society should have its own constitution and by-laws and not rely on the state or national constitution for its government. The chairman declared that the problem of permanent or temporary teachers could be settled only on the basis of peculiar local problems and not by a blanket ruling. The value of the Berean society as compared with the value of the Sunday school, prayer meeting, and regular church work was stressed.

At 3:15 p. m. President Cecil A. Smead called the afternoon business session to order. Moved, seconded, and carried to donate fifty dollars from the National Berean Society treasury to the National Bible Institution, owing to the strength of the Berean funds as compared with that of Institution funds. After much discussion, it was moved, seconded, and carried to donate fifty dollars from the general Berean treasury to the Relief Committee. These donations left in the treasury a balance of something over $225.00. (Receipts for the year had amounted to $352.23 and expenditures to $37.78. Twelve dollars in dues have since been received.)

Postage will be paid during the coming year for all committees and officers of the society for official business. A detailed financial statement will be required of each committee or officer handling Society funds and will be presented for consideration by the executive board. "Detailed" is to mean "a complete record of every receipt and expenditure, including a record of from whom, by whom, and to whom payment was made, the amount of payment, when it was made, for what purpose, and from what fund."

Moved, seconded, and carried that the last two verses in Jude be adopted as the official benediction of the conference of the National Berean Society.

Moved, seconded, and carried to amend Article II, section 6, of the by-laws to read, "The Relief Committee shall consist of two members. It shall be the duty of this committee to search out those who are unfortunate and to assist such of them as are worthy." Formerly the committee had consisted of one member.

The following officers were elected: president, Cecil A. Smead, permanent address unavailable; first vice president, Norman John MacLeod, 1105 Val Vista Street, Pomona, California; second vice president, Mrs. Louise Lapp, Mt. Sterling, Illinois; secretary, Arlen Marsh, 211 North Fifth Street, Oregon, Illinois; treasurer, Virgil Claypool, 506 East Chestnut Street, Robinson, Illinois. The retiring officers, in the order given above, were C. A. Smead, M. W. Lyon, Mrs. Louise Lapp, Arlen Marsh, and Virgil Claypool.

Dues were interpreted to include collections taken up at each society meeting. Such offerings can be used to replace the formal dues collected by most organizations, provided that one half of the local collections (if such collections amount to less than eleven cents a month per member) be sent the treasurer of the National Berean Society by local isolated societies.

The conference adjourned at 4:55 p. m.

Arlen Marsh, Secretary.

RELIEF COMMITTEE

ON FRIDAY, August 11, 1933, Mrs. Orpha Sanford signified her withdrawal from all church and Berean organizations in conducting her relief work by a letter in which she expressed a desire to resign from the Relief Committee of the National Berean Society. She will continue her work as she managed it previous to her inclusion in Berean activities, separate from any church organization. Her address is 1030 Warren Ave., Downers Grove, Illinois.

"Arise, anoint him: for this is he."

A SHEPHERD BOY WHO BECAME KING

SAMUEL, that wise judge over Israel who had been given to the Lord when he was a little boy, you remember, was very much grieved because Saul had disobeyed God and could no longer be king. Many things had been in Saul's favor when he started to reign. He was very fine looking, taller than any other man in Israel; he had excellent qualities of heart and mind; he had a good friend in Samuel.

But it was not very long before Saul began to show weakness. He disobeyed a direct command of God and then tried to put the blame on the people. Don't you think, boys and girls, that was a cowardly thing to do? So God told Samuel that another must be chosen to take Saul's place, for God wanted obedience from Saul above all else, just as He wants obedience from us.

Samuel started out one day from Ramah, over the rough mountain road south toward Bethlehem. He took with him an animal to offer in sacrifice, as God directed him to do. Who would ever think that the aged prophet was journeying to find a new king for Israel! But that was just what he was doing.

Samuel invited Jesse, a farmer of Bethlehem, to bring his sons to the sacrifice, and while they passed in front of him, Samuel studied each one's face carefully. No one knew, of course, that a new king was being chosen, but they realized that there was a reason for their being invited to the sacrifice.

Perhaps they thought Samuel was choosing a leader to assist King Saul in his work, and no doubt each son hoped he would be the one chosen. The oldest son, Eliab, was a fine looking man; but Samuel had learned to his sorrow that a kingly heart and mind does not always go with fine looks. So God told him not to look at the outward appearances, but to look at the real character of each. God must have given Samuel wisdom to choose, don't you think?

One by one the seven sons of Jesse passed before Samuel; each time God told Samuel so that no one else could hear that He had chosen none of them. At last Samuel asked Jesse if all his boys were there, and he learned that the youngest was out with the sheep. Jesse thought it wasn't any use to call him, merely a boy of fifteen, for Samuel wouldn't want him.

You know, oftentimes it is when we are going about doing our everyday work faithfully and happily that the great opportunity of our life comes. And so it was with this boy. There he was out in the hills looking after the sheep, and God sent for him! It really was God sending, you know, even though Samuel was the one who called him.

When David, for that was his name, came up, Samuel saw at once that here was one who was different from the rest. He was fair, and you know most Jewish lads are dark. He had clear blue eyes, perhaps, and red hair, for we read that he was "ruddy." He must have stood out from all the rest, even though he was only a lad.

Can't you imagine how the boy grew to be dependable, trustworthy, kind, and self-reliant out there in the hills taking care of the sheep? Often he had to fight lions and bears that tried to steal the lambs; he had to find new pasture for the sheep sometimes, and cool water also. The sheep learned to know his voice and to come when he called.

And now, just think, he was chosen to be the king over all Israel. A young shepherd boy, king! But he didn't go at once; God told him to go back and continue to care for the sheep. And he learned many, many things about taking care of people while doing just that!

As you grow older and study David's life, you will find that he made many mistakes, but he always loved God and was true to Him. God said he was a man after His own heart, and that means a lot, doesn't it? One fine thing about David was that he always admitted his mistakes, never tried to put the blame on some one else, and always was sorry for his wrongdoing. That was the reason God forgave him.

Now take a few sheets of paper and make a booklet for David. You will like making this booklet, I know, because the story of David is so interesting. Write about the choosing of David for king.

There are several drawings you can make for your booklet: the horn of Samuel which held the oil for anointing David; the sling with which he killed the giant, much like the slings you boys make now; or you may draw a throne and a crown which were David's later on; underneath write the words of Luke 1:32.

All of you who are old enough learn the twenty-third Psalm; and as you learn it, think of that fine lad out on the hills caring for his father's sheep. Then copy it in your booklet or write it from memory.

Who will be first to write and tell me about a booklet you have made?

LESSON 10. — September 3, 1933

DAVID

1 Samuel 16:1-13; Psalm 78:70-72

Devotional Reading: Psalm 101:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.—1 Samuel 16:7.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: David: The Secret of Greatness.

Aim: To teach the pupil that true greatness depends upon character rather than upon appearance.

Basic Truth: "I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will."—Acts 13:22.

I. David Chosen by God. (1 Sam. 16:1-13.) Saul, to Samuel's evident regret, was rejected by the Lord as king of His people because of his disobedience and weakness and David was chosen to take his place because God saw that he possessed the qualities of character which were lacking in Saul. It was not that God chose David arbitrarily and then created or developed within the young shepherd those elements of steadfastness and devotion that would result in a strong and godly monarch for Israel; but rather that God saw that those qualities were already possessed by the son of Jesse and that they were sufficiently prized by him to become the governing influence in his after life. It was because of this that the Lord said, "I have found in David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will." Having found one who already cherished the qualities of character needed in His king, God sent His spirit upon him, thus adding vastly to the sum total of David's powers to rule righteously.

II. David Justifies God's Wisdom. (Psa. 78:70-72.) After his selection and anointing David remained for a time the simple shepherd boy, tending faithfully his father's sheep. He performed his humble task courageously, depending in every time of unusual need upon the help of God. Out in the open day and night, he found opportunity to meditate deeply on the power and mystery of Jehovah and so to draw very close to Him. This spiritual schooling proved very helpful in his after life when the great testings of kingship came to him. He could never forget that it was God to whom he was indebted for all that he was and for all that he had accomplished, and not to the people or to himself. Throughout his life he remained the humble, teachable, devout, and faithful shepherd-king of God's heritage Israel. Because he was with God and God was with him "he fed them according to the integrity of his heart; and guided them by the skillfulness of his hands."

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Presence of God: When Samuel went to Bethlehem to anoint the chosen son of Jesse to the kingship over Israel, the elders of Israel "trembled at his coming." They knew that this man was God's representative; and when he spoke, it really was God speaking. Therefore, it really was God before whom they trembled. How weak man feels when he comes in contact with God or His great power. Israel at Horeb trembled at the presence of God. But this trembling is nothing in comparison to that great shaking that is yet due the world when God once more "ariseth to shake terribly the earth." The people will not say, "Comest thou peaceably?" as they did on the arrival of Samuel. They will know without a doubt the reason and purpose of God's coming and the coming of His Son.

God's Choosing: The selection of David as heir to the throne of Israel was strictly God-made. Man would have selected the firstborn. But the firstborn in this case could not fill the requirements. There was only one, and that one was the youngest. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." David was the only one of the sons that had a heart that could be melted into the Father's own heart. It was later said of him, "He was a man after God's own heart." The mission upon which Samuel was come was an urgent one. When all the sons excepting David had passed before him and still the rightful one had not appeared, Samuel said, "We will not sit down till he come." This is the spirit of true and faithful service to the Father. His work must come first. Do not wait until there is nothing else to do or until a rainy day, do it now. If God has a work for you to do, and He certainly has, enter into it with such a spirit as Samuel exhibited and you will find that the "spirit of God will be upon you."—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."—1 Samuel 16:7.

Man with his finite mind is capable to judge only by the outward appearance, but God with His infinite mind can know the inmost thoughts of every creature. Isaiah 55:9: "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." The oldest son of Jesse would have been Samuel's choice, for he looked at his outward appearance, but the Lord said, "For the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

"David did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite."—1 Kings 15:5. God could see this trait of character in David, so He was free to have him anointed king. David is said to be a man after God's own heart. God knows our hearts and thoughts just as truly as He did David's.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The apostles at one time disputed the question of greatness. They were ambitious and desired the chief positions in the kingdom. Jesus gave them the one and only rule to follow in Matthew 20:27, 28. This is not the glamorous greatness that men seek, but it is God's prescribed method for winning eternal greatness.

We consider one great if he occupies a great office and wields vast powers. This in itself is not true greatness. Jesus was careful to point this out. It is evident that He did not want His followers to seek such greatness.

Since God measures greatness by the amount and quality of service, we must recognize and accept His standard of greatness. On this basis we must give supreme honor to God because He has rendered more service to us than anyone else. Because Jesus became the servant of all, God has given Him a name above every name in heaven and earth. With service as the measure for greatness we must recognize the apostles as worthy of great honor. They served unto death.

If we would honor true greatness, we must recognize that the mother who serves her children until they develop into godly men and women is worthy of more honor than the one who flies the ocean or wins an Olympic championship. We do not do that now, but the time will come when God will reward the truly great. In that day "many that are first shall be last, and the last shall be first."

—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

In last Sunday's lesson we learned about Saul, the first king over the Israelites.

Today we learn how David, the second king, was chosen.

God sent Samuel to the home of Jesse to select one of his sons. God said to Samuel, "Choose the one who is the best, and not just the one that looks the strongest and largest."

Samuel went to Jesse's house. Jesse called one son and had him pass before Samuel. But Samuel shook his head and said, "No, God has not chosen this one."

Another passed before Samuel, and again Samuel shook his head. Seven sons passed in front of Samuel, but each time he said, "No, God has not chosen this one."

"Is this all the sons you have?" Samuel said to Jesse.

"No," said Jesse, "there is one more, a lad who is out caring for the sheep."

"Call him in," said Samuel.

When David the shepherd boy came, the Lord said to Samuel, "Arise, anoint him; he is the one." And David was chosen then to be king after Saul.—V. C. T.

CONFERENCE CALENDAR

Western Nebraska State Conference, at Hq|brook, August 20 to 27
Iowa Conference at Waterloo August 22 to 27
Virginia Bible School and Conference at Maurertown, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3

EASTERN NEBRASKA CONFERENCE

The Omaha Church of God held its annual conference at the city hall in Florence, Nebraska, commencing August 6. It was our pleasure to have with us again this year Bro. Lindsay, who gave us many interesting and valuable talks, assisted by Bro. Adams. The attendance was very good.

August 12, the business meeting was held when the following officers were elected: president, Bro. Frank Harper; vice president, Bro. Howard Appleby; secretary-treasurer, Sr. Perkins; corresponding secretary, Sr. Edna Kjargaard; and Bro. Almus Adams was chosen our evangelist for the coming year.

The conference closed August 13 with the baptism of six new members into the truth these being: Elsie and Pearl Appleby, Nadeen Burke, Fern and Meredith Nelson, and Cleo Dixon. Communion service closed the conference.

Edna Kjargaard, Cor. Sec.

DUTTON, MICHIGAN

The adult Bible class of the Dutton Community Sunday School sponsored a program and party Tuesday evening, Aug. 15, for their Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Owen Barney, in honor of his ordination and also his birthday anniversary. We also celebrated another anniversary of which we were quite unaware until the party was nearly over. It was Mr. and Mrs. Barney's nineteenth wedding anniversary. Mr. Barney was ordained as a minister of the Church of God on July 23.

Mr. William Hanson, president of the Michigan Conference, gave the opening address of welcome and congratulations, and presented Mr. Barney with his ministerial certificate. Musical numbers, readings, and plays were a part of the program. Mr. Barney gave a very good talk at the close. Mr. Martin Cumminford spoke in behalf of the Sunday school of their appreciation and presented Mr. Barney with a beautiful Bible, a gift from them. Nearly a hundred members of the Sunday school, the children's parents, and others of the community were present to enjoy the program, after which refreshments were served in the church dining hall. We are very proud of our superintendent and minister, and hope his future career will be as enjoyable and perfect in every way as was his ordination banquet.

Mrs. Alberta Haines.

SARAH MILLS

Sarah Mills, who was born in 1842, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carrie Stewart, 6 North Cleveland St., Wenatchee, Wash., Thursday morning, August 3, after an illness of five months. She was born at St. George, New Brunswick, 91 years and 10 months ago. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Carrie Stewart, Wenatchee, and Mrs. Jennie Swan, Orondo, Wash.; one sister, Mrs. Belle Banes, Goodland, Ind.; nine grandchildren and twenty-nine great-grandchildren. In 1862, at Sumner, Ill., she married William Mills, who passed away in 1910.

Mrs. Mills was a charter member of the Church of God of the Faith of Abraham at Goodland, Ind. She moved with her husband to Andover, S. D., fifty years ago, when that state was still a territory. She was active in the church in that community; and when she moved with her family to Wenatchee in 1901, they brought with them the bell now used in the Church of God of the Faith of Abraham, Palause Street, Wenatchee.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God on August 7, N. D. Titchenal officiating.

NORTHWEST CONFERENCE

The quarterly meeting of the Northwest Conference will convene at Corvallis, Oregon, at 10:30 Friday morning, September 1, and will last over September 3. The secretary of the conference will furnish road maps and other information to any who seek them. Her address is 1553 Adams Street, Corvallis, Oregon.

Gladys Barber, Secretary.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Church of God at Guthrie Grove, S. C., began their annual August meeting on Sunday, Aug. 6, and continued through Tuesday night, Aug. 15, 1933. The meeting was opened with a morning and evening address by the pastor, Bro. M. O. Williamson, later to be assisted by Bros. J. H. Anderson of Michigan-town, Ind., and W. H. Stone of Williamston, S. C.

The meeting was perfectly harmonious from start to finish. The attendance was the largest we have had for a number of years. The interest was excellent, being demonstrated by the fact that there were sixteen candidates who took upon themselves the all-saving name of Jesus in baptism. The names of those new members follow: Mr. Jesse Burrell, Piedmont; Mr. Harmon Durham, Piedmont, Rt. 1; Mr. Edd Elrod, Piedmont, Rt. 1; Mr. Robt. M. Saltz, Pelzer, Rt. 1; Mr. T. J. Edge, Appalachai Mills, Greer; Mrs. Josie Cullins, Hodges, Rt. 1; Miss Effie Harris, Piedmont, Rt. 1; Miss Addie Williams, 122 E. Earl St., Anderson; Miss Lula Williams, 122 E. Earl St., Anderson; Miss Linniebelle Martin, Williamston, Rt. 2; Miss Edith Williams, Liberty, Rt. 1; Miss Anniebelle Durham, 26 Virginia Ave., Greenville; Miss Helen Durham, Pelzer, Rt. 1; Miss Mildred Elrod, Piedmont, Rt. 1; Miss Azilee Bryant, Piedmont, Rt. 1; Miss Carrie Saltz, Pelzer, Rt. 1.

Notwithstanding the fact that the church building has been enlarged twice since it was organized, we could not seat the people at the night services. The meeting reached its height upon the arrival of Bro. J. H. Anderson on August 7; and the people of the surrounding territory, learning of his presence, began to arrive from far and near to hear him preach the gospel of the kingdom in that masterful manner that has always been typical of him.

Our prayer will always attend those noble souls that are sacrificing their lives and time to get the truth before the people in order that they may share an heir's part as is provided in the Father's will, in the everlasting kingdom of God. May we ever be faithful to the charge that has been committed unto us in the teaching of God's Word, "ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith," until we hear that "well done . . . enter into the joy of thy Lord."

A. W. McCoy.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Carl W. Barber (for another); Rose Miller (for self and another); Frank S. Potter; Milton Long; Mrs. Edna Gruber; C. E. Weaver; Jesse Robins; S. P. Dismukes (for another); F. E. Siple; Mrs. Bess Kasper; Mrs. J. W. Lovett; Mrs. J. W. Dismukes (for another); Mrs. Alice Lindsay; Charles Lapp; Mrs. S. E. Maxwell; E. S. Logan; Eva M. Logan.

WILL YOU LEND TEN DOLLARS?

The largest field, and most responsive, for church and Sunday school activity that has been opened by our people in the United States is the one at Grand Rapids, Mich. Average attendance last quarter exceeded three hundred, with building and facilities sufficient for only a little more than one third that number.

The members of the church are under the load whole-heartedly and enthusiastically, but in order to proceed with building operations more than three thousand dollars must be borrowed. This is no request for donations, but an appeal to everyone who can spare ten dollars or more to lend it to the church now. The church will issue to you a note to mature in from two to ten years, will pay you interest at 4 1-2% every six months, and on maturity will pay the full loan back to you. It is a safer and more remunerative place to put money than in your bank or in stocks and bonds, and the gospel will be taught to many by your help. Send your money to the treasurer, Harold W. Simpson, at Grandville, Mich., Rt. 1; or you may communicate with the pastor, F. E. Siple, 135 Pennell, S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich. A properly executed note will be sent on receipt of your money, interest to begin November 1, 1933.

Will you help all you can—and encourage others?

GREETINGS

Bro. George B. Alldridge, whose visit this year was his first one to Oregon and whom many, having enjoyed his frequent contributions to these columns, were glad to meet, said that "the Cleveland delegation consisting of eight representatives, judging by their appearance, caught the spirit of the conference, namely, Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy . . . Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good will."

Sr. Lydia Railsback of South Bend, Ind., so long president of the National Bereans of years past, considered this the best conference ever. We trust she may attend the conferences until our Lord's return.

Bro. and Sr. Sydney E. Magaw deem it a great joy to meet so many brethren of like precious faith while worshipping at General Conference.

Sr. Albert Siple of Hammond, La., who enjoyed being with us once more, quotes for our consideration from the first verse of Psalm 133.

"The best behaved class I have ever had, though the largest," is the way Bro. Earl Thayer describes the intermediates, who enjoyed following the footsteps of the Apostle Paul under Bro. Thayer's guidance.

Our aged sister, Mrs. F. M. Cawby of North Judson, Ind., gives us the following: "I am thankful to God and to the friends who so kindly allowed me to come with them to this my first trip to Oregon. I enjoyed the classes very much, especially those on prophecy. The only thing I regret was the accident to my ankle the day I arrived. I am alone in the faith, and this was a great treat to be able to be among those of like precious faith and to get acquainted with people from the different states."

Bro. Harry Goekler, member of our Training School and now pastor at Marshall, Ill., says that the most lasting impression he received from the conference was the splendid cooperation and deep spiritual devotion manifested by those in attendance.

Among those from Iowa were three who had planned for three years to come to Oregon and finally succeeded. They are Sr. Casen, Blanche Harland, and Gayle Allard. The latter, who will assist Sr. Berry with the primary class at Iowa Bible school, expressed herself much pleased with Sr. Thayer's work with the little tots.

Bro. C. E. Lapp of Ripley, Ill., who cooperated with Bro. Austin in teaching the students of high school age, said that this was his third conference at Oregon and that he met new faces all the time. Bro. Lapp has a special aptitude for and enjoyment in making friends and said he made many new ones this year. His prayer is that he may have dropped some little thought that would make a lasting impression for good.

"The Illinois State Conference has given us a most instructive and uplifting Bible School. We pray that our Virginia State Conference can do as well in its Bible school August 24 to September 3."—Harry A. Sheets.

"Wonderful days! Such uplifting lessons, which make us realize that we are even at the door of our Lord's returning, when the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and be with them, and be their God. It is my prayer that we may all have a part in that city of God."—Dessa Benn.

Bro. Norman J. MacLeod of Los Angeles, Calif., who made his first acquaintance with the majority of us at this meeting and who added much of value to it, felt that this summer was the crowning point of his life thus far. His especial concern was that he may have been of some special service in teaching God's Word to the workers assembled. Sr. MacLeod was well known to many of us, and we greatly enjoyed renewing old friendships and becoming acquainted with the four lovable MacLeod sons.

Bro. M. W. Lyon, who has been with us in Bible school work many years, says that "the greater the depression, the better the church. When banks fail, we can cooperate and help each other in trouble, and we can find a never-failing source of strength in God's Word." Bro. Lyon provided his class and many others with valuable outlines of the ten lessons on fundamental truths which we all greatly appreciated.

Sr. Thayer's favorite Bible text is, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," and she surely is leading many of them to Him in her Bible school work. Almost fifty little tots twice daily is a large order for one, but she fills it uncomplainingly and efficiently.

Bro. F. L. Austin desires that, wherever he may be the coming year, we should know he is praying for us and think of him as always pressing forward in God's service. Bro. Austin taught two classes daily, one in future prophecy and one composed of high school students who studied God and His various attributes and qualities. Bro. Austin's work was especially appreciated by the members of the board.

The delegation from Fonthill, Ont., and Niagara Falls, N. Y., consisting of Srs. Eastman and Haney, of Fenwick, Winnie Moat, Ridgeville, and Bro. C. E. Randall and son, Celaine, added their bit to the success of the conference. They all left feeling a wonderful conference had been held and will carry a most favorable report back to their churches.

Bro. Wilson Calkins, of Los Angeles, another "first-time visitor" whom we were glad to meet, said that he had the "time of his life" and stayed until the very last meeting was over. He considered the conference better even than he was anticipating, and that is saying a lot. He surprised his fellow brothers and sisters from California, as they did not know he was coming. Come again, Bro. Calkins.

Here comes Sr. Sybil Guthrie, of Mullin, Texas, with a good word for you. "I have thoroughly enjoyed every sermon and lesson," she says. "The spirit of harmony and unity prevailing throughout is especially sweet to all of like precious faith."

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

The last issue of one of our exchanges contains two articles from the pen of Harvey Krogh, Jr., "Are We Aware?" and "In the Spare Bedroom," both of which have appeared in these columns.

A book review was suggested as a profitable feature to include in The Herald. The plan would be to review works on Bible study and prophecy that might be of interest and value to our readers. We have the suggestion under consideration.

We have just issued a new and attractive edition of the tract, "The Coming of Christ a Divine Necessity." This is one of the best expositions of this subject printed. The tract is a six-page folder, envelope size, and is sent postpaid for 15¢ per dozen, or 90¢ per hundred. Better order a supply.

In a hundred different ways world events are saying, "The Lord is coming!" Let us watch and work and pray that that day may not overtake us as a thief in the night.

The latest word we have from Mrs. Levi Mick, matron of Golden Rule Home, who is spending a few weeks' vacation in Indiana, is to the effect that she is regaining her lost strength and will soon be ready to return to her beloved "family" in Oregon.

The interesting series of short interviews with various ones who were in attendance at the conference which appeared in our last issue and some of which also find place in this number of the paper were secured and edited by Sr. Mary A. Gesin, editor of the Children's Page.

The office is again busy in preparing the material for the next Truth Seekers' Quarterly. Please get your orders in early so that we may know how many copies to print. Why not order a sample to be sent to the teacher of a Sunday school class of some other church near you?

Business men of Oregon report a considerable increase in trade was shown through the buying power of our conference visitors.

"The Gospel" will be the theme of our next special edition of The Restitution Herald. Will our writers please take notice and prepare special articles on this vital element of truth. Publication date not yet determined.

A number of able ministers are available for evangelistic and pastoral work. Brethren, let us assign them a task as our personal representatives and support them in their field of labor. It can be done!

The business manager of the Bible Faith Mission, which carries on missionary work through native workers in India, is now making a tour of the Middle West in the interest of the mission. Bro. Holland (Limestone, Me.) expects to visit the churches of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, during the latter part of the present month.

The program was full from early morning until late at night, as often committees had to work long after the evening audience had been dismissed. But it was a glorious experience that will be long remembered.

Such a splendid group of young people were present this year, and such splendid young people they were! We felt a degree of fraternal pride in introducing them to strangers as representative young men and women of the Church of God.

Among the many valuable features provided by the Exhibit Committee this year was the historical material that was placed on display. Here was shown the minutes of the first two general conferences held by the Church of God. The first was in Philadelphia in 1888, and the second in Chicago the following year. These records now form a permanent part of the annals of the church.

THE BIG FEATURE AT THE FAIR?

THE Century of Progress exhibition at Chicago is so big a thing that one of our own ministers who attended it just recently is reported as saying that it was equivalent to a year's course in any school. With so many features of note and interest, it would be hard to say what one feature was the "biggest" anyway. However, the religious editor of The Chicago Sunday Tribune has a strong article, from which we cull the following notes:

"More than ten thousand persons, on an average, visit the Hall of Religion at A Century of Progress daily. In pointing this out last night, Dr. Hugh Magill, manager of the religious exhibit, said that the influx of visitors frequently exceeds two thousand each hour. Furthermore, comparisons made by Dr. Magill with the total Fair attendance show that ten per cent of the total number of persons entering the exhibition grounds visit the religious exhibits. The significance of these figures is evident when they are compared with attendance at the scores of other buildings and concessions on the exhibition grounds. Dr. Magill said that only the science group—around which the Fair was built—has a better attendance record to date.

"Dr. Magill told of the discouragements that had beset George W. Dixon and his commission shortly after being entrusted by the directors of the Fair with the responsibility for creating a religious exhibit. When the Hall of Religion was first projected, Mr. Dixon repeatedly was asked who would visit the religious exhibit, aside, perhaps, from the remnant of the late Victorian era. It was pointed out to Mr. Dixon and his committee that church attendance had been falling off, and that Protestantism for a number of years had been showing signs of sterility. It was remarked that only in exceptional cases have the pews of Methodist, Baptist, Episcopalian, or Congregational churches been regularly filled of late.

"When you add the great numbers who have attended or who will attend religious demonstrations in Soldier's Field, to those attending meetings in the assembly room of the Hall of Religion and who visit our religious exhibits, the total will be astonishing," he said. "Actually, religion is stealing the show. Look at the Jews and Lutherans alone. Nearly two hundred thousand saw that magnificent Jewish religious drama, "The Romance of a People," and with the two Lutheran days religion will have drawn one hundred twenty-five thousand more."

"Dr. Magill was then asked how he accounted for the great contrast between the apparent decline of Protestant church life and the religious vitality revealed at the Fair. Dr. Magill's broad, north-of-Ireland face beamed, and his eyes twinkled. He replied: 'You are a newspaper man. Here is some news that never could have been published in the world's history until now. Under one roof are housed exhibits of Mormons and Christian Scientists, Jews and Episcopalians, Lutherans and Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians, and between the representatives of these various groups there exists a bond of fellowship that goes deeper than mere politeness. There is an indescribable atmosphere in that heretofore delicate field of religious inter-relationships. It's a new thing.

"There is no appeal as universal as religion. The Hall of Religion responds to the aspiration common to all human hearts. There are no fascinating gadgets on display; nothing much for people to talk about, but a great amount of that which cannot be talked about because it is something which only may be felt. People will congregate wherever it is present.

"In Christianity, the lion and the lamb have lain down together. That does not mean that the lion became a lamb nor the lamb a lion, but rather that each knows he is necessary to the other. The same spirit prevails among the great religions. If I have helped to bring this about in this Fair, then I am ready to answer for my life."

I have given these quotations quite fully, in order to show that in this great Fair there seems to be a place for the religious side of the life of the world that perhaps has never been shown so fully at any display of human progress along material lines heretofore, although this does not mean that real Bible Christianity is becoming popular with the masses. There are some statements in this report that we can seriously question, but, as a whole, it is quite interesting.—A. E. Bloom in The World's Crisis.

"OCCUPY TILL I COME"

"OCCUPY till I come" (Luke 19:13) is a very important command of our Lord which we all should heed much more than we do. By this command our Lord means that we are to do His work on earth, like one who looks continually for His return. We are to be like the faithful servant, who knows not what hour his master may come home, but keeps all things in readiness and is always prepared. We are to be like one who knows that Christ's coming will bring the day of accounting and that he must be ready to render an account. We are not to suppose that we have any freehold in this world, or even a lease. The greatest and richest of the human race are nothing more than God's tenants—at will. We are not to neglect any social duty or relation of life because of the uncertainty of the Lord's return. We must fill the station into which God has called us in a godly manner; and we are to be ready to go from the place of our business to meet the Lord in the air when He comes. We are to be like a man who never knows what a day might bring forth; and, therefore, we are to put off nothing till "a more convenient season." We should rise and go forth in the morning ready, if need be, to meet Him at noon. We should lie down at night upon our couch ready, if need be, to meet Him at midnight or the early morning. In one word, we should measure all our ways by the measure of Christ's sudden coming and do nothing of which we would be ashamed should He suddenly appear. This is what it means, "Occupy till I come." The Lord help us all to be faithful.—A. C. Gaebelien.

A Worker's Prayer

FATHER, help us to hear Thy call in every homely duty and every humble task, in the drudgery of housekeeping, in the dreariness of accounts, in the difficulty of study, in the hardness of toil, in the competition of trade, in the claims of society, in the fight with appetite, in the struggle with poverty, in the management of wealth, in the love of friends, in the courtesy of foes. In all the common experiences of life help us to see Thy love before us to point out the way our love must take; help us to feel thy strength within, making hard things easy, and translating the difficult into accomplished fact. Amen.—Selected.

As One Having Authority

THE teaching of Jesus Christ was distinguished for the positive assurance with which it was presented as well as for the subject matter of His discourses. When He had finished the sermon on the mount, "the multitudes were astonished at his teaching: for he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes." In this instance the word authority refers to the "ability and weight which Jesus exhibited in His teaching," rather than to the right He possessed by divine commission and inspiration to speak for God. Our Lord taught with convincing power because He was an authority on the subject He presented. He knew whereof He spoke. He possessed a comprehensive understanding of the eternal purposes of God. His mind was not confused as to the order of events, the manner in which they were to come about, or the reason for it all. Jesus Christ was an expert on the Scriptures! He was an authority on their interpretation.

It was because of this definite and thoroughly digested knowledge of God's Word that He possessed that He was able to speak so impressively and convincingly. He knew what He was talking about! There came a time when the lawyers dared no longer question Him, for they found that His knowledge of the law was greater than their own and that His logic, based on His knowledge, was unanswerable.

"Knowledge is power," but only attains to such pre-eminence when the one who has acquired it becomes conscious of the fact that what he knows is unmistakably and unchangeably true. There must be no lingering doubt in his mind to cast a shadow of uncertainty over the minds of those whom he seeks to instruct. It is impossible for a teacher to hide from his pupils his own questionings. If he is to convince his hearers, he must know, and know that he knows!

It is this fact that places so much responsibility upon the public worker. He is constantly leading men and women either into truth or into error. Perhaps he is even leading them into both truth and error, and the error into which he leads them may nullify the truth which he imparts and bring them to eternal loss. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," Jesus declared. But nothing short of the truth can accomplish this deliverance. Nothing but the truth will be able to survive the faith-testing fires of the future.

History and our own experience, as well as the Bible, confirm the old Latin adage, Veritas vincit et praevaleret, "Truth conquers and will prevail!" To which we are justified in adding by way of emphasis, Truth alone conquers! Truth alone prevails!

To what does all this lead? To this conclusion: All roads may lead to Rome, but all theories of religion do not lead to salvation! There were many honest, sincere, and prayerful men and women in Jesus' day who believed in God and in the Holy Scriptures as they were possessed by the Jews and who looked for the coming of a Messiah, and yet were "without hope." The Jews who crucified Jesus were in most instances of that very type! The murderous fury which Saul turned against the disciples was inspired by deeply seated religious convictions which led him to desire to glorify God. He was convinced that Jesus was an impostor and that His followers were deluded blasphemers who should be mercilessly exterminated for the honor of Jehovah!

May God help us to cling close to the plain and positive teaching of Jesus Christ! May we endeavor with all earnestness to interpret His message, the gospel which is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," according to the meaning placed upon it by the Jewish Messiah, the Jewish prophets, and the Jewish apostles of our Lord. No other course of procedure is safe for us to follow. No other method of interpretation can by any means reveal the truth that saves and lead us into the eternal kingdom of our God.

The Value of Prophecy

By George B. Alldridge

"Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn."—Matthew 13:30.

THIS article was suggested to the writer after hearing the masterful Bible reading given by Pastor G. Eldred Marsh upon the above text at the General Conference, Saturday afternoon, August 12.

It is important that the Church of God understand prophecy, especially in these "latter days." Daniel said to the mighty king of Babylon, "But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days."—Dan. 2:28. The greatest evidence that proves we are children of God is the possession of this knowledge, for we read in Amos 3:7, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." A prophet in this connection means an inspired man.

Daniel was told, "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand."—Dan. 12:10. Who, then, are the wise? Thank God that James tells us, "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." Hence, then, to all who possess this wisdom from above God reveals His secrets.

When we begin to explain prophecy, we are met with Peter's quoted question, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."—2 Peter 3:4.

Notice Jesus said, "Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them." This is opposite to our methods of farming. We first gather the crops and then destroy or burn the residue. Jesus' method is scientifically correct. How could a discrimination be made between the wheat and tare classes, unless a separation be first made? The wisdom of Jesus is made evident by this method so that Malachi 3:18 may be realized: "Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not."

Never in the history of the world were organizations of every description and character being created as they are today: religious, political, scientific, social, industrial, philosophical, philanthropic, and humanitarian. As each becomes segregated, each unit constitutes one of the bundles Jesus classified as tares.

How significant are these words in Revelation 18:4, 5: "And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Jesus in Matthew 24:38, 39 gives us a wonderful key to unlock the book, the contents of which show He is at the door.

If we go back and read Genesis 6:1-4, we will note that the religious elements of society (the seed of the woman) and the carnal or political elements (the seed of the serpent) united in marriage and that the offspring of this union produced giants. "The same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown."

I have often wondered what is wrong in "marrying and giving in marriage." Paul in 2 Corinthians 6:14-18 elucidates this very clearly: "What concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?" This was God's test in the days of Elijah (1 Kings 19:18), in Paul's day (Rom. 11:4, 5), and it is the final test Jesus will apply upon His return (Rev. 20:4).

The other morning I read in the morning paper, "The steel giants met to consider adopting a code relating to the N. R. A." I laughed to myself and thanked God that I had now solved what "marrying and giving in marriage" means. The uniting of the religious organizations throughout the land, with the political or carnal elements of society is producing gigantic industrial organizations known as "trusts." These are the oppressors of the people which James so clearly foresaw (James 5:1-7). Strange that he should couple this with the coming of the Lord and the gathering of the harvest if it does not apply today! (over)

Best Things

Only melted gold is minted;
Clouded skies are rainbow-tinted;
Only wax that has been softened, takes the die;
Plastic clay the potter useth;
Tempered steel the wise smith chooseth.
Clear the reason; none the need to question why.

Untilled soil is never seeded;
Unsown fields are never weeded;
Reaping never comes where seed has not been sown.
Skill awaits the toiling fingers.
Comes where patient effort lingers;
To the humble, earnest seeker truth is known.

To the humble soul God calleth:
In the softened heart seed falleth;
Richest fruits of righteousness the sowing grace.
Of the plastic will God maketh
Vessel that His image taketh;
Tempered lives He chooseth for the highest place.
—H. V. Andrews.

When riding through the country, I observed that the farmers only gathered the crops; many beautiful flowers and weeds were cast aside. Why? Because only crops are of value to the farmer, however beautiful the other products of the soil may be. So God cast aside many admirable institutions, more pleasant to the eye than we who constitute the church of God. At the World's Fair I noted the beautiful robes of office worn by the ecclesiastical authorities during the services of worship in their denominations. But God can only use the wheat class, however repulsive they appear to the eye of man.

Jesus said to let both grow together, tares and wheat, each an extract of the soil, which nourishes its life. In like manner God's people and those of the world are protected by the same governments. God's people remember Romans 13:1-8 and obey it, and also Jesus' words in Matthew 22:21. They should refrain from all active participation in politics, as Paul's exhortation reads in Philippians 3:20, "For our polity begins in the heavens from whence also we are expecting a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ."—Diag. And Peter's words: "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

When we were passing through a town, our attention was called to a large factory. Outside, awaiting unloading, were several large trucks loaded with corn. Some one remarked that in the factory are canned all kinds of farm products to be distributed throughout the whole world to feed and nourish its famishing millions. In like manner Jesus gathers His wheat into His garner so that, being preserved for the coming age, they may feed earth's millions with the Word of God (see Amos 8:11, 12).

We read, "Noah was a just man, and perfect in his generation, and Noah walked with God." In Hebrews 11:7 it is stated, "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith."

Today God is warning His people of the coming catastrophe (2 Peter 3:7). Only those who are perfect in their generation (John 1:12, 13; James 1:18; 1 Cor. 4:15; 1 Peter 1:23) will heed the message.

Who can read Psalm 50:1-5 and not realize that God is speaking? Only those will be gathered who have made a covenant with Him by sacrifice. Jesus, speaking of this time, said, "For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together." In Luke 17:35-37 Jesus, speaking of this final separation, points out that at this time "the eagles gather where the body is." Every Bible student knows what the body is. "So we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."

"For we being many are one bread, and one body; for we are all partakers of that one bread." This is the place to which the eagles gather.

Who are the eagles? The Bible tells us. I will quote a few verses showing how beautifully this class is connected with God. Whatever strength He himself possesses He will bestow upon them. "Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew (margin, "change") their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."—Isaiah 40:28-31.

Let me quote again to prove that this occurs only to those who are changed from mortal to immortal beings. "Who redeemeth thy life from destruction (this can be no other place than the grave); who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies (read 2 Timothy 4:6-8); who satisfieth thy mouth with good things (read John 6:47-58); so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."—Psalm 103:4, 5.

God today is using His people, the church of God, as witnesses of His truth, that His well beloved Son will soon return and establish His kingdom upon this earth. "Whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Upon this testimony God will condemn all who reject it. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

LOOKING FOR MERCY

"Looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."—Jude 21.

THIS is the last exhortation in the Epistle of Jude, that Epistle which describes the religious conditions of our own times. The exhortation concerns the coming of our Lord for His own waiting people. It is here called an act of mercy for us. Why? In the last days, when everything becomes weaker, dangers abound, Satan's power increases, troubles and trials for those who walk with God multiply, those who are true to Christ suffer and become weary. We may expect all these things in an increased measure should the coming of our Lord be delayed longer. Satan will attack us more. His wiles, to spoil us of our reward, will become more subtle. The world will be more antagonistic, and all who stand for Christ and the gospel will have to bear His reproach. Many of God's people groan under these conditions; and the groans will not decrease, but increase. And some day, the day appointed by God, the day known to Him, He will answer the groans, and Christ will come. What mercy it will be when He takes us home unto eternal life! What a mercy when he saves us out of this world to be with Him.—Selected by R. A. Curtis.

The Modern Argument

DEBUNKING is the favorite indoor sport of the self-styled intelligentsia. All our revered beliefs have been subjected to the merriment of the debunkers. With great zest and much laughter George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Henry Ward Beecher, and many others of our national heroes have been boastfully shown to have been mere men—very mere indeed!

The debunkers have gone out to twit us as having puerile moral codes that are foolish superstitions and a civilization that is a huge farce; everything has been properly debunked, even the Bible and Christianity.

The unbelief of the present day does not vent itself in ranting or in violent blasphemy. The present day skeptic does not mount the soap box and denounce in perspiring vigor. He drips learning; he exudes knowledge; he exhales science. He looks down in superior disdain on anyone who differs with him. He does not argue. He only laughs. That is what Mencken in the preface to his latest book, Treatise on the Gods, says. He tells us that he goes through life laughing at everything in heaven and on earth.

MOCKING THE BIBLE

THE modernist is eruditely mocking. In sesquipedalian nomenclature he pokes polysyllabic banter at the "simple" believer. Failing in logic, the modernist, with the superior mien of a profound philosopher, brilliant scientist, and sophisticated theologian, debunks the Bible. With large pleasantry and jocund whimsy it is brushed aside as we discard the fairy tales of childhood. He talks chucklingly of the ignorance of those who believe that God made the world in six literal days instead of the two billion years about which the modernist talks so knowingly.

His banter reaches Flastaffian proportions when he comes to the biblical account of the creation of woman. Here witticisms run riot. Gales of laughter, with a doctor of philosophy terminology issue forth. Puns and wise cracks all in esoteric formula scintillate for the merriment of other learned gentlemen.

THE BIBLE "MISUNDERSTOOD"

ARGUMENT! There is none. To argue would be to recognize another side. And the belief of those who still trust in the Bible as the Word of God must not be raised to such dignity. What the modernist cannot understand he at once assumes no one else can, and he condescendingly derides anyone who claims to understand what is not clear to "the modern mind."

At first the modernists only claimed that the Bible had been misinterpreted; the apostles were misunderstood. The modernists then gave us what they guaranteed was the real meaning of the Bible writers. They talked glibly of "settled" results. Oh, yes, they believed in the Bible! It was merely misunderstood; but no one need worry now, for they would make everything plain as day.

For instance, we read that Jesus walked on the water. That is a miracle, and miracles do not happen in the modernist's theology. The apostles intended to say that Jesus only "appeared" to walk on the water, for, of course, the apostles knew as well as the modernists the absurdity of thinking that Jesus actually walked on the water. And the apostles were so sure that no one would actually assume that Jesus did walk on water—how amusing!—it never occurred to them that it would be nineteen hundred years before their real meaning would be plain. All other miracles were explained away in similar manner. But all the time the modernists protested most vehemently that they were true, really the only true, Bible believers.

THE DISGUISE DROPPED

BUT the present generation of modernists have thrown off this pretense. They now boldly, baldly assert that the apostles did think and did write that Jesus walked on water. But what of it? Of course, the apostles were mistaken about this as about a thousand other things! It is not worth arguing about, for everyone knows no one can walk on water. The matter is not open to discussion.

Oh yes, such Bible stories were all right for the kindergarten age of the world; but now that we have come of age, no one is expected to believe such absurdity. And if you do believe Jesus walked on water, it is automatic proof that you are not intelligent, that you are still a kindergarten.

In this age of science, the modernist tells us, we are to believe nothing we cannot demonstrate. But, strange to say, the modernist is the very one who not only does not demonstrate, but who in place of demonstration and argument puts assertion. He assumes as proved the very thing to be proved. He tells us, as Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick does in his latest book, wet from the press, As I See Religion, page 106, that the world is two billion years old, without offering a single word of evidence in support.

The modernist begins with the postulate that the Bible is limitlessly unreliable, full of superstitious absurdities, teeming with mistakes, overflowing with childish miracles. He enters the Garden of Eden at Genesis with a grin of derision, goes through the whole Bible with rollicking ridicule, and emerges in the new earth of Revelation with the smirk of one who has pulled a chair from under a friend about to sit down.

The essence of modernism is that there is no absolute standard. Everything is in the state of becoming, of flux, of evolution. So there can be no final standard in anything. The only positive teaching of liberalism is that we must deny all positive religious teaching. (over)

We often read modernistic books without being aware that the modernists have taken over evangelical terms and given them new meanings utterly foreign and often opposed to the meaning in vogue for generations. These new meanings are thus smuggled in. This theological jugglery is a species of dishonesty.

For instance, the modernist speaks of the atonement of Christ as enthusiastically as the evangelical, but he means something utterly different from the fundamentalist. He denies every tenet that makes the atonement valid and meaningful for the fundamentalist; yet the unwary reader, not knowing what the modernist means by "atonement," thinks the modernist is evangelical at least in this.—Earle Albert Rowell.

The Living Word of God

By Glenn M. Birkey

---

"For living is the word of God, and energetic, and more cutting than any knife with two edges, and penetrating as far as a dividing asunder of soul and spirit, of joints and marrow, and able to judge the impulses and designs of the heart."—Hebrews 4:12, Rotherham.

I HAVE read and pondered over the above verse of Scripture and have concluded that it teaches there is no limitation as to the power of God's inspired Word upon humanity. It can change a vile sinner into a good person (James 5:15). The critic claims it is a dead Word, good, perhaps, but first written for the people of that day, out of date for our progressive times.

I disagree with this and think all lovers of God's Word are of the same opinion. If only the multitudes in the world today could realize what happiness the living Word could bring into their lives, they would let no time pass before accepting it.

Those of us who were privileged to attend the classes in prophecy at the recent General Conference were more than impressed with the way God has caused His prophecies to be fulfilled, and I am sure we are filled to overflowing with thanksgiving to know we have let this Word dominate our lives.

I present in closing a selection from the Bible Faith Mission Standard, which places emphasis on the power of God's Word.

"The Book is powerful. One writer declares that it has dynamite in it, so wonderful is the way in which it speaks to the hearts of men.

"Once, when Dr. John Chamberlain had read to the natives of an East Indian city the first chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, an intelligent Brahman said to him: 'Sir, that chapter was written by one of you missionaries about us Hindus. It describes us exactly.' But we know that those inspired words were written by the Apostle Paul almost two thousand years before the first missionary went to India.

"A learned Chinese student was employed to translate the New Testament into his native language. At first he worked stolidly, but after a few weeks he came to the missionary greatly agitated.

" 'What a wonderful Book this is!' he exclaimed.

" 'Why so?' questioned his employer.

" 'Because,' the Chinese replied, 'it tells me so exactly about myself. It knows all that is in me. The One who made this Book must be the One who made me.'

"An Armenian patient in a Christian hospital in Turkey was given a copy of the Book and carried it home with him to his native village. Very proudly he exhibited his new possession; but the priest, when he saw it was a Bible, snatched it from his hand, tore it in pieces, and flung it into the street. There it lay until a grocer, coming by, picked it up to use as wrapping paper in his shop. Thus the poor villagers took home bits of the Word wrapped around a bit of cheese, a few olives, or a candle. And in this strange way that one Bible was scattered all through the countryside. Soon the grocer's customers began to ask if he had any more leaves. They had read the torn pages and wanted to know more of the Book. The grocer, of course, knew nothing about the Bible and could not help them find another. But the leaves were treasured and read over and over again.

"A change came into the lives of these simple people as they tried to follow this new guide. And then one day a missionary colporteur on his round through the Turkish provinces reached this obscure village. To his great amazement a hundred persons came demanding Bibles or parts of the Bible when his errand was known. No Christian preacher had been at work; but the scattered leaves had proclaimed their own message of light and life, proving once more the power of God's Word to transform hearts.

"If only the scattered words and actions which go to make the volume of our daily living all reflected the Christ, then we would indeed be living epistles, worthy to be 'known and read of all men.' O, if we were only as good as our Book, what a different place this world would be!"

Echoes From General Conference Sermons

---

THREE of the best known ministers of the church gave the final messages on the last Sunday of General Conference at Oregon, Illinois. The morning service by Bro. G. E. Marsh was particularly planned for those who at its conclusion took on the name of Jesus Christ in baptism. We approached that most solemn and sacred ordinance established by our Master with God in our midst, and under Bro. Marsh's guidance our minds were brought into harmony with the thought that there is no true baptism without the presence of God.

THE MEANING OF BAPTISM

"Baptism is an act of God to which man can contribute very little," the speaker began. "All that we may do or say is of little moment. Only the miracle that God performs can transform a man or a woman from an individual without hope to one filled with that blessed hope. We can but bring these splendid young people to the feet of Jesus Christ; we can but inspire them with an appreciation of the greatness and the wonder of the love of God; they will experience that miracle, the results of which reach far beyond this present life. From this day forward their lives will be enlarged and beautified."

Bro. Marsh then showed us that certain things are necessary and essential before taking on oneself the blessed name of Jesus in baptism. "We must understand that the Savior of men actually died for our sins on Calvary's hill, that He was buried, and that He rose again. To go down into the water without this understanding is to rob this ordinance of its most solemn meaning. This act is typical of His death, burial, and resurrection."

Baptism was likened by the speaker to the marriage vow, only being more sacred and binding than that step. For it holds not only during this life, but reaches into eternity itself. "You are from this day forward taking Jesus Christ as your Example, your Friend, your Teacher. He will be at your side at all times to guide, to comfort, and to instruct you. You are forsaking the leadership of all others for His leadership.

"As you go into the water, you signify your determination to die to sin," was Bro. Marsh's kindly admonition. "You signify your decision to cut off all those things in your life which might detract from your service to your Master. You signify your complete faith in Jesus Christ to bring you out of death. For if our Lord should delay His coming, you, too, shall fall asleep, helpless to rise again without His power. And we lose half the beauty and symbolism of baptism if we leave out the fact of mortality.

"You will arise from your watery grave new creatures, filled with the assurance that God has forgiven your sins. Life has a new purpose, a new outlook. Baptism opens the door into the riches of Almighty God, into the wisdom of the heavenly Father. By it you pledge yourself to press forward into His service and follow His bidding."

Bro. Marsh in conclusion impressed upon the members of Christ's body their duty to the new members, the babes in Christ. "They are being bound together with us; they will be our companions, our brothers and our sisters. It is our duty to pray for them, sympathize with them, assist them at all times. They will make many mistakes, even as we do. We must remember they are dear to the Father, and we must build them up and gently lead them forward until we all shall come into the unity of the faith, unto the stature of the fullness of Christ."

COMFORT OF A LIVING FAITH

MANY of those present for the afternoon service, particularly from Illinois where Bro. F. E. Siple labored so many years, were happy to have the privilege of hearing him proclaim the gospel again. In his usual persuasive manner the speaker presented the Christian's real relationship with God as bringing him more comfort and joy today than we generally presume to be the case. He opened with a story from life told to him by a young man, showing that it is possible to go to too great lengths in pursuing even a worthy ambition. And he described the blessings to be derived today from a communion with our Father such as is open to all true followers as so far transcending anything this world might offer that they cannot be compared.

"We need young people with ambition, with vigor, with ideals; but there is something in life more important than these," Bro. Siple said, "an enjoyment of a real, true relationship with God, an appreciation of our religion expressed in communion with the Father. As a denomination we are weak in this respect. In this period of time we have many problems to solve, and the comfort of religion is found in turning to God's Word. What a comfort to read His Book and then to close one's eyes and talk to the Father! Whatever the problem, it will not be able to settle upon us, in spite of its intensity. For we know that all things will work together for good (Rom. 8:28).

"Can you be too much worried or depressed by the problem over your head? If you are, are you making use of your religion? God does not disappoint us if we are living true to Him, for He says, 'Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find.' Regardless of what the past has held, look to the Father with an open heart, and He will hear you."

The blessedness of the realization of forgiveness for sin was pictured by the speaker and held out to his audience as something more desirable than all else. Reading from 1 Corinthians 10:13, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able;

but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." Also, 1 John 1:9, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

"It is a fine thing to study God's inspired Word, to understand the prophecies that have been fulfilled and those that will transpire in the immediate and more distant future. It is a wonderful thing to look to the beautiful promises of tomorrow, but there is something even more important than these," Bro. Siple concluded. "We need to settle down solidly in an enjoyment and an appreciation of our faith today. We need to realize the comfort of a living faith as we go forward in our service to God."

THE UNSEARCHABLE RICHES OF CHRIST

The final theme of the conference very fittingly was, "The Unsearchable Riches of Christ," given by Bro. F. L. Austin. "Paul tells us in his Ephesian letter that he was chosen to preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ," he began. "Let us discover the meaning of the word 'unsearchable.' The Diaglott rendering is, 'unfathomable'; another translation gives the word 'untraceable.' In the Roman letter these riches are described as 'past finding out' or 'insecurable.'"

Looking over the great works of God during the ages past, we see His marvelous orderliness, His perfect regularity. God is never short of creative power. We marvel at a Creator whose laws never vary, who gives the hungry food, the homeless homes, and the friendless friends. Whence is the great reservoir of supply?

"The heavenly Father has vested all these unsearchable, boundless, and unfathomable riches in His Son. The word was kept secret until it was declared unto the Gentiles that they should be partakers of the power and the riches of Christ Himself. The beautiful blooms which we see about us have been nurtured by the sun and the rain, those great powers of the Father in heaven. He asks us to plant ourselves into the life of His Son to be fashioned into immortal standing like unto His."

Bro. Austin painted two pictures for us, one showing the sin and degradation to which man descends when relying on his own activity and effort; the other, a glorious one, showing the darkness of sin past as the dawn of a new day comes in. "The latter picture is just now rising below the horizon of life. In the near future it will be revealed in all its glory, displaying to this sin-cursed earth all the boundless riches of Christ," he declared. "In the near future we shall see Him crowned as King of kings and Lord of lords, ushering in eternal peace. This picture our heavenly Father will enact, will perfect into reality by the unsearchable riches of power and wisdom vested in His glorified Son."

"We are about to say good-bye. One question before we part, 'Will you let the Savior develop you to a place beside Him in that coming new day of grandeur?' He and His Father are the only ones who have that power. May God lead you to place your trust in Him that you may share in His unsearchable riches in that day is my prayer."

MUSIC HATH CHARMS

By Arlen Marsh

IN THE estimation of the poet, "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast." Experience serves to establish the lyrical assertion as truth. Aztec, Hottentot, bushman, and European, regardless of the thickness of their veneer of civilization, all succumb to the melodies and rhythms drawn from the jazzy saxophone or the sullen tom-tom. Each to his kind, of course; but every human being has buried somewhere within him an appreciation of one of the many varieties of music.

Except in the church! There, alas! every vestige of his normal regard for tones and cadences seems to desert the average human being and leave him with neither respect nor courtesy for those who attempt to worship as did David—with instrument or song. That the Psalmist of the Hebrews implored all people to "praise the Lord with harp: sing unto him with the psaltery and an instrument of ten strings" is a fact that congregations are prone to forget.

Not in all churches, but in many, the beginning of a piano or organ voluntary or solo is the signal for a sudden outburst of enthusiastic conversation, pitched to carry clearly above the music. Disregarding the rules of courtesy, without thinking of the hours of practice that that playing represents, those in the audience brook no interference with their discussion of the new neighbors, the rising price of corn, and the "awful high taxes." On the contrary, they merely raise their voices and carry on.

But, in some services, the choir itself expresses the primary objection to this proclivity for uninterrupted talk by the popular opening sentence: "The Lord is in His holy temple. Let all the earth keep silence before Him."

Music, whether it be vocal or instrumental, can be made quite as expressive of worship as the prayers and sermon delivered during any service. Nor is it necessary that this music be hymnic in character. "I like to sing the old songs" is a beautiful sentiment; but David's urge to "sing unto him (Jehovah) a new song" may well be applied to the modern, unfamiliar anthems and solos sung by choirs. The mere fact that one is unacquainted with the number being rendered provides no cause for low-voiced criticisms of it to one's neighbors. It is natural to dislike certain songs, to like some more than others, and to be indifferent toward many; but this emotional reaction is immaterial. After all, the musicians of your church are, or should be, honestly striving to express their thought of devotion and to permeate the service with a spirit of reverence for God. Their purpose cannot be accomplished unless their hearers choose to cooperate with them.

So when the voluntary, opening sentence, offertory, solo, anthem, or response is being played or sung, remember that that part of the program is as sacred to the Almighty as the sermon and that, since this is true, it deserves as worshipful and as attentive consideration as is accorded the speaker.

Thoughts for Thinkers

HUMAN OPINION SAYS:

1. "The wages of sin is eternal torment."
2. "No one can ever get out of hell, for it is a place where sinners must suffer to all eternity."
3. "Hell is eternal and will never be destroyed."
4. "The wicked will be punished with everlasting misery."
5. "The torments of the lost begin on the day of his death."
6. "God is a tormenting fire."
7. "Sinners will burn forever but will never be consumed."
8. "The wicked will live as long as the righteous; they will only be in a different place."

THE WORD OF GOD SAYS:

1. "The wages of sin is death."—Rom. 6:23.
2. "His soul was not left in hell . . ." "Hell delivered up the dead."—Acts 2:31; Rev. 20:13.
3. "Death and hell were cast into the lake of fire."—Rev. 20:14.
4. They "shall be punished with everlasting destruction."—2 Thess. 1:9.
5. "In that very day his thoughts perish."—Psalm 146:4.
6. "God is a consuming fire."—Heb. 12:29.
7. "The day that cometh shall burn them up, . . . that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Malachi 4:1.
8. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16.

Born of God

By M. W. Perrine

"BORN again," or "born of the Spirit," has the same meaning and accomplishes the same purpose. It makes one a child of God by a resurrection, as Jesus says. It takes the flesh and blood man and changes him into a spirit man. Jesus said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." We surely are flesh; therefore, we have been born once and that of the flesh. When we are born again according to the words of Jesus, we shall be spirit. We can stand squarely upon these words, for they are the words of Jesus and we have no right to quibble over them or change them.

God's law for generating is through the female. No child has ever been born of a male. Jesus was God's Son, but He came through a virgin mother. All things are possible with God. A child can be born of God, who is masculine, by setting aside His law of generation and performing a stupendous miracle, using His wonderful power to change from flesh and blood to spirit which is both incorruptible and immortal. This takes place at the resurrection from the dead; afterwards the living saints are changed and caught away.

Paul teaches that those who have believed the Word, been begotten by the Word, and been baptized into Christ are children of God by faith. Then they are waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of their bodies, when, like Jesus, we will be declared to be sons of God with power according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead (Rom. 1:4). Believing is only a matter of faith and changes the heart or affections but does not change the nature. He who believes is a begotten child, but is still flesh and blood and subject to sin.

Jesus gives us an insight into the nature of and the time when one is born of the Spirit and becomes a child of God by a resurrection from the dead. "Jesus answering said, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage: but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and a resurrection from the dead neither marry, nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God . . ." This statement of Jesus teaches this truth: they are children of God in a special sense, not by faith, but because of the fact that they are raised up from the dead by the Spirit of God into the spirit-world; therefore, as Jesus said, they are spirit and entitled to an entrance into the kingdom of God. They are sons of God in the same sense that Paul said Jesus was. He was the firstborn among many brethren (Rom. 8:29).

The saints will be the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb (Rev. 14:4). These one hundred forty-four thousand that stood with Him on Mount Zion that were redeemed from the earth and had the Father's name written in their foreheads were the first body of saints that were born of the Spirit, born into the kingdom of God, born from the dead as Jesus their Head was. They can both see and enter into the kingdom of God. They can now produce the evidence, they can come and go like the wind (John 3:8), for they are spirit. Jesus said in John 3:8, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." We repeat again the words of Jesus by way of emphasis. John 3:6: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Are you who claim to be born of the Spirit, spirit?

It was the Spirit of God that raised up Jesus from the dead (Rom. 8:11) and brought Him forth a spirit body and gave Him power to come and go like the wind. If Jesus was not born, made alive of the Spirit, poor mortal man need never hope to be. Remember "it is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."—John 6:63.

"NOT INTOXICATING, BUT BE CAREFUL"

THE Chicago Tribune of April 2 reports that Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green, of the traffic court, issued a warning to motorists. The judge is quoted as saying: "Don't drive your automobile if you are going to imbibe excessively of the newly legalized brew. Any increase in intoxicated driver cases will be used by the drys in fighting the liberalization of our prohibition laws."

The judge, by implication at least, indicts the new brew as intoxicating. He warns against excessive drinking, which certainly would not be necessary if he were certain that 3.2 beer is actually non-intoxicating.

The judge was asked if it would be possible to convict anyone for drunkenness as the result of drinking a beverage which Congress has declared non-intoxicating. He replied:

"The question of whether the driver is intoxicated lies solely with the court. If witnesses testify the defendant talked incoherently, staggered, or lacked control of his faculties, there might be a finding of guilty, notwithstanding evidence that 3.2 beer was alone responsible.

"The maximum penalty for this offense is six months in jail and $1,000 fine, and the minimum penalty is ten days in jail and $100 fine.

"Understand, I am not saying that 3.2 beer is intoxicating. I am merely warning motorists to be careful."

In other words, it is not intoxicating; but be careful, or you might get drunk.—Selected.

INVESTING WITH GOD

By C. E. Randall

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal."—Matthew 6:19.

WE ARE witnessing the tragic results of man's doing the very thing which God cautioned him not to do. Oh, the heartaches, disappointments, and bitter experiences of investing with man rather than God! All earthly investments are very, very insecure. Depressions, earthquakes, tornadoes, droughts, and a hundred and one other adversities can wipe out life's savings in a brief period of time. And even if heaven's choicest blessings shower upon us from the cradle to the grave and wealth, yea, abundance of wealth, comes into our laps, yet we pass away; and life, that period of man's existence for investment, has been spent, spent on the unenduring things. What a tragedy! Such a life has been unprofitable both to self and to humanity.

On the other hand, those wise and faithful stewards of God's blessings have with each passing day invested in those eternal securities that bring peace, happiness, and salvation to self and others; and when the mantle of death wraps its folds around them, life's past will be a pleasant memory and an eternal inheritance will be theirs to enjoy when the glories of eternal day burst forth upon them on resurrection morn. Faithful stewards will lay up "treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal."—Matthew 6:20.

Christian work offers many opportunities of investment today. These openings are not going to stand long. The day of work will soon be over. The opportunities for service will soon be ended. Work that we might have done will be left undone. When we recall these neglected chances when the day is ended, how bitter the regrets will be! We cannot undo the past, but we can redeem the few days that remain. Shall we?—Church of God Messenger.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

The heart-strings are rusted and broken,
The kingdom has gone to decay;
The harpist-king sleeps on Mount Zion
Not far from the ancient gateway;

But the tender Psalm of the shepherd
Sings on through the wearisome years—
The shepherd may sleep, but his message
Still lives to dispel mortal fears.

the Twenty-Third Psalm."

“THUS SAITH THE LORD OF HOSTS; TURN YE UNTO ME, SAITH THE LORD OF HOSTS, AND I WILL TURN UNTO YOU, SAITH THE LORD OF HOSTS.”—ZECHARIAH 1:3.

A PRAYER

Most merciful Father, who orderest the wills and affections of men; inspire in the heart of this Thy servant holy wishes and aspirations, that all base imaginings and sinful broodings may be cast out. Spirit of purity and grace, cleanse the thoughts of his heart and bring his whole being into captivity to the law of Christ. So direct and control his mind that he may ever think on whatsoever things are true and pure and lovely. Let no corrupt thought get dominion over him. Enter Thou into the house of his soul. Enlarge and renew it and consecrate it to Thyself, that he may love Thee with all his mind and serve Thee with all his might. Free him from the fascinations of false pleasures and the allurements of debasing desires. Fill his eyes with the eternal beauty of goodness, that vice and sin may appear as they really are, the last shame and despair of life. Keep him outwardly in his body and inwardly in his soul, and constrain him to reverential obedience to the laws Thou hast ordained. We ask it for Thy Son our Savior's sake. Amen.—Samuel McComb.

If we with earnest effort could succeed
To make our life one long connected prayer,
As lives of some perhaps have been and are;
If, never leaving Thee, we had no need
Our wandering spirits back again to lead
Into Thy presence, but continue there,
Like angels standing on the highest stair
Of the sapphire throne—this were to pray indeed.

But if distractions manifold prevail,
And if in this we must confess we fail,
Grant us to keep at least a prompt desire,
Continual readiness for prayer and praise,
An altar heaped and waiting to take fire
With the least spark, and leap into a blaze.
—Archbishop Trench.

SHINING FOR JESUS

“Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.”—1 John 4:15.

AMONG the first requisites for salvation is faith. Without faith, works are of no value; belief is only fear. To show our faith we must confess it. We are commanded by Jesus in the sermon on the mount (Matthew 5:16), “Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.” Before this verse, Christ compares unenthusiastic, really unfaithful, but professed, followers of His with savorless, worthless salt.

1 Corinthians 14:8 gives us another warning: “For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?” Are we who are left with the task of warning the world of the wrath to come going about our work so half-heartedly that we are not noticed? To be considered and noticed, though not believed, is better than complete indifference. Besides, unless we present our cause to the world so people must either accept or reject it, we are assuming the responsibility for their sins. But if we have warned them, we cannot be blamed. Let us not emulate those denounced in Revelation 3:15, 16: “I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.”

We show our faith and belief in Christ partly by the things we say. Do we share this faith and belief with others? Do we invite people to attend Berean meeting or church with us? Does our ordinary daily conversation reflect our following of Christ's precepts?

Another way we confess Christ is by act. “And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?”—Luke 6:46. One of these “things” is baptism. There is something amiss with an individual who says he believes in Christ, but will not obey Him. In the description of the last judgment in Matthew 25 a good idea of how we can confess Christ in deed is given.

But the most efficacious confession, perhaps, is that of our general attitude. Too many have said they believed and have even been baptized, and then have gone on living a life of denial of Christ. Our faith and belief should take the form of constant, abiding service.

Paul said, “I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ.” The half-hearted believers of John 12:42 dared not confess their belief because they were afraid to lose the praise and acclaim of men. The reward of all such people is terrible.

Let us remember Matthew 12:30: “He that is not with me is against me,” and that mere nonconfession and negligence border too dangerously on denial.

"A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly."

A TRUE FRIEND

EACH one of you, I hope, has a very dear friend, one who comes first in your thoughts at all times. There is nothing finer in life than the friendship of one who is good and true and helpful. There is nothing that will teach you to be unselfish, to be generous, to be kind and sympathetic than having a dear friend of your very own.

You wouldn't think that one who was going to be the king would need such a friend, would you? But David did, and the strange part of it all, as well as the most beautiful, is that his friend was the one who would naturally expect to be king when a new king should take the throne.

Imagine yourself one day expecting to be president of your class and finding out that another had been chosen! Then imagine that one needing a friend very, very badly. Could you be that friend, true, trustworthy, loyal, and unselfish? That's just what Jonathan, the king's son, was to David! He was a much finer, much nobler character than his father, Saul. For it was because of King Saul's jealousy that David needed a friend so very much.

Saul permitted his hateful feelings to take such complete control of him that finally he could think of nothing else, and his mean thoughts showed in his face and in every action. But Jonathan stood right by David, even warning him when he knew he was in danger from his father.

Turn in your Bibles to 1 Samuel 20:1-34 and read how Saul planned to kill David and how Jonathan and David agreed upon a certain sign between them that would tell David when he was in danger. If it had not been for Jonathan, David would surely never have lived to be king over Israel. But God was watching over David and was pleased with him, for we read that "David behaved himself wisely in all his way; and the Lord was with him."

We all have our friends here on earth, and we need them and they need us. But there is a heavenly Friend who is better than all others who will be a Friend to all who ask Him.

The other day I read a story of a little girl who had a birthday book, a present from her dearest friend. As she showed it to a visitor one day, they read the dates of different friends' birthdays, and they came to December 25. After this date the little girl had written, "Dear Lord Jesus."

"But," said the visitor, "I thought this book was only for the birthdays of your friends."

"Why, Jesus is my very dearest and best Friend of all," said the little girl.

And I hope He is just that to all of you, dear boys and girls. You can go to Him and tell Him things you couldn't tell your earthly friends, and He will know every time just what you ought to do. He will tell you, too, if you are very quiet and do as David did, behave yourself wisely.

A booklet for Jonathan will be a very interesting thing to make. Write the story of David's and Jonathan's friendship. Then draw the girdle, sword, bow, and arrows that Jonathan gave David. The girdle was probably of fine silk and beautiful colors. It was wound several times around the waist. Giving these things to David was in reality giving him the right to the throne, as they were the sign of Jonathan's heirship. Jonathan was a prince, you know.

The bow was probably made of tough but pliable wood; the arrows of reed tipped with metal. All of you boys have made bows and arrows, I'm sure, and even wooden swords. Jonathan's sword was of metal, of course; was perhaps two-edged; and was worn in a sheath hanging from the girdle.

Now write the story found in 1 Samuel 24, showing how David could have killed Saul, but only cut off the skirt of his robe while he slept; and in 1 Samuel 26, how Saul was at David's mercy again, but David only took away his spear and his bottle of water. Could you have been so generous, do you think? I'm afraid I couldn't.

Look up the word "friend" in your concordance and copy several verses that are given under it. Notice especially that if we want to have a friend, we must be willing to be a friend. There is something for us to do, then.

Find out what it is we must do to have Jesus, that greatest One of all, for our Friend. You will find it in John 15. The thirteenth verse shows us what Jesus did for us, and the fourteenth verse shows us what we must do for Him. Last copy this:

"I have a blessed Friend above,
His happy, loving child am I;
He sends me pleasures every day,
And kindly listens when I pray.

"I ask Him to forgive my sin
And make me white as snow within;
Since Jesus loves and cares for me,
His happy, loving friend I'll be."

LESSON 11. — September 10, 1933

JONATHAN

1 Samuel 18 to 20

Devotional Reading: Romans 12:1-5, 9, 10

GOLDEN TEXT

A friend loveth at all times.—Proverbs 17:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Jonathan: A Study in Friendship.

Aim: To lead the pupil to place a high value on friendship and the obligations of friendship.

Basic Truth: "A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly."—Prov. 18:24.

I. Jonathan Makes a Friend. (1 Sam. 18:1-4.) Jonathan and David present a picture of true friendship that is not excelled anywhere in history or in literature. Their natures were similar, their spirits congenial, and each found in the other a companionship to be prized. They met for the first time after David's successful combat with Goliath, when David appeared before Saul to be questioned. So pleasing was David's attitude, so attractive and modest his bearing, that Jonathan became at once interested in him with an interest that never waned with the passage of the years. David appreciated the friendship of Jonathan quite as much as Jonathan rejoiced in David's, and the result was a fellowship that withstood trials and testings of the hardest kind.

II. Jonathan Proves His Friendship. (1 Sam. 20:35-41.) Jonathan as eldest son of Saul was the one to whom the throne would ordinarily be supposed to come at the death of his father. But Jonathan had already been informed that David by divine decree was to succeed Saul. This knowledge did nothing to turn him against the younger man, however. Jonathan's entire attitude toward David was that of a wholly disinterested friend. He wanted his friend to have all that was his by right. He warned David repeatedly of Saul's evil plottings against him and urged him to flee from the wrath of the king. No jealousy or envy was permitted to mar the friendship of these two remarkable men.

III. Jonathan's Friendship Appreciated. (1 Sam. 20:42.) True friendship has its basis in mutual trust and appreciation. Jonathan appreciated David's excellent qualities of heart and mind, and David in turn appreciated Jonathan. When conditions were reversed and David came into power, he punished with death the man who confessed to the killing of Saul.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Friendship: Friendship is a sacred thing. Real, true friends are not to be found every day. Such a friend is one that loves truly, one that you can talk to without weighing words, one that understands at all times, one that sees the good and helps to overcome the weaknesses. The friendship that developed between David and Jonathan was of the true type. It could be depended on. It was of such quality that adversity enhanced it rather than weakened it. Smooth words of an enemy or mistrusting remarks of fly-by-night friends could not alter this unchanging friendship. Kinship was beneath friendship. Greater friendship is not exhibited between two men than is manifested between these two whose lives were knit together, shall we say, by the power and direction of God. Yes, a friend in truth is a gift from God.

Christianity That Binds: True Christianity will bind its possessors into a chain of unbroken links. The fellowship and friendships of such kindred minds will be of that kind that "sticketh closer than a brother." The relationships between those of like precious faith should be practiced in compliance with the words of inspiration. "Let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." Christianity that does not bind members into a trustworthy company is of an inferior kind and quality.

Saul's envy: Saul was more and more displaying the spirit of the natural man. Well did he know that God had chosen David to be his successor. He was so captured by the spirit of selfishness and carnality that he could not willingly allow another to take the office which he had failed to use to the glory of God. How often we see this same "Saul spirit," the spirit of the carnal man, take hold of religious workers and completely disqualify them for Christian service.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"A friend is one who knows all about you and loves you still." It must be a friend indeed to know all of one's bad qualities as well as the good ones and to love at all times, but this is speaking of earthly friends. "A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly."

David and Jonathan were earthly friends and truly loved at all times, clinging together when Jonathan's father was against them.

Christians have a friend that sticketh closer than a brother; this is Jesus the Christ. He loves us all the time and has given His life for us; but if we want Him for a friend, we must show ourselves friendly toward Him. We love Him because He first loved us and was our friend.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

This question was fully answered by Solomon in Proverbs 18:24. We might say it differently: If you want to be a friend and have friends, you must be friendly. It is the only way. Jonathan showed his friendship for David by shielding and serving him.

God proved His friendship for man while he was still a rebel. Friendship is revealed by love. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Jesus showed His friendship by loving service. While we were yet sinners, He died for us.

For the Christian the important question is, "How can I be a friend to Jesus?" He told us how. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."—John 15:14. It is easy to become a friend to the world. Serve worldly people by indulging their lustful impulses and following them in their way. But this will make you an enemy of Christ. If you become His friend, the world will hate you; but the friendship of Jesus will pay in many ways. Notice His words: "Henceforth I call you not servants: for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known to you. Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he shall give it you." What other friend has promised so much? What other friendship has the promise of being blessed by the Father in heaven?—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: The Friendship of David and Jonathan.

We all have lots and lots of good friends; but for some reason each of us has one or two, shall we say, special friends—one, or maybe two, that we love more than the others.

This lesson describes the love of two boys for each other. Jonathan was the son of King Saul. David was to be the next king and not Jonathan. Saul did not like David and he tried to kill him. But Jonathan planned to save David.

Here is a little plan Jonathan made to save David's life. David was to hide in a field. Jonathan with a servant was to come to the field and shoot some arrows. If Jonathan said to the servant, "The arrow fell on this side of thee," David was to know that Saul would not harm David. If Jonathan said, "The arrows are beyond thee," David was to know that he was to flee before Saul could kill him.

Jonathan said to the servant, "The arrows are beyond thee," and David knew what that meant.

After sending the servant back to the city, David and Jonathan said good-bye.

This was one of the most beautiful pictures of real friendship found in the Bible. Jonathan's love for David, when he knew he would be king rather than himself, is very wonderful.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

NORTHWEST CONFERENCE

The quarterly meeting of the Northwest Conference will convene at Corvallis, Oregon, at 10:30 Friday morning, September 1, and will last over September 3. The secretary of the conference will furnish road maps and other information to any who seek them. Her address is 1553 Adams Street, Corvallis, Gladys Barber, Secretary.

WEBB, IOWA

Services will be held on Sunday, Sept. 3, 1933, at the home of Carl Bjurkland, three miles west of Webb, Iowa. Sunday school will convene at ten o'clock followed by a sermon at eleven, and a second sermon in the afternoon. Brethren of Marathon and other nearby localities are urged to be present. Anna Boyanovsky.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Now, as August comes to its close, we are settling down to the regular fall and winter program. The Sunday night service, which was dropped during August, will be resumed next Sunday.

Our church was happy on August 20 to receive two new members into its family. These are Bro. and Sr. Francis VanFleet of Conrad St., S. W. For almost a year they have been studying and laboring with us, and we are glad to have them add their type of character to the cause here.

We are feeling the need for greater spiritual strength in these trying times, and are praying God to guide our group into spiritual development this fall. F. E. Siple, Pastor.

FRANCES MABIE DRESSER

Frances Mabie Dresser was born Sept. 7, 1847, at Roscoe, Ill., and died Aug. 4, 1933, at her home at Santa Ana, Calif. The funeral discourse was given by Eld. F. L. Richardson of the Advent Christian denomination, who used Isaiah 35:10 as the basis of his remarks. The Spanish War Auxiliary (of which the deceased was a member) had charge of the ceremony.

A. R. Dresser, husband of the deceased, died June 11, 1919. They are survived by six sons, fourteen grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

Thus has passed from life a noble Christian woman, loved and respected by a host of friends and the church. Though active in every good work, she gave first consideration to the things of God. The question and answer of Job 14:14, 15 were her question and answer. She was always active, yet she found time to assure herself that her life was hid with Christ in God; and when Christ who is our life shall appear, she will appear with Him all glorious. She had enjoyed her usual degree of health until the earthquake shock of March 10, which prostrated her beyond the reach of human aid. We shall always cherish the memory of her as a sincere Christian woman. C. E. Hatch.

OTSEGO, MICHIGAN

F. L. Austin, our "Back-to-the-Bible" evangelist of Chicago is announced for an address to be given on Sept. 3, at the M. E. Church in Otsego, Mich. His arresting topic will be, "Our Times and Christ's Return as Portrayed by the Prophets." Otsego is Bro. Austin's birthplace and we anticipate that a large gathering will greet him on Sunday evening.

HERALD RECEIPTS

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Thayer and son Lyle of Rockford, Ill., stopped off at Kokomo, Ind., en route to the Virginia Conference and Bible School which meets at Maurertown, Va., August 24 to September 3.

Bro. and Sr. George M. Siple of Oregon, Ill., are spending a few weeks in and around their home in Louisiana. Last Saturday they were in New Orleans. Both are greatly missed from their customary places in the Oregon choir and Sunday school.

A letter from Frank S. Potter of Marshalltown, Iowa, tells of serious financial reverses from which Bro. Potter has suffered, but assures us that he is looking and praying more earnestly for the Lord's coming because of these things.

Do not forget the promise you made at the General Conference to encourage older ones to enter Golden Rule Home! You could not do them a greater kindness.

Bro. J. W. Sweet, who writes from Wolf, Calif., asks if there is a Church of God in Sacramento, Calif. We regret that we know of no organization either in that city or in other localities nearby. Bro. Sweet is anxious to hear a sermon from one of our ministers, it having been twenty years since he has had that privilege. Perhaps our new California State Conference may be able to help in this matter.

The pastor of the Ripley, Ill., church, who with his wife and her mother, Sr. Edna Brewer of Ohio, is enjoying a trip by automobile through the West, writes that the party has reached the Yellowstone Park, having passed through the Bad Lands of Dakota en route. They are heading for Bro. Lapp's old home in Washington, where they will spend a few weeks before returning to their pastoral duties in Illinois.

ARKANSAS-OKLAHOMA

According to a recent report received from C. E. Weaver of Greenbrier, Ark., the Arkansas-Oklahoma Conference, which met at McGintytown, Ark., enjoyed unusual success from a spiritual standpoint. To quote from Bro. Weaver's letter: "We ask God in His infinite love and mercy to bless the good young people of this country around McGintytown for their help and lovingkindness to us all in the conference. I feel sure that we have had the largest attendance at this conference we have ever had. . . We now ask God to bless us all and help each one of us to do more for His great cause."

Mr. Weaver notes particularly the presence of Bro. Billingsley of Oklahoma, who preached about McGintytown in the past; of Bro. N. M. Shaemake, president of the conference; of Sr. Miriam Hendon, secretary-treasurer; and of Bros. L. H. Shelton and J. H. Luman, who preached during the four days of services. Bro. Weaver also gave discourses.

The energetic congregation of Kokomo, Indiana, is starting a series of special services under the leadership of C. A. Smead, on Sunday, August 27, to continue over September 3. We hope that much good may be accomplished.

Mrs. Anna D. Springer, 225 S. Front St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes interestingly of the Sherwood-Lott family reunion to be held in that city August 27, 1933, in connection with which religious services will be held to which all are invited. A business session of the Church of God is also announced for the same time and place.

One of the special issues of The Restitution Herald in the near future will be devoted and dedicated to Golden Rule Home. We will announce in advance when this number is to be issued; and the suggestion of Pastor Adna Hoskins of St. Cloud, Minn., for the churches to set aside a day for advancing the interests of the Home might well be carried out in connection with that issue.

We learn that Bro. R. H. Judd of Toronto, Canada, whose writings have proved so acceptable to our readers, has recently composed a poem descriptive of the Canadian National Exhibition that is of such merit that it is being printed widely in the Dominion and has called forth from the management of the Exposition a pleasing expression of approval.

According to the report of the Illinois State Conference Sr. Anna E. Drew of Dixon, who for many years has acted as treasurer of the conference and consequently of the annual Bible school, owing to ill health has declined to serve longer in that capacity. Sr. Drew has been a faithful servant of the Lord and of His church throughout her life and no doubt has done more for the advancement of the truth in a personal way than many others have while engaged in the public ministry. She will have her reward.

ILLINOIS STATE CONFERENCE Annual Business Meeting

On Friday afternoon, August 11, 1933, the annual business meeting of Illinois State Conference was held during General Conference, August 1 to 13. The president, Paul C. Johnson, presided, and the meeting was opened with song and prayer for God's guiding hand during our deliberations and throughout the coming year. Minutes of the secretary and the treasurer were read and approved. Reports of the following churches were given: Ripley, Oregon, Plum River, Casey, Marshall, Eldorado, Dixon, and Rockford. Bros. Lapp, Marsh, Krogh, Goekler, and Conner gave added verbal reports as to the work at their respective churches. On the whole the belief seems to be that there is much work to be done throughout the state. The question of the work of the Home Department of our Sunday school at Oregon was raised, and was answered by Bros. Marsh and Johnson. Home Department members consist of isolated, aged, and mothers unable to attend Sunday school who study their lessons at home and contribute to the funds of the Sunday school. A substantial amount has been contributed by the members of Oregon's Home Department, part of which was donated to the fund used in paying for a new roof on the church building. Sr. Elizabeth Ordnung is the enthusiastic and efficient superintendent of this department. She will be glad to give information to those desiring it.

The election of officers for the coming year was next in order and resulted as follows: president, Paul C. Johnson; vice president, Esta Starbuck; secretary, Mary A. Gesin; treasurer, Leota B. Hanson, Lebanon, Ill. Board members elected for two years, Glenn Birkey, C. E. Lapp.

Our faithful and efficient treasurer for the past nineteen years, Anna E. Drew, previous to this election submitted her resignation and stated she would deem it a favor if we would not use her name, due to the condition of her health. A rising vote of appreciation was tendered Sr. Drew by all present for the splendid and self-sacrificing service which she has rendered to the conference during the years in which she has served as treasurer. All those present regretted very much the necessity of her release from the many duties of treasurer which she has so cheerfully performed. Her friends throughout the state, which she numbers by the hundreds, will join in appreciation of her service and in prayer for her comfort and restoration to health.

It was moved and seconded by Bros. Marsh and Hanson that the Illinois State Conference board be hereby authorized to renew and issue such ministerial certificates as it deems proper. Carried.

Sr. Whitehead recommended that the board find some practical means of welcoming visitors to our Bible school and conference so that all may feel a spirit of welcome, especially those making their first visit here.

A discussion of the work throughout the state was then entered into, and question raised as to what the conference has done the past year. The president stated that financial assistance has been given two points, Plum River and Eldorado, until such time as they should be able to support themselves, which time has not yet arrived. It was recommended that a monthly report from the treasurer, Leota B. Hanson, be published in The Restitution Herald, showing just how much is contributed and how much money is disbursed.

The president then spoke on the function of the conference organization at the present time, showing that our problems are different from heretofore because of several points being self-supporting. He asked the judgment of those present as to what program ought to be followed—an attempt to establish work in new territory or reawaken old points. A diversity of opinion was expressed, some favoring the former and some the latter. It was left to the judgment of the board as to the best method of procedure.

A recess to the call of the chair was given in order to permit the board to meet and formulate some plan for presentation in open session.

An open session was called by the president on Saturday, August 12, at 1 o'clock, at which effort should be made to encourage these points to grow financially and to stimulate them to the thought of keeping in touch with the state organization. In this those assembled heartily concurred.

It was moved by Sr. Whitehead and seconded by Bro. Goekler that the board be authorized to arrange for meetings for those churches who desire to cooperate with the conference and those who need assistance. Carried. Open session was then adjourned.

May we make a special appeal to all members of the churches throughout the state to stand loyally by your state organization? We who are now enjoying regular services were once assisted to our present position by the state organization. And, in turn, we should do our part, regardless of the amount we may be able to subscribe, to assist other points to the same favorable position we occupy before God. If we have benefited by thus cooperating our gratitude to the Giver of all good should impel us to service for others. May the new year find us all laboring together for the welfare of our whole state that many may be brought to the service of the Lord before His coming.

SARAH AUSTIN

After suffering illness for several weeks, Sarah Austin, widow of Isaac F., was stricken by death at her home in Manistee, Michigan, August 12, 1933. She was born to James and Rebecca Pallett of Martin, Michigan, on June 6, 1854, being the ninth of ten children, all of whom she survived. Her marriage to Isaac F. Austin took place on November 7, 1872. To them no children were born. Their dearly loved adopted daughter, Edith, died in the early bloom of womanhood. Later, October 5, 1906, her husband fell under death's power.

Thus in mid-life our worthy and much esteemed Aunt Sarah was left alone on life's trail, which she thus traveled for nearly twenty-seven years. But she was not alone. Back in the eighties she pleaded the Savior's entrance into her life to lead and to sustain. For Him she lived.

He was her comfort and stay.

A large group of relatives and friends from miles around gathered at the funeral parlors at Martin and escorted her lifeless body to the Hicks Cemetery, where she was laid at rest beside the husband of earlier years, at rest till He who is the resurrection and the life shall call. F. L. Austin.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

The Executive Board

The following are the names and addresses of the Executive Board of the General Conference of the Church of God and of the National Bible Institution as re-elected at the recent conference:

PRESIDENT

L. E. Conner, 610 Brinton Ave., Dixon, Ill.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT

Leland T. Hanson, Franklin Grove, Ill.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT

Joseph H. Williams, 816 Seventh St., Rochelle, Ill.

SECRETARY

G. Eldred Marsh, 131 N. Third St., Oregon, Ill.

TREASURER

time the following was read: At a meeting of the executive board held on Friday, Aug. 11, at 9:30 p. m. the needs of the different points in the state were considered at length. These points are Rockford, Dixon, Plum River, Eldorado, Ripley, and Marshall. Your board will endeavor to work out a plan for these points that will be for the best interest of the work at each place and that will work most harmoniously with other points. We pledge our continued support to these places and heartily recommend for your consideration the work at Plum River and Eldorado particularly.

Bro. Hanson advised the board should impress it upon the several churches to make definite plans for the next year, 1934-35, and present those plans to the conference of 1934 so that the board will have something to work upon. A motion was made by Sr. Whitehead, seconded by Bro. Birkey, that the secretary be authorized to write to every church in Illinois to ascertain the program for the year's work and especially plans for special meetings. Carried. The president asked those assembled if it was their judgment that the conference should continue to contribute $15.00 a month each to Plum River and Eldorado, and if an

THE FIERY FURNACE— AND ISRAEL

By Gerald Lee Cooper

IN THE third chapter of Daniel is told a very interesting tale. Not only is it interesting because of its story, but also because of its type. Let us review the story.

Nebuchadnezzar had a great golden image made. He issued commands to all his under-rulers that, when at a certain time music would be heard, all the people were to bow down before the image or be cast into a fiery furnace. After the first worship of the image had ended, several people came to the king and told him that there were three of his rulers who refused to worship the image. Who were these three men? Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, the friends and countrymen of Daniel.

We read of their being brought before the king to hear him once again issue the commandment that everyone bow down. The answer they gave him is as follows: "We are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up."—Daniel 3:16-18.

Now when the king heard this, he was very angry, so angry, in fact, that he commanded that the furnace be heated seven times as hot as usual. Then he commanded that the three men be bound and cast into the furnace. His instructions were carried out, so much so that the men who cast them in were burned to death.

Suddenly the king saw a strange sight. Four, rather than three, men were inside the furnace, "and the fourth was like the Son of God." After the three were brought forth, they were found to be uninjured by the great fire. Therefore, Nebuchadnezzar commanded that their God, Jehovah, be worshiped.

Israel, God's chosen nation, has been cast into the fiery furnace of trial and hardship by the world. Ever since the overthrow of their nation they have wandered back and forth in this great seething furnace with burning trials always present. The world has been so angry with them that the furnace has been heated many times over by persecution and wholesale slaughter.

But as the world looks on, it perceives that they are not alone. Why? Because any other nation would have perished long ago, while this one is still abroad and at present is making preparations to return to its native land, Palestine. Yes, the world can see that there is a companion with "the wandering Jew," and it is coming to believe more and more like Nebuchadnezzar—"and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God."—Daniel 3:25.

Soon the nation of Israel will step from the fiery furnace of the world unscathed. Then will not the world say, "Such a God who can preserve a nation for so long a time deserves to be worshiped. Let us bow down and worship Him." Yes, my friends, I do believe that God's great care for His nation and bringing them back to their country will do much toward subduing the other nations when that time comes.

Let us look into the furnace. Can you not see God walking with His children and protecting them? Pray for the day when He will lead them forth, for that day will mean much to us.

IN THE BEGINNING

By Elizabeth Louise May

THE above title, "In the Beginning," was suggested in conversing with a friend whom I met as I was returning from our public library. We passed quite a few moments pleasantly exchanging our thoughts and answering one another's kind inquiries regarding health, finally coming upon a subject that evidently had been causing my friend a good deal of perplexity. She became seriously thoughtful, rather hesitating a few seconds before she asked, "Miss May, do you believe in evolution?"

Well, I certainly must have looked rather blank for a moment, not really comprehending just how I could answer her. It all depended on what information I could give her of my opinion of so scientific a subject.

Seeing that I was considering, she asked, "Do you believe that you were once a pollywog?"

"Well," I was nonplussed, quite puzzled in fact, so I most emphatically replied, "no, I certainly do not! Of all things, I cannot imagine myself a pollywog!" So I waited for further enlightenment, looking my amazement, no doubt.

"Well," she said, "so many people are speculating about it these days, I thought I would see what your opinion might be."

I answered by asking her upon her arrival home to take her Bible and open it at the first verse of the very first book of Genesis. There you will read, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Then please follow with the other verses through to the twenty-sixth, and you will read as follows: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth." "And so God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them."

A thought of God being likened unto a pollywog (I speak reverently) is distinctly repellant to my idea of His majesty, of His divinity, as utterly apart from any human conception and not to be mentioned by those who adore and love Him and try from day to day to emulate Him, not without a great struggle for the upward growth of that inestimable effort, which will at last bring us into that condition of perfection when we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is—which I am sure is not, or will not be, in the form of a pollywog.

Holy Spirit Baptism

UNDERSTANDING what God has said on any Bible subject is a simple matter; confusion comes only when men misstate what God has said, then try to harmonize His statements with their misstatements. We must be willing for God to say what He wants to on any subject, because what He says is the truth, and only this is worthy of our interest. Truth cannot be invented and manufactured by human theories; it has its existence independent of our theories; and our one duty and privilege is simply to find it, then adopt it. We shall follow this rule in studying the baptism in the Holy Spirit.

Baptism in the Holy Spirit is mentioned in the following passages (A. R. V.): "I indeed," says John the Baptist, "baptize you in water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit and in fire."—Matt. 3:11. "I baptize you in water; but he shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit."—Mark 1:8. "I indeed baptize you with water; but there cometh he that is mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: he shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit and in fire."—Luke 3:16. "Upon whomsoever thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and abiding upon him, the same is he that baptizeth in the Holy Spirit."—John 1:33. "For John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit not many days hence."—Acts 1:5. "And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit."—Acts 11:16.

This is the entire New Testament on the promise of Holy Spirit baptism. There is much more about the Holy Spirit and about the gifts of the Holy Spirit received by many of the early Christians; but it is the baptism of the Holy Spirit that we are now discussing, and the passages above quoted are those that promise that baptism. Let us study them.

Baptism is from the Greek baptisma, which means a dipping, an overwhelming, an immersion. No matter what element is used in performing baptism, whether water, Spirit, or fire, the person baptized is overwhelmed or immersed in the element. Nothing else can be a baptism.

"The inclosed article is so lucid and scriptural that I feel it is worthy of being reprinted in The Restitution Herald," writes Rufus A. Curtis in submitting this treatise for publication. This is a subject that is attracting the attention of many, and the analysis here presented will be of undoubted help in a study of this important matter.

Holy Spirit baptism, then, means an overwhelming of the human spirit in the Holy Spirit.

Hence the preposition "in"—"He shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit." "With" in the margin indicates the element employed, namely, the Holy Spirit. But the text invariably uses "in." While the Holy Spirit is the element employed, they were baptized in that element; overwhelmed, immersed, in the Spirit; the human spirit completely submerged in the Spirit of God. That fact shows that the party baptized in the Holy Spirit loses control of his own spirit to that of the Spirit of God. God's Spirit assumes control and dictation over the human spirit within the subject.

But the baptism in the Spirit, while completely assuming control over the human spirit, does this only in the especial work for which the baptism was given. The subject of that baptism is still a free moral agent responsible for his moral conduct. Indeed, the baptism in the Spirit was never given to aid moral living. Hence, persons receiving that baptism were afterward found guilty of wrongdoing. See the case of the Apostle Peter (Gal. 2:11-21), who "stood condemned" for his dissimulation with Barnabas and others. Peter was baptized in the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2). Was that baptism a failure? No. It fully accomplished what it was intended for, but it was not intended to make Peter a better man. If God makes men good, then, manifestly, He cannot reward them for goodness; and if He assumes sovereign control over their moral living or conduct, then they are under no necessity of trying to control themselves by living "soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world," as He has commanded them (Titus 2:12). Manifestly, then, Holy Spirit baptism was never intended to make better men of those who received it. We must, therefore, look for another purpose, under which (Please turn to Page Nine)

"Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples."—Luke 11:1.

The Editor's Prayer

TEACH us to pray, O Father in heaven, that we may draw near to Thee in faith and in an acceptable manner. Help us to appreciate more deeply the privilege we do therein enjoy. Take the weak and faulty expressions of our lips as an indication of a fervent desire to draw near unto Thee which we cannot rightly utter. Amen.

Meaningless Prayers

AMONG the many privileges to which the disciple of Christ is entitled through the relation he bears to the heavenly Father none is more blessed than that of prayer. Prayer places the child of God in direct and uninterrupted communion with the source of all power and unlocks for his benefit the treasure house of the universe. Nothing need be said concerning the value of prayer to the one who has become accustomed to calling upon God "without ceasing." Such a one knows that "prayer changes things," that it brings upon the believing petitioner the rich blessings of the Almighty.

The purposes of prayer are as varied as the needs of men. Prayer provides a devotional outlet for the expression of the spirit of worship and adoration which every Christian naturally and continually feels toward God. Prayer reminds men of God and His nearness to them. In prayer they recognize His presence and direct influence in their lives. Their joys and sorrows, their failures and their successes, their strength and their weakness, may all be poured out freely before the throne of grace with the knowledge that God sympathizes and responds heartily to their every appeal.

While the value of prayer cannot be overestimated nor its efficacy denied, nevertheless, like every other good thing which God permits men to enjoy, prayer may lose its power through their failure to use it properly.

When the blessed privilege of prayer is reduced to a mere formality; when it becomes a meaningless mouthing of sonorous phrases; when no definite desire, no deeply felt need, is being expressed; when the petitioner is conscious only of the words he is using and forgetful of the One whom he is ostensibly addressing, then prayer becomes not only "vain repetition," but the grossest hypocrisy as well.

The NRA and the Church

JUDGING from recent editorials appearing in both the religious and secular press the letters "NRA" might well be thought to stand for "New Religious Awakening." The NRA was born the child of necessity. Depression had brought America to the verge of despair. The people could bear no more. They were out of employment and out of bread. Starvation or revolution stared the country in the face, and political leaders realized that immediate relief must be forthcoming if disaster was to be averted. The result was the New Deal and the NRA.

That which has overtaken the nation economically has fallen upon the church from a spiritual standpoint. Religious leaders of the more thoughtful type have realized the impending danger for a long time. They have devised many remedies, they have "sought out many inventions" by which they thought to stem the tide of moral and spiritual recession. When emotional revivalism failed, they attempted to stimulate the rapidly weakening enthusiasm of the church by directing its energy into the channel of political reform. For a little time the church took hold of the new effort with vigor; but its interest soon flagged, and the stimulant it had taken contributed to its decline.

An increasing number, however, are now coming to confess that the need of the dying church is not stimulation with political nostrums or a return to emotionalism, but a getting back to the bed rock of divine purpose! The church is homesick! It is suffering from nostalgia! It has wandered away from the Father's house and is pining with an intense desire to return. It has lived on husks long enough, and devout leaders of religious thought are suggesting a radical "right-about-face" action on the part of organized religion.

The Layman's League of the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church has prepared a code the gist of which is, according to The Literary Digest, "the renunciation of all political and legislative matters, the abandonment of all effort to influence Government policies in regard to social matters, and . . . a 'return to the charter purpose of the Church to preach the Gospel . . . to preach the message of salvation through Christ.'"

Dr. L. O. Hartman of the Methodist Church comes out with a very similar suggestion in which he says the churches should give themselves "to the espousal of the whole message of Jesus," rather than to political propaganda.

The Father of Mercies and Comfort

By R. H. Judd

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and God of all comfort."

THESE beautiful words occur over and over again in the Scriptures. We find them occurring, with slight variations, in the opening verses of Romans, and Corinthians, Ephesians, and Peter's first epistle; but to the writer the passage quoted above (2 Cor. 1:5, R. V.) is a gem among many hundreds that are to be found in God's wonderful Book. For beauty of language, conciseness of expression, and fullness of thought it would be hard to match. It gives evidence of a mind trained to think clearly, weigh facts, and draw conclusions that are incontrovertible. It has also, as we shall see, abundance of that marvelous intuitive force to which we give the name of "human interest," without which the most beautiful picture or the best literary composition fails in its appeal. We cannot wonder that men of the highest intellect concede to the Scriptures the unique position that they rightfully hold and that they tell us that no man or woman who has free access to its pages need lack for the fundamentals of an education best adapted for the journey through life.

The pivotal center of Paul's text is the Lord Jesus Christ, while the subject of it is God. I recently had the pleasure of doing to order on canvas this wonderful text. The purchaser had seen the copies that I took with me to the Fonthill May Meeting and desired a copy for himself. Not being acquainted with the Revised Version rendering, he thought I had made an error in inserting the definite article before the word "God" in the opening sentence, as to him it conveyed the suggestion that in Paul's mind there were more Gods than one. The writer believes that such was actually the case and that Paul, who revelled in comparisons, desired to draw attention to the amazing contrasts that existed between the gods of the heathen world by which they were surrounded and the God to whom he wished others might yield their whole-hearted allegiance. The idea of this contrast would seem to be the thought which the Revised Version rendering seeks to give special emphasis.

Those who have lived exclusively in nominally Christian lands can have but little idea of the ever-pervading influence, demoralizing influence, of idolatry upon those who are its devotees; nor can they realize as the missionary the truth of the Old Testament statement, "They that make them are like unto them." Paul speaks not infrequently of the "gods many and lords many" of the heathen world, and they were abundantly in evidence in his day. As he stood to give his never-to-be-forgotten address on Mars Hill, its very name, linked with the cohorts of soldiers who in all probability formed the greater part of his audience, would cause him to reflect on the parallelisms that existed between the accredited characteristics of the idols and the characters of their distinctive worshipers. Just as men and women much in each other's company assimilate to some extent their several traits both physical and psychological, so do the worshipers of idols carry on their countenances the mental and material aspects portrayed in the idols which they have made and worship.

It is not without significance that the opening verses of Peter's first epistle contain almost word for word the earlier portion of our text. That Peter and Paul were close companions on various occasions would seem to be beyond question. There also can be little doubt that Paul's intimate knowledge of Jesus Christ was in large measure due to his close association with Peter and others of the apostles. He would gain much from their conversation and manner of life concerning the One who had left His impress on the lives and characters of those whom Paul now sought to make his close companions.

It may be a matter of minor importance, but nevertheless of interest, that Peter was a fisherman. Fishermen the world over are noted for the delight they take in relating reminiscences of past experiences. We can well imagine how Peter would call to mind many touching incidents of the life and compassion of the Savior he loved and the wonderful "words of eternal life" that came from His lips. He would go over and over again the story of the memorable visit to Peter's wife's mother, the masterly action of the Master in defending the woman taken in adultery, and the care of the Son of God for the little children whom the disciples in mistaken loyalty to Him would drive away from His presence. As Peter related these actual facts in a life's experience, so very different in their setting from the legends and myths of heathen mythology, Paul's heart would glow within him; and he could not help exclaiming as he realized the tremendous contrasts, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Yes, there may be other gods, so called, but "to us there is but one God the Father"—"the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." As Christ often looked with compassion on the multitudes, He but reflected His Father, who is "the Father of mercies and God of all comfort." Surely such words from the lips of Paul show how deeply he was touched to the very core of his being. He knew much more than many of us, of the hardness of man to his fellow man; but he had evidently come to know much, too, of the comfort of the living God, so that he was able to comfort others with the comfort whereby he was himself comforted of God.

I like to compare the renderings of the different versions, for often additional light is thrown upon the subject, each aspect contributing to the pure white light of the glorious gospel. We do not see in the Authorized Version the full extent of the blessing that word "comfort" had for Paul, for it is somewhat obscured by the use of the word "consolation." The Revised Version, even at the risk of tautology, gives us back the word "comfort" as conveying more truly the sense Paul would express. The comfort he speaks of is not merely consolation, which is limited to a particular occasion and limited in degree, but an abiding, satisfying, and overflowing comfort given by one who well knows the experience through which the sufferer is passing.

CAVEAT EMPTOR!

By Arlen Marsh

---

ALTHOUGH the system of business which adheres to the principle of Caveat emptor, Let the buyer beware! is rapidly reaching the last stages of old age, that great aphoristic warning still endures as the presiding genius of religion. Assailed on every hand with the glad tidings of some new philosophy purporting to be of greater truth and value than any other ever conceived, the seeker after God finds himself befuddled in a maze of conflicting theories from which he must make his own selection and thereafter abide by it.

He who, with Diogenes, gazes about him for wisdom and knowledge places himself in the same position as the man who, under the old method of Caveat emptor, made a purchase. His choice of philosophy is determinative of the course which he thereafter will follow, and the disasters or benefits to accrue from that choice are of his own volition. His bed is made, and he must lie in it, regardless of whatever may occur.

In no indefinite terms the Apostle Paul asserted that "the wages of sin is death," and it remains for the man beset with multitudinous doctrines of modern Christianity to choose for himself the way that may lead from these undesired wages. Upon his own responsibility he must choose; no one else may be held for his choice. Delusion may be laid at the door of another temporarily, perhaps; but in the final analysis the full brunt of the dire results of missteps rests upon the individual most concerned. He it was who chose; he it is who must suffer or enjoy the penalties or benefits. Caveat emptor!

There are equal possibilities for happiness with those for punishment. "There is therefore," according to Paul, "now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Those who choose correctly, those who select the proper way out of the devious trails through the labyrinth of religious philosophy, are given the assurance that they will receive a reward commensurate with the wisdom and work they have done; they will receive "no condemnation"; they will not earn the dreaded "wages of sin."

But this immunity from the fruits of walking the pleasant paths of life, an immunity from punishment brought about only by following the ways most difficult to traverse, is not alone sufficient to justify a complete reversal of the normal course of human events and a turning to the road accurately delineated by the Messiah in whom we are urged to take part. If we go no further than to consider lack of condemnation remuneration enough to solace us for the pleasures we lose through participation in the Christ, we provide no sound reason for that participation. Goethe may have been right when he remarked that "death must be a benefit, because it is universal." The priests of Issus may have been correct when they taught that there is no hope except in death.

In other words, immunity from death, unless evidence to the contrary can be found, may not be the blessing which it at first appears. Some reward greater than that must be discovered before we have any just cause for forsaking the ordinary habits of human life for the somewhat artificial living after the manner outlined by the Messiah of Israel and His divine Father. Death represents freedom from pain, from worry, from invalidism, from dishonor; death represents permanent relief from every form of persecution. Unless something greater can be provided, immunity from death would be no reward at all for pursuing the practices of Jesus.

It is at this point that the religious-minded individual must beware. He must choose between false doctrines which may lead to death and true doctrines which may lead to something better. But first of all he must determine whether or not immunity from condemnation, immunity from death, is desirable. Under some conditions it apparently is not.

Paul concludes his remarks concerning the wages of sin with, "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." This statement alone means nothing additional; the freedom from condemnation already discussed includes eternal life as a matter of course. If eternal life be of the same type of life that is possessed today, it may be that more desirable rewards than that exist; death among others, for it would bring release from the torments that eternity would only perpetuate.

Isaiah, silver-tongued poet of Judah, offers a picture of the endless life that is offered as remuneration for service to the Christ which would lead anyone to an active desire to attain to it. "The inhabitant," he says flatly, "shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity." Illness, together with death, is to be abolished for those who have earned a reward for their work in behalf of Jehovah and His Son. Further than this, "the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing."

Not even perfect health and an endless existence, however, could compensate altogether for a perpetual cause for worry. Should the present conditions be made permanent, it is certain that many of the members of mankind would consider death an asset rather than a liability. Poverty and disgrace are not pleasant companions to contemplate forever. No greater curse could be pronounced than to sentence a man to eternal slavery. These things would have to be removed or at least ameliorated before immortality would be preferable to death.

Unconsciously replying to these vexing problems, Isaiah continues, "They," the inhabitants of the eternal earthly kingdom of God, those who will never die, "shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Micah augments the idea with a description of a perfect government, so perfect, indeed, as to cause existing nations to seek voluntarily admission into its rule: "And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths." That poverty is to be made a thing of the past he also makes clear: "But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it."

In the light of such descriptions of the eternal life promised to those who obey and who choose correctly, immunity from death becomes increasingly desirable; but still there remains some shadow of doubt regarding its desirability as an endless thing. According to the dogmas of the majority of religious teachers, death is a transition, a passing from one form of existence to a more perfect form; and, in fact, some philosophers insist that death marks the individual's becoming an actual part of the Deity and losing his own identity in the identity and person of an omnipresent and all-embracing God.

Solomon makes a very definite assertion regarding death by which he furnishes warning to those who are seeking to buy by action and word a part of some religious faith. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." Previous to propounding this definition, the ancient exponent of wisdom draws a somewhat unflattering implied comparison. "For to him that is joined to all the living," he insists, "there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion. For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten." Solomon refuses to concede the dead even the solace of an emotional existence:

"Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun."

Death, therefore, appears to be a complete severance of all relations with the world. Certainly, no believer in the inspiration of the Bible could deny that Solomon indicates definitely that death forbids the enjoyment of any of the blessings promised by the divinely-guided Isaiah to those who select the ways which lead to participation in the church of God. Life, immunity from death, obviously forms the only method by which those promises can be enjoyed.

Caveat emptor! Let the buyer beware! Upon him who seeks after religion rests the responsibility for determining what his religion will be; upon him, consequently, rests the responsibility for determining what his reward will be. Let him who seeks to buy a part in the kingdom of God beware, lest he misjudge the way and win the wrong wages. Only through the road set down by Jehovah can His reward be won; all other roads lead only to destruction.

ORIGIN OF HUMANKIND

If monkeys, in a bygone day,
 Could evolute, as some men say
 They did, and start a race of men,
 Why can't they turn the trick again?

If Darwin's theory be true,
 They ought to even better do
 Than what they did long years ago
 Before they'd evolved so.

If they could breed a race of men
 Back in the early ages when
 They were but animated clods,
 They ought now to produce near gods.

Who neutralized, and when, their pow'r
 To pass along the priceless dow'r
 In harmony with nature's norms,
 Of higher and more perfect forms?

'Twas not the monkeys made us laugh,
 But those who propagate this chaff
 About the apish origin
 Of all our human kith and kin.

The Holy Scriptures plainly state
 That God Almighty did create
 From dust of earth the primal pair
 And in His holy image fair.

Why should we, then, forsake the Book
 And to the speculator look
 For aid in our attempt to find
 The origin of human kind?—W. H. B.

A Lesson in Tolerance

By George B. Alldridge

"But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part."—Mark 9:39, 40.

AFTER meeting for a few days with a company of God's dear people, as was the privilege of the writer at the General Conference of the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois, different impressions are made upon the minds of those attending; in this case I rejoice to say only good impressions and thoughts were formulated.

The impression most prominent of all upon the writer's mind was the spirit of Christ, which may be expressed as the spirit of tolerance. Among the preachers and teachers and the little groups assembled to discuss biblical subjects he heard no harsh criticisms or unkind comments regarding the belief of others. The sweet spirit of Titus 3:1-4 prevailed. Hence, is there any wonder that Jesus' promise, "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them," was fully realized? If there were any prominent leaders present, I did not observe it; but Jesus' words in Matthew 23:8, "But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren," prevailed.

With what force I recalled to mind an incident in the life of Jesus during the days of His flesh. The disciples had just been disputing among themselves as to who should be greatest and received a rebuke in an object lesson when Jesus set a little child in the midst of them and said, "Who-soever shall receive this child in my name, receiveth me."

This saying, which laid emphasis on receiving the humblest follower in the name of Jesus, seems to have recalled to John the case of a man whom they had seen casting out devils in the name of Jesus. "And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbad him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: . . . for he that is not against us is on our part."

Here we have an instance of conscientious tolerance toward one who was doing good in the name of Jesus and yet who did not belong to the regular apostolic order or company. It was admitted that he was casting out devils in the name of Jesus, but he had not been called and ordained after the manner of the twelve; he did not have regular credentials and was not orthodox in his standing; he was at least irregular, if not heretical. Here were the germ and budding of the ecclesiastic spirit that puts emphasis on official ordination and regularity and looks with suspicion, if not with hostility, upon anyone working, however successfully, outside of these lines.

I have seen this spirit, and it exists today among bodies claiming to be of the Church of God which are often stiff and most exclusive with those who "followeth not with us." Will we ever before Jesus returns learn this lesson: "Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us"?

Suppose we read again Matthew 25:34-40 and then ponder over Jesus' words in Revelation 22:12, "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

Some one may be quoting Ephesians 2:9, "Not of works, lest any man should boast." But suppose we include with this verses seven, eight, and ten. You see, God called us unto good works, but those good works must redound to the glory of God. Jesus in Matthew 5:16 gives us the key of how this may be done: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

That I am a member of the Church of God means nothing to the world around me, but that which gives validity and power to the message of the gospel I am seeking to convey is the blessed spirit of Jesus working in and through my life as seen by those around me.

Many a man has been cast out of the church who yet proved to be a mighty worker for Christ, and we should ever be on our guard against any narrow sectarian spirit. Our blessed Master has room in His fellowship for all workers of good who are proclaiming the glorious message of the gospel, of which Paul was not ashamed (Rom. 1:16) "and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him: where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all."

And then there are the following verses I must quote, for they are very wonderful: "Put ye on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering. Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness."

Jesus sent messengers through unfriendly Samaria to find a place of lodging. One village would not receive them; then two of his dearest disciples, James and John, said, "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?"—Luke 9:54. "But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village." Now read Galatians 6:1-10, especially verse ten.

A writer, speaking of this matter, wrote, "This method has not been unknown or infrequent in ecclesiastical history; in fact it has stained the pages of the church through all the centuries with blood."

Killing heretics began early. Paul began the bloody business in Jerusalem and then had the sword applied to his own head. The Roman emperors, believing in the efficacy of this method, poured the fires of ten dreadful persecutions on the early Christians.

In time Christians began to decapitate and burn one another. Roman Catholics lighted pyres for Protestants in many cities and countries, and Protestants began to burn and hang one another. It is only in modern times that death for heresy has not been inflicted.

The method seems short and sure. When a man talks against us, pull out his tongue, cut off his head; and he will then talk no more. But, strangely enough, he often keeps on talking more widely and powerfully than ever. The match put to the tinder to burn a Christian has often proved the truth of what Latimer said to Ridley on the way to the stake, "We shall this day light such a candle by God's grace in England as shall never be put out." That candle, now become a sun, is burning in England and in all Protestant countries today; and in its light we live.

Persecution is no proper way to meet erroneous opinion and conduct, however wrong and dangerous they may seem to us. In doing injustice and violence to such views we are likely to stir up sympathy with them and give them free course; we are scattering embers that will start fires elsewhere.

Let us, brethren, search our hearts upon our knees before God. The disposition may still be in us that when others differ from us we would like to retaliate by some short and sure way; but this is a fallacious method, and grave wrong and even murder may lurk in the thought. See 1 John 3:15.

How little we know of all the evil things that are slumbering in our hearts, and what violence and wickedness and murder would come stalking forth out of us to persecute and slay and burn if we would only let ourselves loose or God did not in mercy restrain us! We know not what manner of persons we are, and we need the restraint of the spirit of Christ to keep from all unrighteousness.

To memorize and repeat often to ourselves Jeremiah 17:9, 10 would help. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it? I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings."

Dear brethren, the world has had enough injustice and persecution and war and bloodshed; and it now needs the healing grace and saving redemption of the spirit and the return of the Lord Jesus Christ, who will banish all enmity and strife and bring in that sweet brotherhood of man for which the world unconsciously is waiting (Romans 8:20-23).

Let us obey the spirit of 2 Timothy 2:23-25 and Titus 3:8-11, proclaiming the angel's message, "Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people . . . Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

EUROPE READY FOR WAR

"Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them."—Ezekiel 38:7.

IN SPITE of bankrupt treasuries and starving populations the nations of Europe continue to plan for war. The resistless command of Jehovah has gone forth to "prepare war!" His word will accomplish its destined purpose; and the nations will assemble themselves before Jerusalem, the judgment seat of the Almighty, and receive the just recompense for their age-long crimes!

Returning on August 4 from the wheat conference in Geneva to which he had been a delegate, Henry Morgenthau, Sr., diplomat and Democratic counsellor, and former American ambassador to Turkey, said war is brewing in Germany. He asserted, according to an Associated Press correspondent, that the policies of Chancellor Hitler, if successful, would work for a general war; and if these policies were unsuccessful, civil war would result within that nation and spread over the continent. Whether successful or unsuccessful, the present German government is leading to war.

The Morgenthau statement reminds us of what was said recently in the Deutsche Zeitung, an extremely nationalistic German paper. Referring to the Nazi administration, it declared: "The road is now clear. The Hitler-Papen-Hugenberg Cabinet represents Germany's last reserve. If it fails, a catastrophe of gigantic dimensions is inevitable."

The London Morning Post looks upon the situation with equal gravity. Hitler's government is not, it insists, "a government which augurs well for international peace. It is, unfortunately, the kind which is apt to seek solution of its difficulties at home in adventures abroad."

Mr. Morgenthau was asked how Europe could prepare financially and physically for another war. He replied:

"By martial law. The nations of Europe can easily confiscate enough to carry on war. It is most pathetic, as the masses of the people want peace—but the leaders want war."

"Morgenthau said all the nations of Europe were conserving their resources.

"The unwillingness on the part of some of them," he said, "to go all the way in the matter of wheat curtailments is because of a feeling that they must prepare for war and in preparing they must have grains to store and draw upon."

"All Europe is ready for war," he added. "France is working tooth and nail to be self-contained and is offering a bonus on wheat. In Germany there will be war within or without. Conditions all over Europe are similar to what they were in 1913."

"All the countries are expending more for armament. All distrust each other. Europe will not look to us for manpower again, as she has all the men she wants, but one group or another would like a financial alliance with us."

"Morgenthau said he would present these views to President Roosevelt."

Prophetic Interpretation

God has declared "the end from the beginning," and throughout the ages students of prophecy have been unfolding the events that would one day be written (and have been) upon the pages of history, proving that the great and wise God who created the world is a divine and intelligent being. To study prophecy awakens one to a more earnest desire to go deeper into God's Word and find out what will be the next great event in history.

Today prophetic students do not have to look through a dark gloom into the future, as during the nineteenth century. The study of prophecy today is fascinating, for on every hand there are things coming to pass that bespeak to us that consummation and restitution are at hand. A knowledge of prophecy is needed, for this is an age when the challenge is going out for workers. Today prophecy is not a lower light as of other centuries, but is, truly, a beacon light, signaling to us that the day will soon dawn and the star arise.

Prophecy is of supreme value to mankind and is reliable according to history. God has spoken or predicted the future through His prophets who were called by Him, and history (or the written records of man) speaks to us and declares the fulfillment thereof.

In the study of prophetic interpretation there are thirty-nine elements to be considered, and, also, the laws and meanings must be ascertained. In this study we must seek out a method which will not lead to absurdities or become ridiculous in meaning. Laws of words, ideas, and figures of speech are to be considered, for the Record says, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Knowledge and wisdom are to be sought for with diligence, and can be attained in no other way. In our study we should always use common sense and good judgment.

In finding the meaning of scriptural terms used in prophecy we must find their general use; and this is done by studying well the text and context, by considering well the circumstances, and by using good judgment.

Sometimes a prophecy is given to God's servants in vision. That is when future events are made to pass before the mind as if they were actually taking place. A vision can be symbolic. In this case the future events are expressed by analogous objects. This is especially true of the book of Revelation.

Some prophecy is literal, and other figurative. A literal prophecy is made when the prediction is given in words used according to their primary and natural import. It is figurative when given in figures of speech. To understand prophecy of this nature we must understand the law of figures. To do this we must consider each figure separately:

In the metaphor a striking likeness is used.

In the simile or comparison there is an affirmation that one agent, object, or act is like another.

Antithesis occurs when opposing ideas are placed together for sake of contrast.

An elliptical metaphor occurs when the figure is incomplete.

Personification is addressing an inanimate object as if it were alive and had intelligence.

The apostrophe is a digression from order of discourse and a calling upon the absent as present.

An allegory is similar to a metaphor, but is really a narrative in which abstract qualities are given the form of and attributes of objects or persons.

A parable is a similitude taken from natural things. It is really a comparison used to illustrate a point or truth.

Metonymy is a figure in which one object is allowed to stand for another, that is, related objects as, "Ye have eaten the vineyard," for, "Ye have eaten of the fruit of the vineyard."

A synecdoche is using a part for the whole.

A hyperbole is an exaggeration for effect.

Irony is contradiction of expression and meaning, not to deceive, but to add force.

Interrogation is the asking of a question, not for information, but for effect.

Fables are interpretations of the Scriptures in such a manner as to do no violence to Scripture teaching.

Synchronous scriptures are passages which have reference to any one and the same event.

Double vision is a sign of giving communication.

In the above paragraphs I have discussed briefly the figures of speech which are essential to and are elements of prophetic interpretation. Now I shall discuss laws governing symbols, or in other words, the laws of representation since the functions of all types and symbols is representation. First, there is always a distinct resemblance of the symbol and that which it represents; second, there is the presence of unnatural elements in the symbols of Bible prophecy. This indicates that there is something unnatural in that represented. This element is often valuable in making known the identity of that represented, as in the case of the seven heads of the beast of Revelation.

Aside from the laws and elements necessary in prophetic interpretation, there are inspired explanations of symbolic representations. These must be given careful study in order that we may readily recognize their meanings when interpreting God's Word.

The world moves onward at a rapid pace, knowledge has increased, chariots rage, and war clouds are muttering in the East; and with the distress of nations with perplexity the student of prophecy is inspired to go into the deeper prophecies just to find out what will happen next.—Mae Turnbow in The Messiah's Advocate.

HOLY SPIRIT BAPTISM

the baptized human spirit was perfectly subdued and controlled by the overwhelming Holy Spirit.

WHO RECEIVED HOLY SPIRIT BAPTISM?

JOHN, in the passages already given, promised: "He shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit." John was addressing the entire Jewish nation as the people assembled from day to day to hear him. But were all Jews ever baptized in the Spirit? Only one dozen and one were ever so baptized according to the New Testament record. Then the "you" addressed by John meant that part of the multitudes that would be selected for such a baptism. To the people he introduced the coming Messiah as the One who should baptize them "in the Holy Spirit and in fire," some of them in the one, some in the other. We know this, because both baptisms were not received by all who heard John, for some "rejected for themselves the counsel of God" in rejecting the baptism of John. (See Luke 7:29, 30.) Therefore, John's promise was a conditional one and shows that only some of his disciples would be so baptized.

As to the ones that actually were baptized in the Holy Spirit, the following study will reveal.

To the apostles Jesus said: "But when they deliver you up, be not anxious how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you."—Matt. 10:19, 20; Mark 13:11; Luke 12:12. "But the Comforter, even the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said unto you."—John 14:26. "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall bear witness of me: and ye also bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning."—John 15:26, 27. "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he shall guide you into all the truth: for he shall not speak from himself; but what things soever he shall hear, these shall he speak: and he shall declare unto you the things that are to come. He shall glorify me: for he shall take of mine, and shall declare it unto you."—John 16:13-16.

These things, all of which were spoken to the apostles and to them alone, establish the following: the apostles were to receive the Holy Spirit as a promise; this Spirit would teach them "all things" that they were to teach men, bringing to their remembrance everything that He had spoken unto them; the Spirit would even do the talking when their mouths opened to speak; this Spirit would directly communicate to the apostles what it would hear from the throne of God, thus enabling their mouths to speak what God directed. The things of Christ were to be witnessed by them before the world. All this was to result from their reception of the baptism in the Spirit.

But Jesus designated a certain time when all this should come upon or unto them. Luke testifies: to the apostles Jesus said: "Ye are witnesses of these things. And behold, I send forth the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city (Jerusalem), until ye be clothed with power from on high."—Luke 24:48, 49.

Everything thus far spoken regarding the baptism in the Holy Spirit is spoken to the apostles; and the time of receiving it is shortly after this, in Jerusalem. Referring to this latter promise, Luke says: "And being assembled together with them (the apostles), he charged them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the promise of the Father, which, said he, ye heard from me: for John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit not many days hence."—Acts 1:4, 5.

Here we are introduced to several things: the promise made by John the Baptist (which we have cited—Matt. 3:11) is now about to be fulfilled; the apostles are the subjects of that Spirit baptism which John the Baptist promised; Jerusalem is the place where John's promise is to be fulfilled; "not many days" after the Savior's reiteration of John's promise (which, to be exact, was just about ten days after) the apostles were to be baptized in the Holy Spirit; this Spirit baptism was to give power to the apostles as witnesses or preachers of Christ, verse 8: "But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you: and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

We now turn to Acts 2:1-5, and we read of the actual occurrence of this Spirit baptism. The apostles alone receive this baptism, for they are the subject of the narrative. The last verse of the first chapter of Acts, read in connection with the first verse of the second chapter, proves this. "And they gave lots for them; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles. And when the day of Pentecost was now come, they (the eleven apostles, including Matthias) were all together in one place." The twelve are all together in Jerusalem ready for the Spirit baptism. "And suddenly there came from heaven a sound as of the rushing of a mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them tongues parting asunder, like as of fire; and it sat upon each one of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

Here, then, is the first case of Holy Spirit baptism bestowed upon men. The facts are: this baptism was a promise, not a command; it was promised to the apostles alone; it was bestowed upon the apostles alone; it gave to the apostles that divine inspiration by which they could know and accurately reveal to men the will of God, the plan of salvation; it gave to them supernatural power, miracle-working power, for they not only spoke "in other tongues," but the same word spoken by them was clearly understood by all of the sixteen nationalities present.

At least these five things are true of this first case of Holy Spirit baptism. Therefore, to apply any of the passages of Scripture that we have quoted regarding Holy Spirit baptism to any persons other than the apostles of Christ (Paul, though as a "child untimely born"—1 Cor. 15:8—is reckoned among the apostles of Christ, though not till seven years after the baptism of the twelve on Pentecost) is to misapply those passages, for Acts 1:4, 5 shows that the apostles were the subjects of the baptism promised by John the Baptist. The disciples or converts of the apostles never were promised the baptism in the Holy Spirit. They were to enjoy spiritual gifts, but not Spirit baptism (1 Cor. 12:4-12).

CORNELIUS' BAPTISM IN THE HOLY SPIRIT

BUT Cornelius and his house (Gentiles) did receive the baptism of the Spirit, for they received "the like gift" bestowed upon the apostles "at the beginning," the day of Pentecost (Acts 11:15-18). Was Cornelius an apostle? He was not. Neither was he a brother in Christ with the apostles, for men enter into Christ through Christian baptism (we are "baptized into Jesus Christ"—Rom. 6:3; Gal. 3:27), and Cornelius was not baptized till after the Spirit baptism had been received (Acts 10:44-48). This is what "amazed" Peter and the brethren with him on the occasion: that somebody else, and that a Gentile family out of Christ, should receive the same baptism that was given the apostles on the day of Pentecost (Acts 10:45). This proves that no other case of Spirit baptism had occurred since the day of Pentecost, for not only were the brethren and Peter amazed at the reception of the Spirit by Gentiles, but they were convinced when they saw poured out upon them the like gift received alone, up until this occasion, by the apostles. That, says Peter, was the astonishing feature of the whole occurrence. Hear him: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Spirit fell on them, even as on us at the beginning." Then he concludes: "If then God gave unto them the like gift as he did also unto us, when we believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I, that I could withstand God?"—Acts 11:15, 17. Peter likens Cornelius' experience, not to the common experience of those who are converted to Christ, but to the exceptional experience of himself and the other apostles at Pentecost; and this is conclusive evidence that no such experience was common to believers in Christ. Had such been common, Peter would have said, "If then God gave unto them the like gift as he did unto all other converts to Christ"; but when he found a case of Spirit reception like this, he was forced to go back to the baptism of the apostles at Pentecost. That, therefore, so far confines Holy Spirit baptism to the two cases of the apostles at Pentecost and Cornelius at Caesarea, eleven years subsequent.

But if the promise of Holy Spirit baptism was to embrace only the apostles, why did Cornelius receive the same baptism?

The answer is found in the astonishment produced at Cornelius' conversion, which shows that such an exhibition—the baptism in the Spirit of others than the apostles—was wholly unexpected by even the apostles; and it was bestowed upon Cornelius for precisely the astonishing effect it would necessarily have upon the apostles and their Jewish brethren. It is an instance in which God went beyond His actual promise, did more than He had revealed as His purpose; and this He did the more to impress upon the Jewish Christians the fact of the Gentiles' call to repentance. So it was understood (Acts 11:18).

So exactly was this baptism like the apostles' baptism at Pentecost, which was the fulfillment of John's promise, that Peter, on witnessing it, was reminded of John's promise: "And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye (apostles) shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit."—Acts 11:16. This baptism bestowed upon the Gentile, Cornelius, was, therefore, to impress permanently upon the apostles and Jewish disciples the fact that the Gentiles were now made amenable to the gospel law and were to be included in the offering of salvation through Christ; and to impress this with sufficient force God chose to bestow upon the initial Gentile subjects the same baptism with which He inaugurated the cause among the Jews. As the two cases introduced the two divisions of mankind to the privileges of the gospel, no repetition of either of these cases is possible, for as there are no more Jewish apostles to inspire and no new Gentile world to initiate into the gospel privileges, so there is no more occasion to bestow the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon men.

How many are suffering persecution? If we are not suffering, there is something wrong with us.—James A. Patrik in The Suffering of Christ, June 10, 1929.

"HERE LIES —"

THESE words, inscribed on many an old tombstone, express a fact concerning the nature and destiny of man which pride and fear and misunderstanding of God's Word has prompted millions of otherwise well-balanced people to deny.

"Here lies James Smith. Born June 27, 1842. Died October 14, 1898, aged, fifty-six years." Such is the tenor of the inscriptions found on the monuments erected in old time cemeteries. And yet so many were inclined to disbelieve the facts that were there recorded in unyielding granite!

"No!" they said, "that cannot be true. Man is the highest creation of God. Shall we acknowledge that he perishes as do the beasts of the field? And what a dreadful thought it would be to think that our loved one is really in the grave, that his physical body, now turning back to dust, is all that there is of him!"

The God of infinite love in the richness of His mercy brought to pass the most splendid miracle of all time, the resurrection of His Son, that He might prove that while the inscriptions on those marble shafts were true, that men really die, nevertheless hope concerning them need not falter in the breasts of the living. For "now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept."—1 Cor. 15:20.—G. E. M.

“REJOICE IN THE LORD, YE RIGHTEOUS; AND GIVE THANKS AT THE REMEMBRANCE OF HIS HOLINESS.”—PSALM 97:12.

A PRAYER

OBLESSED Lord and Saviour, who hast commanded us to love one another, grant us grace that, having received Thine undeserved bounty, we may love every man in Thee and for Thee. We implore Thy clemency for all; but especially for the friends whom Thy love hast given to us. Love Thou them, O Thou fountain of love, and make them to love Thee with all their heart, with all their mind, and with all their soul, that those things which are pleasing to Thee they may will, and speak, and do. And though our prayer is cold, because our charity is so little fervent, yet Thou art rich in mercy. Measure not to them Thy goodness by the dulness of our devotion, but as Thy kindness surpasseth all human affection, so let Thy hearing transcend our prayer. Do Thou to them what is expedient for them, according to Thy will, that they, being always and everywhere ruled and protected by Thee, may attain in the end to everlasting life; and to Thee and the Father be all honour and praise for ever and ever. Amen.

RESUME

DURING the General Conference held in Oregon there were four meetings of the executive board of the National Berean Society. Reports from the various committees handling Society funds were received and without exception approved. These reports were in general as detailed as those ordered by the Berean conference of 1932.

Several changes were made in the personnel of the various committees. Miss Verna Himmelright, 406 South MacDonald St., Attica, Ind., and Mrs. Virginia Kincheloe, Fairfax, Va., retained their respective places as chairmen of the senior and junior home study committees. Mrs. Rhoda Hanson, Caledonia, Mich., and Miss Dorothy Magaw, 648 Iglehart Ave., St. Paul, Minn., were appointed to their positions as chairmen of the senior and junior social correspondence committees.

As has already been noted, Mrs. Orpha Sanford resigned from her position on the relief committee. C. E. Lapp, Mt. Sterling, Ill., and Mrs. Leta MacLeod, 1105 Val Vista St., Pomona, Calif., were appointed to fill her place.

The publishing committee was completely renovated: Paul Hatch, R. F. D. 1, Harvey, Ill., chairman; N. J. MacLeod, 1105 Val Vista St., Pomona, Calif.; Arlen Marsh,

Oregon, Ill. The new committee expects to have a series of tracts written from a modern standpoint, but adhering strictly to the Bible, published before the year is out. Work on Senior Book 3 is being pushed.

Genniel Carpenter was reappointed editor, and Arlen Marsh was reappointed sales committee.

STATE SOCIETIES

AT THE Berean conference of August 7, 1933, the Iowa State Berean Society reported 35 members actually paying dues, with more members listed but not included in the report. Two local societies, one at Gladbrook, the other at Waterloo, existed. A more complete report is expected for this page following the state election and conference.

Reports from Minnesota and Indiana already have been printed. There was no state report from Michigan, but Miss Marjorie Siple and the national secretary remarked progress in the Michigan society during the past year.

Illinois reported a total state membership of 109, distributed among societies located at Rockford, Oregon, Dixon, Ripley, and Eldorado (which had organized during the year). The society at Marshall had been disbanded.

MY TRUST IN HIM

I cannot always see the way that leads to heights above;
I sometimes quite forget He leads me on with hands of love;
But yet I realize the path must lead me to Immanuel's land;
And when I reach life's summit, I shall know and understand.

I cannot always trace the onward course my bark must take;
But, looking backward, I behold afar its shining wake Illumined with God's Light of Love; and so I onward go
In perfect trust that He who holds the helm the course must know.

I cannot always see the plan on which He builds my life,
For oft the sound of hammer, blow on blow, the noise of strife,
Confuse me, 'til I quite forget He knows and oversees,
And that in all details with His great plan my life agrees.

I cannot always understand the Master's rule;
I cannot always do the task He gives in Life's hard school;
But I am learning with His help to solve them one by one;
And when I cannot understand, to say, Thy will be done.

"Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee."

A GREAT KING AND HIS WORK

THE Feast of Tabernacles was the most joyous of the many feasts which the Israelites kept. It came in the autumn after the fruits of the summer were gathered in and was something like our Thanksgiving Day, though it lasted seven days. The hearts of the people were filled with thanks to God for His goodness to them during the Feast of Tabernacles. On this special feast the people had so much more to thank God for, and that was their new place of worship.

The month of Ethanim, also called Tishri, is the seventh month in the Jewish year, and the feast lasted from the fifteenth to the twenty-first. Can you think of some of the things the Israelites never forgot to thank God for each year? During these years of God's loving care for them, their church was merely a tent, though a beautiful one, for they had been journeying. Now they were settled and could build a permanent church.

How happy they were when they looked at their magnificent temple, we can imagine! I hope all of you boys and girls have pictures of this temple so that you can get an idea of its beauty. Solomon, the richest and wisest king, guided the people in the building of it.

Have you heard, boys and girls, how the materials for the temple were gathered? Did you know that the hammering and chopping and measuring were all done in the woods and quarries so that no sound was heard when all was put together? Have you read how the people brought willingly and joyfully all that was needed for the work? They even brought too much.

God, you know, gave the plans of the temple to David, and he helped his son Solomon to construct it, giving him the patterns and specifications. Mostly David helped Solomon in the way he trained him and brought him up to worship God. Then he prayed God to give him wisdom and a perfect heart and a willing mind. And God always answers a prayer like that.

The priests moved the ark from the tabernacle into the temple. The ark was very dear to them through all those years of hardship and traveling. It was an oblong box of wood overlaid with beautiful gold. Over it were two cherubim with outstretched wings, all of gold. Inside the ark were the tables of stone on which were written the law God gave to Moses.

When all was ready and the priests had come out of the holy place, a dazzling light filled the room, telling the people that God had entered the temple and approved of it. For this light was the glory of God, and it must have made the people very happy, because no work is worth doing unless God thinks it is good. And in the case of God's temple, it was doubly necessary to have God's approval.

Now they could all come and offer their thanks to God in a place that was beautiful enough for Him and worthy of such a great and marvelous God. It took seven years to build this temple, during which time, no doubt, the priests and the musicians were trained to perform their parts in the service. Only our very best is good enough to offer to God.

Don't you think all of the people, along with Solomon, felt they had a share in that place of worship? Didn't it belong to each one who had given something toward it? Just so it is with your place of worship. No matter how young you are, you can give something or do something for your church. And if you go to its services and do your part quietly and reverently, God will count you as one of the sharers in His work and also in His blessings.

When all was finished, Solomon offered up a wonderful prayer to God at the dedication. He asked God to forgive the people for wandering away from Him; he asked Him to answer their prayers; he asked Him to bless their work and increase their crops so that all people of the earth might know that the Lord is God.

And yet this great, wise, and wealthy King Solomon, who had greater possessions and a larger kingdom than all other kings of Israel, said that all this was as nothing compared to keeping God's commandments. The beginning of wisdom, he said, was the fear of God, and to fear God is the whole duty of man. He learned this after a life filled with great opportunity and much responsibility.

How many of you boys and girls know where this verse is found and can fill in the blanks? "I was — when they — unto —, Let — go into the — of the —."

Also this one: "O come, let us — and — —: let us — before the — our —."

Here is a harder one: "Praise ye the —. I will — the Lord with — — —, in the — of the upright, and in the —."

Who will fill these out on a post card and mail them to me?

SOLOMON

1 Kings 5 to 8

Devotional Reading: Psalm 100

GOLDEN TEXT

Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise.—
Psalm 100:4.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Solomon: The Value of a House of Worship.

Aim: To teach that God approved the building of beautiful churches for His worship.

I. Solomon Builds the Temple. (1 Kings, chapters 5-7.) David proposed to build a house for the worship of God that would be worthy of so holy a purpose, but was forbidden to do so because he had been a man of blood. The building of a church is an act of worship and should be undertaken in the most reverent manner. Solomon was authorized to carry out the holy design. Only the finest materials went into the construction of the temple because it was to be the house of almighty God. The church should be the finest building in the community, not as a matter of pride, but from the deepest sense of worship and devotion. It is a material expression of the congregation's appreciation of God's holiness and of His goodness to them.

II. Solomon Dedicates the Temple. (1 Kings 8:1-9.) Solomon and his people gave freely and gladly of their best for the construction of the temple. As long as it was in process of building, it was their house. Their own materials went into it; and when the time for dedication came, it was still their building. Up to this point it was no more sacred than any other structure reared for any purpose. But now that all was finished, they could transfer it to whomsoever they would. That was their right, and they chose to give their building to God.

III. God Glorifies the Temple. (1 Kings 8: 10-66.) Solomon and the people of Israel could furnish the material and the labor for the building of the temple; but beyond that they could not go except to present the finished structure to Jehovah. The Lord only could accept it at their hands and mark it with His glorious presence as His own. Henceforth the temple was no longer man's, but God's. It was the Father's house. To use it for political, social, mercantile, or any other purpose that was not distinctly and exclusively for the worship and honoring of God, would be to defile it.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A Righteous Ruler: Our lesson deals with a new chapter in the religious life of the children of Israel. For a long time God had had no permanent place to meet His people, or it might be said the people had had no permanent place to meet their God. A dwellingplace for God's shekinah glory had been erected, a definite place of worship for a God-fearing people. At the instance of the temporal ruler the people were summoned to national worship.

What a grand spectacle this must have been! It had a great influence on the individual life of the nation. "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn."—Prov. 29:2. Great benefits accrue to a nation when the ruler is righteous. The head of a nation can by example lead his subjects either toward God or away from Him.

Need of a Place of Worship: All people need a place of worship. Not only do they need a place to worship, but they need to worship. Oftentimes people have houses to worship in but fail to go there to worship. Regularity of worship is fundamental to spirituality and Christian growth. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."—Heb. 10:25. The statement infers and conditions substantiate the fact that in the latter times people will become slothful in service and neglect to assemble for worship. It requires constant and diligent continuance in well-doing to keep from becoming dilatory in attendance and worship.

A Great Sacrifice: In calling the people together Solomon instituted a great sacrificial service. This immense sacrifice was not a waste. It impressed upon the minds and hearts of the worshippers the Source of their blessings and strength. Sacrifice is beneficial. Today we are not required to make animal sacrifices, but we should and are asked to present our tithes and offerings to the Lord. And of course there is a sacrifice that all must make, and that is self. Rom. 12:1, 2.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Solomon had finished the work on the temple, and it was ready to be dedicated. This was God's house and very sacred, as should be our places of worship today. Around the sacred part of the temple was a yard or court, and it was through gates that the court was entered. They were to enter there with thanksgiving and praises to God.

This place of worship was no more sacred to them than ours should be to us. It is just as becoming to us to enter a place of worship with praises and thanksgiving as it was to the people of Solomon's time. God is to be praised at all times, and Christians should be thankful to Him for all we have and all He has promised His children.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

The Value of a House of Worship

From the earliest times people have been building temples in which to worship their God or gods. Some of the earliest records of people are regarding their religion. The most magnificent of ancient buildings were usually temples. It seems as though the people have wanted not only a place in which to worship, but also wanted that building to stand as a monument to their God. Israel knew that they were worshipping the only God, so they erected the building that surpassed all others of its time. It became the admiration of the whole world, and people of every country came to see it and to worship in it. It attracted people as a magnet does steel. Its beauty brought strangers to the great God of the universe.

In time the Jews began to worship the temple. They began to teach that Jerusalem was the only place where God could be worshiped. Jesus tried to correct this impression when He was talking to the Samaritan woman as recorded in John 4:21-23. While God today wants us to worship in spirit and in truth, we must not forget that our surroundings have considerable influence upon our worship. One can worship God in spirit even if the meeting is held in a dance hall, but he is less apt to than in a building especially built for worship. Many church bodies, in starting in a new community, have worshiped in a hall until able to build; but few of them have ever prospered much until they built their church, and then they usually prospered only in proportion to the neatness and attractiveness of their building. It is very hard to overestimate the value of a fine beautiful church building as the first means of attracting carnal people to God.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Topic: The Temple Is Finished.

Solomon was the third king of Israel. He was the son of David. While he was king he had a large, beautiful temple built. The temple was made so that the people could worship God. No more beautiful building had ever been built nor has ever been built since.

When today's lesson starts the temple had all been finished. But one thing seemed to remain to be done: Solomon wanted the ark and all the holy vessels from the tabernacle brought and placed in the temple. (Teacher, be sure that the children understand about the ark and its origin and why it was important to have it in the temple.)

The priests were sent after the ark. In the ark were the tables of stone upon which Moses had written the commandments.

God was so pleased with the temple that when the priests placed the ark in its place, He filled the temple with a great cloud.

Where do we go to worship? Do we worship God in our Sunday school work?—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Our church was happy to have Sr. Margaret Bylsma, together with her sister and family, drop in very unexpectedly at service on Sunday, August 27. Sr. Margaret visited here with the Albert Siple family from Hammond, La., in early August, en route to General Conference, and since then has been visiting the sister and family of Dearborn, Mich.

The church wishes to express its real appreciation to the ones who have offered encouragement and financial assistance toward the building plans. Will those who offered to lend money please not send it until notified, as it is quite evident the most of the building plans will have to be deferred till spring? If there are still others willing to lend money when it is needed, however, we should be glad to have their names and amounts.

With the resumption of choir practice this week all of our regular work is in full swing, and we hope to be led closer to our Master and to help many others through the coming months.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

AN ADDITION TO THE LIBRARY

An interesting and valuable addition to the library of the National Bible Institution was recently made by Sr. Anna E. Drew of Dixon, Ill., when she contributed the following bound volumes to the collection: "Yahweh-Elohim, the Memorial Name," by E. J. L.; "The Law, the Covenants, and the Sabbath," by Dr. L. C. Thomas; "Man's Destiny," a work on immortality, by George Storrs; and another standard work on the same subject by C. F. Hudson, entitled, "Christ Our Life."

These are thoughtfully prepared presentations of the themes of which they treat and are suitable for reference purposes. They are available to all who attend the General Conference or visit Oregon at any time.

SPECIAL INDEBTEDNESS FUND

The following amounts have been received in full or in part payment of pledges made to pay off the indebtedness of the National Bible Institution. Contributions to this fund will be appreciatively accepted at any time.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ellis	$100.00

BAPTISMS

The church at South Bend, Ind., was made glad when two young people from Sr. Lois Hunt's class requested baptism at the close of our Sunday morning service, Aug. 27. We, therefore, met at four o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. pool and assisted Albert Huat and Jeanette Romine in putting on Christ in baptism. We brought to their minds Solomon's words of advice: "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." May they each in the time allotted them before their Savior comes develop that beautiful life and be fit to stand before the King.

We also wish to announce a baptism which took place on Monday following Indiana Bible School and Conference. Willard Naylor of Nappanee, Ind., was baptized by Bro. Anderson. Our state secretary had previously returned home and had not been informed in time to include this in her report, which fact explains the omission.

F. A. Stilson.

TO MINISTERS AND CONFERENCE SECRETARIES

It will soon be time for the annual publication of the official list of ministers who are recognized by the General Conference of the Church of God. In order that the list may be complete and each name properly authorized it is necessary that the secretaries of the various state conferences who have not submitted a new list since their last conference should do so before October 1, 1933. The General Conference has no authority to publish the names of ministers as accredited who are not authorized by some state conference or by some local body of believers or who are not generally recognized by the Church of God at large. So will conference secretaries please help out in this matter at once?

Local congregations which are not affiliated with a state conference are also urged to send the names and addresses of all whom they recognize as qualified ministers in their community. Pastors of such churches are asked to assist in securing compliance with this request.

Isolated men and women who have been recognized by local bodies or by state conferences of the Church of God as worthy of ministerial recognition, but who at the present time are not connected with any organization either local or state, are also urged to send in their names for publication.

All others who desire such recognition by the General Conference must secure the endorsement in writing of some established church or conference.

This annual list does not of necessity indicate that those whose names appear are themselves in full accord with the entire program of the General Conference or the National Bible Institution. It merely indicates that they are authorized by some body of Church of God believers to perform all of the duties which usually devolve on a minister of the gospel.

G. E. Marsh, Secretary.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. R. E. Arthand (for self and another); Thomas Davis; Mrs. D. Cronbaugh; Mrs. Esther Holmes; Mrs. Clara Chaffee (for another).

DUTTON, MICHIGAN

It was indeed a happy little group that gathered at a beautiful little lake southwest of Dutton last Sunday afternoon to witness the baptism of four of the young people of the Sunday school here. These young people are the first to accept Jesus as their Savior under Bro. Barney's faithful teaching here. The good seed is being scattered, and we feel sure it will bring forth more fruitage soon.

We wish to introduce to the household of faith these new sisters and brother in Christ: Misses Claudia and Marian Barney, Byron Center; and Miss Phyllis Brown and Russell Brown, Dutton.

Mrs. Wm. Hanson.

TWENTY-SEVEN BAPTIZED

One of the most encouraging reports that has reached this office for some time has to do with the splendid results attained in a series of special midsummer services conducted by Evangelist J. H. Anderson in which he was assisted at various points by Bros. Lindsay, Williamson, and Stone. That God has wonderfully blessed the efforts of those who have been presenting the gospel of the kingdom in its simplicity is evident.

Leaving his home in Michigantown, Ind., July 26, Bro. Anderson proceeded to Brumfield, Ky., where he gave a series of prophetic sermons which ended on Sunday, July 30, and resulted in two baptisms.

Leaving Monday for North Carolina, the work was started in that state on Tuesday, August 1, and continued over the following Sunday.

On Monday, August 7, the evangelist and his party continued farther south, holding services day and night in South Carolina, in which he was ably assisted by Bros. Williamson and Stone. At this place they met with the largest attendance they had had during the summer. It was estimated that there were 200 cars parked around the meeting place on Sunday, August 13. Nineteen were baptized during the period in South Carolina, and others will be baptized later by the local pastor.

Returning to North Carolina, meetings were continued there on August 16 and 17, and five more were immersed. The church was so encouraged by the results that it was decided to repair the building in order that it might be more attractive.

On Friday morning, August 18, the evangelistic party started for Missouri, where Bro. Anderson was to assist Bro. S. J. Lindsay and others in the annual conference and Bible school. One was baptized here.

During the busy month Bro. Anderson gave 42 sermons and baptized 27 persons into the saving name of Jesus Christ.

Returning to Indiana, he is now engaged in a meeting at the Pleasant View church which is to continue over September 10.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

Elizabeth Ordnung; Luella Caples; Mrs. Ida Jeffrey; Mrs. Lydia A. Railsback; Marian R. Richards; Grand Rapids Sunday School; Dorothy Magaw.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

KINGS MOUNTAIN, NORTH CAROLINA

On Saturday, Aug. 26, the writer, his wife, two daughters, and youngest son, in company with Bro. W. H. Stone of Williamston, S. C., motored up to the Kings Mountain Church in North Carolina. That night Bro. Stone spoke to a number of men and women who assembled at the home of Sr. Shipman, on the subject of "The Gospel, and What It Is."

On Sunday morning, August 27, at 10:30, the writer conducted a Bible school at the church, using as his subject, "The Infallibility of the Word of God." This Bible lesson was followed by another sermon by Bro. Stone, on the subject of "Obedience." Bro. Stone handled this subject in a simple, yet very masterful manner.

The church at this place consists only of three members, although their former membership was some seven or eight; but some four or five are now in the death state awaiting the first resurrection. This church does not have any regular services; therefore, they appreciate it when any brethren stop with them and speak the words of eternal life to them.

We hope arrangements can be made to send these people a minister more often than they have been getting one, for they are isolated from others of like precious faith; so you can imagine how lonely they get. We are looking forward to the time when the true church of God will be gathered together as one large family in the everlasting kingdom of God. Let us continue praying, "Thy kingdom come," for this prayer will be answered soon.

A. W. McCoy.

CORRECTING A POSSIBLE MISUNDERSTANDING

Mrs. Orpha A. Sanford, 1030 Warren Ave., Downers Grove, Ill., who for many years has conducted relief work throughout the country under the auspices of the National Berean Society, wishes to correct any misunderstanding that may have been caused by the announcement which appeared on the Berean page in the issue of August 22, 1933. Sr. Sanford has not withdrawn either from the Church of God or from the Berean society, but has thought best to conduct her relief work independently of both organizations hereafter. The work is to be continued, but no longer under the auspices of the Bereans or the National Bible Institution.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

STERLING E. MAXWELL

Sterling E. Maxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Maxwell, was born at Belgrade, Mo., June 16, 1888. Early in life he became a member of the M. E. Church, South, and later was baptized and became a member of the Church of God.

He was united in marriage with Miss Belva Wilson of Belgrade, April 7, 1912. To this union were born three daughters, Mrs. Doyne Bass of Sultan, Mo.; and Doris and Winona of Belgrade.

He leaves his wife, the three daughters above named, his mother, three sons, and four sisters to mourn the loss of one they will miss so much as they go on in life looking for the return of the Redeemer to wipe sorrow's tears away.

The funeral services were attended by a large number of friends and neighbors, many of whom had known him from boyhood. Afterward we laid him to rest to wait for the dawning of the Lord's new day.

L. E. Conner.

JOHN DANIELS

Another of the pioneer defenders of the faith in Michigan has ended his work.

John Daniels was born in New York State in 1860, the son of Martin and Mary A. Daniels. He came to Michigan when a child and spent his entire life here. In 1915 he was married to Mrs. Ada Cahoon, and since that time they have lived on a farm near Alma. Death came on August 16, leaving his widow, two brothers, and one sister to mourn his loss. The brothers are Henry of Lake City and Elwyn of Hastings, and the sister is Mrs. Emma Cronk of Vermontville.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer on August 20 from the farm home, and Bro. Daniels was laid away to await the Master's call. Sr. Daniels feels very lonely and would be glad to hear from any of the faith. Her address is simply Alma, Michigan.

F. E. Siple.

LURETTA TURNER

Lurette, daughter of Joseph and Artelia Claypool, was born in Clark County, Illinois, April 3, 1867. At an early age she united with the Brosman church, and later became a member of the Salem church, where she remained a faithful member during the remainder of her life.

She was united in marriage with Charles W. Turner May 14, 1885, to which union ten children were born, all of whom remain to mourn with their father the loss of one whose place in their present lives can never be filled by another.

As an indication of one of the outstanding qualities in Sr. Turner's character the following lines, which she enjoyed reciting to her friends, are given:

- A little more kindness,
- A little less creed,
- A little more giving,
- A little less greed.
- A little more smile,
- A little less frown,
- A little less kicking
- A man when he's down.
- A little more we,
- And a little less I,
- A little more laugh,
- And a little less cry.
- A little more flowers,
- On the pathway of life,
- And fewer on graves
- At the end of the strife.

After appropriate funeral services her loved ones bade her an affectionate farewell for awhile.

L. E. Conner.

THE ROSE OF SHARON

A Persian fable says: One day
A wanderer found a lump of clay,
So redolent of sweet perfume
Its odors scented all the room.
"What art thou?" was his quick demand;
"Art thou some gem from Samarkand,
Or spikenard in this rude disguise,
Or other costly merchandise?"
"Nay, I am but a lump of clay."
"Then, whence this wondrous perfume—say?"
"Friend, if the secret I disclose,
I have been dwelling with the rose."
Sweet parable! and will not those Who love to dwell with Sharon's Rose,
Distil sweet odors all around,
Though low and mean themselves be found?
Dear Lord, abide with us, that we May draw our perfume fresh from Thee.

A MOMENTOUS QUESTION

"Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"—Acts 1:6.

THE above question was asked the Lord just before His ascension. Earnest hearts are still asking the same question and the Lord's answer is still the same, "It is not for you to know the times and the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power."

The scribes and Pharisees were great students of the Old Testament Scriptures, but were so carried away with their hope and expectation of an earthly king and kingdom that they entirely overlooked the fact that the earthly king and earthly kingdom must be preceded by a suffering Messiah and an age of grace. When Jesus came, fulfilling the scriptures relating to the suffering Messiah, but did not establish the kingdom they were looking for, they rejected Him, instigated His death and caused Israel to lose (for a time) her special favor as a nation, in God's economy (Matt. 21:43).

I have long felt that many Bible students of today as well as yesterday are so weary of life's battles and disappointments and are so anxious to have the Lord return and deliver them from earth's sorrows and establish the long-looked-for kingdom that they are spending time and energy in trying to prove the time for the second coming is right at hand, which should be spent in prosecuting the work assigned to the church (Matt. 22:19, 10; Mark 16:15; Acts 1:8) which is God's plan for the present age.

I wish I had the power to press this thought on Christendom as I see it. If the church of today, with its wealth and facilities for carrying on, had the consecration and the power of the first century church, it could evangelize the world in two decades. Then we could expect the second coming and the new kingdom.

Evangelism is the headlight of the gospel dispensation. Evangelism has been the key word of my ministry. When I have been true to that work, God has given me success. When I have sidestepped that work, failure has come. The same is true of the church. To the extent that the church has been true to evangelism and the things that lead to evangelism, she has prospered. Other things being equal, the individual churches and pastors that have emphasized these things have always had the best success. Had I a thousand lives, I would gladly give them all to evangelism following God's plan as nearly as I could ascertain it from the written Word and the leadings of the Holy Spirit without a thought of assuming in any way the prerogative of God or interfering with His plan.

I heard a dear brother who is very anxious for the Lord to return say in a public address a few years ago that "if I could press a button and bring back the Lord, I would do it." I shudder at such a thought. That would be taking to oneself the work of God and interfering with His plan. Surely God has a plan, and He is wiser than we are and knows what He is doing and can be depended upon to send back our Lord at the right time. To move a hand to bring Him back before God's time would be high treason against the government of heaven and shut off multitudes from the possibility of gaining eternal life.

For centuries Israel longed for the coming of the Messiah. Finally when "the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son"; so in the fullness of time, He will send Him again, but that time rests with the Father and no effort on our part can locate it definitely.

It seems to me we would do well to follow the example of the early disciples and seek the power necessary to carry out the command set forth in Matthew 28:19, 20, and Mark 16:15, which must be accomplished before we can have scriptural ground for expecting our Lord's return. (Matt. 24:14.) World evangelism is our work. The time of the second coming rests with the Father, as did the first coming. Faithful, obedient servants will obey the Lord's command.—R. M. Simmons in The World's Crisis.

DOOMED TO FAILURE

THE Soviet government is doomed to failure. Its Godless, Christless, anti-religious character alone is sufficient in itself to bring it about; but when in addition to this blasphemy the law of the land requires that children shall betray their parents, the eventual overthrow of the nation is determined. First the church is destroyed, and then the home is brought to the same fate.

The following Associated Press dispatch dated from Moscow, August 20, suggests the depths of moral degradation to which the Soviet government has descended in its efforts to perpetuate its damnable system:

"About one hundred thousand children are being organized in 'light cavalry detachments' to guard against grain thefts and retrieve stray kernels dropped by harvesters in the North Caucasus fields.

"The government is providing shelter and food on the collective farms for these youthful organizations charged with protecting 'the Socialist crop.' Rewards of one thousand suits of clothing are to be distributed to the more energetic.

"Children from the ages of ten to sixteen years are to guard against depredations by kulaks (peasants owning property) or other dissident elements and report such actions. Other children, from six to ten years old, are to pick up stray grain lost by the reapers.

"One nine year old boy, Mischa Sorokin, has been awarded a new set of text books and stationery for denouncing and causing the arrest of his own father. The elder Sorokin, the child charged, took more grain than was due him from the common store.

"An eight year old girl discovered a Kulak woman in possession of a bucketful of grain, and a twelve year old boy is credited with trapping three grain thieves in a collective farm field.

"A boy who helped organize the grain retrieving campaign was presented with a six volume set of Lenin's works."

The Necessity of Baptism

By J. M. Stephenson

CHRIST taught the necessity of baptism in His discourse with Nicodemus. "Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3:5. He had just said, "Except a man be born again ('from above,' margin), he cannot see the kingdom of God."—Verse 3. In the verse following He said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit."—Verse 6.

According to the context, there are just two births, viz., one of the flesh and one of water and of the Spirit. It requires the water and the Spirit to make the second birth. The birth of the Spirit is the real birth, that of water being only a symbolic birth. But the symbolic birth is just as necessary as the real birth from the dead.

Before proving this point, I will show that the resurrection of Christ as the firstfruits and the great harvest of the sleeping saints is called a birth. Paul said that Christ was "the firstborn among many brethren."—Rom. 8:29. In this verse the resurrection of Christ and His many brethren is denominated a birth. These all having been born previously, this will be a second birth; and that it will be "of the Spirit" is evident from the following testimony: "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you."—Rom. 8:11. Hence, the resurrection of Christ and the saints is the second birth, or the birth of the Spirit. The birth of the Spirit is so closely connected with their resurrection that it is called the resurrection.

Again, Paul said that Christ is "the firstborn of every creature . . . the beginning, the firstborn from the dead."—Col. 1:15, 18. He was not the beginning of the old creation, for that was not "first which was spiritual, but that which was animal." Nor was He the beginning of the new creation by His first birth, but by the Spirit birth. In this sense He was the beginning of the new creation, the first-born from the dead. Not that he was the first dead man raised to life, but He was the first dead man who had been quickened to Spirit, or immortal life.

As Christ's resurrection was a birth, so will the resurrection of all His saints be a birth, also; for the firstfruits and the harvest were always of the same nature. That baptism is just as necessary to salvation as the resurrection of the dead will be seen in the light of Peter's reasoning. He said, "Wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us . . . by the resurrection of Christ."—1 Peter 3:20, 21. I omitted the parenthesis because his chain of argument is complete without it. I shall notice it after having considered his direct argument. Peter affirms that the water saved eight souls and that the like figure, baptism, saves us by the resurrection of Christ. Thus he teaches that baptism saves us as the water saved Noah and his family and that baptism saves us by the resurrection of Christ.

What relation does baptism sustain to the resurrection of Christ? It is a symbolic burial and resurrection with Christ. In proof of this please read the following testimony of Paul: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." That this symbolic burial with Christ is essential to a resurrection with Him is evident from the fact that baptism is the door into Christ. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."—Gal. 3:27.

No man can become a Christian without first getting into Christ or having put on Christ. But we get into Christ or put on Christ by baptism, according to Paul; therefore, baptism is an essential prerequisite to our becoming Christians. But baptism, to be valid, must have been preceded by a gospel (Please turn to Page Eight)

The Editor's Prayer

O LORD OF HOSTS, Thou who hast promised to redeem Israel from all her enemies and restore her people to the land of their fathers, we thank Thee that Thou hast given unto us the opportunity to see Thy gracious hand moving among the nations on her behalf. As we witness these things, strengthen, we pray, our faith in Thee and in Thy Holy Word. Help us to trust Thee without quailing, knowing Thy past and present faithfulness to Israel, the sons of Jacob are gathered out of the nations and are ready for their return to Zion, may we likewise be withdrawn from this present evil world and prepared in purity and in righteousness and in faith for the coming of Israel's King, in whose name we pray. Amen.

Germany Seeks a Jewish Haven

GERMANY must begin international negotiations to help find and set aside a new country larger than Palestine in which to settle the Jews from all parts of the world, asserts a dispatch from Berlin, dated September 4. It is said that such a solution of the German Jewish problem is the main point at issue in a new report now under discussion in official circles in Germany.

"The Jewish problem must be settled only by state measures and the only possible goal is a systematic emigration of all Jews from Germany," declared one of Chancellor Hitler's political experts according to the dispatch.

Thus is the wisdom and foresight of the God of Jacob justified by the developments of history and the conclusions of men! Not only must "a systematic emigration of all Jews from Germany" take place, but eventually the Jews throughout the world must be forced and aided by the nations (Isaiah 66:20) to turn their wandering steps finally toward a common destination.

That destination, however, will not be "a new country" in the sense in which German statesmen are using the word, but it will be a new country in that God will extend the present borders of Israel's historic homeland to include the far more extensive territory which God promised to Abraham more than four thousand years ago and which his descendants have never as yet occupied.

It will also be "a new country" in fulfillment of the divine assurance that its now barren hills will become richly productive, "for the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places: and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord."—Isaiah 51:3.

The present German Government is strongly opposed to forming Jewish settlements anywhere within German territory as under a "Judenvogt," or Jewish warden, the way it was in the Middle Ages. "This would anchor the Jews in Germany and create a group which might claim the rights of national minorities," Hitler's aide continued.

This, too, is in harmony with the divine plan for Israel. The Jews must not be permitted to rest in security for a moment in any considerable numbers or in any section of the world. By international negotiation, by financial inducement, by moral encouragement, and finally by physical compulsion, the people of Israel must be driven forth from all lands; and they must find but one door open to receive them, the door of the promised land.

It is Jehovah's honor and Jehovah's glory that is to be vindicated by their return! "I do not do this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen (nations), whither ye went." Again He cries, "Not for your sakes do I do this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel."—Ezekiel 36:22, 32.

Continuing his analysis of the Semitic situation as it is seen by the Hitler administration, the spokesman for the Government said:

"It is of interest to the whole world that the Jewish problem should be settled once for all, since Jews will remain centers of unrest, constantly creating secret societies which tend to Bolshevism. To scatter the Jews in all directions will not help. It is best to afford them the possibility of forming a nation, settled in one country." (The italics are ours.—Ed.) "Then they will no longer wander restlessly through the world."

O how true that last declaration is! Such is God's most gracious plan for His people. Such will His mercy bring to pass. "In their land they shall possess the double: everlasting joy shall be unto them."—Isaiah 61:7.

Diogenes Turned Modern

By Arden Marsh

IT is an ancient story, that of Diogenes. According to the most popular tradition concerning him, this Greek philosopher devoted his entire life to a vain search for wisdom. Whether or not he used the lamp which artists are prone to picture him as carrying is a matter of question, but the tradition indicates positively that the search described really was conducted as far as Athenian mythology was concerned.

Today Diogenes, turned modern, seeks both for wisdom and for God, although his search is considerably impeded by a conviction that the existence of Deity, while possible, is highly improbable. Driven on by an insatiable curiosity, this new version of the old philosopher turns the world and all its atoms upside down in his desire to acquire knowledge and a greater degree of intelligence. With indefatigable energy he plunges into unplumbed ocean depths and ascends to the limit of earth's atmosphere and beyond in his mad desire to find that which he unknowingly ignores, the Power behind it all, Jehovah omnipotent.

Blindly the present-day Diogenes walks in the presence of that Power which he seeks and cannot reach. He travels to the deserts and examines the stars and suns and planets through giant telescopes in an atmosphere so clear that the moon seems close enough to be touched. He evolves theories; and the unthinking world, seizing upon them as established fact, uses them as incantations to a modernized pantheistic Baal before which it performs its useless sacrifices. God is no person, God is Force; and to that thought men come to cling, blind followers of the blind.

Under the headline, "Young Children Seek Religion Spontaneously," Gladys Huntington Bevans in The Chicago Tribune commented on September 2 that every child has vague imaginings regarding God and that it is the parents' problem to cultivate them. She warned, however, that it is impossible to teach a child what one himself does not believe; consequently, if a parent possess "a deep and abiding faith in a personal and omniscient God" or if he have nothing save "a sure but vague feeling that there is a force, an order, a law in a universe that is beneficent," he can instill into his child only that conviction.

Felix Adler, who died not long since in New York, held a confirmed interest in the "sublime possibilities that dwell in the individual and in the bosom of mankind." He was convinced that in every human being there lies a "moral force." This force springs into being in accordance with the mental vagaries of the individual, entirely separated from external training. (It is, to be sure, a moot point as to whether religious inclinations are instinctive or the result of unrealized training; but the preponderant evidence seems to favor Mr. Adler's conclusions. Only after one reaches the age of reason can he wholly divest himself of nebulous leanings toward belief in Deity.) In some, the spontaneous generation of religious thoughts takes the form of belief in the great power suggested by many scientists; in others, the form of belief in an anthropomorphic Jehovah.

In order to provide means for giving proper training to this indefinable desire to learn more of religion, so Paul wrote the Ephesian Christians, God "gave some to be apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body of Christ: till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a fullgrown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: that we may be no longer children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, in craftiness, after the wiles of error; but speaking truth in love, may grow up in all things into him, which is the head, even Christ."—Moulton.

Out of the unrecorded lives of prehistoric men evolved the beliefs which frequently have been called by scientists unwilling to accept the biblical account of religious progress the beginning of all religion. Animism and animatism, those beliefs have been named, the former system including the thought of inanimate objects deliberately aiding or injuring men, the latter system enduing those objects with spirit-life. These simple philosophies remain today as the controlling influence over the thinking processes of the South Sea Islanders, and there is no apparent reason in profane history that they should not control all men today save only that gradual evolution in men's thoughts occurred. He who seeks with the modern Diogenes, now dressed in the guise of the anthropologist and archeologist, for the record of the steady march forward of religion remarks briefly that the more highly civilized a race of men, the fewer gods it worships, and fails to consider that the ancient Hebrews clung tenaciously to monotheism in the face of the polytheistic idolatry of their more scientifically advanced neighbors.

That the one true God may have been known from the beginning among some small circle of mankind the self-styled seeker after knowledge flatly denies. Our present Christianity, which is naught save an unwritten code of morals less stringent than the code laid down by Hammurabi four millenniums before, is the product, he insists, of progressive human thinking. The existence of a God he sets forth as a likelihood, but he presents that God with all the inspiring attributes of the law of gravitation. Positively he refuses to concede that that God for whom he searches possesses sufficient personality or intelligence to delegate some men as miracle-working prophets and apostles and to leave open definite tasks for every man to do if he feel so inclined.

(It cannot but be admitted that in his iconoclastic zeal Diogenes turned modern has accomplished much good. He has learned and taught the fact so long denied by our religious leaders that, in accord with strictly biblical teaching, man dies and is buried and so completely perishes as far as any conscious existence is concerned. By his work he has laid bare the fallacy that God directs the thoughts of every man: he has denied the being of Jehovah, he has blasphemed Him; he has contradicted His commands; and, therefore, he has established the fact of man's freedom, since no ruler, divine or human, would issue orders to men to oppose him. Finally, he has determined to a great degree the error of the theory of organic evolution and has discarded it save for a few tattered remnants.)

To their own satisfaction many of his ilk have determined through their tireless hunt for God that some great force controls the universe, but through their researches they can reach only general conclusions. For them God will never be a shepherd; for them He will hardly be a God. Their laboratory methods alone can establish the fact of the existence of a Governor, but without the revelations of the Bible nothing further can be accomplished. Herein the Christian possesses a distinct advantage both practically and psychologically; for to the new Diogenes God is impersonal and cold, while to the Christian God is a revered Friend, warmly personal and a mighty aid, all that David described Him in the twenty-third Psalm.

Julius Kostlin in the Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia defines religion as "the conscious relation between man and God, and the expression of that relation in human conduct." Obviously, if this definition be correct, the humanists, the modernists, the pantheists, the theosophists have no religion at all, but merely a poor code for behavior.

The task of the Christian is to emulate these men, not to copy them; to search as they search, but to go beyond them. He is bound to learn all that he can concerning God, and he must learn further to consider God as an individual. Once he has possessed himself of this knowledge, he is obligated not only to practice it, but to teach it. He must look for truth, and not for theory. He must found his relations with Jehovah upon a basis of concrete doctrine supported by factual evidence. The vague hypotheses of Diogenes are not enough, for by them he, too, may be blown about by every wind of doctrine. Search he must, but he must search correctly.

THE GUEST AT THE DANCE

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

---

SOME of the church people had been talking about one of the younger couples because they had been attending a public dance now and then. Some one told these young people what the brethren had said; so they decided not to go to the public dances any more, but invited a few friends in for a quiet little party and dance one evening. They said there surely could be no harm in that, because the only wrong about dancing was the crowd that followed it.

Most of the guests had arrived, and they were about to start the dance when one came in whom no one recognized. He had a pleasant face that seemed familiar to everyone. He spoke kindly, but did not seem to have the gay, jubilant spirit of the others.

Everyone felt self-conscious and uneasy. The evening slowly passed, and no one seemed to feel like starting the music and the dance.

Finally the host asked the unknown guest who he was and why he had come without an invitation.

This was the humble reply: "I am Jesus of Nazareth. Many times you have asked me in your prayers to be in your midst, so I came this evening to be with you."

The guest vanished; the party broke up, and the dance was never started . . .

Jesus knows our thoughts and sees our actions, although He is not visibly in our presence.

And still some one persistently says, "Dancing doesn't harm me." Well, maybe it does not harm you; but the Bible tells us that it is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything by which your brother stumbles, or is ensnared, or is weakened (Rom. 14:21, Diaglott). Though you may be strong, there are many, yes, many, who stumble, who are ensnared, who are weakened; yes, and some fall down to the lowest conditions of humanity because some one who was strong led the way.

Did you know that the originator of one type of dance gloried in the fact that many stumbled, were ensnared, weakened, and fell into the awful clutches of sin by it? Did you know that the dance started in the hotbeds of sin in Paris and spread even into the homes of our own nation? Now France has laws prohibiting it, but there are in our own country so-called Christians who encourage it.

Let us think about these things so that we may help others not to be ensnared, and may we allow the Lord to direct us in everything that we do. Happy are we if we follow Jesus.

The Four Judgments

By Brayton E. Crandall

“Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it.”

ALL things must work in perfect harmony before they can be relied upon. Giving the seemingly mysterious and symbolic characters of Revelation a careful study prepared me to detect what may mark the place we occupy in the period of time.

Although the views expressed by Mr. Crandall's article may be new or contrary to the interpretation held by many of the prophecies discussed, the theme is interesting and provocative of thought. As a matter for Bible study, it possesses great value.

bishop of Austria, in a statement at Vienna recently, appealed to all religions to cooperate in providing relief for starving Russians. He said that within the last few months two millions had died of starvation and child murder and cannibalism were

The present time is the opening of the third seal.

Before presenting the proof of my theory, I wish to look back to the opening of the first seal (Revelation 6:2), leading up to the time of the World War. The white horse of righteousness went forth conquering and to conquer. Many were made righteous, churches flourished, and universally people desired more to see and to help one another. Men in general were at peace with themselves and others.

Then came the opening of the second seal, when a red horse, signifying blood and the sword, came forth; and he that sat on him was given power to take peace from the earth. This caused discontent, murder, envy, strife, greed, and graft; man was so busy seeking material wealth, he had no time to think of God. This was typical of the World War and its consequences.

Then the Russian Government, realizing that man was living and prospering apparently without the help of God, abandoned the divine law and sought to worship its own ideas. This is the fulfillment of prophecy as noted in Jeremiah 1:14: “Out of the north an evil shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.” In the sixteenth verse the Lord promised He would utter His judgment against all those who had forsaken Him and worshiped the works of their own hands.

All of this was preparing for the opening of the third seal, when a black horse will come forth, signifying famine. The Lord will bring His “four sore judgments” (Ezekiel 14:21) upon His people, one judgment being the sword, one now presenting itself as the famine, and two yet to follow. We read from Ezekiel 6:6, “The black horses . . . go forth into the north country; and the white go forth after them.”

From a recent issue of The Drover's Daily Telegram I have clipped a concise but complete account of what I hope will prove that my theory is not misleading. The account, despatched from Moscow, Russia, by a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, says that the Russian Government has refused correspondents permission to visit the Ukraine and North Caucasus districts, where there is a severe food shortage. Cardinal Innitery, Arch-becoming common occurrences among the people.

It seems there can be no mistake in identifying the above situation as having a striking resemblance to the vision foreseen by John the Baptist and other prophets. It is evident that within the next few months proof will present itself verifying the correctness of such a theory, should the remnant of surviving Russians through the aid of the relieving religious organizations see fit to return to worshiping the true and living God, thus fulfilling another prophecy found in Zechariah 6:8, which says that “these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit.”

I recall another account which appeared some time ago; but, not realizing its value, I permitted its origin to slip my mind. It said that wheat was selling in Russia for an amount equal to nearly five dollars a bushel in American money. Should this prove to be an existing fact, it would mean the unraveling of another truth which played an important role in creating so great a famine. The truth is found in Revelation 6:6: “A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny.” The word choenix signifies the measure as being the twelfth part of a quart, thus bringing the price of wheat to nearly four dollars a bushel.

It seems needless to say that we are living in an age when great and mysterious things are presenting themselves everywhere about us. After analyzing the thoughts of many, we find the greatest number are standing outside patiently waiting for the wealthy to lift them to a higher plane of ease and contentment, not realizing that man's powers and abilities on earth are limited regardless of his ambitions and desires.

We ask, Will our own great America fall a victim of the great disaster which now claims Russia? Russia was given power by the angel to possess a fourth part of the earth, but the four sore judgments desired to walk to and fro through the earth; so the angel said to them, “Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth.” So we may well expect them, though we do not invite nor welcome them.

Holy Spirit Baptism

SUPPOSE it were admitted that all converts to Christianity in New Testament times received Holy Spirit baptism; this admission would not prove that people today receive Holy Spirit baptism, for the purpose for which Holy Spirit baptism was administered to the apostles and the house of Cornelius no longer exists. This purpose, as to the apostles, was to inspire them as witnesses of Christ in revealing the gospel to men as it was revealed to them direct from heaven. The world is now in possession of the complete gospel and has been for two thousand years; hence, it is no longer in need of Spirit-baptized men to reveal the gospel.

As to the house of Cornelius, the purpose in baptizing those Gentiles in the Holy Spirit was to convince the apostles and the Jewish brethren that God had granted repentance to the Gentile world (Acts 11:18; 15:8, 9). Everybody knows that now, as it was revealed two thousand years ago; hence, there is no need for the baptism of any more Gentiles in the Holy Spirit. As the New Testament gives us no other case of baptism in the Holy Spirit, and the purpose expressed in the two cases given no longer exists as possible of duplication, we are forced to deny the existence of a case of Holy Spirit baptism among men subsequent to the baptism of Cornelius, 44 A. D.

All those baptized in the Holy Spirit were by that baptism endowed with supernatural power, for they performed amazing miracles. (See Acts 2:12; 10:45. The word "amazed" is used in both places.) It is superfluous to deny that supernatural power is possessed by any people now on earth, for there is no reason to deny that which all intelligence knows does not exist. No man living can perform any miracle. No man living, therefore, can truthfully say he has been baptized in the Holy Spirit.

MAY WE EXPECT MIRACLE-WORKING POWER?

BUT why may we not expect miracles today, especially the miracle of speaking with tongues, such as we find exhibited both by the apostles and Cornelius when they were baptized in the Spirit; for of the apostles we read that they "began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:4), and of Cornelius and his house we read that Peter and those with him were amazed because "they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God" (Acts 10:46)? A sufficient reason why we are not to expect miracles, and especially tongues, today is this: "Love never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall be done away; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be (supernatural) knowledge, it shall be done away."—1 Cor. 13:8. They were to pass away when that "perfect" or complete revelation of God's will should come in the form of the New Testament Scriptures. (See verses 9, 10; see also Eph. 4:11-17.) Since the completion of said Scriptures, therefore, no tongues have existed among God's people; and as "tongues" accompanied all cases of Holy Spirit baptism revealed in the New Testament (the two only cases given), we cannot expect any case of Holy Spirit baptism today, for there has been none since the completion of the New Testament Scriptures, at which time said tongues should cease.

We are fully aware that many sincere people lay claim to having received Holy Spirit baptism; but all such claims are merely an honest deception, for of those professing such baptism we note there are a multitude of hostile sects, each anathematizing most all the others; and we know that the "one Spirit" in whom the apostles and Cornelius were baptized is not the author of these hostile sects. Mormons and Free Methodists serve as an example of this hostility among the many like sects laying claim to Spirit baptism. The Mormons do not recognize Free Methodists as children of God possessing the Spirit of God in any form; and Free Methodists, in turn, deny that Mormons have the Spirit of God in any form. Yet both lay equally bold claim to having received Holy Spirit baptism! Both claim to be able to prove their assertion by speaking in tongues and by other miracles, and we confess that one comes every whit as near proving it as does the other! The fact is neither the Mormons nor the Free Methodists have any more power to "speak with tongues" or do any other supernatural thing than we have, and we have none!

The false claims of such fanatical sects have very largely brought about the present disrespect for the Bible and its religion. The open claim to supernatural power among fanatical sects, the claim that true Christianity is to be known by the supernatural energy of the Holy Spirit manifested in healings, tongues, and rantings and ravings of religious devotees, is overthrowing faith in the Christian religion faster than the combined influence of skeptics; for if Christianity is genuine only when accompanied by supernatural demonstrations, then there is no genuine Christianity on earth, because no supernatural power is exhibited among those who profess the necessity and presence of it. Thus the average thinker is being turned away from God by the fanatical claims to Holy Spirit baptism.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IS INDISPENSABLE

Now it is a fact that "if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:9), but men can have the Spirit of Christ without having the baptism of the Spirit. In 1 Corinthians 12:4-12 various gifts of the Spirit are enumerated, but none of these is the baptism of the Spirit. Christ alone, without any human instrumentality, bestowed the baptism of the Spirit upon the apostles and upon Cornelius, but the next highest manifestation or gift of the Spirit was bestowed through the apostles by the laying on of hands. When miracle-working power was needed by other than the apostles, it was bestowed, not by a baptism of the Spirit, but by the laying on of the apostles' hands. None save the apostles could impart the Spirit through the laying on of hands.

Ananias (Acts 9:17) was specially qualified and commissioned (verses 10-16) to officiate for Paul, who, as an apostle, received the baptism of the Spirit; but because Paul was blind and needed the additional service of a miracle-working disciple to restore his sight before his reception of the Spirit baptism, this service was performed by Ananias. Verse 17 shows that the restoration of Paul's sight preceded his reception of the Spirit; hence, the peculiar need of Ananias on this occasion, not to impart the Spirit, but to restore Paul's sight that he might receive the Spirit immediately afterwards. Christ alone gave to Paul the Holy Spirit. (1 Cor. 2:10, 12; Gal. 2:7, 8.)

When the seven were chosen at Jerusalem, we read: "Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands upon them."—Acts 6:6. This imparted the Spirit to the seven, but the recipients of the Spirit thus imparted could not impart the Spirit to others; for Philip, one of the seven, went down to Samaria, preached the gospel, performed miracles, and converted many men and women, but he could not impart the Spirit; hence, "when the apostles that were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Spirit: for as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they had been baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit."—Acts 8:14-18. On this occasion "Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Spirit was given."—Verse 18. That was the rule. Paul, an apostle, laid his hands on the Ephesian disciples, after they had been properly baptized, and they received the Spirit (Acts 19:1-7). The Spirit thus imparted through the apostles (none others could impart the Spirit) always conveyed miracle-working power. But those receiving this power through the apostles could not impart it to others. It is clear, therefore, that when the last apostle was dead, there was no longer any who could impart miracle-working power; and when those were dead to whom the apostles had imparted this power, there were none who possessed such power, for it could not be transferred through these to others; hence, miracle-working power—all spiritual gifts—ceased with the death of the first generation of Christians.

The fact that we do not today receive the baptism of the Spirit or any of the supernatural gifts that were bestowed in apostolic times does not mean that the Spirit is not received today at all, for it is and must be received by all the children of God. Peter said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2:38. He then shows that this law and its promise were for all people who come unto God through the gospel (verse 39). All baptized penitent believers were to receive the Holy Spirit in the same measure upon emerging from baptism, but where extraordinary spiritual endowments were to be received, as in the case of many in the apostolic church, these endowments were, excepting the first Gentile conversion, bestowed through a subsequent and special provision. Witness the case of the seven at Jerusalem (Acts 6:6), the case of the Samaritans (Acts 8:15-17), the case of the Ephesians (Acts 19:5, 6), and others. These were all extraordinary endowments, and were no part of conversion. There was no more need then of supernatural endowment in conversion than there is now.

Conversion and its consummation of sonship in Christ was one thing, and supernatural spiritual endowment was another and very distinct thing. No man could be baptized into Christ as a son of God without receiving at that moment the Holy Spirit; for "if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."—Rom. 8:9. It is, therefore, impossible to be a Christian without having the Spirit in its ordinary working. But does a man have to be able to perform miracles in order to be a Christian? Of course not. Then the reception of the Spirit is prior to and independent of any miraculous or extraordinary spiritual endowment; and this fact provides for a perpetuation of the Spirit's reception among Christians, notwithstanding the absolute cessation of supernatural spiritual gifts.

"And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, Abba, Father."—Gal. 4:6. Here the bare fact of sonship is declared to be the basis of granting the Spirit.

CHRISTIANITY HAS NO NEED OF SPIRIT BAPTISM

WE HAVE proved that Christianity today has no need of any supernatural gift of the Spirit to be fully up to the original perfect standard. The Spirit is present and adequate in every case of conversion. Therefore, those who think Christianity is a failure, or at least short of perfection, because those who profess to have a supernatural manifestation of the Spirit, upon which it is alleged to rest, are known to be false pretenders, need have no fear; for, in the first place, supernatural power never was a part of Christianity. It was only employed to confirm the Word preached, the Word itself being God's power to save believers. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth: . . . having been begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the word of God, which liveth and abideth."—1 Peter 1:22, 23. "I begat you through the gospel" (1 Cor. 4:15), the gospel "by which also ye are saved" (1 Cor. 15:1, 2). "For I am not ashamed of the gospel . . . : for it is the power of God unto salvation."—Rom. 1:16. Miracles, therefore, were only to confirm the word or gospel, that those who heard it might know it was God's Word. (See Mark 16:20; Heb. 2:3, 4.)

In the second place, the word of God, having been confirmed two thousand years ago, has no more need of confirmation; hence, no more miracles are needed among Christians. In the third place, all those professing to have the Holy Spirit in its original or apostolic power are known to be able to give no demonstration of their claim, but are as powerless as the unbelieving world. True Christianity,

The absolute necessity of the resurrection of Christ in order to obtain any future life or salvation is placed beyond all question in Paul's masterly argument in 1 Corinthians 15:12-18: "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

Thus baptism saves us by the resurrection of Christ, so much so that no baptism signifies no part or lot in Christ's glorious resurrection. We must be born of water and of the Spirit, or we cannot see the kingdom of God; or if we be among the righteous living, we must be born of the water and pass through the same change from corruption to incorruption and from mortality to immortality, for "we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed."—1 Cor. 15:51. This change is not the new birth, but it is so indissolubly allied with the resurrection of the righteous dead that it is called a birth from the dead.

Again, the Apostle said, "If the dead rise not at all, why are they then baptized for the (resurrection of the) dead?"—1 Cor. 15:29. None will be raised when Christ comes except those who are "asleep in Christ" or who are "Christ's at his coming." (See 1 Corinthians 15:18, 23.) They are all raised incorruptible, glorious, honorable, spiritual; and they shout victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. None who live in the present dispensation will have part in this glorious and triumphant resurrection unless they have been baptized for it.

Baptism is the door into the church of God, which is the body of Christ. Paul said, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." In reference to the same body he said, "Now we are the body of Christ and members in particular." Christ calls those thieves and robbers who have entered in any other way. But we are told that baptism is the only answer of a good conscience: "Not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God."—1 Peter 3:21. No one believes that the object of baptism is to cleanse from physical pollution. It is, nevertheless, just as necessary to being cleansed from our past sins as though it did physically cleanse us. The text does not say a good conscience toward man, our creed, church, or favorite preacher, or even toward ourselves, but a good conscience toward God. This language can mean nothing less than a conscience illuminated by God's Word and conformed to His revealed will.

Hear the testimony of the Son of God as to whom His Father can approve: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 7:21.

GENERAL CONFERENCE

THE following interesting analysis of the recent General Conference is taken from the Church of God Messenger, published monthly by Pastor C. E. Randall in the interests of the churches at Niagara Falls and Fonthill.

ANOTHER General Conference of the Church of God is past. It was really "general," for delegates came from nearly every section of the field covered by the church. An excellent spirit prevailed. No one can question or doubt the permanent good that will result to the Church of God as a whole if the delegates will carry home an "honest-to-goodness" report of the gathering and impart to the folk at home some of the spirit that they must have received during the meetings.

Perhaps the ministerial meetings will have more far-reaching effects on the life of the church than any other part of the conference. These meetings were held every morning between eight and nine-thirty. The subjects that were discussed varied a great deal in topic material, but all were of vital nature and problems that face the minister in his labor and service. In these meetings questions and issues were discussed by the ministers in plain and more or less intimate ways, which, to say the least, if treated in like manner before the general body would have been confusing and possibly detrimental. Of course, this family of ministers differed on some points of issue as we do in our regular family circles; this should be expected and is quite essential to a balanced growth. One thing that was outstanding from beginning to the end was the spirit of brotherly love and affection that existed. If I properly grasped and sensed the whole effort and the spirit that pervaded the sessions, the ministers of the Church of God are knit more closely together today than they were before the conference convened. And as the leaders go, so go the people.

The central theme of Bible classes and sermons was the imminence of our Lord's return. We as a people are remarkably a unit in our views concerning the perilous times into which the world is about to pass. We expect in accordance with our interpretation of prophecy to see a continuance of the downward trend in social, moral, and religious life of the world and a progressive development of conditions that will bring the man of sin into his leadership and world activity when a man cannot buy nor sell unless he has the Antichrist's number or mark upon his goods. With the rise to power of the man of sin will come the judgments of God when men will call for the rocks and mountains to hide them. Of this impending judgment the General Conference of the Church of God is sounding a warning with no uncertain sound. It believes that God will deliver by translation His church out of this terrible furnace of tribulation and is endeavoring to admonish and encourage the people to be faithful that they may be able to escape all these things.

The Church of God as represented in the General Conference is standing steadfast for those things which are vital and essential for today. The Church of God through much study and meditation of the Scriptures has a vision of the joys and sorrows of the morrow and with knowledge of these is laboring today in preparing the people for the deliverance that will come to the children of God in the very near future. The General Conference is doing much to steady the members of the Church of God in the midst of unprecedented restlessness and uncertainty.

I have confidence in the rank and file of the ministers of the Church of God that their moorings are securely fastened to the Word of God; and as long as they stand firmly upon this Word, their leadership as expressed through the General Conference will lead you into the deliverance that is in Christ Jesus. I can heartily commend the General Conference to the Messenger readers and do recommend that its spiritual labors of bringing the Church of God through the apostasy of the last days to the coming of the Son of God be supported with your temporal substance, for soon it must be left behind. The Conference is a blessing to you.

GIVING NO OFFENCE

WE FIND these words in 2 Corinthians 6:3: “Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed.” These are significant words; and if they were heeded, there would be far less trouble among both ministers and people. If the Apostle himself had need to avoid giving offence, surely all others have need of doing so. These words of his were addressed to the ministry and church, as the context shows: “We then (apostles), as workers together with him (Christ—see closing of preceding chapter), beseech you also (members of the church) that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.” The fourth verse makes it plain that the apostles are included among those who should avoid giving offence. In 1 Corinthians 10:32 he writes to the church: “Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God.” Twice he thus writes to the church at Corinth. Probably there was an occasion for his doing this, as this church went wrong in many things and doubtless did in this.

Much, if not really all, the trouble that exists in churches today comes through offences given by members and sometimes by ministers, offences which could have been avoided. . . . Offences given, even if small, will destroy the fellowship and harmony which always characterize the true church of Christ. Love, the bond of union, is lost; and there is the fearful absence of the saving power of God. Was it ever known that when offences were continually given and maintained by ministers and members of a church the blessing of God was bestowed and the true spiritual life existed? There might be a show of godliness on the part of even those who gave the offence, and at the same time a spiritual dearth exist. We say again that God cannot work to the saving of sinners or professing Christians where offences abound.

Turning again to the Word, we find this subject often introduced. Jesus said: “It is impossible but that offences will come, but woe unto him, through whom they come! It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones,” literally, “than that he should cause one of these little ones to stumble.” Offences cause stumbling. An offence is, therefore, a sin. The offender sins; and they who are offended are caused to sin, also, by being left to return the offender’s act. It is often that an offence given causes another offence than that the offence is taken patiently and borne in the spirit of Christ.

Ministers should be as careful not to give offence as laymen. Ministers have often set the members of the church the bad example of speaking against those they did not fellowship, both publicly and privately; and many a church has been more harmed in this way than good was done by the preaching. And, on the other hand, many a good faithful minister of Christ has been led by the course the members of the church have pursued in speaking against each other and those outside to favor their course, and by doing so, has lost his high standing before the public. Let there be a church and minister where no offence is given to any inside or outside of it, and there is truly the church of Christ, the power of God and salvation. The world will be attracted to such a church, for its members will be known and read of all men as the followers of Christ, and there will be confidence in them on the part of even the wicked around them. Love prevents the giving of offence, and without this none are the children of God and the subjects of salvation.

But some may ask, Is it possible to live and not give offence? We repeat the Apostle’s command: “Give no offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God.” Could he have commanded or exhorted the church to do what it could not do? It may also be said that to preach the gospel faithfully will give offence to some. He says to this: the gospel itself, preached with the spirit of Christ, will give no offence. It is preaching in another spirit that gives offence. If with a kind, loving spirit it be preached, there is no offence given. There is much preached that is not the gospel of Christ; and the manner in which it is preached gives offence. One who goes out to preach and unkindly antagonizes all that do not see as he sees and do as he does gives offence and prejudices against him those he attacks, so that with them his influence is lost. What is not preached in love and with the spirit of Christ, though it be the Word of God, does little or no good, not reaching the hearts of those who hear. A church that desires such preaching, or that which gives offence, needs the Holy Spirit more than it needs a preacher. Therefore, my brethren and all, give no offence that the ministry and church be not blamed.—I. I. Leslie in The Messiah’s Advocate.

CHRIST'S ANSWER ON CALVARY

OUR Savior, suspended in derision from Calvary's cruel cross, was about to perform the supreme sacrifice. He was humiliated and alone—yet, in a sense, not alone; for were there not two thieves crucified with Him, one on either hand? Foolishly, one of the malefactors sided with the mob in its malignant railing and jeering. But the other, apparently brought to the realization of the truth concerning the situation, rebuked him. He went further. He made the request of Christ, “Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.” And it is the answer of our Lord upon which our attention is focused: “And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise.”

Because of its peculiar diction this twenty-third chapter of Luke and the forty-third verse is often misconstrued, and therefore is misleading. The point of difficulty lies undeniably in the word “to day,” which would seemingly have reference to the day of crucifixion. Through extensive study, however, it has been found that the Greek root of this word appears forty times in the New Testament and, singularly enough, in over half of these it is rendered “this day,” at the discretion of the translators. Therefore, it is altogether permissible to substitute “this day” for “to day” in our text. Thus it will read, “Verily I say unto thee, This day shalt thou be with me in paradise,” “this day” referring to the time designated in the thief's petition, the day in which our Lord or the exalted King of kings takes over the kingdom of His father David at the hand of God.

In accordance with this exposition, the words “kingdom” employed by the thief and “paradise” in Christ's answer are of necessity synonymous; and as Christ has not yet established His kingdom, the time indicated is still future. This is in perfect harmony with Bible teaching as we understand it.

HOLBROOK BEREANS

THE Berean class of the Church of God of Holbrook, Nebraska, held its annual business meeting August 24. The following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Clyde Long; vice president, Mrs. Inez Gordon; secretary-treasurer, Miss Beulah Wilson. The new board is making plans for the coming year, and with the cooperation of each member we hope to increase the interest and attendance of the class.

We feel that our Berean class is the school in which we prepare ourselves to carry on the work of our church in the future. With this idea in view each member will be given opportunities to lead in prayer and conduct classes.

Any month in which our attendance and interest merits a social we plan to have a party at the home of one of the members.

Beulah Wilson, Secretary.

To BE honest, to be kind, to earn a little, and to spend a little less. To make upon the whole a family happier for his presence. To renounce when that shall be necessary and not be embittered. To keep a few friends, but these without capitulation. Above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself. Here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

SOUND THE LOUD TIMBREL

MIRIAM'S SONG

Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea!
Jehovah has triumph'd—His people are free.
Sing—for the pride of the tyrant is broken,

His chariots, his horsemen, all splendid and brave—
How vain was their boasting, the Lord hath but spoken,
And chariots and horsemen are sunk in the wave.
Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea;
Jehovah has triumph'd—His people are free.

Praise to the Conqueror, praise to the Lord!
His word was our arrow, His breath was our sword—
Who shall return to tell Egypt the story
Of those she sent forth in her hour of pride?
For the Lord hath look'd out from His pillar of glory,
And all her brave thousands are dashed in the tide.
Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea;
Jehovah has triumph'd—His people are free!

GOD CALLS LEADERS

WHENEVER God's people were in any kind of danger, in trouble of any sort, or in need of help, He always found a man or a woman to lead them. If the nation was in danger, He called a great military leader; if there was need of some one to restore their worship, He raised up a religious leader; if the home or society needed assistance, He found a man or woman to aid them.

Always God knew when His people needed help, and always He found the very person to do the task. But He didn't allow just anyone to do His work. There was one thing He wanted all His workers to possess. Do you know, boys and girls, what that was? Perhaps if we review the lives of these twelve leaders we shall find out.

Let us make a list of those whom we have studied. On your blackboard or on a sheet of paper, write, "God Calls Leaders." Below make three headings thus: For the Nation; For Worship; For the Home or Society.

Under the first heading make a list of those whom God called when the nation needed help. First we have Joshua; next, Caleb; then that brave young woman, Deborah; then Gideon, the fearless young fighter; Isaiah, too; and last, Saul.

Under the second heading, "For Worship," write Samuel's name; then David's; and last Solomon's.

Under the third heading will come the name of that beautiful girl, Ruth, who chose Naomi's God; next Hannah, the self-sacrificing mother; and finally Jonathan, the dear friend of David.

Now after each person's name write a word or two that will describe that one's work or special office or chief characteristic. As you look at the name something special about the person should flash into your mind. Some of them you will think of at once; others you will have to ponder on for awhile.

For instance, under "Worship," we have Solomon. Why yes, he built the temple, didn't he? Under "Home," we have Ruth, who left her own home to help make a home for Naomi. Under "Nation," Isaiah, who brought the nation to realize their sins, especially drunkenness. Isn't it interesting trying to recall why God called each one and what he did?

Now what was it all possessed that pleased God and caused Him to select them for great responsibility? We may have to take out one name, for he really was a failure—

Saul. But the others all had a strange and abiding faith in God; that was it.

You can see that God would hardly give an important piece of work to a certain person to do for Him unless that one believed in Him and knew that He would keep His promises, can't you? Why, we can't do our best work for anyone today unless we believe in that person, can we?

Faith in God helps in so many ways. You can go right on doing what will please God no matter what others say, if you have faith in Him. And no matter what happens you know that God is true and will do what He says. He gives a person of that kind more strength to do His work, more wisdom, and even more faith.

Do you think God needs workers today? Would you like to be a worker for Him? Do you see anything around you that needs to be done to help people to be happier, more as God would have them be?

It isn't always a big thing that needs to be done, something that everyone will notice. More often it is a little thing, one that very few people see, one that you may not get any praise for doing. But you know Jesus said that giving even a tiny thing like a cup of cold water is always noticed by God. And He is the One for whom we are working after all, isn't He?

Let us bow our heads and talk to our Father in heaven: We thank Thee, our heavenly Father, for the lessons we have learned from these twelve men and women who worked for Thee so long ago. May we learn the value of their faith, that it was only through it that they could do such wonderful things. And may we find the task Thou wouldst have us do for Thee, and do it faithfully and humbly and honestly. In Jesus' name. Amen.

"Hear ye the Master's call,
Give Me thy best;
For, be it great or small,
That is His test.
Do then the best you can,
Not for reward,
Not for the praise of men,
But for the Lord.

"Every work for Jesus will be blest,
But He asks from everyone his best.
Our talents may be few,
These may be small;
But unto Him is due,
Our best, our all."

LESSON 13. — September 24, 1933

REVIEW: SOME EARLY LEADERS OF ISRAEL

Devotional Reading: Hebrews 11:32 to 12:2

GOLDEN TEXT

Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6:10.

Lesson I. Joshua 1:1-9; 23:1, 2, 14.

Topic: Joshua.

Summary: Immediately after the death of Moses Joshua assumed the leadership and the government of Israel. God promised to be with him as long as he lived on condition that Joshua would continue obedient to Him and to the law of Moses. Near the conclusion of his life Joshua called the elders of Israel before him and assured them that God had kept all the good promises He had made to them, and called upon the people to remain faithful and obedient.

Lesson II. Numbers 13; Joshua 14.

Topic: Caleb's Confidence in God.

Summary: When the larger part of Canaan had been subdued, Caleb came with certain other leaders of the tribe of Judah and asked Joshua to grant them permission to attempt the conquest of Hebron, which Moses had promised to Caleb for his faithfulness in spying out the land some forty-five years earlier. The request was granted, and Caleb, now a man past eighty-five years of age, but still as vigorous as at any time in the past, succeeded in overthrowing the stronghold of the Anakims and took over his promised inheritance.

Lesson III. Judges 4 and 5.

Topic: Leadership in Emergencies.

Summary: Israel had again sinned against God and had been brought under the punishing hand of Jabin, king of Canaan. In their distress they cried unto the Lord, and He sent Deborah and Barak to deliver them. Barak feared to make the attempt unless Deborah went with him. This she consented to do. The enemy was completely defeated, and the Canaanites never again rebelled against Israel. Deborah and Barak joined in a splendid song of rejoicing over the victory, in which they gave all the glory for the achievement to God.

Lesson IV. Isaiah 5:1-30.

Topic: Evils Which Must Be Overcome.

Summary: Under the pronouncement of six "woes" Isaiah denounces the sins of avarice, drunkenness, submission to temptation, deceit, egoism and complacency, and bribery. He points out the results that follow such forms of moral slavery and warns against them. All of these sins are encouraged by drunkenness and by those who engage in the business of selling liquor, which leads inevitably to moral, physical, and spiritual degradation.

Lesson V. Judges, chapters 6 to 8.

Topic: Gideon: Winning With a Few.

Summary: The Midianites made frequent forays into Israel, and Gideon was commanded by God to assemble an army and repel them. Thirty-two thousand responded to his call, of which 22,000 were rejected because they were afraid. All but 300 were finally sent away. Armed with lamps concealed in pitchers and with trumpets, Gideon and his company descended on the enemy's camp in the night. By their breaking the pitchers and blowing the trumpets the Midianites were dismayed, especially when Gideon and his band shouted their battle cry, "The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon!" The rout of the enemy was complete.

Lesson VI. The book of Ruth.

Topic: The Message of the Book of Ruth.

Summary: Naomi, mother-in-law of Ruth and Orpah, having been bereft of both husband and sons, plans on returning to Bethlehem. She advises her daughters-in-law, between whom and herself the greatest affection exists, to remain in Moab and marry men of their own race. After much show of affection Orpah turns back to the home of her people, but Ruth declares her place shall be forever with Naomi. Accompanying the latter to Judah, Ruth becomes the wife of Boaz, a Jew, and the great-grandmother of David, of whose line Christ was born.

Lesson VII. 1 Samuel, chapters 1 and 2.

Topic: Hannah: A Devout Mother.

Summary: Hannah, the wife of Elkanah, was exceedingly distressed because she had no children. She was constantly taunted by her husband's more fortunate wife, Peninnah, with her failure to bear a son. Each year when the family went to Shiloh to make sacrifice to God Hannah prayed for a son, pledging that she would dedicate him for life to the Lord's service should her prayer be granted. Eli observed her moving her lips silently in prayer and supposed her to be drunken. She explained the real situation, and he promised that God would give her a son. Samuel was born in answer to her prayer, and she expressed her appreciation by giving him to the Lord and in singing a beautiful song of praise to God.

Lesson VIII. 1 Samuel, chapters 3, 7, 12.

Topic: Samuel Responds to God's Call.

Summary: Samuel at about twelve years of age assisted Eli in the Lord's service. One night he heard a voice calling him and supposed it was Eli, to whom he responded. Eli told him he had not called. The third time the voice reached him Eli concluded it was God who was calling and instructed Samuel to answer, "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth." Samuel became judge and prophet of Israel and was the one appointed to anoint both Saul and David as kings over the nation. He was the last of the order of judges.

Lesson IX. 1 Samuel, chapters 9-11, 15.

Topic: Saul: His Strength and Weakness.

Summary: The people demanded a king; and Saul, the son of Kish, a Benjaminite, was anointed by Samuel to the office. He was a man of striking appearance and kingly bearing, but of weak and erratic temperament. Saul led the people successfully against the Philistines on various occasions, the war continuing throughout the forty years of his reign. The king failed to obey Samuel in sparing Agag and was denounced by the prophet. Saul's weakness was shown in his frequent submission to the will of the people, even when it was opposed to a direct requirement of God through Samuel. It was for this weakness that he was rejected.

Lesson X. 1 Samuel 16:1-13; Psalm 78:70-72.

Topic: David: The Secret of True Greatness.

Summary: Saul having been rejected for disobedience, Samuel is sent to Bethlehem, where he is divinely guided in the selection of David, youngest son of Jesse, to be anointed king over Israel. The kingly qualifications as announced by God had nothing to do with outward appearance, but with the heart. The Psalmist bears eloquent testimony to the integrity of David's heart and to the success of his kingly leadership, as well as to the humbleness of his origin.

Lesson XI. 1 Samuel, chapters 18-20.

Topic: Jonathan: or True Friendship.

Summary: Jonathan, son of Saul, king of Israel, when David was established in the royal favor, became deeply attached to him and showed him every kindness. The two young men finally made a solemn agreement that when David should come to the throne, an event which both knew was to take place eventually, he would not destroy Jonathan and his children after the cruel custom of those days. When a king of a new line came into authority, he generally caused the entire family of his predecessor to be killed. The covenant of David and Jonathan, based on true friendship, was fully kept.

Lesson XII. 1 Kings, chapters 5-8.

Topic: Solomon: or the Value of a House of Worship.

Summary: Solomon, having been made king in place of David his father, planned for the building of the temple which David had desired, but was not permitted, to erect. He put into immediate effect elaborate preparations for the providing of materials of all kinds and for the securing of experienced workmen, and put the vast machinery into operation. The splendid structure was at last completed; and the king called the elders of Israel and the rulers of the people together, and in the most solemn and impressive manner dedicated the magnificent temple to the service of God.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

GOLDEN RULE HOME DAY

Sunday, October 1, 1933, has been set apart as "Golden Rule Home Day" among the churches throughout the country. A special issue of The Restitution Herald will be dedicated to our splendid Home for older ones immediately before that Sunday, giving essential information concerning the Home, its history, and its opportunities.

The pastors of the various churches are asked to cooperate in making this a real "Golden Rule Home Day" so far as possible. Plan to have the older ones present in church on that day, and perhaps devote a portion at least of the sermon period to presenting the obligation of the church in general to care for its older ones.

Sing the old songs that our grandmothers and grandfathers knew; preach a sermon on the kingdom or an old-fashioned sermon on the coming of Christ that will recall the sermons of an early day.

To the younger ones call attention to the requirements of the Bible concerning the care and protection of parents by their children. Such passages as Ephesians 6:1-3; 1 Timothy 5:1-11; etc., may be used effectively.

If it is thought best an offering might be taken to provide something special for the Home family, and an effort might be made to interest older ones to seek to make this beautiful and comfortable Home their abode. We will be glad to furnish descriptive literature at any time, and such additional information as may be desired.

Pray for Golden Rule Home and its Family!

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Inspiration galore has been our experience this summer as we went from conference to conference in the Middle West. When we concluded our tour of conferences by speaking each evening during the conference at Holbrook, Nebraska, and started homeward across the stretches of the western arid region, we carried with us an experience never to be forgotten. But now is the time to consider work for the coming year.

All those of California will please note and set aside the first Sunday in October (October 1) for the fall meeting of the Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God of California. We are planning for an enthusiastic gathering of those of like precious faith throughout California. Now is the time for us to work for the Master as we have never worked before. Let us make this a gathering worth while!

On our return from the East we stopped for a nice visit with Bro. and Sr. Howard Moore and family in Northern California. Then we came south, and stopped at Wheatland, California, to baptize Sr. Verda Renner. We introduce and commend her to the church as a young woman who has been brought up in the faith by the careful instruction of her father, Bro. Geo. Renner. Though these people have been isolated for a long time they have kept the faith. We then visited the Thompson family in Tulare, and found them in good health and spirits, and then the next day completed our journey of over seven thousand miles to Los Angeles and Pomona without mishap (for which we are truly grateful to the heavenly Father).

Norman John MacLeod.

PLUM RIVER, ILLINOIS

There were 24 at Sunday school and 29 at church Sunday morning, September 3. One family came about thirteen miles, and another couple came about twenty miles for the services. The Sunday school attendance for the two preceding Sundays was 21 and 22.

Beginning Sunday, September 10, and continuing for a two months' trial, Sunday school will open at 9:30, followed by the morning worship at 10:30.

We earnestly ask your prayers for the work at Plum River. May none of us forsake the assembling of ourselves together as do some; but let us encourage one another, and so much the more as we see the day of the Lord approaching. Harvey Krogh, Jr., Pastor.

BEAR, ARKANSAS

Bro. L. H. Shelton of Driggs, Ark., closed a series of meetings on July 25 which had lasted for eleven days, services being held each night and twice on Sundays. They made some of us feel our need, as did those of old: "Lord, teach us to pray," as John also taught his disciples." The meetings concluded with a promise from Bro. Shelton to hold another meeting at Bear beginning Friday night, September 1. Please pray for us here at Bear. R. A. Humphreys.

WESTERN NEBRASKA

The Nebraska Conference of the Church of God, which opened at Holbrook on Saturday evening, August 19, and closed on Sunday evening, August 27, was one of the most inspirational meetings that Nebraska has experienced. The ministers who conducted the services were Norman John MacLeod of Los Angeles, California; Mrs. Emma C. Railsback of Los Angeles; E. E. Giesler of Moorefield, Nebraska; Earl Cowles of Moorefield; and Grover Gordon of Holbrook. The congregation also had the privilege of hearing a sermon from Wilsie McKnight of Moorefield. Bro. McKnight completed his high school work last year and is planning to study for the ministry. Judging from his ability and from his interest in God's Word shown at conference, Nebraska is expecting to hear more from Bro. McKnight in the future.

The program for the week consisted of Bible lessons each morning and a sermon each afternoon and evening. Sr. Railsback taught the adult class, Bro. MacLeod the young people, and Beulah Wilson and Roscoe Story had charge of the junior class. The attendance throughout the week was good. Bro. MacLeod spoke to a full church each evening.

The business meeting was held on Wednesday, at which time the officers for the coming year were elected. They are: president, Roscoe Story; vice president, Arthur Hornaday; secretary, Carol Wilson; corresponding secretary, Ola Hornaday; and treasurer, Grover Gordon.

Although none were baptized into Christ at the close of the meeting, those present felt that there would be much good come from the efforts put forth by those in charge. All went from the conference with new zeal for work in their respective churches and a greater desire to learn more of the truth presented at the conference.

Representatives from a distance were present from Bartley, Moorefield, and Omaha.

Carol Wilson, Secretary.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 5, 1933, two men in the prime of life presented themselves for baptism at the hands of the pastor of the Oregon church. They were Merritt E. Knodle and William L. Canode, both of this city. The former is a son of Sr. Martha Knodle (resting now in Jesus), who, together with her son Fred, daughter Mina, and Bro. S. J. Lindsay, formed the charter membership of the Oregon church. Mr. Canode has also been associated with this church community for more than a quarter of a century and has been a faithful attendant at its services. His wife and children were baptized years ago.

Thursday afternoon, Sept. 7, Miss Bernice R. Renner and Mr. Merle L. Renner, son and daughter of Bro. George Renner of Wheatland, Calif., drove from Lanark, Ill., where they were visiting relatives, to Oregon, and having made a good confession of faith in the gospel of the kingdom of God, were immersed by the pastor into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. These are splendid Christian young people whom it gives us much pleasure to recommend to the brethren of the California Conference and to the world at large as members of the body of Christ. They come of a long line of believers, the family having been instrumental in establishing the work in Lanark and at Plum River, Ill. May God's blessing attend them until the Master comes.

Mrs. Mabel Andrew, Sec.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

On Wednesday night, Sept. 6, the young men, ages 16 to 25, met at the church to organize for a definite program of activity. We are hoping that a splendid group of young men may be developed this fall and that the work may prove of definite value to them and to the cause of truth.

The pastor's family are happy to have the privilege of entertaining Sr. Jeanne Lyon of Citronelle, Alabama, youngest sister of Mrs. Siple, who is here for a brief visit.

Our local church is rejoicing with her sister church, Blanchard, over the prospect of regular pastoral work. Bro. Cecil Smead begins work there next Sunday, Sept. 17, and we hope and pray it may develop into a permanent pastoral activity. There are some splendid workers at Blanchard, and we trust that God may use them and Bro. Smead to build up an active church.

Increased attendance and enthusiasm at our mid-week meetings are very encouraging. F. E. Siple, Pastor.

KOKOMO, INDIANA

We have just closed a very successful series of meetings with Bro. C. A. Smead as the chief speaker. While there were no new members added to the flock, we feel sure that seed has been planted that will bear fruit in the future. Bro. O. J. Parker opened the series on Sunday, August 27, and Bro. Smead arrived on Monday. Both interest and attendance were good.

Sunday, September 3, we held our Rally Day and home-coming, an all-day meeting with basket dinner at the church. There were 73 present for the full day's services. Bro. Smead spoke morning and evening and also gave us a model Berean class at 6 p.m. I spoke in the afternoon. Much interest was shown in the question box, Bro. Smead receiving from one to three questions each evening.

It is our hope to hold such a series again soon.

It is indeed a joy to work with Bro. Smead. May the Lord's blessing be upon his labor wherever he may be called is the prayer of the Kokomo church. There are many who have spoken of the regret that was felt when Bro. Smead, his mother, and sister left Kokomo for Culver, Ind., last Monday evening.

Bro. and Sr. Hatten of Culver spent Sunday with us, driving over for the morning and afternoon services. We hope they return again soon. D. G. Harvey.

INTERESTING SERMONS AT OREGON

On last Sunday night Bro. Marsh concluded a short series of very interesting and instructive sermons. In the first one he pictured to us God, the Almighty Creator, our heavenly Father, as a very real Person having bodily parts such as we ourselves possess. He described Him as One whose power and wisdom are boundless and infinite, and yet One whose eyes are watchful of every need of His creatures and whose ears are attentive to their prayers.

The second of the series portrayed Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who was sent into the world that men might come to know more fully their Creator and Sustainer. In this sermon Bro. Marsh presented the only begotten Son of God as our Savior, our Elder Brother, our very near Friend, One who was tempted as we are tempted, yet without sin. He described Him as One who understands us fully, is daily interceding in our behalf before His Father, freely forgiving every penitent heart.

The Spirit of Power was the concluding theme of our pastor, wherein he explained the true meaning of the words, Holy Spirit, in such beautiful and yet simple language that all could comprehend. The Holy Spirit is not a mysterious undefinable personality, he said, but is likened in God's Word to the air we breathe without which no life could be sustained. It is accompanied often by God's spoken word, as in Genesis 1; it is also comparable to the mind, as in Phil. 2:5; it is that power emanating from the Father which sustained His Son and the early disciples, and will sustain His faithful followers today in their work of proclaiming God's message of glad tidings to sinful men.

We may not fully understand God today, but we can approach a comprehension of Him in the life and example of His Son, in the knowledge that His Spirit is with us in our efforts to love and serve Him, opening our minds to His truth until that blessed time when our Savior shall return to earth to complete His works and God shall be all in all. —M. G.

COMMUNICATION

With great appreciation I wish to thank those who have inspired and encouraged me to seek and to know the truth of God's purpose and His dealing with man. It seems, for the short period that I have given my undivided time and effort to this work of all works, that the great Teacher has become very near and dear to me; and after analyzing the thought of various writers, I am assured His instruction is beyond compare. Remembering a great promise that we shall know the truth and the truth shall make us free, thus giving to the world a standard by which to separate the truth from the untruth, we must be very careful in giving instruction to the public lest some should read and be misled.

Brayton E. Crandall.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

How rejoiced we should be to read of the many baptisms reported in this number of our paper! God is wonderfully blessing His workers and giving power to His Word.

Bro. and Sr. S. J. Lindsay, after a very successful summer in the Middle West started early last Saturday morning for the Far West. They expect to stop off at certain places en route, where Bro. Lindsay will hold meetings for brief periods, before returning to his pastorate in Tempe, Arizona.

In the report from Southern California the baptism of Miss Verda Renner of Wheatland, is reported. Sr. Verda is a sister of Sr. Bernice and Bro. Merle Renner whose baptisms are also reported in this issue. How wonderful and blessed it is to have a splendid family of young people like this united in the Lord!

Such a splendid letter! Such was the reaction of the editor to a communication from an old and beloved brother in northern Illinois, who writes interestingly of his Christian experience since his baptism by George Moyer in 1886. Nearly half a century of splendid service to God! We would like to publish his letter for the encouragement of others, but it is his desire that we should not do so. We thank him for it, anyway.

Do not overlook the announcement of the Golden Rule Home number of The Restitution Herald. Plan to make Sunday, Oct. 1, a "Rally Day" for old people as well as for the Sunday school.

We have Bro. Jesse Harrold, Blythedale, Mo., to thank for several copies of "The Restitution" of an early date. Before finding a permanent place in our historical department certain articles they contain will be republished for the benefit of our readers.

Plans are now being perfected by many of our churches for Rally Day. Rally Day at Oregon will unite the entire body, Bereans, Sunday school, and church, in an effort not alone for one day, but for the entire year. It is to be a "Glad Year!" That is, the joyful, uplifting, and encouraging features of the gospel are to be specially emphasized.

Bro. Jesse Harrold, Blythedale, Mo., writes that while "I am crippled and feeble and feel that my days are not long, I am still strong in the faith of the soon coming of Christ." He thinks "all signs bespeak His soon return," and asks for the prayers of the brethren that he may hold out faithful. He also suggests that some one write on the possible meaning of the NRA eagle from a prophetic standpoint.

REMINISCENCES

By George B. Alldridge

MONDAY morning, August 14, I stood alone upon the bank of the beautiful Rock River and watched it gently flowing on toward its destiny, the Mississippi, "Father of Waters." The words of Isaiah 66:12 came into my mind: "For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream."

From seventeen states and one province in Canada assembled a group of people known as members of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith. Five hundred eight had registered their names for this annual conference. As I stood upon the river's bank, almost the last to leave for my home, I felt somewhat sad, thinking as each party drove away, "Perhaps I may never see them again." For to me no people felt so near and dear as they.

The arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates were perfect. The buildings consist of a church edifice approximately thirty-five feet wide by sixty feet long suitably arranged and furnished. In a room set apart for the purpose were displayed exhibits and samples of the literature published by the National Bible Institution, also exhibits from the various ecclesias showing the work of their units. Maps adorned the walls. The exhibit that appealed most to me was that of the Sunday school and Berean societies. The work of the children who had responded to Sister Gesin's page in THE HERALD was truly remarkable and reveals the wonderful work she is doing. This room was in charge of Sister Austin, who always maintained a quiet demeanor and permitted the efforts to speak for themselves.

Attached to the church is an annex known as the dormitory, thirty-two feet wide by forty-eight feet long. Its style of architecture is beyond my ability to describe. It consists of three stories. The basement is used for the dining hall, kitchen, and storage. Ninety persons were accommodated in the sleeping quarters on the other two floors. I heard no word of complaint, everyone seeming to delight in helping his fellow and endeavoring to seek the comfort of all.

Tables were arranged in the dining hall which could easily be served and vacated without causing any discomfort. Five thousand meals were served during the entire session. The food was well cooked, well served, and there was plenty of it; the utensils clean and serviceable.

Adjoining the buildings are lawns. Seats and chairs were provided, and after each service groups would form and discuss the subjects considered in the church auditorium. The writer heard only one theme discussed, viz., the coming of the Lord. Everyone would gather around a brother or sister discussing this question. No questions were asked if the scriptures were quoted. This always seemed to satisfy every enquirer. I heard no speculative theories, but on every hand a desire to hear what God's Word declared, and nothing else was requested.

The speakers were good, and their subjects timely and instructive. The sessions for Bible study I think aroused the most interest, for at these meetings questions were asked and answered which proved that this conference consisted of Bible students. The thing which impressed me was the modesty and deportment of all the speakers. Each speaker felt that he had a message from the Master, and his desire was to let the Master speak through him.

On Sunday morning, after an eloquent sermon by Bro. Marsh on baptism, nine were obedient to the faith, and one later during the afternoon. These were all young people, their faces all aglow with joy and happiness. Each was clothed in a black robe, and an Oxford collar adorned his neck and shoulder. To me this was beautifully significant: the robe, death; the white collar, righteousness and life as represented in Christ.

At the afternoon session Bro. Siple preached, showing that now in this life God is bestowing upon us untold blessings of which the world knows nothing, an earnest of the joys and blessings God is preparing for those who love Him. Following this service was the breaking of bread. Bro. Marsh conducted this communion, assisted by Bro. Siple and six deacons. Two hundred four partook of the emblems.

At the evening service Bro. Austin preached the final sermon, "The Unsearchable Riches of Christ." I noticed Sister Gesin taking notes; so I refrain from commenting to permit a more able pen to review it.

During my visit to the National Bible Institution office I was impressed with the equipment for printing and mailing THE HERALD. The organization seems to be efficient and prepared to extend its efforts in more lucrative fields. The room in which the Training School sessions were held impressed me very much. If the observance of economy were practiced as it is regarding the furnishing of this room and its library in all other departments, then there would be no place for criticism. The students who have graduated from this school reflect much credit upon the able teachers who were responsible for their education. I regret that this school is closed for lack of financial support.

On Sunday evening we visited Golden Rule Home. "Surprise" does not convey my feelings. Whoever is responsible for this home should be highly commended. We found the residents happy and comfortable, the one in charge affable, courteous, and sympathetic. Upon entering, we noticed two aged sisters in conversation. One read from the Bible, and the two then discussed it. This seemed to be the spiritual atmosphere of the institution. In one room was a dear old soul, who, they tell me, is eighty-eight years old, too infirm to get around; yet her face revealed contentment, patience, and appreciation.

I thank God for this conference and the blessed people I met. As we were driving away, these words rang out in my mind, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The Trees of the Lord

By Lyman Booth

SOME attributes peculiar to the human species find a counterpart in trees. Trees have been used by Bible writers to represent men, as in the parable of Jotham (Judges 9:8), and by our Lord in Matthew 7:17, where He compares the fruit of a tree to the acts or characters of men. Our Lord cautioned His apostles as follows: "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." He then gave them the rule by which character might be known, namely, "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

Good and bad trees are known by the kind of fruit they bear. The trees may look alike in general appearance, their fruit may appear equally enticing, but the flavor and taste may widely differ. It is, therefore, impossible for both to produce fruit of the same quality. When trees are clothed with the richness of full bloom, they are very beautiful and are admired by every beholder; but their beauty may fade, blight may deaden the foliage and twigs, the fruit may fall or yield only a meager supply for man's benefit.

How much like trees are men! In the innocence of childhood they are altogether lovely and admired by everyone and are fit emblems of that purity of heart which fills the breast of everyone who will be privileged to enter God's kingdom and whose eyes will behold Him in His glory. But as the beauty of infancy and childhood fade, advancing years bring great changes to all, not only in form and feature, but in mental and moral development, most of which depends very largely upon environment, the principal elements being association and parental training. "As the twig is bent, so is the tree inclined." It is the same with children.

The wise man said, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:6. But how little is that rule observed at the present! Many, very many, are permitted to grow up without any parental restraint or advice; and some of them drift into paths of shame, vice, and crime, which end in punishment at the extremity of the law. "And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."

"The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted."—Psalm 104:16. . . . . "As the days of a tree are the days of my people."—Isaiah 65:22.

Solomon has said, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon."—Psalm 92:12. David said that he whose delight is in the law of the Lord "shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."—Psalm 1:3. "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste."—Song of Solomon 2:3. An apple tree among forest trees is a delight, but of rare occurrence; so is a Christian among sinners. Where a truly good man is known to be good, he generally commands the respect and confidence of his acquaintances.

In Ezekiel 17 we find two parables, one in which the dispersion of Israel is portrayed, the other giving a miniature outline of Christ and His kingdom as the highest Branch of the high cedars. He says, "Thus saith the Lord God; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent: in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the Lord have spoken and have done it."

The Psalmist has said, "The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars which he hath planted." The sap is the principle which gives the tree life and adds new branches to it. Likewise our Lord has been "given power over all flesh, that he should give (Please turn to Page Ten)

A Psalm of Praise

For the beauty of the earth,
For the glory of the skies,
For the love that from our birth
Over and around us lies:
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our grateful psalm of praise.

For the joy of human love,
Brother, sister, parent, child;
Friends on earth, and Friend above,
Pleasures pure and undefiled;
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our grateful psalm of praise.

For Thy church that evermore
Lifts her holy hands above,
Offering up on every shore
Her pure sacrifice of love;
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our grateful psalm of praise.

When America Owns a King

DOES so radical a change as here suggested seem beyond the bounds of possibility? Far stranger things have happened in the history of nations, and far stranger things are destined to occur in the future. That America should have a king is no stranger than that freedom loving America should submit to a dictator! And that eventually seems practically a certainty both from the standpoint of present political indications and from that of the Bible.

Whether it be a human dictator or a divine King, if the government resulting leads to the peace, prosperity, and contentment of our people, every patriotic citizen should welcome the change. Patriotism means "love of country," and love of country prompts men to want the best form of government possible for their country. No system of human rulership can equal that which is to be inaugurated by Jesus Christ when He comes and governs not only this beloved land of ours as its supreme Head, but reigns in righteousness and love over all the nations of the world.

"When They Believed"

THERE is a world of meaning in these words which testify to the success of Philip's preaching in Samaria when they are considered in the light of the context. "When they believed!" It was not until they had come to an intelligent and apparently comprehensive understanding of Philip's teaching that they asked to have that most sacred seal of faith, baptism, applied. It would have been useless for them to have done so before they believed for at least two reasons.

In the first place Philip would not have baptized them under such circumstances. Before the evangelist would consent to immerse them, he must be convinced that they understood the meaning of the act he was to perform on their behalf. When Philip was led to question the Ethiopian eunuch concerning his understanding of the prophecy of Isaiah which he was reading, the eunuch responded with a question of his own. "How can I (understand), except some man guide me?" Using that scripture as a starting point for his teaching, Philip "preached unto him Jesus." That is, Philip gave him a clear understanding of all that Jesus had accomplished through His death, burial, resurrection, and teaching, and all that He was still to accomplish when He came again as the Life-Giver of His people and King of the world. It was not until this instruction had been received that the eunuch ventured to say, "What doth hinder me to be baptized?"

The second reason why their baptism would have been without value before "they believed" rests in the fact that the act of baptism is a seal of the faith already possessed. Faith precedes baptism, and baptism becomes the first act of righteousness prompted by faith. A faith acceptable to God rests upon a belief of what God has promised in His Word. Without such a belief there can be no definite faith that God "is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." There is no other way by which a saving faith can be acquired. We must "study to shew (ourselves) approved unto God, . . . rightly dividing the word of truth," or, as Moffatt renders it, that we may have "no need to be ashamed of the way (we) handle the word of Truth."

The converts of Samaria, when they had come to believe what Philip preached concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, were baptized.

NIRA: RECOVERY OR 666?

By Norman John MacLeod

"But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night . . . But ye brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."—1 Thessalonians 5:1-4.

THINGS about which we know little cause us to fear. When I was a boy, there was a bridge near by that was said to be haunted. The older boys had told me that the ghost of a Mexican horseman hung around that bridge at night.

Not long afterward I began to deliver milk to some people who lived in the neighborhood, so that I had to pass over that bridge. Ordinarily I would deliver the milk before dark, but one evening I was later than usual. The moon was not shining, and the way seemed very dark. Thoughts of the bridge filled my mind as I went my way. The closer I came to the bridge, the more I feared. Every sound and sight increased my fear.

As I was about to go over the bridge, I heard a voice raised in anger somewhere the other side of the bridge. My heart stood still. Other strange sounds came to my ears. Suddenly I saw a white horse come up from the other side of the bridge. Surely I was about to see an apparition! But the horse ran off with most unghostly clattering of hoofs. I was about to run, but curiosity held me to the spot. Soon I saw a man crawling up the bank. My hair stood on end; I could not have moved had I wished to do so. As he reached the road, however, an automobile turned the corner behind me, and in the full glare of the lights I recognized my own uncle. His horse had strayed away, and he was trying to catch it. The light made all the difference in the world.

So it is with us as we run our Christian race. Light makes all the difference in the world. The things ahead of us appear fearful, and so we try to reassure ourselves about them that we may steel ourselves against them, when all we need to do is to turn on the strong light of God's Word and to see that we walk in the light as God's children. I knew within myself when I set out to deliver milk that there was no such thing as a ghost, but fear overcame my knowledge. The strong light of an automobile was needed to reveal to me the thing I knew before.

A new unescapable thing has come into our lives, directing our waking and sleeping hours, dominating our work, our households, our relationship with one another, and all our other activities. It is on the tongue of all and is the subject of much conjecture. We hear people praise it highly as the sum total of all human good, and others condemn

At a time when much thought is being devoted to the questions raised by the National Industrial Recovery Act, better known in the newspaper headlines as "Nira," it gratifies us to be able to present this study of the subject by one who combines the Bible with reason and a wide knowledge of world affairs, without which modern events cannot rightly be interpreted.

it soundly as the work of the Adversary. And yet when I mention it, you will be surprised that I would say that it is new. It is the most constant thing in life; in all ages it has been with us, and yet it is ever a new problem to mankind. It affects our every thought and action and even our relation to God. It was noted by the ancient Greeks to be the only constant thing in the universe, and the modern sage endorses his opinion. It takes from us our most cherished possessions and makes us old, world weary, and tired of this life. It is the despair of life and yet gives us hope for bettering ourselves in the future. That thing is change!

At times changes come slowly so that we can easily adjust ourselves to them. Men do the same thing in the same way for centuries and centuries. Then the modern day lays violent hands on the traditions of generations, and we must adjust ourselves or die. When the changes are in accord with our ideas, we adopt them readily and accept them as good; but when they go against us, we turn to God and endure them with grudging acceptance. But changes come. Men are upset by them. They like to do things in the accustomed way. They try to set back the hands of time to make things as they were. But after a time they accustom themselves to the change. The change in turn must be discarded for a newer one. But now changes are coming so rapidly and in so many different fields of human activity that we lose our bearings completely.

Law is an outgrowth of conditions. Law, therefore, is the most conservative of our institutions. A sure index to change, then, is law. If the laws of the land are altered markedly, it is certain other changes have already taken place. Furthermore, the people of the United States are the most conservative of the conservative Anglo-Saxon race. We will endure a great deal before we will suffer changes to be made in our habits. Wierd forms remain in our government for years: witness the electoral college. The constitution is more difficult to change than ordinary law, but even it has not escaped recently. Not only do we see congress sending forth a deluge of new laws, but new amendments to the constitution are coming faster than at any time since the Civil War.

But a most dramatic thing has happened under our very eyes which seems not to be portrayed in the laws of the land. In Europe for over a century labor unions have been much more powerful than they have been in our nation. America has lagged behind the rest by almost a century in its recognition of labor unions. All at once the labor leaders are bewildered, and sit up figuratively and rub their eyes. Are they dreaming? It cannot be! They are taken into partnership with the government, loaded with favors, and their fondest dreams become realities before their eyes. America has suddenly in six short weeks gone farther than the rest of the world in a century!

There is no movement on record more startling unless it be the rapid changes that took place in the first French Revolution or those that saw the end of the Tsar's regime in Russia. In France of that time the entire traditions and laws of centuries were wiped out in one night. In Russia the imperial government collapsed at one blow. Truly we are witnessing another revolution!

What means this lightning-like rapidity of change? What does it presage to the man in the street? What can he hope for? What do these revolutionary movements indicate for the future? They indicate that men are not satisfied with the economic and social changes that have taken place and are trying to right them. It indicates that further revolutionary changes are about to take place and that men are afraid of the results that may come from them.

That our old economic system has received a death blow is so trite a fact that we almost turn away when people discuss it. And yet that is only one part of what has happened. Social and moral conditions always follow the downward path in the wake of economic depression. Financial loss leads to despair: when our income vanishes, we will do many things that ordinarily we would not do. Despair leads to immorality: the young man who is jilted turns to drink for solace.

But what of the winter of our despair? Is it coming to an end? Are the measures that have been taken bringing back the golden age of 1929? Or are we not rather being introduced into a new age that gives us fears that deaden? The worn-out politician, disillusioned in his day of power, Calvin Coolidge, said that a new day had dawned that struck terror to his heart, a day with which he was unfamiliar, a day which he could not understand. He was glad to leave the new problems to other people to solve: men of the new day.

Three surveys have been taken of the attitude of the people toward the new era which is being crystallized for us by the new recovery laws. One was made by the friends of the administration at Washington. It covered the industrial field and found that though the picture still had its shadows the darkness was silver-edged. Much there was to give encouragement. The people were more cheerful, to say the least. A new confidence was evident throughout the land.

Another survey was made by big business corporations. They found things not so cheerful as the former survey; but still there was much encouragement in the industrial horizon. The blackest clouds had drifted away, though the sky was far from clear.

The other survey was made by a group of people who wanted to find out how the people of the city of Washington felt about the new "recovery program." The whole thing was pessimism and gloom. The people who could see things close at hand could not see the light in the dark shadows. No man is hero to his valet, and so people there would be bound to be pessimistic.

But we made our own survey this summer. You can find out what you want to find. But we tried to understand as far as possible just what was happening. Everywhere the question came to us: What of the NRA? Is it a good thing for us to support, or is it the "mark of the beast"? My answer is no. I do not believe it is the "mark of the beast." It indicates things that are yet to take place.

In six weeks we have made more radical changes than were made in Europe in a century. Can they last? Will they stay changed? Or will there be a reaction? If we can place any reliance on the facts of history, we can be certain that there will be a reaction. None of us likes to make radical changes. Revolution and reaction cause strife and commotion.

What should be our attitude? That should be the attitude of the Christian in all days. "Ye are the children of the light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness." We should not be frightened by ghosts! There are no such things.

What does the Apostle mean in his statement here quoted? Does he mean that we should be prying into every nook and corner of apocalyptic prophecy to be sure that we understand it so that we will not be taken unawares? Are we to be held accountable for our understanding of beasts, men on horseback, and scarlet women on wierd beasts? Are we supposed to be able to comprehend to the uttermost all the dark sayings that sages have pressed upon us? Or are we rather not to be comforted by assurances of real promises of God? Are we not rather to rest on that word of prophecy made more sure that shines as a light to brighten our path to the coming of the Lord? The simple clear statements of the Scripture are more satisfying to the peace of mind. Those lovely old truths are so much more to the one who is weary of the struggle of existence with this cruel world.

Let the Apostle explain himself: "Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. . . But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him. . . See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men. Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you . . . And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. . . The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen."—1 Thess. 5.

The Sons of God

By George B. Alldridge

"Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered."—Hebrews 5:8.

JESUS never misrepresented nor exaggerated facts. Among all the sayings of the world's wise men and philosophers the testimony of Jesus stands preeminently at the head of the list. The times in which we live or the customs, however they may change, cannot change in any way the words which He uttered and are written "even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word."—Luke 1:2.

Even His enemies bore this testimony. "The officers answered, Never man spake like this man."—John 7:46. And in Matthew 7:29, "For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes." Jesus, speaking of His own words, said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."—Matt. 24:35. Upon another occasion He said, "For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Note the verse which follows, showing the thought He had in mind. "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:18, 19.

In the face of these testimonies from the lips of Jesus, it surely behooves us, who claim by faith and obedience to be sons of God, to give heed to His solemn words of warning and to remember Peter's words, "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved (read verse ten), what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?"—2 Peter 3:11.

One of the most searching texts of the Bible are these words of Jesus, "For many are called, but few are chosen."—Matt. 22:14. In that wonderful parable of the laborers in the vineyard, He says, "So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen." So Jesus points out that God has been calling men from the first hour until the present hour, the eleventh. Each laborer was to receive a penny a day. This penny to my mind represents the promises of God, or as Paul states it, "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:29.

We are called as laborers in the Lord's vineyard, God having previously agreed at the time we were hired to pay us wages, which Jesus clarifies in John 4:35, 36: "Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together."

Again Jesus said, "For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish."—Luke 14:28-30. Let me repeat, "For many are called, but few are chosen."

It is a solemn and serious thing to enter into covenant relations with God.

You recall Paul's words to the church at Corinth: "We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain. (For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the day of salvation)."—2 Cor. 6:1, 2.

Now see how beautifully this works out: "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." This is how it can be done: "Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life: that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain."—Phil. 2:12-16.

Some one may ask, "How does God work in me to will and to do of His good pleasure?"

I always like to answer questions from the good Word of God, since then I feel it is not I, but God, who is speaking. "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus Christ our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: where-by are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."—2 Peter 1:2-4.

The following verses tell us how to attain unto this. God does the multiplying; we are to do the adding. It is a singular fact that sin at first in its action upon the human mind is a slow development. Pride and disobedience lead eventually to depravity and estrangement from God. Pope's well known lines make this clear.

"Of all the causes, which conspire to blind
Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
Is pride: the never failing vice of fools." (OVER)

Jesus is our example if we are desirous of winning the "crown of life." His character was perfect. The two traits which stand out the most prominently are humility and obedience.

Somebody said, "The Old Testament was written that we who are living in the days of the New Testament might understand it."

How true Romans 15:4 then is, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." This chapter reveals God as the source of patience, consolation, and hope. Hence, then, these graces of the Spirit, if they abide in our hearts, are from God through study, knowledge acquired, and putting it into daily practice, until our lives conform to these divine principles.

How true Jesus' words are today: "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." But, thank God, He also said these comforting words: "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

Brethren, the end is not far off now. A few days ago my daughter and I visited a Bible depot where the Scriptures are exhibited in every known tongue, even the New Testament in the Scotch dialect of Bobby Burns. How this thrills my heart as I recall Jesus' words, "And the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

Through Isaiah God said, "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people."

Among the most important state papers of modern times are the Preamble and the Articles of Confederation issued by Francis of Germany, Frederic William of Prussia, and Alexander of Russia, signed and published at Paris in the year 1815, and solemnly recognizing before Europe and the world the religion of Jesus Christ as the only true basis of all political relations and the only directory for the nations of the earth. Whatever may have been the motives of these distinguished kings in issuing it, it is a noble testimony to the power of Christian principles upon states and governments. Considering the sources from which it came, a stronger and more emphatic tribute to the principles of Christianity as the only true principles of government and the only foundation of national prosperity cannot be expected nor demanded. It is an interesting fact that these three great monarchs, ruling over more than seventy millions of people, then amid the clashing and din of war, should assemble in secret conclave and pay such a tribute to the Bible.

I will conclude by quoting Bishop Blomfield from a sermon upon this text, "Drawn away of his own lust, and enticed."—James 1:14.

"Look well to this, ye who venture within the precincts of forbidden pleasure, under a notion that your sin, if any, is but a little one, and that your religious principles will not be seriously impaired. Temptation wins upon the soul by secret and almost insensible gradations. A first acquaintance with sin is by degrees improved into familiarity, the heart's aversion to it is lessened, and at length is changed to love. Our first and most earnest prayer then ought to be, 'Lead us not into Temptation.'

"Great as is the believer's privilege of asking for grace to support him under all the trials of his faith, when they come upon him, it is still a more blessed thing to be preserved from falling into temptation by God's preventing grace, to which indeed is to be ascribed that all men are not tempted to the worst sins, and that the world is not a scene of wickedness and disorder. . . . Secure yourselves against temptations by putting away every habit which may lead to forgetfulness of God. Lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset you—the more easily from its apparent insignificance—and run with patience the race set before you, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith."

THE VOICE OF THE PROPHETS

---

"PREPARE WAR, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near."—Joel.

"The nations were angry, and thy wrath is come: and the time of the dead that they should be judged."—John.

"Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity."—Jesus.

"Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."—Jesus.

"Gather them (the kings and their armies) together to battle against that great day of God Almighty."—John.

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom."—Daniel.

Says a graphic writer: "The exuberant exclamation of the soldier of Napoleon's army when crossing the Alps seems likely to be realized. Looking back from a lofty height whence he could see the immense army filing and defiling up the mountain sides, surrounded on every side by lofty mountain peaks and overhanging crags, he could contain himself no longer, but stepping aside from his comrades he shouted in thunder tones, 'ATTENTION THE UNIVERSE! Wheel by kingdoms!' What was thus spoken in ecstatic rapture seems on the eve of fulfillment as we behold in the old world the marshalling of forces never before dreamed of for number and gigantic armament, and hear the low rumbling of distant armies taking their appointed places for the last great conflict of the ages."

The brain reels and the heart sickens as we contemplate its horrors. The murmurings of discontent whisper its coming. The deep undertone of the wailing masses sounds the funeral dirge of earthly kingdoms as it bubbles, seethes, and boils. The military dam which has kept the pent-up waters of discontent from bursting their barriers will soon give way and thrones and dominions be engulfed in one common maelstrom of destruction. The scepter of the man of sin will be broken. The triple crown will fall from the brow of Antichrist.

The Crescent wanes, to rise no more. "The bloody Turk" goes forth on his last insane mission of slaughter and comes "to his end" with none to "help him" (Daniel 11:43). The rich oppressors weep and howl as their miseries come upon them (James 5:1-9). Revolution serves as the pay-car of retribution while it runs over the rails of social vengeance with anarchy acting as engineer. O God! What a scene that will be! Roaring cannons, bursting bombs, rattling rifles, clashing swords, burning cities, and contesting armies all over the earth!—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the writings of H. W. Bowman.

CONDITIONS OF IMMORTALITY

SINCE biology is the science of life, let us see what it may be able to teach us concerning the possibility of prolonging life eternally. The biologists teach us that life depends upon the ability of an organism to correspond with its environment. The individual that can adjust itself to the most changes in environment will live the longest. This leads us to Herbert Spencer's statement of the conditions of immortality from the scientific viewpoint.

He said, "Perfect correspondence would be perfect life. Were there no changes in the environment but such as the organism had adapted changes to meet, and were it never to fail in the efficiency with which it met them, there would be eternal existence and eternal knowledge." It follows that eternal life requires a perfect and changeless environment and a perfect and changeless organism in perfect and endless correspondence with each other.

There already exists a perfect and changeless environment—the spiritual realm in which God dwells. But man is not a perfect and changeless organism—and his nature is not essentially spiritual. Furthermore, this earth, which is his only natural habitat, is not a perfect and changeless environment in its present state. Therefore, the conditions of immortality cannot be fulfilled on the earth as constituted at present. A radical change of both organism and environment is required.

But, thank God, the needed changes have been promised! They are to occur at the second coming of Christ. Mankind is to be changed to conform to the glorified Lord. Read 1 Corinthians 15:42-44, 51-53; Philippians 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:2. This earth is to be changed, re-created, and restored to its Edenic state. Read Psalm 102:26; 2 Peter 3:13; Revelation 21:1-4. Best of all, it is expressly declared in Revelation 21:3 that God and man are to dwell together in the New Jerusalem. The perfect organism will have found its perfect environment.

Science and Scriptures agree in making immortality conditional. Science says: "If I am to inherit eternal life, I must cultivate a correspondence with the Eternal." The Bible says: "This enduring Life is to know thee as the only true God, and thy Messenger, Jesus, as the Christ." John 1:1, 12; 3:16, 36; 1 John 4:9; 5:11, 12, unite in teaching us that in order to have eternal life we must become sons of God through faith in His Son Jesus Christ.—World's Crisis.

THE BRIDGE OF THE WORLD

By Sidney Jackson

WHEN I was a child, many passages of Scripture seemed confusing. As I grew, some of them gradually clarified themselves. One of the several puzzles was an explanation of the numerous battles in the Old Testament. I could not understand why, when fighting was wrong, there should have been so much war with God's people Israel. I believe that there may yet be many who feel the same way about the question of "Why so much warfare?"

One reason for their troubles, though a minor reason, was that the followers of Moses moved into a land already somewhat settled and proceeded to establish their homes. They allotted certain pieces of land to certain tribes without considering that this land was already the home of other people. Thus Dan and his children found that they were in constant strife with the people already in their portion of the country in southwestern Palestine, and they were forced to move to the very northern part of the land to find a place of peace. It was not enough that these various peoples were already in the land; they had to be descendants of the same family as the Chosen People, but not the ones in line for the promised inheritance. Thus many of them had a grievance against the Israelites brought down through the generations.

It is true that Abraham had little or no trouble with these same people. However, Abraham had not an army of people expecting to possess the whole of the land, but rather a few who were satisfied with only enough room for their simple needs. Thus they but seldom crowded each other.

While these battles with the Ammonites, the Edomites, the Canaanites, and others were frequent, yet they were of minor importance when compared with the battles against the would-be rulers of the world.

In considering the question of warfare in Palestine many of the influences are as important today as they were three thousand years ago. Refer to the map of the Promised Land in your Bible, and you will find the following to be the borders of the country in question: to the north, Europe, also partially known; to the east and southeast, nothing but desert country permitting little or no travel; while to the southwest lay the fertile valley of the Nile and Egypt; the western border was the shore of the Mediterranean Sea.

Early history dealt with only a small portion of the world. The only avenue of travel between the great nations of the north and the wealth of the Nile valley lay through the Promised Land. This meant that traders, travelers, and armies moving between these great nations used this little strip of country fifty miles wide and one hundred fifty miles long as their highway. Consequently, the control of this natural bridge between the nations was of vast importance both politically and economically. It is not strange, therefore, that it should have been of first importance to all of the powers of the earth. The battle for control differed from the defense of their homes by the occupants of the land, for it meant the armored drive of trained soldiers seeking world supremacy.

This little territory, no larger than some counties to be found in the United States, is well sprinkled with mountains, deep valleys, spots of desert and others of tropical fertility, and has a wider variety of climate than any other piece of land to be found in the world. Together with these climatic differences we find the widest variety of flora, animals, and birds to be found in so small a natural area.

Due to its strategic geographical location, the Promised Land was the logical home of the chosen people of God to rule the world. Due to the same geographical influences, together with the climatic variations, flora, animals, and birds, this tiny country is today and will be in the future the logical laboratory of the world for working out its various problems. Because of these valuable assets it is even today, with our larger knowledge of the world, the logical location for the capital of the world and the home of God's chosen people. Thus, clear reason and logic prove that the great Ruler and His aides, when they rule the earth, will completely possess and control the "Bridge of the World."

"NONE OTHER NAME"

By Gerald Lee Cooper

---

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

THE above words were spoken by Peter to the Jews and were brought about by the following circumstances.

After the apostles had been given the gift of the Holy Spirit, we find Peter and John going to the temple to worship. As they passed through the gate called Beautiful, a man who had been crippled from his birth asked them for alms. Peter, looking upon him, spoke the words so familiar to most of us: "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."—Acts 3:6. Can you imagine the feelings of this man as he jumped and ran into the temple praising God? Of course, he was recognized by those who had seen and helped him day after day, and numerous questions were asked. When the questioners were told of Peter and John, they besieged them and began to marvel at their power.

We see Peter then preaching to them. "Why do you marvel at us? We have done nothing. It is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of your fathers, who has done this through His Son, who was crucified by you a short time ago. It was faith in the name of Jesus Christ that saved this man." He went on then and exhorted them to repent, have faith, and receive remission of their sins.

Now this displeased the Sadducees very much, because they thought that if Peter and John gained favor among the people they would lose some of their leadership. So they had Peter and John arrested and commanded them to preach no more in the name of Jesus. Then it was that Peter spoke the words of our text.

You will notice that Peter said: "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." There was no other name under heaven that could save the man.

In Acts 2:38 we are told: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." We baptize yet today in the name of the Lord Jesus, realizing that it is the only name that will save us.

We hear many people today who believe that they can save themselves with their moral goodness. Their favorite excuse is: "I'm as good as that one or this one in the church. I believe in God and live right to the best of my ability." They do not realize that God has commanded that nothing can save man except belief in and accepting the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth.

Another thing I have noticed is that many do not, apparently, believe in Jesus' saving power, but rather in the person who baptized them. Some people will put off baptism until a certain minister can find it convenient to perform the baptismal rites. This is a grave mistake, for it matters not who baptizes us, that is, if the person is designated to do such; the thing is to be baptized into Jesus' saving name.

May I say to those of us who have already been baptized that we should reverence the name of Jesus more and more, for it is our only salvation. Do you who have not yet been baptized realize that there is "none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved," except that of Jesus?

"Take the name of Jesus with you,
Child of sorrow and of woe,
It will joy and comfort give you,
Take it, then, where'er you go."

TITHING IN HARD TIMES

THERE is no better time to begin to tithe than a time of business depression. Then it takes both faith and courage. If tithing were a sure thing, like buying a five dollar bill for four dollars, it would have no more moral value than any other form of bargain hunting. Everybody would tithe; the man most careful to pay the tenth might be the most avaricious man in town. That is not the tithing God has promised to bless. Tithing is a sure thing, and usually it leads to material betterment. But not always; and never in any magical or non-moral way.

The law of the tithe is not a law for times and seasons. It does not rest on circumstances, whether good or bad. The true Christian will begin to obey it as soon as he realizes that it is a law and that it is for his guidance and his good.

All true enough; nevertheless, there are special reasons and special values attached to tithing in hard times.

It is easy enough to thank God for pleasant experiences, though we know that often they may be spiritually barren. It is not so easy to be thankful for adversity, though difficulties and disappointments in our material affairs can provide the finest of disciplines.

Listen to Habakkuk the Prophet:

“For though the fig tree shall not flourish,
Neither shall fruit be in the vines;
The labor of the olive shall fail;
And the fields shall yield no food;
The flock shall be cut off from the fold,
And there shall be no herd in the stalls:
Yet will I rejoice in the Lord,
I will joy in the God of my salvation.”

The tither who can make the Prophet's words his own will not be deceived by prosperity, if and when it comes.

Prosperity is quite likely to come to the tither; remember that. Somebody has counted the Bible's references to giving. They total seventy-two. And forty-eight “show open promise of God's blessing to the giver.”

During a spell of hard times a bank auditor examining the books of many Toronto business houses found entries in the books of John MacDonald and Company that showed the firm was setting aside a tenth of its profits for religious and philanthropic work. He closed his audit and recommended to the bank that the MacDonald house should have all the credit it desired. It was the beginning of a new prosperity.

John H. Converse, when president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, was a tither who believed in doing more in hard times. One year, when his business was less profitable than usual, he gave forty thousand dollars to religious and charitable work.

It is known and admitted that not everybody gets ahead financially by tithing. Why should he? “Getting ahead” may be a curse. A tithing business man puts the fact thus:

“There are other successes than money ones. I've got something more than money out of tithing; it's given me happiness and contentment that I never could have bought. Suppose some of the New England families who tithed did not succeed financially? Could science measure the contentment which these families might have through knowing that God was a partner in home affairs?”

A man who is almost at the end of his resources will find his time of stress a good time to make new study of his life.

The head of a great business did this once when he was worse than bankrupt. One day he opened his Bible at Genesis 28:22, drew a pencil mark around the verse, and said, “From this moment on, as long as I live, of all that God gives me I will give Him one tenth.” Since then he has prospered far beyond the ordinary. But what is more, he has made “hundreds of investments for human betterment and to advance righteousness on earth.” The feeling that one can thus be a colaborer with God is the greatest incentive to true living which man can have. It can make one's sunset days his best days.—Tithing Bulletin issued by The Layman Company.

LET'S AGREE ON SOMETHING

A LITTLE article in The World's Crisis with the above heading has drawn my attention. When Adventists agreed on certain great doctrines which they believed should be made specially prominent at this time because they had for a long time been neglected or rejected altogether, they also agreed to allow liberty of opinion on other subjects which do not necessarily conflict with those referred to above. As long as they continued in this attitude toward one another, they got along well together and, though comparatively few in number, they gave a powerful testimony concerning the fulfilled and fulfilling signs of Christ's early coming and the necessity for this in order to consummate His redemptive work and provide endless life for otherwise perishing humanity.

When, however, they departed from this tolerant attitude and began to employ as tests of fellowship certain things contained in creeds of other bodies of Bible believers which have no direct connection with the main Adventist positions, they introduced an element of weakness into their own special work. I know a man who had been an Adventist minister, writer, editor, and Bible class teacher for more than forty years, and who, during that whole period, had held some views concerning present security in Christ and conditions in the new earth different from those of many other Adventists without interfering with his work among them, but who was finally practically disfellowshipped because he could not help but believe that John 5:24 was literally and verbally true and therefore that the life into which believers pass at regeneration would last forever, even though it might be suspended for a while; also, that the seventy-second Psalm, Isaiah 65:17-23, and similar scriptures required a literal fulfillment in every particular.

Does it not seem too bad that the spirit of toleration which has existed among Adventists on the subjects of preexistence and the “thousand years” could not have been extended or rather continued to those other views mentioned above?

“Let us agree on something.” Yes, let us agree to be tolerant to whatever does not conflict with our faith in our Lord Jesus Christ as the “only begotten Son of God,” His atoning death and resurrection whereby He obtained new and endless life for otherwise perishing mankind, and in His second coming to consummate His redeeming work and establish His kingdom under the whole heavens in the new earth.

But we could not and should not attempt to labor with those who either privately or publicly express contempt or indifference for those things which are absolutely essential to true Adventism.—W. R. Young in The World's Crisis.

THE TREES OF THE LORD

eternal life to as many as God has given him."

On account of their antiquity the cedars have been called the "trees of the Lord," and this gives rise to the simile, "As the days of a tree are the days of my people." In the search of woodland scenery which has been made through the dim vistas of past geological epochs there has been revealed a background in which arborescent fossils are traceable to this ancient tree. They were the same in that far away day when nature seemed to delight in the exercise of her power and to manifest her strength in the production of those giants of the forest. They are indeed monuments to the unchangeableness of the "Ancient of days."

People of this age are familiar with the description of the cedars of Lebanon. They are favorably mentioned in the Bible, and poets have sung their praise so long that they have become the most renowned natural monuments in the world. They crowned the rugged hills of Lebanon with their beauty and loveliness for untold centuries; but the ravages of the woodman's ax have laid them low, and the hillsides are stripped of their beauty.

Only a few scattered groves remain to remind us of their beauty and excellency. The one at Kedisha is a magnificent relic of its kind. Though scarred and hoary with the elements for hundreds of years, their huge trunks still hold aloft and spread their boughs, loaded with rich emerald foliage. They are held in venerated esteem by the Arabs, who in their superstition attribute to them not only a vegetative power, but an instinct by means of which they can understand and provide for the recurring changes of the weather. Under the shelter of those templed bowers the natives meet annually in June and observe mass.

It is a unique and hallowed spot. At an elevation of six thousand feet they stand with their roots still firmly clinging to Lebanon's breast, their trunks scarred by lightning stroke and with the snows of Lebanon mantling their foliage, while at their base earth's mightiest forces lie in silence. Who could look upon them in their solitude and not recall the Psalmist's words? "The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon which he hath planted."

The desolation which has been spread over those mighty forests has left only a few groves as reminders of the inevitable destiny of all temporal objects, that man himself is doomed to be cut down and waste away. But as there is hope that if a tree be cut down it will sprout up again, so also there is hope for man that if he die he will live again. As the cedar clings to the mountain with strength, so likewise the Christian must cling, rooted and grounded firmly to the "Rock of Ages" through storm as well as in calm with the same firmness of faith and hope in the dark and sad hours of adversity as in the sunshine of joyous seasons of prosperity.

Change is stamped upon all things earthly and upon the earth itself. Long before the recorded dates of antiquity huge forests flourished; but they were, by some unseen and infinite power, laid low and buried beneath hundreds of feet of earth and have been transformed into coal. This has proved to be a wise provision for man's benefit by Him who sees the end of His works from the beginning.

By the mouth of His holy prophets He has told us of another and better change for both the earth and its inhabitants. He has promised "a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—2 Peter 3:13. In Isaiah 66:22 we read, "For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord." "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." Then the glory and grandeur of Lebanon will be returned to it, and her cedars will renew their beauty and loveliness and shed their fragrance abroad.

Many stately cedars of Lebanon were used in the construction of Solomon's temple which was dedicated to the worship of Jehovah. Only the very best trees were selected, cut, hewed, and fitted to fill some specific place in that magnificent structure, which upon its completion was filled with the glory of God. In beauty and grandeur it excelled all other temples of worship, but because of Israel's sins and their turning from God that building was destroyed. Though it lies in ruins, its history serves as a reminder that the great Architect is employing a similar method in selection, shaping, and fitting timbers for a greater and far more glorious temple which will endure through the eternal years.

As the material for that ancient building was prepared in distant and neighboring quarries and forests and transported to Zion's holy mount, so also the materials for another temple are being chosen and prepared in all lands. They are being laid aside one by one, some on the hillside, some in the valley, and some in the sea. There they will remain till the trumpet will call them forth as imperishable materials to be used in the construction of the "house not made with hands." As at the erection of the former temple all material was fitted into its proper place "without the sound of a hammer," so also all material for the new will be assembled and given its setting without the least element of discord. Over all will be the "chief corner stone."

The glory of Solomon's temple, grand and brilliant as it was, will fade into insignificance in comparison with the new temple. It will never fall nor crumble into decay. Its timbers are of "The Trees of the Lord," and the foundations are of twelve kinds of precious stones, "more precious than gold, yea, than much fine gold." It will endure eternally as a perfect specimen of God's infinite wisdom, power, and skill.

KOKOMO BEREANS

THE senior Berean class of the Church of God, Kokomo, Indiana, held its annual business meeting August 23, 1933, at 907 South Waugh Street.

The officers elected were: Charles Martin, president; Alton Shaw, vice president; Berniece Shaw, secretary; Mary Harvey, treasurer; and Ellen Prichard, corresponding secretary.

A new method of teaching was discussed. The adviser, D. G. Harvey, is to have charge over all teaching. He will teach at least one Sunday night each month. He has the power to appoint some one for each of the other Sundays.

The meeting was closed by repeating the Berean benediction.

Ellen Prichard, Corresponding Secretary.

READING THE SCRIPTURES

NOT eloquence, but truth, is to be sought in the holy Scriptures, every part of which must be read with the same spirit by which it was written. In these, and all other books, it is improvement in holiness, not pleasure in the subtlety of thought, or the accuracy of expression, that must be principally regarded. We ought to read those parts that are simple and devout with the same affection and delight as those of high speculation, or profound erudition. Whatever book thou readest, suffer not thy mind to be influenced by the character of the writer, whether his literary accomplishments be great or small. Let thy only motive to read be the love of truth; and, instead of inquiring who it is that writes, give all thy attention to the nature of what is written. Men pass away like the shadows of the morning; but “the word of the Lord endureth for ever”: and that Word, without respect of persons, in ways infinitely various, speaketh unto all.

The profitable reading of the holy Scriptures is frequently interrupted by a vain curiosity which prompts us to examine, discuss, and labor to comprehend those parts that should be meekly and submissively accepted. But to derive spiritual improvement from reading, we must read with humility, simplicity, and faith; and not affect the reputation of profound learning.

WHO IS MY BROTHER?

Must I my brother keep,
And share his pains and toils,
And weep with those that weep,
And smile with those that smile;
And act to each a brother's part,
And feel his sorrows in my heart?

Must I his burden bear
As though it were my own,
And do as I would care
Should to myself be done;
And faithful to his interests prove,
And as myself my neighbor love?

Must I reprove his sin,
Must I partake his grief,
And kindly enter in
And minister relief—
The naked clothe, the hungry feed,
And love him, not in word, but deed?

Then, Jesus, at Thy feet
A student let me be,
And learn, as it is meet,
My duty, Lord, of Thee;
For Thou didst come on mercy's plan,
And all Thy life was love to man.

Oh! make me as Thou art,
Thy spirit, Lord, bestow—
The kind and gentle heart,
That feels another's woe;
That thus I may be like my Head,
And in my Savior's footsteps tread.

JOHN WESLEY gave the following Christian advice: “Condemn no man for not thinking as you do. Let every one enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment. Since every man must give an account of himself to God, abhor every approach in any kind of degree to the spirit of persecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force a man into it. If love will not compel him to come, leave him to God, the Judge of all.”

THE BOY SAUL

GOOD MORNING, boys and girls. With the beginning of the new quarter, October 1, we shall have a new subject to study, one subject through the entire three months. But we will not tire of it, because it concerns one of the most active and most interesting persons that ever lived—Saul, better known to us as Paul, the greatest preacher the world has ever seen excepting Jesus our Savior.

As a boy he went by the name of Saul, and we shall call him that in today's lesson. Let's try and get a clear picture in mind of his boyhood. First, the city in which he was born—Tarsus. All of you turn to your maps in the back of your Bibles or in Father's Bible atlas. The smaller ones may get Mother to help you. Find the map that shows the journeys of the Apostle Paul.

Notice that the Mediterranean, or "Great," Sea makes an unevenly rounded shore line. Up in the northeast elbow of the sea, in the province of Cilicia in Asia Minor, lies the city of Tarsus. Notice also its location in regard to Jerusalem in the country of Palestine. Tarsus is quite a distance north and east of Jerusalem, isn't it? Look at your map long enough and often enough so that you will always know just where to look for Tarsus.

Asia Minor looks quite large, but you could drop it down inside our own state of Texas and have more than enough room to walk around the outside. In fact, it is only about two thirds as large. Notice that, you Texas boys and girls. Now look up in your encyclopedia and find out all you can about Tarsus. You will understand Saul's life better if you know something about the city where he was born. You know, one's birthplace usually has a decided effect upon one's life.

You will learn that Tarsus was the capital of Cilicia, was about twelve miles inland from the coast, and was at that time one of the leading cities of the Roman world. It was a busy city, one where many people met to trade, and so we know that Saul even in his boyhood days became acquainted with many folk and liked them. Can you see him talking to strangers from distant lands, learning how other people lived, what they thought, what they hoped for, and what they did?

Next, we shall learn something about Saul's home. We know his father was a Roman citizen, though of Jewish blood. In those days it meant much to be a Roman citizen, because the great majority of men were held as slaves to the great Roman Empire. But not Saul's father. You will learn how this helped Saul in his work when he was grown up.

His father also must have been a rich man, for later on he sent his son to Jerusalem to the school of the best teacher of that time—Gamaliel. Saul's first education, however, was received at home and at the synagogue school, and his text-book was the Old Testament. Think of that, studying only the Old Testament! But surely that was enough, for he would get to be a good reader by the time he could pronounce all those hard words. He would know most of the history up to that time, and he would have beautiful poetry to learn in the Psalms.

Saul's parents were very particular people. They didn't let him run the streets and learn mischief. He had time to play, of course, but he must get his lessons first, and that is one reason he grew to be such a great man. His parents wanted him to be a rabbi, which is a Jewish minister, you know.

When a Jewish boy got to be thirteen years of age, he was considered a man and must learn a trade, no matter how educated he was. You all know, I'm sure, what trade Saul learned, and know it helped him a great deal all his life.

Now, my Bible Scrapbook boys and girls, we are going to start in again on our scrapbook work, and we hope many more will join our club. Those of you who have plenty of room in your first scrapbooks may use them; the others may get any good notebook.

Write at the top, "The Life of the Apostle Paul." Now draw a little outline of the Mediterranean Sea and place a star where Tarsus is, writing the name over it. Then write a little story about the city and about Saul's home; tell about his schooling, his text-book, and teachers. Now draw Saul making a tent.

Last, draw a picture of a little boy studying at the knee of his father, with a scroll in his lap. You know, their books were in the form of scrolls. If you would rather, paste the picture of Saul as a boy which your Sunday school teacher will give you. Or you can get pictures for the whole quarter for four cents from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill. I wonder if any of you have started to make a picture roll. It's lots of fun and helps you, too.

And now, good-bye, till next week.

SAUL IN TARSUS

Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4-7; Philippians 3:3-6

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:9-16

GOLDEN TEXT

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Timothy 2:15.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Paul's Training for Leadership.

Aim: To teach the pupil the value of a scriptural education for Christian service.

Basic Truth: "From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation."—2 Tim. 3:15.

I. Paul's Education and Zeal. (Acts 21:29; 22:3.) Paul's life was an open book that all men might freely read. There was nothing dishonorable in it. From a human standpoint he was proud of his Jewish origin. His education had been carried on under the most able teacher of the day. Because of natural inclination coupled with the influences that had surrounded him in youth, he was exceedingly zealous in his efforts to advance what he believed to be the cause of God.

II. Paul's Roman Citizenship. (Acts 22:27, 28.) Without denying his obligation to his own people, Paul apparently found satisfaction in knowing himself to be a Roman citizen by birth. His sense of loyalty to the government that granted him its protection and freedom is expressed in Romans 13:1-7, where he asserts that the civil officers of the Roman Government were ministers of God at whose hands no righteous man had anything to fear. Loyalty to the government of which he was a citizen was one of the elements of character that contributed to his success as a missionary in the Roman Empire.

III. Paul's Life and Hope. (Acts 26:4-7; Phil. 3:3-6.) From boyhood Paul had been true to the standards he had been taught, which were the highest rules of conduct known to the Jews of his day. He was blameless as far as observation of the Mosaic law was concerned. He was equally blameless before the Roman law. He had lived throughout his career before his conversion quite as moral and lawful a life as he did thereafter. His only fault had been the result of education which had not taught him the spirit but only the letter of the requirements laid down by Moses. The consequence was that there was malice and murder in his heart even while he carefully kept the commandments which forbade the committing of such evil deeds. Only the gospel of Jesus Christ can cleanse the heart of sin.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Patriotism: The early career of Saul of Tarsus was actuated by a zeal to serve his family, his sect, his nation. Were he living today, he would be called a dutiful son, a religious zealot, a patriotic citizen. Not only did he serve his own nation faithfully, but he was clever enough to combine the religious and political views of the Jews with the militaristic and legal leadership of Rome, their overlord, in a way that gave him political and legal prestige with both groups. There are few men in our country who can say with Paul, "Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless." And yet we have many leaders of political and patriotic organizations who are pointed out to the youth of the land as ideals in patriotism. Is such idealism high enough?

Christian Patriotism: After his conversion to Christianity Paul's viewpoint of life seems to have changed. He still mentions his family, his tribe, his Roman citizenship, and his connection with the Pharisees. But instead of boasting of these associations, he says, "Those I counted loss for Christ." He has no rebuke for those who are good citizens, but he tries to show them a higher way.

Do the people in your community accept you as a leader in Christian affairs? Such leadership is a thing to be earnestly desired, not because of the distinction it lends to your name, nor yet because of the authority it gives, but because such position earnestly sought will cause you to try to live more nearly like the Christ pattern each day. The Christian leader is something more than a good citizen of his community. He is preparing himself for citizenship in the kingdom of God. Because of this the community should be able to say of him, "He is a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good friend, because he is a good Christian."—G. M. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Paul wrote a number of letters to different people and peoples, among them being this one to Timothy, whom he calls his dearly beloved son (2 Tim. 1:2). Timothy was not Paul's own son, but was his son in the faith (1 Tim. 1:2). This being the case, Paul was anxious that Timothy should be all that God would have him be; so he admonished him to study to the extent and in such a way as to be approved by the Father, so that he might not be ashamed and also that he might rightly divide the Scriptures.

Teachers, ministers, and every Christian, give diligence to this admonition and note the threefold purpose of study: first, to be approved of God; second, that we be not ashamed; and last, that all scriptures may be rightly interpreted.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Training Christian Leaders

The necessity for trained Christian leaders

cannot be over-emphasized. This does not always mean that a worldly education is necessary. Moses was educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Paul was instructed by the great teacher of his day, Gamaliel. Jesus, as far as we know, did not attend any school; and His apostles were poor, unlearned fishermen. If not all did have a worldly education, all did have an unusual knowledge of God's Word. All Christian leaders today should be trained in God's Word and should have a deep reverence for God and His work.

Worldly education can and should be a help. Worldly people must be reached first through the carnal; so if one can appeal to them by using correct English and by engaging in intelligent conversation, he should do so. This education should, however, be but a means to an end. It should never be used to exalt self, but to win to Christ. Paul, at Athens, made use of his knowledge of their religion; when in Crete, he quoted from their prophets; but to the Corinthians he wrote: "I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."—1 Cor. 2:1, 2. It is easy for us to see how Paul used his worldly wisdom to attract the attention of worldly people to himself so that he might lead them to Christ. He never used it as a display of self.

Above all a leader must know God's Word and be able to impart it to others. A teacher should never trust to inspiration to the neglect of preparation.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Early Life of Saul

We have been studying for the last quarter some of the great leaders of the Bible. Name some of them. For this quarter they have selected for our study one of the greatest characters found in the Bible. This man is Saul, or Paul, as he came to be later.

Saul was a Jew. He was very well educated, being taught by Gamaliel, one of the greatest teachers of that time. He believed and worshiped God, keeping the laws taught by the Jews. He was a Pharisee, a religious group of people who believed in the resurrection of the dead. He was a Roman citizen, living in the Roman Empire.

This gives you some idea of the early life of Saul as taken from various verses in the Bible given to us by Saul himself. He was what we would say a very important person, even before he became a Christian.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

KANSAS - OKLAHOMA

The Kansas-Oklahoma annual meeting will be held at Arkansas City, Kansas, from October 8 to October 16. Bro. Sydney Magaw will be with us at this time. We are a little late with our meeting this year, hoping that we might have our church building nearer completion than it now is. But we have decided to arrange to have the meeting in the church even though it is unfinished. We shall arrange things temporarily for a meeting there. The church is located at 707 North A Street.

We hope that our church people will all make a special effort to be present during this meeting. The Scriptures tell us that we should "meet often one with another . . . And so much the more, as we see the day approaching." I know it will mean a sacrifice this year for many, perhaps all; but we must realize how much has been sacrificed for us and how much we need the spiritual food that Bro. Magaw will bring to us. Brethren and sisters, come to the feast and receive strength for the trying days before us that we may be able to stand the test. Come in the spirit of Christ, and God will bless you.
Mrs. A. J. Chaplin, Sec.

HEDRICK, INDIANA

We read in God's Word, "And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

For ten years Bro. J. H. Anderson has been sowing the seed and preaching the gospel in Hedrick, and during the meeting of the past week God has given a bountiful harvest.

On Sunday, September 3, Bro. Anderson began a meeting at this place, and he has been teaching the gospel truths each night. His efforts have been well rewarded, twelve persons having taken their stand for Christ. Sunday afternoon a large crowd gathered on the banks of our beautiful Wabash River for the baptismal services. What a beautiful spot and what a glorious gathering as the following were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ: Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ora Beardsly, Mr. and Mrs. John Sweney, Mrs. Tenza Flint, Mrs. Eureka Wesley, Mr. George Jones, and Mr. Eugene Hurley. They were extended the right hand of fellowship at the evening services.

Wednesday evening brought the meeting to a close. It was well attended and very successful, Bro. Anderson giving us a wonderful sermon each night. We truly appreciate having a minister like Bro. Anderson, for we feel he is doing a great work here.

On Thursday morning we again had the privilege of being permitted to gather at the river's edge when another brother, Mr. Fenton Wesley, was baptized into Christ. We rejoice with Mrs. Wesley, who was among the twelve baptized Sunday afternoon, that her husband has also taken a stand for Christ and that they may continue in that straight and narrow way together.

May God bless the seed that has been sown in this place, that it may take root in yet other hearts and bring forth still another harvest.
Dora Hurley.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Hearty cooperation marked the first fall meeting of the Ministerial Association and the California Conference board at the MacLeod home in Pomona on Sunday afternoon, September 10. The chief topic of discussion was the program for the coming Quarterly Conference to be held the first Sunday in October in Pomona.

A committee consisting of Sr. Adamson, chairman; Sr. Emma C. Railsback; and Sr. Leta MacLeod was appointed to take charge of a demonstration lesson on primary Sunday school methods to be presented at the conference at the Sunday school hour at 9:30 a. m. All Sunday school teachers are especially urged to be present at that time; materials as well as methods will be demonstrated.

This is the first of a series of lessons planned for each conference period. The remainder of the program will be as follows: 10:30, worship hour under the direction of Bro. Adamson; communion, by Bro. S. G. Elton; 12:00, picnic dinner at Ganesha Park; 2:00 p. m., Bro. Lichty presiding; short talks by Bros. Lichty, Hatch, and Hammond, interspersed with songs; 2:30, sermon: "Signs of Christ's Coming: in Israel," by Bro. MacLeod; tea at Williams Street Chapel or at the MacLeod home; 6:30, Berean vesper service, conducted entirely by the young people of the church; and 7:30, sermon: "Signs of Christ's Coming: in the Church and in the World," by Sr. Emma C. Railsback.

Californians are requested to mark the date of October 1 on their calendars for this gathering and to be sure to attend. Sr. Grace Adamson was appointed to head a reception committee which should have charge of the register and of making people acquainted with one another. Other matters such as a program for the Ministerial Association meetings for the coming year, future demonstration lessons for the benefit of Sunday school teachers, and the possibilities of an exhibit at the Quarterly Conference were discussed.

The Los Angeles church celebrated a homecoming meeting for its delegation at the General Conference. Short talks were given by each of the members of the delegation and also by Bro. Calkins (who attended General Conference but was not a delegate). Much joy was expressed at the return home, and many hearty greetings were features of the occasion. The prospects for a very good year are evident on every hand with the return of the fall season.

Norman John MacLeod.

TEACHERS AND PARENTS

With the beginning of the new quarter on October 1, the work of the Bible Scrapbook Club will be resumed through the guidance of the Children's Page. The lessons on the life of the Apostle Paul furnish a fine opportunity for scrapbook work, not only for isolated children but also for Sunday school classes. The results of the children's work in this form will be of much benefit not only for the present but for the future, and will present a concrete example of their efforts for your own exhibits as well as conference exhibits.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

Bro. Richard LeCrone started his work as pastor of the Eden Valley church on Sunday, August 27. We are very glad to welcome Bro. LeCrone and feel assured that the work of the Lord will be kept advancing in this place.

The many friends of Bro. and Sr. Denchfield were glad to see them again on their return from their trip to the Oregon conference and various other places during their vacation. As they are leaving soon to begin work in another field, the people here gave them a farewell party in the basement of the church on Thursday evening, September 7. Bro. and Sr. Denchfield were presented with a set of silverware as a token of appreciation of past services. They take with them the best wishes of the entire congregation for success in their new field.

Mrs. Herman Ruhn, Clerk.

PASTORAL REACTIONS TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

We publish the following report which appeared in a recent issue of "Golden Rule News," published by M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, because it sets forth so clearly and so emphatically the financial condition of the National Bible Institution at this time, and recalls to mind the recent official report of the secretary.

"General Conference this year was the largest in its history, over 500 being registered, against 391 last year, the largest up to that time. Daily attendance at Bible classes from the very first day was far over last year's record. From Virginia to California and from Texas to Canada, came delegates from many states who formed an unusually representative group. There was an inspiring earnestness and enthusiasm pervading the whole gathering. During these depression years the attendance has been steadily growing. The fires of affliction have only welded our people the closer together, and in the face of unprecedented financial losses they are supporting the work more liberally than ever before. It is doubtful if there are many other denominations that have gone forward as much, proportionately, as have we in the face of the obstacles of the last four years.

"If you have not read the report of the conference in The Restitution Herald of August 22, turn to it now and read it in full. The financial crisis is not yet over, but it is not so acute as it was last year. The danger point just now is an obligation in notes payable of $6582.17 owing to a closed bank in Oregon. This bank is in the process of liquidation and payment may be demanded at any time. If the money for this can be raised in time, and the notes paid off, we shall be over the top, and in a much more secure financial situation than for several years. $1500 of this was pledged by the delegates in conference. If every member of the church would give just $1 immediately this debt could be cleared up at once, and the threat to our work averted. Can you help?

"But finance is not our only interest, though for some years it has stolen the show. Many other reports and activities were considered and acted upon which are worthy of your careful thought. It was a great conference."

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Miss Jeanne Lyon after a week's visit in Grand Rapids left on Sept. 14 en route to her home in the Southland.

Bro. Cecil Smead spent a couple of days with Grand Rapids church folk while on his way to Blanchard, where he is now doing ministerial work. Since he is president of the National Berean Society, our local Bereans were glad to have him at their regular meeting on Sept. 14. We pray for the success of the work at Blanchard.

Special effort has been put forth the past two weeks in organizing and developing our young men's class, ages 16 to 25. A noticeable pick-up in attendance is evident already, and the boys are planning some interesting activities for the fall and winter.

Monthly teachers' and officers' meetings for the Sunday school have been resumed, and a valuable session was held on Sept. 13.

Activity is in the air, and we are feeling the spirit and desire of service in all departments.
F. E. Siple, Pastor.

IOWA CONFERENCE

The Forty-sixth Annual Conference of the Iowa Church of God opened Tuesday evening, August 22, and closed Sunday evening, August 27, at Waterloo, with an attendance which exceeded that of last year's conference.

The lessons and sermons were very inspiring and much brotherly love was manifested throughout the week. Bible lessons were held each forenoon and afternoon by Bros. L. E. Conner and O. J. Allard (adult class); H. S. Hunt and J. Arthur Johnson (young people); Sr. Alta King (juniors); and Sr. Hester Berry (primary). The sermons each afternoon and evening were by Bros. J. W. Williams, L. E. Conner, and O. J. Allard.

The out-of-the-state speaker this year was Bro. L. E. Conner of Dixon, Ill. He is a very able speaker, and his services were enjoyed very much. The results of the election to the state conference board were as follows: H. S. Hunt, Clarksville, president; J. Arthur Johnson, Sac City, vice president; Mrs. W. H. Allard, Cedar Falls, treasurer; Mrs. J. M. Kiger, Marengo, recording secretary; Miss Esther Sealine, Stanhope, corresponding secretary.

There was much rejoicing over the six baptisms this year, three during conference: Robert Bowen, Maxwell; Dorothy Herrick, Waterloo; and Claude Williams, Gladbrook; and three the previous week on August 13 at Stanhope: Alton Berggren and Eldred Lundquist, Stanhope; and Melferd Sealine, Stratford. They are all young people, and it is good to see them take this stand early in life.

Bro. and Sr. Denchfield were among the several out-of-the-state visitors with whom we were so happy to form new acquaintanceships and renew some of the old.

We wish to thank all who helped in any way, whether by their presence or otherwise, to make this conference a successful one. And the glory be to the heavenly Father.

Esther Sealine, Cor. Sec.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Geo. Siple (for another); S. T. Shirley (for another); Almeda Wertz; Mrs. Lottie Logan Pickerl (for another); Edna Hobart; Mrs. H. H. Kent; Mrs. W. L. Cusey; Mary E. Staley; Mrs. I. L. Wood; Rachel M. Whitcomb; B. F. Skeels (for another); Norman John MacLeod (for another).

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

Mrs. A. M. Siple; Ella M. Siple; Anna Mae Bottolfs; Mr. and Mrs. M. Feters; Mrs. Eva L. Page; Wm. H. and Regina C. Boyer.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Is your program ready for "Golden Rule Home Day" on the first Sunday in October?

Under a new arrangement the church at Rockford, Ill., is enjoying the ministrations of L. E. Conner on the second and fourth Sundays of each month.

We regret to learn of the death of Sr. Almeda Pike of Sanborn, N. Y. Sr. Pike was a faithful and devout "mother in Israel" in the Niagara Falls congregation and will be greatly missed. We hope to meet her soon in the Master's presence.

Material is coming in already for our special "Gospel" number of The Herald. This will appear, the Lord willing, on the last day in October and will be filled to overflowing with the glad message of the kingdom of God. Plan to distribute extra copies among your friends.

Under the active leadership of their ministers the California brethren are pressing forward along several lines of endeavor that promise much for the future of the work in the Golden State. If you are planning to spend some time in California this next winter, be sure to send your name and address to us and we shall see that it reaches the body of believers closest to the place where you are going.

The Church of the Golden Rule, Cleveland, Ohio, celebrated the fifth anniversary of its dedication on Sunday, Sept. 10, 1933. The services continued throughout the day, dinner being served by the ladies of the church. In the morning Pastor M. W. Lyon spoke on "The Diamond Rule," and in the evening on "What Stephen Saw." The afternoon was given over to a Berean program.

An even dozen more dear ones have responded to Bro. Anderson's earnest appeal and have been baptized! Praise the Lord for His goodness to them in sending the gospel to them. One way in which we are deeply impressed with the many who have responded to the call this year is the fact that they are thoroughly informed concerning the facts of the gospel which they have come to believe. Theirs is an intelligent faith.

The board of the National Bible Institution deeply appreciates the splendid support it is receiving from the pastors of the various churches. C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Ont., and M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, in recent issues of their respective church bulletins review the work of the General Conference and appeal to their congregations to assist in bearing the financial obligations of the institution.

Official lists of accredited ministers have been received from Indiana, California, and from some unorganized states, but Iowa, Illinois, Virginia, Minnesota, Oregon, Washington, Nebraska, Texas, and others have not reported. We would like to publish the full list, with names and addresses, very soon. Will conference secretaries and ministers generally aid in this matter? It is to your interest.

After a brief vacation spent in Indiana, Levi Mick, whose wife is the matron of Golden Rule Home, has returned to Oregon and is again busily engaged in preparing for the comfort of the Golden Rule family.

Bro. R. A. Humphreys writes that the brethren of Bear, Ark., are expecting Eld. L. H. Shelton of Driggs, Ark., to begin a three-days' meeting at Bear on September 22. May this and all other similar efforts be blessed of God.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

Another church has awakened to the need of regular pastoral work. Blanchard, Mich., long a stronghold of the faith in that state, has for a number of years been in a more or less inactive condition. May God bless the church there under the leadership of Bro. C. A. Smead.

"Golden Rule Home Issue" will be the next. Many of those who attended General Conference this year visited this beautiful and comfortable home for older ones and came away enthusiastic concerning it. It is a place of security and comfort for those who are not able by reason of advancing age to care longer for themselves.

A special contribution has been made by Mrs. Lillian Dauntler of Dixon, Ill., for the special use of The Restitution Herald. We are not listing this amount ($25.00), under the regular contributions, as we will soon announce the particular object to which it will be devoted. The publishers greatly appreciate the gift at this time.

Another of the Training School graduates is making a change in pastorate this fall. Bro. Richard LeCrone, during the past year pastor at Lester Prairie, Minn., assumed the pastorate of the church at Eden Valley in the same state on the last Sunday in August. Bro. LeCrone possesses marked ability as a speaker, and we hope for his continued success.

We gather from the "Church of God Messenger," published by the pastor of the Fonthill, Ont., church, that a special effort is to be put on soon at Welland, Ont., at which time Adna Hoskins, pastor of the St. Cloud, Minn., Church of God will assist C. E. Randall of Fonthill. Welland is the county seat town some five miles from Fonthill and a promising place to begin a new work for God.

Norman John MacLeod, whose splendid historical studies were followed with so much profit at conference, submits to us an interesting list of recent books having to do with conditions in the Far East. These are not works on prophecy, but very valuable in the interpretation of prophecies relating to the East. The student of prophecy must be familiar with present and past conditions throughout the world if he is to understand God's wonderful messages to His people in these days.

LEARNING TO PRAY

COMPARATIVELY few people actually learn to pray. This does not mean that the ordinary person feels no desire to pray. It is sometimes said—and perhaps truthfully—that at times all men pray, that prayer is the universal expression of religion. But, while people as a whole may be moved to prayer in certain extremities, few devote their lives to the faithful practice of prayer. In other words, they fail to heed the scriptural admonitions to pray constantly.

Doubtless one great difficulty is that prayer is not developed from infancy. We learn to talk, but not to talk with God. It needs to be stressed that genuine proficiency in prayer comes as a result of faithful practice. Dr. E. M. Bounds, who was a mighty man in prayer and has left several books well worthy of consideration, urges that prayer is a sublime art—the sublimest of all arts—to be learned by diligent experience. He writes: “To graduate in the school of prayer is to master the whole course of a religious life. The first and last stages of holy living are crowned with praying. It is a life trade. The hindrances of prayer are the hindrances to a holy life. The conditions of praying are the conditions of righteousness, holiness and salvation. Prayer is a trade to be learned.”

A rich faith is essential for successful praying, as all Christian prayer is based upon our faith in God's care for us. We must believe not only that God is, but that He is a rewarder of them who diligently seek Him. This means that our faith must be childlike. We need to be overwhelmed by the conviction that God is our Father. How implicit was the trust of Jesus! How simple was His reasoning upon the great realities of life! An earthly father is good to his child; he will not give him a stone for bread, nor a serpent for fish. “If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father who is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?”

We need to study anew the promises of God concerning prayer. They are numerous and practically limitless in scope. Consider this one from the twenty-first chapter of Matthew: “And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.” A study of the prayer promises of the Lord's farewell discourse, given in the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth chapters of John, should be helpful to the faith of every Christian. Ah! what power for good we fail to use in our neglect of prayer. R. A. Torrey once said: “Prayer can do anything that God can do, and, as God can do anything, prayer is omnipotent.” And Robert Hall, one of Britain's greatest preachers, reflects about the same sentiment: “The prayer of faith is the only power in the universe to which the great Jehovah yields. Prayer is the sovereign remedy.” Let us learn to “pray without ceasing.”

We should be encouraged to pray more by the faithful testimony of the great souls of the church. How true that “more things have been wrought by prayer than this world dreams of!” God's great servants of every age have been praying men. Consider Daniel and Elijah and Jeremiah and David. Reference has been made already to the Master's own glorious life. Read the Epistles of Paul or John or Peter with special attention to the references to prayer. Luther is reputed to have prayed three hours daily at times, and he prayed most when pressed the hardest for time. We may seriously question if there ever has been a truly great preacher who was not a praying man. In recent times the testimony of such great souls as Russell H. Conwell, Phillips Brooks, and Charles H. Spurgeon is overwhelming. And God forbid that we should forget the missionaries—Robert Moffett, Adoniram Judson, William Carey, David Livingstone, A. L. Shelton, and countless others. Enthusiasm for the salvation of the world has been nurtured by prayer wherever manifested.

Perhaps the greatest man of prayer of modern times was George Muller, of Ashley Down, Bristol, England. His story is well known, but not well enough known. He has inspired many men to greater faith and to richer prayer experience; he should inspire hundreds and thousands more. He raised more than seven million dollars in caring for and educating thousands of orphan children and circulating biblical literature all over the world. Though gone, he yet speaks; and his work stands as a glorious testimonial to the faithfulness of God to His promises concerning prayer.

We are often prone to overlook the need for prayer for modern missionary enterprise. Let us pray believing, that more workers may be sent, that they may proclaim faithfully the redeeming message of our crucified Lord and Savior.

To be certain, we must meet certain conditions if we expect our prayers to be answered. We must be unselfish, we must seek the Lord's will, we must guard our hearts from iniquity, we must pray in the name and to the honor of Christ, if our petitions are to be heeded. Further, we must pray unceasingly, and not faint. Prayer is not a magical process by which our foolish whims are granted; this power is given us for our own spiritual uplift and for the promulgation of God's work in the world.

Every lover of the Lord should resolve today to pay more earnest heed to his spiritual development. He should resolve to pray more, to make prayer a vital part of each day's program. The world awaits the redemption of the Lord. Prayer is our mightiest power in prosecuting this program. May we look to Him, as did His servants of another day, and cry, “Lord, teach us to pray!”—Standard Bible Teacher.

INVESTIGATION by the Department of Justice in Washington shows more crimes of all kinds are committed by youths of 19 years than of any other age. This report is based on 80,785 arrests. Of this number 5,221, or 6.5 per cent were females. Most of the crimes committed by youths were theft in some form. Of all persons arrested under 21, 45.8 per cent had stolen autos, and no one says anything about repealing the law against stealing!—Selected.

The Trees of the Lord

By Lyman Booth

SOME attributes peculiar to the human species find a counterpart in trees. Trees have been used by Bible writers to represent men, as in the parable of Jotham (Judges 9:8), and by our Lord in Matthew 7:17, where He compares the fruit of a tree to the acts or characters of men. Our Lord cautioned His apostles as follows: "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." He then gave them the rule by which character might be known, namely, "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

Good and bad trees are known by the kind of fruit they bear. The trees may look alike in general appearance, their fruit may appear equally enticing, but the flavor and taste may widely differ. It is, therefore, impossible for both to produce fruit of the same quality. When trees are clothed with the richness of full bloom, they are very beautiful and are admired by every beholder; but their beauty may fade, blight may deaden the foliage and twigs, the fruit may fall or yield only a meager supply for man's benefit.

How much like trees are men! In the innocence of childhood they are altogether lovely and admired by everyone and are fit emblems of that purity of heart which fills the breast of everyone who will be privileged to enter God's kingdom and whose eyes will behold Him in His glory. But as the beauty of infancy and childhood fade, advancing years bring great changes to all, not only in form and feature, but in mental and moral development, most of which depends very largely upon environment, the principal elements being association and parental training. "As the twig is bent, so is the tree inclined." It is the same with children.

The wise man said, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:6. But how little is that rule observed at the present! Many, very many, are permitted to grow up without any parental restraint or advice; and some of them drift into paths of shame, vice, and crime, which end in punishment at the extremity of the law. "And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."

"The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted."—Psalm 104:16. . . . . "As the days of a tree are the days of my people."—Isaiah 65:22.

Solomon has said, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon."—Psalm 92:12. David said that he whose delight is in the law of the Lord "shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."—Psalm 1:3. "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste."—Song of Solomon 2:3. An apple tree among forest trees is a delight, but of rare occurrence; so is a Christian among sinners. Where a truly good man is known to be good, he generally commands the respect and confidence of his acquaintances.

In Ezekiel 17 we find two parables, one in which the dispersion of Israel is portrayed, the other giving a miniature outline of Christ and His kingdom as the highest Branch of the high cedars. He says, "Thus saith the Lord God; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent: in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the Lord have spoken and have done it."

The Psalmist has said, "The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars which he hath planted." The sap is the principle which gives the tree life and adds new branches to it. Likewise our Lord has been "given power over all flesh, that he should give (Please turn to Page Ten)

A Psalm of Praise

For the beauty of the earth,
For the glory of the skies,
For the love that from our birth
Over and around us lies:
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our grateful psalm of praise.

For the joy of human love,
Brother, sister, parent, child;
Friends on earth, and Friend above,
Pleasures pure and undefiled;
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our grateful psalm of praise.

For Thy church that evermore
Lifts her holy hands above,
Offering up on every shore
Her pure sacrifice of love;
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our grateful psalm of praise.

When America Owns a King

DOES so radical a change as here suggested seem beyond the bounds of possibility? Far stranger things have happened in the history of nations, and far stranger things are destined to occur in the future. That America should have a king is no stranger than that freedom loving America should submit to a dictator! And that eventually seems practically a certainty both from the standpoint of present political indications and from that of the Bible.

Whether it be a human dictator or a divine King, if the government resulting leads to the peace, prosperity, and contentment of our people, every patriotic citizen should welcome the change. Patriotism means "love of country," and love of country prompts men to want the best form of government possible for their country. No system of human rulership can equal that which is to be inaugurated by Jesus Christ when He comes and governs not only this beloved land of ours as its supreme Head, but reigns in righteousness and love over all the nations of the world.

"When They Believed"

THERE is a world of meaning in these words which testify to the success of Philip's preaching in Samaria when they are considered in the light of the context. "When they believed!" It was not until they had come to an intelligent and apparently comprehensive understanding of Philip's teaching that they asked to have that most sacred seal of faith, baptism, applied. It would have been useless for them to have done so before they believed for at least two reasons.

In the first place Philip would not have baptized them under such circumstances. Before the evangelist would consent to immerse them, he must be convinced that they understood the meaning of the act he was to perform on their behalf. When Philip was led to question the Ethiopian eunuch concerning his understanding of the prophecy of Isaiah which he was reading, the eunuch responded with a question of his own. "How can I (understand), except some man guide me?" Using that scripture as a starting point for his teaching, Philip "preached unto him Jesus." That is, Philip gave him a clear understanding of all that Jesus had accomplished through His death, burial, resurrection, and teaching, and all that He was still to accomplish when He came again as the Life-Giver of His people and King of the world. It was not until this instruction had been received that the eunuch ventured to say, "What doth hinder me to be baptized?"

The second reason why their baptism would have been without value before "they believed" rests in the fact that the act of baptism is a seal of the faith already possessed. Faith precedes baptism, and baptism becomes the first act of righteousness prompted by faith. A faith acceptable to God rests upon a belief of what God has promised in His Word. Without such a belief there can be no definite faith that God "is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." There is no other way by which a saving faith can be acquired. We must "study to shew (ourselves) approved unto God, . . . rightly dividing the word of truth," or, as Moffatt renders it, that we may have "no need to be ashamed of the way (we) handle the word of Truth."

The converts of Samaria, when they had come to believe what Philip preached concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, were baptized.

NIRA: RECOVERY OR 666?

By Norman John MacLeod

"But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night . . . But ye brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."—1 Thessalonians 5:1-4.

THINGS about which we know little cause us to fear. When I was a boy, there was a bridge near by that was said to be haunted. The older boys had told me that the ghost of a Mexican horseman hung around that bridge at night.

Not long afterward I began to deliver milk to some people who lived in the neighborhood, so that I had to pass over that bridge. Ordinarily I would deliver the milk before dark, but one evening I was later than usual. The moon was not shining, and the way seemed very dark. Thoughts of the bridge filled my mind as I went my way. The closer I came to the bridge, the more I feared. Every sound and sight increased my fear.

As I was about to go over the bridge, I heard a voice raised in anger somewhere the other side of the bridge. My heart stood still. Other strange sounds came to my ears. Suddenly I saw a white horse come up from the other side of the bridge. Surely I was about to see an apparition! But the horse ran off with most unghostly clattering of hoofs. I was about to run, but curiosity held me to the spot. Soon I saw a man crawling up the bank. My hair stood on end; I could not have moved had I wished to do so. As he reached the road, however, an automobile turned the corner behind me, and in the full glare of the lights I recognized my own uncle. His horse had strayed away, and he was trying to catch it. The light made all the difference in the world.

So it is with us as we run our Christian race. Light makes all the difference in the world. The things ahead of us appear fearful, and so we try to reassure ourselves about them that we may steel ourselves against them, when all we need to do is to turn on the strong light of God's Word and to see that we walk in the light as God's children. I knew within myself when I set out to deliver milk that there was no such thing as a ghost, but fear overcame my knowledge. The strong light of an automobile was needed to reveal to me the thing I knew before.

A new unescapable thing has come into our lives, directing our waking and sleeping hours, dominating our work, our households, our relationship with one another, and all our other activities. It is on the tongue of all and is the subject of much conjecture. We hear people praise it highly as the sum total of all human good, and others condemn

At a time when much thought is being devoted to the questions raised by the National Industrial Recovery Act, better known in the newspaper headlines as "Nira," it gratifies us to be able to present this study of the subject by one who combines the Bible with reason and a wide knowledge of world affairs, without which modern events cannot rightly be interpreted.

it soundly as the work of the Adversary. And yet when I mention it, you will be surprised that I would say that it is new. It is the most constant thing in life; in all ages it has been with us, and yet it is ever a new problem to mankind. It affects our every thought and action and even our relation to God. It was noted by the ancient Greeks to be the only constant thing in the universe, and the modern sage endorses his opinion. It takes from us our most cherished possessions and makes us old, world weary, and tired of this life. It is the despair of life and yet gives us hope for bettering ourselves in the future. That thing is change!

At times changes come slowly so that we can easily adjust ourselves to them. Men do the same thing in the same way for centuries and centuries. Then the modern day lays violent hands on the traditions of generations, and we must adjust ourselves or die. When the changes are in accord with our ideas, we adopt them readily and accept them as good; but when they go against us, we turn to God and endure them with grudging acceptance. But changes come. Men are upset by them. They like to do things in the accustomed way. They try to set back the hands of time to make things as they were. But after a time they accustom themselves to the change. The change in turn must be discarded for a newer one. But now changes are coming so rapidly and in so many different fields of human activity that we lose our bearings completely.

Law is an outgrowth of conditions. Law, therefore, is the most conservative of our institutions. A sure index to change, then, is law. If the laws of the land are altered markedly, it is certain other changes have already taken place. Furthermore, the people of the United States are the most conservative of the conservative Anglo-Saxon race. We will endure a great deal before we will suffer changes to be made in our habits. Wierd forms remain in our government for years: witness the electoral college. The constitution is more difficult to change than ordinary law, but even it has not escaped recently. Not only do we see congress sending forth a deluge of new laws, but new amendments to the constitution are coming faster than at any time since the Civil War.

But a most dramatic thing has happened under our very eyes which seems not to be portrayed in the laws of the land. In Europe for over a century labor unions have been much more powerful than they have been in our nation. America has lagged behind the rest by almost a century in its recognition of labor unions. All at once the labor leaders are bewildered, and sit up figuratively and rub their eyes. Are they dreaming? It cannot be! They are taken into partnership with the government, loaded with favors, and their fondest dreams become realities before their eyes. America has suddenly in six short weeks gone farther than the rest of the world in a century!

There is no movement on record more startling unless it be the rapid changes that took place in the first French Revolution or those that saw the end of the Tsar's regime in Russia. In France of that time the entire traditions and laws of centuries were wiped out in one night. In Russia the imperial government collapsed at one blow. Truly we are witnessing another revolution!

What means this lightning-like rapidity of change? What does it presage to the man in the street? What can he hope for? What do these revolutionary movements indicate for the future? They indicate that men are not satisfied with the economic and social changes that have taken place and are trying to right them. It indicates that further revolutionary changes are about to take place and that men are afraid of the results that may come from them.

That our old economic system has received a death blow is so trite a fact that we almost turn away when people discuss it. And yet that is only one part of what has happened. Social and moral conditions always follow the downward path in the wake of economic depression. Financial loss leads to despair: when our income vanishes, we will do many things that ordinarily we would not do. Despair leads to immorality: the young man who is jilted turns to drink for solace.

But what of the winter of our despair? Is it coming to an end? Are the measures that have been taken bringing back the golden age of 1929? Or are we not rather being introduced into a new age that gives us fears that deaden? The worn-out politician, disillusioned in his day of power, Calvin Coolidge, said that a new day had dawned that struck terror to his heart, a day with which he was unfamiliar, a day which he could not understand. He was glad to leave the new problems to other people to solve: men of the new day.

Three surveys have been taken of the attitude of the people toward the new era which is being crystallized for us by the new recovery laws. One was made by the friends of the administration at Washington. It covered the industrial field and found that though the picture still had its shadows the darkness was silver-edged. Much there was to give encouragement. The people were more cheerful, to say the least. A new confidence was evident throughout the land.

Another survey was made by big business corporations. They found things not so cheerful as the former survey; but still there was much encouragement in the industrial horizon. The blackest clouds had drifted away, though the sky was far from clear.

The other survey was made by a group of people who wanted to find out how the people of the city of Washington felt about the new "recovery program." The whole thing was pessimism and gloom. The people who could see things close at hand could not see the light in the dark shadows. No man is hero to his valet, and so people there would be bound to be pessimistic.

But we made our own survey this summer. You can find out what you want to find. But we tried to understand as far as possible just what was happening. Everywhere the question came to us: What of the NRA? Is it a good thing for us to support, or is it the "mark of the beast"? My answer is no. I do not believe it is the "mark of the beast." It indicates things that are yet to take place.

In six weeks we have made more radical changes than were made in Europe in a century. Can they last? Will they stay changed? Or will there be a reaction? If we can place any reliance on the facts of history, we can be certain that there will be a reaction. None of us likes to make radical changes. Revolution and reaction cause strife and commotion.

What should be our attitude? That should be the attitude of the Christian in all days. "Ye are the children of the light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness." We should not be frightened by ghosts! There are no such things.

What does the Apostle mean in his statement here quoted? Does he mean that we should be prying into every nook and corner of apocalyptic prophecy to be sure that we understand it so that we will not be taken unawares? Are we to be held accountable for our understanding of beasts, men on horseback, and scarlet women on wierd beasts? Are we supposed to be able to comprehend to the uttermost all the dark sayings that sages have pressed upon us? Or are we rather not to be comforted by assurances of real promises of God? Are we not rather to rest on that word of prophecy made more sure that shines as a light to brighten our path to the coming of the Lord? The simple clear statements of the Scripture are more satisfying to the peace of mind. Those lovely old truths are so much more to the one who is weary of the struggle of existence with this cruel world.

Let the Apostle explain himself: "Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. . . But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him. . . See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men. Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you . . . And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. . . The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen."—1 Thess. 5.

The Sons of God

By George B. Alldridge

"Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered."—Hebrews 5:8.

JESUS never misrepresented nor exaggerated facts. Among all the sayings of the world's wise men and philosophers the testimony of Jesus stands preeminently at the head of the list. The times in which we live or the customs, however they may change, cannot change in any way the words which He uttered and are written "even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word."—Luke 1:2.

Even His enemies bore this testimony. "The officers answered, Never man spake like this man."—John 7:46. And in Matthew 7:29, "For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes." Jesus, speaking of His own words, said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."—Matt. 24:35. Upon another occasion He said, "For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Note the verse which follows, showing the thought He had in mind. "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:18, 19.

In the face of these testimonies from the lips of Jesus, it surely behooves us, who claim by faith and obedience to be sons of God, to give heed to His solemn words of warning and to remember Peter's words, "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved (read verse ten), what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?"—2 Peter 3:11.

One of the most searching texts of the Bible are these words of Jesus, "For many are called, but few are chosen."—Matt. 22:14. In that wonderful parable of the laborers in the vineyard, He says, "So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen." So Jesus points out that God has been calling men from the first hour until the present hour, the eleventh. Each laborer was to receive a penny a day. This penny to my mind represents the promises of God, or as Paul states it, "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:29.

We are called as laborers in the Lord's vineyard, God having previously agreed at the time we were hired to pay us wages, which Jesus clarifies in John 4:35, 36: "Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together."

Again Jesus said, "For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish."—Luke 14:28-30. Let me repeat, "For many are called, but few are chosen."

It is a solemn and serious thing to enter into covenant relations with God.

You recall Paul's words to the church at Corinth: "We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain. (For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the day of salvation)."—2 Cor. 6:1, 2.

Now see how beautifully this works out: "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." This is how it can be done: "Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life: that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain."—Phil. 2:12-16.

Some one may ask, "How does God work in me to will and to do of His good pleasure?"

I always like to answer questions from the good Word of God, since then I feel it is not I, but God, who is speaking. "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus Christ our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: where-by are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."—2 Peter 1:2-4.

The following verses tell us how to attain unto this. God does the multiplying; we are to do the adding. It is a singular fact that sin at first in its action upon the human mind is a slow development. Pride and disobedience lead eventually to depravity and estrangement from God. Pope's well known lines make this clear.

"Of all the causes, which conspire to blind
Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
Is pride: the never failing vice of fools." (OVER)

Jesus is our example if we are desirous of winning the "crown of life." His character was perfect. The two traits which stand out the most prominently are humility and obedience.

Somebody said, "The Old Testament was written that we who are living in the days of the New Testament might understand it."

How true Romans 15:4 then is, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." This chapter reveals God as the source of patience, consolation, and hope. Hence, then, these graces of the Spirit, if they abide in our hearts, are from God through study, knowledge acquired, and putting it into daily practice, until our lives conform to these divine principles.

How true Jesus' words are today: "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." But, thank God, He also said these comforting words: "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

Brethren, the end is not far off now. A few days ago my daughter and I visited a Bible depot where the Scriptures are exhibited in every known tongue, even the New Testament in the Scotch dialect of Bobby Burns. How this thrills my heart as I recall Jesus' words, "And the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

Through Isaiah God said, "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people."

Among the most important state papers of modern times are the Preamble and the Articles of Confederation issued by Francis of Germany, Frederic William of Prussia, and Alexander of Russia, signed and published at Paris in the year 1815, and solemnly recognizing before Europe and the world the religion of Jesus Christ as the only true basis of all political relations and the only directory for the nations of the earth. Whatever may have been the motives of these distinguished kings in issuing it, it is a noble testimony to the power of Christian principles upon states and governments. Considering the sources from which it came, a stronger and more emphatic tribute to the principles of Christianity as the only true principles of government and the only foundation of national prosperity cannot be expected nor demanded. It is an interesting fact that these three great monarchs, ruling over more than seventy millions of people, then amid the clashing and din of war, should assemble in secret conclave and pay such a tribute to the Bible.

I will conclude by quoting Bishop Blomfield from a sermon upon this text, "Drawn away of his own lust, and enticed."—James 1:14.

"Look well to this, ye who venture within the precincts of forbidden pleasure, under a notion that your sin, if any, is but a little one, and that your religious principles will not be seriously impaired. Temptation wins upon the soul by secret and almost insensible gradations. A first acquaintance with sin is by degrees improved into familiarity, the heart's aversion to it is lessened, and at length is changed to love. Our first and most earnest prayer then ought to be, 'Lead us not into Temptation.'

"Great as is the believer's privilege of asking for grace to support him under all the trials of his faith, when they come upon him, it is still a more blessed thing to be preserved from falling into temptation by God's preventing grace, to which indeed is to be ascribed that all men are not tempted to the worst sins, and that the world is not a scene of wickedness and disorder. . . . Secure yourselves against temptations by putting away every habit which may lead to forgetfulness of God. Lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset you—the more easily from its apparent insignificance—and run with patience the race set before you, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith."

---

"PREPARE WAR, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near."—Joel.

"The nations were angry, and thy wrath is come: and the time of the dead that they should be judged."—John.

"Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity."—Jesus.

"Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."—Jesus.

"Gather them (the kings and their armies) together to battle against that great day of God Almighty."—John.

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom."—Daniel.

Says a graphic writer: "The exuberant exclamation of the soldier of Napoleon's army when crossing the Alps seems likely to be realized. Looking back from a lofty height whence he could see the immense army filing and defiling up the mountain sides, surrounded on every side by lofty mountain peaks and overhanging crags, he could contain himself no longer, but stepping aside from his comrades he shouted in thunder tones, 'ATTENTION THE UNIVERSE! Wheel by kingdoms!' What was thus spoken in ecstatic rapture seems on the eve of fulfillment as we behold in the old world the marshalling of forces never before dreamed of for number and gigantic armament, and hear the low rumbling of distant armies taking their appointed places for the last great conflict of the ages."

The brain reels and the heart sickens as we contemplate its horrors. The murmurings of discontent whisper its coming. The deep undertone of the wailing masses sounds the funeral dirge of earthly kingdoms as it bubbles, seethes, and boils. The military dam which has kept the pent-up waters of discontent from bursting their barriers will soon give way and thrones and dominions be engulfed in one common maelstrom of destruction. The scepter of the man of sin will be broken. The triple crown will fall from the brow of Antichrist.

The Crescent wanes, to rise no more. "The bloody Turk" goes forth on his last insane mission of slaughter and comes "to his end" with none to "help him" (Daniel 11:43). The rich oppressors weep and howl as their miseries come upon them (James 5:1-9). Revolution serves as the pay-car of retribution while it runs over the rails of social vengeance with anarchy acting as engineer. O God! What a scene that will be! Roaring cannons, bursting bombs, rattling rifles, clashing swords, burning cities, and contesting armies all over the earth!—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the writings of H. W. Bowman.

SINCE biology is the science of life, let us see what it may be able to teach us concerning the possibility of prolonging life eternally. The biologists teach us that life depends upon the ability of an organism to correspond with its environment. The individual that can adjust itself to the most changes in environment will live the longest. This leads us to Herbert Spencer's statement of the conditions of immortality from the scientific viewpoint.

He said, "Perfect correspondence would be perfect life. Were there no changes in the environment but such as the organism had adapted changes to meet, and were it never to fail in the efficiency with which it met them, there would be eternal existence and eternal knowledge." It follows that eternal life requires a perfect and changeless environment and a perfect and changeless organism in perfect and endless correspondence with each other.

There already exists a perfect and changeless environment—the spiritual realm in which God dwells. But man is not a perfect and changeless organism—and his nature is not essentially spiritual. Furthermore, this earth, which is his only natural habitat, is not a perfect and changeless environment in its present state. Therefore, the conditions of immortality cannot be fulfilled on the earth as constituted at present. A radical change of both organism and environment is required.

But, thank God, the needed changes have been promised! They are to occur at the second coming of Christ. Mankind is to be changed to conform to the glorified Lord. Read 1 Corinthians 15:42-44, 51-53; Philippians 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:2. This earth is to be changed, re-created, and restored to its Edenic state. Read Psalm 102:26; 2 Peter 3:13; Revelation 21:1-4. Best of all, it is expressly declared in Revelation 21:3 that God and man are to dwell together in the New Jerusalem. The perfect organism will have found its perfect environment.

Science and Scriptures agree in making immortality conditional. Science says: "If I am to inherit eternal life, I must cultivate a correspondence with the Eternal." The Bible says: "This enduring Life is to know thee as the only true God, and thy Messenger, Jesus, as the Christ." John 1:1, 12; 3:16, 36; 1 John 4:9; 5:11, 12, unite in teaching us that in order to have eternal life we must become sons of God through faith in His Son Jesus Christ.—World's Crisis.

THE BRIDGE OF THE WORLD

By Sidney Jackson

---

WHEN I was a child, many passages of Scripture seemed confusing. As I grew, some of them gradually clarified themselves. One of the several puzzles was an explanation of the numerous battles in the Old Testament. I could not understand why, when fighting was wrong, there should have been so much war with God's people Israel. I believe that there may yet be many who feel the same way about the question of "Why so much warfare?"

One reason for their troubles, though a minor reason, was that the followers of Moses moved into a land already somewhat settled and proceeded to establish their homes. They allotted certain pieces of land to certain tribes without considering that this land was already the home of other people. Thus Dan and his children found that they were in constant strife with the people already in their portion of the country in southwestern Palestine, and they were forced to move to the very northern part of the land to find a place of peace. It was not enough that these various peoples were already in the land; they had to be descendants of the same family as the Chosen People, but not the ones in line for the promised inheritance. Thus many of them had a grievance against the Israelites brought down through the generations.

It is true that Abraham had little or no trouble with these same people. However, Abraham had not an army of people expecting to possess the whole of the land, but rather a few who were satisfied with only enough room for their simple needs. Thus they but seldom crowded each other.

While these battles with the Ammonites, the Edomites, the Canaanites, and others were frequent, yet they were of minor importance when compared with the battles against the would-be rulers of the world.

In considering the question of warfare in Palestine many of the influences are as important today as they were three thousand years ago. Refer to the map of the Promised Land in your Bible, and you will find the following to be the borders of the country in question: to the north, Europe, also partially known; to the east and southeast, nothing but desert country permitting little or no travel; while to the southwest lay the fertile valley of the Nile and Egypt; the western border was the shore of the Mediterranean Sea.

Early history dealt with only a small portion of the world. The only avenue of travel between the great nations of the north and the wealth of the Nile valley lay through the Promised Land. This meant that traders, travelers, and armies moving between these great nations used this little strip of country fifty miles wide and one hundred fifty miles long as their highway. Consequently, the control of this natural bridge between the nations was of vast importance both politically and economically. It is not strange, therefore, that it should have been of first importance to all of the powers of the earth. The battle for control differed from the defense of their homes by the occupants of the land, for it meant the armored drive of trained soldiers seeking world supremacy.

This little territory, no larger than some counties to be found in the United States, is well sprinkled with mountains, deep valleys, spots of desert and others of tropical fertility, and has a wider variety of climate than any other piece of land to be found in the world. Together with these climatic differences we find the widest variety of flora, animals, and birds to be found in so small a natural area.

Due to its strategic geographical location, the Promised Land was the logical home of the chosen people of God to rule the world. Due to the same geographical influences, together with the climatic variations, flora, animals, and birds, this tiny country is today and will be in the future the logical laboratory of the world for working out its various problems. Because of these valuable assets it is even today, with our larger knowledge of the world, the logical location for the capital of the world and the home of God's chosen people. Thus, clear reason and logic prove that the great Ruler and His aides, when they rule the earth, will completely possess and control the "Bridge of the World."

"NONE OTHER NAME"

By Gerald Lee Cooper

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

THE above words were spoken by Peter to the Jews and were brought about by the following circumstances.

After the apostles had been given the gift of the Holy Spirit, we find Peter and John going to the temple to worship. As they passed through the gate called Beautiful, a man who had been crippled from his birth asked them for alms. Peter, looking upon him, spoke the words so familiar to most of us: "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."—Acts 3:6. Can you imagine the feelings of this man as he jumped and ran into the temple praising God? Of course, he was recognized by those who had seen and helped him day after day, and numerous questions were asked. When the questioners were told of Peter and John, they besieged them and began to marvel at their power.

We see Peter then preaching to them. "Why do you marvel at us? We have done nothing. It is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of your fathers, who has done this through His Son, who was crucified by you a short time ago. It was faith in the name of Jesus Christ that saved this man." He went on then and exhorted them to repent, have faith, and receive remission of their sins.

Now this displeased the Sadducees very much, because they thought that if Peter and John gained favor among the people they would lose some of their leadership. So they had Peter and John arrested and commanded them to preach no more in the name of Jesus. Then it was that Peter spoke the words of our text.

You will notice that Peter said: "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." There was no other name under heaven that could save the man.

In Acts 2:38 we are told: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." We baptize yet today in the name of the Lord Jesus, realizing that it is the only name that will save us.

We hear many people today who believe that they can save themselves with their moral goodness. Their favorite excuse is: "I'm as good as that one or this one in the church. I believe in God and live right to the best of my ability." They do not realize that God has commanded that nothing can save man except belief in and accepting the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth.

Another thing I have noticed is that many do not, apparently, believe in Jesus' saving power, but rather in the person who baptized them. Some people will put off baptism until a certain minister can find it convenient to perform the baptismal rites. This is a grave mistake, for it matters not who baptizes us, that is, if the person is designated to do such; the thing is to be baptized into Jesus' saving name.

May I say to those of us who have already been baptized that we should reverence the name of Jesus more and more, for it is our only salvation. Do you who have not yet been baptized realize that there is "none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved," except that of Jesus?

"Take the name of Jesus with you,
Child of sorrow and of woe,
It will joy and comfort give you,
Take it, then, where'er you go."

THERE is no better time to begin to tithe than a time of business depression. Then it takes both faith and courage. If tithing were a sure thing, like buying a five dollar bill for four dollars, it would have no more moral value than any other form of bargain hunting. Everybody would tithe; the man most careful to pay the tenth might be the most avaricious man in town. That is not the tithing God has promised to bless. Tithing is a sure thing, and usually it leads to material betterment. But not always; and never in any magical or non-moral way.

The law of the tithe is not a law for times and seasons. It does not rest on circumstances, whether good or bad. The true Christian will begin to obey it as soon as he realizes that it is a law and that it is for his guidance and his good.

All true enough; nevertheless, there are special reasons and special values attached to tithing in hard times.

It is easy enough to thank God for pleasant experiences, though we know that often they may be spiritually barren. It is not so easy to be thankful for adversity, though difficulties and disappointments in our material affairs can provide the finest of disciplines.

Listen to Habakkuk the Prophet:

“For though the fig tree shall not flourish,
Neither shall fruit be in the vines;
The labor of the olive shall fail;
And the fields shall yield no food;
The flock shall be cut off from the fold,
And there shall be no herd in the stalls:
Yet will I rejoice in the Lord,
I will joy in the God of my salvation.”

The tither who can make the Prophet's words his own will not be deceived by prosperity, if and when it comes.

Prosperity is quite likely to come to the tither; remember that. Somebody has counted the Bible's references to giving. They total seventy-two. And forty-eight “show open promise of God's blessing to the giver.”

During a spell of hard times a bank auditor examining the books of many Toronto business houses found entries in the books of John MacDonald and Company that showed the firm was setting aside a tenth of its profits for religious and philanthropic work. He closed his audit and recommended to the bank that the MacDonald house should have all the credit it desired. It was the beginning of a new prosperity.

John H. Converse, when president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, was a tither who believed in doing more in hard times. One year, when his business was less profitable than usual, he gave forty thousand dollars to religious and charitable work.

It is known and admitted that not everybody gets ahead financially by tithing. Why should he? “Getting ahead” may be a curse. A tithing business man puts the fact thus:

“There are other successes than money ones. I've got something more than money out of tithing; it's given me happiness and contentment that I never could have bought. Suppose some of the New England families who tithed did not succeed financially? Could science measure the contentment which these families might have through knowing that God was a partner in home affairs?”

A man who is almost at the end of his resources will find his time of stress a good time to make new study of his life.

The head of a great business did this once when he was worse than bankrupt. One day he opened his Bible at Genesis 28:22, drew a pencil mark around the verse, and said, “From this moment on, as long as I live, of all that God gives me I will give Him one tenth.” Since then he has prospered far beyond the ordinary. But what is more, he has made “hundreds of investments for human betterment and to advance righteousness on earth.” The feeling that one can thus be a colaborer with God is the greatest incentive to true living which man can have. It can make one's sunset days his best days.—Tithing Bulletin issued by The Layman Company.

LET'S AGREE ON SOMETHING

A LITTLE article in The World's Crisis with the above heading has drawn my attention. When Adventists agreed on certain great doctrines which they believed should be made specially prominent at this time because they had for a long time been neglected or rejected altogether, they also agreed to allow liberty of opinion on other subjects which do not necessarily conflict with those referred to above. As long as they continued in this attitude toward one another, they got along well together and, though comparatively few in number, they gave a powerful testimony concerning the fulfilled and fulfilling signs of Christ's early coming and the necessity for this in order to consummate His redemptive work and provide endless life for otherwise perishing humanity.

When, however, they departed from this tolerant attitude and began to employ as tests of fellowship certain things contained in creeds of other bodies of Bible believers which have no direct connection with the main Adventist positions, they introduced an element of weakness into their own special work. I know a man who had been an Adventist minister, writer, editor, and Bible class teacher for more than forty years, and who, during that whole period, had held some views concerning present security in Christ and conditions in the new earth different from those of many other Adventists without interfering with his work among them, but who was finally practically dis-fellowshipped because he could not help but believe that John 5:24 was literally and verbally true and therefore that the life into which believers pass at regeneration would last forever, even though it might be suspended for a while; also, that the seventy-second Psalm, Isaiah 65:17-23, and similar scriptures required a literal fulfillment in every particular.

Does it not seem too bad that the spirit of toleration which has existed among Adventists on the subjects of preexistence and the “thousand years” could not have been extended or rather continued to those other views mentioned above?

“Let us agree on something.” Yes, let us agree to be tolerant to whatever does not conflict with our faith in our Lord Jesus Christ as the “only begotten Son of God,” His atoning death and resurrection whereby He obtained new and endless life for otherwise perishing mankind, and in His second coming to consummate His redeeming work and establish His kingdom under the whole heavens in the new earth.

But we could not and should not attempt to labor with those who either privately or publicly express contempt or indifference for those things which are absolutely essential to true Adventism.—W. R. Young in The World's Crisis.

THE TREES OF THE LORD

eternal life to as many as God has given him."

On account of their antiquity the cedars have been called the "trees of the Lord," and this gives rise to the simile, "As the days of a tree are the days of my people." In the search of woodland scenery which has been made through the dim vistas of past geological epochs there has been revealed a background in which arborescent fossils are traceable to this ancient tree. They were the same in that far away day when nature seemed to delight in the exercise of her power and to manifest her strength in the production of those giants of the forest. They are indeed monuments to the unchangeableness of the "Ancient of days."

People of this age are familiar with the description of the cedars of Lebanon. They are favorably mentioned in the Bible, and poets have sung their praise so long that they have become the most renowned natural monuments in the world. They crowned the rugged hills of Lebanon with their beauty and loveliness for untold centuries; but the ravages of the woodman's ax have laid them low, and the hillsides are stripped of their beauty.

Only a few scattered groves remain to remind us of their beauty and excellency. The one at Kedisha is a magnificent relic of its kind. Though scarred and hoary with the elements for hundreds of years, their huge trunks still hold aloft and spread their boughs, loaded with rich emerald foliage. They are held in venerated esteem by the Arabs, who in their superstition attribute to them not only a vegetative power, but an instinct by means of which they can understand and provide for the recurring changes of the weather. Under the shelter of those templed bowers the natives meet annually in June and observe mass.

It is a unique and hallowed spot. At an elevation of six thousand feet they stand with their roots still firmly clinging to Lebanon's breast, their trunks scarred by lightning stroke and with the snows of Lebanon mantling their foliage, while at their base earth's mightiest forces lie in silence. Who could look upon them in their solitude and not recall the Psalmist's words? "The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon which he hath planted."

The desolation which has been spread over those mighty forests has left only a few groves as reminders of the inevitable destiny of all temporal objects, that man himself is doomed to be cut down and waste away. But as there is hope that if a tree be cut down it will sprout up again, so also there is hope for man that if he die he will live again. As the cedar clings to the mountain with strength, so likewise the Christian must cling, rooted and grounded firmly to the "Rock of Ages" through storm as well as in calm with the same firmness of faith and hope in the dark and sad hours of adversity as in the sunshine of joyous seasons of prosperity.

Change is stamped upon all things earthly and upon the earth itself. Long before the recorded dates of antiquity huge forests flourished; but they were, by some unseen and infinite power, laid low and buried beneath hundreds of feet of earth and have been transformed into coal. This has proved to be a wise provision for man's benefit by Him who sees the end of His works from the beginning.

By the mouth of His holy prophets He has told us of another and better change for both the earth and its inhabitants. He has promised "a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—2 Peter 3:13. In Isaiah 66:22 we read, "For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord." "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." Then the glory and grandeur of Lebanon will be returned to it, and her cedars will renew their beauty and loveliness and shed their fragrance abroad.

Many stately cedars of Lebanon were used in the construction of Solomon's temple which was dedicated to the worship of Jehovah. Only the very best trees were selected, cut, hewed, and fitted to fill some specific place in that magnificent structure, which upon its completion was filled with the glory of God. In beauty and grandeur it excelled all other temples of worship, but because of Israel's sins and their turning from God that building was destroyed. Though it lies in ruins, its history serves as a reminder that the great Architect is employing a similar method in selection, shaping, and fitting timbers for a greater and far more glorious temple which will endure through the eternal years.

As the material for that ancient building was prepared in distant and neighboring quarries and forests and transported to Zion's holy mount, so also the materials for another temple are being chosen and prepared in all lands. They are being laid aside one by one, some on the hillside, some in the valley, and some in the sea. There they will remain till the trumpet will call them forth as imperishable materials to be used in the construction of the "house not made with hands." As at the erection of the former temple all material was fitted into its proper place "without the sound of a hammer," so also all material for the new will be assembled and given its setting without the least element of discord. Over all will be the "chief corner stone."

The glory of Solomon's temple, grand and brilliant as it was, will fade into insignificance in comparison with the new temple. It will never fall nor crumble into decay. Its timbers are of "The Trees of the Lord," and the foundations are of twelve kinds of precious stones, "more precious than gold, yea, than much fine gold." It will endure eternally as a perfect specimen of God's infinite wisdom, power, and skill.

KOKOMO BEREANS

THE senior Berean class of the Church of God, Kokomo, Indiana, held its annual business meeting August 23, 1933, at 907 South Waugh Street.

The officers elected were: Charles Martin, president; Alton Shaw, vice president; Berniece Shaw, secretary; Mary Harvey, treasurer; and Ellen Prichard, corresponding secretary.

A new method of teaching was discussed. The adviser, D. G. Harvey, is to have charge over all teaching. He will teach at least one Sunday night each month. He has the power to appoint some one for each of the other Sundays.

The meeting was closed by repeating the Berean benediction.

Ellen Prichard, Corresponding Secretary.

READING THE SCRIPTURES

NOT eloquence, but truth, is to be sought in the holy Scriptures, every part of which must be read with the same spirit by which it was written. In these, and all other books, it is improvement in holiness, not pleasure in the subtlety of thought, or the accuracy of expression, that must be principally regarded. We ought to read those parts that are simple and devout with the same affection and delight as those of high speculation, or profound erudition. Whatever book thou readest, suffer not thy mind to be influenced by the character of the writer, whether his literary accomplishments be great or small. Let thy only motive to read be the love of truth; and, instead of inquiring who it is that writes, give all thy attention to the nature of what is written. Men pass away like the shadows of the morning; but “the word of the Lord endureth for ever”: and that Word, without respect of persons, in ways infinitely various, speaketh unto all.

The profitable reading of the holy Scriptures is frequently interrupted by a vain curiosity which prompts us to examine, discuss, and labor to comprehend those parts that should be meekly and submissively accepted. But to derive spiritual improvement from reading, we must read with humility, simplicity, and faith; and not affect the reputation of profound learning.

WHO IS MY BROTHER?

Must I my brother keep,
And share his pains and toils,
And weep with those that weep,
And smile with those that smile;
And act to each a brother's part,
And feel his sorrows in my heart?

Must I his burden bear
As though it were my own,
And do as I would care
Should to myself be done;
And faithful to his interests prove,
And as myself my neighbor love?

Must I reprove his sin,
Must I partake his grief,
And kindly enter in
And minister relief—
The naked clothe, the hungry feed,
And love him, not in word, but deed?

Then, Jesus, at Thy feet
A student let me be,
And learn, as it is meet,
My duty, Lord, of Thee;
For Thou didst come on mercy's plan,
And all Thy life was love to man.

Oh! make me as Thou art,
Thy spirit, Lord, bestow—
The kind and gentle heart,
That feels another's woe;
That thus I may be like my Head,
And in my Savior's footsteps tread.

JOHN WESLEY gave the following Christian advice: “Condemn no man for not thinking as you do. Let every one enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment. Since every man must give an account of himself to God, abhor every approach in any kind of degree to the spirit of persecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force a man into it. If love will not compel him to come, leave him to God, the Judge of all.”

THE BOY SAUL

GOOD MORNING, boys and girls. With the beginning of the new quarter, October 1, we shall have a new subject to study, one subject through the entire three months. But we will not tire of it, because it concerns one of the most active and most interesting persons that ever lived—Saul, better known to us as Paul, the greatest preacher the world has ever seen excepting Jesus our Savior.

As a boy he went by the name of Saul, and we shall call him that in today's lesson. Let's try and get a clear picture in mind of his boyhood. First, the city in which he was born—Tarsus. All of you turn to your maps in the back of your Bibles or in Father's Bible atlas. The smaller ones may get Mother to help you. Find the map that shows the journeys of the Apostle Paul.

Notice that the Mediterranean, or “Great,” Sea makes an unevenly rounded shore line. Up in the northeast elbow of the sea, in the province of Cilicia in Asia Minor, lies the city of Tarsus. Notice also its location in regard to Jerusalem in the country of Palestine. Tarsus is quite a distance north and east of Jerusalem, isn't it? Look at your map long enough and often enough so that you will always know just where to look for Tarsus.

Asia Minor looks quite large, but you could drop it down inside our own state of Texas and have more than enough room to walk around the outside. In fact, it is only about two thirds as large. Notice that, you Texas boys and girls. Now look up in your encyclopedia and find out all you can about Tarsus. You will understand Saul's life better if you know something about the city where he was born. You know, one's birthplace usually has a decided effect upon one's life.

You will learn that Tarsus was the capital of Cilicia, was about twelve miles inland from the coast, and was at that time one of the leading cities of the Roman world. It was a busy city, one where many people met to trade, and so we know that Saul even in his boyhood days became acquainted with many folk and liked them. Can you see him talking to strangers from distant lands, learning how other people lived, what they thought, what they hoped for, and what they did?

Next, we shall learn something about Saul's home. We know his father was a Roman citizen, though of Jewish blood. In those days it meant much to be a Roman citizen, because the great majority of men were held as slaves to the great Roman Empire. But not Saul's father. You will learn how this helped Saul in his work when he was grown up.

His father also must have been a rich man, for later on he sent his son to Jerusalem to the school of the best teacher of that time—Gamaliel. Saul's first education, however, was received at home and at the synagogue school, and his text-book was the Old Testament. Think of that, studying only the Old Testament! But surely that was enough, for he would get to be a good reader by the time he could pronounce all those hard words. He would know most of the history up to that time, and he would have beautiful poetry to learn in the Psalms.

Saul's parents were very particular people. They didn't let him run the streets and learn mischief. He had time to play, of course, but he must get his lessons first, and that is one reason he grew to be such a great man. His parents wanted him to be a rabbi, which is a Jewish minister, you know.

When a Jewish boy got to be thirteen years of age, he was considered a man and must learn a trade, no matter how educated he was. You all know, I'm sure, what trade Saul learned, and know it helped him a great deal all his life.

Now, my Bible Scrapbook boys and girls, we are going to start in again on our scrapbook work, and we hope many more will join our club. Those of you who have plenty of room in your first scrapbooks may use them; the others may get any good notebook.

Write at the top, “The Life of the Apostle Paul.” Now draw a little outline of the Mediterranean Sea and place a star where Tarsus is, writing the name over it. Then write a little story about the city and about Saul's home; tell about his schooling, his text-book, and teachers. Now draw Saul making a tent.

Last, draw a picture of a little boy studying at the knee of his father, with a scroll in his lap. You know, their books were in the form of scrolls. If you would rather, paste the picture of Saul as a boy which your Sunday school teacher will give you. Or you can get pictures for the whole quarter for four cents from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill. I wonder if any of you have started to make a picture roll. It's lots of fun and helps you, too.

And now, good-bye, till next week.

SAUL IN TARSUS

Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4-7; Philippians 3:3-6

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:9-16

GOLDEN TEXT

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Timothy 2:15.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Paul's Training for Leadership.

Aim: To teach the pupil the value of a scriptural education for Christian service.

Basic Truth: "From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation."—2 Tim. 3:15.

I. Paul's Education and Zeal. (Acts 21:29; 22:3.) Paul's life was an open book that all men might freely read. There was nothing dishonorable in it. From a human standpoint he was proud of his Jewish origin. His education had been carried on under the most able teacher of the day. Because of natural inclination coupled with the influences that had surrounded him in youth, he was exceedingly zealous in his efforts to advance what he believed to be the cause of God.

II. Paul's Roman Citizenship. (Acts 22:27, 28.) Without denying his obligation to his own people, Paul apparently found satisfaction in knowing himself to be a Roman citizen by birth. His sense of loyalty to the government that granted him its protection and freedom is expressed in Romans 13:1-7, where he asserts that the civil officers of the Roman Government were ministers of God at whose hands no righteous man had anything to fear. Loyalty to the government of which he was a citizen was one of the elements of character that contributed to his success as a missionary in the Roman Empire.

III. Paul's Life and Hope. (Acts 26:4-7; Phil. 3:3-6.) From boyhood Paul had been true to the standards he had been taught, which were the highest rules of conduct known to the Jews of his day. He was blameless as far as observation of the Mosaic law was concerned. He was equally blameless before the Roman law. He had lived throughout his career before his conversion quite as moral and lawful a life as he did thereafter. His only fault had been the result of education which had not taught him the spirit but only the letter of the requirements laid down by Moses. The consequence was that there was malice and murder in his heart even while he carefully kept the commandments which forbade the committing of such evil deeds. Only the gospel of Jesus Christ can cleanse the heart of sin.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Patriotism: The early career of Saul of Tarsus was actuated by a zeal to serve his family, his sect, his nation. Were he living today, he would be called a dutiful son, a religious zealot, a patriotic citizen. Not only did he serve his own nation faithfully, but he was clever enough to combine the religious and political views of the Jews with the militaristic and legal leadership of Rome, their overlord, in a way that gave him political and legal prestige with both groups. There are few men in our country who can say with Paul, "Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless." And yet we have many leaders of political and patriotic organizations who are pointed out to the youth of the land as ideals in patriotism. Is such idealism high enough?

Christian Patriotism: After his conversion to Christianity Paul's viewpoint of life seems to have changed. He still mentions his family, his tribe, his Roman citizenship, and his connection with the Pharisees. But instead of boasting of these associations, he says, "Those I counted loss for Christ." He has no rebuke for those who are good citizens, but he tries to show them a higher way.

Do the people in your community accept you as a leader in Christian affairs? Such leadership is a thing to be earnestly desired, not because of the distinction it lends to your name, nor yet because of the authority it gives, but because such position earnestly sought will cause you to try to live more nearly like the Christ pattern each day. The Christian leader is something more than a good citizen of his community. He is preparing himself for citizenship in the kingdom of God. Because of this the community should be able to say of him, "He is a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good friend, because he is a good Christian."—G. M. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Paul wrote a number of letters to different people and peoples, among them being this one to Timothy, whom he calls his dearly beloved son (2 Tim. 1:2). Timothy was not Paul's own son, but was his son in the faith (1 Tim. 1:2). This being the case, Paul was anxious that Timothy should be all that God would have him be; so he admonished him to study to the extent and in such a way as to be approved by the Father, so that he might not be ashamed and also that he might rightly divide the Scriptures.

Teachers, ministers, and every Christian, give diligence to this admonition and note the threefold purpose of study: first, to be approved of God; second, that we be not ashamed; and last, that all scriptures may be rightly interpreted.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Training Christian Leaders

The necessity for trained Christian leaders

cannot be over-emphasized. This does not always mean that a worldly education is necessary. Moses was educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Paul was instructed by the great teacher of his day, Gamaliel. Jesus, as far as we know, did not attend any school; and His apostles were poor, unlearned fishermen. If not all did have a worldly education, all did have an unusual knowledge of God's Word. All Christian leaders today should be trained in God's Word and should have a deep reverence for God and His work.

Worldly education can and should be a help. Worldly people must be reached first through the carnal; so if one can appeal to them by using correct English and by engaging in intelligent conversation, he should do so. This education should, however, be but a means to an end. It should never be used to exalt self, but to win to Christ. Paul, at Athens, made use of his knowledge of their religion; when in Crete, he quoted from their prophets; but to the Corinthians he wrote: "I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."—1 Cor. 2:1, 2. It is easy for us to see how Paul used his worldly wisdom to attract the attention of worldly people to himself so that he might lead them to Christ. He never used it as a display of self.

Above all a leader must know God's Word and be able to impart it to others. A teacher should never trust to inspiration to the neglect of preparation.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Early Life of Saul

We have been studying for the last quarter some of the great leaders of the Bible. Name some of them. For this quarter they have selected for our study one of the greatest characters found in the Bible. This man is Saul, or Paul, as he came to be later.

Saul was a Jew. He was very well educated, being taught by Gamaliel, one of the greatest teachers of that time. He believed and worshiped God, keeping the laws taught by the Jews. He was a Pharisee, a religious group of people who believed in the resurrection of the dead. He was a Roman citizen, living in the Roman Empire.

This gives you some idea of the early life of Saul as taken from various verses in the Bible given to us by Saul himself. He was what we would say a very important person, even before he became a Christian.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

KANSAS - OKLAHOMA

The Kansas-Oklahoma annual meeting will be held at Arkansas City, Kansas, from October 8 to October 16. Bro. Sydney Magaw will be with us at this time. We are a little late with our meeting this year, hoping that we might have our church building nearer completion than it now is. But we have decided to arrange to have the meeting in the church even though it is unfinished. We shall arrange things temporarily for a meeting there. The church is located at 707 North A Street.

We hope that our church people will all make a special effort to be present during this meeting. The Scriptures tell us that we should "meet often one with another . . . And so much the more, as we see the day approaching." I know it will mean a sacrifice this year for many, perhaps all; but we must realize how much has been sacrificed for us and how much we need the spiritual food that Bro. Magaw will bring to us. Brethren and sisters, come to the feast and receive strength for the trying days before us that we may be able to stand the test. Come in the spirit of Christ, and God will bless you.
Mrs. A. J. Chaplin, Sec.

HEDRICK, INDIANA

We read in God's Word, "And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

For ten years Bro. J. H. Anderson has been sowing the seed and preaching the gospel in Hedrick, and during the meeting of the past week God has given a bountiful harvest.

On Sunday, September 3, Bro. Anderson began a meeting at this place, and he has been teaching the gospel truths each night. His efforts have been well rewarded, twelve persons having taken their stand for Christ. Sunday afternoon a large crowd gathered on the banks of our beautiful Wabash River for the baptismal services. What a beautiful spot and what a glorious gathering as the following were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ: Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ora Beardsly, Mr. and Mrs. John Sweney, Mrs. Tenza Flint, Mrs. Eureka Wesley, Mr. George Jones, and Mr. Eugene Hurley. They were extended the right hand of fellowship at the evening services.

Wednesday evening brought the meeting to a close. It was well attended and very successful, Bro. Anderson giving us a wonderful sermon each night. We truly appreciate having a minister like Bro. Anderson, for we feel he is doing a great work here.

On Thursday morning we again had the privilege of being permitted to gather at the river's edge when another brother, Mr. Fenton Wesley, was baptized into Christ. We rejoice with Mrs. Wesley, who was among the twelve baptized Sunday afternoon, that her husband has also taken a stand for Christ and that they may continue in that straight and narrow way together.

May God bless the seed that has been sown in this place, that it may take root in yet other hearts and bring forth still another harvest.
Dora Hurley.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Hearty cooperation marked the first fall meeting of the Ministerial Association and the California Conference board at the MacLeod home in Pomona on Sunday afternoon, September 10. The chief topic of discussion was the program for the coming Quarterly Conference to be held the first Sunday in October in Pomona.

A committee consisting of Sr. Adamson, chairman; Sr. Emma C. Railsback; and Sr. Leta MacLeod was appointed to take charge of a demonstration lesson on primary Sunday school methods to be presented at the conference at the Sunday school hour at 9:30 a. m. All Sunday school teachers are especially urged to be present at that time; materials as well as methods will be demonstrated.

This is the first of a series of lessons planned for each conference period. The remainder of the program will be as follows: 10:30, worship hour under the direction of Bro. Adamson; communion, by Bro. S. G. Elton; 12:00, picnic dinner at Ganesha Park; 2:00 p. m., Bro. Lichty presiding; short talks by Bros. Lichty, Hatch, and Hammond, interspersed with songs; 2:30, sermon: "Signs of Christ's Coming: in Israel," by Bro. MacLeod; tea at Williams Street Chapel or at the MacLeod home; 6:30, Berean vesper service, conducted entirely by the young people of the church; and 7:30, sermon: "Signs of Christ's Coming: in the Church and in the World," by Sr. Emma C. Railsback.

Californians are requested to mark the date of October 1 on their calendars for this gathering and to be sure to attend. Sr. Grace Adamson was appointed to head a reception committee which should have charge of the register and of making people acquainted with one another. Other matters such as a program for the Ministerial Association meetings for the coming year, future demonstration lessons for the benefit of Sunday school teachers, and the possibilities of an exhibit at the Quarterly Conference were discussed.

The Los Angeles church celebrated a homecoming meeting for its delegation at the General Conference. Short talks were given by each of the members of the delegation and also by Bro. Calkins (who attended General Conference but was not a delegate). Much joy was expressed at the return home, and many hearty greetings were features of the occasion. The prospects for a very good year are evident on every hand with the return of the fall season.

Norman John MacLeod.

TEACHERS AND PARENTS

With the beginning of the new quarter on October 1, the work of the Bible Scrapbook Club will be resumed through the guidance of the Children's Page. The lessons on the life of the Apostle Paul furnish a fine opportunity for scrapbook work, not only for isolated children but also for Sunday school classes. The results of the children's work in this form will be of much benefit not only for the present but for the future, and will present a concrete example of their efforts for your own exhibits as well as conference exhibits.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

Bro. Richard LeCrone started his work as pastor of the Eden Valley church on Sunday, August 27. We are very glad to welcome Bro. LeCrone and feel assured that the work of the Lord will be kept advancing in this place.

The many friends of Bro. and Sr. Denchfield were glad to see them again on their return from their trip to the Oregon conference and various other places during their vacation. As they are leaving soon to begin work in another field, the people here gave them a farewell party in the basement of the church on Thursday evening, September 7. Bro. and Sr. Denchfield were presented with a set of silverware as a token of appreciation of past services. They take with them the best wishes of the entire congregation for success in their new field.

Mrs. Herman Ruhn, Clerk.

PASTORAL REACTIONS TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

We publish the following report which appeared in a recent issue of "Golden Rule News," published by M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, because it sets forth so clearly and so emphatically the financial condition of the National Bible Institution at this time, and recalls to mind the recent official report of the secretary.

"General Conference this year was the largest in its history, over 500 being registered, against 391 last year, the largest up to that time. Daily attendance at Bible classes from the very first day was far over last year's record. From Virginia to California and from Texas to Canada, came delegates from many states who formed an unusually representative group. There was an inspiring earnestness and enthusiasm pervading the whole gathering. During these depression years the attendance has been steadily growing. The fires of affliction have only welded our people the closer together, and in the face of unprecedented financial losses they are supporting the work more liberally than ever before. It is doubtful if there are many other denominations that have gone forward as much, proportionately, as have we in the face of the obstacles of the last four years.

"If you have not read the report of the conference in The Restitution Herald of August 22, turn to it now and read it in full. The financial crisis is not yet over, but it is not so acute as it was last year. The danger point just now is an obligation in notes payable of $6582.17 owing to a closed bank in Oregon. This bank is in the process of liquidation and payment may be demanded at any time. If the money for this can be raised in time, and the notes paid off, we shall be over the top, and in a much more secure financial situation than for several years. $1500 of this was pledged by the delegates in conference. If every member of the church would give just $1 immediately this debt could be cleared up at once, and the threat to our work averted. Can you help?

"But finance is not our only interest, though for some years it has stolen the show. Many other reports and activities were considered and acted upon which are worthy of your careful thought. It was a great conference."

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Miss Jeanne Lyon after a week's visit in Grand Rapids left on Sept. 14 en route to her home in the Southland.

Bro. Cecil Smead spent a couple of days with Grand Rapids church folk while on his way to Blanchard, where he is now doing ministerial work. Since he is president of the National Berean Society, our local Bereans were glad to have him at their regular meeting on Sept. 14. We pray for the success of the work at Blanchard.

Special effort has been put forth the past two weeks in organizing and developing our young men's class, ages 16 to 25. A noticeable pick-up in attendance is evident already, and the boys are planning some interesting activities for the fall and winter.

Monthly teachers' and officers' meetings for the Sunday school have been resumed, and a valuable session was held on Sept. 13.

Activity is in the air, and we are feeling the spirit and desire of service in all departments.
F. E. Siple, Pastor.

IOWA CONFERENCE

The Forty-sixth Annual Conference of the Iowa Church of God opened Tuesday evening, August 22, and closed Sunday evening, August 27, at Waterloo, with an attendance which exceeded that of last year's conference.

The lessons and sermons were very inspiring and much brotherly love was manifested throughout the week. Bible lessons were held each forenoon and afternoon by Bros. L. E. Conner and O. J. Allard (adult class); H. S. Hunt and J. Arthur Johnson (young people); Sr. Alta King (juniors); and Sr. Hester Berry (primary). The sermons each afternoon and evening were by Bros. J. W. Williams, L. E. Conner, and O. J. Allard.

The out-of-the-state speaker this year was Bro. L. E. Conner of Dixon, Ill. He is a very able speaker, and his services were enjoyed very much. The results of the election to the state conference board were as follows: H. S. Hunt, Clarksville, president; J. Arthur Johnson, Sac City, vice president; Mrs. W. H. Allard, Cedar Falls, treasurer; Mrs. J. M. Kiger, Marengo, recording secretary; Miss Esther Sealine, Stanhope, corresponding secretary.

There was much rejoicing over the six baptisms this year, three during conference: Robert Bowen, Maxwell; Dorothy Herrick, Waterloo; and Claude Williams, Gladbrook; and three the previous week on August 13 at Stanhope: Alton Berggren and Eldred Lundquist, Stanhope; and Melferd Sealine, Stratford. They are all young people, and it is good to see them take this stand early in life.

Bro. and Sr. Denchfield were among the several out-of-the-state visitors with whom we were so happy to form new acquaintanceships and renew some of the old.

We wish to thank all who helped in any way, whether by their presence or otherwise, to make this conference a successful one. And the glory be to the heavenly Father.

Esther Sealine, Cor. Sec.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Geo. Siple (for another); S. T. Shirley (for another); Almada Wertz; Mrs. Lottie Logan Pickerl (for another); Edna Hobart; Mrs. H. H. Kent; Mrs. W. L. Cusey; Mary E. Staley; Mrs. I. L. Wood; Rachel M. Whitcomb; B. F. Skeels (for another); Norman John MacLeod (for another).

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

Mrs. A. M. Siple; Ella M. Siple; Anna Mae Bottolfs; Mr. and Mrs. M. Feters; Mrs. Eva L. Page; Wm. H. and Regina C. Boyer.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

Is your program ready for "Golden Rule Home Day" on the first Sunday in October?

Under a new arrangement the church at Rockford, Ill., is enjoying the ministration of L. E. Conner on the second and fourth Sundays of each month.

We regret to learn of the death of Sr. Almada Pike of Sanborn, N. Y. Sr. Pike was a faithful and devout "mother in Israel" in the Niagara Falls congregation and will be greatly missed. We hope to meet her soon in the Master's presence.

Material is coming in already for our special "Gospel" number of The Herald. This will appear, the Lord willing, on the last day in October and will be filled to overflowing with the glad message of the kingdom of God. Plan to distribute extra copies among your friends.

Under the active leadership of their ministers the California brethren are pressing forward along several lines of endeavor that promise much for the future of the work in the Golden State. If you are planning to spend some time in California this next winter, be sure to send your name and address to us and we shall see that it reaches the body of believers closest to the place where you are going.

The Church of the Golden Rule, Cleveland, Ohio, celebrated the fifth anniversary of its dedication on Sunday, Sept. 10, 1933. The services continued throughout the day, dinner being served by the ladies of the church. In the morning Pastor M. W. Lyon spoke on "The Diamond Rule," and in the evening on "What Stephen Saw." The afternoon was given over to a Berean program.

An even dozen more dear ones have responded to Bro. Anderson's earnest appeal and have been baptized! Praise the Lord for His goodness to them in sending the gospel to them. One way in which we are deeply impressed with the many who have responded to the call this year is the fact that they are thoroughly informed concerning the facts of the gospel which they have come to believe. Theirs is an intelligent faith.

The board of the National Bible Institution deeply appreciates the splendid support it is receiving from the pastors of the various churches. C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Ont., and M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, in recent issues of their respective church bulletins review the work of the General Conference and appeal to their congregations to assist in bearing the financial obligations of the institution.

Official lists of accredited ministers have been received from Indiana, California, and from some unorganized states, but Iowa, Illinois, Virginia, Minnesota, Oregon, Washington, Nebraska, Texas, and others have not reported. We would like to publish the full list, with names and addresses, very soon. Will conference secretaries and ministers generally aid in this matter? It is to your interest.

After a brief vacation spent in Indiana, Levi Mick, whose wife is the matron of Golden Rule Home, has returned to Oregon and is again busily engaged in preparing for the comfort of the Golden Rule family.

Bro. R. A. Humphreys writes that the brethren of Bear, Ark., are expecting Eld. L. H. Shelton of Driggs, Ark., to begin a three-days' meeting at Bear on September 22. May this and all other similar efforts be blessed of God.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

Another church has awakened to the need of regular pastoral work. Blanchard, Mich., long a stronghold of the faith in that state, has for a number of years been in a more or less inactive condition. May God bless the church there under the leadership of Bro. C. A. Smead.

"Golden Rule Home Issue" will be the next. Many of those who attended General Conference this year visited this beautiful and comfortable home for older ones and came away enthusiastic concerning it. It is a place of security and comfort for those who are not able by reason of advancing age to care longer for themselves.

A special contribution has been made by Mrs. Lillian Dauntler of Dixon, Ill., for the special use of The Restitution Herald. We are not listing this amount ($25.00), under the regular contributions, as we will soon announce the particular object to which it will be devoted. The publishers greatly appreciate the gift at this time.

Another of the Training School graduates is making a change in pastorate this fall. Bro. Richard LeCrone, during the past year pastor at Lester Prairie, Minn., assumed the pastorate of the church at Eden Valley in the same state on the last Sunday in August. Bro. LeCrone possesses marked ability as a speaker, and we hope for his continued success.

We gather from the "Church of God Messenger," published by the pastor of the Fonthill, Ont., church, that a special effort is to be put on soon at Welland, Ont., at which time Adna Hoskins, pastor of the St. Cloud, Minn., Church of God will assist C. E. Randall of Fonthill. Welland is the county seat town some five miles from Fonthill and a promising place to begin a new work for God.

Norman John MacLeod, whose splendid historical studies were followed with so much profit at conference, submits to us an interesting list of recent books having to do with conditions in the Far East. These are not works on prophecy, but very valuable in the interpretation of prophecies relating to the East. The student of prophecy must be familiar with present and past conditions throughout the world if he is to understand God's wonderful messages to His people in these days.

LEARNING TO PRAY

COMPARATIVELY few people actually learn to pray. This does not mean that the ordinary person feels no desire to pray. It is sometimes said—and perhaps truthfully—that at times all men pray, that prayer is the universal expression of religion. But, while people as a whole may be moved to prayer in certain extremities, few devote their lives to the faithful practice of prayer. In other words, they fail to heed the scriptural admonitions to pray constantly.

Doubtless one great difficulty is that prayer is not developed from infancy. We learn to talk, but not to talk with God. It needs to be stressed that genuine proficiency in prayer comes as a result of faithful practice. Dr. E. M. Bounds, who was a mighty man in prayer and has left several books well worthy of consideration, urges that prayer is a sublime art—the sublimest of all arts—to be learned by diligent experience. He writes: “To graduate in the school of prayer is to master the whole course of a religious life. The first and last stages of holy living are crowned with praying. It is a life trade. The hindrances of prayer are the hindrances to a holy life. The conditions of praying are the conditions of righteousness, holiness and salvation. Prayer is a trade to be learned.”

A rich faith is essential for successful praying, as all Christian prayer is based upon our faith in God's care for us. We must believe not only that God is, but that He is a rewarder of them who diligently seek Him. This means that our faith must be childlike. We need to be overwhelmed by the conviction that God is our Father. How implicit was the trust of Jesus! How simple was His reasoning upon the great realities of life! An earthly father is good to his child; he will not give him a stone for bread, nor a serpent for fish. “If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father who is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?”

We need to study anew the promises of God concerning prayer. They are numerous and practically limitless in scope. Consider this one from the twenty-first chapter of Matthew: “And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.” A study of the prayer promises of the Lord's farewell discourse, given in the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth chapters of John, should be helpful to the faith of every Christian. Ah! what power for good we fail to use in our neglect of prayer. R. A. Torrey once said: “Prayer can do anything that God can do, and, as God can do anything, prayer is omnipotent.” And Robert Hall, one of Britain's greatest preachers, reflects about the same sentiment: “The prayer of faith is the only power in the universe to which the great Jehovah yields. Prayer is the sovereign remedy.” Let us learn to “pray without ceasing.”

We should be encouraged to pray more by the faithful testimony of the great souls of the church. How true that “more things have been wrought by prayer than this world dreams of!” God's great servants of every age have been praying men. Consider Daniel and Elijah and Jeremiah and David. Reference has been made already to the Master's own glorious life. Read the Epistles of Paul or John or Peter with special attention to the references to prayer. Luther is reputed to have prayed three hours daily at times, and he prayed most when pressed the hardest for time. We may seriously question if there ever has been a truly great preacher who was not a praying man. In recent times the testimony of such great souls as Russell H. Conwell, Phillips Brooks, and Charles H. Spurgeon is overwhelming. And God forbid that we should forget the missionaries—Robert Moffett, Adoniram Judson, William Carey, David Livingstone, A. L. Shelton, and countless others. Enthusiasm for the salvation of the world has been nurtured by prayer wherever manifested.

Perhaps the greatest man of prayer of modern times was George Muller, of Ashley Down, Bristol, England. His story is well known, but not well enough known. He has inspired many men to greater faith and to richer prayer experience; he should inspire hundreds and thousands more. He raised more than seven million dollars in caring for and educating thousands of orphan children and circulating biblical literature all over the world. Though gone, he yet speaks; and his work stands as a glorious testimonial to the faithfulness of God to His promises concerning prayer.

We are often prone to overlook the need for prayer for modern missionary enterprise. Let us pray believing, that more workers may be sent, that they may proclaim faithfully the redeeming message of our crucified Lord and Savior.

To be certain, we must meet certain conditions if we expect our prayers to be answered. We must be unselfish, we must seek the Lord's will, we must guard our hearts from iniquity, we must pray in the name and to the honor of Christ, if our petitions are to be heeded. Further, we must pray unceasingly, and not faint. Prayer is not a magical process by which our foolish whims are granted; this power is given us for our own spiritual uplift and for the promulgation of God's work in the world.

Every lover of the Lord should resolve today to pay more earnest heed to his spiritual development. He should resolve to pray more, to make prayer a vital part of each day's program. The world awaits the redemption of the Lord. Prayer is our mightiest power in prosecuting this program. May we look to Him, as did His servants of another day, and cry, “Lord, teach us to pray!”—Standard Bible Teacher.

INVESTIGATION by the Department of Justice in Washington shows more crimes of all kinds are committed by youths of 19 years than of any other age. This report is based on 80,785 arrests. Of this number 5,221, or 6.5 per cent were females. Most of the crimes committed by youths were theft in some form. Of all persons arrested under 21, 45.8 per cent had stolen autos, and no one says anything about repealing the law against stealing!—Selected.

God Bless Our Home

OUR FATHER, we repeat again these words so dear to our fathers' hearts, God Bless Our Home! Memories of childhood are recalled to our minds as we say them over. O, God of our youthful days, God of our mature years, Thou who art the consolation of the aged, we invoke Thy blessing to rest upon our home, Golden Rule Home, the home of our beloved older ones. Pour out upon it the fullness of Thy love. Protect and keep from harm those who dwell within its walls. Raise up friends to interest themselves in the extension of its benefits to others. May many be made to realize that here is a place where peace reigns, where contentment broods, where kindness and love prevail. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Our Grandparents' Home

GRANDFATHER and Grandmother, in their favorite chairs in the bright and cheerful sun parlor with open Bibles on their knees or the latest copy of THE RESTITUTION HERALD in their hands, protected from labor, anxiety, and need, spending the beautiful twilight hours of life together, with other grandfathers and other grandmothers "of like precious faith."

Such was the inspiring picture that prompted the founding of Golden Rule Home long before it became an actual reality. And now that it has been brought about through the earnest prayers and faithful labors of many, there is no reason why its comforts and its blessings should not be more generally enjoyed.

There are many elderly people possessed of sufficient means to provide themselves with a house in which to live and to pay for the food, clothing, and fuel necessary for their comfort, who lack the physical strength to care for themselves. This is the lack that Golden Rule Home supplies—the watchful care, the tender ministrations, the freedom from anxiety, so vital to the peace and comfort of advancing years.

Golden Rule Home is Grandfather's Home, it is Grandmother's Home, provided for them by loving children in the gospel as a delightful place for them to enjoy until the Master comes and clothes their weary bodies with the vigor of eternal youth. There they may await His coming without anxious thought for the morrow. There they may meet with dear ones of like precious faith and exchange memories of bygone years. There, under the ever attentive eyes of the Church of God everywhere, they may rest from their labors and find comfort for their souls. There they may join together in song and in prayer and look joyfully forward to a home even more happy than the one they now know.

Those who have come here to make their abode in Golden Rule Home are men and women who have had homes of their own, who appreciate what a real home provides. They have grown weary of all that the world has to offer and are glad to withdraw themselves from its excitement and noise. They prefer quietude that they may meditate on the lessons life has taught, and so they rejoice in the peaceful atmosphere of Golden Rule Home. Home means more than all else to the world-weary and to the aged, and they echo the words of the poet:

"Far from me, all ye senseless joys,
That fade before they reach the heart,—
The crowded dome's distracted noise,
Where all is pomp and useless art!
Give me my Home, to quiet dear,
Where hours unfold and peaceful move;
So God ordain I sometimes there
May hear the voice of Him I love."

ANOTHER VIEW OF GOLDEN RULE HOME

A Visit With the Home Folk

By Mary A. Gesin

LAST Tuesday was a beautiful autumn day, and I decided to accept Sr. Mick's very cordial invitation to spend a day with her at Golden Rule Home. Evidences of the fall season were abundant. Invigorating breezes swept about me; fallen leaves scurried ahead of me; tints and tones of the landscape began to take on a different hue. And as I walked along I thought of the changes that inevitably come into every life.

Into some lives changes come early. A loved one is laid to rest; a very dear friend moves many miles away; material possessions increase or fade away. Every phase of life is altered by these and many other circumstances, some of them entirely beyond our control.

My meditations, both happy and sad, were interrupted by my arrival at Golden Rule Home. "The Home," as we call it, presents a very comfortable and substantial appearance, exactly similar to illustrations I have seen. On approaching it from the south, as I did that morning, a most pleasing picture comes into view—red brick with white trimmings, a wide porch to the front, and a cozy sun parlor to the side.

No answer came to my light knock upon the door to the sun parlor, and so, being just an "everyday" visitor, I turned the corner and entered the little porch off the dining room. Sr. Mick was not to be found in dining room or kitchen, and while I hesitated a moment or two, she hurried in from multitudinous errands she had performed down town for different members of her "family." It was past eleven o'clock, but dinner had been merrily cooking away during the half hour she had been gone.

The usual welcome was extended to me, and I chatted a few minutes with Sr. Mick while she completed dinner preparations. Proceeding upstairs to greet the "children" of the Home family, I found Mrs. Chaffee resting in bed, just "for a few repairs," as she said. She was not so ill but that she was glad to have a caller, and so we visited, recalling the past, commenting on the present, and speculating as to the future. All of this might, and might not, be interesting to my readers, but you'll no doubt be glad that space forbids its repetition.

"A wonderful privilege, having such a home," is the way Mrs. Chaffee expresses the surroundings into which her life has been cast, and she wishes more people could experience it. The association with one another in the Home and among the Oregon church people is a source of much enjoyment to her, and she mentioned particularly the many nice gifts that have been sent for the comfort of the Home family by brothers and sisters from all over the country.

THE COZY SUN PARLOR

Quoting from Psalm 84:11, Mrs. Chaffee knows that "the Lord God is a sun and shield. . . no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

Just down the hall, a few steps brought me to the room of dear little Alice Kerr, whom I found reading that beautiful old love story, "Evangeline." Not being able to hear the sound of a friend's voice, being denied the privilege of enjoying the music that she loves, her days are spent reading world's best literature, her favorite of course being the dear old Book, as all of you know who are acquainted with her. Upon asking her (with pencil and paper) how she felt, the cheery smile she gave me was sufficient answer. Then followed a great deal of writing on my part and answering on hers, all of which we enjoyed very much.

The Savior's words, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," are dearest to her of all His promises, if she can choose one above another, she says. And the Home is to her the fulfillment of that promise to give the weary rest. I was impolite enough to ask her age, and in turn she gave me a problem in arithmetic to work. But I'll not tell the number of her years, nor pass on to you the problem. She is full of a dry humor, and Sr. Mick tells me that she is the cheeriest and sunniest "child" in her family.

The dinner bell sounded just then, and those who felt able gathered about the table and enjoyed the well-cooked and well-served meal, as did their guest likewise. Sr. Mick had previously prepared three trays to be carried to those who were indisposed, but the return of the trays bespoke good appetites at least.

Following the dinner hour I found Mrs. Steffa and Mrs. O'Byrne chatting together in the latter's large and sunny room. The response I received from Mrs. O'Byrne contained for me a hint of ironical humor, though none was intended, when during our conversation she said that her favorite text was, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." I asked her the reason of her choice, and therein lay food for thought. She said that there was no disputing that particular promise, and if one promise of God's is kept, all the rest will be. What do you think of that, readers? I must admit it never occurred to me in just that way.

Mrs. Steffa, who has a cozy room upstairs, told me that, though only a boarder, she likes the Home very much, considers it a pleasant place to live, and recommends it to all elderly people who desire a comfortable home. Words could hardly express more, could they?

A step or two into the next room brought me to the side of "Grandma" Crowell, who, though totally blind, has nothing but cheery words for her visitors. As I sat there I closed my eyes and tried to imagine her feelings and her reactions to her surroundings. It was impossible of course, but it gave me just an inkling of what it must mean to her.

Not being able to see the face of Sr. Mick who is kindness itself to her, nor those of any of her many friends! Not a word of complaint, nothing but good words for the Home and all the Home folks! Sometimes I think those who have the greatest burdens to bear make the least fuss about them. Let's all take a lesson from "Grandma."

Characteristically enough, Sr. Mick quoted the last part of Mrs. O'Byrne's favorite text, as one of her favorites, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Surely Sr. Mick's success as matron of Golden Rule Home is due to the fact that she loves older people, that she enjoys her daily tasks of making them happy and comfortable, and that she feels it is the Lord's work she is doing.

After good-byes and warm invitations to "come again," I turned my footsteps homeward. My thoughts, somehow, fell into the same channel they had followed in the morning, with this additional thought: When the time comes that one must make the great change in one's life—that of giving up one's own home because of inability to longer care for it unaided—how reassuring to have one's life cast into such comfortable circumstances as those surrounding the family in Golden Rule Home.

History of Golden Rule Home

LONG before the General Conference of the Church of God was organized, thoughtful brethren realized the desirability of providing for the needs of older ones of the brotherhood who had no one to care for them in their declining years. In one instance a brother in Iowa took such a one into his own home and ministered to his needs as tenderly and freely as he would have done for his own father. This, of course, was a Christianlike thing to do, but such a course is not generally possible. Yet it was recognized that an obligation rested upon the brotherhood to care for the aged and alone of the body.

It is not only those who are without means to provide for their own requirements that should be cared for, but others, also, who because of homes broken by death or otherwise do not have loved ones to watch over them tenderly in sickness and in health while they go down the shaded side of life's hill.

On the suggestion of many brethren one of the first efforts made by the newly organized General Conference in 1921 was to devise ways and means for the establishment of a home for the aged where they could find the security and the comfort to which their faithful service to the church in the past entitled them.

Among the inducements that caused the committee to select Oregon, Illinois, as a permanent headquarters for the National Bible Institution was the fact that it was possible to secure here at a reasonable price an attractive brick residence, beautifully situated and of ample size to meet the requirement of a church home for old people.

When the location was finally decided upon, contributions began to pour in at once, showing the widespread interest the brethren felt in the enterprise. And now, after more than ten years have come and gone, those who are familiar with Golden Rule Home as it stands today rejoice that the committee appointed to choose a location decided as wisely as it did. It is felt that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find a more pleasant or desirable situation for a home than Oregon provides or to find a residence that more fully meets the needs of such an institution.

Through the self-sacrificing efforts of our executive secretary, F. L. Austin, throughout the difficult years during which the Institution was being established, generously supported by faithful brethren everywhere, Golden Rule Home stands today without a dollar in mortgages against it or against any of the properties that have been contributed to provide an income for its maintenance.

Golden Rule Home was impressively dedicated to its beneficent purpose with services held both in the Home and in the Oregon church on December 31, 1922.

Mrs. Clara Jane Chaffee was the first to cross the portals as a permanent resident. Others soon followed her example, and for more than ten years Golden Rule Home has striven to maintain itself true to its name and faithful to its purpose.

There is ample room for several more to enjoy its gracious home-like atmosphere and to rejoice with its present family in the assurance of lifelong care and security.

Maintenance of Golden Rule Home

LIKE every other place in which men and women live, Golden Rule Home requires a constant supply of the material necessities of life: food, clothing, heat, and light. That it is a church home does not signify that its residents can live comfortably without these necessary things. Hence, means must be continually forthcoming from some source to pay the ordinary expenses of everyday living, as well as doctor, nurse, and other unusual requirements from time to time.

To care for all this is a business matter as well as a religious obligation that is placed jointly upon those who enter the home and upon those who are interested in its maintenance on behalf of others. Some one must meet the bills! The manner in which this obligation is taken care of is clearly suggested in the following statement which was issued by the management of Golden Rule Home some years ago.

Statistics show that about twelve additional years is the average time that remains to those who have passed the age of sixty. But we rejoice to find that those who have come to make Golden Rule Home their place of abode as a rule add considerably to their life-span beyond the average stated. The reason why this is true is not hard to find. Their future is guaranteed in Golden Rule Home! If it is their desire to turn over all of their business obligations and financial holdings to the Institution upon their entrance, they will have nothing of this kind to cause them worry or anxiety. Concern for their care as long as they live is thereafter entirely in the hands and on the hearts of the executive board of the National Bible Institution. Worry shortens life, causes disease, and takes all the pleasure and comfort out of human experience. All this is removed from those who enter as permanent residents the portals of Golden Rule Home.

Although the average life in the Home is extended beyond the period of those who must care for themselves in their own homes or be maintained in the homes of their children or friends, nevertheless the following table has been computed on the basis of twelve years as the average prospect of life for those entering Golden Rule Home.

COST OF MAINTENANCE

It is estimated that in addition to the fruits and vegetables grown in the Home gardens it will require about $175.00 a year per member to provide food, warmth, clothing, light, and other necessities of like nature. Now $175.00 per year for twelve years would amount to $2,100. This latter amount must, therefore, be recognized as necessary for the maintenance of an individual for the remainder of his life who comes into the Home.

It is not necessary, however, for one to have this entire amount in cash or in property in order to obtain residence in the Home and be guaranteed his future support, because $1,600.00 put on interest at 6 per cent per annum will, at the end of twelve years, amount to the required total sum of $2,100.00, with a little left over to care for sickness and other expenses. For this reason $1,600.00 was decided upon as the amount which must be available either in cash or other assets for everyone who entered the Home. Compliance with this requirement makes it possible for the National Bible Institution to guarantee lifelong care to each member of the Home family, but without such a requirement this could not, of course, be done.

The following brief analysis will place the matter clearly before us:

$1,600.00 for one year at 6 per cent earns	$96.00
This amount added to the original	$1,600.00
<hr/>
Amounts to	$1,696.00
From this deduct for the year's maintenance	$ 175.00
This leaves a balance of	$1,521.00

This amount continues to draw interest the second year. The same process is repeated each succeeding year, being continually reduced until at the end of the twelfth year but $267.27 remains of the original deposit. This amount is counted as being sufficient to care for final expenses for the individual.

Returning to the fact that the estimated cost for each Home member is $175.00 per year, it will be observed that this amounts to about $3.37 per week. This includes all of the necessities of life, together with care and doctor's bills in times of sickness. This complete maintenance is guaranteed by the National Bible Institution not only for the period of twelve years, but for life!

When life comes to its close, as all mortal lives must eventually, there is the question of final expenses, which often mount high. The National Bible Institution meets all of these expenses, also, although they are not included in the average cost of $3.37 per week which was mentioned heretofore. These final expenses are in addition to life-time maintenance, and are cared for in full by the Institution.

In addition to these individual costs in the Home, there are other necessary expenditures that must be made. Furniture, rugs, curtains, bedding, painting, papering, and many other such items demand money all the time. These things, unprovided for by the individual members, are supplied by contributions from the brotherhood at large.

A competent matron must be constantly employed to carry on the work of the Home and maintain the Golden Rule spirit at all times. A man must be had to care for the extensive gardens which contribute so much to the food supply of the Home. He must also find time to care for the lawns and buildings. In times of sickness in the Home still more help is required. All of this demands money, and it is for these purposes that the brethren are asked to assist as they are able in the meeting of such additional expenses.

Many similar institutions require an applicant for membership to turn over to it for his maintenance all that he possesses in the way of property or money. This is not true with Golden Rule Home. In order to maintain itself safely, so that none need feel the least anxiety regarding the future of the Home and of his or her place in it, Golden Rule Home asks each applicant for membership to turn over to the Institution all that he possesses up to $3,000.00. (This figure experience now shows should be higher.) It requires this because it would actually cost this amount—and more—to shelter and care for the average person for the balance of life after sixty years of age. And it is only right that one who has the means to pay in full for his maintenance should be asked to do so.

Here is a wonderful Home, a Golden Rule Home, where one can actually prolong his life and enjoy each one of the remaining years which God gives free from all anxiety as to his physical welfare and comfort, realizing that he will never be a burden on children or friends so long as he lives and that even after he is gone his final expenses will not fall upon the dear ones left behind in his family. All this is provided for by Golden Rule Home.

The Old Folk's Home

By George B. Alldridge

---

“Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am.”

THE most vivid impression stamped upon my mind as I bade adieu to the last General Conference was the home for the old folk of our faith.

One of the residents, who was reading her Bible when I was introduced to her, remarked how much she enjoyed reading the articles in THE RESTITUTION HERALD. As we were leaving, she said, “Brother Alldridge, won't you write a good word for us and the Home?”

Anything I may write could not add to their comfort or the pleasant arrangement of the rooms by those who are in charge. Everything was scrupulously clean, neat, and well adapted for the purpose intended. It does not have the earmarks of an institution governed according to set rules, the violation of which would incur disciplinary measures. Everybody seemed free and acted just as naturally as he would in his own home, and probably in many cases with more freedom.

I wish that I were financially able to endow this home, for it is worthy of liberal support. Whoever inspired the suggestion to establish the home for our old folk surely should be by the brotherhood esteemed very highly. Paul's words come to my mind as I write: “And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake.”

The golden rule of Jesus is, “Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.”—Matt. 7:12. Although the writer is considered an “old man,” he asks for no sympathy or encouragement save for those who are old and have no place whereon to lay their heads.

Nearly one hundred years ago the Countess De Gasparin wrote, “Happiness is as the glory of the sunshine, and when I picture to myself the happy, I seem to see one of those antique festal processions whose mazes come rolling on by the side of the shining sea, beating the air with thyrsi, all garlanded with flowers. It is for these that the lustre of the day is made; their steps raise perfumed breezes, they move circled with harmonies, their faces beam, that supreme grace of joy and liberty floats upon their tracks; as they draw near, the intoxicated glance hastens onward to meet them, and when they have passed, it follows after them long.

“But there is yet another phalanx, and this, too, I know well. This walks in the pallid twilight, keeps solitary paths, moves on, gloomy, silent, shuddering; it is much if some star sheds a spark on its way, and even that ray alarms it; no song accompanies it: if we listen, we only hear a sound of dull and lagging footsteps, as of those who are weary. He who should look closely would distinguish dejected brows; in those downcast eyes—tired, one would say, of seeing—he might surprise some furtive tear: I know not what of faded and of chill hovers over it; at its approach a void is made, everyone moves away in order not to meet it. It is the hand of sad souls, and at one bound my whole heart has sprung towards it.

“These last I recognize: they are of my kindred. While joyous, and passing on in the triumphal march of life, they had no need of me, I had no need of them. A tear has fallen: Ye weep! Ye are my flesh, ye are my blood! My hands are stretched out towards you; they tremble, they are weak, weaker perhaps than your own; but take them, will you not?”

“Sad! How completely this one word is the very secret of our day! Flourishes of trumpets, cries of the chase, bursts of orchestral music, gallop of race horses, shouts of laughter, racket of gaieties; there is nothing else to be heard. The clamor is at the highest, when lo! a note rises, swells, pierces, overpowers; ever more and more heart-rending; an agonizing note, the cry of the distressed soul lamenting in the midst of pleasure. And yet it is not the most unhappy that are the most sad. There is something worse than the pangs of misfortune, there is the passive state of a subjugated heart.

“You have given way beneath the burden of the days; you have experienced the incapacity of resistance; these latent sufferings, this pack, that does not bark but rends, has fallen upon you. Passers-by look at you, and remark: There goes one of the happy! God sounds your spirit, and says: This is a sufferer!

“It is to you that I come (the old and infirm). Others, better authorized, will dress more open wounds. Great griefs have their acknowledged place in open day. The care of them belongs to great Christians. The lesser draw near to the small; they listen to those complaints which men occupied with grave affairs have not the leisure to hear. The anguish that is dumb, the torments that are hidden; all that is agitating itself, all that is struggling beneath life’s calm surface,—this the lowly can understand, for this they have felt.”

We must catch the spirit of Jesus. No human being was so humble and lowly as He. He was profoundly human, burdened with the same vexations, wounded by the same blows, bowed down by the same weaknesses that attack us all; yet never did He claim a monopoly of sufferings, nor to the weight of all the sadnesses; nor did His spotless character ever become tainted with the wickedness that afflicts society. Yet He was cognizant of it all. He knew the anguish of every pain, but may not have endured it in all its forms.

“For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.”—2 Cor. 8:9. How many of us, old or young, can say truthfully as He did, “The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head” (Matt. 8:20)?

In what respect was Jesus rich? Paul declares we can attain to it, for he says, “Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus. Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of servant, and was made in the likeness of men.”

I have read many explanations of this verse, but to me it is all right as it reads: “Thought it not robbery to be equal with God.” Read John 14:8, 9; this makes it quite clear without changing the text.

I believe if Jesus came to Oregon, Illinois, in person He would surely visit the Home and would tarry awhile with the inmates, for the very atmosphere of the place seems to be surcharged with His spirit: quiet, peaceful, and everyone desiring to serve one another. I would delight to finish my course in this place; but, like our dear old brother Lyman Booth, I feel I am yet too active to retire to the Home.

But, thank God, our love and sympathies are with you; our affection grows for you as we realize that, like you, we are growing older and must soon pass away. Probably when you were young the world offered you its incense; but we shall love you better because the world has deserted you and you it. Your apparent isolation, far from repelling, attracts us, your brethren in the Lord. Your foibles, if you have any, do not weary us; and on becoming a member of this glorious home your misfortunes cease, and your spiritual wants are well served under wise and loving care.

So we say, “God bless you!” And may your numbers and support increase to the glory of God and the return of His dear Son from heaven.

HOW TO READ THE BIBLE

Read the Scriptures regularly through. Read alternately, portions from the Old and New Testaments. Begin at the beginning of each. Mark where you leave off, and begin there next time. When you have finished each Testament, begin it again.

Read with prayer. You cannot by your own wisdom understand the Word of God. In all your reading of the Scriptures, seek carefully the help of the Holy Spirit. Ask for Jesus’ sake that He will enlighten you.

Read with meditation. Ponder over what you have read. The truth is thus applied to your heart. You see new and deeper meanings. It is better to think over a little than merely to read a great deal.

Read with reference to yourself. Never read only with a view to instructing others, but for your own teaching. Receive blessing yourself first, and you will communicate it to others. Always ask yourself, “How does this affect me?”

OUR GOLDEN RULE HOME

By G. Eldred Marsh

(Tune: “Home, Sweet Home”)

We praise Thee, O God, for our Golden Rule Home,
From which by Thy blessing we never shall roam;
Content here in peace and in love to abide,
Where nothing can harm us, no ill can betide.

Chorus:
Home, home, sweet, sweet home;
We praise Thee, O God, for our Golden Rule Home!

Our long day of labor now draws to its close,
And here safely sheltered we find sweet repose;
Surrounded by loving and tenderest care,
We wait for our Savior with psalm and with prayer.

O teach us, our Father, to number our days,
That many or few we may fill them with praise
To Thee for Thy goodness, Thy mercy, and grace
Until we shall find in Thy Kingdom a place!

Seeking the Lost

By H. L. Hastings

“THEN drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him.” A very unorthodox looking congregation! All the tax-gatherers and sinners, with not a scribe among them. They drew near to Him. The great problem in these days is how to reach the masses. The masses reached Him very soon—they found Him, they went where

He was. If men knew where they could find Christ today, we should see, perhaps, some of the publicans and sinners drawing near. The trouble is they go after Christ and frequently find somebody else there; they go after the gospel, and they find something else in its place; and then the publicans and sinners go somewhere else.

“And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.” Now a great many people are terribly distressed with the idea of a sinner outside of them and alongside of them. It does not worry them half so much to have a sinner inside of them, as it does to have one alongside them. The Pharisees were whitewashed over on the outside, but within there was nothing but dead men’s bones. They thought they were all right. Some of them never had had an introduction to themselves since they were born. They knew everybody else, but had never seen the sinner inside. When a man is converted to God, the sinner within troubles him a good deal more than anybody outside. It is like a speck of dust in the eye, which makes more trouble than a cart load of gravel in the street.

“This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.” A pretty crowd, publicans, tax-gatherers, roughs, outcasts, the offscouring of all creation: that is the kind of folk He went with. “And he spake this parable unto them, saying, What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?”

We should naturally say ninety-nine sheep are of a great deal more importance than one; we cannot leave these sheep here; the ninety-nine will be scattered. This is the way a man might talk who did not know anything about sheep. But a shepherd would know better than that. He knows that a flock of sheep will get along after a fashion, so he goes to seek the one that is lost. He sought this sheep until he found it. A great many people go after a lost sheep who do not go very far nor hunt very long; and if they do not find it the first hill they climb, they say, “Well, it was always a bad sheep anyway; always running away, everlastingly jumping over fences”; but the shepherd goes until he finds it. “And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.”

The following, which we appreciatively copy from “Messiah’s Advocate,” is from the fluent pen of one of the most beloved ministers of the Church of God of an early day. It was not at all unusual for H. L. Hastings to preach for two hours or more, holding his audience’s closest attention and interest throughout. The article here given is as timely now as it was when originally presented half a century ago.

I saw a picture of a man carrying a sheep on one shoulder. When anybody has carried as many sheep as I have, he will find out that one has to lay them on both shoulders and hold their feet with both hands. They are a good deal like some folk: when one has them, he must hold on to them. “He layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.” He did not have any rejoicing over his flock of ninety and nine sheep, though they were an occasion of rejoicing; but it was over the one that was lost. He did not say, “Rejoice and see what splendid lambs there are in that flock.” The joy was not over them; it was over the one that was lost.

“I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.” So if one gets one back which was wandering in the wilderness, gone “away on the mountains, wild and bare”; if one gets one sheep that was lost to the fold, all heaven is glad.

There was a woman who had ten pieces of silver. It was not much; perhaps it amounted to a dollar and a half. Still it was worth a great deal to her. “If she lose one piece, doth she not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?” You see that woman was in earnest; she did not look around a little on the floor and give up. But she first said, “Well, we will have a candle,” and she lighted a candle, “and now,” she said, “we will have a broom,” and she went through that house from one corner to the other until she found the lost silver.

Some would save sinners if they could; they would like to see them crowding to the altar. If they lost a piece of silver they would sit down and expect it to come to them. But a piece of silver will never find itself, it must be found—and so they sought until they found. “And when she hath found it,” just that little piece of silver, “she calleth her neighbours and friends together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.” She always remembers how she lost that piece of silver, perhaps she keeps it the longest of any, prizes it more than anything else, and rejoices over it; especially if, as it is said, that piece of silver was a husband’s gift, and was prized much in the same way as a wedding ring in modern times.

"Likewise I say unto you, There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." It does not say there is joy among the angels, or that the angels rejoice; but there is joy in the presence of the angels, joy in the heart of him who saves the lost. And if there is joy over a sinner thus saved, will the scribes and Pharisees murmur because this man received sinners? Will they complain if he go in for deep-sea fishing, when there is such joy in heaven over one sinner that repents?

The Glorious Resurrection Body

A GAIN we inquire regarding those to be raised from the dead, "With what body do they come?" And Paul gives a fourfold reply: "It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."—1 Corinthians 15:42-44.

The resurrection body is incorruptible. "It is raised in incorruption." That certainly is different from our present body. This is subject to decay, illness, pain, disintegration, and death. It is easily injured, disorganized, destroyed. Disease feeds on it, dims its eye, dulls its ear, disarranges all its functions.

But the resurrection body will not be so; that is "a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—2 Cor. 5:1. No shock will ever shatter its frame. No effort will ever weary its powers. No disease will ever sap its strength. No death will ever disintegrate its particles. The passage of time will leave no mark upon it. The creeping on of age will never bow it down. It is incorruptible. The forces of eternal youth are in it. The energies of the eternal God are imparted to it. It will never grow old and feeble. It will never feel pain. It will never die. It is eternal, immortal, incorruptible.

The resurrection body is glorious. "It is raised in glory." You have seen an Easter lily. As you have looked into its beautiful heart, have you ever thought what it came from? Sown in dishonor, truly, but as truly raised in glory. Sown a rough, forbidding bulb, but raised in an altogether matchless glory of form, which makes of it a thing of entrancing beauty. So it is in the resurrection.

The resurrection body is powerful. "It is raised in power." We cannot even imagine the powers of the resurrection life. Our bodies then will throw off and transcend the limitations which handicap them now. There will be no weakness, no deformity, no limitation of space, no limitation of movement. The resurrection body of Jesus passed from place to place merely by the volition of His will. No material barrier stopped Him. So will our bodies be; for He "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."—Phil. 3:21.

All the faculties will be raised to the highest power. Your body may be frail and weak and feeble now; but be comforted with this good word, "It is raised in power."

A REAL AND LITERAL BODY

THE resurrection body is spiritual. "It is raised a spiritual body." Be sure to notice here that "spiritual" is not contrasted with "material," but with "natural." The spiritual body of the resurrection will be a material body, a real, actual, literal body; but it will not be a natural body.

The natural body is the body of the natural man, the body that fulfills all the lusts and desires of the natural, fallen, sinful life. The resurrection body is not like that.

The spiritual body will be the body of the spiritual man, fulfilling perfectly and instantly all the desires of the regenerated, saved, spiritual life. Here, "the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." There, there will be no natural body to hinder, but a spiritual body which will be a perfect vehicle for doing all God's will. All that God's Spirit prompts us to do the body will promptly carry out, and there will be no task the spirit yearns to accomplish that the resurrection body cannot carry through.

ETERNAL LIFE OR ETERNAL DEATH

BUT all this, be it remembered, applies only to the redeemed of God. These promises of eternal life are for those who obtain that life in Christ. "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6:23. They cannot be claimed and the future life cannot reasonably be expected by those who have not surrendered all to Christ.

Even now every reader is preparing for a harvest of glory or a harvest of shame. Even now we are deciding upon what that body shall be. Our individual future is in the making now. "He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. 6:8.

There is no cheating the harvest, dear friend. What are you hoping for in that resurrection day? Eternal life and eternal death are placed before you. If your mortal body is quickened to life in the resurrection when Jesus comes, it will be because your living spirit has been quickened now by the Spirit of the Lord.

May you know the "power of his resurrection" now in being given life from the dead, and may the Lord Jesus quicken you who are dead in trespasses and sins that you may live His life here in the conquest of sin as well as in the hereafter when death will have been conquered.—Carlyle B. Haynes.

The God-put Man

“And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed.”

THUS far God had taken full control. He formed man (verse 7) as it pleased Him. He planted him as pleasure, desire, or need might demand. He put the man where He wanted him. Every necessity was provided for. Man himself had no choice; no alternative had been presented until man had established his residence in the garden. Then came the demand for order. “And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.”—Verse 15. Whatever God’s purpose was in planting the tree of knowledge of good and evil in the garden, precaution was taken to guard that purpose. It was not intended for food. It had both a physical and spiritual effect. The physical effect made it impossible for man to live forever, and the spiritual effect rendered him unfit to live forever. Thus God’s purpose was, for the time, frustrated; for He had already promised eternal life (Titus 1:1, 2).

But, you say, why was not man satisfied? Why the temptation to wrongdoing? There was no hunger, no necessity, no demand.

When was man ever satisfied? Would any man of our present day, if placed in the garden of Eden as it then was, be satisfied? Think over your history; run back over the Bible line, which is an epitome of human nature in every conceivable circumstance and condition. Note the people of Babel. They had the whole world before them and could have the best; but they started building a tower to heaven, and like nearly all such projects it resulted in a very serious misunderstanding. Then there were the children of Israel; they were fed on the best from heaven’s bakery, yet they cried out for the leeks and onions and fleshpots of Egypt. They forsook the fountain of living water and hewed them out broken cisterns that could contain no water (Jer. 2:13).

So it has always been. God has planted many beautiful gardens for the benefit of man, but man has spurned these favors and turned to his own way.

But God has provided for exceptions to this rule. Note, Adam was a “God-formed” man. God pronounced him “very good.” But the record shows that he was not perfect. We have man-made men and school-made men and self-made men, but all fall short of perfection. When we look at this God-formed man, we cannot help having a feeling of disappointment come over us. He failed in his very first test; he fell for the wiles of the first woman he ever saw; he made a failure of the first boy he tried to raise; he lost his first job and had to take another at harder work and less pay. But God has made other men since Adam, better men; not God-formed men, but transformed men, transformed by the power of the Holy Ghost; men who are not so easily deceived.

Nor was Mother Eve entirely perfect. No doubt she was beautiful; we know she was very good, for God expresses this opinion of everything that He had made. But Moses tells the sad truth without any attempt at apology. Nor does Paul excuse her for the mistake of the garden. “The woman being deceived was in the transgression.”—1 Tim. 2:14. The Greek is apatao, “to cheat, i.e., to delude,” and not planao, “to (cause) to roam (from safety, truth, or virtue),” as we are sometimes taught. She was deluded by a lie and deceived by a false interpretation of God’s Word, just as thousands of people are today, and from the same source.

Eve was both deluded and enticed. This tree was to make her wise. Did you ever eat anything that made you wise? I remember when a boy I bought ten cents’ worth of apples. They looked good to my boyish appetite, and I ate them. Twenty minutes later, if it had been possible, I would have traded those apples for my ten cents back and given a dollar to boot. Believe me, they made me wise. And no doubt Eve before she got a fig leaf dress done with no pattern to go by would gladly have handed that apple back, if such a thing had been possible. We do not know to what extent she was made wise. But we note that she declined to meet company that afternoon with the modern excuse, “I really haven’t a thing to wear.” And we note, too, that she was careful to see that the fig leaves were on straight when she was finally compelled to come out of hiding.

But God is making better women today, women with ribs of their own and backbones, too. The first woman led her husband into sin and caused him to lose his life. But the God-made woman of today is being used in a marvelous way to lead men out of sin and to the promise of eternal life. These women are new creatures in Christ Jesus, transformed into His image; women who can face the serpent in any guise he may assume and command him to “get behind”; women who cannot be bought with forbidden fruit nor wheedled by flattery into his slimy net. Women have been the principal sufferers because of sin, and the God-transformed woman is wise.

The transformed man and woman still have their eyes on the garden, the new Eden that God is planning, the garden into which God will put the new man. He will divest him of the animal skins and fig leaves and clothe him once more with that halo of glory that was once his. The tears of mourning and the sweat of his face will be replaced with the oil of joy. The thorns and thistles will blow away in the smoke of the last day, and the vine and fig tree will flourish. The tree of life in eternal bloom and monthly fruitage will delight the eye and satisfy the hungry soul. And there He will put the man whom He has transformed.—Charles E. Bennett in The Bible Advocate.

IOWA BEREAN DAY

THURSDAY, August 24, was the date of the annual conference of the Iowa State Berean Society. The election of officers resulted as follows: president, J. Arthur Johnson, Route 2, Sac City; vice president, Eldridge Ellis, 319 Cutler Street, Waterloo; secretary, Mrs. Lora Reinhard, Gladbrook; treasurer, Miss Esther Sealine, Stanhope.

One interesting feature of the Berean program in the afternoon was the “penny march,” or presentation of the cradle roll and children’s offering, which amounted to $9.21 in pennies that had been saved during the year. There are twenty-four cradle roll members and five others who contributed to this offering. Mrs. Blanche Harland has charge of the cradle roll department. She gave an account of the National Berean Conference.

We were very much pleased to secure John Denchfield for the Berean sermon on the evening of Berean Day while he and his wife were visiting points in Iowa.

The Bereans at Niagara Falls, New York, reopened their meetings on Tuesday evening, September 12, at the parsonage in Fonthill, Ontario.

DO YOU READ THE BIBLE?

SILLY question, you may think, and answer, “Of course!” But do you actually read your Bible, except in Sunday school and Berean class when you are asked to locate one or two verses, or occasionally when you have a paper to write, or when you get into an argument about some text? If you do, you are wise, and should be commended. But too many Bereans “don’t have time,” “can’t get interested,” or resolve to and forget after perhaps a week.

Sometimes we get into the deplorable habit of thinking the Bible is just another reference book, comparable with the dictionary. We know it is very valuable and it always holds the answer to our question, but no one reads reference books! Then, too, the Bible is everywhere, always obtainable. When we must go to much trouble and expense to obtain a copy of some erudite dissertation or very new novel, we place a higher value on it. But here are countless copies of the most valuable book man ever possessed, and how few habitually read them!

There is so much in the Bible, such a variety of books, that it has been well termed a library in itself. For one thing, there is history. Much of the Old Testament is devoted to it. The language is simple and direct, but there is a certain grandeur and glory in the record of these people of God, dead for—oh, so many years!—that makes them seem more real than some of the individuals chronicled by more modern authors. For those interested in human beings and their actions, foolish and wise and good and bad, the Bible stories will prove fascinating. They will find pleasure, perhaps, in realizing how like us today people of centuries past were. Not since Job uttered his ironic, “No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you,” has human resentment of officious advice, even if good, diminished. And surely to any believer in Jehovah, there is a satisfaction in knowing the rewarded trust and faith those of ages past had in the same God we worship today.

Some of the loveliest poetry and songs in all the world are found in our same neglected Bibles. Look for them in Psalms and Isaiah, Ecclesiastes and Song of Solomon. Where is there a more beautiful picture than the much-quoted thirty-fifth chapter of Isaiah? “The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. . . . And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.” And the loveliness of these words will be true; they are not mere vain imaginings of a human poet. There are also dramatic scenes in glorious and awful language in the book of Revelation. The Bible abounds in suggestive and meaningful figures of speech, and probably from no other one source come as many of the proverbs, phrases, and bywords in common use today.

If we will only search the richness of the Bible, we shall surely find that to read it is not dull duty, but a joy and a privilege.

THE Oregon, Illinois, Berean Society is observing Rally Day, October 1, with the rest of the local church by eliminating all previous age restrictions on membership.

PREPARED BY MARY A. GESIN

“Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?”

RIGHT ABOUT FACE, SAUL!

LITTLE did his playmates and neighbors realize that one day the boy Saul was to be the world's greatest missionary. Diligently working away at his occupation of tent making, earnestly studying the Old Testament scriptures at the synagogue school, zealously pursuing his advanced education at the college of Gamaliel in Jerusalem, Saul was daily building his future.

Just so does each activity of our life place another stone in the building which we are erecting. And if we build in a weak stone the whole structure is liable to topple over. Let's be very careful what we build into our life.

The day that Saul went to Damascus on a certain errand, he built the very finest stone into his life, the one that changed his whole career. I'm sure that every one of my Bible Scrapbook boys and girls knows just what happened on this eventful day. And don't you imagine that on that trip the face of the dying young Stephen must have often come into Saul's mind?

As Saul hurried toward Damascus his thoughts must have been very busy ones, and we can't help but wonder how one so educated in the Old Testament could not see that Jesus was the One sent by God to be the Messiah of Israel and the Savior of the world. Saul believed in God and worshiped Him very earnestly, but he didn't believe in Jesus, God's Son. And everybody he found that did believe in Jesus he treated most cruelly, put chains on them, separated them from their loved ones, and cast them into dark prisons.

Poor Saul! He was certainly a very much mistaken young man, wasn't he? But this very energy of Saul's was one of his best aids later in life when he realized his mistake and joined himself with those whom he had been mistreating.

Read the wonderful story of that great day in Saul's life as he journeyed to Damascus. See him hurrying along thinking of the Christians he was going to imprison, his heart filled with hate, when suddenly at midday a light brighter than the sun shone upon him and struck him down by the roadside, blind! God had a work for Saul, and it took a great power to make such a man as he change his course.

Picture the faithful followers of Jesus, perhaps kneeling in prayer in some hidden place in Damascus, waiting with trembling hearts for the coming of that furious Saul of whom they had heard such terrible things. But that Saul never came! Instead there came one who had to be led by the hand, put into a darkened room to rest, and who went without food or drink for three days, while he prayed to God to show him what He wanted him to do.

The dear heavenly Father didn't leave Saul in this sad state, but He sent one of His faithful followers to this house where Saul waited, who gave him back his eyesight. This man, Ananias, was at first afraid of Saul, but God told him to go ahead because He had a great work for Saul to do. Before even he would sit down to eat, Saul was baptized, and God forgave him for all the mean and wicked things he had done to those who believed in Jesus.

Now a new, clean page is before Saul. He is ready to turn about and make a fresh start in life. And oh! what a busy and upright and happy life it was, with all its trouble and pain and sorrow.

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK:

Write the number and title of the lesson, also the golden text, across the top of the page. Next draw a little map, showing Jerusalem, which, as you know, is directly west of the northern end of the Dead Sea, about one third of the way to the coast. Locate Damascus, and draw a connecting line between these two cities. Damascus was about one hundred forty miles northeast of Jerusalem, and it took six days to make the trip on foot. Damascus was a beautiful city, the oldest in the world, and Straight Street, where Saul was cared for while he was blind, still runs through the city from the east to the west gates.

Write these facts about Damascus, and tell what errand Saul was on when God stopped him. Then tell what Saul did.

Now draw pictures of Saul, first, as he hurried along to imprison the Christians; then, as he was struck down by the roadside; last, as he was led by the hand along Straight Street in Damascus. Don't be afraid to draw, even though your first efforts may not suit you at all. Your best grows better each time you try, you know. Use straight lines if you can do better that way.

Last, draw two foundations, one showing how Saul built his life before he was converted, using crooked and uneven stones; the other, representing his later life, using only even and straight stones. You can see how the first is liable to fall down, but the second one will stand because it is built on belief in Christ and love for Him.

LESSON 2. — October 8, 1933

SAUL IN DAMASCUS

Acts 9:1-31

Devotional Reading: 2 Corinthians 5:14-21

GOLDEN TEXT

Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.—2 Corinthians 5:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Conversion of Saul.

Aim: To show that true conversion brings a complete change in conduct.

Basic Truth: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 7:21.

I. Saul's Wasted Talents. (Acts 9:1, 2.) Saul was a man possessed of remarkable talents and highly developed ability. Before his conversion he was as deeply religious as he was after it had taken place. In his anxiety to serve God he sought at any sacrifice to himself to destroy all opposition to Him, together with all teachers who might lead the Jews away from what he looked upon as the essential of truth. Sincerity, zeal, and energy marked his life from the beginning, but these splendid talents were worse than wasted because of the ignorant bigotry that directed their activity.

II. Saul's Complete Conversion. (Acts 9:3-12.) Fired by a sincere though misdirected zeal, Saul sought for authority from the high priest to go to Damascus and arrest and imprison or destroy all professed followers of Jesus. On the way his purpose was completely changed. In a miraculous manner his heart was transformed in its attitude toward Jesus, for he found that Jesus was his Friend and the Friend of every man, and Saul came to love and serve Him. The transforming power of the gospel had wrought this tremendous revolution in his spiritual outlook. His talents remained unchanged, but they were now dedicated to the service of Him whom they had formerly so bitterly opposed. Saul was "a new creation in Christ Jesus," old things had passed away for him, all things had become new. His conversion was complete!

III. Saul's Consecrated Talents. (Acts 9:17-19.) Following his conversion Saul must have felt that life as he had known it had suddenly come to an end. He could not see into the future, but he prayed unto the Lord who heard and heeded his petition. His life was accepted as a "living sacrifice" and filled to overflowing with the "fruits of the Spirit" to the honor and glory of his blessed Lord.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Revelation: Paul had been taught the Word of God in childhood in his home. Later he had received a thorough education in Hebrew law under Gamaliel. To this was added a knowledge of Greek philosophy and culture. In short, he had a "finished education," combined with an earnestness of purpose to serve his God. But like many another man, his mind was hedged about with traditions born in the need of earlier times. The "thou shalt" and the "thou shalt not" of the law had been carefully kept, but the final purpose of the law had been lost sight of. He could not recognize in the Christ and His followers the fulfillment of prophecies learned in youth. And with all the fiery courage of a radical politician he went about destroying that new sect which had arisen.

On his way to Damascus he had the direct revelation of truth which was to alter his after life.

Obedience: Paul's anxiety to do the will of God is evidenced by his quick response to the command of Jesus. Although physically blind, he now had a glimpse of the Light of the World, and his first desire was to learn more of the great cause behind this wonderful vision. In Damascus Ananias gave him instruction and baptism and the disciples in the city gave him physical and spiritual encouragement.

How like us "moderns" Paul was! We forge ahead with our own ideas, deceiving ourselves into thinking that we are serving God, until finally the vision reaches us. The tragedy of it all lies in the fact that we so often wait until a physical or economic depression overtakes us to recognize true obedience to Christ. And yet the very fact that He helps us to rise above these trials of mind and body and to come closer to Him in spirit and in truth adds to the power and glory of His name.—G. M. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."—2 Corinthians 5:17.

At the beginning of Paul's (Saul's) career he was a very wicked man and did all he could to prevent the cause of Christ from being effective: but after his conversion he was an entirely different man, and indeed was a new man in Christ Jesus. He then worked just as hard or even harder for Christ than he had worked against Him before. Old thoughts and ambitions passed away. He took up new work and lived a new or different life that he might work for the Father and do all he could in the name of Jesus.

Just so today, when one gives up the ways of the world and is baptized into Christ, he puts off the old, or things of the world, and arises from the watery grave to walk in newness of life. He is indeed a new creature, a Christian, a follower of Christ.—L. A. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Conversion and Its Importance

Literally, conversion is a turning about and is so translated in Mark 5:30: He "turned him about in the press." In the applied sense it means a turning from sin and its pleasures to righteousness and its service to God.

Conversion is essential to salvation. Peter directed: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."—Acts 3:19. This is the only road to salvation and must be followed by all who would seek eternal life. Saul, the oppressor, turned about and became Paul, the servant of God.

Conversion must be lasting to be effective. Lot's wife turned her back upon Sodom, but she left a portion of her love behind. Hers was a turning about in body but not in spirit, and it cost her her life. Conversion must be complete in both mind and body. "Faith (mental conversion), if it hath not works (bodily conversion), is dead, being alone."—Jas. 2:17.

The Israelites after their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, longed for the fleshpots and other food of the Egyptians. This led to dissatisfaction and murmuring. Finally, because of their open rebellion to Him, God decreed that they should perish in the wilderness. They failed to reach their promised land because their turning about was not complete.—H. A. S.

PRIMARY

Saul Becomes a Christian

We learned in last Sunday's lesson that Saul worshiped God. He truly believed that he would be serving God if he took all people who were following that man Jesus and had them thrown into prison.

One day, as he was traveling along the road to Damascus, a very bright light appeared. It was so bright that Saul fell to the earth.

He heard a voice saying, "Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me?" Paul said, "Who art thou?" The voice said, "I am Jesus." Paul answered by asking, "What would you have me do?" Jesus said, "Arise and go to the city. You will find out what to do there."

But Saul was blind, and the men who were with him had to lead him to the city. After three days Saul was baptized and became a Christian. He also received his sight again.

He was going to try to find the Christians so he could have them thrown into prison, and now he was one of them himself. But God knew what a great leader Saul would be, if he were only shown the right way.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

RALLY DAY AT SOUTH BEND

Sunday, October 1, has been set for Rally Day at South Bend, Ind. Sunday school will convene at ten o'clock and will be followed at eleven by a sermon. Special music will be featured, and the communion service will close the worship hour. The congregation will then journey to Potawattomie Park, where a pot-luck dinner will be enjoyed. "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good."

Floyd A. Stilson.

OREGON AND WASHINGTON

Bro. and Sr. D. H. Hathaway are rejoicing over the arrival of a daughter, born August 6. The baby, who has been named Shirley, is the fourth girl in the family.

Another newcomer is the little daughter born recently to Mr. and Mrs. Max Butz of Menlo, Wash. Sr. Butz is a grand-daughter of Bro. A. W. Darby, and the little girl and her brother are Bro. Darby's only great-grandchildren.

Word has been received of the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Phandhoefer of Schenectady, N. Y. Mrs. Phandhoefer is a daughter of Sr. Anna Cady of Corvallis, Ore., and was formerly Mahlo Cady.

The next quarterly Northwestern Conference will be held December 1, 2, and 3, 1933, at Felida, Wash. Gladys Barber.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD IS YOURS

The secretary of a conference recently sent in an announcement of a meeting to be held with the request that we submit a bill for its publication which the conference would be glad to pay. We mention the incident here in order that we may again emphasize a fact that is frequently forgot. The Restitution Herald is not a private enterprise and makes no charges for the publication of anything pertaining to the work of the Churches of God anywhere. The paper is yours, brethren, to use for the glory of God and the advancement of your local, state, and national work to the best possible advantage. Our news columns are the most widely read of any department of the paper; so send in reports and news items concerning the progress of your work, and we shall cooperate with you to the fullest possible extent in the effort to increase results.

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

An unfortunate error occurred in the announcement made recently concerning the work at Rockford. Bro. L. E. Conner will meet with the church there on the second Sunday of each month only, rather than on the second and fourth Sundays as previously stated.

The next regular preaching service at Rockford will be held on the second Sunday in October, which is also the Rally Day of the church and Sunday school. All who can arrange to be present on that day are urged to do so.

The successful Sunday school which the Rockford brethren have maintained for several years continues to prosper.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Elnora Waldo (for others); H. A. Urdike; C. H. Belshaw; Mrs. F. Moran; R. H. Judd; Fred Huber.

OREGON-WASHINGTON CONFERENCE

The quarterly conference of Oregon and Washington was held September 1, 2, and 3 at Corvallis, Oregon.

Many were the good sermons delivered by our faithful ministers. Some of the subjects were, "Faith"; "Baptism"; "Resurrection"; "Hope"; "Israel, the Nation"; "The Mark of the 144,000"; and "The Mark of the Beast." The last two subjects dealt with present-day fulfillment of prophecy.

Sunday school was held Sunday morning with an attendance of seventeen.

Visitors from a distance were Bro. A. W. Darby and Alice Darby-Pryor, both of Portland, Oregon.

We can truly say that it has been good to meet together again in Christian service and brotherly love. May the almighty Father bless our efforts and give us strength to stand firm, never wavering, until our course is finished. Miss Gladys Barber, Secretary.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Full, interested houses have followed the series of Sunday morning sermons on "What Is a Christian?" which closed last Sunday. Next Sunday, October 1, the subject will be: "The NRA and the Mark of the Beast." The Sunday evening series is "Dramatic Moments."

For the past few weeks the devotional services on Tuesday nights have dealt particularly with the thought of forgiveness, and what it means to us to be forgiven of God, and how much we need to forgive one another. The study and discussion of the subject brought out the suggestion that we have a "Prayer and Forgiveness Week." The week of October 1 to 8 was selected. Each morning during that period a thirty minute devotional service is to be held at the church from 6 to 6:30. Every member of the church is urged during that week to seek the forgiveness of any who by word or act or neglect have felt injured, and to use every power within his possession to remove any unhappy feelings that may prevail. It is the earnest hope of the church that much spiritual growth and strength may result from such a week of devotion.

Further offers to lend money to our building fund are still being received. We appreciate this spirit greatly and will be glad to list all who are so inclined, but please hold the money until it is called for unless it is a definite contribution, in which event we are glad to add it to the fund at any time.

Our young men's class has been working hard to earn a little money for some activities. This is an energetic group and we hope to see some real developments in that department.

F. E. Siple, Pastor, 135 Pennell, S. E.

SPECIAL INDEBTEDNESS FUND

MINNESOTA FALL CONFERENCE

The Fall Conference of the Minnesota Church of God will convene Friday evening, September 29, 1933, with the church at Mora and will hold over Sunday, October 1. A good attendance is hoped for.

Mrs. E. J. Randall, Secretary.

PLUM RIVER RALLY DAY

Rally Day will be observed at the Plum River Church of God near Mt. Carroll, Ill., on Sunday, October 1, 1933. The pastor, Harvey Krogh, Jr., and the superintendent are planning for a big day. Brethren at nearby points are invited to come and help make it an enjoyable and profitable gathering. In addition to the Sunday school service the pastor will preach both morning and evening.

A "GOLDEN RULE HOME" SERVICE

The following is suggested as an outline for a service on "Golden Rule Home Sunday," October 1, 1933. Modifications and rearrangements may be made according to local requirements.

Organ or piano prelude: This may be some simple transcription of "Home, Sweet Home," or of some familiar and well-loved hymn.

Call to Worship: A short worshipful number may be provided by the choir, or a single verse and chorus sung by the congregation, as a verse from "Coronation" (No. 223 in "Gospel in Song"), followed by the Lord's Prayer in concert.

Hymn: The hymns used throughout the service should be old familiar devotional selections that everybody loves. A good "praise" number would provide a suitable opening, something after the order of Fanny J. Crosby's, "Praise Him! Praise Him!" (No. 106 in "Gospel in Song").

Scripture Reading: A Psalm (the 23rd, 91st, or 147th) or a passage from the sermon on the mount might be read by pastor and congregation alternately or in unison.

Hymn: "Sweet By and By" (No. 145 in "Gospel in Song," using the words at the bottom of the page) might be effectively used.

Invocation: A few moments of silent meditation, followed by a brief prayer by the pastor on behalf of old people generally and of the family of Golden Rule Home especially.

Announcements.

Offering: A special offering for Golden Rule Home might be taken at this point in the service or following the sermon, after the pastor has made his appeal for the Home.

Hymn or special number by the choir.

Sermon: The entire period need not be taken up with matters pertaining to Golden Rule Home, but sufficient time should be allowed to state the advantages the Home provides, together with a statement of its needs.

Hymn: "Our Golden Rule Home," published in this issue in the corner of page 7, would make an effective closing number for the service. All are familiar with the music of "Home, Sweet Home," and will find no difficulty in joining heartily in the new words, which were specially written for this service. The hymn might be clipped from The Herald or copied and placed in the hymn books before the service.

Benediction.

ILLINOIS CONFERENCE WORK

Illinois Bible School and Conference for 1933 are past. Receipts were sufficient to defray all expenses, for which we are grateful to our Father in heaven. A new year's work now opens up before us. What shall be accomplished in that time, should our Lord delay His coming?

Many of our churches are now self-sustaining, but there was a time when they were not. To arrive at their present fortunate condition they received aid from the state organization. Without it they could not have had the privilege for so many years of hearing the gospel proclaimed by our evangelist and having their number added to yearly through the power of that gospel.

But there are still points that have not yet arrived at that favorable position. Gratitude for our own blessings from God should cause us to desire that others should share in them also. The state organization is regularly assisting two points—Plum River and Eldorado—until they, too, shall be self-supporting as Oregon, Dixon, Ripley, etc., are.

Many say they are not able to help beyond their own locality. If all had felt that way years ago we would have no churches today in Illinois holding services every week.

If you who tithe will budget your monthly contribution, you will be able to help in the work the state organization is doing. A fair proportion is as follows: six tenths to your local work; two tenths to your state work; one tenth to your national work; one tenth for your own special charity or emergency that arises.

Our treasurer, Miss Leota B. Hanson, Lebanon, Ill., has turned over to the board a full report of all receipts and expenditures for Bible School and Conference, also the following report of our General and Evangelistic Fund:

Balance on hand August 1	$ 3.89
Receipts to date	18.00
Expenditures	3.21

Balance on hand Sept. 15 $18.68

Sr. Hanson is waiting for your contribution to assist the work at our two regular points and any other new work so badly needed that we may be able to do. Won't you tithe consider the recommended budgeting of your funds and assist in this important labor?

Mary A. Gesin, Secretary.

APPRECIATION

According to a letter from Bro. N. H. Geiselman of Tampa, Fla., for the past eight months he has been the acting pastor of the First Church of the Advent Christian faith in that city. He was invited to undertake the work under difficult conditions simply to carry over until an able successor could be secured. How successfully his work was accomplished is attested by the letter of appreciation from the officers of the congregation which follows. Bro. Geiselman is well known in the North, where he preached years ago at Dixon, Ill., and at many other points. He says he is at liberty again to respond to calls for service among the Churches of God.

The letter, addressed to Bro. Geiselman at the conclusion of his recent pastoral service, follows:

"Dear Brother Geiselman: The Frances Avenue Advent Christian Church extends to you a unanimous vote of thanks for your untiring work while our pastor. We want you to understand that every member of this church appreciates to the fullest extent your willing efforts put forth for the advancement of the cause of Christ and the great harmony established among our own people under your ministry. We shall ever remember you and pray God's blessing upon you. We want to extend a cordial invitation to meet with us at all of our services when it is convenient for you to do so, and to take part in all our deliberations.

"Done by order of the Church Conference assembled in regular monthly meeting, Sept. 4, 1933.

"(Signed) Mrs. Hogler, Church Clerk."

COMMUNICATION

The following letter recently was received at The Herald office and possesses such general interest that we now are publishing it. Miss Robbins' home address is Riviera, Texas; but she is teaching at Harlingen in the same state.

"We arrived home safely August 28. Our return trip was very enjoyable. We visited at various places; but one of our most enjoyable visits was in Sweetwater, Texas. Here we visited Bro. Stewart's family; he, however, was not at home. We also had a few minutes to spend with Bro. and Sr. Scott and with Bro. and Sr. Hall. It was very pleasing to see these fellow members again even though it were for a short while. Bro. Stewart plans to hold a meeting here in October or November.

"I suppose you have read of the terrible hurricane which swept through the Rio Grande Valley. I arrived in Harlingen to begin teaching school the day the storm struck. Large brick buildings as well as smaller dwellings were destroyed. House after house was unroofed. I've never seen so much wreckage and ruins in my life. Despite the fact that thousands of dollars' worth of citrus fruit, livestock, and other property was destroyed, the people are not grumbling but are very thankful to be alive. It does seem wonderful that there were so few lives lost while there was so much other damage done.

"People will probably be slow in paying taxes. Our school was put off until September 18 in order that storm damages might be repaired.

"Opal Robbins."

BETWEEN YOU AND ME—

The article by George B. Alldridge in this number is of special interest, as it presents in a most interesting way the impressions received on his first inspection by one who had never before visited the Home.

Mrs. Martha Wilson, mother of Sr. Mabel Lindsay of Oregon, Ill., has been seriously ill in the Deaconess Hospital at St. Louis, Mo., and is slowly improving. Her home address is 2669 Sutton Avenue, St. Louis.

Sr. Rachel M. Whitecomb, Frankfort, Ind., says she enjoys the paper very much and regrets she was not able to be at General Conference this year, especially that she might meet Bro. and Sr. Ezra Railsback of California, who are friends of long standing.

Working alone for the advancement of the truth of God, Bro. R. H. Judd of Toronto, Canada, writes ordering books and tracts to aid him in his effort. In addition to his literary labors Bro. Judd is an energetic personal missionary.

Mrs. E. P. O'Byrne, who entered Golden Rule Home a year ago and who has expressed her appreciation of the care provided, wrote us too late for her word to be added to Sr. Gesin's series of interviews, as follows: "One promise for a better world was to the effect that the solitary shall be set in families. This promise is fulfilled in Golden Rule Home, where provision is made for comfort and contentment."

Bro. C. E. Randall, Fonthill, Ont., who always gives the National Bible Institution most enthusiastic support, is observing "Golden Rule Home Day" at both of his churches, Fonthill, Ont., and Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Writing from her home in Seattle, Wash., Sr. Amy L. Young comments kindly, "We appreciate the many good articles in The Restitution Herald." It is such assurances that reward our writers for their efforts in making the paper what it is.

Four states, Indiana, California, Minnesota, and Illinois, have now submitted their official lists of ministers in good standing. Will others send in the names and addresses of their ministers quickly?

Sr. Mary A. Gesin very kindly acted as "special correspondent" for The Herald to interview the various members of Golden Rule Home for this issue. This is but one of many services that Sr. Gesin continues to render freely for the benefit of our readers.

The local church at headquarters is putting on a complete "Golden Rule Home Day" program in connection with its Rally Day program next Sunday. The pastor will speak on "The Golden Rule in the Home," and an effort will be made to get out as many old people as possible to the service. An outline of the history of Golden Rule Home will be given, and a brief statement of the conditions of membership in the Home family.

SOME INTERESTING BOOKS ON THE FAR EAST NEW AND OLD

Reviewed by Norman John MacLeod

The Far East, by Payson J. Treat (Harpers, N. Y., 1928). No better general work exists than this particular one. It handles primarily China and Japan, though it touches on the United States in the Far East as well as many other things that have to do with European diplomacy in the Far East. Prof. Treat is head of the history department at Stanford University and spent many years in the Far East studying its life and its history at close quarters.

Japan and the United States, 1853 - 1921 (Revised and continued to 1928), by Payson J. Treat (Stanford University Press, Stanford University, Calif.). This is one of the best books with authority that can be found on this particular subject. It gives many things in the diplomatic history of the Far East that cannot be found in any other work. Prof. Treat had the valuable assistance in this work of his colleague Prof. Ichihashi, who knows Japan as his native country.

An Outline History of China, by Gowen and Hall. Gowen writes under the nom de plume of Upton Close and is a newspaper man who has spent a great deal of time traveling in China and Japan as well as in other parts of Asia. His statements are not always well authenticated, but his books are always readable. His most famous work is quite sensational: The Revolt of Asia.

A History of the Japanese People, by Brinkley. The standard work of authority on Japan by an English army officer. Extremely thorough, going back to the archaeology of Japan and starting with an analysis of its myths and legends which worked into its history. Not the most interesting reading because of its excessive amount of detail, but absolutely reliable in all its points.

Japan, by Longford. The standard American work on Japan. Just as reliable as Brinkley's history, though not so dry nor so full of details. The best volume for the busy student who wishes to get a good working knowledge of Japan.

Bushido, by Nitobe. A most fascinating analysis of the moral code of the Japanese warrior, the Samurai. This book can be read in half an hour and will give the reader a remarkable insight into some of the striking characteristics of the Japanese warrior. It will show why it is that the Japanese soldier is absolutely fearless in battle.

The Washington Conference and After, by Yamato Ichihashi (Stanford University Press). Written by the only real authority on the Washington Conference, the only man who understood without an interpreter all the languages that were spoken at the conference. This gives, therefore, a most authentic analysis of the conference and the affairs that developed from it. Furthermore, he has the background of having been raised in Japan.

Manchoukuo, Child of Conflict, by K. K. Kawakami (Macmillan, N. Y., 1933). The very latest thing in Japanese diplomacy. Kawakami is a newspaper correspondent and writes with the vividness of that profession. He holds a brief for Japan as would be expected, but he is not quite so obnoxious with it as some writers would be. Completely from the Japanese point of view, but quite authentic, nevertheless.

STARVATION IS FACED BY GERMAN JEWS

THE Chicago Tribune published the following announcement concerning the present situation of the Jews in Germany. It is significant in that it indicates that persecution is to have much to do with forcing the Jews to return to their homeland. The report issued from New York under date of August 20, 1933, reads:

"Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, national chairman of the campaign to raise $2,000,000 for relief work in Germany, announced today that figures submitted to his organization have shown that 100,000 Jews in Germany have already lost all opportunities to earn a living.

"Since Jewish reserves in Germany are already dwindling, the plight of these persons will become serious before winter, he predicted. The report on which the conclusions were based was described in the announcement as having been prepared by a noted social worker who made a survey of conditions in the reich at the request of the American-Jewish joint distribution committee.

"To the above total the survey added some 8,000 Jews who have managed to escape from Germany.

"The report also pointed out, Rabbi Wise's announcement said, that the majority of Jews in Germany are of the opinion that neither the government nor the National Socialist party has any intention of changing its basic attitude toward the Jewish population, and that there is every indication of continued anti-Semitic measures."

NAMELESS FEAR FOR THE FUTURE

A REPORT of the Lord Mayor's banquet was given in The Times of some while ago. In answer to Mr. Henderson's words of welcome to the members of the diplomatic corps, the Spanish ambassador referred to the "brooding everywhere of a nameless fear for the future." We have sometimes been reproved by well-meaning, though somewhat shallow observers of the time, because of an unduly gloomy outlook on our part. The leaders of European governments are under no illusion in this respect. Theologians may be blind, but men of the world are not.

The Spanish ambassador recalled that "in the Victorian Age the constant lesson was of the silver lining to every cloud." For faith the coming of the Lord is the complete answer.—The Advent Witness.
